County okays map, numbers for rural roads

By KAY PECK
Staff Writer

Giving directions to remote homes in rural Deaf Smith County should be much easier thanks to a new road identification system approved Monday by county commissioners.

Commissioner Austin Rose Jr. (Precinct 2) began organizing the new system several weeks ago in preparation for an emergency 9-1-1 telephone system to be utilized throughout the entire Panhandle within the next two years. Road identification is intended to expedite the dispatching of emergency personnel to rural sites.

"The system is used so, if your house catches fire in the country, Mr. Spain (the city fire marshal) won't arrive sometime the next morning," County Judge Tom Simons said.

Fire Marshal Jay Spain was at the meeting to provide his input about the new system.

"It looks good to me. It's got to work," Spain said.

The system utilizes numbers to identify all east-west roads and letters to identify all north-south roads. County workers are in the process of placing signs at intersections. A map showing road identification was approved with Commissioner Rose assigned the task of refining and updating that map.

As new roads are built, a decimal system will be used. For example, if a road is built between County Road 1 and County Road 2, it will be identified as County Road 1.1.

Spain said the system should be able to dispatch fire and emergency workers "pretty close" to any emergency. He did mention that rural locations with several houses along one stretch of road may still need for an individual to meet and direct an ambulance to the exact location.

"A mama at home with a two-year-old who's swallowed a ping pong ball, she can't come meet you," said Commissioner John Stribling Jr. (Precinct 1).

"You're not ever going to pinpoint every emergency," Spain said.

The fire marshal indicated that the new system is still a great improvement over existing methods.

Commissioners also discussed the possibility of establishing a work crew using trusty inmates from the Deaf Smith County Jail. In a presentation to the commission District Attorney Roland Saul indicated that such a crew is not only authorized by state law but may even be encouraged.

"...the law provides that those sentenced shall be required to do manual labor," Saul wrote in a letter to commissioners.

Inmates who participate in such a work program are given two days of credit on their sentence for every day of work.

"We've used trustees on and off in Precinct 3, and I think this is an excellent program," said Commissioner Troy Don Moore.

State law would permit the use of work crews not only on county projects but for community service as well.

"Most of our charitable and non-profit organizations would qualify," Saul said.

A separate but related program was also discussed which would allow Judge Simons to sentence certain defendants to community service without any jail time. Not only would this provide labor for public projects, but it would also help lower costs of housing and administering prisoners in the county jail.

If sentenced to community service, an individual receives credit for one day of jail time for every eight hours of work.

Representatives of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce have already expressed interest in using trustee work crews for a proposed city beautification program.

The major concern expressed about utilizing convicted individuals on work crews and/or in community service was the possible liability to the county in the event that someone is injured or property is damaged. Preliminary inquiries concerning county insurance policies indicate that existing coverage would apply.

"We need to assume there's some liability and make sure we've got the coverage," Saul said.

A county septic tank order was adopted by commissioners on Monday. The lengthy order is

Colombia crackdown aids US

WASHINGTON (AP) - The recent U.S. seizures of almost 36 tons of cocaine may be the result of the Colombian drug crackdown as traffickers move the drug out of an unsafe haven, officials say.

But others say the timing of the huge busts may simply be coincidental. The drugs seized may have come to the United States through Mexico or may have been in this country before the crackdown began Aug. 18 in Colombia, they say.

"We're seizing a lot more cocaine because a lot more cocaine's coming out, because it's not safe to leave it in Colombia anymore," Transportation Secretary Samuel K. Skinner told reporters at a dock in New Orleans, where the ship Zedon Sea was taken after six tons of cocaine were seized from it in the Gulf of Mexico.

While drug traffickers used to send out cocaine in smaller lots as a security measure, they've now begun moving it out in huge shipments, Skinner said. "That's because of the pressure from the government in Colombia," he said.

The Colombian crackdown, begun one day after the assassination of a leading presidential candidate who was a critic of the drug trade, has resulted in sweeping arrests and the seizure of millions of dollars of drug traffickers' assets. One accused money-launderer has been extradited to the United States.

The traffickers vowed to wage "total war" against the government and have been blamed for at least 148 bombings that killed 10 people and wounded 165.

U.S. officials in the past two weeks seized 20 tons of cocaine from a warehouse in Los Angeles, nine tons from a house in Texas five miles from the Mexican border, six tons from a ship in the Gulf of Mexico, and 11 tons near Puerto Rico. The 20-ton seizure was the largest ever in the world, while the nine-ton bust is the second largest in U.S.

Several years ago, cocaine came into the United States primarily on private aircraft. The shipments were much smaller and the loss of any load cost the traffickers much less.

"As we became more effective in targeting that method of transit, they have changed," Drug Enforcement Administration spokesman Frank Shultz said. "These are businessmen ... We feel that they are weighing the risks and have decided they have got to move these drugs."

But there also are reasons to believe that the huge busts may have nothing to do with the situation in Colombia. For example, there is no indication how long the 20 tons of cocaine seized in Los Angeles had been in that warehouse.

Los Angeles District Attorney Ira Reiner said the group arrested in connection with that seizure had been operating the warehouse for two years.

During that time, Reiner said, authorities estimate 60 tons were processed through the warehouse in addition to the 20 tons just seized.

In Texas, Department of Public Safety spokesman Mike Cox said state officials also have no hard evidence that the huge seizure at the home in Cameron County was related to the Colombian crack-down.

UWDSC posts big weekly jump

Contributions and pledges to the United Way of Deaf Smith County campaign amounted to $48,676 or 38.9 percent of the $125,000 goal, it was announced Monday by campaign chairman Dr. Trow Mims at the weekly report meeting.

The 1990 campaign drive took its biggest weekly jump with more than $15,000 in contributions and pledges reported this past week. The total was at about 26 percent of the goal last week.

Joining the honor roll of firms with 100 percent "fair share" giving last week were Edwards Pharmacy, Panta Caga, Deaf Smith Electric Cooperative, and Little's.

Wayne Amstutz, UWDSC executive director, reported that contacts had been completed with about 25 percent of business firms, while the total number of contact cards returned stood at about 14 percent.

There are 10 divisions of volunteer workers in the campaign. The divisions, current total and (percentage of goals) are: Major $10,683 (24); Metro $9,344 (57); Pacesetter $8,010 (36); Golden Age $6,093 (61); Special $5,323 (82); Corporate Gifts $2,380 (40); Agriculture $2,285 (46); Whiteface East $2,191 (73); Professional $1,565 (20); Whiteface West $780 (26).

Boyd Foster, UW president, reminded campaign workers that only three weeks remain in the scheduled drive. The $125,000 goal is to help fund 12 worthwhile community agencies for next year.

Gamez wins in football contest

Melinda Gamez of Hereford missed just five games and was the winner in last week's Hereford Brand football contest.

Games will win $25 in Hereford Bucks for her efforts. Hereford Bucks can be spent just like cash in any Hereford business.

Placing second was Andy Scott of Hereford, missing just six games and coming closest on the Hereford-Pampa tiebreaker. Scott wins $15 in Hereford Bucks.

Third place went to Cory Schumacher of Hereford, missing just six but a little further away on the tiebreaker. Cory will win $10 in Hereford Bucks. Larry Watts also missed just six games, and 10 contestants missed only seven games.

This week's contest games are in today's Brand.

Leipzig allows protest, dialogue

BERLIN (AP) - In an unprecedented move, Leipzig officials promised to push for dialogue between the opposition and Communist leaders and allowed 70,000 protesters to jam the city center in East Germany's largest protest in decades.

The official tolerance of Monday's peaceful march for an end to authoritarian rule contrasted sharply with the violence police used in breaking up similar demonstrations over the weekend in six East German cities.

Hundreds of people had been arrested in East Berlin, Leipzig, Dresden and other cities by club-swinging police. West German television said many have already been sentenced to jail terms of up to six months.

Leipzig, an industrial city of 500,000, has been the scene of several clashes in recent weeks as police moved to crush demonstrations stirred in part by an exodus of disillusioned citizens to the West.

After two nights of clashes in East Berlin, many feared police would also use violence to break up the Leipzig demonstration.

But beforehand, officials of the Leipzig Communist Party promised to push for a free exchange of ideas between citizens and the government, Lutheran sources said.

Police and paramilitary troops watched the Leipzig march, but did not intervene. Christoph Wonneberger, pastor for the Lukas Lutheran church in Leipzig, said he was surprised by the restraint.

He told West Germany's ZDF television network by telephone that some demonstrators even "began conversations with paramilitary troops" when the crowd was dispersing.

He said he considered the police restraint "a very hopeful sign."

The country's Communist leaders, however, have given no indication they are about to soften their tough stance against the reforms sweeping such East bloc allies as Hungary, Poland and the Soviet Union.

The aging leadership in East Berlin has repeatedly rejected any moves toward greater democracy, steering a conservative, orthodox Communist course.

In the capital on Monday night, about 2,000 demonstrators gathered in front of a church in another pro-democracy vigil. Witnesses said the crowd dispersed and there were no reported incidents. West German radio also reported peaceful demonstrations Monday in Dresden, Plauen and Halle.

Monday's demonstrations were far different from the weekend marches across the country of 16.6 million people, when police marched into crowds of demonstrators and hit, chased and arrested hundreds.

Protesters paraded through Leipzig on Monday shouting, "We Need Freedom," "Democracy," and "No Violence," witnesses said on condition of anonymity.

The march was the largest single protest in East Germany since a 1953 workers uprising was put down by Soviet tanks.

Earlier Monday, Chancellor Helmut Kohl of West Germany denounced the East German government as "rigidly authoritarian" and said relations with East Berlin "cannot prosper" under present conditions.

Also, 18 Lutheran leaders issued an appeal in East Berlin calling on the government to implement wide-ranging democratic reforms and urging all sides to refrain from violence.

Meanwhile, one of East Germany's star athletes, two-time Olympic skating champion Katarina Witt, said the East German government must think about the causes for the exodus of its people to the West.

She also urged considering changes at home.

At least 50,000 East Germans have fled West in recent months. The exodus, along with the weekend clashes across the country, deeply embarrassed the government on its two-day 40th anniversary festivities, which were attended by Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Gorbachev hinted in statements during and after the ceremonies that he favors for East Germany the types of reforms he is overseeing in the Soviet Union.

Metromedia head leads Forbes' list

NEW YORK (AP) - Charity began at home for Wal-Mart stores founder Sam Walton, who ended a four-year reign as Forbes magazine's richest American by sharing his $9 billion fortune with his four children.

Metromedia Co. Chairman John Werner Kluge, with an estimated net worth of $5.2 billion, climbed into first place on Forbes' annual list of the nation's 400 wealthiest people.

The prototypical member of Forbes' ultrarich was a 63-year-old male with a net worth of $672 million last year, more than the gross national product of Lesotho, Forbes said.

The compilation contains 346 men and 54 women. Of those, 159 inherited their wealth. Eight states lack a resident on the list.

Among alma mater represented, Yale educated 22 of the richest, Harvard 17 and the University of Pennsylvania 12; the 45 with master's degrees in business had an average net worth of $895 million, while the 10 high-school dropouts had an average of $854 million.

Overall, Forbes' richest are worth an estimated total of about $269 billion.

molded to meet standards set by the state legislature and will allow the county to designate certified individuals as inspectors.

New legislation makes it mandatory that any new septic tank or any existing system which receives substantial repair must be inspected and certified. Existing systems are "grandfathered" in and do not require inspection.

Counties across the state were given the option of selecting local inspectors or allowing state inspectors to certify septic tanks. If inspected by the state, the county is charged for the inspection and the county then charges the septic tank's owner.

"That method (local inspectors) is certainly cheaper than having the state inspect it," Judge Simons said.

Local individuals who may wish to provide septic tank inspection must attend a one-week state school in order to become certified. After being certified, they may be appointed as an inspector by county officials. Commissioners hope to provide a savings to county property owners by appointing local inspectors.

Other business discussed by commissioners included the approval of a salary schedule for county employees for the 1989-1990 fiscal year.

A list of election judges and alternates for polling locations across the county was also approved by commissioners.

A contract with the Texas Department of Human Services for child welfare was approved by commissioners. They also re-appointed Dr. Tim Revell as Deaf Smith County Health Officer.

Rose gives history of war bond at meeting

Helen Rose gave the history of the purchasing of a war bond by Bay View Study Club in 1944 when the group met Thursday afternoon in the home of Helen Langley.

Rose explained that the bond has accrued all the interest it will, since after 40 years no more interest is paid. She gave a report of the club's involvement during World War II stating that the club had a war service committee when they had a drive for Russian Relief. Clothing and supplies were taken to Plainview. Also, the club hosted the U.S.O. downtown.

The club furnished cookies, cokes and coffee for troop trains coming through town. Mrs. Knox Kinard made a motion that the club purchase a war bond and Mrs. Tom Boyd purchased it. Bay View was alive and attune to the war effort.

The meeting was called to order by Beth Burran, president, after which the club collect was read by the members.

The club voted to sponsor a Camp Fire group again this year by paying national dues of the leader, assistant and the sponsoring committee as well. The group also voted to donate $10 to help with expenses of the leader.

The president asked for a report of the historical committee. Ruth McBride asked that the club members give her names of persons of note in the community for tape interviews. The group expressed appreciation to Rose for the yearbooks and approved the amount of $25 to be paid for copy and cutting expense.

The next meeting will be at the Panhandle Plains Historical Museum where the Rotary Club is sponsoring a tour of western art. The group will then go to the Museum's Conservation Center. Host will be Michael Grauer, who is the art director and has been to Hereford to give Bay View programs on his work at the museum.

Maragaret Bell was accepted as a new member of Bay View.

The meeting was adjourned after refreshments were served to Virginia Garner, Kathryn Ruga, Lois Gilliland, Mary Morrow, Marye Fraser, Burran, and Ruth McBride.

Unique hats modeled

During the recent salad supper and business meeting attended by members of the Women's Division and their guests, those present were asked to wear hats. Two of the more interesting hats exhibited were worn by Leatrus Clark, at left, and Kim Buckley. Buckley's hat consisted of a fresh pumpkin dressed in a top hat and bow tie. Examining the creations was guest speaker, Reta Welch of Dimmitt, who presented the program entitled "Who's Under Your Hat?". Marilyn Culpepper was announced as next year's president of the Women's Division and new directors, who will serve two-year terms were introduced. At the January 1990 business meeting, new Women's Division officers will be elected.

Dumas drops Herd spikers, 15-12, 15-8; loss throws District 1-4A race into tie

The Dumas Demonettes exacted a measure of revenge Saturday from the Hereford Whitefaces, dumping the Herd, 15-12, 15-8, before a crowd of about 600 at the HHS Gym to gain a tie for first place in the District 1-4A volleyball race. The loss leaves the Herd with a 15-4 mark on the season, with the last two losses coming to Dumas, and a 6-1 district record.

Dumas also won the junior varsity match, 15-9, 15-9. The Herd started out quickly in the first game of the match, jumping to a 5-1 lead on Nikki Self's and Libby Kosub's first turns at serve.

Shantel Cornelius moved the Herd to a 7-3 lead on her service before Dumas came back to tie at 7-7.

The teams stayed even through 9-9 when Cornelius served three more points, including a pair of aces to put the Herd up, 12-9.

Demonette Trisha Perry closed the gap to 12-10 before Brandy Baugh won the game with five straight service points despite time outs by Hereford at 13-12 and game point.

The defending state champs kept the momentum into the second game, holding a 2-0 lead through nine changes of serve that included eight straight side outs.

Perry ran off a string of seven consecutive points for Dumas and Baugh made the score 10-0 before the Herd finally got on the board.

Hereford went on an 8-3 run, scoring two points each on serves by Kosub, Kelli Thames, Self and Cornelius, but the margin was too large for the Herd to come back all the way.

Lisa Kreutziger served the final two points of the match, getting match point when a Karissa Lohse spike found the floor.

Cornelius led the Herd with seven service points, including four aces, while Self added six points with an ace. Kosub served for five points in the match and Thames added two.

Jill West led in kills at five with Kosub and Cornelius having four each. Poppy Richardson and Cande Robbins added two each while Jessica Dearing had one.

Robbins contributed 12 service receptions passed to the setter. Kosub was next with 10 and Cornelius and Richardson each had seven.

"We are undoubtedly disappointed in the outcome of this match," Coach Brenda Reeh said of the match, "but we still have lots of volleyball left to play this season."

"We put so much work and heart into playing Dumas. When things don't go as we planned, it stings pretty badly."

Reeh added that the Whitefaces can't afford to dwell on the loss.

"We have to take one match at a time," she said "and win each one so we can have another shot at Dumas for the district championship. If we spend time feeling bad about Dumas we won't strengthen our weak areas."

Reeh said the Herd needs more consistent defensive play in order to improve.

"Our service receive and coverage has to improve," she said. "Our blocking hurt us a little as well. We've just got to take this loss, learn from it and become a better team."

Herd JV vs. Dumas JV

The Whiteface junior varsity dropped its first district match of the season as Dumas took a 15-9, 15-9 win to avenge its one defeat in league play.

The Herd was led by Lori Sanders, with five points on serve, and Jayme Moore, who had four service points and an ace.

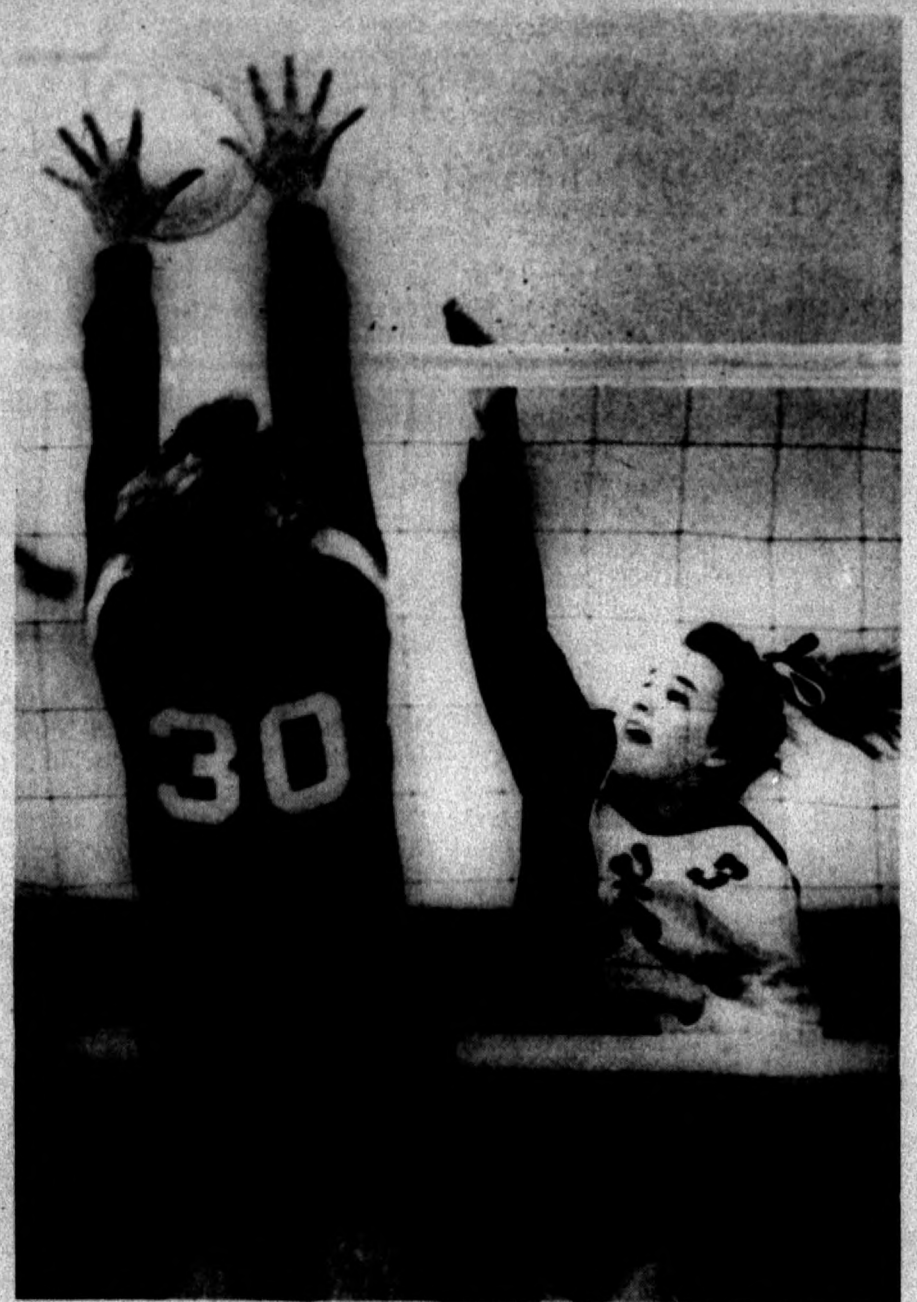

"This was a disappointing loss," junior varsity coach Lynn Gilbreath said. "We simply made more mistakes than Dumas."

When you play a team like Dumas, it's always the team with the fewest errors that wins."

Gilbreath said the JV came out playing tentatively in the match.

"We were tight and played not to lose rather than to win."

"We can't let this loss get us down. We're going to have to bounce back and keep improving."

Against Perryton, Ramirez, Diedra Whipple and Jana Horton each had seven service points.

Ramirez added seven more against Pampa while Leslie Tatarevich had six and Whipple and Raquel Vallejo each had five.

The HJH eighth graders bested Perryton, 15-0, 5-9, to open the tourney before fallin to Dumas, 17-15, 15-12, to finish third.

Kara Sandoval led with 11 service points against Perryton while Michelle Brock added four points. Misty Dudley served for nine points and Heather Klueskens added five in the Dumas match.

The freshman team also claimed third place, beating Randall, 15-2, 15-12, before losing to Dumas, 15-7, 15-3.

The seventh and eighth grade teams also competed at the Borger Junior High Tournament on Sept. 30, with both teams taking third place.

The seventh grade beat Perryton, 15-8, 15-9, with Bryant serving for seven points and Ramirez for six in the first round. The HJH team then fell to Dumas, 16-14, 15-13. Bryant led with seven service points and Whipple had six.

In the eighth grade division, Hereford opened with a 16-14, 15-6 win over Perryton, being led by Sandoval with seven points on serve and Jamie Simpson with five. Dumas stopped the eighth grade in the second round, 15-12, 15-8. Simpson led with seven points and Dudley added three.

The HJH and freshman teams return to action Monday when they host Pampa at the HJH Gym. Matches begin at 5 p.m.

Harriers turn in top times at Lubbock

Members of the Hereford Whiteface cross country teams turned in some personal-best performances Saturday at the Lubbock Invitational Meet at Mae Simmons Park.

In the girl's varsity race, Hereford placed seventh out of 24 teams. The 219 points was the lowest score of the six Class 4A schools at the meet.

Teresa Castillo led the Herd, finishing the two-mile course in 13:03 for 24th place. Lisa Zepeda was the next Hereford runner to cross the line, placing 31st in 13:12. Sally Garza claimed 42nd place in 13:27 followed by Denise Davila (57th place in 13:42.5), Veronica Hernandez (70th, 13:57), Rachel Alaniz (87th, 14:21) and Aracely Nava (125th, 15:11).

Coach Martha Emerson was pleased with the finish, saying, "The top five runners ran only 54 seconds apart, but we still need to get closer and have all seven runners at least that close together."

In the girls' junior varsity race, Hereford placed fifth in the team standings. Miguerva Salazar led the way, finishing ninth in 14:04, followed by Juanita Lucio (15th, 14:14), Velma Garcia (41st, 14:46), Mandi Tijerina (44th, 14:48) and Hope Flores (98th, 15:47).

Six Hereford Junior High runners also competed in the JV division as individuals. Belinda Murillo (79th, 15:29) was the first HJH runner to finish, followed by Rosie Davila (82nd, 15:33), Rita Soto (83rd, 15:34), Edna Valdez (88th, 15:38) Fidelia Hernandez (106th, 15:54) and Rachel Martinez (137th, 16:42).

"We had 18 girls compete for Hereford," Emerson said. "Fourteen ran personal-best times of the year and the other four were close to their best."

In the boys' varsity race, Hereford finished 13th of 26 teams with 320 points, second behind Randall among 4A schools.

Tim Stagner finished 11th in 16:32 to pace the Herd, followed by Henry Ruiz (48th, 17:18), Raul Dominguez (79th, 17:46), Juan Martinez (85th, 17:57), Mike Lopez (117th, 18:33), Jerry Gallagos (122nd, 18:39) and Blas Cantu (143rd, 19:15).

"This was a great race for Tim in this competition," Emerson said of Stagner's effort. "This is about 40 seconds faster than he has run on the Olympic qualifying course at Mae Simmons Park."

The boys' junior varsity placed 10th of 15 teams with 240 points. Armando Garza was the lead runner for the Herd, covering the three-mile course in 18:25 for 25th place. He was followed by Chris Hart (41st, 19:15), Chancy Bainum (68th, 20:07), Gary Shelton (97th, 20:37) and Eric Davis (106th, 21:09). The harriers' next meet will be Saturday at Dumas. The Herd will run in one other meet, Oct. 21 at Dalhart, before the district meet on Oct. 28 at Lubbock.

NFL owners to try again Herd netters down Borger Bulldogs

GRAPEVINE (AP) - Pete Rozelle thinks the three-month deadlock that has left him a hostage of a factional fight among the NFL owners could end this week.

Others aren't as optimistic. As the owners begin meetings today aimed at finding a successor to Rozelle, the best bet is that all they'll be able to do is work out some of the differences that have plagued them since July 6. It was then that 11 dissidents blocked the election of Jim Finks, president of the New Orleans Saints.

"I think we can get it done," Rozelle said. "At least I hope so." Hope seems more the operative word as the owners prepare to meet in a high security atmosphere. On Monday, they took the unprecedented step of having the airport hotel at which they are meeting install a wall to keep prying eyes away even from the hallway outside the meeting rooms.

"I don't know if you're going to keep people hog-tied in there for a couple of days," said Edward De Bartolo Jr. of the San Francisco 49ers, one of those who blocked Finks' election in July. "After two full days, if there isn't a breakthrough, then there will be people who won't stick around."

Finks remains a contender and appears to have enough supporters to block the election of anyone else.

In fact, he may have even gained a vote if Bud Adams of Houston, who wasn't at the July 6 meeting when the first vote was taken, falls into his corner. Finks' supporters are also working on Robert Irsay of Indianapolis and Georgia Frontiere of the Rams. Parlaying those three with the 16 votes he received in July would give Finks enough for election.

The 11 dissidents planned to caucus before today's meeting in an effort to stay solid. Many in the group are hoping to elect someone who views the game from the outside, such as baseball got when it elected Peter Ueberroth as commissioner.

If that view carries the day and the dissidents can block Finks' election, it would perhaps open the way for Paul Tagliabue, the NFL's Washington lawyer, to get the job as a compromise candidate - perhaps as early as next week. The irony is that Tagliabue is more an insider than Finks, having worked closely with the league office and the owners while Finks concerned himself with teams in Minnesota, Chicago and New Orleans.

"I like Paul Tagliabue," said Alex Spanos of San Diego, who voted for Finks the first time and plans to vote for him again.

"I think the perfect thing would be a Finks-Tagliabue ticket with Jim getting a 5-year contract with the understanding that Paul would be his successor."

When Rozelle announced his resignation last March 22, he expressed a hope that a new commissioner would be in place by the beginning of the season.

But all that did was open the rift that Rozelle's diplomatic skills had previously kept from surfacing between the NFL's old-guard owners and the newer ones.

While the older teams like the Chicago Bears, Pittsburgh Steelers, New York Giants, Kansas City Chiefs and Cleveland Browns have little debt, the newer owners - like Victor Kiam of New England, Jerry Jones of Dallas, Norman Braman of Philadelphia and Kenneth Behring of Seattle - paid about $100 million for their teams and have mortgages to pay off.

Braman, Kiam, and Hugh Culverhouse Jr. of Tampa Bay seem to have become the leaders of a group that wants to keep Finks out of the job at any cost. Their argument: rather than a "football man" like Finks, they prefer someone with experience in business or marketing.

But even though the second search committee contained two of the 11 non-Finks votes - Behring and Minnesota president Mike Lynn - only one of the four finalists it will recommend to the owners fits into the business-marketing category. He is J. Patrick Barrett, the New York State Republican chairman, who is currently chairman and chief executive officer of CarPat Inc. and has wide business experience.

Barrett's chances appear slim, as do those of Willie Davis, the former Green Bay defensive end who became a successful business executive. Davis may be slated for the post of deputy commissioner.

Finks, Tagliabue and Davis were finalists in the selections conducted by the original search committee of six "old guard" owners - the 62-year-old Finks, a former player, assistant coach and general manager of the Minnesota Vikings and Chicago Bears; the 48-year-old Tagliabue, and Davis, a member of the Hall of Fame.

Robert Mulcahy, chairman of the New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority, was among the candidates recommended by the second search committee. He withdrew his name from consideration Saturday morning, saying he didn't want to be involved in all the intrigue. Mulcahy was also a finalist of the first committee.

Secret ballots will be cast after the owners interview the candidates. Today's session was expected to run late, with an hour set aside for each interview.

The Hereford Whiteface tennis team continued its strangle-hold on the District 1-4A lead Saturday with a 14-4 win at Borger. The win moves the Herd to 8-1 on the season and 5-0 in district play.

"I was pleased with the way things went for us," Coach Luis Zavala said. "The boys won, 5-4, and the girls won all of their matches."

The sweep gave the Hereford girls a 53-1 record over the last six matches. Hereford also swept eight extra matches played by team alternates.

Of the 22 total matches (14 in competition, eight alternate) won by the Herd, 20 were taken in straight sets.

Hereford will finish the fall season with home matches on Saturday, against Dunbar, and on Tuesday, against Canyon, before visiting Levelland on Oct. 21.

Hogan gives tour gift

FORT WORTH (AP) - Ben Hogan isn't just lending his name and his company's money to a new proving ground professional golf tour. He also plans to attend some of the events.

"I'll be going to some of the tournaments, not to play, of course," Hogan said. "I just want to be there. I want to give something to golf."

Which is the reason his company announced Monday it will spend $15 million over the next three years for The Ben Hogan Tour. Hogan said he has an obligation to the game.

"It's very important for me to repay my dues," Hogan said. "I've enjoyed every second I've spent in the game. I'd like to be re-born so I could start on this tour myself."

PGA Tour commissioner Deane Beman and Hogan, a golfing Hall of Famer, announced a $3 million, 30-event series of tournaments that will begin in January. The Ben Hogan Co. will provide $5 million per year for prize money to the PGA of America to sponsor the series of 100,000 golf tournaments.

"I wish there had been a similar opportunity when I was starting out. Maybe my career would have gotten off to a faster start," Hogan said. "This Tour presents an economical option for many fine American players who otherwise would have to travel abroad for professional competitive experience."

A field of 132 players will compete in the 54-hole events.

The finals of the 1989 Ben Hogan Tour qualifying tournament will be held Jan. 1-5, 1990, at the Grenelefe Resort (West Course) in Haines City, Fla. Tour membership will be awarded the low 35 scores after 72 holes with the top 25 available players from this group eligible to play each week.

Qualifiers will include 80 players following the top 50 finishers in the annual PGA Tour qualifying tournament. The top 50 available players from this group of 80 will be eligible to play each week, bringing to 75 the number of exempt players from these two qualifying tournaments.

Other exemptions will go to sponsors, Monday qualifying at the tournament site, and regular tour players.

"This is an important day for golf," Beman said. "It's a great concept for young golfers who so badly need competition."

The tournaments are spaced with weeks off so the players can drive from site to site.

"We developed quite a camaraderie driving from tournament to tournament back in the old days," Hogan said. "I enjoyed it. We had three fellas traveling together. I remember dining at one of those all-you-can-eat cafeterias. It was 35 cents and I'm afraid we put that gentleman out of business. He closed shortly after the tournament was over."

Tech's Dykes prefers hard work

LUBBOCK (AP) - Coach Spike Dykes doesn't think the Texas Tech football team needs a miracle to beat seventh-ranked Arkansas at the Red Raiders' Homecoming on Saturday.

Good, old-fashioned hard work will do, he said Monday, though he acknowledged a little luck helped secure last week's 27-24 victory over Texas A&M in Lubbock.

Jamie Gill threw a pair of fourth-quarter touchdown passes, including the game-winning 35-yard touchdown pass to Travis Price with 50 seconds left. A few plays earlier, James Gray gained three yards on a fourth-and-two to keep the drive alive.

The Aggies were ranked 19th at the time. It was Tech's second upset of a Top 20 team this year: the Red Raiders opened the season with a 24-14 triumph over Arizona, which was ranked 20th at the time.

"We're used to playing teams in the Top 20 and now we got one in the Top 10, so that'll be even more fun," Dykes said. "It's a lot of fun to play good teams, it really is."

Aided by Houston's ineligibility, Arkansas (4-0 overall and 1-0 in the Southwest Conference) is striving for a second consecutive appearance in the Cotton Bowl. The Tech game will be the Razorbacks' first real test: their victories have come against Tulsa, Mississippi, Texas-El Paso and Texas Christian.

Texas Tech's sole loss en route to a 4-1 record was to Baylor in Waco.

Dykes prefers not to dwell on Tech's 10-game losing streak against Arkansas at home, or the 31-0 drubbing in Fayetteville last year. The last time the Raiders beat the Razorbacks in Jones Stadium was Nov. 19, 1966, behind quarterback John Scovell.

Sports Illustrated dubbed the 21-16 outcome "the Upset of the Decade," and it knocked Arkansas out of the Cotton Bowl.

This season, Tech is trying to abandon its shopworn spoiler role and emerge as a Cotton Bowl contender. An upset of Arkansas, coupled with the victory over A&M, would do that.

The Red Raiders just need to play hard to beat Arkansas, Dykes said.

"So many times you go into these games playing a Top 10 team in the nation and you feel like you got to have a miracle to win," he said. "And maybe we do. But we're dumb enough to think that we've got a good chance."

"Dracula" performances scheduled

Theatre-goers who enjoy a quick-fire procession of super-quality thrills, surprises, shudders and sensations cannot afford to miss seeing the mystery vampire play Dracula, opening Friday, Oct. 27, at The Amarillo Little Theatre.

Other thrillers are said to be bedtime stories compared to this narrative of the supernatural. Audiences will find the two hours of horror, surprises and thrills, not only to be blood-curdling but most entertaining as well - it will be the jolliest kind of blood-curdler imaginable.

Make your reservations early by calling 355-9991 between 9 - 4 p.m. Productions dates will be Oct. 27 (7:30 p.m.), Oct. 28, Oct. 31, and Nov. 3-4. A special midnight show will be held on Saturday the 28th, and other times will be 8 p.m. Tickets are $10 for adults and $6 for students and senior citizens.

A gala, appropriately called a "dancuerade" will take place Friday evening immediately after the Dracula performance. KLS radio station will provide the music and light show, there will be lots of food, witches brew, a cash bar and a good time for all! Price for the gala will be $15 a person. Those coming in costume for the midnight show will be eligible for lots of prizes.

Accent on Health

Heart disease and cancer claimed record numbers of Texans during 1988, according to just-released figures from the Bureau of Vital Statistics of the Texas Department of Health.

Heart disease was the leading killer, claiming 40,803, which was an increase of 766 deaths over the 40,037 Texans who died in 1987. Cancer killed 25,880 residents, an increase of 553 deaths over the 1987 total of 25,327. Cerebrovascular disease claimed 8,166 lives, while the state's fourth leading cause of death was accidents, claiming 6,507.

Dr. Robert Bernstein, Texas Commissioner of Health, said these four killers were responsible for 66 percent of 1988's total of 122,731 deaths in the state.

The increase in total deaths from the last reporting period was 2,997, or 2.5 percent. The death rate of 7.1 per 1,000 population was based on an estimated 17.3 million residents in Texas as of July 1, 1988.

Completing the top 10 list of death causes were chronic bronchitis, emphysema, asthma and allied conditions, 4,085; pneumonia and influenza, 3,993; suicide, 2,255; homicide, 2,088; diabetes, 2,056; and septicemia, 1,492.

Together, the 10 leading causes of death accounted for almost 80 percent of all deaths of Texas residents last year. The remaining 25,406 deaths were attributed to other causes.

"The risk of death, especially from heart disease and cancer, could be dramatically reduced through good health habits," Dr. Bernstein said. "People at any age can benefit from lifestyle changes. Young people should be aware that most heart disease in older people is the result of many years of bad habits."

Dr. Bernstein stressed that smoking is the single most preventable cause of heart disease and cancer.

He said that signs of developing heart problems - diabetes, high blood pressure and tendencies toward obesity - usually can be controlled with the help of a physician. In addition, high blood cholesterol levels and lack of exercise can be corrected by individuals.

Ways to prevent cancer include: having regular checkups, maintaining a proper diet, using a sun screen and protective clothing in the sun, and limiting exposure to chemicals and other cancer-causing substances.

River City Players production slated

Curtains open Oct. 19 on Canadian River City Players production of "The Solid Gold Cadillac". The show is scheduled to run Oct. 19 and Oct. 21. Showtime begins at 8 p.m. in the Canadian Middle School auditorium. On Sunday, Oct. 22 a 4 p.m. matinee will conclude Canadian's Fall Foliage Tour.

The River City Players are affiliated with the River Valley Pioneer Museum. Members of the company are businessmen and businesswomen, doctors, teachers, laborers, and community leaders in the Canadian area. According to Pam Spencer, director of the museum, "the group was formed in 1988 to provide a means of bringing cultural awareness to the community in an entertaining fashion." Proceeds from the River City Players' production are used by the Museum for ongoing operating expenses and the continuing efforts of the theatre group. "The Solid Gold Cadillac" was written by George S. Kaufman and Howard Tuckman in the early 50's and was first produced in New York in 1954. The story centers around the Board of Directors of a large corporation and a charming little lady, a minor stockholder, who asks all the wrong questions. The comedy utilizes a diversity of technical variations including video segments.

Tickets are on sale at Canadian banks, the Chamber of Commerce office, and the River Valley Pioneer Museum. Tickets may be purchased at the door prior to each of the performances. Prices are set at $6 for adults and $4 for students.

Anglican clergyman William Archibald Spooner was born in London in 1844. Spooner, who became Warden of New College, Oxford, gained a reputation for transposing words or parts of words - errors that became known as "spoonerisms." Spooner died in 1930, but spoonerisms - such as the one Harry von Zell committed on radio when he introduced the 31st president of the United States as "Hoobert Heever" - live on.

Tasting turns profit

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - Four women in white lab coats seat themselves in a row of cubicles. Before each is a tray with a disposable cup, a glass of water, a paper graph and six amber bottles of rancid milk.

They take a swig from each bottle and swish it inside their mouths. They grimace, spit into the disposable cups and rinse their mouths with water. They scribble. Then on to the next amber bottle.

When the tasting and scribbling are done, each shoves her tray through a metal slot in the cubicle.

Tester No. 1 wipes her mouth and says, "Let me see if I can find a candy bar somewhere." They all laugh.

The women are graduate students at the University of Tennessee's Department of Food Technology and Science, and they're putting their persnickety palates to work at the department's Sensory Laboratory, in the building's basement.

These days the testers are trying to find out exactly how long it takes milk to get rancid and to distinguish between degrees of rancidity. Also, they are developing exact, descriptive words that they hope will become standard language for dairy producers and grocery stores or anyone else dealing with milk.

The lab has also tested such experimental treats as sweet potato yogurt, shrimp-flavored snack chips, mutton patties with various animal fats, and microwave-baked cakes.

The information is published in scientific magazines such as the Journal of Food Science and the Journal of Food Quality. Sometimes food companies themselves hire the lab and its testers to find out how omission or substitution of certain ingredients affects their products, whether preservatives affect flavor or whether people like the food.

"There are basically three different kinds of tests," says Marjorie Penfield, professor of grain and baking sensory evaluation. "There's one on whether products are different. For example, if a company wants to change an ingredient in a product to something cheaper. Or maybe the company's supplier doesn't make the same ingredient any more.

"Then there's description of the quality of that product. In industry, highly trained panelists are used to describe the product. They have to be able to taste the product and completely describe it and the intensity of those qualities. People are realizing we have to have some kind of standard lexicon."

"We also do testing in which you ask whether the person likes the product," Penfield says.

The laboratory testers tend to specialize. There are panels that zero in on green beans and panels that study the difference between steaks from grass-fed and grain-fed cattle.

Some of the rancid milk panelists also evaluate microwave-baked cakes as to their air pockets, resistance to cutting, crumbliness and springiness (the degree to which 2 centimeters of cake return to original form 2 seconds after being compressed).

"We smash it down with a fork and then measure how much it springs up," says tester Marsha McNeil.

Other areas of cake study are "cell size" (size of holes in the cake), "moisture release" (amount of wetness or oiliness released in the mouth by the cake), and "cohesiveness of mass" (degree to which cake holds together for up to 10 chews). Aftermath qualities such as "adhesion to teeth" (amount of cake stuck to teeth after swallowing) also are noted.

Some foods almost defy precise description, and panelists must be nearly on the same wavelength, Penfield says.

"With grass-fed beef you're looking for a grassy flavor," she says. "It doesn't really taste like grass. I have a hard time describing it but I certainly notice it when I taste it," she explained as other testers nodded in agreement.

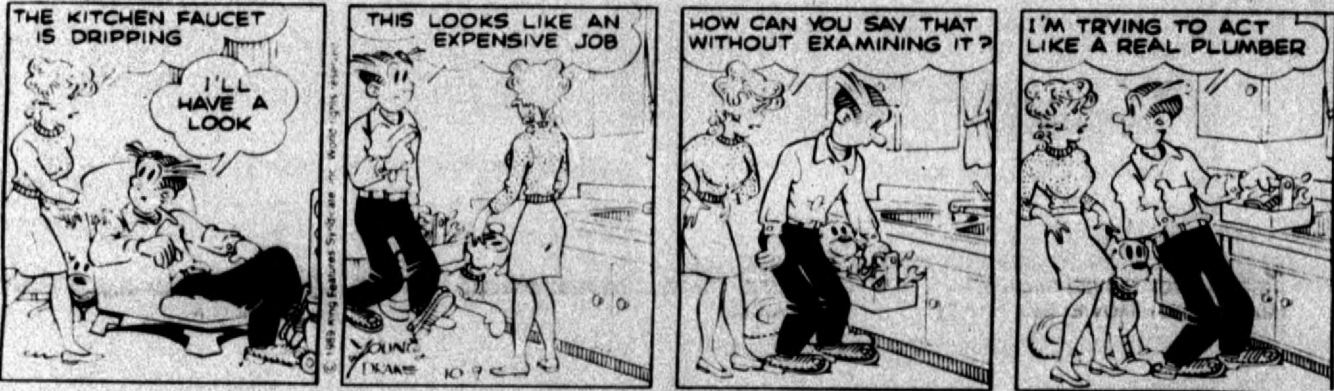

"It's described as a milky-oily flavor. It's the type of beef found in the less expensive steak houses," she says.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: The best scientists in the field of research may conclude that vitamin C can't prevent colds, but nobody asked me. I'm 57 years old and at about the age of 38 or 40 I started using vitamin C in small doses, then increased the levels. All my life before then I had terrible colds.
 I had to see the doctor three or four times a year and take antibiotics for my sore throat. In the past 16 years, since taking vitamin C, I've had only two colds. What is adequate? It varies from individual to individual.

DEAR READER: I'm glad you have stopped having such frequent colds, but your story in no way establishes that vitamin C is responsible. Your story reminds me of the University of Minnesota student who took part in a study to test the usefulness of vitamin C to prevent colds. Some of the subjects took large doses of vitamin C. Others took an inert pill, or placebo, without any effect. This is done to be sure that a medicine is doing something more useful than a sugar pill.
 The next year the student could not attend school but wrote to ask if he could take the pill again because he had not had a cold all year while taking the medicine. He was one of the control subjects getting the inert pill that had no effects.
 Your story is a testimonial. You can find testimonials for almost anything from snake oil to black pepper, when people think something has worked a miracle. Often medical conditions improve in spite of what people, or doctors, do rather than because of medicines or fad treatments. That is why a scientific discipline needs to be followed, to determine the facts.
 Most people need no more than about 60 mg of vitamin C a day. Large doses may cause diarrhea, make gout worse or affect tests for diabetes, liver disease and colon cancer.
 I know you will not agree with the facts, but you might learn something from reading How Much Vitamin C, which I'm sending you. Others who want these facts can send $1 with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER 32-07, P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713.
 People's susceptibility to colds does change. Once there are no children in the household going to school, the parents have far fewer colds. Colds are caused by viruses and are not the result of a dietary deficiency. And they're not caused by bacteria. Viral infections are not cured by antibiotics either.

tall. She has not grown in several years. She began menstruating at age 10. She is adopted and, while we don't know anything about her ancestry, people of her nationality are not as tall in general as Americans. She has read about growth hormones that can encourage growth of several inches. She is desperate to add a few inches to her height and I am concerned over the safety of these hormones. Would growth hormones be safe for her?
DEAR READER: There is nothing wrong with being short — or tall for that matter. People come in different sizes. Since she started menstruating at age 10 and is now 15 it is likely that her growth plates in the long bones are calcified or fused. That means growth hormone will not help her grow in height at all. Rather, if she took enough it might enlarge her face, hands and feet, creating an abnormal appearance that she would not like. She can have a bone survey to be certain that she has bone fusion and to determine her bone growth, but I would not think she will benefit from growth hormone.

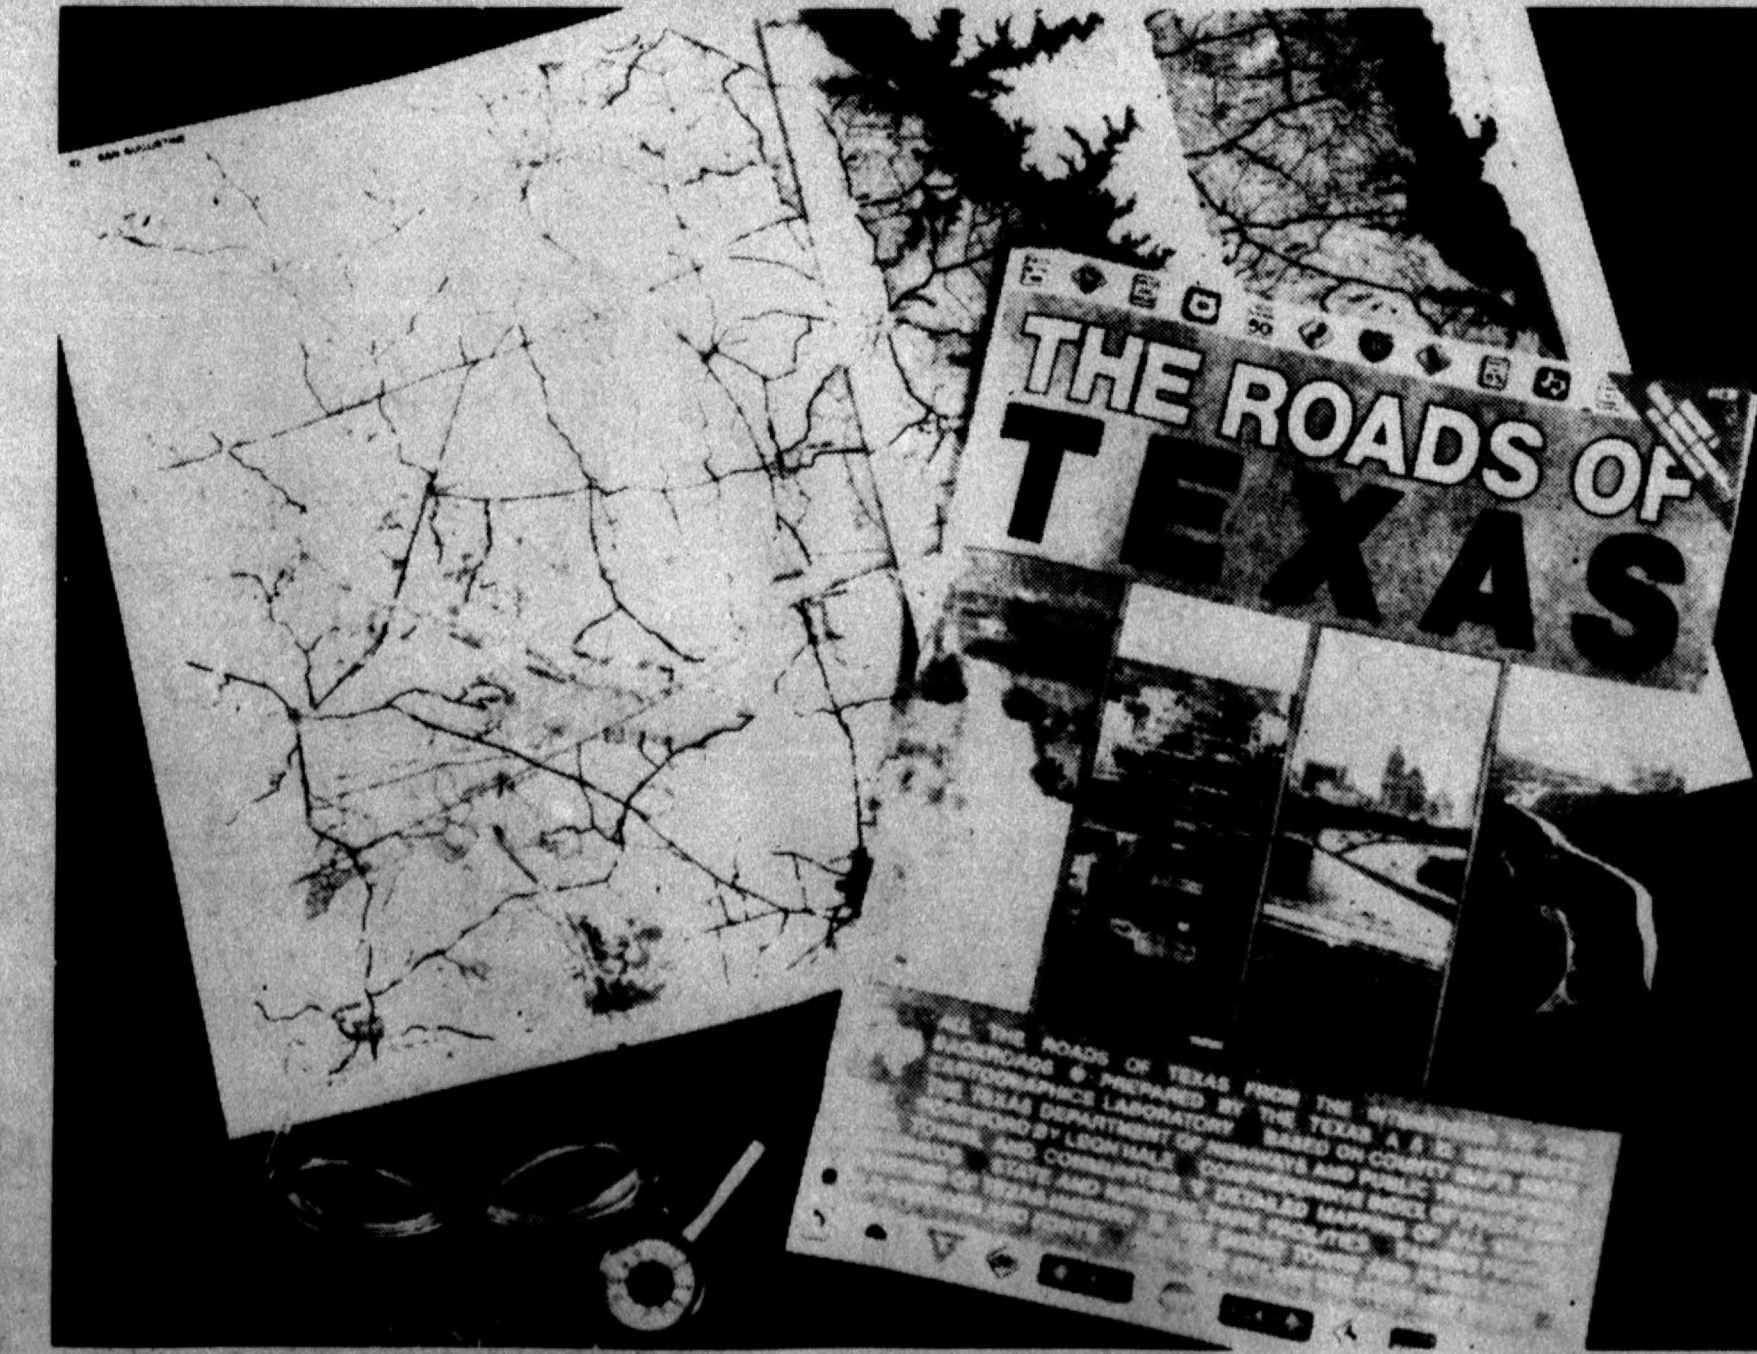

DEAR DR. LAMB: Will you please tell me why I have difficulty in reducing my cholesterol reading? For eight years I have followed a good low-fat diet — no eggs, 1 percent low-fat milk, fruits and veggies, oat bran, chicken and fish. I take all the fat off the chicken and bake all the fish. I walk 20 minutes three times a week.
 My last test, done through my doctor, was 285. That was down from 319 six months earlier. Then I went to a health fair two weeks ago and it was 265. I also had my blood pressure taken at the fair and it was 112/88, the lowest it's ever been. Two weeks later, at the doctor's office, my blood pressure was 168/80.
 I want to know how dependable these health fairs are and why the difference in the numbers at two different readings.
 Frankly, I'm very discouraged trying to get the cholesterol down. I have done all I can. I take medication for my blood pressure, but I refuse to take any for cholesterol.
DEAR READER: It sounds to me like you have made progress. Certainly 265 is better than 319. And that significantly decreases your risk of a first heart attack.
 The health fairs offer screening testing and they are really quite good. Individuals who are found to have a high total cholesterol level or a high blood pressure are then encouraged to see their doctors for further studies. Blood pressure does vary, even if you are on medication to control it, and the total cholesterol will also vary. Then the laboratory method used to measure the amount of cholesterol in your blood can account for differences in readings.
 I'm sending you Special Report 48, Preventing Heart Attacks and Strokes by Diet, so you can check your present diet against the three-step diet plan recommended by the American Heart Association. Others who want this report can send $1 with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER 48, P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713.
 And it may be important what medication you are taking for your blood pressure. The diuretics commonly used to treat mild high blood pressure may cause an elevation of total cholesterol. If you should be taking one of these, you might have more success in lowering your total cholesterol if you were switched to some other medication. You should talk to your doctor about this.
DEAR DR. LAMB: Your column on jock itch prompted me to offer some help for this problem. I wear a miniskirt to sleep in. It's not a true "mini," just a bottomless bag about 18 inches long with an elastic top. I'm a 77-year-old man and I know the skirt looks odd, but who cares. For seven or eight hours the area stays dry and well ventilated. When I get up, I'm decent. Best of all, jock itch is no longer a bother.
DEAR READER: Why not just sleep in the nude — or with just a pajama top? It sounds like you have found a mini-version of the old-fashioned nightgown that both men and women wore. They had certain advantages. Jock itch is a fungus. Fungus infections grow in warm moist areas and the pubic area is one of those. Another is the feet where another fungus causes athlete's foot. It is quite true that keeping the pubic area dry is a major help in controlling or preventing jock itch. Loose clothing and underwear for the daytime also help. Cotton or absorbent underwear is also useful.

Let us show you a Texas you've never seen before.

NCA recognizes Carlile

Lynne Carlile, surrounded by her students, was named teacher of the month recently at the Nazarene Christian Academy. Presenting her with a gift certificate is Doris Huckert, president of the NCA's Parent-Teacher Fellowship. Mrs. Carlile is a graduate of West Texas State University, formerly taught in Dimmitt and Tulia, and teaches fifth grade along with science for fourth, fifth and sixth graders at NCA.

Spinach is a member of the goosefoot plant family. Surprisingly, it is first cousin to the beet. Eating spinach is a good way to build up iron in the blood.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You have probably had it up to heré with letters to, from and about nurses, but I hope you will print just one more. It's different from the others.

I work in a hospital where the nurses are treated like royalty. Not only have their paychecks doubled in the last year, but there is talk of another raise for them.

I realize that nurses have been underpaid for a long time and I don't begrudge them the new respect they are getting, but there is a lot of anger and hostility toward nurses in this hospital because employees in other departments are being overlooked.

I work in billing and haven't seen a pay raise in five years. If you think the headaches are only on the medical floor, try dealing with a patient after he receives a blockbuster of a bill. (The $7 aspirin one of your readers complained about is just the tip of the iceberg.)

We are threatened, sworn at and harassed on a daily basis by irate patients and their family members. This office is grossly understaffed. We struggle to handle 150 claims a week. If we are no more than a month behind we feel wonderful. When we send out Medicare claims we keep our fingers crossed and pray that the government regulations didn't change the previous week.

Handling hundreds of thousands of dollars in revenue and trying to stay sane is not easy in this squirrel cage, but the administrators look the other way and we are rarely given a compliment, much less a small bonus.

I believe it's time that the people in power took notice of the office staff without which no hospital could operate for a single day. We are truly the forgotten people, Ann.

Please say a word for us. -- Out of the Loop in Iowa

DEAR IOWA: You have said a good many words yourself and they pack a more powerful punch than anything I might say. Your complaint sounds valid to me. I hope this letter helps the cause.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Recently we moved to this community and I had to make a phone call before our phone was installed. I went to our neighbor's house and was shocked at what I saw. There were stacks and stacks of newspapers and magazines in the living room, the hallway, the bathroom and the kitchen. I noticed that they were addressed to a variety of people.

The woman's husband is a mail carrier who works for the Houston post office. Apparently, he takes home any magazine or newspaper that interest him. When I asked his wife if this was against the law, she said, "All mail carriers do it." I asked if there is any supervision. She replied, "The postmaster knows about it but doesn't say anything because they are good friends and he takes magazines too."

Ann, is it true that all mail carriers do this and their supervisors are in on it? If so, postmasters should be investigated for covering up thievery. Newspaper and magazines companies all over the country must get a lot of complaints from irate customers. And what about the revenue?

Have you ever heard of this sort of thing? We are new in these parts and I don't want to get into trouble with the neighbors, but I am outraged. What should be done? -- No Name Please

DEAR NO NAME: That mail carrier should be reported to the postmaster general in Washington.

The man may be mentally ill. His behavior sounds more sick than crooked.

When planning a wedding, who pays for what? Who stands where? "The Ann Landers' Guide for Brides" has all the answers. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.65 (this includes postage and handling) to: Brides, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. (In Canada send $4.45)
