Iraq claims casualties

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia (AP) - Iraq today renewed its claims that allied air raids were battering civilian areas, reporting 150 people died in an overnight air strike. It was the highest death toll reported by Iraq from a single raid in the Persian Gulf War.

As the unrelenting allied air attack continued on Iraq, a U.S. Marine amphibious assault force was moving into place today in the Persian Gulf. Allied commanders say, however, that any ground war to retake Kuwait will probably follow still more air attacks on Iraqi forces.

Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, commander of Operation Desert Storm, said his greatest concern in the war is that the Iraqis are "capable of the most heinous acts."

"They have demonstrated that they have absolutely no value on human life," Schwarzkopf said in an interview broadcast today on "CBS This Morning." "It's sort of the mad dog syndrome," he said. "In a mad dog there is no predictability."

The Baghdad government said the allies carried out 263 air raids and missile attacks overnight, including intensive bombing of residential areas.

The Iraqis said that in the southern Iraqi city of Nassariyah, about 150 people - including 35 children - were killed by the air assault. Many homes were reported hit.

Travelers arriving in Baghdad from Nassariyah reported the city came under intensive bombardment Tuesday night. They said military and industrial targets were hit.

The Iraqi government daily Al-Thawra reported today that 349 people had been killed in the southern port city of Basra since the allied raids began. It was not clear how the latest casualty reports would alter the

Schwarzkopf says Iraqis 'mad dogs'

WASHINGTON (AP) - The commander of U.S. forces in the Persian Gulf War, Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf, says the "mad dog" unpredictability of his Iraqi opponents is his biggest worry.

"They have demonstrated that they have absolutely no value on human life," Schwarzkopf said in an interview broadcast today on "CBS This Morning." "They fight without conscience."

Schwarzkopf is to meet later this week with Defense Secretary Dick Cheney and Gen. Colin Powell, who are being dispatched by President Bush for a firsthand report on the war's progress.

A senior Pentagon official, speaking Tuesday on condition of anonymity, said the leaders would discuss "the next step" in the allied campaign against Iraq. The official, who requested anonymity, made clear he referred to a ground offensive.

Asked to identify his greatest concern in the war, Schwarzkopf said the Iraqis are "capable of the most heinous acts" and compared them to rabid dogs.

"It's sort of the mad dog syndrome," he said. "In a mad dog there is no predictability."

In the past, Schwarzkopf and other U.S. officials have denounced the Iraqis for spilling oil into the Persian Gulf, for preparing to use chemical and biological weapons and for firing

Scud missiles at cities in Israel and Saudi Arabia.

In today's interview, which CBS said was taped Tuesday night, the general said allied bombing of Iraq's Scud missile sites has been effective. "We have got some of them right on the launchers when they were about to launch," he said.

Bush, in announcing Cheney and Powell's mission to Saudi Arabia on Tuesday, said he doubted the air war would be sufficient to push Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's forces from Kuwait. He said he was prepared to make the decision to commit troops to a ground war that is expected to be bloody on both sides.

"I have very able people to depend on, and it is a decision that I am perfectly prepared to make upon recommendation of these people in whom I have so much confidence," Bush told reporters at the White House.

Powell and Cheney also were meeting with lawmakers in closed sessions. Bush said they would leave for the gulf "late this week."

The president was flying to New York tonight for a dinner speech to the Economic Club of New York and returning to the White House, his second trip outside the Washington area since the war began three weeks ago.

If you lay 100 kindergartners, fourth and sixth graders from end-to-end, how far would they reach?

Much longer than the length of a football field, it turns out: about 389 feet.

That was discovered Tuesday, the 100th day of school, during special activities at Bluebonnet School in Hereford. The activities were the brainchild of Deloris Dowell, a teacher at the school.

The activities were designed to help the kindergartners learn to count to 100 and realize how much 100 of anything is, while helping reinforce ideas for the older students. The older students also got to interact with the younger students and help them in the activities.

"Deloris is always coming up with great ideas, things for her students and other children to do," said Howard Birdwell, Bluebonnet principal.

Students, many wearing necklaces made of string and 100 Cheerios, put 100 bears on the cafeteria wall while singing a song about it. They later went outside the school and covered three large sections of sidewalk, with one student's feet at the next student's head, while teachers measured to see how long the chain of 100 students reached. They joined with other students as teachers and school officials released 100 yellow balloons.

The students then returned to the cafeteria to consume 100 chocolate chip cookies and 100 cups of punch.

The students also brought 100 items to school, and awards went to youngsters who brought the heaviest and lightest items to school.

Car-train accident injures two persons

Hereford Emergency Medical Services workers tend to the injuries of Romie and Inez Fults after their 1983 Ford LTD Crown Victoria was struck by a train and a truck Wednesday.

Couple injured in wreck

Two persons were slightly injured Tuesday when the car in which they were riding was struck by a Santa Fe train, then ran into a truck, in Hereford.

Romie Fults, 83, the driver of the car, and Inez Fults, 81, both of Hereford, were taken to Deaf Smith General Hospital for treatment of injuries they suffered in the accident, which occurred about 2:30 p.m. Tuesday.

According to police reports, the Fults' 1983 Ford LTD Crown Victoria was blocked on the tracks by a tractor-trailer rig that left the scene after the accident, according to police. As the train approached the intersection, the guard arm came down and blocked the Fults' car on the tracks. The train attempted to stop but struck the rear of the Fults' car. The collision spun the car into the rear of the truck.

The Fults were treated at the scene by Hereford Emergency Medical Services personnel and were then taken to Deaf Smith General Hospital for treatment of minor injuries.

Schools review TAAS scores

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

Hereford school board members reviewed results of the recent Texas Assessment of Academic Skills test at the February board meeting Tuesday at the school administration building.

The meeting was largely an informative session. The board had the first reading on minor policy changes; reappointed Sylvia Flores to the Deaf Smith County Juvenile Board; and called the school board election for May 4. There will be four seats up for election this year: District 1, currently held by Steve Coneway; District 3, currently held by Raymond Schlabs; and Districts 4 and 5, which were formerly held by Kathy Moore and Shirley Wilson. The District 1 and 3 seats will be for three-year terms, while the District 4 and 5 seats will be for one-year terms.

The board learned that, generally, Hereford students scored below the statewide average on the TAAS test, which measures students' skills in reading, writing and arithmetic.

The TAAS test replaces the Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills (TEAMS) test that was given for the past five years. There are many differences in the test: the major difference is that TAAS measures the maximum skills a student has mastered in each area, and includes a graded written essay by the students.

Hereford's third graders and juniors had the best performance, compared to statewide averages. Students in grades 5, 7 and 9 were generally below the statewide average percent of mastery of the areas measured by the test. All students in grades 3, 5, 7, 9 and 11 in Texas took the test in October. All juniors must pass the test before they are allowed to graduate.

"We have met with principals at each of the schools and suggested specific remediation for many areas," said Curriculum Director Alice Lockmiller. She explained that many students at all levels had problems with the math portion of the test because many of the questions were

"story problems," and that difficulties with problem solving cropped up in many areas of the test.

Superintendent Charles Greenawalt said that school officials will be holding parent meetings later this month to review the test results and give parents suggestions on how they can help their children in certain areas. Greenawalt also said remediation plans to help students master the areas measured by the test will be incorporated in revised campus action plans at each school.

Candy Luchsinger, VAC coordinator, and Nena Veazey, special education coordinator for the Hereford schools, reviewed the cooperative work-study program. The program has 21 students enrolled, many of whom are working in jobs in the schools and elsewhere in the community. The program works with impaired persons to give them employable skills so they may be fruitful members of the community, said Veazey.

"These students have very high potential as future citizens," said Luchsinger.

Luchsinger and Aurora Flores work with each of the students. Some of the students work in full-time jobs and, in some cases, are in school only an hour or so a week. Others require more work and support in the schools and work only a few hours a week.

John Matthews reviewed the district's competency-based high school diploma program, which allows persons who have left school for various reasons to work to obtain a full-fledged high school diploma. The rigorous program requires persons to complete the necessary subject work and pass the TAAS test. Successful graduates receive a Hereford High School diploma that is no different from other HHS diplomas.

The board also honored Pam Fogo and June Rudd as the employees of the month.

Students celebrate 100th day

U.S., Mexico agree to open trade

WASHINGTON (AP) - There will winners and losers under a free trade agreement with Mexico, but on balance the U.S. economy will benefit, according to a study by the International Trade Commission.

The ITC study said there could be losers north of the Rio Grande under the agreement, including retailers on the Southwestern border who depend on Mexican shoppers; fruit and vegetable growers; producers of inexpensive household glassware; cow-calf operators; and segments of the textile industry.

Winners could include grains and oilseeds producers, alcoholic beverage exporters, cement makers, producers of major household appliances and capital goods such as machine tools and industrial equipment. Other potential beneficiaries include industries that manufacture farm and construction machinery, food processing equipment, and pollution control equipment.

The study, however, said word is still out on autos and auto parts, and that the picture is mixed for steel.

"This study reaches a significant conclusion: On balance, free trade with Mexico can produce economic benefits for the United States," Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said Tuesday in releasing the study.

"An agreement has the potential to provide new jobs and other benefits for Texas and the United States as a whole. But the study also shows that there will be winners and losers," Bentsen said.

The study said a free trade agreement will benefit the U.S. economy overall by expanding trade opportunities, lowering prices, increasing competition and improving the ability of U.S. firms to exploit economies of scale.

But relative to the size of the U.S. economy, those benefits are likely to be small, at least initially, because many trade barriers between the United States and Mexico have already been reduced or eliminated, the study said.

President Bush, however, in announcing Tuesday that Canada would be joining the negotiations, said a free trade agreement would link the three countries' economies in "bold and far-reaching ways."

"A successful conclusion of the free trade agreement will expand market opportunities, increase prosperity, and help our three countries meet the economic challenges of the future," Bush said.

A free trade area encompassing all three countries would create a North American market of 360 million people with annual production of more than $6 trillion, Bush said.

"The sheer size of that market will increase the competitiveness of the firms of the three countries. At the same time, it will allow for the three economies to complement each other and to combine the power (of) Mexico, a labor-abundant country, and the United States, a more capital abundant country," said Jaime Serra Pucha, Mexico's commerce secretary.

Bentsen, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said the study's findings underscore the need to negotiate an agreement "that is responsive to all American industries and all American workers. If our negotiators don't bring back that kind of agreement, it is unlikely to be approved by Congress."

The study also cautioned that an agreement would raise the demand for transport, warehousing and other services along the Southwestern border, resulting in additional pressure on already strained border transport system and entry facilities.

The president intends to negotiate the free trade agreement under the "fast track," which means the pact could not be amended by Congress.

Under the fast track, however, are several checkpoints at which Congress can kill the negotiations. The first comes later this month, when a vote by either the House Ways and Means Committee or the Finance Committee could sidetrack the agreement.

Bentsen said he believes including Canada in the negotiations could delay the progress of free trade talks with Mexico, which are expected to get under way formally next month and conclude by year's end.

Thomas, 77, dies

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Danny Thomas, called "America's favorite television comedian" in the late 1950s and early '60s, and the benefactor of St. Jude Children's Research Hospital, died today. He was 77.

Thomas was pronounced dead at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center about a half hour after he suffered a heart attack at his Beverly Hills home, said hospital spokesman Ron Wise.

Best known as the star of the popular television series "Make Room for Daddy," Thomas had appeared to be in good health and recently completed a tour promoting his new book, "Make Room for Danny," said Norman Brokaw, chairman and chief executive officer of the William Morris Agency.

"It's hard to believe. He really wasn't sick," said Brokaw, Thomas' longtime agent.

Born Amos Jacobs in Deerfield, Mich., the comedian grew up in a large Lebanese family in Toledo, Ohio. After a number of odd jobs, he moved to Chicago with the aim of becoming a radio actor.

"I was going to play nightclubs on the weekends, but I really thought I was going to be a character actor," he recalled in 1986. "That's why I went to Chicago - to get jobs on the soap operas. My ambition was to get a station wagon, a house in the suburbs, commute to work and lead a nice, normal, happy life."

Amos Jacobs was making a good living as a radio actor when he married Rosemarie Mantell in 1963. Their lives changed when Jacobs took a $50-a-week job as emcee at the Northside 5100 Club. He stayed three years, adopted a new name from brothers Danny and Thomas. He moved on to the prestigious Chez Paree in Chicago, then national fame.

Earlier this year, the Key Club also honored teachers and other school employees, including custodians, cafeteria workers and support personnel.

Lewis grand jury recesses

AUSTIN (AP) - A Travis County grand jury investigating indicted House Speaker Gib Lewis has recessed for two weeks to allow investigators to examine boxes of records and documents, prosecutors said.

Meanwhile, Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said Tuesday that Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle's doesn't have a case against him.

Earle has "found out that what he claimed is not true," Lewis said.

Lewis blasted Earle's handling of the investigation, saying a grand jury probe was not necessary to charge him with misdemeanors "unless you want to grandstand."

"This whole thing has been kind of spooky from the beginning," he said.

Earle has defended the probe and said investigators will need two weeks to go through "massive boxes" subpoenaed by the grand jury, including Lewis' income tax returns, business records and records from the law firm Heard, Goggan, Blair and Williams.

"Each of those boxes is filled with individual pieces of paper," Earle said. "We have to go through those individual pieces of paper. It takes a lot of time."

Lewis was indicted by the grand jury in December on charges that he failed to report a gift from Heard, Goggan, and of failing to disclose his interest in a business for which the law firm allegedly paid some property taxes.

Lewis said he paid the taxes, but there is a question about who paid the penalty and interest on the delinquent bill.

He said he asked Heard, Goggan to send him a bill for the penalty and interest. The law firm sent him one for about $2,000, Lewis said.

But Lewis said he hasn't paid that bill because he is not sure the amount is correct.

On Tuesday, the grand jury received records on Heard, Goggan's tax collection business. The San Antonio-based law firm is the largest private collector of delinquent taxes in the state.

Boys win, NFL 'insiders' get jobs girls fall at Randall Hereford's varsity basketball teams split games with Randall High School Tuesday, with the boys winning and the girls losing.

The boys' squad cruised to a 16-point lead over the Raiders early in the fourth quarter, then withstood a late rally to pull out a 58-55 victory.

The Herd improved their district record to 3-5 (8-18 overall) with two games to play. The Herd hosts Dumas Friday and travels to Borger Tuesday.

Randall dropped to 1-7 and 8-20. Hereford held a five point advantage after the first quarter, and stretched it to 11 after the second and 12 after the third.

The lead reached its high-water mark of 16 points early in the fourth quarter, then Randall launched it comeback.

The Raiders pulled to within two points with less than three minutes to play, but missed several chances to pull closer. A free throw by Hereford's Derek Mason and a basket by Leo Brown kept the Raiders at bay.

Two Randall free throws made it 56-53 with 36 seconds remaining, but Hereford's Richard Sanderson hit two free throws to ice the game. A meaningless last-second basket by the Raiders provided the final score.

Sanderson led the Herd with 21 points, followed by Brown's 15. For Randall, Shane Anderson scored 17 points.

The Lady Whitefaces finished their season with a tough draw: a Randall team that was undefeated in district play and 25-4 overall.

The Lady Raiders completed a perfect 10-0 league record by routing Hereford 64-38. Kara Sandoval's 11 points led the Lady Whitefaces, who finished 2-8 in district and 13-18 overall.

Hereford's junior varsity boys also won a close game over Randall, 64-57. Kyle Hansen paced the JV Herd with 19 points.

Coaches did not report the results of the girls' junior varsity game and did not return phone calls this morning.

Bill Belichick is in at Cleveland. Rich Kotite has the job in Philadelphia. Richard Williamson is the man at Tampa.

Once again, the guys behind the scenes on the sidelines have risen to the apex of their profession as NFL head coaches.

Four head coaching jobs were available after the 1990 season, and three were filled by assistants. The other, with New England, went to Syracuse's Dick MacPherson, a former pro assistant.

The previous year, three of five positions went to assistants. Art Shell, who had worked as an aide to two coaches with the Los Angeles Raiders since retiring, was elevated to the top during the 1989 season.

Anybody spot a trend?

"I think the key thing that anyone or any group has to do when hiring a head coach for any sport is to get the person who is right for that specific situation," said Eagles president Harry Gamble, who elevated Kotite from offensive coordinator when Buddy Ryan's contract was not renewed last month. "And while it might sound trite, that's the truth."

New York Jets GM Dick Steinberg, who chose Bruce Coslet of the Cincinnati Bengals staff after the '89 season, believes most teams follow a checklist on coaching candidates.

"The thing I see as a trend is that people want coaches with NFL experience," he said, noting that before MacPherson only Jimmy Johnson of Dallas in recent years went from college right to a head coaching spot in the pros. Before that, John Robinson had the most success with the transition.

"If you put together a list of available people with NFL head coaching experience, it's a pretty short list. Bill Walsh obviously does not want to coach anymore, Dick Vermeil has been asked a bunch of times. Other guys have gotten a shot and didn't do it."

"Everyone would like to hire a highly successful NFL coach who has been a head man and they just are not available."

"Next, you might look at a college coach who has had NFL experience, knows the workings of the league and the style of the league and has proven he can handle the responsibilities of head coach."

"Next is a very bright assistant who you are rolling the dice on as far as his ability to handle the total scope of the head coaching job, but who has shown skills with Xs and Os," added Steinberg, who took that gamble on Coslet.

For the hotshot assistants, timing is everything. Belichick is a perfect example.

Last year, he was considered an outsider for the job in Phoenix that went to Joe Bugel. Then Belichick's work as New York's defensive coordinator made his value soar as the Giants won the championship.

On Tuesday, he became the youngest coach in the league. At 38, Belichick made the big jump.

The interest in Belichick was strong enough that he also was interviewed by the Tampa Bay Buccaneers. But they chose to stick with Williamson, who was 1-2 as interim coach after Ray Perkins was fired.

"It's not like I'm coming into a place completely new because I've been here for four years," said Williamson, hired by Perkins as a receivers coach in 1987.

Kotite couldn't have dreamed he was one year away from becoming a head coach when he was fired by the Jets after the 1989 season. But the Eagles players liked him, and when Ryan was released, the team desperately needed some cohesion and carryover to prevent a player revolt. So Kotite was chosen over defensive coordinator Jeff Fisher.

SkyDome hotel posts new rules

TORONTO (AP) - Guests at the prestigious SkyDome Hotel expect a little extra when they check into the $200-plus-a-night rooms overlooking the domed stadium.

The "extra" now includes rules about what they can and can't do in front of their windows.

It's all thanks to a woman wrapped in a towel and a naked man who watched the Toronto Blue Jays play the Seattle Mariners from the window of their hotel room. Soon, thousands of fans were watching them.

As the game wore on, the couple apparently wearied of being spectators and opted for a more participatory sport - giving new meaning to "the seventh inning stretch."

The lights were off in the hotel room, but the banks of ballpark lights revealed all.

The SkyDome Hotel is part of the domed baseball stadium complex. It has 348 rooms, 70 of which face the ballpark.

Amidst cries of outraged dignity, public indecency and not a few chortles, the hotel has instituted a full-page code of conduct guests must sign when they check in.

The uninhibited couple was "the biggest story we ever had," according to David Garrick of the Stadium Corp. But the hotel would rather avoid a repeat incident.

At the time, hotel manager Ray Thompson said he didn't believe the off-field activity was an accident.

"I believe the people, for their own particular reason, wanted to perform in front of 40,000 people," he said.

Asked if he was angry, Thompson said no.

"I wish they'd come back so I could thank them. It certainly has created a lot of interest in the hotel and in that room. Many people want to rent the same room. It has triggered a tremendous response from people interested in this hotel and its uniqueness."

The agreement reminds those whose rooms have a view of the stadium that "you can see the audience and they can see you." "This means that when the window is open for viewing, your room is part of a public place and you should conduct yourself accordingly," the document says.

Among the do's and don'ts:
- No throwing, dropping, dangling or holding anything out the window;
- No placing or resting anything on the ledge;
- No carrying on "any activity not considered appropriate in public";
- No being "in a state of partial or complete undress."

"It covers pretty well everything that might occur," Thompson said.

Payton says 'never say never'

By JIM LITKE
AP Sports Writer

You see him looking busy and prosperous in smart glasses and something by Armani and get the feeling that maybe this is just another of Walter Payton's larks. Then you see him in a T-shirt and gym shorts and you think maybe not.

Three years ago, Payton lifted his sights from playing for a football team to owning one. But 10 days ago, the man who ran for more yards than anyone else in NFL history let it slip that he might be interested in donning the pads once again to add to that total.

Then he qualified it. As far as keeping busy, he has his owner's thing, his auto racing thing, his string of high-priced nightclubs and joint ventures thing and more. As far as actually playing, it's "might be interested."

As in: "I might be interested in a couple more downs if I find out tomorrow there's not a snowball's chance in hell of getting a franchise anytime soon."

And yet, it is an intriguing proposition.

Walter Payton carried the football more times (3,838) for more distance (16,726 yards, more than nine miles) than anybody before or since. He still holds the record for most yards in a game (275) most 100-yard games (77), most 1,000-yard seasons (10) and most rushing touchdowns (110). In his last game, on Dec. 20, 1987, he ran for 79 yards and two TDs.

And so it is hard to believe - for him most of all, one suspects - that a few more apples would not fall out if somebody shook the tree. Thirty-six-year-old Walter Payton, most recently of the Chicago Bears, saw 34-year-old Otis Anderson, currently of the New York Giants, pick up 102 yards and the MVP trophy in the Super Bowl last month and his own imagination began running wild.

"As a businessman, you learn to never say never," he said Tuesday at the suburban Chicago offices of Walter Payton Inc. "Because you never know what is going to happen next."

"What happened in this case is that I did an interview for ESPN at the Super Bowl and somebody said, 'You look good enough to come back.' And I said I'd been working like crazy to get a team in St. Louis, but that, yeah, I could come back. And that I would come back, hypothetically ..."

For openers, Walter made clear Tuesday, it would have to be somebody else's quarter. He is not making calls these days, only taking them. And this one would have to come from a contender. The job would have to be of the few-downs-and-out-for-a-breather variety, and they would have to let him throw the occasional option pass. He would need at least two weeks notice.

"I think I could be like Otis was," Payton said, "only better."

Tyler Lee gets a win in 8 OTs

TYLER, Texas (AP) - Backup center Todd Wright wasn't even supposed to be in the game for Tyler Lee High School.

But as it turned out, it took eight overtimes and a layup by Wright just before the buzzer before Tyler Lee clinched a 101-99 victory over Lufkin High Tuesday.

Tyler Lee coach Larry Jones called it "the darndest thing I ever saw in my life."

The game was tied at 73 at the end of regulation. Tyler used a four-corner offense in order to get the final shot in several of the extra three-minute periods.

Two of the overtimes were scoreless.

The only player to foul out of the game was Tyler Lee's starting center, John Coleman.

Lufkin's Cal Varner had a game-high 31 points, while Russell Watson led Tyler with 25 points.

"It was one of those games no one deserved to lose," Jones said. "It was something I was glad to be a part of. These kids will remember this for the rest of their lives."

Thomas wavering, Aggies get Adams

By MIKE DRAGO
Associated Press Writer
The Southwest Conference recruiting battle remained a close race today between Texas A&M, Texas and Baylor as national signing day arrived.

One of the state's top recruits wavered between the Aggies and Louisiana State and another waited for that choice before making his.

Texas A&M appeared to have suffered a blow Monday when running back Rodney Thomas of Groveton selected Baton Rouge over College Station.

But Thomas, who carried for more than 3,500 yards and 41 touchdowns last season, on Tuesday again said he would be an Aggie.

"He called Texas A&M and told them he was coming," Groveton coach Don Hill said late Tuesday. "I just got off the phone with him 15 minutes ago."

Hill said Thomas' latest flip-flop might not be the last.

"His problem is that he's such a nice kid he can't say no," Hill said. "He wants to go to LSU, but he can't say no. As of now, he's going to Texas A&M. As of tomorrow, he's going to LSU."

Hill said Thomas' choice would determine the fate of another top running back, Wilber Biggens of Aldine MacArthur.

Biggens, who gained 1,878 yards and scored 29 touchdowns last season, gave an oral commitment to the Aggies, but he will attend Texas if Thomas goes to Texas A&M, Hill said.

More 11th-hour mind-changing was likely as the national signing day arrived Wednesday. Commitments are non-binding until letters of intent are signed.

The Aggies seemed to have won the recruiting brawl over Sam Adams of Cypress Creek High School. Adams, an Associated Press Sports Editors first-team defensive lineman in Class 5A, said the Longhorns were his second choice. Oklahoma was third.

"I chose A&M because of the players and I thought that I would fit in the A&M family," Adams said. "I knew I wanted to go to A&M last year. My dad wanted me to keep an open mind. Then A&M fell into disfavor. But all that changed when I visited there. I just fell in love with the place."

Adams had 101 tackles, 23 sacks, knocked down eight passes, caused seven fumbles and had five fumble recoveries last season.

"One of the hardest things I had to do was tell the Texas coaches they came in second," Adams said. "But my parents are happy that I've made my decision, so they can stop unplugging their phone."

Texas apparently lost McKinney running back James Thornton to Houston. Thornton, who gained 2,008 yards last season and was named the Class 4A offensive player of the year by the AP, earlier gave an oral commitment to the Longhorns.

One player who chose Oklahoma State over Texas said the Longhorns' recruiting techniques turned him away.

Arlington Lamar tight end Scott Waterbury said Texas coach David McWilliams took it for granted that he would play for the Longhorns.

"He (McWilliams) gave me that attitude," Waterbury said. "I wanted to go to Texas, but I could only take so much. If Texas coaches recruited as well as their team played, there wouldn't be a problem."

The Longhorns received a commitment from offensive lineman Jay Boulware of Irving Nimitz.

Boulware was named to the AP second team.

Boulware was the latest in the list of blue-chip offensive linemen who have orally committed to Texas. AP first-teamers John Elmore of Sherman, Blake Brockermeyer of Fort Worth Arlington Heights and Joe Phillips of Midland already committed to the Longhorns.

Charles Horton, a 6-3, 230-pound offensive lineman from Dallas Carter, added to Baylor's increasingly impressive recruiting class.

"Their defensive tradition is what really sold them on me," Horton said. "Carter's always had a great defense and I know Baylor's going to continue that."

The Bears also received a commitment from Lamar Consolidated running back Clarence McCullough. The state's top Class 5A rusher, Louis Fite of Waco, already agreed to attend Baylor.

Arkansas, whose departure from the Southwest Conference in 1992 is expected to hurt recruiting in Texas, picked up an oral commitment from Grand Prairie receiver Brian Brown.

Aside from stealing Thornton from the Longhorns, Houston received a commitment from defensive end Carlos Chester, who earlier had committed to Texas Christian.

The Horned Frogs received a commitment from A&M Consolidated offensive lineman Philip Bendele. Bendele, who is 6-4 and 210 pounds, was an AP first-teamer in Class 4A.

AP second-team running back Andre Session of El Paso Jefferson opted for Texas Tech.

Some of the state's best talent is headed elsewhere.

Sugar Land Willowridge's Mike Miller, the top wide receiver candidate in the state, committed to Notre Dame.

Miller received queries from more than 70 Division I-A schools. At Willowridge, Miller played wide receiver, wingback, flanker and ran from both running back positions. He also returned kickoffs and punts.

Miller will be joined by Dallas White linebacker Huntley Bakich. Bakich announced his intentions to attend Notre Dame on Monday.

Quarterback Ryan Huffman of League City Clear Lake has committed to LSU. Huffman passed for 1,714 yards and 14 touchdowns last season.

Arlington quarterback Ken Ferguson, who scorched defenses for 2,132 yards and 14 touchdowns, says he'll attend Pitt.

Tremayne Green, a linebacker from Marshall, chose Miami. Green helped lead the Mavericks to the Class 5A Big School state championship.

Linebacker Mario Freeman, who led Austin LBJ with 125 tackles and six sacks, committed to Oklahoma.

Johnson fine as Lakers beat Clips

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer

It will take more than a knock on the head to make Magic Johnson lose his effectiveness. And it will take more than 16 victories in a row to make the Los Angeles Lakers lose their perspective.

"It was no problem, and now it's back to playing basketball," Johnson said after scoring 22 points and handing out 13 assists as the Lakers beat the Los Angeles Clippers 116-102 Tuesday night.

Johnson showed no ill effects from a mild concussion sustained Sunday when he tripped and was accidentally kicked by Chicago's Horace Grant. Johnson, rendered unconscious for about a minute by that blow, took slightly less than that against the Clippers to show he was ready to play.

He sank a 3-pointer on his first shot 58 seconds into the game.

Then, when the Clippers threatened late in the game, he made quick work of them, scoring five straight points to put the game out of reach.

Despite their run, the Lakers are 17 victories short of tying their own NBA record set 19 seasons ago. And they're being realistic about it.

"We're not thinking 33 in a row because teams are too good now," Johnson said. "It will be tough for any team ever to do that."

James Worthy, who added 24 points, agreed.

"It's a great accomplishment to win 16," he said. "We must play one game at a time or we're in trouble."

Byron Scott added 21 points for the Lakers. Ken Norman had 23 for the Clippers.

Pistons 107, 76ers 98
Mark Aguirre came off the bench to score 10 of his 21 points in the fourth quarter as Detroit rallied to beat slumping Philadelphia.

Vinnie Johnson, starting for the injured Isiah Thomas, also had 21 points.

Charles Barkley, playing despite a sprained left ankle, had 23 points to lead the 76ers.

Hawks 118, Cavaliers 114
Dominique Wilkins scored 14 of his 40 points in the final 7:50.

Duane Ferrell's driving layup with 8:25 remaining broke a tie at 87 and gave Atlanta a lead it never relinquished.

It was the fourth road loss in a row and 22nd in 27 games overall for Cleveland, which got 28 points from Darnell Valentine.

Magic 118, Knicks 116
Scott Skiles sparked a 16-6 fourth-quarter burst and Greg Kite hit a layup with 37 seconds remaining as Orlando won for the third time in four games.

Skiles scored 23 points. New York got 28 points from Kiki Vandeweghe.

Timberwolves 94, Jazz 93
Sam Mitchell's 15-foot jumper with 11.4 seconds left capped a 22-point performance. Tyrone Corbin had 18 points and Tod Murphy 15 rebounds for Minnesota.

Thurl Bailey missed a 20-footer at the buzzer for Utah.

Karl Malone scored 29 points and Blue Edwards a career-high 25 for the Jazz.

Mavericks 114, Pacers 109
Derek Harper scored 24 points, and had a key steal and offensive rebound in the last 30 seconds as Dallas rallied in the second half.

Harper strolled the ball from George McCloud at midcourt and fed Herb Williams for a decisive dunk and a 111-106 lead with 20 seconds left. Harper got his key rebound with 11 seconds left, and Dallas sank three free throws to hold on.

Warriors 112, Spurs 106
Chris Mullin had 32 points, including Golden State's first seven in the final period.

San Antonio was playing without point guard Rod Strickland and forward Terry Cummings. Both have broken hands.

David Robinson and Willie Anderson scored 21 points each to lead the Spurs.

Suns 126, Nuggets 103
Kevin Johnson scored 19 of his 21 points in the first half as Phoenix beat Denver, which lost a six-game winning streak and red-hot Michael Adams.

Adams, who finished with seven points, strained his left hamstring in the first period.

Dan Majerle added 19 points for the Suns.

Massimino talks Villanova to win

NEW YORK (AP) — It may not have been as big as his pregame speech before Villanova won the national championship in 1985, but Rollie Massimino used another of his motivational talks to get a big victory.

The Wildcats beat No. 8 St. John's 61-51 Tuesday night behind the 21 points of sophomore center James Bryson, seven times his scoring average for the season.

"I actually talked to James this morning and told him we want you to have a big game if you get into the ballgame," Massimino said. "Then I told him I'd chew him out as soon as we got home and see if you respond accordingly."

That may not be quite what Massimino came up with before Villanova pulled the upset of the decade in beating Georgetown for the national championship six years ago, but it worked.

"They asked me to play aggressive and play hard, and that's what I did," said the 6-foot-10 Bryson, who had 57 points for the season entering the St. John's game and only seven of those in Big East games.

In other Top 25 games, No. 19 LSU beat Kentucky 107-88 and Kansas State trounced No. 23 Oklahoma 95-70.

As things fell for Villanova (12-9, 5-5), they didn't for St. John's (16-4, 7-4). The Redmen shot 34 percent (18-for-53) with leading scorer Malik Sealy held to 16 points on 4-for-17 shooting.

St. John's looked in control with a 39-33 lead with 11:02 to play as both teams played the tenacious defense the Big East has become famous for.

The Wildcats then went on an 18-4 run over the next 6:34. The run started with six points on offensive rebounds and ended with 6-for-6 free throw shooting. In between, St. John's managed only a 3-pointer and a free throw.

No. 19 LSU 107, No. 10 Kentucky 88
Shaquille O'Neal had 33 points, 16 rebounds and seven blocked shots as LSU pulled away at home.

The Tigers led 61-53 with 16 minutes left when O'Neal got his third foul and went to the bench. LSU reserves responded with a 9-2 burst and later increased the lead to 22 points.

Kansas State 95, No. 23 Oklahoma 70
Jean Derouillere scored 23 points and Kansas State made 10 of its first 11 shots.

The Wildcats sprung to a 21-8 lead and were ahead 67-49 when Oklahoma made its only move. The Sooners got within seven, but no closer.

Morris joins Twins, Hurst signs new pact

By The Associated Press

Jack Morris wanted to pitch for Minnesota, and this time the Twins wanted him.

Morris, the winningest pitcher of the 1980s, rejected a $9.3 million, three-year offer that would have kept him in Detroit and signed a one-year, $3 million contract with Minnesota. He and Bruce Hurst, who also signed Tuesday, became the 12th and 13th $3 million pitchers in baseball.

Minnesota spurned Morris after the 1986 season, when owners boycotted free agents. He was a new-look free agent this winter as part of the $280 million collusion settlement, and this year he was able to change teams, going to his hometown club.

"I think people have a tough time understanding the word 'free-agency' and what it all entails and what it means," Morris said. "Finally, I get to make a choice and I've made that choice and I just want people to respect the fact that I made my choice."

Morris, who turns 36 in May, holds options for 1992 and 1993 at $2 million a season. If he pitches 240 innings and makes 34 starts in each of the next two seasons, the contract would be worth $11 million over three years.

"It took four years and three free agencies to get him there, but he's there now," said Morris' agent, Richard Moss.

Hurst, the most highly sought free agent two winters ago, got an extension though 1993 for $6.4 million.

"Bruce Hurst is a very significant player and person in the Padres' plans for the foreseeable future," Padres general manager Joe McIlvaine said. "We are delighted to be able to come to terms with him on this extension. We look for many good outings from Bruce over the next few years."

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Americans who cannot hear are among the most isolated, underserved and blatantly ignored segments of our population.

For 19 hours after the San Francisco earthquake, thousands of deaf residents didn't know what to do or what not to do because there were no captions or interpreters on television. Radios and neighbors who do not know sign language were of no help. During any emergency, deaf people are in the most danger because they are unable to hear warning sirens or safety information.

Hearing people, even those who know no English, have access to free adult education classes and one-on-one literacy tutors. It's much more difficult for the deaf to learn to read and write. They need trained literacy tutors and adult educators. Closed-captioned televisions are useless to those who cannot read.

When I volunteer to interpret local public service announcements and television programs. Our viewers are distracted by a 'signer' in the corner of the screen and we can't risk irritating them."

You would think stations would supply this service for major TV events, at the very least when a governor gives his State of the State address or the president of the United States speaks. We have begged the stations to be more compassionate but they refuse to budge.

Please ask your readers, Ann. Would they object to seeing an interpreter for the deaf at the bottom of the screen? -- A Friend of the Hearing Impaired in Indiana

DEAR FRIEND: I can tell you without asking. My readers would be overwhelmingly in favor of having the signers do their thing. A minor distraction is a small price to pay when one considers the benefits to the deaf and the hearing impaired. I cannot imagine anyone objecting.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I need some advice from an outsider. A friend suggested that I write to you.

My son, 50, was divorced seven years ago. He is going to be married again soon and I need to know what I have to pay for.

I am 81 years old. My husband died four years ago. The woman my son is marrying is 47. This is her second marriage, also. She eloped the first time and says she wants the kind of church wedding she has always dreamed about.

As the mother of the groom, what are my financial obligations? I want to do the right thing. -- Need Advice in Alabama

DEAR ALABAMA: The mother of a 50-year-old son who is getting married for the second time should not be expected to pay for anything. She should treat herself to a lovely new dress, get her hair done downtown and have a wonderful time.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Recently you printed a letter from Don Zimmer, coach of the Chicago Cubs. He wrote a rather weak defense on behalf of players who chew tobacco and spit on TV. (He said some were eating sunflower seeds, others were chewing gum and so forth).

I have an idea. Why not have a designated spitter? He could stay out of TV camera range and spare us all an ugly sight. It would be greatly appreciated. -- Alvin Scroggin, Athens, Texas

DEAR AL: In the absence of a better suggestion, I'd vote for yours.

Vets play vital role in area's beef industry

Animal health specialists will pump at least $20 million into the Panhandle Beef Belt this year without lifting a shovel of feed or dumping a load of grain.

But they'll be running mighty heavy on test-tubes and thermometers--professionals known in the animal medical field as veterinarians.

From the ranch calving pens to feedyard loading chutes, Hereford veterinarians are billed among the best in the giant cattle feeding industry of the High Plains where three-fourths of the nation's fed-cattle inventory is finished for beef.

And about 25 percent of this total count is centered in the Texas Panhandle region with Hereford standing as the Hub of this multimillion-dollar business.

Sandwich the beef in with pork, dairy and lamb production here in the Greater Hereford Area and the bottomlines of the livestock industry blossom into a gross of just under $10 billion.

But this does not mean that all is always well on the production front. The thin line between profit and loss in livestock production is frequently held in the balance of a diagnostic lab...or a fast decision of a veterinarian from the top rail of a sick pen.

Dr. Al Edwards, a Kansas State University research veterinarian, estimated in a study conducted on 1,791,910 head of feedlot cattle that professional health care was worth at least $20 million to a commercial cattle feeding industry in the $4 billion range--about the same as the current annual gross here in the Tri-State Area of the High Plains.

Since the Golden Triangle of Deaf Smith, Castro and Parmer counties crank out a little more than one-fourth of the finished beef from the area serviced by the Texas Cattle Feeders Association, animal health care relates to an input of around $5 million a year just for the commercial feeding end of livestock around Hereford -- not in expenditures, but additional cash flow for having healthy animals.

Though exact figures have never been tallied, the price-tag of animal health care in the Deaf Smith County region will also run into the millions. And the dollar-count relates to only a small fraction of animal health care benefits when totalled in terms of healthy animals free from sickness or pain.

"Animal health care actually begins with the feedyard managers," said Dr. Steve Lewis, owner of the Hereford Veterinary Clinic. "And I guess the Texas Panhandle area is blessed with having probably the best set of feedyard managers anywhere in the nation. These managers know what they're doing and they realize the importance of animal health care and preventative medicine."

Dr. Lewis related to the feedyard managers as a group of business executives who have "cattle sense"--"They get the feel of a set of calves from the very first day they arrive at the feedyards...it seems that they can 'sense' whether a string of calves will do well or not."

Operating the Hereford Veterinary Clinic with a staff of eight, Dr. Lewis has two associate veterinarians, Dr. Mike Mimms and Dr. Rhonda Clark. While Dr. Lewis spend much of his time in the field as a consulting veterinarian to commercial cattle feed yards. Dr. Mimms and Dr. Clark maintain a six-day work schedule from the clinic. And their patients will include everything from parakeets to Cutting Horses.

In the cattle feeding end of the clinical business, Lewis estimated that his clinic is responsible for the health care of about 250,000 head of feeder cattle using a one-time count. This relates to more than 600,000 head of commercial feeder cattle a year which are under the responsibility of Dr. Lewis and associates.

In showing the responsible role of a consulting veterinarian to a commercial cattle feedyard, Dr. Edwards said that his study revealed that 25 percent of the cattle that died showed no outward appearance of sickness and that nearly half of that number had been in the feedyard for more than 45 days without appearing sick. He said 22 percent of the in-pen deaths occurred after 90 days.

Dr. Lewis pointed out that respiratory ailments, such as pneumonia, chronic respiratory infection, diphtheria and allergic pneumonia, was by far the leading category of feedyard sickness.

The role of Dr. Lewis as a consulting veterinarian has all the earmarks of the frontier circuit riders who made regular people rounds from community to community. But Dr. Lewis makes his rounds to feedyards where he sizes up the health-mode of more than 250,000 cattle a week.

"I guess you could say that our health programs actually begin with the point of origin of in-coming cattle," said Dr. Lewis. "We want to know where the cattle came from and where they have been before arriving at the feedyard, like auctions or various owners."

Since the Texas Panhandle produces a small percentage of calves that are feedlot-finished here in the High Plains beef Belt, the Golden Triangle becomes something of a meeting point for feeder calves gathered from many points of the nation. Thus, this region also becomes sort of a "melting pot" for livestock from many parts of the nation.

Basically, the Texas Panhandle is one of the most disease-free areas of the entire nation when it comes to cattle production. But with thousands of new cattle arriving daily, preventative medicine in livestock is the name of the game and the veterinarians are the key players to winning the game.

"If Florida or Mississippi has a little problem then that little problem will probably show up here in the local feedyards," said Dr. Mimms. "If Oklahoma or South Texas has a big problem, then we'll probably have a big problem."

"The Panhandle is really the melting pot of the cattle industry. Since cattle from all parts of the country do very well here in the Panhandle climate, they're brought from such far-away points as Florida and Mississippi, and of course from all over the Southwest."

The Hereford veterinarian also noted that just because a herd of calves originates in a secluded little valley somewhere in the mountains does not mean they will be problem-free stock-

"A lot of the isolated cattle, say some coming from mountain regions, may not have the immunity as that of a string of calves, say from South Texas. So, you sometimes develop a lot of health problems in the cattle grown in isolation that you don't have in the open-range stock...kinda like a bubble-baby suddenly exposed to the world."

A native of Olton on the South Plains, Dr. Lewis graduated from Olton High School in 1973 and after three years at West Texas State University at Canyon, Lewis was accepted to the School of Veterinary Medicine at Texas A&M University where he received his D.V.M. in 1979.

Following graduation from vet school, Lewis joined a group practice at Muleshoe. But after three years, Lewis moved out on his own, purchasing 5 acres of highway frontage on U.S. 60 from Holly Sugar Corp. just south of the Hereford city limits. His first move to Hereford, however, was to a building at the intersection of U.S. 60 and Holly Sugar Road where a boot and saddle shop is now located. One year later, Lewis moved into his present clinic headquarters which has undergone a number of expansion programs during the past eight years.

"We didn't even have any linoleum on the floors that first year...we just used the bare cement," recalled Lewis, as he told of a number of additions to the clinic.

Lewis hired his first associate veterinarian in 1985 and after he left for another practice, Lewis hired Dr. Mimms and Dr. Clark.

"Hereford has been a good town for our practice," said Lewis. "You know, a lot of people talk about Hereford being a small town, but I still see people about every day that I have never seen before. This is the right size of town...I can buy at least 90 percent of whatever I need right here in Hereford, Texas."

Dr. Lewis and his wife, Lisa, have two sons, Dustin and Cody.

In addition to his formal training at Texas A&M, Lewis was reared on farm and ranch operation owned by his parents, Elmer and Yvonne Lewis. And in an off-farm move to gain additional experience in livestock production, Lewis worked one summer for a commercial hog outfit near Olton while still in high school. Partially as a result of this early experience, Lewis is now consulting veterinarian to one of the largest hog operations in the Hereford area.

The Hereford Veterinarian Clinic also has a sizable number of dairy cows on its consulting programs and handles an extensive practice in health care for horses. As part of their horse program, they stand two studs in a set of stables adjacent to the clinic. The clinic also maintains a set of large animal hospital pens in the livestock complex.

"We have different classifications of cattle in every feedlot," said Dr. Lewis. "This will be based on the origin or where the cattle came from, such as area of the country, from a ranch, wheat pasture or wheat type of middleman was involved."

"I'd say the middleman in handling livestock will affect the cattle more than we affect them after they're here."

While respiratory problems hold the top slot in feedyard health problems, digestive problems come in as second...sometimes related to infectious causes and sometimes to the rations. The first 60 days is commonly infectious--then comes miscellaneous problems that hang on to the day of shipment...Do to the length of feeding time, the miscellaneous problems will quite frequently equal the infectious problems."

He noted that a 10-year track-record shows that about 30 percent of the lightweight calves coming in will get sick, whereas this sickness rate drops to around 10 percent on the incoming yearlings...Calves may be cheaper but they're a higher risk."

"Normally, we consider a death loss of 2 to 2 1/2 percent among the lighter weight calves to be very good, but this past fall and winter has been so cold that this rate came up to 6 or 7 percent," Dr. Lewis added. "The cattle feeding industry of this area usually performs better than the whole cattle feeding industry of the United States."

Dr. Mimms pointed out that though the clinic open six days a week, the clinic keeps two veterinarians on call 24 hours a day, seven days a week. And the clinical work is as varied as their animals...cats, dogs, Bald Eagles, hawks, Enmus, pot-bellied pigs and a number of exotic birds, such as parrots.

"A lot of people will bring injured birds or animals into the clinic, then we take it from there, such as treating them and then notifying the game authorities," said Dr. Mimms. "We've also treated Zebras."

In addition to the outdoor hospital pens, the clinic maintains indoor stalls designed especially for the care of horses. Its operating room is equipped with padded doors and walls for surgical work on large animals, with a hydraulically-operated operating table centered in the room.

The clinic has a big consignment of youth club stock and make "house calls" to a number of outlying farms and ranches, 50 miles and more. The clinic staff handles extensive reproductive problems in both, large and small animals. They also handle embryo transfers and do considerable testing for a number of the leading drug companies.

"On an average day, we won't walk out of here before 7 or 8 o'clock at night," said Dr. Mimms, in relating to their run of business. "At one point last September, we had 26 horses in here at one time. We'll average around 10 horses here at all times."

Born and reared at Lazbuddie, Dr. Mimms graduated from Lazbuddie High School in 1977 and earned a degree from Lubbock Christian College in 1981. He received his D.V.M. from Texas A&M University in 1985.

Following graduation from A&M, Dr. Mimms joined a group practice at Hamilton, Tx. The son of Dalton and Beulah Mimms, who are ranchers near Lazbuddie, Dr. Mimms joined the Hereford Veterinary Clinic in November of 1988.

Dr. Clark, the daughter of Merle and Wendel Clark of Hereford, graduated from Hereford High School in 1979 and earned her D.V.M. from Texas A&M University in 1986. She spent a year in a small-animal practice in Amarillo and two years in the Dallas-Fort Worth area before returning to Hereford in February of 1989 to join the Hereford Veterinary Clinic.

While Dr. Lewis and Dr. Mimms cater to the large animal practice, Dr. Clark specializes in small-animal practice. And by the sheer nature of the profession, the work takes her to the very doorsteps of the Hereford community. But in addition to day-to-day service in the pet world, she frequently finds many exotic and wild game birds and animals on the examination table. At the present time, she is nursing an injured hawk which was found lame by a truck driver a couple of miles west of Hereford. She has also treated Enmus, parrots, Bald Eagles and wild rabbits and a Bengal Tiger along with scores of exotic pets.

Dr. Clark noted that bedside manners in the veterinarian profession is just as important as in people practice--"People's pets are extremely important to their daily walk of life in most cases so we take great care in being as gentle and kind as possible to the ailing pets as one would with human patients in a regular hospital," said Dr. Clark. "I really believe that veterinarian people are driven by their love and interests for animals" limited to consulting work among commercial feedyards.

Dr. Aaron Hutto, owner and operator of Hutto Veterinary Clinic located on the north edge of U.S. 385, primarily treats mostly small animals at his northside clinic, with his outside practice

"I used to do a lot of what we sometimes call 'fire engine' work where you go directly to the farms or ranches to treat a sick animal," said Dr. Hutto. "But as times changed, we changed. Most of this region is now geared to the commercial cattle feeding industry and most of the veterinarian work in this field is related to management, rather than direct treatment."

At the clinic, Dr. Hutto is assisted by Donna Manion who also doubles as receptionist, with Kathy Danley as office manager.

Dr. Hutto said his weekly run will average between 150 to 200 animals, mostly being household pets. But then again, once in a great while here comes such animals as lions, black bears and buffalo--"We have some local wild animals in captivity which are required by law to be examined every four months, so we do a little of this exotic work along with our regular run of pets."

Using the veterinarian clinics as sort of a barometer, pet bird business in Hereford is big business, with one or two commercial producers of canaries and parakeets. The treatment of pot-bellied pigs have also become a part of his veterinary program.

Dr. Hutto pointed out how the veterinarian profession continuously monitors the outbreak of new diseases and discovery of new treatments for old diseases.

"We now have vaccine and treatment for diseases that we had not even heard of when I was in vet school," said Dr. Hutto. "There's a constant change in animal health care...you can be left behind if you don't stay abreast of every change."

He noted that plans are now under way to attempt to standardize the treatment of feedyard cattle but at this point in time, mass treatment of feeder cattle is conducted on an individual basis from yard-to-yard--"I can see that at some point down the road, we will have standardized treatment of large volume of animals but we're not there yet."

At the present time, cost of health care may vary from around seven bucks per head on the robust heavy yearlings to at least $35 per head on some of the lightweights coming in under heavy stress.

Dr. Hutto showed how the modern veterinarian profession is becoming more and more specialized such as livestock consulting that involves much health management and very little direct administering of medicinal products, small animal treatment and large animal treatment. Thus, a few years ago, Dr. Hutto elected to lean more to small animal work rather than the large--"After being kicked around by horses for several years, I decided to go the other route." He now manages about 60,000 feedyard cattle on a consulting basis. At one point in time, he handled a number of swine and dairy operations.

The son of S.R. and Oneida Hutto, Dr. Hutto was born and reared at Dimmitt graduating from Dimmitt High School in 1962. He received a D.V.M. from Texas A&M University in 1969 and immediately went to work for the Capital Cattle Co. in Austin, a company now billed as the oldest livestock ordering buying company in the state. At that time, Capital was owned by Diamond A Cattle Co. of Roswell, N.M., whose head honcho was Robert O. Anderson, reportedly at one time being the largest individual landowner in the United States.

The following year, Hutto returned to the Hereford area to hire on with Hank Winter over at Cattle Town Feedyard, and later moved to the Easley's Circle 3 Feedyard before opening up his veterinarian practice in Hereford in 1971. His first clinic was a small two-room building on 1st Street near downtown Hereford. He moved to the present location on U.S. 385 in 1972 when he bought the Dr. Gene Cope Veterinary Clinic and Hospital.

The Hutto clinic is designed primarily for the treatment of small animals, with one sick ward equipped with holding cages from the floor to the ceiling. The operating room is not unlike that found in many hospitals--white-coated tables with massive overhead lighting systems and small glass shelves filling most of the room--every inch being spotlessly clean. There's a number of outdoor hospital pens but they're not used much anymore.

Another Hereford veterinarian who has had a longtime practice in this Cattle Capital is Dr. Cliff A. Skiles, Jr., D.V.M., whose offices are at 1506 W. Park. Dr. Skiles was out of town on business and could not be reached for comment.

previously announced civilian death toll of 428.

Iraqi officials said the allied bombs and missiles raining down on Baghdad overnight smashed a hospital, bridge, communications center and homes. Iraqi officials said two surface-to-air rockets landed near a bus station, destroying two movie theaters and about 200 shops. "Whether by mistake or deliberately, we don't like it, we could have been killed," Baghdad resident Ya'kub Abonna told AP correspondent Salah Nasrawi.

U.S. officials have repeatedly said the air attacks are targeting military and strategic sites. Military officials say efforts have been made to avoid civilian casualties.

The USS Missouri was also in action overnight, firing its 16-inch guns at targets along the Kuwaiti coast, the command said. The battleship destroyed a radar site, artillery and a surface-to-air missile position. A dug-in Iraqi military unit also was hit, but the command said it didn't know how much damage was done.

One allied air raid scored a possible hit on an Iraqi mobile Scud missile launcher, the U.S. command in Saudi Arabia said today. The launchers have been used to lob missiles at Israel and Saudi Arabia, although the attacks have tapered off in recent days.

Iran's official news agency said the roar of attacking allied planes could be heard pounding southern Iraqi cities every few minutes throughout the night and this morning. It said Iraqi air defenses apparently were silent.

The Iranian news agency said three huge explosions in the Iraqi city of Basra could be heard in the Iranian city of Khorramshahr, 25 miles away. Basra is the site of Iraq's military headquarters for the Kuwait theater.

Anticipating ground fighting to come, the allies are rushing supplies to the desert frontlines. At forward staging areas today, huge Hercules C-130 transports were arriving every 30 minutes, Air Force Capt. Scott Smith said after one such delivery.

With half a million U.S. troops on land, sea and air in the gulf, President Bush is sending his top military men to the war zone to assess the 3-week-old campaign. Defense Secretary Dick Cheney and Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, will go to the gulf later this week - their first wartime visit to the region.

Bush said the top-level visit did not signal that a ground war was about to begin. But he said he doubted air power alone would drive Saddam Hussein's armies from Kuwait.

That seemed to reflect the thinking in the field. One U.S. Air Force commander, Col. John McBroom of the 1st Tactical Fighter Wing, told reporters in Saudi Arabia a ground assault eventually would be necessary to oust Iraqi troops from Kuwait. But he said he hoped senior commanders would be patient.

"I would like to think the air war would dictate the ground war," he said. "I'd like the Army to go in and move the last soldier out instead of the last 100,000 ... I would hope we do not go in on the ground until we have almost completely obliterated him from the air."

The cornerstone of any ground offensive may well be an amphibious assault. Pentagon sources said a U.S. Marine task force is maneuvering into position after a practice seaborne attack on the southern shore of the Arabian peninsula.

The task force - made up of about 17,000 Marines - is "slowly working its way north," one Marine Corps officer said Tuesday.

Soldiers have many reminders of home

NORTHERN SAUDI ARABIA (AP) - Sgt. Gary Warsham's good luck charms include a teddy bear sent him by his 4-year-old, anointed cloth from a Baptist church and a rattlesnake tail.

1st Lt. Steven Swanson carries an American flag in his breast pocket, pictures of his girlfriend and his dog, and an airsickness bag.

Pfc. Matthias Schubert totes a Bible.

The 82nd Airborne's 2nd Brigade has to travel light, yet most of the men carry some sort of good luck charm or memento. For most it's snapshots of wives, girlfriends or family. For some, it's centerfolds.

Warsham, 28, of Fort Worth, Texas, decided to keep the rattlesnake tail as a souvenir after catching the reptile in February.

Swanson said his flag is inspirational: "When it gets really bad, really cold, and you're really dirty, it gives you strength."

And the airsickness bag? "You never know when you're going to get back on the bird," the paratrooper said.

A lot of the personal items are tucked away inside Kelvar helmets. The 82nd has shunned the floppy desert hats many units wear, choosing to keep a "go-to-war attitude" since arriving in August.

In his helmet, Maj. Hank Keirseay carries a swath of beaver pelt to keep his head warm.

Spc. Christopher Bolnar, 21, of Lexington, Ky., used to carry a pair of his girlfriend's perfumed panties. "I had to send them back," he said. "It was just too much."

He now carries centerfolds, which are banned in Saudi Arabia's Islamic society.

Spc. James Alexander, 24, of Atlanta, carried five aces of spades in his hat - the death card for Delta Company.

"I'm a killer," he said. "We're supposed to tuck them behind their ears."

Lt. Terrance Rosales, 28, of Tacoma Park, Md., carries an outfit from the child he has never seen. The baby was born Oct. 30.

Staff Sgt. David Angerhoffer, 37, of Milbank, S.D., keeps an inspirational message given him by a Vietnam veteran: "Freedom for those who fight for it has a special meaning the protected will never know."

Troops develop jargon

DALLAS (AP) - English-speaking Americans might have trouble communicating with U.S. troops serving in Operation Desert Storm.

The warriors have filled long hours in the desert sand by developing a unique form of military lingo.

Just call it "milspeak," a military mumbo jumbo right out of a Pogo comic strip. It's also known as Pentagonese, or, in other words, gobbledygook.

Targets now are referred to as "assets." They are not attacked, they are "visited." They are not blasted, they are "acquired" or "suppressed."

Casualties from the Persian Gulf War won't come home in body bags. Instead, they'll be transported in "human-remains pouches."

Even people who deal frequently with the jargon sometimes have trouble.

"All the high-tech stuff can get confusing, even to me, and I deal with it every day," says John Coleman, managing editor of Soldier of Fortune magazine and a former member of the U.S. and Rhodesian armies.

"Like a B-52G. I know what a B-52 is, of course, but what's the G model? Those kinds of things - I have to go look them up."

For example, someone missing in action is said to have "gone Elvis." "The beach," of course, refers to the desert.

Troops on the ground used to refer to Air Force pilots, somewhat derisively, as "flyboys." But in this war they are "zooimies."

There's "Scud," which refers to those insidious, often inaccurate missiles that Iraq has been lobbing into Israel and Saudi Arabia.

"Ordnance" is a standard military term for munitions, anything from a single bullet to a nuclear warhead. But now we have "incontinent ordnance."

Retirement meeting planned

The National Association of Retired Federal Employees will meet Thursday at the Hereford Senior Citizens at 1 p.m. in the Kiwanis Room.

A special program is planned. Mike McQueen of Amarillo, district representative with Texas Department of Aging, will present the program and answer questions.

All who plan to eat lunch with McQueen, NARFE officers and members, should call Senior Citizens at 364-5681 Thursday morning for lunch reservations.

Hill to speak

Hereford Flame Fellowship will meet Thursday at 7 p.m. at the Hereford Community Center.

Joan Hill of Clovis, N.M. will be guest speaker. She is employed by KJUN radio in Farwell. She was born and raised in Dallas and has been head of the teaching department with the CBN-700 Club in Dallas.

Hill and her husband pastored a church in Mesquite. She is a full time student at Eastern New Mexico University, majoring in special education.

The public is invited to attend.
