Olivarez ready to join Army friends

By DANEE' WILSON
Staff Writer

Everyday after school, hundreds of children rush home to cartoons, family and a certain peace that being at home brings. Like most school children, the three Olivarez girls rush home, but they rush to spend time with their father, whose job will be taking him away again. It's a job where the risk is high, there are no guarantees of a safe return, or of a return at all.

Thomas Olivarez is not a truck driver or an airplane pilot, not even a traveling salesman; he is a sergeant in the Army.

Olivarez joined the Army seven years ago, after his high school graduation. He served for six years and was released on a medical discharge last year.

After a year of readjusting to civilian life, Olivarez is signing up again to serve his country in Saudi Arabia.

"I like the Army," said Olivarez. "I'm proud to serve my country. Being in the Army makes me feel important."

Every member of Olivarez' old unit is in Saudi Arabia. After correspondence with several members of his old unit, Olivarez felt that is where he should be.

"When I first decided to join back up, they wouldn't let me since I was discharged on a medical," Olivarez said. "When I found out that they were finally going to let me, I got real nervous about going."

"I hear people saying that one person does not matter or make a difference, but they're wrong. One person makes a big difference."

Despite his nervousness, Olivarez is ready and excited about going.

"I feel as if I never left," Olivarez said with anticipation. "During boot camp I cried, I hated it so bad, but after one year, I liked it."

Even though he is excited to serve his country, his three young girls don't share his enthusiasm.

"I don't want my daddy to go," said 7-year-old Tiffany. "He might get shot."

"I don't have a mommy and I don't want my daddy to go because he might not come back," 5-year-old Tasha said.

(His other daughter, Trena, was in the hospital at the time of the interview.)

Daddy doesn't want to leave the girls either, but he knows they'll be in good hands with his parents.

Because Olivarez is a single father, the Army requires he give legal guardianship of his daughters to a member of the family before he leaves.

"I gave my parents (Elvira and Alfred Olivarez) guardianship," he said. "My sister's husband is in Saudi Arabia and she will be moving into my house to help my mom take care of the girls. This way they can all take care of each other."

His parents and other members of his family are supportive of his decision and of the war.

The Olivarezes are a military family. Alfred served in the Army during World War II and later in the Air Force. They have six sons and

Allied bombers pelt Iraqi forces

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia (AP) - Allied bombers today targeted Iraqi ground forces venturing into the open, while Iraq vowed it would use every means from "kitchen knives to weapons of mass destruction" to fight its enemies.

"Nothing short of victory is acceptable to us," Iraq's army newspaper, Al-Qaddisiya, said today. "The Iraq leadership and people will not give up their country."

Allied commanders, meanwhile, said there was considerable movement among Iraqi ground units but that they did not appear to be massing for a major push into Saudi Arabia.

Still, the movement gets some of Saddam Hussein's tanks and armored vehicles out of entrenched positions and makes them easier targets for bombers. "If there's movement, and we find it - and we will - we'll hit it fast and hard," an Air Force officer in Saudi Arabia said today. "He's shifting a bit, and we're going to make him pay for it."

With a combination of lightning-fast jet bombers and hulking B-52s, the allies are trying to pelt Iraqi ground forces in southern Iraq and Kuwait, the emirate Saddam seized on Aug. 2 - six months ago today.

The weather was virtually perfect, with just wispy clouds blocking otherwise clear skies over Kuwait and southern Iraq, according to military forecasters.

Allied ground units were on the move as well. Some were shifting in response to Iraqi troop movements and actions. Saudi Army units, for example, were reinforcing the frontier town of Khafji to head off another Iraqi raid there.

Other allied movements were part of the cat-and-mouse game taking place in advance of the expected allied ground offensive. Some U.S. units are moving into their battle positions, while others are shifting to confuse Saddam's troops about where that push north will come from.

The Baghdad government's army newspaper, in a front-page editorial today, vowed that Iraqis would use any means at their disposal to fight the coalition confronting Iraq.

"We will use whatever power and weapons are at our disposal, starting from kitchen knives to weapons of mass destruction," it said.

In the past, Saddam has threatened to use all arms in Iraq's arsenal, including chemical weapons.

Iraqi officials said today there had been 18 allied air attacks on residential areas, which it called "cowardly raids."

There were no air raids over Baghdad this morning, although there was a large explosion before dawn, possibly caused by a cruise missile. It was not immediately known where the blast had occurred.

"The usurpers of the Arab land, the desecrators of its sanctities, and the looters of its wealth find no means to confront Iraq's courageous challenge and its valiant armed forces," said a military statement read on official radio.

Baghdad radio had said Friday that President Bush, Prime Minister John Major of Britain, President Francois Mitterrand of France and King Fahd of Saudi Arabia are responsible for deaths of innocent Iraqi civilians.

"They should know that they will not be pardoned but that they will be chased personally and that every one of them will receive the punishment he deserves," it said in a broadcast monitored in Cyprus.

U.S. officials have said they are doing all they can to avoid striking civilian areas, and Lt. Gen. Thomas Kelly, director of operations for the Joints Chiefs of Staff, repeated the contention on Friday.

"We are being as careful as we can not to hurt civilians in this war," he told reporters at the Pentagon.

In another statement by Iraq today, the Foreign Ministry described the refueling of U.S. C-141 military transport planes in Bombay, India, as an unfriendly act.

The statement, carried by the official Iraqi News Agency, disputed claims by the government in New Delhi that the planes carried cargo only for "humanitarian purposes" and not war supplies.

Earlier in the week, the Indian government was criticized by its major coalition partner, the media and Iraq's ambassador to India for allowing the refueling.

Meanwhile, a senior aide to Saddam left Tehran today after delivering a message from him to Iranian President Hashemi Rafsanjani, Tehran radio reported.

The broadcast, monitored in Nicosia, quoted Saadoun Hamadi, Iraq's deputy prime minister, as saying his talks in Tehran had been "good and fruitful."

Dozens survive LA plane crash

LOS ANGELES (AP) - A USAir Boeing 737 crushed a commuter plane and burst into flames while landing at Los Angeles International Airport. At least five people were killed and 29 unaccounted for, but dozens survived, officials said today.

Of the 101 people aboard both planes in Friday night's crash, a federal crash investigator said at least 15 were believed dead. A coroner confirmed five deaths but said that figure was expected to rise.

At least 25 people were injured, Fire Department spokesman Jim Wells said. Some were seriously hurt, said USAir spokeswoman Agne Huff. Some survivors among the 89 people aboard the USAir jet jumped 10 feet or more to safety on the tarmac.

All 12 people aboard the commuter plane were unaccounted for, and bodies were visible in the USAir wreckage, officials said.

Rescuers stopped searching the smoldering wreckage this morning because of the risk of explosion caused by leaking fuel, said Gary Mucho, a spokesman for the National Transportation Safety Board.

Workers would try to remove excess fuel "then we will go in and begin to extricate the dead bodies," said Davis Parsons, deputy chief of the LA Fire Department. The salvage effort was to resume later today.

The 737 was landing when it plowed into a departing Skywest commuter jet and slammed into a building at 6:04 p.m., said Elle Brekke, a spokeswoman for the Federal Aviation Administration.

There was no distress signal from the USAir jet, said Jerry Acosta, regional duty officer for the Federal Aviation Administration.

A passenger on the 737, Chul Hong, a doctor from Kenton, Ohio, said: "Something exploded. The airplane started jiggling. I saw flames."

"Everybody became panicked. I jumped over a seat when I saw it was impossible to go out the front. Someone had opened an emergency exit in the rear. The airplane was broken completely in half. It was smashed into two pieces," he said.

Another USAir passenger, Dan Goss, from the China Lake Naval Weapons Station, said: "I went out the slide on the rear and took off running because there was a hell of a lot of fire."

Black smoke and bright orange flames leapt out of the stricken jetliner's windows until firefighters doused the blaze and flooded the runway with foam.

The USAir plane was buckled in mid-fuselage. The plane snapped open at the top, leaving a jagged hole. The left wing, which appeared to have plowed into an abandoned firehouse, was twisted and crunched like a discarded aluminum can against the cinderblock building. Only the

New signs help find the way in San Jose area

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

It's easier to get around in the San Jose area on the southwest edge of Hereford, with street signs marking intersections and houses numbered in the area.

In December, the area began receiving mail at the homes for the first time since the neighborhood cropped up as a labor camp for migrant workers over 40 years ago.

Romelia Flores, manager of the San Jose Water District, said residents have been trying "forever" to get residential mail service. "We've been trying to get everything here forever."

San Jose residents began working in earnest last summer to start getting residential mail service. Before, residents got their mail at the post office or at a box on U.S. Highway 385 at the entrance road to the area.

"We took petitions over there (to the post office), they came out and looked around and said they would try to get service," Flores said. "They did everything so quickly we didn't even all have time to get mail boxes out. They told us about Nov. 20 that we would get service on Dec. 1."

With the mail service came the proper numbering of houses in the area.

"Before, everybody just took whatever number they wanted," Flores said. "The post office was very good to work with all of us to get all the houses numbered like they should be."

The streets in the area have always had names, but there were no signs. That has proven a problem in the past for persons looking for a place in the camp, including emergency personnel.

"In September or October we went to the city to ask them for signs, but they didn't want to do it," Flores said. "When Lupe Chavez came in as commissioner he went to work on it right away and we put them up Wednesday."

The signs are white with red lettering and stand about five feet high.

"The few people I have talked to like the signs," Flores said. "That's an addition we've never had before. They're not fancy, but they are a luxury for us. We're real proud of them."

With the 9-1-1 system coming in next year, the signs and renumbering should help the emergency program.

"They have come out and looked all over for certain houses and certain streets," Flores said. "When we have an emergency, it should be better for everyone."

Ethics debate rekindles Sharpstown memories

AUSTIN (AP) - When the Sharpstown bank and stock fraud scandal spread over state government like a malevolent cloud 20 years ago, Ann Richards was a suburban Austin housewife and John Hannah had left the Legislature to become district attorney in Lufkin, 200 miles away.

Bob Bullock was in the Capitol, but had an unpublicized role as an aide to Gov. Preston Smith. Gib Lewis of Fort Worth had just been sworn in as a freshman House member.

Today, these four will have much to say, and perhaps determine, the content of ethics legislation that has become a major legislative topic.

New laws could clean up the image of public officials, which has been besmirched by senators accepting $10,000 checks on the Senate floor, a nasty $50 million governor's campaign and heavy-handed lobbyist spending, including out-of-state pleasure trips for lawmakers.

An ongoing Travis County grand jury investigation of a San Antonio law firm, lobbyists and legislators has resulted in the indictment of House Speaker Lewis on two misdemeanor ethics violations.

But Lewis himself said, "I think you're going to see an ethics bill. I think we ought to have one."

"I think it probably is healthy for people to view their politicians with some cynicism," Secretary of State Hannah said. "But I think cynicism in Texas has gotten completely out of hand, which handicaps government in its other roles."

Gov. Richards rates ethics reform as "No. 1 or 2 or 3" on the legislative agenda. She put Hannah, whom she appointed, in charge of it.

A strong ethics code is an "absolute minimum," said Lt. Gov. Bullock, presiding officer in the Senate.

When ethics reform infrequently grabs the attention of lawmakers, Sharpstown comes to mind.

"We were talking about it this morning," said Bullock, as he settled in an office chair for an interview.

The Sharpstown scandal centered around two banking bills passed in special legislative session in September 1969 and unsecured loans made by Houston developer Frank Sharp, purportedly to gain the bills' passage.

The scandal broke Jan. 18, 1971, when the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission filed a civil suit in federal court in Dallas as Texas Democrats gathered in Austin to celebrate the re-election of Preston Smith as governor and Ben Barnes, President Lyndon Johnson's protege, as lieutenant governor.

Lewis said, "Here was my first day in office, and I was already declared a crook."

The SEC asserted that the purpose of the 1969 legislation, which passed virtually unnoticed, was to enable Sharp's Sharpstown State Bank to evade regulation by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. The bank became defunct.

Fifteen individuals, 12 corporations and one pension trust were named in the SEC suit, which widened into federal and state investigations that resulted in the conviction of then-House Speaker Gus Mutscher, another House member who sponsored the bills, and a Mutscher aide.

They were convicted by an Abilene jury of conspiring to accept bribes in the form of loans from Sharpstown Bank in exchange for passing the bills Sharp wanted. Each of the three drew a five-year probated sentence.

The money from the loans was used to buy stock in National Bankers Life Insurance Co., which Sharp controlled.

Prosecutors said that the day after the bills passed, the defendants sold the stock to a priest friend of Sharp's for twice the over-the-counter price that day. The insurance company later collapsed.

Then-Gov. Smith and a business partner shared a $125,000 profit off National Bankers stock, but Smith vetoed the two banking bills.

Bullock said, "Frankly, you'll never convince me" that Smith "knew anything was wrong." Smith has dismissed Sharpstown as "an absolute fraud brought on by the press."

In 1972, the year after the scandal broke, Smith and Barnes were defeated in the Democratic Party primary for governor.

The turnover in the Legislature from 1971 to 1973 was extraordinary, approximately half of the 181 senators and state representatives. The 1973 Legislature passed new laws on open meetings, lobby control and campaign financing.

Sharp himself was granted immunity from prosecution in return for his testimony to a federal grand jury. He was placed on three years probation and fined $5,000.

Many Texas Democrats, including Barnes, insist to this day that the stock-fraud investigations were engineered by the national Republican administration to discredit state politicians.

"I think it's still debated on whether or not the bills were good or bad," Hannah said. "Of course, whether a bill's good or bad, if you've got bribery involved, it's beside the point."

Lewis said the House ethics bill will eliminate "some questionable practices" now allowed by state laws.

Bullock said the Senate proposal doesn't treat public officials "like children and say, 'You can't do this.' What it does say is, 'If you do it, you're an adult person, and if you hold public office you're accountable for what you did.'"

Hannah, who did similar ethics reform work in 1972, said he is convinced that those proposals can be melded with Richard's suggestions.

The biggest obstacle to passage, Hannah said, will be officials' concerns that they may "unintentionally" or "mistakenly" run afoul of new ethics provisions.

"Fear of the unknown," Hannah said.

five sons-in-law who have served in the armed forces.

"I worry about my grandkids that are there and I worry about Tommy, but I know God will take care of them," said Mrs. Olivarez.

"We support the troops 100 percent," said Thomas. To show their support, Mrs. Olivarez and Thomas make bows with American flags and streamers, some bearing the name of service men and women serving in the gulf. The Olivarezes make the ribbons for anyone or business that wants one.

"We refuse to take payment for the ribbons," said Thomas. "It's not right, it's war time and people need them for moral support. We wouldn't accept pay."

Anyone can get a special made ribbon just by asking. "We want to do this," he said. "Already several businesses have requested one."

"We wanted to do something to show our support. When I was in the Army, the best thing to lift our spirits was a letter from home. One letter could last a month. I know when I was in the Army something like this would mean a lot to me."

"Publicity means everything to the guys fighting. It really lifts their spirits to know the people back home are supporting them. I just wish a lot more people would do something."

To most who have served in the armed forces, the word "protester" leaves a bad taste.

"I hate to see people protesting," Thomas said with dismay. "They don't understand that the soldiers need their support."

"I support the U.S. 100 percent. I would like to tell the families of all the service men and women that it will be alright. The U.S. will win."

The Olivarez are counting on family unity and God to help them through the war.

"We support the troops and Tommy," said Elvira. "All we can do is pray for each other and support each other."

Olivarez leaves Feb. 27 for California where he will be for two months, training for desert warfare.

"I'm ready," he said proudly. "Maybe in two months the war will be over and my job will be to clean up after the camels."

CRASH

plane's tail and nose were untouched by flames.

The smaller Skywest plane was scarcely visible underneath the larger jet. It was left a ball of metal, with neither its wings nor its fuselage distinguishable.

"Right now, we're looking at more than 15 dead. I can't give you a firm figure, but that's a good ball park number," said National Transportation Safety Board spokesman Jeff Rich.

Bob Dambacher, a spokesman for the Los Angeles County coroner's office, said his office could confirm only five deaths but that figure was expected to rise.

USAir's Flight 1493 originated in Syracuse, N.Y., and stopped in Washington, D.C., and Columbus, Ohio, before heading to Los Angeles. It had 83 passengers and a crew of six, Ms. Huff said.

Officials who inspected the USAir wreckage said bodies were visible in the blackened hulk of the large craft.

Skywest Flight 5569, a Swearingen Metroliner, was bound for suburban Palmdale with 10 passengers and two crew members, Rich said. All 12 people were unaccounted for, said Skywest spokeswoman Kristan Morton.

In all, Ms. Huff said 72 people were accounted for, including five known dead, but 29 were missing.

Make winter meals sparkle

You can extract the best from your winter cooking and baking with the help of a few extracts and a free phone call.

The telephone number, 1-800-MEAL-TIP, is to the experts at McCormick/Schilling, who create those great extracts that add so much flavor to so many meals, and you can use it to order a free recipe booklet by calling the toll-free number.

The often overlooked flavorings featured in the booklet include vanilla, almond, anise, banana, black walnut, cherry, chocolate, coconut, lemon, mint, orange, pineapple, strawberry and many more. Although most people think of them as improving sweet foods, they can be used in all kinds of cookery. Consider the possibilities of putting anise into pasta, or cherry on spareribs. Alone or in combination, extracts can produce a more subtle flavor that's "well-rounded" and "full-bodied."

There are three rules on the care and use of extracts you should know:

1. The bottle should be tightly sealed when not in use. Properly stored, extracts have a shelf life of four years. The supply should be renewed if the bottle has been left open and flavor and aroma seem lacking.

2. Use enough extract to give the food a delicately pleasing flavor, but not so much as to be overpowering.

3. Since extracts contain alcohol, be careful when adding them to very hot liquid such as oil or near an open flame.

ELASTIC TREES

ATLANTA (AP) - What's elastic and grows on trees? Bark, if it's a birch tree.

The bark stretches as the birch grows while the bark of other trees breaks into a rough texture, according to Georgia-Pacific Corp., a forest products firm.

Birches are white, because their bark doesn't contain tannin - a compound that gives a dark coloring to most bark.

Economists report that a college education adds many thousands of dollars to a man's lifetime income...which he then spends sending his children to college.

One of the first things kids learn at school is that other kids gets allowances.

At the start of the new year, many folks made resolutions on some type of self improvement, while others just had high hopes that life in general would be better. There's something about the start of a new year that brings hope--a chance to make a new start, a blank sheet of paper, a time for new commitments.

Most of us hoped for peace, and that's not the case. Some wished for a more prosperous economy in our country, among other things. But most of us knew that there wasn't a lot that we could actually do about such things.

But there are some things that I can do something about in 1991. I can give less advice and do more listening with my family and with others. I can give more time to serving others, through my church, civic club, or just as an anonymous good deed. I can write notes of encouragement to friends, to public servants, to those who give their time to help Hereford and Deaf Smith County be a better place to live. I can be more understanding and more tolerant; I can be less judgmental and more compassionate.

This won't do much to change the world, but it can make my little corner of the world a better place. And, that's about all any of us can do. If enough of us are out there trying, and if we're looking out for each other, then we know we're not alone.

And, with a little help from our friends, we can make a difference!

Speaking of new year resolutions, we note that the January editions of many magazines are filled with diet information for those who are wanting to lose a few pounds. We ran across this one, entitled "Ten Ways to Work It Off."

- Running for an hour (at 6 mph), three times a week.
- Swimming the crawl for 30 minutes, six times a week.
- Horseback riding for an hour, four times a week.
- Skipping rope for 30 minutes, six times a week.
- Climbing stairs for an hour, four times a week.
- Hiking with a 20-pound backpack (at 4 mph) for two hours, twice a week.
- Dancing for an hour, three times a week.
- Biking for an hour (at 13 mph) three times a week.
- Making love for an hour, six times a week.

That last one may explain why there are so many fat guys!

While there's plenty of gloom and doom going around Hereford and, evidently, the rest of the country, there was some good news recently at a meeting of the Hereford Area Food Council.

The council was formed last year by persons representing food manufacturers in the Hereford area. Ramirez and Sons keeps on with good news, and their expanded warehouse facility will help them with their current operations and let the company expand even more in the future with fewer problems. Ramirez will also add some new food items in the near future.

We can expect a major addition at Arrowhead Mills in the next few weeks, and Merrick Petfoods continues its burgeoning success.

Larry Malamen's vegetable processing and freezer plant ideas are still on the front burner, and Hereford is one of several prospective sites for the facility. If you see Larry, encourage him, praise him for his success, and encourage him to locate the plant in Hereford.

Poarch Brothers announced its implement manufacturing plant here last month, and if you haven't noticed the improvement on U.S. Highway 60 since Stagner-Orsborn Buick-Pontiac-GMC cleared a couple of buildings and moved some of their new cars out there, well, you'll appreciate the new look.

There are good things, new things, happening in town. Tell these folks they're appreciated, because they are.

Are we really prepared for a "live" war?
Live! In your living room! At breakfast, lunch and supper! It's today's war!

That is what it seems. For the first time ever, anyone with a television set (and even more so with cable or a satellite dish) can know more about what's going on in the gulf war than probably most of the troops taking part in the battles.

And who knows what pictures are yet to come? A cameraperson and news reporter can broadcast live from just darn near anywhere. A fold-up satellite dish can be carried in a briefcase, and everything can be hooked up to a vehicle's battery and broadcast via satellite as it happens. That is why a CBS news team, as I write, is wandering somewhere in the gulf. I'm sure they have some sort of portable dish with them, ready to shoot us some pictures from God only knows where.

"It" could be men and women dropping before our eyes. I don't know that I'm ready for that, but I sure am fascinated by what I see on television every evening.

So are many other Americans, according to polls. Over 70 percent of us (according to one poll) admit to sitting transfixed before the boob, watching the latest military briefing, Scud attack, peace march or whatever the war is offering up not only today but at this minute.

I no longer sit up all night watching events transpire, as I did the first two days of the war. I do, however, more religiously than a deacon in the amen corner, watch four or five hours of war stuff every evening.

I guess it's not all war stuff I watch. They, thankfully, started mixing a few commercials in there, so I could grab a minute of "Night Court" or a basketball game in between war coverage.

This is much more dramatic stuff than what came out of Vietnam. I'm old enough to remember we'd see film footage of some battle that may have occurred days or weeks ago. We'd get clips and bits and pieces of briefings and press conferences and the like, but I don't believe we were all that transfixed by it.

Course, now it's easier to be transfixed. Back then, it was an event to switch from one coast of this country to the other by way of telephone lines or satellite. Today, it's a given that we can have live footage from London, Moscow or, obviously, Saudi Arabia or Iraq. It's exciting stuff, to say the least. I also hope it's over real soon.

I saw a news report Wednesday night that really touched my heart. It featured some Israelis going through their lifetime's second horror-by-gas.

They were survivors of the Nazi concentration camps. They saw many of their family and friends persecuted and executed. Some of them knew what their death date was, only to have fate intervene.

Now, over 40 years later, they again live in fear of the gas and biological weapons that Saddam Hussein claims he has. And where did Saddam get this? From the Germans.

Good grief! Let us all join together, once this is over, and pledge to never again manufacture this stuff. Let us let the nightmare end.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor:

As a fulltime landlord in Hereford for the last four years, my desire has been to provide decent, affordable homes to people in this community.

To this end, I would like to provide a landlord's operating package to as many people as would like one, free of charge. This package includes a lease agreement, application form, move-in check list, a rules and regulations summary, pet addendum, 30-day intent to move notice, a customer credit article, an eviction notice, and a credit report form.

If more landlords in this community will use these forms and adhere to good policies and procedures, then these individuals would be able to provide a better product at a fair price to more people. That in turn would be one more step toward increasing the quality of life for everyone in this town.

Thank you for your consideration in this project. My phone number is 364-3209. Call and leave your name, address and phone number between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Sincerely,
Davis Ford

New beginning

From the Perryton Herald

What could become a new beginning for economic development in the Perryton community took place last week when the Perryton Economic Development Corporation was formed.

And what is different about this? Some may wonder what this new corporation can do that the Perryton Industrial Foundation and the Chamber of Commerce cannot do.

The main difference is that this new corporation will have a full time director and staff with no other duties than to seek out prospects for industry and payroll in this community.

The Perryton Industrial Foundation has worked for the same goal, but it is limited because the work of the foundation is done by volunteers, members of the board of directors. While these directors have spent a lot of time and their own money in pursuing industrial development leads, it is not realistic to expect a person busily engaged in keeping his or her own business afloat to give top priority to industrial development for the community.

The Perryton Economic Development Corporation can do that. Initial funding for the new corporation is coming from the Perryton Industrial Foundation and it is expected that enough interested businesses in this community will pay their dues to keep it going.

A business that is not willing to invest in this new corporation is a business that does not look very far into the future. Without some effort and some planning, this community is not going to attract any industry and will shrink rather than grow.

Industry does not wander into the community. It is invited in. And these days, all industry is sought eagerly by cities who want payroll and economic growth. To stay in the game, we have to outfit our team with some weapons. The new corporation will do just that.

An AP News Analysis

Are we the world's cop?

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) - In the state of the world foreseen by President Bush, the U.S. role certainly sounds like that of a policeman - if not the police chief.

Concern about the policeman's lot was part of the debate that preceded the Persian Gulf War, a debate that has been stilled since combat began, but one certain to come back when peace does.

Sen. Richard G. Lugar said the other day that postwar planning is vital now because, whatever the precise outcome of the war, the Middle East could revert to turmoil and "the whole thing devolves back into a mess."

Lugar, senior Republican on the Foreign Relations Committee, said such an outcome could undermine voter support for American efforts to maintain world order, at the very time that Bush's Persian Gulf coalition has shown the way to do it with international backing.

He said many Americans are "tired of being the policeman and shouldering the burden," but there's no alternative.

Bush observed in his State of the Union address that only the United States could take the lead and build the alliance that is fighting Iraq for invading Kuwait.

"Yes, the United States bears a major share of leadership in this effort," he said. "Among the nations of the world, only the United States of America has had both the moral standing and the means to back it up. We are the only nation on this earth that could assemble the forces of peace."

"This is the burden of leadership - and the strength that has made America the beacon of freedom in a searching world," he said.

Beyond the Gulf War, Bush envisioned a new world order in which diverse nations become allies in the cause of peace, security, freedom and the rule of law.

In that quest, he said, as in Operation Desert Storm, American leadership will be indispensable.

"Americans know that leadership brings burdens and requires sacrifice," Bush said. "But we also know why the hopes of humanity turn to us. We are Americans: We have a unique responsibility to do the hard work of freedom. And when we do - freedom works."

"Let every nation know, whether it wishes us well or ill, that we shall pay any price, bear any burden, meet any hardship, support any friend, oppose any foe to assure the survival and the success of liberty."

He cautiously applied his "new order" standard to the struggle between the Soviet Union and the breakaway Baltic states, Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia, saying he had "been given representations" that Moscow would ease its military crackdown there.

By the same standard, Bush seeks a new economic order fostering expanded and freer world trade and, in the process, create export opportunities that would help end the U.S. recession. That's going to take support and cooperation from partners in the Persian Gulf coalition, especially Germany and Japan - vanquished enemies in World War II that grew into economic powers in the U.S.-led world order that followed that conflict.

In shaping his policy, and the coalition against Iraq, Bush drew parallels with World War II, recalling its lessons against appeasement, likening his decision to fight to President Franklin D. Roosevelt's 50 years ago.

"That charge is as true today in the Gulf as it was 50 years ago in Europe..."

Nor will it end with the Persian Gulf. Inevitably, there is another crisis.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I know you've written a lot about battered women, but most people aren't aware that teen-age girls can be battered, too.

I began dating a terrific-looking guy when I was 16. He was really cool and had his own car. A year later I was scared to death of him. I didn't dare tell my family for fear they'd make me stop seeing him and I didn't want to. If I broke one of his rules, he would beat me up. Once, when I wore my jeans too tight (according to him) he locked me in the trunk of his car. I thought I would suffocate to death. It was a horrible experience.

My family knew nothing of the hell he put me through. He made an effort to put the bruises where no one would see them. On the rare occasion when they were visible (like a black eye), I would tell people I had an accident.

I was the ideal child -- I had straight As, got home on time, did all my household chores and never gave my parents any trouble. It wasn't until I attempted suicide at the age of 18 and then got some great counseling, that I began to understand how he had taken control of my life.

Ann, please print this letter and alert teen-age girls and their parents to this potentially dangerous situation. No one who has guessed such a thing was going on in my life. I realized that I wasn't alone when I met other young girls in the support group who were just like me. -- Lucky to Be Out of It

DEAR LUCKY: This is not the first letter I've printed from a teenager who was battered by her boyfriend. My advice has been to get out at once. No guy is worth it.

There is no national support group for battered teen-age girls, but they can call the Domestic Violence Hotline for help. The number is 1-800-333-SAFE.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My father died on Monday. His visit to the emergency room was the first time he had seen a doctor in more than 25 years. He was 56 and died from a massive heart attack.

Ann, for years family and friends had been after Dad to go to the doctor for a simple checkup. His stock reply was, "If it ain't broke, why try to fix it?" He never imagined what it would do to his wife and family when he finally "broke."

"If any of your readers see themselves in this letter; it's time to do something about it. If the one you love is as stubborn as Dad was, keep nagging. Maybe you'll get through somehow and save a life.

And if YOU happen to be the stubborn one, make an appointment today. Sure, a checkup doesn't guarantee anything. Everyone has heard of a person who left the doctor's office with a clean bill of health and dropped dead on the street. But what about the people whose physical problems were caught in time? You rarely hear about them because they are living happy, healthy lives.

It's useless to look back, but we can't help but believe that if Dad had gone for regular checkups he could have had many more years of good health and happiness. -- R.W. in Warren, Mich.

DEAR R.W.: Of course an annual checkup is time-consuming, inconvenient and bothersome but it's the best investment I know of to head off serious trouble and ensure peace of mind. The time to see a doctor is when you are feeling well. Thanks for reminding us.

Gem of the Day: There was an old woman who lived in a shoe, she has so many children she ran out of names to call her husband.

Do you have questions about sex, but no one to talk to? Ann Landers' booklet, "Sex and the Teen-ager," is frank and to the point. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.65 (this includes postage and handling) to: Teens, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. (In Canada, send $4.45.)

"We've lived all over the world. But we plan to stay here. Why would anyone leave?"

"My wife, Pan, and I have been on the move most of our married life. That's the way it can be when you're a mining geologist. We've lived in half a dozen states as well as in Mexico, Argentina, Honduras and Nicaragua. Getting caught in a revolution in Central America was more excitement than we wanted.

"My work still takes me to many places and we could live anywhere. But, we plan to stay here. The climate is good, the cost of living is low and there are airline connections to anywhere. And, when the time comes, this will be a fabulous place to retire.

Lady Whitefaces snap losing streak

Hemmed in Donna Grotegut of the Hereford Lady Whitefaces looks to get the ball outside during Friday's win over Amarillo Caprock.

The Hereford Lady Whitefaces snapped a seven-game losing streak Saturday with a 46-34 win over Amarillo Caprock at Whiteface Gym.

The win was the first for the Lady Whitefaces since the District 1-4A opener against Dumas and avenged an earlier 79-71 loss to Caprock.

In other games Friday, the Herd varsity dropped a 57-49 decision to the Longhorns while Hereford swept three sub-varsity contests. The Herd JV breezed to a 69-49 win while the Lady Whiteface JV outscored Caprock 45-29 and the Herd sophomores won 56-44.

Caprock 57, Herd 49

The Longhorns overcame big foul trouble to outscore the Herd 14-6 in the fourth quarter.

The game was a back-and-forth affair the whole way with 10 ties and eight lead changes. Neither team led by more than seven points until the 'Horns scored the final basket for an eight-point margin.

The Herd (7-18, 2-5) trailed through the early going, but tied the game at 10-10 with 3:08 left in the first quarter and moved in front for the first time at 12-10 when Andrew Tijerina converted a one-and-one. Hereford inched the lead up to 17-14, but Steve Solano hit a three-pointer to tie the score at 17-17.

The pattern continued in the second before the Herd took off on a 9-2 run that produced a 33-26 edge with 1:36 left in the half. Caprock (16-11, 5-2) cut the margin to two before the buzzer when Solano nailed another trey.

The 'Horns took the lead early in the third, but could not pull away despite holding Hereford without a field goal in the period. The Herd made 10-of-12 free throws, tying the game at 43-43 on Leo Brown's pair with two seconds on the clock.

Caprock opened the final quarter with a 6-0 run for a 49-43 lead. The Herd closed the gap to two at 49-51 with 1:16 left before the 'Horns scored the last six points of the game.

Tijerina led all scorers with 20 points with Brown and Richard Sanderson adding nine each. Derek Mason and Sean Smith had three each and Ben Weatherly one.

Solano and Shy Ward both scored 16 to pace Caprock.

Lady Whitefaces 46, Caprock 34
Hereford outscored the Lady

Longhorns in three of four quarters and posted a 15-3 edge at the free throw line.

Caprock held its only lead of the game at 4-2 when Jennifer Bullard put the Herd in front to stay with a three-pointer. Teresa Baker added another trey as the Herd went up 10-4. Caprock pulled to within 11-8 before Hereford ended the quarter with a 6-0 run and a 17-8 lead.

The 'Horns scored the first three points of the second stanza, but managed only one bucket the rest of the half. Bullard scored the last eight points of the period, including a trey at the buzzer for a 28-15 lead.

The third quarter was scoreless until Bullard ended the drought with a layup at the 3:36 mark. Caprock then scored eight straight points to cut the lead to 30-23 before the Herd ended the period with a 35-26 lead.

The 'Horns made one last charge, closing to 40-34 with a minute to go. Brek Binder scored Hereford's lone bucket with six minute left in the game, but Hereford shot 9-of-12 from the line the rest of the way, including 6-of-6 in the last 26 seconds.

Bullard finished with 19 points to lead Hereford with Binder and Donna Grotegut adding nine each while Baker, Kara Sandoval and Stephanie Wilcox had three apiece.

Caprock was led by Lisa Hodges with 11 points and Tandy Dunavin with 10.

Herd JV 69, Caprock 49

After taking a 21-18 lead at the end of the first quarter, Hereford blitzed the 'Horns for a 20-7 run in the second and a 41-25 halftime lead.

Caprock cut two points off the lead with a 12-10 edge in the third before Hereford closed out with an 18-12 fourth-quarter advantage.

Mar Kriegshauser led the Herd with 16 points while Kyle Hansen added 15 and Chad Sandoval 13.

Basketball royalty

Andrew Tijerina, left, and Brenna Reinauer were named Basketball King and Queen at Friday's pep rally at the HHS Gymnasium.

Tempie Abney finished with nine points with Clay Wallace getting seven, Jason Paetzold five and Kevin Kelso four.

Lady Whiteface JV 45, Caprock 29

Hereford outscored Caprock 15-4 in the third quarter to overcome a one-point halftime deficit.

The 'Horns took a 4-3 lead in the first and both teams added 11 points in the second.

After going ahead 29-19 after three periods, the Herd ended the contest with a 16-10 edge in the fourth.

Kathy Hernandez led the herd with 12 points while Taylor Brooks and Crystal McNutt added eight each. Misty Dudley had six points with Tonya Castillo scoring four, Leslie Hollingsworth three and Misty Peabody and Claudia Ramirez two each.

Herd Sophs 56, Caprock 44

The Herd jumped all over the 'Horns for a 17-1 lead at the end of the first period to take firm control of the game.

Hereford added an 18-12 advantage in the second quarter to lead 35-13 at the half.

Caprock mounted a comeback in the second half, outscoring the Herd 9-7 in the third quarter and 22-14 in the fourth.

Hereford was led by Ruben Gutierrez with 20 points and was joined in double figures by Jason Tatarevich with 13 and Michael Melendrez with 10. Greg Coplen added seven points with Tim Burkhalter getting three, Kirk Self two and Drew Radford one.

Dallas hires Ram coach as new aide

IRVING, Texas (AP) - Dallas Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson on Friday named Los Angeles Rams assistant coach Norv Turner as the team's offensive coordinator, hoping to spark an offense that's ranked near the bottom of the NFL for two seasons.

Turner replaces Dave Shula, who was demoted on Jan. 9 to receivers coach and passing game coordinator. On Tuesday, Shula took a position as receivers coach with the Cincinnati Bengals.

Turner said he talked to Rams coach John Robinson and offensive coordinator Ernie Zampese before accepting the Cowboys' offer.

"Both of them said when this job became available, 'That's a hell of an opportunity. Go for that one,'" said Turner, 38, who was an assistant with the Rams for six seasons, including the last four as receivers and tight ends coach.

"Besides knowing what he can do, I think his style fits our offense," Johnson said.

Turner said he would introduce the Zampese offense in Dallas, something Johnson said would benefit quarterback Troy Aikman. The Rams finished third in passing the NFL last year and fourth the year before.

"I think it's going to utilize his arm strength in getting the ball downfield," Johnson said. "I feel like things are in place. I think we can be considered a playoff team at this stage."

Turner said he was excited about joining a young and improving Cowboys team.

"The people in this league ... see that the Cowboys are on the move," Turner said at an afternoon news conference at the Cowboys' training facilities where his appointment was announced. "You sit on the outside and you say, 'Hey, this team is going somewhere.'"

Turner was an assistant at the University of Oregon in 1975 and an assistant at Southern Cal from 1976-84.

Turner said he wasn't bothered by the fact he wasn't Johnson's first choice for the position. Johnson offered the job to Miami Dolphins quarterbacks coach Gary Stevens, but he turned it down.

Golf show overcomes 'winter blues'

An AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
DALLAS (AP) - This is the time of year that tries golfers' souls, not to mention rusts away their backswings.

Winters in Texas seem to be getting nastier, which means a golfer who wants to stay sane needs an occasional diversion to warmer climes.

Such was the call that recently was answered by a visit to lush green tee boxes in Florida.

Texas was everywhere breaking out irons that still had last year's grass stains.

The greens were perfect at "Isleworth," an Arnold Palmer course near Orlando. Turned out the greenskeeper had learned his trade at Augusta National Golf Club, which explained why the surfaces were a Masters-like 10.5 on the stimpmeter. It wasn't like putting off the hood of a car, but close.

What made the day memorable was being joined by Notre Dame football coach Lou Holtz on the back nine. After discovering he was playing with some sports writers from Texas, Holtz said something in jest about the referee from Texas who made the clipping call in the Orange Bowl.

(Notre Dame lost to Colorado when a touchdown punt return by Raghbi Ismail was called back. The officials in the game were from the Southwest Conference.)

However, playing golf with Holtz wasn't the most interesting part of the trip. Attending the PGA Merchandise

Show was. There were an eye-boggling 600 exhibitors in the massive hall at the Orlando Civic Center and everything was on sale from exploding golf balls to $1,600-a-set Daiwa irons.

The golf industry, we were told, is a $20 billion a year industry, and after passing by some of the 2,350 booths covering some 235,000 square feet we believed it.

Around every corner was a novelty or a set of clubs that gave you golfing goosebumps.

One exhibitor had a golf cart you could either ride, or let it follow behind you. The cost: $2,000.

Another person had a plastic tee he swore would give you another 10 to 15 yards.

There were extra-length clubs, acrylic putters, new dimple patterns for golf balls, high-tech sunglasses, and other goodies at the 38th edition of the PGA Merchandise Show.

Tom Kite, Nancy Lopez, Byron Nelson, Ben Crenshaw and other pros were on hand pushing the company that signs their endorsement checks.

It was a golfer's heaven. "It's hard to believe this show unless you've seen it," Nelson said. "There's so many things it's hard to know what to put in your pro shop."

There was an electronic "swing doctor" that showed everything you were doing right or wrong.

There were shoes, hats, balls, tees, drivers, prizes for tournaments and even concrete yardage markers for your country club.

The PGA professionals were everywhere signing up for the latest in shirts and shorts and clubs.

One clever idea came from a man who sold tees with trivia questions on them. Such as: "Before 1920, what did golfers use for tees? Answer: A pinch of wet sand."

It was a great diversion from the Texas golfing blues.

Come on April.

Soldiers' children face bigger game

By TED BORISKIE, JERRY WAGGONER and RICKY MOORE
Killeen Daily Herald

KILLEEN, Texas (AP) - The war is always on their minds.

For the children of U.S. servicemen stationed in the Persian Gulf, playing basketball doesn't change that fact. Stepping on court may move the crisis from the front to the back of their minds, but the worry and the wonder don't go away.

Ellison's Gionet Cooper, a 6-foot-6 1/2-inch sophomore, says he tries to play his hardest for his dad, who has been in Saudi Arabia since October.

"I've dedicated myself to that after having a talk with my grandma," said Cooper. "I look at the news and get depressed, so I just try to play my best in basketball."

It seems to work. Cooper, who scored 10 points in a recent game against arch rival Killeen, is starting to blossom as a player, says his coach, Billy Gillispie, despite the extra pressure of having a father involved in a foreign conflict.

In fact, it doesn't seem to be adversely affecting any of the players on the local high school basketball teams. Killeen's boys and girls are leading District 13-5A; the Copperas Cove girls are second in the league, Ellison's boys upset Round Rock a day after the fighting began and are playing, perhaps, their best basketball of the season right now. Copperas Cove's boys beat Plugerville, 73-45, after having played Killeen close on two nights before.

Still, they are thinking of faraway events.

"It's hard to keep your intensity on basketball, said Marcie Atkins, the Ellison Lady Eagles' leading scorer this season. "You try to focus on basketball only but you can't help thinking about it."

Atkins' father, Ricky Mackey, is a specialist with the 2nd Armored Division in Saudi Arabia, and has been in the Middle East since the beginning of the basketball season.

"I'm more scared now, said Atkins. "I used to worry about him but at least I knew he was all right then. Now I don't know what to think."

Copperas Cove's Aaron Brown says his father has written to him with some advice that he is following.

"He told me to get an education and keep on playing, said Brown, whose father, Jesse Brown, is with the 1st Cavalry Division. "He told me to keep my head up, both for myself and for him."

"I worry about him because we're the closest of my members of my family, said Aaron.

Copperas Cove has numerous players with family involved in the war. At least one member of the Cove girls team has a relative on active duty in Saudi Arabia.

Copperas Cove's Chris Taylor remembers the phone call he got from his father, Master Sgt. Willie F. Taylor.

"He called me a couple of days ago and told me to carry on with life. I'll keep on playing because that's what my dad wants me to do."

Cove's Alphonso Jacobs, whose father is Staff Sgt. Alton Davis, says, "I'll try to do the best I can but sometimes it gets me down. I try to keep my mind on the game and not think about what can happen to him."

George McDowell says he tries not to think about it. "Mom has just taken over where he left off."

Jose Gonzales has a brother-in-law, Pfc. George Quiles of the 2nd Armored Division, who is stationed in Saudi Arabia.

"I just hope it happens quick and (they can) get it over with, said Gonzales.

"It's on my mind a lot and sometimes I'm real scared. Any time I hear something about Iraq I think about him and wonder how he's doing."

"I hope he makes it back with a lot of the other fellows."

The Killeen girls' program has no players on the varsity or junior varsity with relatives in the Middle East but there are two varsity players who know that could change any day.

Kym Burns, a junior, must worry about her stepfather being called overseas. Michael B. Sleight, an E-6 Apache crew chief mechanic with the 1st Battalion of the 6th Cavalry, is currently stationed at Fort Hood but is always liable to be called over to the Middle East.

"It's not a problem right now," said Burns.

"Of course, he's on alert. He has his bags packed at home right now, ready to go. It really does get to you. Every time I go home, I have to wonder if my dad's going to be there or if I'm going to hear he's been sent overseas. But when I go out on the court, I know I have to put it out of my mind. That's what makes you a good person, to be able to know how to concentrate on what you have to do."

Kim Evans, also a junior, says her dad, Tommy Evans, is recently retired after serving at Fort Hood but is also subject to being called up and sent overseas.

"It worries me to know that any day my dad could be called up, said Evans.

"Sometimes I just have to set aside some time to be by myself. I pray the night before a game and then just go out and play basketball."

In January, Ellison's boys lost starter Bennie Powe, who moved with his mother to be with relatives in Alabama. His father, poised for combat in Saudi Arabia, wanted the family to be closer together.

The adversity seems to have brought the rest of the team closer together.

Ellison's Sean Roulhac, the son of Sgt. 1st Class Jerome Roulhac, says the war is always on his mind. "I try to block it out and play as hard as I can."

Roulhac remembers what his father said before he left.

"The only advice that he gave me was to just hang in there and he'd be back when it's over."

YOUR EYES
PHOTOCHROMATIC LENSES
Self-darkening lenses -- eyeglasses that get dark in sunlight and then clear up again at dusk or indoors -- may not seem quite as amazing as they did some years ago, but they still offer a convenient alternative to switching among several pairs of glasses. These lenses contain invisible silver halide microcrystals that perform the magic: they are sensitive to both visible and ultraviolet light.
The lenses change color within a minute as you go from indoors to the outside. They take about the same time to clear up again when you return to a shaded area. The technology is sophisticated enough that the lenses darken more on sunny days and less on cloudy ones. Rarely, however, will they get as dark as the darkest sunglasses.
The photochromatic lenses are tinted either grey or brown, and can be made up in single-vision, bifocals or trifocal glasses.

Timely tips for tiny teeth

Healthy permanent teeth begin with healthy baby teeth. All too often, parents regard primary or baby teeth as unimportant since all children eventually lose them. However, caring for baby teeth is just as important as caring for permanent teeth.

Baby teeth are used not only for chewing, but also serve as a guide for the proper positioning of permanent teeth. Premature loss of a baby tooth, due to injury or decay, can cause overcrowding and hinder the proper development of your child's jaws and bite.

The American Society of Dentistry for Children is offering the following tips during National Children's Dental Health Care Month (February) for keeping your children's primary teeth healthy:

-Visit the dentist regularly. Your child's first visit should be scheduled when the first tooth appears, which occurs when a child is approximately six months old.

-Clean your child's teeth daily beginning when the first tooth appears. A clean wash cloth can be used to wipe a child's teeth until he, or she, is old enough to use a tooth brush. Until about age seven or eight, a child does not have the manual dexterity to adequately clean his teeth alone and should be assisted by a parent.

-Floss your child's teeth as soon as he has his full set of primary teeth. By age seven or eight, many children have the manual dexterity needed to floss their own teeth.

-Always use a fluoridated toothpaste and teach your child to always rinse thoroughly after brushing.

-Encourage your child to eat nutritious snacks of fruits and vegetables rather than candy or the sugary snacks.

-Ask your dentist whether it would be appropriate to apply cavity-preventing sealants on your child's teeth. A toothbrush cannot adequately remove food and bacteria from tiny grooves that often appear in children's teeth. Sealants protect these grooves from dental decay. In fact, teeth treated with sealants develop 33 percent fewer cavities than untreated teeth.

The koala bear is adapted to eat nothing but the eucalyptus tree. It does not need anything else—not even water.

To compete in pageant

Former Hereford resident, Louise Mays Turner, has been selected as a finalist in the Mrs. Texas Pageant. Turner is a graduate of Hereford High School and is the daughter of Dorothy Mays and Rev. L.V. Mays. The winner of the state pageant advances to national competition in the Mrs. America contest.

Benefit supper planned

Members of the Hereford Pilot Club will sponsor a Mexican stack supper from 5-8 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 7, in the Hereford High School cafeteria. Tickets, which may be purchased from Pilot Club members or at the door, are priced at $4.50 for adults and $2.50 for children under 12 years of age. Take-out orders will be available. Proceeds will be used for several community projects. Selling tickets to Ike Stevens is Sue Hyer who was recently named Pilot of the Month for January.

Hamilton is an employee of W.T. Services, a local company which deals in security and alarm systems for homes and businesses, and is a volunteer for the Hereford Fire Department. He combined the two resources for an informative program on "Protecting Your Home."

After the program, appreciation was extended by Connie Matthews from Billie Brown, the chapter's adopted sister for her Christmas gift.

During the report of City Council, Reily reminded Chapter Sweetheart

Ruby Sanders, that a resume of former chapter activities and honors should be given to Marrie Leverett by Jan. 31.

The Beta Sigma Phi City Council, which consists of three chapters in Hereford, will be honoring their Sweethearts with a brunch on Saturday, Feb. 9, at 10 a.m. at the Community Center. Reily announced that a count will be taken then of expected attendance at the upcoming Valentine Ball to be held at the Hereford Country Club on Feb. 16.

Chapter treasurer and ways and means chairman Connie Matthews asked members to begin saving articles for a garage sale to be held this spring to support summertime activities of the chapter. Also, a donation will be made this week to Beta Sigma Phi for the ongoing scholarship fund, endowment fund, loan fund, and exemplar fund.

Service Committee Chairman Susan Shaw reminded members to bring baby food to the next meeting to restock the Good Shepherd food pantry.

Membership Chairman Kay Williams noted that a progressive party will be held for eligible Alpha Iota Mu members in March.

A unanimous vote was taken for a future allotment of Beta Sigma Phi International fund for the British Columbia Division of the Arthritis Society, the B.C. Children's Hospital, the Canadian Scholarship Fund, and National and Canadian Foundation for Ileitis and Colitis.

The next meeting will be Tuesday, Feb. 5, with Denise Hafziger serving as hostess and Danell Culp as co-hostess. Hostesses will be in charge of the program.

Deann Harris, hostess, served fudge cake and almond tea to Harris, Reily, Matthews, Sanders, Shaw, Williams, Hafziger, Culp, Holly Bixler, Henson, Peggy Hyer, and Dalene Burns.

Red Cross Update

BY BETTY HENSON

The Service to the Military Committee for our Chapter is taking around-the-clock messages for families of military personnel and for the troops.

Effective immediately and in accordance with conditions imposed by the Joint Chiefs of Staff, minimize is in effect for emergency messages to military personnel world-wide. This includes messages for ships at sea. Messages regard the birth of a service member's child, serious illness, injury or death of a member of a service member's immediate family and the breakdown in a child care plan for a service members' child.

Our Chapter's Service to the Military workers are Genevieve Miller 258-7512 or 258-7384, Nell Culpepper, 364-0075, Dalene Burns, 364-1374, and Betty Henson, 364-1295. We welcome inquiries from families and will refer them to an appropriate agency if we cannot help.

The American Red Cross is a member of the International Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement and supports relief to war victims and stands ready to support the ICRC's mandate to meet with prisoners of war from both Iraq and the United States. We are also ready to handle messages between prisoners of war and their families.

The American Red Cross has relayed over 73,000 messages to and from U.S. military in the Persian Gulf since August. In addition to other services, chapters provided repatriation services to 2,240 Americans returning home in January.

The Deaf Smith County Chapter of the American Red Cross is a United Way Agency.

Facts from the U.S. Postal Office

Postal productivity is way up-and future postal rates will stay below the national rate of inflation-thanks to a new automation program, the Postal Service says.

Here are some facts that you should know:

-Productivity at the Postal Service was up four percent in the fourth quarter of 1990, the fifth straight quarter of productivity increases. Each one was higher than the previous period. Total factor productivity was up 3.1 percent for the year.

-Much of the credit for this productivity goes to automation. Productivity gains primarily attributable to automation saved nearly three quarters of a billion dollars last year.

-Sixty-one percent of letter mail is now processed on automated equipment. Ten percent of mail is customer bar-coded.

-New Wide-Area Bar Code Sorters can read bar codes in address blocks.

Protect your children

It's estimated that each year two million children ingest toxic household products. Fortunately, there is a lot you can do to protect your child from becoming one of these statistics and to reduce the severity of accidental poisonings.

First, there is no substitute for keeping toxic household items out of the reach of children and for using child resistant containers. In addition, always keep syrup of Ipecac handy, as well as the phone number of the poison control center. Many safety experts also feel that the use of a bittering agent is another important way to protect children from poisoning. Simply put, a bittering agent makes things taste terrible and will help prevent a child from swallowing a potentially harmful product.

A good example of this is that an ounce of Bitrex, a powder with no smell or odor, can render 1,000 gallons of a product undrinkable.

After a few years ago, a study showed that children who sipped a soapy solution laced with the bittering agent swallowed, on average, less than a half-teaspoonful before rejecting the drink. Children who were offered plain soapy water drank more than a teaspoonful. Many manufacturers, aware of this study, have added Bitrex to their products. Remember, household poisonings are preventable. By following the above poison prevention tips you can help reduce the number of accidental poisonings that occur each year.

The deadly tsetse fly, now nearly eradicated by insecticides, has been called "the best game warden in Africa," because of its role in keeping human settlement and livestock out of wilderness areas.

Can soup do more than warm on a chilly winter day?

When it comes to a bowl of steamy hot soup, few foods rate such nourishing simplicity. Open a can. Add water or milk. Heat. And eat. Today, ready-to-serve, microwaveable, and instant cup-of-soup options can make enjoying soup even easier.

But if you worry about unhealthy amounts of sodium or fat, you may wonder if soups are good for you. And is choosing one that's nutritious really simple?

Most soups are high in sodium. A single cup can contain from 600 milligrams to 2,000 milligrams of sodium (equivalent to about one-quarter to one teaspoon of salt). That amount of sodium quickly approaches the American Heart Association's (AHA) recommendations to limit sodium to 3,000 milligrams a day. Yet soup need not be off-limits. You can balance salty soup with lower-sodium foods at the same meal and the rest of the day.

For example, a cup of tomato soup with a ham and cheese sandwich can total more than 2,100 milligrams of sodium. Better choice: a cup of tomato soup and a roast turkey sandwich. Total sodium in this meal: 1,024 milligrams.

To compare sodium contents of various soups, read the nutrition labels when available. If you regularly eat soup and want to stay below the AHA's recommended daily limit of sodium, choose soups containing no more than 500 to 800 milligrams of sodium per serving. There are plenty of varieties that contain much less sodium than this range. (When comparing sodium amounts, note the serving sizes. They vary by brand from six ounces to more than 10 ounces.)

In addition to choosing carefully among regular varieties, these soups are specially formulated to limit sodium:

-Reduced-sodium soups-There are a variety of soups that contain at least one-third less sodium than the original versions. Reduced-sodium levels vary from as little as 175 milligrams to 560 milligrams per serving depending on the brand and type of soup.

-Low-sodium soups-If you follow a low-sodium diet for conditions such as high blood pressure or kidney disease, ask your doctor or a registered dietitian how soups fit into your diet. Low-sodium soups contain no more than 140 milligrams of sodium per serving.

If you don't think you have to worry about fat when choosing soup, you may be surprised. A serving of ready-to-serve creamed soups, chowders and ramen noodle varieties contains from five grams of fat (equivalent to one teaspoon of margarine or butter) to as many as 18 grams of fat.

To limit fat, choose soups that have no more than five grams of fat per serving as listed by the manufacturer. These usually are broth- or tomato-based varieties. You can also reduce fat in condensed creamed soups simply by adding water or skin or one percent low-fat milk rather than whole milk.

Many soups that are low in fat also are low or reduced in sodium. But not necessarily. Soups made under the Weight Watchers label have only two grams of fat per 10 1/2 ounce serving. Yet the vegetable and cream of mushroom varieties each contains 1,250 milligrams of sodium.

Soup-even the homemade kind your mother used to make-cannot substitute for a balanced menu. And despite claims for a "soup diet," eating a bowl of soup with each meal to fill you up and slow down your eating won't necessarily help you lose weight.

But some soups do measure up nutritionally by offering moderate amounts of sodium, fat and worthwhile amounts of nutrients such as protein, vitamins A and C, niacin and iron.

LARA MCBRIDE, CURTIS COTTEN

Wedding date set

Lara Kathleen McBride of Amarillo and Paul Curtis Cotten of Hereford plan to marry March 16 in Paramount Terrace Christian Church in Amarillo.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James F. McBride of Amarillo and the prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gayle Cotten of I18 Oak.

Miss McBride is a 1987 graduate of Pampa High School and is currently a senior at West Texas State University majoring in elementary education. She is a member of Kappa Delta Pi and Alpha Chi. She is employed by Sam's Wholesale Club.

Cotten, a 1986 graduate of Hereford High School, received a bachelor of science degree in secondary education from WTSU in December 1990. He is employed by Hereford Independent School District.

What if it's not a cold?

Infants and young children always seem to get colds between November and March. But when the cold symptoms of coughing, or labored breathing linger, the condition might be something more serious.

One type of viral lung infection called respiratory syncytial (sin sish' al) virus (RSV) closely mimics symptoms of the common cold during its early phases. To confuse matters even more, RSV occurs during the cold season, with its seasonal epidemic beginning in November and peaking in February and March.

Virtually every child comes in contact with RSV. In most cases, RSV is not serious. Doctors warn parents, however, that the infection can progress to a serious condition, including pneumonia, bronchiolitis, and bronchitis.

Children most at risk for developing severe RSV infections include those who are premature, younger than six weeks, and/or have a complicating or underlying condition, such as heart or lung disease or immune deficiencies, according to the American Academy of Pediatrics.

Parent should watch for signs of worsening respiratory function, especially in those babies who have low-birth weights or other medical problems. Mel Marks, M.D. Medicare Director, Memorial Miller Children's Hospital, Long Beach, Calif., cited that there are specific warning signs in infants and children that indicate the possibility of a more extensive and possibly dangerous lower respiratory tract condition. These include: labored or rapid breathing and wheezing.

When in doubt, parents should contact their pediatrician. As many as 100,000 children with RSV may require hospitalization this year alone. When required, the physician may treat hospitalized infants and young children with severe lower respiratory RSV infections with a specific antiviral treatment.

Just remember, a cold may not always be a cold. RSV can be like wolf in sheep's clothing...so parents, be careful shepherds and guard your flock.

THE MIGHTY MEDITERRANEAN

NAPLES, Italy (AP) - The Mediterranean, covering about 965,000 square miles, is the world's largest enclosed sea.

It separates the continents of Europe, Africa and Asia. From west to east it measures about 2,350 miles and its greatest depth is 15,000 feet off the south coast of Greece.

The Mediterranean connects with the Atlantic Ocean at Gibraltar, with the Red Sea and the Indian Ocean via the Suez Canal, and with the Black Sea at the Dardanelles and Bosphorus.

Most school children can tell you two negatives make a positive, but few can name the man who first said so. It's said to have been John Lowth who first laid down that rule of grammar in 1762.

VALENTINE ORIGINS

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) - Many myths surround the origin of Valentine's Day.

At the Roman festival of Lupercalia, on Feb. 14, young couples were brought together by drawing names at random from an urn.

According to researchers at Hallmark Cards, tradition says a Christian martyr named St. Valentine, imprisoned in Rome in A.D. 269, restored the sight of his jailer's blind young daughter. On his execution day, Feb. 14, he supposedly sent the girl a farewell note signed, "From Your Valentine."

Free tax help available at Senior Citizens Center

Free tax assistance is available through VITA, the Volunteer Income Tax Assistance program sponsored by the Internal Revenue Service, on Monday and Wednesday at Hereford Senior Citizen Center, 426 Ranger Street, the IRS said.

VITA helps lower income, elderly, handicapped and non-English speaking taxpayers fill out Form 1040EZ, Form 1040A, or a basic Form 1040. Volunteers also alert taxpayers to the special credits and deductions for which they may be eligible, such as the child care and earned income credits, the tax credit for the elderly, and deductions for certain medical and dental expenses.

However, VITA volunteers do not handle complicated tax matters, according to the IRS.

Taxpayers coming to the Senior Center should bring this year's tax package, usually received through the mail, wage and earnings statements (Form W-2) from all employers, the interest statements received from banks (Form 1099), a copy of last year's tax return, if available, and any other relevant information concerning income and expenses.

The volunteers will be available to help taxpayers each Monday and Wednesday beginning Feb. 4, from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m.

For more information, call 364-5681.

FIRMS NEED TO COMPUTERIZE

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) - Many small manufacturing and service companies will go out of business unless they become more computer-intensive, says Abraham Seidmann of the University of Rochester.

By failing to take advantage of computer networks to handle related functions such as invoices, inventory records or design images, smaller firms lose out on one of the biggest opportunities to become more efficient, says Seidmann.

"For example, tool-and-die shops should track their jobs with computers, from origination through delivery, to supply parts on a competitive and just-in-time basis," he says.

The World War II siege of Leningrad by Nazi troops began in 1941.

Top crop state named

WASHINGTON (AP) - California continued as the nation's leading crop producer last year in terms of value, mostly because of the state's huge output of fruits and vegetables.

An annual report by the Agriculture Department showed California accounted for $10.6 billion of the estimated $81.1 billion worth of crops produced by U.S. farmers last year - 13 percent of the total.

Comparatively, the Corn Belt giants of Iowa and Illinois were shown in virtually a dead heat in second and third place at $5.82 billion and $5.8 billion, respectively.

But nearly all of the crop value produced in the two Corn Belt states - more than $5.8 billion in Iowa and $5.75 billion in Illinois - came from "field and miscellaneous crops" such as corn and soybeans.

In California, field crops were estimated at only $3.18 billion while fruits and nuts contributed $4.83 billion and commercial vegetables, $2.59 billion.

Nationally, according to the 1990 estimates, field crops were valued at more than $67.4 billion, while fruits and nuts were $8.74 billion and commercial vegetable, $4.96 billion.

The report emphasized that the crop value estimates are just that, and are not based on commodity sales or "gross receipts" of farmers. Corn, for example, has a value whether it is sold as grain or fed to livestock by the farmer who produced the crop.

Estimates are compiled by USDA's National Agricultural Statistics Service using acreage, yield and price estimates and projections.

Also, the estimates are for the 1990 marketing year, which varies by commodity. The wheat marketing year, for example, runs from June through the following May, while the year for corn is September through August.

Corn is traditionally the No. 1 crop in value. It was estimated at more than $18 billion last year. Soybeans was second at $11.2 billion, followed closely by another perennial high-value crop, baled hay, at $11.1 billion.

Wheat, including winter, durum and other spring, was estimated $7.3 billion, and cotton rounded out the top five at $5.1 billion.

Other big items included: tobacco, $2.79 billion; potatoes, $2.4 billion; grapes, $1.6 billion; oranges, $1.42 billion; and apples, $1.29 billion.

Water depletion, rate reduced in the '80s

Even though the amount of precipitation received on the Southern High Plains of Texas during the latter portion of the 1980s was below average, the total for the 10-year period (1980-1990) was approximately 17 percent above the average received in the area up to 1980.

The benefits of the above-average precipitation and an increased conservation effort were reflected in the reduced rate of water depletion in the Ogallala Aquifer that occurred during the 1980s. The Ogallala Aquifer in the 36,000 square mile area of the Texas High Plains contained approximately 415 million acre-feet of water in 1990. This volume is approximately 30 million acre-feet more than expected, based upon computer models operated by the Texas Water Development Board staff (TWDB) in Austin.

The TWDB uses this computer model to maintain a current inventory and project future changes of the amount of groundwater in storage in the Ogallala Aquifer.

In calibrating the 1980 computer model to reflect the actual quantity of water in storage in the aquifer in 1990, the calculation for pumpage for the period based on the irrigation surveys was entered. The computer model then compared the quantities known to be in storage in 1980 and 1990, deducted pumpage, and calculated that an average annual recharge rate of 1.72 inches per surface acre per year across the area would have had to occur for the ending balance to equal the actual quantity of water in storage in 1990. This is almost twice the 0.86 inch per acre per year of natural recharge calculated to have occurred during the 1960s and 1970s, when a similar model and similar methodology was used by the U.S. Geological Survey (USGS) to reflect the changes in water levels which occurred during that time period.

The net depletion of the Ogallala Aquifer in the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District's 5.2 million acre service area averaged 1.6 million acre-feet per year from 1965 to 1970; 1.4 million acre-feet per year from 1970 to 1975; 1.2 million acre-feet per year from 1975 to 1980; 0.85 million acre-feet per year from 1980 to 1985; and 0.03 million acre-feet per year from 1985 to 1990.

The reduced rate of the net depletion of the Ogallala Aquifer within the Water District service area in the 1980s can be attributed to a combination of many factors. However, two of the major factors have to be the increased conservation effort by area farmers and the benefits of the above-average precipitation which occurred during the early 1980s.

If precipitation averages return to normal during the 1990s--even with additional conservation efforts--the TWDB computer model projects the groundwater reserves for the Ogallala Aquifer within the Texas High Plains area will be reduced from the 415 million acre-feet calculated to be in storage in 1990 to approximately 380 million acre-feet by the year 2000.

Certainly no one can predict the future, but it is evident we must continue to do our utmost to use our groundwater reserves with as little waste, or loss, as possible. Who knows? Perhaps with a maximum conservation effort and a little extra precipitation to reduce irrigation water demands and provide a little extra natural recharge, the aquifer might yet reach a state of equilibrium.

The German philosopher Georg Wilhelm Friedrich Hegel was born in 1770 in Stuttgart.

Olsons win Angus honors

Moriah Olson (above) won the grand champion in the junior Angus heifer show and Sy Olson (below) had the champion Angus calf at the 95th annual Southwestern Exposition and Livestock Show recently in Fort Worth.

Hall named to TCFA program

Scott Hall, manager of Circle Three Feed Yards in Hereford, is one of two young cattlemen selected as this year's participants in the Texas Cattle Feeders Association Leadership Program.

Walt Olson of Turpin, OK., a former Hereford resident and son of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Olson, is the other participant in the program to train future industry leaders. During the year, Hall and Olson will participate in 12 days of intensive leadership training.

The pair recently completed their first session, where they attended a TCFA board meeting and undertook a day-long study of the association. The second session will be a two-day workshop in February, and the third will be a week-long tour of the cattle industry in June. The final three days of the program will be in October, when the two will attend a workshop at Texas A&M University.

"Our goal with the Leadership Program is to identify the best and brightest young men in the cattle industry and help prepare them for future leadership opportunities," said Richard McDonald, TCFA executive vice president. These opportunities include work on TCFA and NCA committees.

Center pivot sprinklers spring up in county

The use of center pivot sprinkler systems continues to increase within Deaf Smith County, according to a recent center pivot system inventory update conducted by the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1 in Lubbock.

In the portion of Deaf Smith County within the Water District service area, approximately 104 additional center pivot systems have been installed between 1986 and 1990, according to the Water District's inventory. This brings the total number of center pivot systems in use within Deaf Smith County to 324. The previous 1986 center pivot inventory indicated 220 center pivots in operation within the county.

The 104 additional center pivot systems represent a $3,120,000 investment in water conservation by Deaf Smith County irrigators during the past four years, at an average cost of $30,000 per system.

Approximately 1,383 center pivot systems were installed between 1986 and 1990 within the Water District, according to the recent inventory totals. This brings the total number of center pivot systems in operation within the District to 4,474.

"Center pivots, and especially low energy precision application (LEPA) systems are the wave of the future," says Ken Carver, Assistant Manager of the High Plains Water District. "Center pivot systems continue to be installed because increased crop production, significant water savings, and reduced fuels and labor costs makes investment in these irrigation systems cost-effective."

Most center pivot systems currently in use within the Water District are partial dropline systems which operate at about 80 percent water use efficiency. However, the number of LEPA systems in use increases each year as a result of the improved irrigation application efficiency as compared to conventional furrow irrigation. LEPA systems can achieve irrigation application efficiencies of about 95 percent, while conventional furrow irrigation has an irrigation application efficiency of about 60 percent.

LEPA center pivot systems can help reduce the amount of groundwater pumped for irrigation by as much as 25 percent by allowing smaller and more frequent water applications. LEPA systems have also helped reduce labor costs by as much as 75 percent and irrigation fuel savings by 35 to 50 percent.

"Since pumping water from the Ogallala Aquifer and applying it to crops is a major input cost in High Plains farming operations, an important way to reduce cost is to apply irrigation water as efficiently as possible. Therefore as research continues to improve the efficiency of the center pivot irrigation system, irrigators will continue to adopt the best available technology. We salute our area producers for their use of this water conservation tool," says Carver.

Compiled by Kay Grison

89 YEARS AGO

J.E. Beasley, Amarillo piano dealer, is in town this week with one of his superior make of instruments--the Mathushek--which was taken to the residence of Judge Witherspoon, where it is likely to remain.

Good Advice

Young men cannot estimate too highly the advice of parents and friends. It affords them the benefit of experience and is given them from sincere solicitude for their welfare. It should be remembered, and weighed and acted upon. But, after all, every man has his own individual existence; he has his own life to live, for which he alone is accountable. He should sit down and meditate by himself, and make up his mind as to the course which he wishes to pursue in the world.

75 YEARS AGO

As predicted, the cold wave announced to arrive Wednesday night, made its appearance on scheduled time, and this morning, Thursday, everything in the big outside is covered with flying frost.

Today the thermometer went down with a thud from balmy spring weather to 14 above zero, with zero predicted by Cline, the weather man, for tomorrow morning.

Mr. and Mrs. E.M. Vanderburg are overhauling their house next to the First Christian Church. Two new rooms will be added and other changes made. Mr. Vanderburg being an experienced workman, will do most of the work.

Celebrating 15th Birthday

With the last issue of the Brand, the 15th volume of the paper was closed.

The paper was founded fifteen years ago by Mr. Frank Vanderberg. The last issue of the Brand closed the first year under the present management--and we are celebrating our anniversary by the contract for a new home for the Brand, upon which work has already begun and which we hope to occupy in ninety days.

This new building is better evidence of our faith in Hereford and the surrounding country than anything we could say.

50 YEARS AGO

Mrs. C.W. Seed and Doug Fox returned Monday from Fort Worth and Dallas, where they visited the Spring Market displays and selected merchandise for The Vogue.

Showing at the movie this week is "Cherokee Strip" starring Richard Dix and "Santa Fe Trail" starring Raymond Massey, Ronald Reagan, and Alan Hale.

A mother in Little Rock, Ark., who recently gave birth to triplets named them "Gone," "With" and "Wind."

The Seniors have selected their play for the year, "Don't Take My Penny." It is a three act play and has 17 characters in it. The characters have not been chosen yet. The date of presentation is March 28.

25 YEARS AGO

Hereford and the Texas Panhandle had the main course after the dessert, as far as weather goes, last week.

A sampler-type winter snow had just melted away...when winter came plummeting the mercury some 12 notches to 12 degrees in a three-hour span and issuing forth the first portion of a five and a half inch snow.

Deaf Smith County Commissioners this week called for bids on the construction of the new nurses' home for the Deaf Smith County Hospital.

New uniforms for the Whiteface Band arrived this past week. They are maroon and grey, featuring West Point style jackets.

Warning from an income tax inspector: "When submitting returns keep in mind that it's better to give than deceive."

The government has budgeted 1.7 billion for the 1966 Food for Peace program to make surplus agricultural products available to hungry persons throughout the world.

10 YEARS AGO

A veteran space traveler and a rookie astronaut say they are ready to pilot a revolutionary new spacecraft that will drastically change the way America operates in space when it is launched on St. Patrick's Day.

John Young and co-pilot Bob Crippen have trained longer than any others for the manned space flight.

Blake E. Allen, son of Mr. and Mrs. W.E. Allen, will perform Friday, Jan. 30, at 7:30 p.m. in a cello recital sponsored by the Hereford Music Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Taylor H. Holland will celebrate their "Silver Wedding Anniversary" during a reception in their honor at the Friendship Room of the Hereford State Bank.

Members of the Hereford Young Homemakers left today for a two-day state meeting in San Antonio. Those attending from Hereford are Gail Blain, Bobbie Patzig and Karen Smith.

5 YEARS AGO

Ten months of undercover investigation ended Friday after 58 persons across Deaf Smith County were arrested on felony drug charges during a midnight-to-dawn raid by lawmen from throughout the Panhandle.

Matt Schilling of Hereford won the Grand Champion trophy for barrows Thursday with his crossbreed hog in the Hereford Young Farmers Junior Livestock Show.

Growers may be liable for payments of minimum wages to farm workers even when using a crew leader as an agent, according to a recent ruling of a Texas Rural Legal Aid case by Judge Mary Robinson of the U.S. District Court in Amarillo.

George Warner was honored for his innovations and leadership in agriculture as the Hereford Brand Ag Man of the Year at the annual Texas Sugar Beet Growers Association Banquet at the Bull Barn in Hereford.

There's life in dead trees

A surprising fact to many vacationers visiting the nation's forests is that dead trees are as valuable to fish and wildlife as healthy trees. It's the diversity that's important.

According to scientists, dead, dying, and hollow trees provide a variety of food and cover for such diverse species as ants, nuthatches, salamanders, woodpeckers and bears.

These trees also supply nutrients for forests. The value of the nation's dead trees is so important that the Department of the Interior and Agriculture have initiated an educational program called, "Animal Inn." Key partners in this program are the Bureau of Land Management and the U.S. Forest Service along with the forest products industry and conservationists.

More than 147 million acres of National Forests and Grasslands plus 27 millions acres of public land and 350 million acres of privately managed forests provide habitat for more than 3,000 species of birds, animals, fish and amphibians.

The split-bedroom floor plan provides a large master suite with his-and-hers walk-in closets and luxury bath with garden

The easy-care cedar exterior features large contemporary windows, a sun deck that spans the length of the home in front, and another sun deck in back.

This home is built on a crawl space foundation.

This is a computer generated plan. The plan is number 2066. It includes 2,047 square feet of heated area. All W. D. Farmer plans include special construction details for energy efficiency and are drawn to VA and FHA requirements. For further information, write to W. D. Farmer, P.O. Box 450025, Atlanta, GA 30345.

Home help tips

Q. - After removing the wood shingles from the roof, filling in the roof deck spaces and recovering the roof with asphalt shingles, mildew has formed on the interior walls. Even though we installed two attic gable vents, the problem persists. The house is still not getting enough ventilation, but how can I correct this?

A. - By filling in the roof deck spaces, you altered the ventilation pattern of the house. The attic no longer breathes as easily as it used to. This allows moisture to build up and cause mildew.
