Dawn ready for birthday of post office

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

The Dawn Community will celebrate the centennial of the Dawn Post Office on Friday and Saturday with a variety of events and a special postmark to designate the office's 100 years of service.

Festivities will begin at 2 p.m. Friday with registration, music, story telling and visiting at the Dawn Community Center.

On Saturday, the Hereford Senior Citizens Center Quartet will kick off festivities at 9 a.m. at the Community Center.

A special program will begin at 11 a.m. at the post office. A special plaque honoring the office's 100 years of service will be presented by Donald S. Boyd, regional manager for the U.S. Postal Service.

Past postmasters will also be recognized.

State Sen. Teel Bivins and State Rep. John Smithce have been invited to participate in the program.

A barbecue lunch, served for $5 per person, will be served at noon.

At 2 p.m., a program will be held at the Community Center. The Hereford Chamber Singers and the Hereford Bluegrass Band will perform, and Dr. Frederick W. Rathjen will be the guest speaker.

At 4 p.m. at the Dawn Baptist Church, a special service will be held, with music by the Hereford Senior Citizens Choir and a tribute will be given by the Rev. Charles Davenport. Past ministers will be recognized.

The festivities will end with square dancing at 5:30 p.m. at the Community Center by the Merry Mixer Square Dance Club of Hereford.

Throughout the day, and afterward, mail will be cancelled with a special Centennial Postmark issued by the U.S. Postal Service.

The first settlers in the area were located along the Tierra Blanca Creek, which runs south of Dawn, and J.H. Parrish established a post office and general store at his ranch, which ran along the creek.

In order to convince the government that a regular route to Dawn was justified, Parrish and another neighbor, J.R. Dean, took turns carrying the mail from La Plata, the original county seat in the center of the county, to their homes near the present site of Dawn.

Parrish, Dean and others answered advertisements and wrote letters to generate outgoing mail, and they got their relatives to write often to help establish the need for a Dawn post office.

Leander D. Parrish was named postmaster on Dec. 2, 1889.

Sales tax rebate rises

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

Hereford will receive a sales tax rebate of $42,427 this month, the city's share of the sales tax assessed on most of the goods you buy.

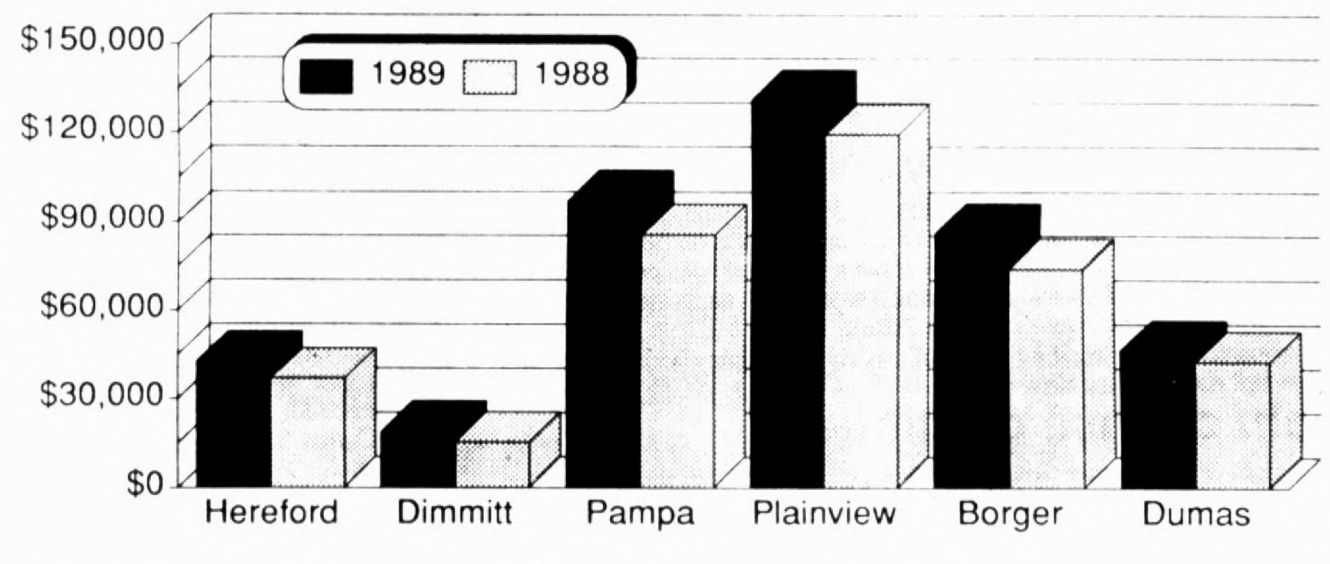

The July 1989 rebate, based on taxes collected in May and reported to State Comptroller Bob Bullock by June 20, is up from the July 1988 rebate of $36,455, a 15.8 percent increase. For the year, Hereford has received $332,700, up from the $329,665 collected through July 1988.

Many other area cities also reported an increase this month compared to year-ago figures. The most notable exception was Amarillo, where the monthly rebate was down to $802,302 from last July's $818,680. For the year, Amarillo has collected $7.14 million, up 3.5 percent from last year's $6.9 million.

The largest percentage increase was in Dimmitt, where they have collected $18,650, up from last July's rebate of $15,083, a 23.7 percent increase. For the year, Dimmitt has received $149,154, up 29.8 percent from last year's $114,915 for the first seven months of the year.

Other area cities include Pampa, $96,860, up $11,000 for the month, and up seven percent for the year; Plainview, $130,918 this month, up 9.8 percent, and $1.1 million for the year, up 21.7 percent; Dumas, $46,292, up $3,700, and $372,288 for the year, up 2.4 percent; and Canyon, $27,398, up $2,000 over the July 1988 rebate, and $222,895 for the year, up 6.25 percent.

Agreement on UW agencies host board comp is close

AUSTIN (AP) - Lawmakers said they have reached a tentative agreement on overhauling the state workers' compensation system, but admitted the proposed reform probably would not reduce employer-paid workers' comp rates.

Businesses, the major force behind the push to change the system, have complained of workers' comp insurance rate increases of 148 percent over the past four years.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said he didn't know if the proposal would reduce workers' comp insurance rates. "Nobody can predict," Hobby said Wednesday.

House Speaker Gib Lewis said, "I think you're going to see an increase in October regardless of what we pass here in the Legislature."

"The only thing we can hope for is by this legislative action on this workers' comp bill is that it will lower the insurance rates in the future, and that's what we're trying to do. We think it will," Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said.

Hobby, Lewis, and members of a House-Senate conference committee announced they had reached a tentative agreement in the impasse that has deadlocked lawmakers since January and forced a special legislative session.

"Everybody has signed off on the points that had been holding up some of the negotiations," Lewis said.

But Gov. Bill Clements said he remained pessimistic that the Legislature would pass a bill before the end of the special session July 19.

"I don't see the movement that I would have anticipated," Clements said.

Sen. Kent Caperton, co-chairman of the House-Senate conference committee, said he expected the panel will produce a bill by Friday for consideration of both chambers Monday.

The major obstacles between the House and Senate were over how to resolve disputed workers' comp claims, how to calculate benefits and whether to require employers to purchase workers' comp insurance.

The House, backed by business, supported reducing litigation of comp claims, computing injury awards based on a specific benefits schedule, and had rejected proposals to mandate comp insurance coverage.

The Senate, supported by labor and trial lawyers, favored retaining the right to a jury trial, basing comp awards on lost wages, and requiring employers buy comp insurance.

Under the proposed agreement, disputed comp claims could be appealed to state district court, but settlements before the trial began would have to be approved by the administrative workers' compensation commission.

Sen. John Montford said this would answer the concerns of business groups, which have complained that the threat of litigation is driving up awards and in turn insurance premiums.

"It's designed ... to make sure the litigants don't use juries as a leverage to force a settlement," said Montford, D-Lubbock.

Two member agencies hosted the United Way of Deaf Smith County's monthly board meeting Tuesday at the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce in Hereford.

The Hereford office of the Rape Crisis/Domestic Violence Center and the Salvation Army sponsored the meeting and hosted a barbecue luncheon.

Cindy Simons, chairman of the local rape crisis center, told the board members about the organizations, which has one full-time employee and a secretary. A 15-member advisory board governs the local office, which is financed by the United Way, grants, donations, and from city and county funds.

The center has a 24-hour hotline manned by volunteers. Overnight facilities, where someone could stay for up to 30 days, are provided, and the organization also provides help in court.

The center also sponsors the "We Help Ourselves" (WHO) program, which uses puppets and pamphlets to explain to students what to do in certain situations.

The local unit of the Salvation Army serves those in need, from sending kids to camp to providing literature for those in need. About two-thirds of the persons helped by the local unit are local residents.

The Salvation Army hopes to have a canteen at the upcoming Town and Country Jubilee for the public to see and tour. There are 370 canteens in Texas, and many of them are United Way affiliates.

At the meeting, Shirley Garrison and Margie Daniels presented information on the upcoming expansion of the Senior Center in Hereford.

They explained that the building fund campaign will need to raise about $300,000 and should end before the UWSDC campaign begins in September.

The UWSDC has received 84.7 percent of the monies pledged in the 1988 campaign, it was reported.

Boyd Foster is serving as president of the UWSDC in 1989. Other officers include Margaret Bell, vice president; Larry Alley, treasurer; Pat Newton, assistant treasurer; Morgan Cain, secretary; Tommie Weemes, committee chairman; Cindy Caro, publicity chairman; and Wayne Amstutz, executive director.

Dr. A.T. Mims will chair the 1989 campaign. Division chairmen include Jane Meiwes, agriculture; Speedy Nieman, corporate gifts; Helen Spinks and Inez Witherspoon, Golden Age; Ken McLain, major gifts; Jeff Torbert, metro; Pat Newton, Pacesetters; Dr. Steve Lewis, professional; Jimmy Bell and David McDonald, special; Lee Washington, Whiteface East; and Anna Solomon, Whiteface West.

Assisting those persons will be loaned executive Sid Shaw; Howard Birdwell, who will cultivate large accounts who have not participated in the past; and Charlie Bell, who will work with new accounts.

Bush returns French key

PARIS (AP) - Fresh from a landmark visit to Eastern Europe, President Bush joined other world leaders today for a spectacular Parisian party celebrating the 200th anniversary of the French Revolution.

The gala events preceding a summit meeting of the world's seven largest industrial democracies contrasted sharply with the president's trip to Poland and Hungary, where he promised to help both communist nations with major economic reforms.

Bush was greeted by French President Francois Mitterrand at the inaugural bicentennial event at the Place du Trocadero, a ceremony commemorating the Declaration of the Rights of Man, a statement issued in August 1789 setting forth the French Revolution's aims of liberty, fraternity and equality for all people.

Before Air Force One left Budapest for the French capital, Bush told Hungarian leaders that "as your economy modernizes, you will play an even greater role in the evolution of a new Europe, a Europe that is whole and free."

As he joins the bicentennial celebration of French independence, Bush told his Hungarian hosts, "you are proving, here in the heartland of Europe, that the Rights of Man are the proper birthright of us all."

The president and his wife, Barbara, were bid farewell at the Budapest airport by Hungarian President Bruno F. Straub after two-day visit. An 8-year-old girl, Nicoletta Nikolaibisz, appeared on the runway, gave Bush her mophaired doll and chatted with the president briefly.

In Paris, Mitterrand greeted each leader arriving by limousine at the ceremony site near the Eiffel Tower. The crowd in the street cheered when Philippines President Corazon Aquino appeared. Other guests included Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi of India, President Robert Mugabe of Zimbabwe, President Mobutu Sese Seko of Zaire and other African leaders, U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, Brazilian President Jose Sarney, Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari and Uruguayan President Julio Maria Sanguinetti.

Paris is the site for both the summit and the celebration of the bicentennial of the French Revolution. And the party comes first - a massive gala with concerts, fireworks and parades.

Both literally and figuratively, Bush was bringing the key to the party. He was carrying the historic key to the Bastille prison, the site where the French Revolution began when the Bastille was stormed in an uprising against the crown on July 14, 1789.

The key was given to George Washington nearly 200 years ago by the Marquis de Lafayette.

Since 1858, the historic artifact has been in the possession of the Mount Vernon Ladies' Association, the private, non-profit organization that owns and operates Washington's home. The association is loaning the key to France for the celebration.

BABBLING BROOKS

By John Brooks

By JOHN BROOKS

If anyone decides they don't want to take any chances on Tuesday, just stay in bed all day, chances are the slats will fall out of your bed, or your waterbed will spring a leak.

Next Tuesday is one of those "days" in history. Sometimes, we all have one of "those days." As far as history is concerned, July 18 is one of "those days." It's an Excedrin Headache No. 418.

There aren't many good things that happened on July 18. If it's your birthday, it's a good day. It's also Red Skelton's birthday, and John Glenn's, too.

One of the good things that happened: In 1986, the world got its first look at the sunken remains of the Titanic.

In 1927, Ty Cobb got his 4,000th hit.

That's about it. Among the un-good things was back in A.D. 64, Nero, who was later reincarnated as the fire chief at Yellowstone, saw the Great Fire of Rome begin. By the way, Nero did not fiddle as the city burned. He recited poetry.

It was another bad day in Rome in 1536, that was the day that Henry VIII decided to be the pope, and the authority of the pope was declared null and void in England. With the freely-exercised death penalty at the time in England, one can only suppose that those who felt the authority of the pope was un-null and un-void were declared null and void.

Gen. Francisco Franco came up with one of the biggest coups in history beginning July 18, 1936. He gathered up some troops in North Africa and sent them toward Madrid.

Four years later, in 1940, Franklin Roosevelt was nominated to his unprecedented third term. Seven years later, on the same day, President Harry S. Truman signed a law setting up the official presidential succession.

Sadly, for McDonald's customers, July 18 is the day, in 1984, that a gunman went into a Golden Arches in San Ysidro, Calif., and killed 21 people.

July 18 (yes, Tuesday) is the 20th anniversary of the day that Teddy Kennedy became unelectable as President of the United States. Just as no one will ever know for sure exactly who was behind the murder, six years earlier, of his brother in Dallas, no one will ever know what happened that night on Chappaquiddick Island. Teddy got out of the car and wandered away. Then he remembered, but when he returned to the bridge, "Mary Jo and the car were gone."

That, however, is not the biggest memory lapse to occur on a July 18. No, the biggest lapse befell a pilot, a Mr. Douglas Corrigan. Mr. Corrigan was flying from New York to California. Instead, he flew from New York to Ireland.

Don't you think all of the water would have given him a clue?

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, July 13, the 194th day of 1989. There are 171 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 13th, 1863, rioting against the Civil War military draft erupted in New York City. The violence resulted in the deaths of about 1,000 people over the next three days.

On this date:

In 1787, Congress enacted an ordinance governing the Northwest Territory.

In 1793, French revolutionary writer Jean Paul Marat was murdered in his bath by Charlotte Corday.

In 1821, Confederate cavalry commander Nathan Bedford Forrest was born in Bedford County, Tenn.

In 1878, the Treaty of Berlin amended the terms of the Treaty of San Stefano, which had ended the Russo-Turkish War of 1877-78.

In 1960, Massachusetts Sen. John F. Kennedy won the Democratic presidential nomination at his party's convention in Los Angeles.

In 1967, race-related rioting broke out in Newark, N.J. By the time the violence ended on July 17, 27 people had been killed.

In 1974, the Senate Watergate Committee proposed sweeping reforms in campaign procedures and other statutes in an effort to prevent another Watergate scandal.

In 1977, the New York City area was plunged into darkness after lightning struck upstate power lines. Incidents of looting and violence broke out before power was fully restored 25 hours later.

Ten years ago: A 45-hour siege began at the Egyptian Embassy in Ankara, Turkey, as four Palestinian guerrillas killed two security men and seized 20 hostages. (A third man fell to his death from an embassy window; the guerrillas surrendered on July 15.)

Five years ago: Walter F. Mondale, the nominee-apparent of the Democratic Party, launched his fall campaign in his boyhood hometown of Elmore, Minn., with his newly chosen running mate, U.S. Rep. Geraldine A. Ferraro.

One year ago: Final results of Mexico's recent presidential election were released, giving the victory to the candidate of the governing party, Carlos Salinas de Gortari. Opponents charged the election had been stolen.

Today's Birthdays: The Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, Jack Kemp, is 54. Actor Harrison Ford is 47. Singer Louise Mandrell is 35.

Thought for Today: "It is only when we are misunderstood by others that we really understand ourselves." -- Van Wyck Brooks, American author (1886-1963).

Whitman arsenal for sale

AUSTIN (AP) - A Dallas area gun collector is offering for sale the seven guns that Charles Whitman carried to the top of the University of Texas Tower for a bloody rampage that left 16 dead, the Austin American-Statesman reported today.

The newspaper said in a copy-right story that sale of the three rifles, one shotgun and three pistols stirs painful memories of the 1966 attack in which 31 people were wounded.

Wayne Buxton of Richardson purchased an advertisement in a gun collector's publication for the sales, according to the newspaper.

The report said Buxton had instructed editors of "Shotgun News", which has run the ad in three issues of the three-times-a-month publication, not to divulge his name or phone number to callers.

However, the newspaper said it tied the post office box number given in the classified ad to Buxton. The gun collector did not immediately return telephone calls today by The Associated Press.

Buxton told the newspaper he doesn't want to discuss what the ads call The Whitman Collection because "there's too much pain in the state of Texas" associated with the slayings.

"I have no interest whatsoever in resurrecting pain or any sad feelings," he said. "It's a source of pain to certain people, and I don't want to get into that."

Buxton, describing the pain as "a function of time," said the pistol used to kill President Lincoln is now a tourist attraction in a museum in Washington, D.C.

"But there's no pain involved" in the Lincoln assassination weapon because sufficient time has passed, he said. Buxton would not tell the newspaper how he obtained the weapons or how long he has owned them.

The collector's ad offers the guns, a radio, binoculars, cameras and a knife for $7,500, or in trade for historical Winchester rifles or Colt pistols.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I cried when I read the story in today's paper about another newborn baby found strangled, this one at the bottom of a trash can behind a motel. These stories are especially heartbreaking to couples like my husband and me, who have been waiting for years to adopt a child.

The article said that at least 28,000 children were abandoned in 1986 by young girls, many unmarried with no place to go, or women who had children they couldn't care for and were terrified at the thought of having another.

One infant boy was found recently on the steps of a Roman Catholic Church with a note pinned to his little yellow blanket. It said, in Spanish, "I have no job. I have no money. I am from El Salvador. Please take good care of my son."

What happens to these trash-can babies? Are they adoptable? Please educate us, Ann. Pregnant girls should be told what to do and where to go and people like me need to know if there is a chance that we might get one of the abandoned babies. Thank you, Ann, we appreciate your help.--Syracuse Reader

DEAR READER: We contacted the Children's Home and Aid Society of Illinois, which does a wonderful job. Dr. Joan DiLeonardi was most helpful. She said most of these babies are adopted.

If the police find an abandoned baby they will take it to a hospital, where it is checked thoroughly, then a state agency takes over. If the baby is healthy, it goes to a temporary foster home until a permanent home can be found.

Young girls or women who are pregnant and feel that they are unable to keep the child should check with a local child welfare agency. The agency will arrange for temporary care for the baby, assist with adoption procedures and provide counseling for the mother.

When these babies are adopted, they are called "Legal Risk Placement" babies because mothers can come back and claim them. The mothers rarely do, however.

Women with unwanted pregnancies need to know the choices open to them. To women for whom abortion is not an option, for whatever reason, I ask that you please contact a social service agency. You will be treated with dignity and respect. Arrangements will be made to see that your child is delivered safely and placed in a loving home with parents who will cherish him or her. You will be blessed by those parents all the days of your life.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have enjoyed your column for many years and at long last I have something to send your way to repay you for all the good advice.

Recently I spent three weeks in a Colorado Springs hospital. The bill was enormous, which did not surprise me. When I asked for an itemization I noticed that I was charged $18.75 for the surgeon's operating gown.

Can you believe it?--C.S.

DEAR C.D.: Yes, I can believe. It sounds a little like that $7 aspirin I wrote about several weeks ago. I hope you insisted on taking the gown home.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I know you don't do "helpful hints" as a rule, but I have a terrific suggestion for removing grease and grime from the hands and face. Take a cup of lard and add 5 tablespoons of sugar. Mix well and use like soap. You'll be amazed at the results.--Magic Jorgenson, NYC

A VERY OLD PROCESS

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP)—The yeast fermentation process, used to make bread, is documented by Babylonian wall carvings dating back to 2300 B.C.

Today, a form of this process is being used to provide an alternative to salt and monosodium glutamate (MSG) in prepared foods.

Applying new technology to yeast fermentation, Provesta has developed natural flavor enhancers that it says improve the flavor of many foods, without the questionable adverse health effects of traditional flavor enhancers.

White calls an end to Cowboy career

IRVING, Texas (AP) - Danny White said he disagrees with Dallas Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson's thinking that the team can be successful in the NFL playing young, inexperienced quarterbacks.

But it also is a philosophy White said he has accepted. "He's the boss and he needs to be the boss," White said Wednesday.

And with that, the Cowboys quarterback of the 1980s retired after a 13-year NFL career.

White, 37, is the most accurate passer in club history and holds 11 team records. All told, he led the Cowboys to five playoff appearances and two division titles. His record as a starter was 67-35, a winning percentage of 65.7 percent.

But he also was constantly compared, some say unfairly, to Roger Staubach, the Hall of Fame quarterback who during an 11-year career led the Cowboys to four Super Bowl appearances and two NFL championships.

"That's just something that's been overdone," White said during a teary-eyed farewell. "I never tried to live up to the expectations they had of Roger."

"I consider it an honor to follow him."

Johnson only hopes one of his young quarterbacks creates the same type of excitement as Staubach, who led Dallas to 23 comeback victories, 14 in the last two minutes or overtime.

The Cowboys selected UCLA quarterback Troy Aikman with the first pick in this spring's NFL draft. They picked Miami quarterback Steve Walsh in Friday's supplemental draft, and Scott Secules is entering his second season.

Steve Pelluer, the Cowboys' starter last season, is holding out in a contract dispute, leaving Babe Laufenberg as the only player at this week's quarterbacks school who has taken an NFL snap.

Johnson remains unfazed. "I feel like because of the unique situation we're in, our younger players know more about the system than our veterans," he said. "Just because a player is a veteran doesn't mean he is the player farthest along in our offense."

All of which left White in limbo, especially after a Wednesday morning meeting with Johnson.

In May, White signed a contract for an undetermined length, but his role already had diminished with Pelluer's emergence over the past two seasons.

White said he never considered playing as a backup whose role might include tutoring the younger quarterbacks. He reiterated a belief that he could win the starting job in 1989, but only if he received the practice time needed to learn Johnson's new system.

"The direction they wanted to take was to get the young guys as much work as possible," White said. "That opportunity was not going to be provided."

"They're taking a step up," White said, drawing the parallel between Johnson's move from the college ranks at Miami. "The organization is growing together."

Johnson said he understood White's dilemma.

"Danny is such a competitor that he wanted to be a key figure," he said. "The job was wide open but we have to make a decision on who gets the repetitions, who gets the practice time."

White made an impact around the NFL even before Staubach retired after the 1979 season. When Staubach was injured during a 1978 playoff game against Atlanta, White rallied the Cowboys to a 27-20 victory.

Two years later and in the first year after Staubach's retirement, White threw two touchdown passes in the final four minutes of a 30-27 playoff victory at Atlanta.

The comparisons to Staubach escalated, but the rest of White's career was met by one bitter disappointment after another. He led the Cowboys to the NFC championship game in his first three seasons as a starter, only to lose each time.

Most bitter, White said, was a 28-27 loss to San Francisco in the NFC title game after the 1981 season.

Doubling as a punter, White had pinned the 49ers at their own 11-yard line with less than four minutes remaining, only to watch as Joe Montana engineered as Staubach-like drive for the go-ahead touchdown in the final minute.

Even then, White was moving the Cowboys into position for a potential game-winning field goal when he fumbled near midfield as he was sacked.

"I've grown more in the last four or five years than in the first 33 years combined," White said of his playoff disappointments.

Later, he added, "I'm at peace with my soul."

White's retirement leaves center Tom Rafferty and defensive end Ed Jones as the only players remaining from the Cowboys' 1978-79 Super Bowl team.

"We may have lost three NFC championship games with him as quarterback, but you have to remember ... he was the quarterback to get us to those championships," Rafferty said.

White said retirement will allow him more time to devote to his family and business.

Garrett cards hole-in-one during scramble

Cal Garrett scored a hole-in-one to highlight play in the Wednesday Scramble at Pitman Municipal Golf Course yesterday, but the ace only helped the team to gain a tie in the weekly tournament.

Garrett's team posted a 29, but Mark Black's team carded an eagle and four birdies to put another 29 on the board. It marked the fourth straight week for a tie in the scramble, with the merchandise prize pot building up to $220 per player yesterday.

Garrett, a former pro at the city golf course, used a pitching wedge on the 140-yard No. 3 hole for his ace. It was the first hole-in-one for Garrett over a long golfing career. Garrett is also the former owner of Cal's One-Hour Cleaners.

Members of Garrett's team included Vernon Kosub, Jesse Hernandez and Jerry Shipman. Joining Black on the other team were Speedy Nicman, Paul Hamilton and Lois Jones.

The weekly scramble is open to all interested golfers and registration began yesterday for next week's play. There is usually a waiting list for the popular summer event.

Former umpire sues over gambling story

HOUSTON (AP) - Attorneys for former major league umpire Satch Davidson filed suit against the New York Daily News and one of its writers Wednesday seeking more than $5 million in damages for a story alleging Davidson conspired to fix major league games.

KRIV-TV in Houston obtained a copy of the suit which said the Daily News and writer Dave Kaplan irresponsibly and maliciously published an article falsely reporting that Davidson, who retired in 1984, had been involved in gambling and helped to fix baseball games.

Davidson, 54, seeks damages of $5 million or more from New York News Inc., depending on the net worth of the organization.

The suit also asks for $50,000 or more from Kaplan, depending on his net worth.

"What I've said and what the lawsuit says speaks for itself," Davidson, an umpire for 19 years, said Wednesday night.

When reached Wednesday night, a member of the sports department at the Daily News deferred comment until Thursday morning.

The suit is the result of a story the Daily News printed in its April 9 editions.

"In the Umpire Gambling article, the Daily News and Kaplan, purporting to rely on an anonymous source to CBS, reported that CBS News was planning to air a segment within a few days on gambling by umpires, including proof that former major league umpire Satch Davidson actually helped fix baseball games," the suit said.

The suit denied that Davidson had ever gambled, fixed games, or had been involved in or part of any gambling by umpires.

CBS never intended to broadcast any allegations that Davidson was involved in fixing games, the suit said.

Immediately after publication of the article, CBS News denied it intended to broadcast any report accusing Davidson of gambling or fixing games.

When the story first appeared in the Daily News, Davidson said the only gambling he ever did was playing gin rummy.

"I just can't believe it, just no way can I believe that something like this is taking place," Davidson said in April. "I don't have an answer for it."

Walsh moving in at NBC

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) - Bill Walsh took a seat with the media at a news conference to symbolize his abrupt move into a new career as NBC's No. 1 pro football analyst.

He mumbled a joke. Few heard it, much less got it.

The clumsiness of the incident illustrates how much and how fast Walsh has to learn the broadcasting business before his first game Sept. 10, when the Chicago Bears meet the Cincinnati Bengals, the teams his San Francisco 49ers beat last season in the NFC title game and Super Bowl, respectively.

Walsh, who has been a coach his entire adult life, admits as much.

"I can't see I'll come out and break any new frontiers in broadcasting," he said Wednesday during his first news conference since the move was announced Monday. "A journalist I'll never be, but someday I could be an amateur journalist and I can be a thoroughly professional analyst."

Walsh, who stepped down as coach of the 49ers after leading the team to its third Super Bowl victory of the decade in January, said he will be put through simulation broadcasts of five exhibition games this summer before his on-air debut.

He joked it could be 10 games if he's not as quick a study as NBC officials believe.

The network's Terry O'Neil, executive producer of NBC Sports, auditioned Walsh for the job and called his performance the best "I've ever seen."

Those who know the soft-spoken, reserved - some might even say drab - Walsh dismiss such statements as hyperbole, but add that the 57-year-old coach has a keen, dry sense of humor. His style is almost professorial.

For his part, Walsh stresses his recognized ability to give sharp technical analysis when asked about his qualifications for the job. He sidesteps the issue of whether he's colorful enough for television broadcasting.

"I just speak as I see things," Walsh said, adding he has rarely watched sports analysts at work. "I'll explain misjudgments, miscalculations.

I'll be using my own vernacular, and hope that's enough."

Tight end Jamie Williams, signed during the offseason, said Walsh is often described as a guy who keeps to himself and doesn't say much. But after spending some time talking to Walsh last week, Williams described Walsh as "someone who doesn't try to talk over your head. And that's what viewers will like."

After resigning as coach this winter, Walsh was in a kind of limbo as the 49ers' "executive vice president for football operations." He compiled a 102-63-1 record in 10 years with the 49ers, and said he had found it difficult working for the team without being in charge.

"I think I felt a loss on the field," he said, and described the past months as a "difficult time." "As head coach, you like to think, 'That's my team.' That feeling is a haunting feeling, a tough one."

Walsh appeared for the news conference with team owner Edward DeBartolo Jr. at the 49ers' training camp. Both men tried to quell speculation the team can't get along without him and that the two were parting on less than amiable terms.

Walsh was stripped of the team presidency by DeBartolo after the 1987 season and reportedly was caught between the increasingly assertive owner and then-assistant coach George Seifert, who followed Walsh as head coach.

Walsh said the team would not be hurt by his absence, despite his putting together the entire organizational chart, from coaches to the front office. His drafts were as intriguing as his game plans.

"The team will sustain itself ... and will run very, very smoothly," he said.

DeBartolo said he had no plans to immediately fill Walsh's position and said the duties eventually could go to others already within the organization.

HAVE FUN at the Movies

EXCELLENT GOOD FAIR POOR DON'T WASTE MONEY

Goodness gracious, there's a whole lotta shakin' goin' on ... "GREAT BALLS OF FIRE": Starring Dennis Quaid as the legendary rock 'n' roll star Jerry Lee Lewis. Subtlety is not the long suit in this sometime entertaining film of the birth of rock 'n' roll and Mr. Lewis' place in the history books. For fans of the music of Jerry Lee Lewis the movie is an all-out-delight; for fans of the biography genre of films the movie is a disappointment. The film works only when the story concentrates on the songs Lewis made famous. They are performed by "The Killer" himself, lip-synched by Mr. Quaid and expertly integrated with the plot. The plot, however, is not integrated into anything - it's not the real story of rock 'n' roll. It is not even the real story of Jerry Lee Lewis. The film centers on only a two year period in the life of this fascinating, self-made, self-destructive man. It is not even the real story of Southern life in the 50s. In this film all Southerners are made to look like tasteless crooks or tasteless clowns. The major problem with the script is that there's more, a lot more, to the Jerry Lee Lewis story and there's more to rock 'n' roll and the 50s. Dennis Quaid, however, is remarkable as Lewis. He has all the Lewis mannerisms down to perfection; the toss of the unruly blond hair, the wicked grin and the "pumpin'" piano style that borders on perpetual motion - and he does a wonderful imitation of it all. When Quaid sits down at the piano, you'll believe that Lewis has taken over - and this is when the film takes off and literally soars. The right hand plays gospel, the left hand plays barrelhouse rhythm and blues. And you hear - feel - the energy, the spontaneity, the excitement of the Lewis music. When Lewis (Quaid) bangs out the bass chords with his feet, the film's rock fans howl for more; when he finishes one performance by setting his piano ablaze, they mob the stage. And this was how it was in the 50s - this is when the film rings true and is at its most enjoyable.

Unfortunately for the story line, Quaid does not have an opportunity to get inside of his character and give us any substance or any reasons to like or understand Lewis any better. On the other hand, we will not like Lewis less because of Dennis Quaid's interpretation. Perhaps this light hearted caricature was done on purpose - so much of the film is shot like an early 50's musical comedy. Does it work? About half the time. Conclusion? Again, if you are a Jerry Lee Lewis fan; a fan of rock 'n' roll; a fan of Dennis Quaid, you might laugh at this movie a lot, and be a little bored at times, but you will have a good time. Rated PG-13. Three Boxes.

RENTAL MOVIES

For rock musical fans...

"BYE BYE BIRDIE": (1963) Starring Janet Leigh, Dick Van Dyke and Ann-Margaret in an entertaining version of the hit Broadway musical about a drafted rock 'n' roll idol coming to a small town to give "one last kiss" to an adoring fan. The songs include Put On A Happy Face, We Love You, Conrad, and Kids. The film is fast-paced, has a likable cast, good production numbers and is a lot of fun. No rating, would be a G. Three Boxes.

"A HARD DAY'S NIGHT": (1964 - reissued in 1982 with a short prologue). Starring the Beatles. Some critics feel that Hard Day's is among the greatest rock 'n' roll comedies ever made. The film is scripted by Alan Owen as a sort of "day in the life of the Beatles". It is very funny and full of great Lennon-McCartney songs. Director Richard Lester lets his imagination run wild. The result is a visual delight with many Beatles songs on the soundtrack. Even twenty years after its release, it continues to entertain several generations. In black and white. Not rated, a PG. Three Boxes.

"YELLOW SUBMARINE": (1968) Starring the Beatles. This is the film that probably epitomized the flower generation. It's a pure delight, unique and refreshing with as much to hear as there is to see: Beatles songs, puns, surreal pop-art; all in a story of the Beatles trying to save Pepperland from the Blue Meanies. Songs include Lucy In The Sky With Diamonds, When I'm 64, and All You Need Is Love. Not rated, a PG. Four Boxes.

"THE BUDDY HOLLY STORY": (1978) Starring Gary Busey. His outstanding performance as Buddy Holly makes this one of the truly great rock 'n' roll film biographies. Gary Busey convincingly embodies the legend from Lubbock, Texas, and sings Holly's songs - including That'll Be The Day, Not Fade Away and It's So Easy - with style and conviction. Gary Busey, and a terrific supporting cast, bring Buddy Holly and the Crickets to life. Rated PG. Four Boxes. "THE ROSE": (1979) Starring Bette Midler as a Janis Joplin-like rock singer. This film is worth seeing for the raw, powerful, brilliant performance of Bette Midler as a singer who falls prey to the temptations of superstardom. The Rose also has a first-rate rock score - maybe one of the best. Not for everyone - it's very R. Four Boxes.

EXCELLENT GOOD FAIR POOR DON'T WASTE MONEY

Goodness gracious, there's a whole lotta shakin' goin' on... "GREAT BALLS OF FIRE": Starring Dennis Quaid as the legendary rock 'n' roll star Jerry Lee Lewis. Subtlety is not the long suit in this sometime entertaining film of the birth of rock 'n' roll and Mr. Lewis' place in the history books. For fans of the music of Jerry Lee Lewis the movie is an all-out-delight; for fans of the biography genre of films the movie is a disappointment. The film works only when the story concentrates on the songs Lewis made famous. They are performed by "The Killer" himself, lip-synched by Mr. Quaid and expertly integrated with the plot. The plot, however, is not integrated into anything - it's not the real story of rock 'n' roll. It is not even the real story of Jerry Lee Lewis. The film centers on only a two year period in the life of this fascinating, self-made, self-destructive man. It is not even the real story of Southern life in the 50s. In this film all Southerners are made to look like tasteless crooks or tasteless clowns. The major problem with the script is that there's more, a lot more, to the Jerry Lee Lewis story and there's more to rock 'n' roll and the 50s. Dennis Quaid, however, is remarkable as Lewis. He has all the Lewis mannerisms down to perfection; the toss of the unruly blond hair, the wicked grin and the "pumpin'" piano style that borders on perpetual motion - and he does a wonderful imitation of it all. When Quaid sits down at the piano, you'll believe that Lewis has taken over - and this is when the film takes off and literally soars. Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR LAMB: I seem to have a rare and strange disease. I have hardly any saliva and my mouth is dry all the time. Also, I don't have enough tears. My eyes are dry. Lately, my vagina has also been dry, even though I take hormones to prevent bone loss. My doctor says I have Sjogren's disease.

You have no idea how frustrating it is to try to eat and not have any saliva. Saliva is one of those things you don't appreciate unless you don't have it. I cannot swallow any dry foods like bread and nearly need to stick to liquids. I usually drink something with each swallow. Fortunately, I can still eat ice cream. I have also lost a lot of my sense of taste and the doctor says that is because I don't form enough saliva.

My eyes feel like I have something in them most of the time. I have been using artificial tears and they do help. Is my dry vagina part of this or is it caused by not taking enough hormones? Also, would more hormones help my dry mouth and eyes? Are there any other things I can do?

DEAR READER: Sjogren's disease, which causes dry eyes and a dry mouth, is not nearly as rare as you might think. And it affects 10 times as many women as men. Some people just have a dry mouth. Dry eyes may also be the only manifestation. But there are many other causes for dry eyes as well. Yes, it can cause the vagina to be dry, and in that case additional estrogen will not correct the dryness, provided you are already taking a sufficient amount to not have an estrogen deficiency. Estrogen has nothing to do with the dryness of your mouth or eyes.

The dryness may also involve the nose and be the underlying cause of frequent nosebleeds.

I have discussed this condition in more detail in Dry Mouth, Dry Eyes in THE HEALTH LETTER 33-11, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send $1 with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER 33-11, P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713.

The cause of this disease is not clear. And there is not complete agreement on the treatment. Treatment of the symptoms is common, but some authorities, such as Dr. Phillip C. Fox of the National Institute of Dental Research, believe since it involves multiple areas of the body that steroids or other powerful medicines should be used.

DEAR DR LAMB: I am 16 years old and began menstruating when I was 13. My periods have been terribly irregular. I may have a period that lasts from one week to three weeks. Then I will not have a period for a month or two.

Also, would sex be harmful to me? Sex has never been something incorporated into my life personally, but I want to know the consequences should I decide I'm ready for it.

DEAR READER: It is fairly common for a girl to have irregular menstrual cycles at the beginning of her reproductive years. Usually, this corrects itself in time, although some women always have some degree of irregularity.

I recognize the strong urge people have to engage in sex, but there are many risks involved. First is an unwanted pregnancy, regardless of how careful you think you are. Second is the risk of sexually transmitted diseases. AIDS is not the only problem. Some of these can result in scarring of the tubes and cause a woman to become infertile even if she never has any symptoms of an infection. Early sex with multiple partners significantly increases the risk of cervical cancer later in life. Then there are the emotional aspects and how sexual relations affect you. So more is involved than a moral judgment.

Dr. Lamb welcomes letters from readers with health questions. You can write to him at P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713.

Relax, be good to yourself

Finding time for oneself is self-gratification and not selfishness, according to a family life specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"Too many people feel they are not entitled to self-gratification, even though recent studies tell us about the close association between physical illness and mental stress and fatigue," said Dorothy Taylor.

"When a person takes time out for himself, to do for himself and to take care of himself, he reflects a good self-image," Taylor said.

She said that all too often, women in particular, feel they cannot leave their family or job responsibilities even for a short period of time. They eventually end up taking away from the family and job, anyway, by being ill more often, less responsive to others or by turning against oneself because of exhaustion.

"All adults and children need enough time for themselves to relax, unwind and to escape responsibility," Taylor said. "Private time is absolutely essential to good mental well-being, no matter how many responsibilities one may have."

She said, "Sharing household tasks among all family members and equally distributing the menial and difficult tasks of home is a good beginning."

"Many people need to be stimulated into finding a new rewarding outlet or take on a new skill in order to 'make' time rather than to 'take' time from responsibilities. Overcoming the guilt of doing nothing may be the first and most difficult barrier to overcome," she said.

"Remember, it has been said 'You'll pay at the doctor's office what you don't pay for a vacation,'" Taylor said. "When the newness, resentment and guilt have all gone, you find that taking a moment to relax is being good to yourself."
