Dawn's 'PI' enjoys work

By DANEE WILSON
Staff Writer

Did you ever wonder what was really going on with the Joneses? Have you ever been tempted to find out what your special "friend" really does when he leaves the house?

If you need assistance finding out the "scoop" on someone, call Deaf Smith County's own super sleuth Pat Chambers.

She doesn't have her own television series or an assistant named Watson, but she does enjoy her job.

Chambers has been an investigator for over 14 years. Prior to getting her private investigator's license, Chambers worked as an adult probation officer for Potter, Randall and Armstrong counties.

"I got into the business because I had so much time invested into investigation and I've always enjoyed working with people," Chambers, who lives and has her business at Dawn, said. "Besides I've always wanted to own my own business."

Although Chambers has worked in the investigative business before, PI is different from probation work. "When I worked in probation, not only did I investigate, but I supervised as well," she said. "Now I mainly investigate people and try to find out the truth."

The private "eye" business isn't all the glamour and high speed chases that the television show, Magnum PI, cracked the business up to be, she said.

"It isn't what it seems on TV," said Chambers. "I don't hide behind trees or go on a high speed chase after anyone. On TV, PIs are seen as shady characters. Private investigator is a professional business and one should conduct themselves in a professional manner."

Chambers does a lot of work within the court system.

"I've been appointed to interview defendants and do background studies on people. Often, their family and friends are reluctant to talk with me."

She specializes in criminal investigation for the defense, personal injury cases, workers compensation cases, fraud, missing persons, background checks, domestic cases, social studies, child custody, civil cases, skip tracing and surveillance.

"My favorite type of investigation is personal injury cases," the laid back investigator said. "When an accident happens and someone claims to be hurt, I see how the accident happened, take statements from witness and look at the circumstances of the accident."

Although she works closely with the courts, Chambers has not been called in as a witness in a case.

"There is a good chance that I could be called in as a witness," she said. "If I did, I would have to be professional about it."

"I like finding out the reasons why people do things they do. In this business, I meet some very interesting people."

If someone were to hire Chambers to spy on someone, she would go through her usual steps.

"When I spy on spouses," she said with a slight laugh, "I have to be very discreet. I usually follow their daily routine and day to day activities."

Emotions run high in domestic cases, said Chambers. "I have to be careful not to get emotionally involved," she said. "I've got a lot of bad reactions to some of the news I've delivered. These are very emotional cases. Some people, even though they suspect something is up, don't know how to handle it when they hear it is really true. Reactions are part of the job, I just have to remember I'm not to blame."

Chambers remembers her most unusual case was a debugging.

"A lady called me and said her house was bugged and asked if I could debug it for her," Chambers, who has had her own business for two months, said. "I had to check all the wires in the house, the telephone and in the attic for recording or listening devices. I didn't find anything."

Although the life of a super sleuth sounds like a never-ending drama, Chambers says it is not all excitement.

"It's a lot of really hard work," she said. "It is a lot of foot work and I really have not had a lot of excitement."

Dawn's own private eye

Pat Chambers of Dawn recently opened her own private investigation business with offices in Dawn and Amarillo. Chambers has been in the investigation business for 14 years.

New United Way executive director

Kyla McDowell recently took over the Deaf Smith County United Way as executive director. She will be heading the fall campaign, which is the main fund raiser.

McDowell likes UWDSC challenge

By DANEE WILSON
Staff Writer

The sky's the limit for the United Way of Deaf Smith County. Under the new leadership of Kyla McDowell, United Way has set its sights on the stars and the sun.

McDowell, who took the position of United Way executive director Feb. 1, is planning high goals for the fall United Way campaign drive.

"My goal is to see the campaign goal raised higher than it was last year and see that goal be met," said the former homemaker. "I would like to raise the goal every year and see it met every year."

McDowell has never held a job in this capacity before, but felt like it was something she wanted to do and would be good at doing.

"I didn't exactly solicit for the job," said McDowell. "The United Way board members asked me if I would be interested. I met with Wayne Amstutz, former executive director, and decided it was something I would really enjoy doing."

As executive director, McDowell oversees the big event for the United Way, the fall campaign drive. Also, McDowell must keep the agencies in the public eye and act as an educator to teach the community about United Way agencies.

"I don't think most people know what agencies the United Way funds," she said with disappointment. "Most people don't even know what the United Way is. I think at least once in almost every Hereford person's life, they have been involved with or participated in a United Way agency and didn't even realize it."

The Deaf Smith County United Way funds and supports Big Brothers-Big Sisters, Boy Scouts, Campfire, Family Services Center, Red Cross, Salvation Army, Senior Citizens, YMCA, Children's Rehabilitation and the High Plains Epilepsy Foundation.

Most believe that their small contribution wouldn't make a difference, but McDowell knows differently.

"If all the companies, business and individuals knew how much their little bit helps out the agencies, I think they would want to do more," she said. "If more people would give, the agencies wouldn't have to get extra funding."

"I would like to see the community get more involved with United Way. I think we would be able to meet future costs if everyone would realize how often the agencies are used and give more."

Because the United Way doesn't raise enough money to completely fund its programs, the individual agencies have to raise additional funds. "I wish we could raise the money so the individual agencies wouldn't have to, but we just can't."

Although McDowell hasn't worked as a fundraiser in the past, being a local girl born and raised in Hereford, she is able to bring the personal touch of community into her position.

"I love Hereford," she said. "People always complain about small towns, but I think they have so much to offer. Small towns have a closeness in the community and they tend to band together more on the important issues."

McDowell is excited to meet the challenges of her new job. "It's still new and a learning experience for me," the enthusiastic director said. "It's a nice job. I really enjoy working with the board members. This type of position is not strenuous, but very rewarding. I'm excited to be a part of the campaign."

"The thing about United Way is the name. It says it all. The giving is important as a whole to our agency. We can see what agencies need more funding. We have a better feel for what the needs are and how our agencies can help."

Working with people and the community fits perfectly into McDowell's lifestyle.

"While I'm at work, my kids are at school," she said. "After work and school, I have the afternoons to spend with them. We're all looking forward to the summer."

Being active in the community takes a lot of time, but it is time enjoyed by McDowell.

Witkowski wins spelling bee

BY SPEEDY NIEMAN
Editor-Publisher

Thursday was Anna Witkowski's birthday, and she was still celebrating

Friday.

Anna, a sixth grader at West Central Elementary, captured the championship of the Deaf Smith County Spelling Bee Friday after 30 rounds of words eliminated 17 other contestants.

But the celebration for Anna, 12, almost ended before the final words.

The competition came down to Anna and Bao Nguyen, a seventh-grader at Hereford Junior High. Anna missed the word "altercation," calling off the letters a little fast and missing the "e." Bao spelled that word, but he stumbled on "alumnus," and the contest was on again.

Several rounds later, Bao missed the word "ascribable," and Anna took the title by spelling that word and "asinine." She won $100 in awards and a trip to the Region Bee April 13 at West Texas State University. Anna is the daughter of Gerald Witkowski, employed by Holly Sugar. She won the junior bee last year.

Bao is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Sang Truong Day Nguyen.

Placing third was Sue Ann Sanford, eighth grader, followed by Lisa Chavez, Bluebonnet 6th grader; Kelly Thompson, West Central 6th grader; Josh Liscano and Robert Briebesca Jr., 8th graders; Stephen Cloud, St. Anthony's 6th grader; and ninth was Karis Blain, Community Christian School. There were 18 school champions entered in the county bee.

Anna earned a $50 bond from First National Bank, a $25 gift certificate from Gibson's, and $25 cash from The Hereford Brand. Bao won a $25 share account at Hereford Texas Federal Credit Union and $25 from Deaf Smith Electric Co-op.

The county bee is sponsored by The Hereford Brand, with Speedy Nieman as Bee director. Bera Boyd was the pronouncer and Eloise McDougal joined Nieman as a judge. The Amarillo Globe-News and WTSU sponsor the regional.

Witkowski wins county spelling bee

CLAYTON

Williams answers questions, says may run again in future

EDITOR'S NOTE - Clayton Williams came from nowhere to almost make Texas political history in one of the state's rowdiest and most expensive gubernatorial campaigns. In his first extensive interview since the November defeat, Williams looks back at what went right, what went wrong and what lies ahead.

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) - Conceding he made serious blunders, Clayton Williams insists the Texas governor's race was more colorful than dirty and says he may run again.

"I'm not ruling it out but I'm not ruling it in," the Midland oilman-rancher said. "Fate will determine that."

While gracious in defeat, the feisty, shoot-from-the-hip Republican had a zinger or two for Democratic opponent Ann Richards, the media and the state's trial lawyers.

Williams said he emerged from the governor's race much wiser, less wealthy, more humble and not even remotely bitter.

"I don't hold grudges," he smiled. "Life's too short."

He said it was his sense of humor that carried him through the tumultuous campaign. And he admitted it was his crude attempt at humor - a joke comparing the weather to rape - that contributed to his downfall.

"This is my recommendation to anyone running for governor: For crying out loud, never, ever talk about the weather."

Making his first political race at age 57, Williams insisted from the outset he was not a politician, and his cowboy charm, candor and openness were refreshing and endearing to many Texans.

But he admits now it was that same candor and quick wit, often too quick, that got him in trouble and eventually doomed his candidacy.

"Instead of being political, I was pretty up-front," he said. "In the field of politics, any attempt at levity can get you cut off at your knees ..."

"I didn't know I was such a bad fella until I ran for governor."

Granting his first interview since the November election, Williams met two reporters at his Midland office, an airy, plush suite in his ClayDesta National Bank.

It is decorated with photographs, paintings, bronzes and other mementoes reflecting his hunting, fishing, ranching and oil activities. Included are spectacular wild-game trophies.

With little urging, he recounted the 1990 blitz of a Republican primary field that included former congressman Kent Hance, Secretary of State Jack Rains and Dallas attorney Tom Luce. In the general election, polls indicated Williams led Richards by as much as 17 percentage points at one time.

With a voter turnout of 3.9 million, he lost by 100,000 votes.

A post-mortem indicated there was no single turning point in the campaign, Williams said. But he said his "worst mistake" was the weather joke. That was when he suggested that bad weather is like rape; if it's inevitable, just "relax and enjoy it."

When an aide told him his comment had created a problem, Williams disagreed.

"Oh, no," he recalled saying at the time, "I was just joking."

He labeled as "serious mistakes" his refusal to shake hands with Richards when their paths crossed late in the campaign, and then calling her a liar.

"She accused me of laundering drug money and I just had to call her hand on it," he said. "I'm sure there are people more dedicated to fighting drugs than I am, but not a lot. Looking back, I shouldn't have let that get to me ... I called her hand and it cost me for doing it."

Williams had been angered by Richards' reference to a newspaper report which said federal agents were investigating allegations a Houston loan broker, who also had done business with Williams' bank, was laundering drug money.

Williams said another probable mistake was his refusal to debate Richards, a decision apparently made by advisors afraid he might misspeak under pressure.

"I have a good sense of humor and an instantaneous wit and ... a debate's one thing we probably would have done better than people expected."

In something of a paradox, Williams said being a front-runner for over a year probably worked against him at the end because of a peculiar American trait. Said he:

"It's very American to shoot at whoever's ahead, and I was ahead for a long time."

Perhaps more likely, two events in the critical latter stages of the campaign may have been, if not devastating, at least the proverbial final straw.

One involved a constitutional amendment he said he didn't understand. But more injurious, Williams volunteered almost casually that he paid no taxes in 1986, a time, he said, when he was almost broke.

It was a concession of no wrongdoing, but vigorously reported and widely misunderstood.

According to Williams, Cincy Kennard of WFAA-TV in Dallas reported the story in such a way as to make it appear he dodged his tax payment - "like I'd done an illegal act."

That was not the truth, he said. "I paid all the taxes I ever owed. I didn't pay any taxes in '86 because I didn't make any money."

Worse yet, he said, CNN picked up the early WFAA account and repeated it throughout the weekend, a "barrage" never corrected and never retracted.

In Dallas, John Miller, news director of WFAA, said:

"We were simply reporting what every other television station and newspaper in the state was reporting that day, that Williams had admitted he paid no income tax in 1986."

Later that night, Miller said, WFAA changed the wording slightly to clarify the fact that Williams owed no taxes in 1986. The second newscast ended with further explanation of the issue and pointed out that Williams paid other taxes he owed.

"It's possible that CNN took the early version," Miller said, although he was unaware that the network picked up either report.

While professing to be no "political expert," Williams said he was told that voters often tune out the campaign until the final stages, and events then take on special significance.

"Most people don't give a darn, so they start paying attention the last couple of weeks before the election. And all the rest of the battles are really minor compared to that."

It was earlier in this same critical period, Williams maintained, that the Houston Chronicle published "front page headlines" alleging "wrongdoing" at his Midland bank.

Later, he said, when the newspaper had to "back it down and say, well, it didn't happen," the story was buried on the "back pages."

He said his campaign suffered from "active bias" and the Chronicle and WFAA stories "are two examples that I don't mind putting right on top of the table."

Chronicle Managing Editor Tony Pederson said the newspaper stands behind the facts of the story, none of which ever were shown to be inaccurate.

There was no retraction or clarification on the "back pages" or elsewhere, he said.

Williams also said he made "strong enemies" when he attacked the state's trial lawyers, whom he said had made Texas the most litigious state in the nation.

"It's poisoning the business climate," he charged.

Furthermore, he said, he alienated the teachers' union and numerous state workers "because I believed in cutting back state government." His stance on such issues hurt him politically but those were "positions that I thought were right."

Williams acknowledged that the Richards camp probably succeeded in goading him into making damaging statements. And he said he probably would have been more at ease running against a male opponent such as Atty. Gen. Jim Mattox.

"It would have been a different campaign," he said of Mattox, whom Richards defeated in the primary. "Of course, I don't know the outcome."

Williams pointed out that he has spent most of his life in a "total male environment," one that included Texas A&M, a military school. And then he went on to make his fortune in the oil and ranching business.

"Ann didn't really make me feel uncomfortable," he recalled. "I just think that a male-on-male is one battle and a male and female is another."

Aside from the handshake-liar episode, and Richards' "liberalism," Williams had scant criticism of his former opponent.

"We fought a hard campaign with totally different philosophies," he said. "She is a liberal. Her appointments bear that out. I am a conservative. My rhetoric bears that out."

And the campaign was not the dirty, mudslinging affair characterized by the media and others, he maintained.

"It was colorful. It wasn't nearly as muddy as some other races. It just made for good writing. This was a colorful man-woman, conservative-liberal race where both candidates have distinct personalities. "It wasn't that dirty ... It was hard fought."

What's more, he said, he supports Richards and hopes she can provide the leadership to guide Texas through difficult times.

But he would have done things differently.

"If I had been governor, my approach would have been battling to decrease the size of state government rather than increasing taxes. ... Taxes are going up and our income is level. That can mean only one thing

"I'm not ruling it out but I'm not ruling it in. Fate will determine that. All kinds of events will lie out in front, and all kinds of things will happen. Life goes on, fortunately, and we'll just have to cross that bridge. But I'm not going to say no." - On whether he will seek another political office.

"It would have been a different campaign" if he had run against a man. "Ann didn't really make me feel uncomfortable, I just think that a male-on-male is one battle and a male and female is another." - On being uncomfortable campaigning against a woman.

"It was colorful. It wasn't nearly as muddy as some other races. It just made for good writing. This was a colorful man-woman, conservative-liberal race where both candidates have distinct personalities. It wasn't that dirty ... It was hard fought." - Disputing the perception that the race was "dirty."

to any economist, even an Aggie. Your standard of living is going down as you increase taxes.

"And I am on the other side from that."

He was disappointed that legislators rejected the lottery referendum supported by Richards.

"The people of Texas should have the right to vote for what they want or don't want," he said. "A referendum makes an end run around the politicians in Austin and returns the power to the people."

"I like that."

Looking tan, trimmed and at ease, Williams said he has been "coasting a little bit" since the election, working on what he called "issue-oriented movements" that will keep him "involved."

"I believe even more deeply in the issues and principles that I outlined in the campaign," he said. "... I will be following up on some of those. I think it's a little premature, but I will stay involved."

He said he also has been busy drilling horizontal oil wells, hunting, fishing, ranching and spending time with his family.

"I've spent ... more time with my family than I ever have," he said. "My oldest boy has needed me because he has been in trouble with drugs."

Clayton Wade Williams, 20, was sentenced on a drug charge late last month. Repeating one of his own campaign slogans, the elder Williams said his son would "be going to learn the joy of bustin' rocks."

He recalled that he entered the governor's race because of his son's drug problems and that he wanted to wage war on drugs and drug dealers.

"We have not made enough strides," he said, "so there is a place for me to help in that arena, whether it's lobbying for money to fight drugs" or whatever.

Williams said he also was spending considerable time with his wife Modesta, whom he says took the election extremely hard.

"I held up very well," he said, but Modesta "had more trouble dealing with the loss than I did ... I'm a wildcatter, and wildcaters deal with failure all the time. One out of 10 or 15 wells is a discovery and the rest are dry holes."

While his own philosophy is to "give it all you've got and then go on," his wife had become "dedicated to things she thought she could do as First Lady, and she had a real disappointment."

He said everyone grew very close during the campaign, and it was a tough on everyone to lose such a close election. Afterward, they held what he described as an Irish wake.

"We talked and we cried and we kind of purged it," he said, then gathered for a post-mortem a week later.

"It kinda let everybody get everything off their chests. ... The healing starts with getting it behind you. We weren't there to fuss at one another. ... We made enough mistakes to go around."

While joking that he's "now out of a job," Williams said the cattle business has never been better and his other business ventures are good if not great.

Asked if he's raised enough money for the next election, Williams laughed and recalled talking with former Gov. Bill Clements about campaign costs.

"It'll take you $3 million," Clements told him. "I put in three. I had to put in three more, but when I won, I got that back."

Based on that conversation, Williams said he put up $4 million out of his own pocket, "but I was not prepared to double it." He did in fact spend $8 million of his own money.

He said the highlights of the election year were meeting three times in Texas with President Bush and campaigning across the state with various ethnic groups.

"I probably didn't enjoy it $8 million worth," he laughed, "but I enjoyed it."

Local Roundup

County to meet Monday

The Deaf Smith County Commissioners Court will meet at 9 a.m. Monday at the courthouse in Hereford.

The agenda includes discussion of commercial drivers' licenses, Hereford Softball Association, Kids Inc. Baseball Complex and noxious weed spraying; accepting a contract for reapportionments; retirement benefits; consideration of an agreement with the Texas Department of Health, purchasing policy, tax abatement and personnel policy; and adoption of a food purchasing policy.

School board meets Tuesday

The Hereford school board will meet at 6 p.m. Tuesday at the school administration building.

The agenda includes professional and student organization and administrative reports; recognition of employees of the month; parent hearing; early childhood and high school gifted and talented program; 1991-92 school calendar; school vehicles; textbook adoptions; Education Service Center board members; computer bids; contract for juvenile probation officer; tax abatement; policy updates; and contracts for administrators and teachers.

Crimestoppers offers reward

A reward of up to $300 is being offered by Deaf Smith County Crimestoppers for information leading to an arrest and indictment in the Crime of the Week. The Hereford Fire Marshal and Hereford Police Department are investigating an arson that occurred on Feb. 26 at 905 S. Schley in Hereford. The house was vacant at the time of the arson, but the occupied house next door suffered some fire damage as well. Total damage was about $50,000.

If you have information about this or any other crime, call the Clue Line at 364-2583. If your information leads to an arrest and indictment in this crime, you will receive a reward of up to $300. All final rewards are determined by the Crimestoppers board of directors.

All callers may remain confidential by using a code name or number.

Police arrest two Friday

Two persons were arrested Friday by Hereford police, including a man, 21, at Moreman and Douglas for driving while intoxicated; and a man, 26, in the 100 block of Whittier for theft.

Reports included a woman filed charges against another woman for cursing her; an unknown amount of money was taken in the 400 block of Irving; cinder blocks were taken in the 300 block of Kibbe; a child welfare concern in the 100 block of N. 25 Mile Ave.; a purse was taken from a vehicle in the 100 block of W. Park; gasoline taken from a store; a man was reported to be in a vacant house in the 100 block of Fir; and a man said he had been assaulted by his brother, but would not file charges.

Police issued six citations and investigated two accidents.

Crimestopper Spotlight

Deputy Fidel Reyna is the investigator with the Deaf Smith County Sheriff's Department. He is all too familiar with the county's crime statistics, the majority of which deal with burglaries. Fidel credits the Crimestoppers organization with helping solve many burglaries while reducing crime in our area.

One of Deputy Reyna's ambitions for Deaf Smith County Crimestoppers is that it will one day be funded by those who break the law.

'Battered wife' defense questioned

EDITOR'S NOTE - With the governors of two states granting clemency to dozens of women convicted of killing their mates, attention has been focused on the "battered woman syndrome" as a plea of self-defense. And that raises some thorny legal questions. Is a woman really acting in self-defense if, say, she kills her husband while he is asleep?

By KAY BARTLETT
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK - (AP) - Richard Celeste, Ohio's outgoing governor, may have sparked a bigger chain reaction than any one foresaw when he granted clemency to 26 battered women serving time for killing their boyfriends or husbands.

He reviewed the cases of more than 100 women last December and decided these 26 had acted in self-defense.

Women's advocacy groups hailed his action as courageous and said it should set a precedent for all governors. Prosecutors protested that Celeste may have just as well posted a sign announcing, "Open season on men."

Sue Osthoff of the National Clearing House for Battered Women in Philadelphia countered that it was time to put an end to open season on women and children.

The debate focused attention on the "battered woman syndrome" as a self-defense plea, a defense that has been around for over a decade, but one that some defense attorneys did not even know existed, much less know how to use.

In late February, Maryland's Gov. William Schaefer commuted the cases of eight incarcerated women and commuted the sentences on the basis that they acted in self-defense. U.S. Rep. Constance Morella, a champion of women's rights, invited Schaefer to speak at the Maryland Correctional facility.

According to statistics gathered by Morella, a woman is beaten in her home every 15 seconds. At least four women are murdered by their husbands or boyfriends every day. Every year, 3 to 4 million women are assaulted by their spouses.

Morella has introduced three bills in Congress dealing with domestic violence and U.S. Sen. Joseph Biden of Delaware has introduced in the Senate a sweeping bill directed at violence against women.

It was ironic that Ohio was one of the few states that had neither precedent nor law dealing with the battered woman syndrome as a self-defense plea before 1990. Before that, only two states, Missouri and Louisiana, had laws specifically allowing the plea, the introduction of an expert witness and testimony backing up the charges of battering.

The rest, except for Wyoming, relied on precedent in a rather unequal way. Some judges used their discretion to reject the testimony and, unless the attorney was prepared to appeal it, it could die right there.

Others were tougher.

"In Florida, no judge would try that," says Kathleen Haugue, assistant district attorney in Miami. "Everyone was aware of the precedent."

Wyoming is the only state without a clear-cut precedent.

California and Texas are likely to pass statutes soon. In the last session of the Texas Legislature, the bill passed both houses unanimously, but was vetoed by the governor.

Now, with Gov. Ann Richardson in office, the bill's sponsors have high hopes. In California, the sponsors themselves pulled the bill out of committee to amend parts of it. It is expected to sail through.

Osthoff says other states, including New York, Washington, Arizona and Texas, are also considering reviewing cases for clemency.

Women's rights groups estimate that about 800 women now in prison should have their cases reviewed.

This is not to say all would walk. Celeste granted clemency to only about one-fourth of those he investigated. It must be remembered that a battered woman does not have a license to murder. She may or may not have a case of self-defense, a self-defense that at first blush looks like murder.

Many now serving time, however, were tried before the "battered woman syndrome" was admissible. Others were tried in states before there were laws or precedents. Still others may not have even told their attorneys they had been battered.

Those who grew up in violent households may have seen the beatings as a normal part of marriage and may not have mentioned it to the lawyer. They themselves viewed their actions as a way to stop the beatings and were willing to go to jail to end them.

Even today, there are women who are being convicted who probably would be acquitted, or perhaps not even brought to trial, if all the facts were brought out first and if they got the right lawyer.

It's a difficult decision for the defendants. Should they plea bargain or gamble that a jury will believe that theirs was a case of self-defense? They risk a life sentence, maybe even a death sentence, if they lose on the self-defense plea.

One of the reasons the sentences tend to be harsh is that the battered woman who fears for her life finds it necessary to overpower her tormentor on a physical level.

A high percentage use guns, which, it can be argued, equals the odds. Men can beat women to death with their fists. Women rarely have such an option.

If she chooses to use a gun, she cannot risk a violent husband disarming her. So she may start shooting when he is most vulnerable - asleep, with his back turned, or when he is drunk.

Nonetheless, an armed person shooting an unarmed one usually brings the state's most serious charge, such as aggravated murder.

She also almost always empties the gun.

"They are so afraid, feel so powerless, and believe he is omnipotent and about to rise up at any moment and beat them that they keep shooting, even when it would be clear to most people that the first bullet has killed him," says Dr. Lenore Walker of Denver.

In "The Burning Bed," a movie starring Farrah Fawcett in which the battered wife takes the kids and kills her husband by pouring gasoline around his bed and igniting it, the jury finds her innocent by reason of temporary insanity.

The "battered woman syndrome" takes a different tack. It attempts to put the jurors in the woman's shoes and demonstrate that her perception of imminent death or serious bodily harm is reasonable and sane. Thus, shooting the husband or live-in boyfriend was not only a sane and reasonable thing to do, but a matter of self-defense, even if she shot him while he was asleep.

Lawyers say these cases may be easier to win on a temporary insanity plea in states where that plea is admissible, but they say that is missing the issue. They and the expert witnesses they call in, mainly psychologists, argue that the woman has become so terrorized, so brainwashed by years of beatings, that she believes her life is in imminent danger at all times.

Walker and other well-known expert witnesses, such as Cynthia A. Gillespie of Seattle, say some women tell them their husbands had threatened to kill them for years. So why did they finally take action?

"They just do. There is something different in the way he said it, in the look in his eyes. They are convinced he means it this time," Gillespie says.

Prosecutor Haugue in Miami doesn't agree that a snoring man is an imminent threat.

"A pre-emptive strike is murder, no matter what the circumstances," she says.

Ms. Haugue has tried eight such cases in Florida in the last three years. There were others she would not even bring to trial since they were obviously self-defense and in others she recommended a suspended sentence.

"I got five convictions and the jury walked three," she says. "I don't think the cases against the three who were acquitted were weaker, I just think the jurors took such pity on those women and what they had been through, they just let them go. They ignored the law and let their hearts take over."

Walker says the killing must be viewed in context. A jury must understand what it is like to live a life under siege, to understand that to the battered woman, the threat was both real and imminent.

"She is so terrified, she fully expects him to get up at any moment," says Dr. Angela Browne of Boston, a psychologist and researcher. "It is also why the women are often charged with whatever that state will allow, things like aggravated murder."

The experts also must always explain away the questions that seem reasonable to those not living under this dread.

Why didn't she just leave? Why didn't she call the police?

The answers to those questions rest in a deeper problem - domestic violence - the experts say.

The woman may not have left because she tried before and was severely beaten. Statistically more women are killed when they make a run for it than at any other time.

Economic considerations may be another deterrent. She literally has nowhere to go. By leaving she may also forfeit the right to her children or put them in danger.

Why don't they call the police?

Domestic violence gets low priority in most police departments. Too many women refuse to press charges if the police do act, some perhaps out of fear.

Far more men than women kill their spouses or lovers each year. The men kill at a rate of almost 1,500 a year in the United States, while women kill at the rate of 500 to 750 a year. It is estimated that 40 percent of those are in self-defense, but experts such as Angela Browne suspect that is a low figure. Men rarely kill in self-defense in spousal homicide.

Louise Ann Bauschard, executive director of Women's Infinity Network in St. Louis, Mo., says that new inmates often tell her that they finally feel safe. It is only when they are behind bars that the fear leaves them.

The young of rabbits are known as kits or kittens.

Almost 500 people--or at least those who like music--enjoyed the annual chamber of commerce banquet here Thursday night. "The Sharks," an Amarillo group, provided an entertaining program with their music and audience involvement. It was an enjoyable evening for the banquet crowd, which saw Caudie Ola Brown, retired school teacher, honored as "Citizen of the Year," and Pat Robbins take over the reins of the chamber.

Robbins made a good point when he said "this is our chamber, not the chamber." The organization is sometimes taken for granted, and some people criticize the chamber for not doing more. But the chamber is no stronger than its members, reminded Robbins. The chamber needs input and involvement to be the strong and viable organization that people expect it to be.

President Bush has emerged as a winner and world leader after the Middle East war. Analysts point out that Bush never played general like a little kid. He turned the decisions over to military professionals. Lyndon Johnson and Jimmy Carter made the mistake of playing like generals. LBJ personally picked out bombing targets in Vietnam. Carter's rescue mission of the hostages in Iran has been called America's worst-run military operation, when he tried to run the whole show from a telephone in the White House.

Political experts also point out that Franklin Roosevelt let personal ties to Stalin cause half of Europe to go under Communist rule, and that Truman was bluffed into a peace settlement in Korea. President Bush did not let personal ties to Gorbachev divert him from his task and he kept his nerve. Maybe he remembered what MacArthur said: "In war, there is no substitute for victory."

Someone gave us a copy of a tongue-in-cheek list of how to spot a West Texan. We don't know who came up with the daffy-nitions, but it could have been a state legislator from downstate who thinks the only good thing about West Texas is the oil money.

You know you are a native of West Texas if:

- Your richest relative buys a new house and you have to help take the wheels off.
- You think potted meat on a cracker is an hors d'oeuvre.
- Directions to your house include "turn off the paved road."
- Your wife's hairdo has ever been ruined by a ceiling fan.
- You've ever hollered, "Rock the house, Bubba," during a piano concert.
- Your mother has been involved in a fist fight at a high school sports event.
- The neighbors signed a petition over your Christmas lights.
- You have refused to watch the Academy Awards show because Smokey and the Bandit were not nominated.
- You think Campho-phenique is a miracle drug.
- You have more than two brothers named Bubba or Junior.
- Your father encourages you to quit school because Larry has an opening at the car wash.
- You have a rag for a gas cap.
- You prominently display a gift you bought at Graceland.

THE VOICE OF BUSINESS

ANIMAL RIGHTS AND WRONGS

by Dr. Richard L. Leshner, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

WASHINGTON — "I have always thought of a dog lover," James Thurber wrote, "as a dog in love with another dog."

In truth, a sincere affection for animals always has been a conspicuous characteristic of the American people. Public agencies and private organizations strive to avert the extinction of endangered species, and to minimize unnecessary suffering among more common beasts, be they laboratory test animals, household pets or agricultural stock. This concern is surely one of our most attractive legacies, and one we can all be proud of.

Unfortunately, there are certain extremists within the animal rights movement whose agenda goes far beyond simple concern about environmental protection or unnecessary animal suffering. Groups such as the People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals (PETA), and the Animal Liberation Front (ALF), contend that animals should enjoy the same rights as humans. Within that context, they oppose any use of animals for the benefit of humans, including the consumption of meat, keeping of pets and medical research.

It is important to distinguish such extremists from legitimate organizations such as the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals or the American Humane Society, which oppose inhumane abuse of animals. These groups work within the law to achieve reasonable objectives.

I count myself among those who respect animal life and oppose unnecessary animal suffering. But still I regard humanity as a superior species that takes precedence over lower forms. Were it not for medical research on animals, polio would still kill thousands each year, hundreds of thousands would not have access to life-saving coronary heart bypass surgery, 100,000 arthritics who receive hip replacements each year would be confined to wheelchairs, most of the nation's 500,000 insulin-dependent diabetics would be dead, and there would be no such thing as kidney dialysis. Those are only a few examples.

Likewise, the agricultural livestock practices that so irk animal rights extremists have enabled Americans to spend less than 11 percent of their disposable income on food, less than any other country in the world.

We must not permit lawless extremists in the animal rights movement to disrupt medical research or food production, nor should we let them compromise the credibility of the responsible majority whose genuine concern for animals deserves our respect and appreciation.

An AP news analysis

Political world not rosy for Demos

By WALTER R. MEARS

AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) - Before the parade passes by, the smart politician marches along for a while. That's what most Democrats are doing now, and never mind that they're marching to President Bush's Republican beat.

They figure that there's time to change it before the 1992 election campaign.

"We are a long way from that election, and the world turns over many, many times," said Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., in a morning-after television appraisal of Bush's triumphant victory report to Congress.

The political world is not likely to turn enough to give the Democrats anything but the longest of long shots at the White House, Republican for all but one of the last six terms.

The more realistic Democratic goal is defensive - to hold a Senate majority in what could be a difficult year, and to limit their House losses in the event of a Bush landslide.

That's the point of their counterattack against Republican congressional campaigners who are after Democrats for voting against the measure that authorized war with Iraq.

And that quarrel has not muted their applause for Bush, dramatized when House Speaker Thomas S. Foley offered "warmest congratulations on the brilliant victory of the Desert Storm operation" as he presented the president to a joint session of Congress Wednesday night.

Foley said later that it would be uphill for the Democrats in 1992, but "that's a matter for 20 months from now." Meanwhile, he said, Bush's record popularity - 90 percent approval in the polls - is an asset as the nation tries to deal with its problems at home.

"I think it's wonderful that we've got a popular president," he said.

Sen. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., exemplified the two-track Democratic strategy, applauding the president while assailing Republicans who try to make an issue of the war vote.

Gore, who voted to give Bush the authority he sought, said the president's joint session speech was a national celebration of victory, national unity and resolve. "And so we all wanted to celebrate with the president and, through the president, with the country," he said in an ABC-TV interview Thursday, one day after denouncing GOP political use of the war vote.

Ever since Bush declared victory and a conditional cease-fire on Feb. 27, the Democratic Congress has been bursting with congratulations, for him, for the generals, for the troops.

This week's celebrations were only the prelude to the parades and patriotic rallies that will follow as American forces come home. Bush said every city and town should make the coming Fourth of July a special "holiday they'll never forget." Congress is considering $350,000 celebration at the Capitol on Memorial Day.

In a resolution overwhelmingly approved on Tuesday the House declared that it "acclaims the president for his decisive leadership, unerring judgment and sound decisions ..." on the Persian Gulf conflict.

The vote was 410 to 8 liberal Democrats.

That was unusually effusive language, but then, to the victor belongs the flattery. And as Rep. William S. Broomfield, R-Mich., observed:

"He staked his presidency on the outcome. He won, America won and the world won."

The Republicans figure it's their win, too; some of them sounded miffed that Democrats were getting a piece of the celebration. Complaining at sparse Democratic attendance during the debate on the House resolution, Rep. Steve Gunderson, R-Wis., said the missing congressmen should yield their seats at the joint session to people who really want to say thank you to Bush.

Not many did. The House chamber was standing room full, as usual for a presidential address.

We definitely run on cowboy time around here.

I caught renowned cowboy poet Baxter Black on the "Tonight Show" a few weeks ago. He explained to Johnny Carson that he was able to finally reconcile the difference between the seven days of creation and all of the evolutionary theories: God used cowboy time.

Cowboy time, he explained, is considerably slower than real time. We see it and use it all the time.

If you take the phrase "a coupla hours" or "a coupla days" literally, it means "two hours" or "two days." You know and I know that when we say "coupla hours" it may mean two hours and it may mean six hours. A "coupla days" may be two days and it may be two weeks, or somewhere in between.

As a fairly punctual person (really someone who gets to an 8 p.m. event at 7:30 p.m.), it's a little frustrating to have that 8 p.m. event begin at 8:15 p.m. or later. But, that's the way things roll (and it's not just here, it's Dimmitt and Plainview and Abilene and even Dallas, so don't think I'm picking on you/us) and, after 25 years, I guess I'm used to it.

Got an interesting tip sheet in the mail Tuesday from the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association on how to communicate with state and federal legislators and other officials.

Among the do's

--Identify clearly the subject or subjects in which you are interested, not just bill numbers.

--State why you are concerned about an issue.

--Restrict yourself to one or two topics.

--Put your thoughts in your own words.

--Try to establish a relationship with your senator and representative.

--Communicate while the legislation is being considered.

--Find out on which committees and subcommittees your legislators serve.

The don'ts:

--Don't threaten in any manner.

--Don't threaten to wield vast political influence.

--Don't become a "pen pal."

I think they left out a few of the obvious "don'ts," like addressing your legislator or congressman as "Dear (fill in the blank)head" or some other endearing term.

And always remember that the sands of time do flow. US Rep. Larry Combest and I both remember a scathing column I penned a few years back about Larry. Oh, how the worm doth turn. I have voted for Larry in the 1990 election. Of course, he had no opposition in the primary and general elections. If he had been opposed, I feel I would still vote for him.

So be careful of what you say, make your point, and be brief. And above all, be nice; you may have to someday ask a favor, and if you've called your rep "Dear Hard to Get something done you really need done.

Editorial opinion around Texas

Here is a sampling of editorial opinion from Texas newspapers:

March 4

Corpus Christi Caller-Times on school finance: The sausage-makers were at it again in Austin last week, grinding out a school finance reform bill in the House. ... The object seemed to be ... to pass something, anything, so the members could claim to be doing their jobs

And that may be the purpose of this whole exercise - to put the onus for imposing a new school finance plan on the Supreme Court ...

No one knows who will profit by how much; no one knows what the effects will be on education generally, and on individual districts in particular. The bill does nothing about mergers of districts; it appropriates far too little new state money to bring the poorest districts up to more than the mediocre level. Legislators aren't sure whether the addition of an amendment to allow wealthier districts to pour more money into their schools will result in at least as much and possibly more disparity in spending than is now the case.

But hey, they got a bill passed, whether they know what it says and does or not. In Texas, that's called legislating; pass the sausage.

March 4

The Waco Tribune-Herald on ethics legislation: The Texas Senate-passed ethics bill is good legislation, as far as it goes.

The Texas House would be performing a public service if it strengthened the bill by tightening up the loopholes left in the Senate version. On the good side, the bill is aimed at reducing undue influence by lobbyists and others on the Legislature. It requires more complete disclosure of lobby spending than the law now requires. It puts caps on campaign contributions and creates an ethics commission to police the lobby, the lawmakers and top state officials. ...

There is the question of why lawmakers and high state officials have the need to receive any free gifts and free entertainment. But even though the Senate's reforms limit the freebies to under $50 a day, it does not require any reporting of these gifts. These under-$50 gifts also do not count toward the $500 annual freebie limit per lawmaker. ...

If the House members can't bring themselves to simply ban all free gifts and other lobbyist-paid entertainment expenses, they could at least strengthen the Senate bill by requiring complete disclosure of all free gifts, expenditures and contributions.

P&W considers park fee hike

AUSTIN (AP) - Despite sharp increases being proposed in the costs for Texans to hunt, fish or enter a state park, officials say they are hearing little negative reaction from hunters, fishermen or hikers.

"In terms of the general drift, everybody's pretty supportive of it," says Andrew Sansom, the Parks and Wildlife Department executive director.

The commission that oversees the department will consider the proposed fee increases March 28 and take final action in May. If approved, the new charges would go into effect Sept. 1.

Sansom says most people concede that increases are needed to maintain and expand the state park system that handled 21 million visitors last year.

Meanwhile, threats to the environment continue to increase, in the form of oil and chemical spills, Sansom said.

"We have no choice but to meet these challenges head on in defense of the resources themselves and on behalf of future generations," he said.

Under the proposal, a combination hunting and fishing license for Texas residents would jump from $15 to $25.

Also proposed is an annual $10 charge per vehicle in addition to the regular vehicle and entrance fees to get into a state park.

A resident fishing license would increase from $8 to $13; resident hunting from $10 to $13; daily vehicle entrance fees would rise from $2 to $2 to $6, depending on the park; entrance fees for adults would increase from 50 cents to $1; and the fee for a child 12-years-old and younger would increase from 25 cents to 50 cents. Camping fees and motorboat registration would also go up.

Scott Royder, state conservation director of the Lone Star chapter of the Sierra Club, said that people who use the parks to hike and go bird-watching must chip in to keep the system going.

"We're pretty much supporting all of it. The state is way behind in comparison with other states," Royder said.

However, he said, it is important to keep the price within the reach of the average Texan.

Sansom said that is being done. "We will still be way behind other states in terms of our fees," he said.

The average hunting and fishing license in the United States is $46 and in states neighboring Texas it is $63, Sansom said.

Visitors to Texas, however, will see little change.

Non-resident hunting fees will remain $200, while the 5-day hunting fee for small game will stay at $25. Non-resident fishing will increase from $15 to $20.

Between the Covers

BY SHIRLEY WALLICK

Spring seems to be just around the corner and that means that time will soon be spent in doing more things out-of-doors. But we hope that the new books this week will entice you to come in and get a "good book" to read and enjoy during the evening hours, or days that still are a bit "nippy" to do much outdoors.

Our first new book this week is Jeanne Williams' Home Mountain. Our author has combined action and romance in a novel set against a realistic portrait of the American West.

At the age of 16, Katie McLeod finds herself the guardian of her three younger siblings after her parents die in a tragic fire. The year is 1881--the American West is untamed; life is short and disposable as cowboys, Indians and soldiers vie for control.

Katie decides to uproot her family and leave behind painful memories and fulfill her father's dream of moving to Arizona to build a dairy ranch. Their journey is much harder than the McLeod clan had expected.

Bill Radnor, a sometime cattle rustler, saves them from tragedy as he takes the family under his wing and helps them to begin their new life. Katie finds herself falling in love with this handsome and courageous outlaw, but Bill's criminal past and distaste for marriage prevents Katie from revealing her true feelings.

Katie's sibling chafe under her rule and she must learn the patience and strength of a parent. External forces also comfort Katie as she must fight off the advances of a greedy landowner, Ed Larrimore, as well as the possible attack by vengeful and deadly tribe of Apaches. Katie finds a protector in Bill, but when he disappears she must face the challenges of the frontier alone.

The Dakota Territory in the late

1870s is the setting of LaVyrle Spencer's book, Forgiving.

Sarah Merritt, a tall, prim and nearly a spinster at 25, arrives in Deadwood to start the ramshackle gold-rush town's first newspaper. Sarah has come to Deadwood to be reunited with her runaway younger sister, Addie. According to Addie's letters, she is living and working as domestic help at Mrs. Hosier's boardinghouse.

It has been five years since Addie fled home and Sarah is carrying the sad news that their sole remaining parent, newspaper publisher Isaac Merritt, has died. Setting up her father's printing press in the middle of Main St, Sarah finds herself unable to agree with Sheriff Noah Campbell. He arrests her on the spot! Thus begins a hostility between two willful individuals that can change only when they find themselves united in a common goal--to reclaim the Addie that Sarah once knew.

It seems that Mrs. Hosier is more commonly known as Rosie in these bawdy frontier town. Addie's work is an "upstairs girl" not an upstairs maid. When Sarah turns up at the bordello, Addie is furious and Sarah can hardly believe Addie's appearance. Addie has dyed her blonde hair black, with a heart to match.

Addie orders her proper sister to get out. Sarah is determined to find out what happened to Addie--what awful hurt had Addie endured to bring about this awful lifestyle? What can Sarah do to regain the sweet sister of her youth and bring her home again?

Robert Vane and Felicia Lisle are the greatest theater couple of the age in Michael Korda's Curtain. Their romance, on and off stage, has captivated the world for nearly 20 years. Robert is the greatest actor of the English theater in a generation--dashing, handsome, and clearly a genius. Felicia is the most glamorous, beautiful of actresses.

They are partners onstage, lovers in life. But Felicia's career suddenly brings her new fame and on Oscar as she stars in Hollywood's most successful movie. The public appearances express their desire and love for each other better than they ever can in real life.

Behind the scenes, their lives are full of dangerous secrets and broken promises. Felicia is overcome by her own feats and by horrors of the past she knows she cannot keep hidden forever.

From Bill Granger we have League of Terror, the 11th book in the November Man series. The old East-West rivalry is gone--the armistice is all but signed. The cold war has lost its freon. It would seem that the planet has no further need for spies! But Devereaux, the spy they call November, know better.

Herd loses 5-4 in eight innings

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

The Hereford High School baseball team fell 5-4 in eight innings to Tascosa Friday in opening play of the Dumas Tournament.

The Rebels' David Smith led off the top of the eighth with a triple and scored on an error. The Herd couldn't answer in the bottom of the inning.

The error, though costly, was one of only two in the game for Hereford, and that's a sign of improvement, said Coach T.R. Sartor.

"I'm real proud of the way our defense played," Sartor said. "It's getting a little better every game."

Sartor added that his team turned two double plays.

Chad Brummett started and pitched five innings for the Whitefaces, and Sammy Casarez pitched the rest of the way, picking up the hard-luck loss.

Brandon Hammack ended up pitching the entire game for the Rebels, but he was lucky to get out of the first inning.

He allowed Hereford to score in the first inning on four walks. Matt Bromlow led off with a free pass and scored when Ruben Ramos received his gift.

Hereford scored again in the second on consecutive singles by Tab Hathaway, Brummett and Bromlow, who got the RBI.

The Herd got two runs in the fourth thanks to a rather strange play. George Jowell led off with a walk and advanced to second on Luis Mungia's single. They both moved up a base on a passed ball.

The next batter lined out to the second baseman, but when the fielder tried to complete a double play by nailing Jowell at third, the ball went through the third baseman and lodged in the fence. That allowed Jowell and Mungia to score.

White JV falls 5-4

Hereford's White junior varsity baseball team lost 5-4 at Canyon against that school's JV team.

Fonzie Enriquez pitched five innings for Hereford, and Andrew Tijerina went the rest of the way.

The Whitefaces scored in the first inning on a solo home run by Michael Melendrez.

They got two more in the second on J.J. Rico's single, and added one more run in the third on Enriquez' RBI single, making the score 4-1.

Canyon scored one in the fourth and then took the lead with three runs in the fifth.

Coach Henry Perez said the Herd left the bases loaded in the top of the seventh.

Hereford collected five hits--Rico had another single in addition to his RBI hit, and Josh Tice also had a single, Perez said.

When those chores are over, he changes to a business suit which he wears to his law office and into court. Kropp, a member of the bar, specializes in equine law.

Golf team 20th in San Angelo

The Hereford High School boys' golf team finished twentieth in the 25-team San Angelo Classic golf tournament held Thursday and Friday at Bentwater and San Angelo Country Clubs in San Angelo.

The Hereford team shot 380 Thursday and 344 Friday for a total of 724.

Big Spring won the tournament with a 327-328 - 655, just ahead of Amarillo High at 329-330 - 659.

The highest award given by the NCAA to a former athlete is the Theodore Roosevelt Award, which goes to a person who has been successful in later life.

The highest finisher from District 1-4A was Borger: fourth 332-330 - 662.

Individually, Jason Mines led the Whitefaces by shooting 83 Thursday and 92 Friday. He was followed by Anthony Gale at 88-97 - 185; Kevin Kelso at 91-97 - 188; Cory Newton at 82-99 - 181; and David McCarter at 94-94 - 188.

SWC hoop classic sure to miss Hogs

An AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) - There's indisputable evidence that the Arkansas Razorbacks and their fans are primarily responsible for turning the Southwest Conference Post-Season Basketball Classic into a hot ticket.

Just visit the parking lot at Reunion Arena during the tournament and count the recreational vehicles. They arrive early and stay late. You can tell they are from Arkansas because most of the license plates have a little red Razorback on them.

Look into the crowd. It's red-clad, Arkansas red, down the halls of Reunion Arena this weekend. There might even be an "S-E-C, S-E-C" chant or two as fans look ahead to the Southeastern Conference wars. On Sunday about 6 p.m. the Hogs will scatter to the parking lot for the final time.

Then the RVs will tool off into the sunset taking their funny hats and hardback dollars with them. It will be a melancholy goodbye from the Arkansas fans, who enjoyed the annual tournament in Dallas.

"Our fans enjoyed going to Dallas," said Arkansas athletic director Frank Broyles. "It was sort of Barnhill South for us, a second home. It will be missed, no doubt about it."

Will the SWC tournament survive without the Hog wild fans and their greenbacks?

Some critics believe the tournament is doomed in Dallas without the Hog fans who filled about 70 per cent of the seats in this year's event, as Arkansas fans bought tickets other SWC schools couldn't peddle.

There has been grumbling of late from University of Texas loyalists, who say the Arkansas fans have bought up most of the season tickets. Of course, followers of the burnt orange, and the Texas Aggies, and Baylor Bears and other SWC outfits had the same chances to buy tickets before the Arkansas fans came along to pickup the leavings.

Well, all these unhappy followers of the 'Horns and Aggies will get their chance to see how they can support the tournament with the farewell of the Hogs.

Will the tournament even be two-thirds filled next year? Dallas will be on notice to get those seats sold without Arkansas support.

It never was a big-time tournament until Arkansas developed into a basketball power.

Speculation abounds over what might happen. There's support for a return to Houston, which has immense parking problems and was the reason the tournament left, or San Antonio if and when the new facility is build there. The tournament was held in San Antonio in 1980 and 1981.

Austin and the excellent Super Drum could be a strong possibility. More than 16,000 fans jammed the arena for the victory over Arkansas last Sunday.

If Texas dominates the league like many experts believe will happen with Arkansas' departure, the tournament in the hotbed of the 'Horns would be a natural.

Of course, the screams from the other coaches would shatter backboard glass.

But the other seven coaches need to decide whether they want a tournament or not. It will have to go where the bills can be paid.

If not, the SWC might once again join such leagues as the Big Ten Conference with no post-season tournament.

So, when you say farewell to the Hogs this weekend be kind. You might also be saying "adios" to the SWC tournament as we've grown to love it.

It will be back in Dallas in 1992. But without those wild-eyed fanatics from the Ozarks, the cash registers might be silent and the arena half-filled.

Gyms' quirks keep games interesting

By MARK WANGRIN
Austin American-Statesman
AUSTIN (AP) - Texas high school basketball can make some demands on a player that James Naismith probably never anticipated.

Players here sometimes have needed to be able to run the carpet, avoid the occasional radiator that intrudes on the court and fit in the 6 inches between the baseline and the wall on inbounds plays.

They've needed to shoot in the darkness and around low-hanging lights at backboards of a variety of shapes and compositions. Keep track of the ever-moving halfcourt line and throw an in-bounds pass without ever stepping out of bounds. Not get claustrophobic or mind bench areas that look more like an artillery emplacement.

Around the state are - or were - all those peculiarities.

"Those old gyms, the ones with the small courts, with the heaters hanging over the gym floor, with the backboard nailed to the wall - they're filled with tradition," says Hughes Springs coach John Kent. "People wouldn't trade them for anything. Unless they're falling apart, they're not going to be replaced."

"I saw the movie 'Hoosiers,'" says former Kyle coach Moe Johnson. "I told the kids I must have played in all of them. There are some strange ones across the country."

On pages 6-10 of the National Federation of State High School Associations basketball rulebook are the guidelines for a regulation basketball court, guidelines which the University Interscholastic League follows.

Maybe encourages is the better word.

The rules say the dimensions should not be greater than 94 feet in length and 50 in width. It also lists "ideal" dimensions: 84x50.

Maybe the most common peculiarity are short and narrow courts. Those are the ones, like Latexo, that can be identified by the dotted lines near the free throw circles. A team bringing the ball up court must first pass the halfcourt line to avoid a 10-second violation, but then can drop behind it without an over-and-back call as long as they don't cross the dotted line.

"You're almost in the other person's key when you cross the center line," said Harlingen Coach Carl Owens.

Courts that don't have enough room between the lines and the walls often have dotted lines inside the side or end lines that are used on inbound plays.

Many gyms were built during the New Deal-era by the Works Progress Administration, which was founded in 1935 to provide states with money to give jobs to unemployed people. Often they were made of stone, like the Prairie Lea or old Kyle gyms.

"It was like a fortress," says a former coach and Hays School District Superintendent.

All of the WPA gyms were shorter than 94 feet; many shorter than 80 feet. The Wolfe City gym is about 80 feet long and a few feet narrower than the prescribed 50 feet.

It has to be.

The walls are about 6 inches from the end lines and on the sidelines, about a foot out of bounds, are four girders that are connected by rails of 2-inch pipes. There are pads on the girders, but nothing on the rails.

Needless to say, the home team gets most of the loose balls along the sideline.

"A lot of teams, if a ball gets loose down the sideline, they let it go," says Wolfe City Coach Bill Montgomery. "Not us. We're used to it."

When Montgomery arrived from Slayton before this season and took a look at the fence, he wanted to take it down because he was worried his players would get hurt. "The kids wouldn't let me," he says. "The kids say it doesn't bother them. They dive over it or into it."

Sometimes the obstacles are on the court. In the mid-1940s, Burnet High School used the auditorium for its games, and a pair of stair bannisters protruded about a foot onto the court.

Montgomery recalls a gym in a Class A district in West Texas - he couldn't recall the name - of having a radiator that stuck out onto the floor. "You'd know it was there," he said. "You'd only have to run into it once."

At Paint Rock, the court is close to a stage that is flared out at both sides. So close, in fact, that the corners of one side of the court are cut off about 6 feet down the baseline and an equal distance down the sideline. "It's like it's just chopped off," says Eula Coach Joe Baze.

The result is that it eliminates a three-point shot from the corner and severely cramps offenses that pass the ball around the perimeter.

Sometimes the court size is fine, it's just that there's no room for the players.

The old Allison gym, which was destroyed by fire in the mid-1970s, had walls that were right up to the court on three sides, leaving the bleachers and the benches behind one basket. There was no room for the official scorer and scoreboard operator, who sat in a cubbyhole at the top corner of one of the side walls. To get into a game, a player had to press a buzzer that alerted the official scorer.

Walnut Springs has done the coaching box rule one better.

The teams' benches were more like dugouts. The players sat in chairs far below the level of the floor, which was slightly below eye level when standing. The players use steps to reach the court. On top of the dugout are the bleachers.

"You're kind of looking out of a pillbox," says Baze, adding that players have been known to slide in the dugouts while diving for loose balls.

While what's below is the concern at Walnut Springs, what's above can cause concern at the old Edcouch-Elsa gym.

A low ceiling and hanging lights make a long pass on an inbounds play a game of chance. In 1980, the Yellow Jackets were playing Brownsville Pace for the district championship. Pace's front line averaged about 6-foot-7 and the Vikings tried to lob the ball into their big men over the shorter defenders. Late in the overtime period, they tried it and hit a light. It was a turnover and the Yellow Jackets went on to win.

"When an opponent walked onto that floor," says Edcouch-Elsa Coach Robert Capello, "they were already 10 points down."

At Lorraine there's a low ceiling, estimated at not more than 20 feet, that can play havoc with a long-range, high-arc shooter.

In 1989, as his team was on its way to the state semifinals, Baze recalls his 3-point specialist, Brian Barnes, lofting one that found nothing but tile. Ceiling tile.

"We were winning, so it was kind of funny," Baze says. "Everybody laughed about it."

For a while, Baze says the gym is too claustrophobic. "We won't go back to Lorraine," he says. "I refuse to play them, unless we're realigned into their district."

Getting called on the carpet is a routine occurrence at several Texas schools, including Wimberly, Miranda City and Ingram Tom Moore.

"Everybody, when they walk in, they say, 'Golly' and they're in awe. They can't believe they're actually going to play a game on it."

Tartan originally was the floor surface of choice when a $4 million dollar bond election was passed 11 years ago, but when costs ran high, the athletic facilities bore the brunt of the costs. Wood was also found to be too expensive, but indoor-outdoor carpet fit the bill.

It's already proven to be a wise choice. "Some springs develop in the middle of the floor during rainy seasons," says athletic director Bruce Faust.

"We feel that if it had been a wooden floor, we'd have lost it. With carpet, we shampoo it occasionally, vacuum it and you're ready to roll."

Maybe.

Mirando City Coach Ralph Perez says the carpet "burns a lot" when players dive for loose balls, but says the advantage is mostly psychological.

Hilario Alvarado, the principal and basketball coach at San Isidro High School, says playing on Miranda City's carpet is a disadvantage if you're not used to it.

"You can't hear the ball bounce," he says. "You lose track of the ball. If you play a real slow game there, it's not a problem. If you try to fast break, the ball bounces too high or away from you."

"There's no 'thump, thump, thump,'" Capello says. "It's like if someone's deaf and goes to the symphony and doesn't hear the orchestra."

Also, the floor doesn't give as much as wood, so players who drag their feet wind up with a face full of carpet. "It's interesting to watch the officials," Faust says. "If they backpedal and catch their heels, they fall."

Least you think the players are the only ones challenged by these gyms, consider the plight of the Honey Grove fans. The court is sunken and the stands are pitched at a very mild slope. The result is that the fans sitting in the rear seats can't see much more than a third of the court. And plenty of players' heads.

There are other stories, of course.

Johnson recalls a dimly lit gym where the main light over the visitor's basket was out. Johnson complained and the other coach said, "That's OK, we have to take it in the second half." During halftime warmups, an opposing player gently bounced a ball off the light and it flicked on. "Must have been a short," explained the opposing coach.

Johnson City Coach Severn Smith recalls a Class A gym - since remodeled - in West Texas that had dead bats hanging from the rafters.

Of course, bats and heaters and carpet burns aren't that bad when you consider the alternatives.

In the 1940s, many games were played in January. Clear Lake Coach Bill Krueger remembers games featuring players dressed in blue jeans and sweats to fight the winter chill and swirling winds.

"Basketball," Krueger says, "has come a long way."

The only NFL championship game Coach Vince Lombardi ever lost was in 1960, when his Green Bay Packers were defeated by the Philadelphia Eagles, 17-13.

MAKES SENSE

LOS ANGELES (AP) - During his big league career, which landed him in the Baseball Hall of Fame, pitcher Don Drysdale of the Dodgers had the reputation of being a man who occasionally threw at batters.

Some baseball people were swapping stories recently and one of them recalled the time the late Walt Alston, the Los Angeles manager, ordered Don to walk a batter intentionally.

Drysdale hit the batter in the arm with the first pitch, which, of course, gave him first base. Alston rushed to the mound to ask why.

"Because", Drysdale allegedly explained, "that way I saved three pitches."

Five youths win at Houston

Five Hereford 4-H students came up winners in the Calf Scramble at the Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo last Saturday, and each received an $800 calf purchase certificate.

The Hereford students were among 28 determined contestants who were challenged to halter and maneuver one of only 14 unruly calves across the 2.7-acre Astrodome floor into the winner's square.

The Hereford winners were Jeffrey Carlson, Jeremy Blair, Wade Johnson and Justin Scott of Hereford 4-H, and Cody Powell of Summerfield 4-H.

The scramble winners are required to maintain progress reports, monetary records and a scrapbook detailing the calf project. His effort will be culminated in 1992 when the hieffer will be returned to the Houston show for a special showing competition with other 1991 winners.

Extension agents Dennis Newton and Wade Shackelford will supervise work with the animals. The calf certificates were sponsored by various businesses and individuals.

John Smallwood, chairman of the all-volunteer Calf Scramble Committee, said this year was special. "We gave away our 12,000th calf certificate during the performances, placing the value of the program at well over $2 million."

Beef cows postpone motherhood

Today's career-minded woman isn't the only one postponing motherhood. Lots of Texas beef cows aren't birthing every year either.

"The goal in beef cattle is for every cow to have a calf every 365 days," said Dr. Ron Randel, cattle reproduction researcher at the Texas A&M Research and Extension Center in Overton. "But in the real world of practical production, the better managers achieve about 75 percent of that. Poor managers do well to get 60 percent of their cows to calve at all."

Solitude on freewheeling ranges versus the confines of motherhood isn't the issue with cows, however. More likely, good food and a healthier lifestyle would make calving easier for the state's beefy babes, animal scientists at Texas A&M believe.

Randel is part of an animal science team studying virtually every facet of a cow's life to find answers for the low birth rates in Texas.

"The best operations in Texas compare favorably with any other area as far as reproductive efficiency goes," the animal scientist said. "But the average in Texas, and in the entire southern part of the United States, is lower than that of the north."

Lots of beef cow, about 16 percent of the nation's total, live in Texas. Those 5.4 million Texas beef cows produced about 13 percent of the calves born in the United States last year, according to the Texas Agricultural Statistics Service.

But that's nothing compared to what the cows could be doing given a little effort from managers.

"Some ranchers claim they have a 90-95 percent calf crop," said Dr. Ernie Davis. "But what they do is cull out any cows that don't have a calf, and those cows aren't counted. I would say the average may be 80 percent."

"Reproductive efficiency is a big issue for the Texas cattle industry, because a rancher carries the expense of a cow all year and it is costly if she doesn't calve."

Part of the problem may be environmental effects on the animals, Randel said, since low calving rates are common across the South.

"It's hotter and more humid in the summer, and some of the breeds are not well adapted to that," he explained.

But Randel said such factors are relatively minor concerns.

"Nutrition is the biggest reason across the board for inefficient reproduction. The second is poor management from the health viewpoint, things such as proper worming and vaccinations," Randel said.

The team has toyed with everything from cottonseed meal to aspirins figuring the effect on reproduction.

So far, it all boils down to food.

"Most problems are due to the lack of adequate forage and failure to supplement," Randel said. "Ranchers leave cattle out on the range to eat what they can get. You can't blame them. If you own 40,000 acres and the cattle are scattered over a large area, it's hard to do otherwise."

When supplemental feed is provided, it sometimes contains elements that adversely affect reproduction.

Cottonseed meal, a by-product of the state's second major agriculture component, can impact beef cattle reproduction, for example, Randel said.

Until recently, the common belief was that cattle could detoxify gossypol, a toxic pigment that occurs naturally in cottonseed. That's true only up to a point, Randel said.

Two changes in the cottonseed industry have impacted cattle feed: the widely adopted cottonseed processing method, solvent extraction, leaves more gossypol in the meal than the previous heat-pressure technique; and, new cotton varieties are being bred for higher gossypol because it repels insects, thus reducing a farmer's dependence on chemicals.

Randel's research found that as little as 2 pounds of solvent-extracted cottonseed meal can affect the reproductive ability of both bulls and cows.

he recommends not feeding that type of cottonseed meal to bulls and to females only if a winter supplement is needed.

"A rancher can stop feeding solvent-extracted cottonseed meal after the winter, and not see a negative effect on the operation," Randel said.

He said such cottonseed meal fed over longer periods can cause fragility of the red blood cells in females as well as degenerative embryos.

"One-third of the embryos were degenerating if the animals were receiving large quantities of solvent-extracted cottonseed meal," Randel said. "A rancher must be certain not to use that kind of meal for embryo donor cows."

"Attention to nutrition in the beef herd is the key to increasing productivity. Timely supplements can affect the bottom line dramatically."

Madigan ready for job

WASHINGTON (AP) - No way is John Block going to tell Edward Madigan how to run the Agriculture Department just because both are from Illinois. Block says he had his turn; now it's Madigan's.

Block was secretary of agriculture for five years in the Reagan administration, leaving the post in early 1986 to be president of the National-American Wholesale Grocers Association.

Madigan, selected by President Bush, was approved by voice vote on Wednesday by the Senate Agriculture Committee. He is expected to easily win approval of the full Senate.

Block was the first person from Illinois to be secretary of agriculture, and Madigan is the second, says USDA historian Doug Bowers. That doesn't include Horace Capron, who was commissioner of agriculture in 1867-71 before the job was elevated to Cabinet status.

Madigan has spent more than 18 years in the House. Block operated a family-owned farm near Galesburg and was Illinois state director of agriculture before coming to Washington in 1981.

"He'll do a good job," Block said in a telephone interview from Los Angeles where his association is having its annual convention. "He comes in with an in-depth knowledge and appreciation for government and how it works, and that can be a help. He can hit the ground running."

Block carried the administration's market-oriented policies to Capitol Hill and worked hard to get the 1985 farm law passed. The 1990 act continued much of the basic framework and will help guide policy-makers for the next five years.

Like his predecessors and two successors - Richard Lyng and Clayton Yeutter - Block as secretary of agriculture was big on foreign market development as a means of boosting farm prices and incomes.

Madigan is out of the same mold and promised at his confirmation hearing to be a strong advocate of foreign trade.

"The one thing I think about (the USDA job) is that you need to take positions on issues, be firm and stay with them," Block said. "Even if you can't win 'em, you can't be all over the board on issues. I think a firm position on policy is an absolute must, domestically and internationally."

As secretary of agriculture, "you won't win 'em all ... but at least people know where you stand and what you stand for," he said.

If he had it all to do over again, Block said he "would spend more time schmoozing the Congress, not that I didn't work with them" on Capitol Hill.

CATERPILLAR IRRIGATION POWER JUST GOT MORE AFFORDABLE

Caterpillar irrigation engines have always been the premier performer in the ag industry. It is the strength and durability of the Cat engine that has put it on top in terms of performance and dependability.

Now West Texas Cat has developed a flexible lease program that makes Cat irrigation engines one of the most affordable in the field. Our new lease program can actually put Cat power in your field for less than the cost of a similar diesel or gas engine.

From 50 horsepower and up, Cat engines deliver unequalled performance and economy and our flexible lease program gives you Cat power on your terms from one to five years. It also includes five year extended service coverage. You choose the program that suits your needs and your budget. Give us a call. We can compare your current irrigation costs with what a Cat engine would cost you under this new lease program.

Agriculture secretary faces numerous problems

WASHINGTON (AP) - When Edward Madigan is secretary of agriculture, he will see a lot of problems that he may have thought were solved during his 18 years in the House.

Some probably were solved or patched, temporarily, at least. But U.S. agriculture always seems to produce new goblines to contend with.

Madigan promised Tuesday that he would be a tough ally of farmers, and in one instance pledged to "fight like a junkyard dog" to protect their interests during international trade negotiations.

For two hours, the Illinois Republican told the Senate Agriculture Committee how he felt about his nomination - generally gung ho about the prospects - and promised to work closely with congressional farm leaders.

But Madigan said he would oppose special legislation to help dairy farmers from their current financial plight, raising the possibility that to do so would open the new 1990 farm law to further changes.

Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., told Madigan he would have "to be a tough son-of-a-gun" for U.S. agriculture during the ongoing trade negotiations under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. Madigan promised he would be a strong advocate of the American farmers.

Members of the Senate panel were full of praise for Madigan, and he is expected to breeze through a final vote on confirmation with no problem.

But private agricultural officials contacted by The Associated Press said Madigan will have a bumpy path as point man for Bush administration farm policies.

"His biggest challenge will be implementing the 1990 farm bill in a way that does not bring on another farm recession like we saw in the mid-1980s," said Larry Mitchell of the American Agriculture Movement.

The 1990 farm law provides a massive and complex web of programs and authorities over the next five years. It is the backbone of federal programs affecting farmers, rural towns, consumers and agricultural trade over the next five years.

But no farm law is etched in granite. All are battered by those who want changes made. The 1990 act is no exception.

Some farm groups want Congress to reopen the law and make changes they say are needed to improve farm income and protect the smaller, family farmers.

"There's a lot of leeway for secretarial discretion... in parts of the farm bill and how it is implemented," Mitchell said. "If (price support) loan rates for commodities are lowered, it could mean less cash flow and less credit for farmers."

One of Madigan's first jobs will be to help head off any serious move on Capitol Hill to make significant changes in the new law and to keep the so-called market-oriented U.S. farm policy on track.

The ongoing discussions to liberalize agricultural trade under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, and the ever-present problems of competing with the European Community in subsidizing exports are other sticky items on his agenda.

Economist J.B. Penn of Sparks Commodities Inc. in McLean, Va., said the successful conclusion of GATT negotiations is one of the biggest challenges. On a par with that, he said, are U.S. relations with Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union.

Eastern Europe is going to be a big item as those countries develop and want market access to the European Community and the United States.

"If they buy soybean meal from us, they want to sell pork back here," Penn said. "Soybean farmers like it and the hog farmers don't."

Madigan will have to mend fences with some environmentalists if he is to operate freely, said Ken Cook of the Center for Resource Economics.

Departing Secretary Clayton Yetter had problems with some of the groups almost from the time he took over USDA two years ago, and Madigan "really needs to be more of a statesman" on environmental problems, Cook said.

He noted that Yetter was hit by the Alar pesticide scare involving apples and later was rebuffed by the Senate on the nomination of James Cason as an assistant secretary of agriculture following environmentalists' objections.

"The environmental community never really recovered," Cook said. "He (Yetter) took a position of defending agriculture by basically refusing to meet with any environmentalists, and lumping us all together as if we all had something to do with all of that stuff... and some of us didn't."

Food labeling, federal inspection of meat and poultry, timber sales, user fees, research and the operations of USDA's far-flung offices and 110,000 employees are some other items lined up for Madigan. And bearing down on him from on high are the spending limits on much of what the department does with its $55 billion annual budget.

"It makes you wonder by he wanted to take the job," said Rod Leonard of the Community Nutrition Institute.

Food stamp participation is growing rapidly, Leonard said, and the national school lunch program is undergoing pressures. Sustainable agriculture, with reduced use of pesticides and other chemicals, is another item on the agenda.

"Budget pressures are going to make it more difficult to maintain conventional farm programs and price supports," Leonard said. "There just isn't a lot of give."

Credit easy for some farmers

WASHINGTON (AP) - Commercial lenders say credit-worthy farmers should have no trouble getting loans, but an Oklahoma banker says that with the recession and falling government subsidies, there may be few who qualify.

"It is not a lack of funds to lend by commercial lending institutions. The funds are there for profitable farm operators who can generate sufficient cash flow to manage the loan and guarantee repayment," said Jack W. Dickey, president of The First National Bank of Thomas, Okla.

Those funds, however, will not be there for farmers who cannot generate a positive cash flow, Dickey told the House Agriculture Subcommittee on conservation, credit and rural development Wednesday.

"And with a potential drop in farm income of some $6 (to) $7 billion over the next two years, I am afraid that more and more farmers will fall into the latter category," Dickey said.

"This loss of farm income is what is causing the inability of many farmers and ranchers to obtain credit," said Dickey, who is also chairman of the agriculture-rural American committee of the Independent Bankers Association of America.

Dickey said the problems facing agriculture include all-time high world wheat inventories, wheat and corn prices at historical lows, troubles in the dairy industry, slipping land values, rising production costs, and the California drought.

Michael Grove, president of the First National Bank of White Sulphur Spring, Mont., also said there is no credit gap for credit-worthy borrowers in rural America.

"With farm debt shrinking by one-third since 1983, banks in rural America have more than ample funds, leaving no shortage of credit available to credit-worthy borrowers," said Grove, chairman of the executive committee of the agricultural bankers division of the American Bankers Association.

But for farmers who must turn to the lender of last resort, the Farmers Home Administration, money for direct operating loans has been cut almost in half - from $932 million in 1990 to $493 million this year. The agency is moving instead toward guaranteeing commercial loans, and has $2.6 billion available this year, up from $2.3 billion in 1990.

But the committee chairman, Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla., questioned the policy, saying: "It seems a strange thing to do, when we're hearing a number of reports that banks don't want to make guarantees beyond guaranteeing those loans they already have in their portfolio and are attempting to safeguard."

English also questioned the FmHA's suggestion that all direct farm ownership loans be targeted to "socially disadvantaged applicants."

The FmHA has $57 million this year for ownership loans, which are used for major farm expenses, down from $80 million in 1990.

English said the proposal "indicates there's just not much direct lending taking place in the Farmers Home Administration. ... Evidently that's pretty much what the program has come down to, that's all that's left of it, and I'm not sure how long that's going to be left, if the administration has its way."

English said the program was intended to help farmers who could not find credit elsewhere.

FmHA Administrator La Verne Ausman said the proposal was part of a package of changes intended to meet its goal of limiting the federal government's role in financing long-term farm debt.

Ausman also said the agency would be able to meet the credit needs of its borrowers in time for the spring planting season.

He said FmHA was prepared to make "continuation" loans to delinquent borrowers to enable them to put in a crop even if their overall FmHA loan portfolio is in trouble.

Mexico becoming best beef market

WASHINGTON (AP) - Mexico may become one of the best markets in the world for U.S. feed grains, an industry official says.

Ricardo Celma, director of U.S. Feed Grain Council operations in Mexico, said redirection of Mexico's agricultural policy and the opening of its market to greater foreign competition are brightening the outlook.

Mexico already is a huge market for corn, generally importing more than 3 million metric tons a year. In fiscal 1990, corn imports were reported at 4.6 million tons.

Corn is a food in Mexico rather than a livestock feed grain, Celma said. Virtually all imports go into the manufacture of tortillas, a staple in the Mexican diet.

DSEC meeting Tuesday

Deaf Smith Electric Cooperative members will receive refunds amounting to a total of $2 million when the Co-op's annual meeting is held here Tuesday, beginning at 5 p.m. in the Bull Barn.

A crowd of approximately 1,500 is expected to attend the dinner meeting and hear the Florida Boys, in a return engagement, provide special entertainment. The dinner menu includes fish, chicken and beef.

A short business session to elect three directors will be held at the dinner about 6 p.m. Another highlight of the event will be the drawings for door prizes totaling more than $1,000, including a color television set.

Of the $2 million to be distributed, wholesale power refunds account for $1,537,728 of the total, and capital credits make up the remaining $462,272 of the refunds.

The Florida Boys have been together for more than 40 years. Along the way, they have established some impressive landmarks. They were the hosts of the most successful gospel music tv program in history -- "The Gospel Singing Jubilee," which won a number of Dove Awards.

They were the first Southern Gospel group signed by Canaan Records when Word Records began that division in 1964. They are among a select few who have stayed in the business for over 40 years. The group appears 50 weeks of the year at concerts all across America.

Celma, writing in the March issue of AgExporter magazine published by the Agriculture Department, said the council has operated an office in Mexico City since 1981. One goal has been to help Mexico develop its livestock and poultry industries - and thus buy more U.S. grain.

One result has been the development of poultry production, from only about 112 million broilers in 1987 to 500 million in 1989. Estimates for 1990 put production at about 600 million birds.

Swine production suffered with the economic slowdown of the 1980s, dropping from an inventory of 18.9 million head in 1984 to 8.5 million in 1989, Celma said.

"Survival for producers has become a matter of improving efficiency: getting more piglets per sow per year, better average daily weight gains, better feed conversion ratios and lower losses from disease," he said.

Upgraded methods and marketing techniques are also being encouraged by the council for sheep and dairy production.

"DUST BOWL in DEAF SMITH"

Most every farmer will experience wind erosion on their farm land in this part of the country. On the windy high plains of Texas you can tell the dedicated and conscious farmers apart from the lazy inconsiderate farmers. The good ones are in their fields chiseling any blowing acres on the first windy day. But not the "Bootleg Farmers", they stumble around for four or five days and allow their blowing sand to rampage across their neighbors adjoining land to the east that was not blowing and wouldn't have blown without the lazy farmers help.

You would think some individuals that are receiving astronomical annual Conservation Reserve Program payments would have enough money to buy diesel to fuel their tractors and be able to chisel their blowing land, but not the "Bootleg Farmers". I guess they just don't care as much about the land as do others.

Sincerely

Burdett featured in afternoon concert

Musical selections composed by Carlie Burdett, former Hereford resident, were presented to Bay View Study Club members and their guests at a tea held at the First Baptist Church Thursday afternoon.

Burdett spoke about her experiences as a composer, beginning as a young child and continuing to the present. Although Burdett has not published any of her many compositions, she continues to write as a hobby and is making contacts for possible publication of her works. She said that she now has a computer that prints her music as she writes and then plays it back for her to hear and to critique.

The afternoon's concert began with the composer playing three ballads written to honor her three children and concluded with a medley entitled "Songs for Bird Lovers."

Children's poetry from Robert Lewis Stevenson's "A Child's Garden of Verses" has been set to music by Burdett and a group of these selections was sung by a trio of Susan Shaw, Linda Gilbert and Leslie Woodard, accompanied at the piano by Dee Anne Trotter. This presentation had been made recently at the district convention of the federal music clubs of this area.

Elizabeth Witherspoon hosted the social hour which followed in the church parlor. In her absence, members of the club's social committee assisted in the serving with the food prepared by Something Special.

The next meeting of Bay View will be held in the home of Margaret Bell on March 21 with her presenting the program entitled "A Virtuous Woman." Members should turn in their guest reservations for the April luncheon at the E.B. Black Historical House at this meeting.

Club guests for the musical program were Kathlee Parmer, Buddie McBrayer, Virginia Holmes, Roberta Caviness, Margaret Schroeter, Gerry Taylor, Betty Barrett, Mildred Garrison, Irene Berger, Jeanie Caison, Susan Burnett and Cappy Corey.

Annual Junior Music Festival set

The Annual Junior Music Festival, sponsored by the National Federation of Music Clubs, is planned from 8:30 a.m. until 12:30 p.m. Monday in First Baptist Church.

There are 89 entrants in the festival representing students from Hereford, Friona and Dimmitt. The students will be judged in piano, vocal solos, duets and hymns.

Piano and voice teachers participating locally are Evelyn Hacker, Barbara Manning, Cheryl Betzen, Susan Shaw, Francis Parker, Kathleen Palmer, Lesley Woodard, all of Hereford, and Johnnie Walters of Friona.

Serving as this year's judges are Robert Hansen of Canyon, Denise Pan-Scanlin of Amarillo, Jim Rauscher of Amarillo, Janice Bowen of Canyon and former Hereford resident, Carlie Burdett of Amarillo.

Following the festival, judges and music club members will be served a luncheon at the church.

Judges submitted the following biographies for publication:

ROBERT HANSEN

Robert Hansen has appeared with regional opera and music theater companies in a wide-range of roles and has performed extensively in recital and concert settings. He has sung major roles in operas including the role of Don Ottavio in "Don Giovanni" with the Amarillo Opera.

He is an accomplished state director having directed over 40 productions of opera and musical theater in both the university and in the professional arena.

Hansen, a native of Ohio, joined the faculty of West Texas State University in 1987 as director of opera and assistant professor of voice. He holds a doctor of musical arts degree in voice from the University of North Texas and also holds degrees from Boston University and Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill. He has had vocal training in Cambridge, England.

DENISE PAN-SCANLIN

Denise Pan-Scanlin received a bachelor of music and master of fine arts degrees in piano from the University of Georgia where she studied with Despy Karlas. She also studied with Nadia Boulanger at the Fontainebleau Conservatory and with Yvonne Loriod in Paris, France. Her appearances as soloist and in chamber ensemble include performances at a number of colleges and universities including Clemson, Southern Illinois and Rice Universities. She has been an artist for Young Audiences of Houston for the past several years.

She has taught on the music faculties of North Georgia College and Mercer University Atlanta. She currently has a private studio in Amarillo and is the pianist with the chamber music ensemble "Yun."

CARLIE BURDETT

Carlie Burdett resides in Amarillo with her husband, Attorney Tom Burdett, since moving from Hereford in 1985. She teaches piano and music theory and is a member of MacDowell Music Study Club and Amarillo Music Teachers Association.

She and her husband are active members of Central Church of Christ where she sings in the Central Chorus and teaches third, fourth and fifth grade children's choir. She also composes music for piano vocal solo and chorus and is currently working on a program to be performed in April in Amarillo.

While living in Hereford from 1967-1985, Burdett was a member of the Hereford Chamber Singers, L'Allegria Study Club and the Hereford Music Study Club of which she was past president.

JIM RAUSCHER

Currently serving as chairman of the music department of Amarillo College, Jim Rauscher is also serving his 10th year as professor of private piano, piano classes, and piano ensembles.

A native of Medford, Wis., he received his bachelor of music education degree from the University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire in 1979 where he majored in both piano and trumpet. A master of music in piano performance and literature degree followed in 1981 from the University of Illinois at Urbana/Champaign. Pianist for the Amarillo Symphony and accompanist for the Amarillo Civic Chorus, Rauscher is an active solo recitalist, accompanist and adjudicator.

Since 1982, Rauscher has been accompanist for soprano Mary Jane Johnson of Amarillo in over 60 Community Concerts sponsored by Columbia Artists. In 1986, he was named Music Teacher of the Year by the Amarillo Music Teachers Association. He is currently working towards a doctor of philosophy in fine arts degree at Texas Tech University in Lubbock.

JANICE BOWEN

Janice Bowen has had a private piano studio in Canyon since 1980 and prior to that she maintained studios in Lubbock and Nacodoches.

She is a graduate of Hardin-Simmons University in Abilene with a major in piano performance. She also received her master of music degree from Texas Tech University with a major in organ. She has also studied in numerous piano workshops.

In addition to piano class, Bowen has taught kindermusik classes for preschoolers since 1985 through the Continuing Education Department at West Texas State University. She is active in the Amarillo Music Teachers Association and is a member of and holds a national certification through the Texas Music Teachers Association and the Music Teachers National Association.

Bowen is active in the National Guild of Piano Teachers as a teacher participant and judge, the Kindermusik Teaches Association and Canyon Fine Arts Club.

Benefit shower March 16

The public is encouraged to participate in a shower from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m. Saturday, March 16, at Sugarland Mall. The event, which is being sponsored by members of Pioneer Study Club, will benefit M.D. Anderson Cancer Center in Houston.

According to Pioneer Study Club President Rosemary Thomas, hundreds of items are needed by patients at the center and their families.

"Committee members from the study club will be present to accept gifts of cash and other items. All donations will be registered and are tax deductible," Thomas explained.

Some needed items include all types of head coverings, cookbooks from local organizations, slippers, robes, pajamas, beauty and barber supplies, plastic kitchen supplies sheets of paper, envelopes and stamps, children's games, paperback books for all ages (especially Hispanic books), craft kits, all-occasion cards, non-prescription magnifying glasses, sewing notions, wind chimes, soap dishes, playing cards, etc.

The shower is being held in conjunction with the cancer center's Golden Jubilee Anniversary Celebration. Club members who are assisting with the shower are Mary Jane Burrus, Jeannie Caison, Gladys Miller, Mary Panciera, Nell Culpepper, Fannie Rudd, Lonidene Edmonson, Mildred Sheffy, Maria Escamilla, Fern Sigle, Catherine Gripp, Oleta Hoffman, Willie Wimberley, Billee Johnson, Mrs. P.H. Gilliland, Helen Langley, Mrs. O.G. Hill Sr. and Mrs. R.L. Wilson.

For further information, call Rosemary Thomas or Mary Panciera.

Golf meeting Tuesday

The Ladies Golf Association will meet Tuesday at the Hereford Country Club at 7:30 p.m. for the election of officers and to set tournament dates.

All ladies interested are invited to attend.

Bombs planted by the Irish Republican Army exploded in two London parks in 1982, killing eight British soldiers, along with seven horses belonging to the Queen's Household Cavalry.

Miss America 1984, Vanessa Williams, was asked by pageant officials to resign because of nude photographs of her that turned up in Penthouse magazine. (Williams relinquished her title three days later.)

DEAF SMITH GENERAL HOSPITAL

Red Cross Update

BY BETTY HENSON

The Deaf Smith County Chapter of the American Red Cross is a part of a network of more than 3,000 chapters in the United States.

The local Chapter has programs and classes in first aid, CPR, water safety, babysitting, AIDS, and back injury prevention. The Chapter's disaster committee plans for and responds to disasters in the area and nationally.

The service to the military committee volunteers maintain around the clock telephone service to provide assistance to military personnel and their families.

The Chapter provides many community services, blood pressure screenings, cholesterol screenings, infant car seat programs, clothing for needy families, and other programs.

The annual garage sale will be held Friday and Saturday, March 15-16, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Red Cross office. Donations are needed for the sale and volunteers are needed to help with the sale. Call the office at 364-3761 to arrange for pickup service for items. The proceeds of the sale will be used for local Chapter needs and to help with the cost of the Desert Storm operations of the American Red Cross.

The support group for families of service personnel will meet Tuesday in the Community Center at 7 p.m.

The uniformed volunteers will host the birthday party at Westgate Nursing Home on Thursday.

Special appreciation is extended to the Boy Scouts for their efforts in fighting hunger in our community. The food collected will be distributed between Good Shepherd, San Jose Outreach, Country Road Church, and the Red Cross Disaster program.

A standard first aid class will be held Saturday, April 6, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Red Cross office. Preregistration is required.

Public invited to attend lecture Tuesday morning

Members of the Pioneer Study Club invite the public to attend a lecture at 10:30 a.m. Tuesday in the Caison House Restaurant. Guest speaker will be Michael R. Grauer, Curator of Art of the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum in Canyon.

Grauer will speak on "Art in Texas" as done by Helen Langley's great-grandfather, Hermann Lungkwitz, who was a premier landscape artist of Texas. Grauer's talk will be illustrated by original works of art by Lungkwitz. The speaker will also discuss the work of Richard Petri, the great-great-uncle of Langley who was a portrait artist with some works focusing on Indians.

Grauer received his B.A. in painting and art history at the University of Kansas and his master of arts in art history at Southern Methodist University in Dallas. He was formerly employed by the Dallas Museum of Art. He was also a teaching assistant at SMU and in 1984-85, he worked in the National Museum of American Art, Smithsonian Institution in Washington D.C.

For those interested in attending the lecture, reservations for lunch need to be made at the Caison House. Grauer will conduct a visitation period following his talk.

Richard Roberts, vice president of Oral Roberts University, said doctors determined the two-hour surgery Thursday was completely successful.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - When Alfred Hitchcock's "Psycho" came out in 1960, posters for the film warned that "No one will be admitted after the picture has started."

The man who wrote the book on which the classic thriller was based would have been happy not to show up at all.

"I don't feel comfortable attending such films," Robert Bloch said in a recent interview in an interview this week from his home in Los Angeles. "I'm quite squeamish about them."

Bloch will be present this weekend as a special guest at the World Horror Convention in Nashville.

Camp Fire Birthday Week March 11-17

Plans for Camp Fire Birthday Week, March 11-17, were finalized when members of the Hereford Camp Fire Leaders Organization met recently at the lodge.

1991 marks the 81st birthday of Camp Fire. In conjunction with the observance, the Camp Fire Annual Awards Banquet is planned at 7 p.m. March 14 at the Bull Barn.

Also, during the regular business session with Brenda Pagett, executive director, presiding, it was announced that March is also School Recognition Month and leaders volunteered to assist with their group's schools.

Pagett informed those present that Hereford has sent 573 items to the Veterans Hospital as a salute to the VA patients.

Following the business meeting, 1991 leaders were installed by the Yima Wa Shiko Horizon and the Elu Kani Ho Discovery Groups. The youth, who were dressed in ceremonial gowns, participated in an Indian ritual and lit candles to exhibit the responsibilities of the new officers. Camp Fire leaders performed during the social dance. Leaders installed included Ann Cummings, president; Peggy Daniels, vice president; and Amelia Pesina, secretary. The ceremony was concluded with those present joining in the Camp Fire Law.

Officers elected by club

The Golden Spread Aggie Mothers' Club met at K-Bob's Steak House recently. After the meal, members met in the home of President Diane Hoelscher for the election of officers.

The following officers were elected: Jane Coplen, secretary; Carol Printz, vice president membership; Terri Johnson, president; Martha Jo Hyman, treasurer; Wanda Nelson, vice president projects; and Hoelscher, parliamentarian.

Hoelscher appointed the following to the scholarship committee, which will meet on Wednesday, April 17, to interview applicants: Imogene Drerup, Johnson, Printz and Hyman.

Tentative plans were made for an ice cream social in honor of Texas A&M University seniors, on Sunday, May 19.

Following the business meeting, Hoelscher served dessert to Mary Lou Schmucker, Carolyn Thompson, Ruth Robbins, Printz, Drerup, Johnson and Hyman.

Annual banquet held

chairman, Marie Goheen; second place essay winner, Kim Thomas; Auxiliary President Betty Boggs; and District 13 Auxiliary President Betty Dykes of Plainview. District 13 Auxiliary presented a blue roll bag to Parker and a red bag to Thomas.

Voice of Democracy winners honored

The Ladies Auxiliary to VFW Post 4818 held a Voice of Democracy Banquet Feb. 4 honoring the Voice of Democracy participants and their parents.

Special guests were first place winner, Jeri Ann Parker, daughter of Mary and Gerald Parker of Dawn, and second place winner, Kim Thomas, and her parents, Linda and Dennis Thomas of Friona.

Parker also placed ninth out of 4,000 entries in Texas. District 13 Commander Felix Mote of Tulia presented Parker with a plaque from state and a $300 scholarship.

District 13 Auxiliary presented a blue roll bag to Parker and a red roll bag to Thomas.

District 13 Auxiliary President Betty Dykes spoke and told how thrilled she was to hear that Parker had placed when it was announced at the VFW Mid-Winter Round-up in Austin on Jan. 26.

President Betty Boggs spoke briefly welcoming all the members and guests.

Marie Goheen, Voice of Democracy chairman, presented medals to last year's district winners. First place went to Steven Rossi of Tulia, second to Renee Sublett of Hereford, and third to Kara N. Camp of Farwell.

The monetary awards will be presented to Parker from the local post and auxiliary and District 13 at the Awards Assembly at the Hereford High School in May.

VFW Commander Bill Craig expressed appreciation for the programs carried out by the auxiliary and to Parker for her participation in the Voice of Democracy contest.

A banquet dinner was served following the invocation given by Tom Draper.

Those present were VFW Commander Craig, Auxiliary President Boggs, District 13 Commander Mote, District 13

Auxiliary President Dykes, National Aide-de-Camp and past District 13 Commander Buddy Dykes of Plainview, Tom and Argen Draper, Erma and Jim Loving, Leone and Bob Baum, Marie and Tom Goheen, Ruth and Bob Morris, Linda and Dennis Thomas, Mildred Deyke and daughter, SuLee Charles, Martha Bridges, Darleen Carol, Maisie Heath, Ann Walker, Essie Martin, Greta Short, Ruth Stethem, Doris Wilson, and the honorees, Parker and Thomas.

Masonic Lodge open house slated

Hereford Masonic Lodge No. 849 has joined 940 other Masonic Lodges across Texas in scheduling a simultaneous statewide public open house between 2-5 p.m. today. The local lodge is located on Country Club Drive.

Doug Crouch, master of Hereford lodge, is extending an open invitation to anyone interested in learning more about Masonry and what Masons do.

He noted that Fred E. Allen of Mt. Pleasant, grand master of the 180,000-member Masonic Grand Lodge of Texas, had defined the intent of the "showcase" open house event as being "to put Masonry on display so anyone interested can see for themselves what Masons do and have a better understanding of what Masonry is all about."

Printed cards will give brief explanations of more significant points of interest about the lodge room, including some of the more prominent symbols utilized in Masonry to teach Masonic philosophy. Best known of these symbols are the square and compasses, which identify members of the craft, together with other tools of the medieval stonemasons...builders of the great Gothic Cathedrals.

Allen explained, that to the three-and-one-half million Masons in the U.S., these symbols are reminders of a Mason's duty to live by highest moral standards, to practice brotherly love, and to affirm loyalty to his country. He said Masons believe that the quality of a man's life should reflect his faith in God and his ethical ideals.

Other Masonic-related organizations are also being invited to participate in the open house program to provide insight into their particular organizations. Although not active in all communities, these affiliated Masonic groups include the York Rite, Scottish Rite, the Shrine, the Grotto, the Beauceant, Order of the Eastern Star, Daughters of the Nile, Daughters of Mokanna, Order of DeMolay for Boys, Order of Rainbow for Girls, and Job's Daughters the newest entry into Texas.

Allen cited the showcase event as a first in Texas in which various Masonic and Masonic-related groups join in public display of their respective regalia and symbols in a blend of colorful pageantry open to all.

The over-all objective is to dispel the misconception many people have that Masonry is a secret society. Masonry does not conceal its existence, principals* or aims. Members proudly wear the square and compasses and other Masonic insignia, and lodge buildings are well identified and often made available for appropriate community activities.

Masons collectively provide over $2 million a day and thousands of hours of service donated to worthy causes, including over $750 million every year for charitable activities.

It was further pointed out that while Masons do not solicit members, man of good character may ask to become members.

Members of Hereford Masonic Lodge and other associated Masonic members will be on hand to answer questions during the public open house.

Nutrition without sacrifice

Eating right in 1991 is easier than ever before.

As more Americans demand foods that are tasty, yet low in fat and cholesterol, many companies are responding with a variety of new and interesting fair. "Even people who cannot believe that when food tastes good, it can actually be good for you, will be surprised at what is available," says nutritionist Anne Fletcher, the former executive editor of the "Tufts University Diet and Nutrition Letter."

"With so many Americans working outside the home and raising a family at the same time, good nutrition must be made convenient," states Fletcher. "The good news is that among the vast array of new food products, some quick-service restaurants also are offering healthier menu items."

For example, Long John Silver's has recently introduced a new line of baked fish meals in its 1,500 restaurants throughout the country. Menu offerings include baked fish with light paprika, baked fish with lemon crumb and shrimp scampi, as well as baked chicken with light herbs—all low in fat and long on taste.

And the cost, typically around $4, including baked fish, rice pilaf, green beans and coleslaw, won't strain the pocketbook.

In addition, these new menu items meet the new dietary guidelines for Americans on the percentage of calories from fat. According to these guidelines released by the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the Department of Health and Human Services, less than 20 percent of calories should come from fat.

Moreover, scientific research indicates that eating fish has certain health benefits. Low in fat and rich in omega-three fatty acids, fish may help reduce the risk of heart disease.

Currently research also indicates that because fish is naturally low in fat, it is an excellent alternative to red meat, which has been shown to increase the risk of certain types of cancer.

In 1984, a gunman opened fire at a fast-food restaurant in San Ysidro, Calif., and killed 21 people before being shot dead by police.

Hairstyles take a short cut

Short, feminine hairstyles are back and they are smoother, shiner and more healthy-looking than ever. The buzzword of the season is versatility, say the style experts who predict hairstyles and products that give women the freedom to change their look on a moment's notice will be "hot" this spring.

Hair will be worn smooth and sleek, curly and full, parted to the side or pulled straight back, depending on a woman's hair type, preference or mood. Other trends to watch for include:

- Long, breezy bangs, worn straight over the eyes or waved back off the face or to one side.

- Face-framing wisps or "flicks" of hair—even a curl or two-cut into the sides and at the crown area.

- Chin-length or shorter bobs, with height at the crown for added styling versatility.

- Precise layering and short, tapered napes for added texture and fullness.

- Soft, natural-looking hair and products which keep it looking and feeling healthy: new mousses, gels and sprays moisturize the hair while they style and hold for beautiful, soft, manageable hair without stickiness or flaking.

Above all, choose a look that suits your hair type and your lifestyle.

During March the Deaf Smith County Library's display will be Hereford Camp Fire which was organized locally in 1928 with Cassie Dowell serving as the first guardian. Members of the Chosro Adventure Club are, back row, from left, Jamie Marquez, Denise Amaro, Valerie Garza, Heather Klos and Katrina Adams. Kneeling are, from left, Kasey Fox and Lisa Beavers.

Extension News

BY BEVERLY HARDER
County Extension Agent

Pharmacologists classify caffeine as a mild stimulant to the central nervous system and consider it one of the world's most widely used drugs. Caffeine, classified in a group of chemicals Generally Recognized as Safe (GRAS), was reviewed in 1978 and the safety of caffeine for human consumption was reaffirmed.

Today, however, public concern continues over the safety of caffeine and its possible negative effects. Extensive research on the relationship between caffeine and human disease indicates these results:

- * Coffee, both regular and decaffeinated, has been shown to stimulate the gastric mucosa and increase secretions of stomach acid, exacerbating existing ulcers.

- * The 1978 review of caffeine based on available data from long-term animal studies revealed no evidence that caffeine was carcinogenic.

- * The data on the relationship between caffeine and fibrocystic breast disease is inconclusive, with some studies suggesting a minor relationship between caffeine consumption and palpable breast findings and others suggesting no relationship at all.

- * There is no evidence to prove that moderate caffeine consumption by pregnant women causes birth defects.

Recently, Dutch researchers concluded that the consumption of boiled coffee raised serum cholesterol levels by 10 percent. On the other hand, drinking filtered coffee did not affect serum lipid levels.

This is actually good news since 75 percent of all American coffee drinkers drink their coffee drip-filtered. The researchers speculate that the differences may exist because the boiled coffee is in contact with the grounds longer and at a higher temperature than drip-filtered coffee.

Decaffeinated coffee has also been tested. Dr. Robert Superko of Stanford University found that men who switched to decaffeinated coffee showed a seven percent increase in their LDL cholesterol, which could increase the risk of heart attack by an estimated 12 percent. Superko suggests that this is true because stronger, more robust beans are used for decaffeinated coffees.

More research is needed to determine which of the 500 chemical components in the beans might be responsible.

It is important to remember that caffeine has a long history of safe use by humans. So far, scientific studies do not indicate that people will suffer any harm from drinking available caffeine-containing beverages in moderation.

Surprising facts about wild birds

If birds make you feel all atwitter, you're not alone. According to Donald and Lillian Stokes, two of America's leading experts on birds and nature, over 105 million Americans feed and observe wildlife in their own yards.

- * Americans spend over $1.1 billion dollars annually on birdseed, and over $22 million a year for bird houses, baths and feeders.

- * An average hummingbird consumes half its weight in sugar each day.

- * Birds take baths in dust to remove parasites from their plumage.

- * Female birds usually build the nests.

Officers installed at sorority meeting

Alpha Alpha Preceptor Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority met recently in the home of Nan Gauthreaux and installed officers for the 1991-92 year.

New officers are Barbara Burkhalter, president; Gerry Taylor vice president; Alene Tindal, recording secretary; Beverly Redelsperger, corresponding secretary; and Murlene Streun, treasurer.

City Council representatives are Burkhalter, Phyllis Neill, Brenda Thomas, Tindal, and alternate Redelsperger.

The meeting was called to order by Virginia Jackson, president. The opening ritual was given, followed by roll call and the minutes were read and approved.

Communications received included information on the state convention to be held in Houston June 13-16.

Appreciation was extended by Gauthreaux for the honor of representing the chapter as sweetheart. Secret sisters were extended appreciation for Valentine goodies by Lillie Shipman, Phyllis Neill, Lynda Brown, Jackson, Redelsperger, Streun, Tindal, Rosemarie Robinson, Karren Ruland, Taylor, and Burkhalter. An appreciation letter was read from Kathy Neill Danley for the bridal shower the chapter hosted.

The program and yearbook committee will hold a rush party on Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the home of Alene Tindal.

Items for March for the Operation

Good Shepherd food pantry will be boxes of macaroni and cheese.

The City Council committee will meet Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the Southwestern Public Service Reddy Room.

Unfinished business included a discussion of the suggested by-laws for City Council. The meeting closed with members joining hands for the Mizpah.

The hostess gift was won by Tindal.

Refreshments of peanut-butter bars, apricot bread, tortilla pinwheels, canton mix, spiced cider, coffee and coke were served by Gauthreaux and Shipman.

Members present were Jackson, Burkhalter, Redelsperger, Streun, Brown, Neill, Robinson, Ruland, Taylor, Tindal, and Jan Walser.

BALTIMORE (AP) - Former Baltimore Orioles pitching ace Jim Palmer is a step closer to becoming the first Hall of Famer to return to the major leagues.

The Orioles confirmed Wednesday that they've invited Palmer, 45, to pitch spring training.

Palmer, a three-time Cy Young winner during his 19 years as an Oriole, always resented that the Orioles let him go in 1984. He was inducted into the Hall of Fame last summer on the first ballot.

Scouts have said his speed is about average major league velocity, but the resiliency of his arm after a seven-year layoff is highly doubted.

Private Master Suite Is Loaded With Amenities

COTTAGE FEATURES EASY FLOWING FLOOR PLAN

FEATURE HOMES

BY W.D. FARMER, A.I.B.D.

The front door of this attractive cottage opens directly into a large activity room with fireplace. The activity room flows easily into the dining room, which leads into the kitchen and breakfast room. The well-designed kitchen includes an efficient work triangle, ample cabinet and counter space, and a free standing sink area that overlooks the breakfast room. The breakfast room provides an entrance to the terrace and to the double garage with storage room. Also adjacent to the kitchen and breakfast area is a handy laundry room with natural light and storage cabinets.

The master suite is privately positioned at one end of the home. The bedroom features a bay window and separate his-and-her closets. The master bath includes a double vanity, separate shower, and step-up whirlpool tub.

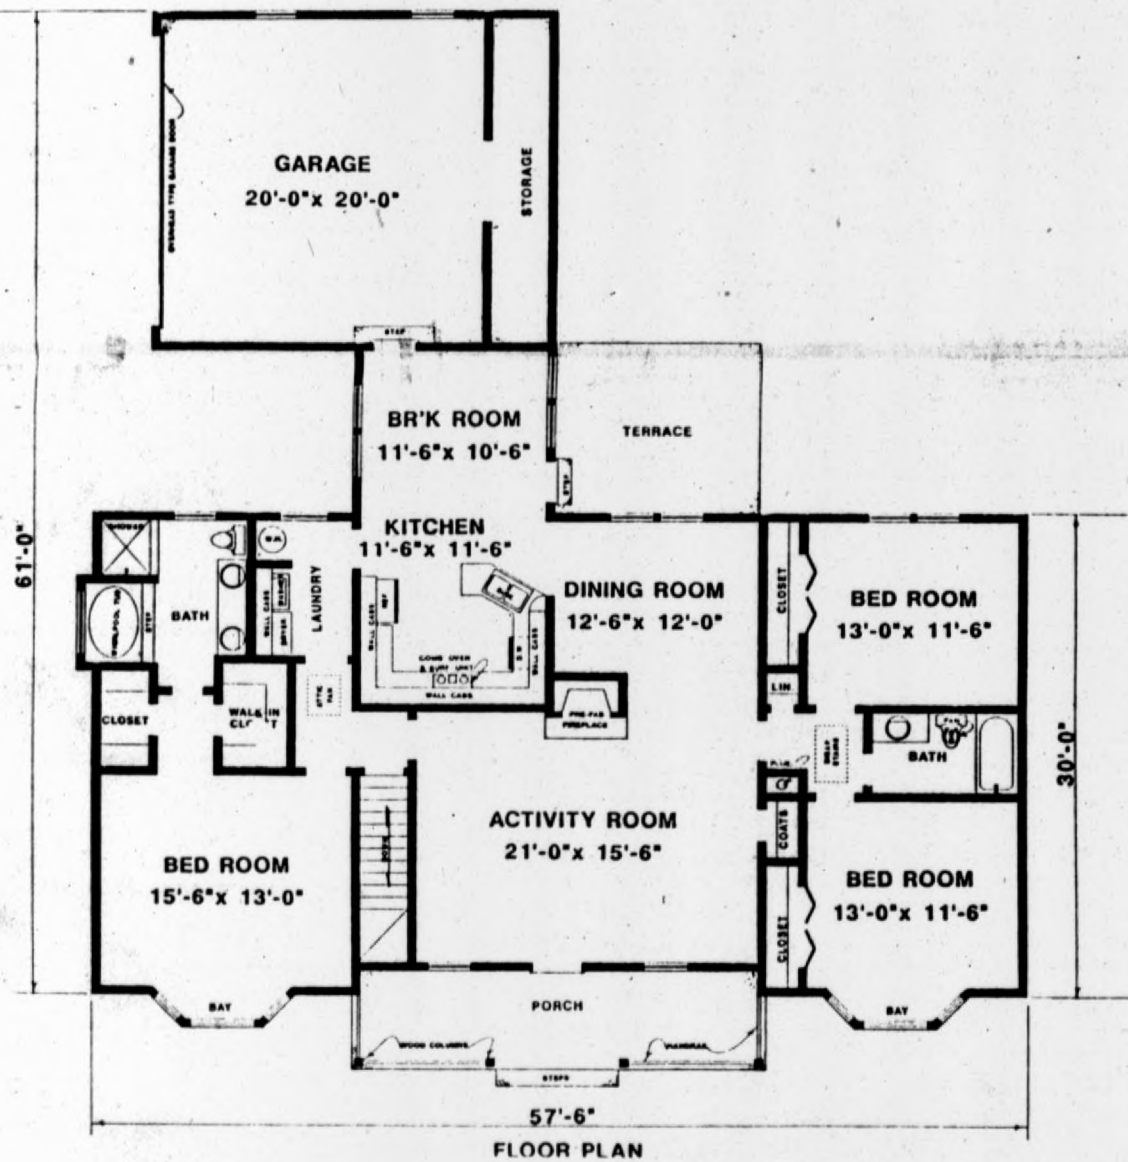

The other two bedrooms are located at the opposite end of the home and share a bath. One of the bedrooms has a bay window. Additional features of the home include an attic fan for better energy efficiency and disappearing attic stairs for increased storage capacity.

This home is designed for a basement foundation. The basement stairs are conveniently located between the activity room and master bedroom.

The symmetrical front exterior is embellished with horizontal siding, hip and gable roof design, twin bay windows, and covered front porch with wood railing.

This is a computer generated plan. The plan is number 894. It includes 1,835 square feet of heated area. All W.D. Farmer plans include special construction details for energy efficiency and are drawn to meet FHA and VA requirements. For further information, write W.D. Farmer, P.O. Box 450025, Atlanta, GA 30345.

Flashing stops roof moisture

By POPULAR MECHANICS For AP Newsfeatures

Flashing is used to prevent moisture from entering under the roof covering wherever two or more planes of a roof meet or wherever the roof meets a vertical surface.

It is also used along edges of roofs and other windows or doorways to direct moisture away from the house exterior and structural framing. Roll roofing material is widely used for flashing, particularly along ridges and hips, and at valleys. However, the most durable flashing materials are sheet aluminum, copper or galvanized steel. All are sold in rolls especially for the purpose.

Chimney flashing is usually in two parts: the base (or step) flashing, which wraps completely around the base of the chimney and extends several inches under the roof

Keep plants during cold winter months

Q. - We have several hundred dollars' worth of yard and deck plants. Not only are the plants expensive, but they require several seasons to reach a good size and full growth. What can we do to prevent their dying off during the winter?

They sit many of the plants upon shelves arranged atop a small dinette table in their basement storeroom.

A. - One couple we know stores their plants under fluorescent lights from mid-October to the end of April.

For hanging plants, they have hung pipes on chains from the ceiling, with fluorescent shop lights above. The shop lights are often on sale for $10 each, or less, and the bulbs only cost $1 each. The cost of operating them - for electricity - is only pennies per month.

Rhoton, Mixon vows spoken

Lynette Rhoton and Wiley Mixon, both of Amarillo, exchanged nuptials Saturday morning, March 9, in the Amarillo Garden Center.

The ceremony was officiated by the Rev. Tom Mills of Kingswood Methodist Church in Amarillo.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rhoton of 246 Fir and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Mixon of Amarillo.

Jane Bledsue of Amarillo accompanied Paula O'Neal of Amarillo as she sang "There Is Love" and "This Is the Day."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an ivory chantilly lace and satin gown designed with a high-low hemline which swept into a train. It was also fashioned with an off-the-shoulder neckline, short puffy sleeves, a mermaid bodice of chantilly lace over satin, satin bows at the neck and a deep V-shape back. The flounce lace skirt was created with a ruffle joining a flounce to the bodice.

The bride also wore a hair bow.

Kristan Dodson of Arlington, the bride's niece, invited guests to register at the reception held in the Amarillo Garden Center.

The bride's sister, Teresa Behrends of Arlington, served cake and the groom's sister, Candy Vann of Amarillo, poured punch and coffee. The bride is a 1980 graduate of Hereford High School and is presently employed by BancCentral West.

The bridegroom, a 1984 graduate of Amarillo High School, is employed by the Texas Department of Corrections.

To clean a glass decanter, chop a large potato into small pieces. Put it into the decanter with some warm water and shake rapidly.

In the 1945 movie To Have and Have Not Lauren Bacall's singing voice was dubbed in by 14-year-old Andy Williams.

Preparations underway

"Stars and Stripes Forever" will be the theme for the 1991 Miss Hereford Scholarship Pageant scheduled for June 8. Starting the ball rolling are Kim Porter and Kyla McDowell, co-directors, as they plan a coke party set for Thursday for potential entrants.

Coke party to kickoff Miss Hereford Pageant Thursday

The 1991 Miss Hereford Pageant committee members will be getting acquainted with potential entrants of the pageant at a coke party scheduled Thursday at 441 Ave B. at 6:30 p.m. Sponsored by the Women's Division of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce, the pageant is open to girls ages 16-21. Potential entrants must attend the meeting on Thursday. Each contestant will participate in an interview by judges, talent competition, and evening gown competition. Applications are available at the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce office, 701 N. Main and should be returned to the Chamber office on Thursday, April 4, by 4:30 p.m. "Stars and Stripes Forever" will be the theme of the 1990 Miss Hereford Pageant scheduled for June 8. For more information, contact co-directors Kim Porter at 364-4044 or Kyla McDowell at 364-5415.

YOUR EYES

SUNGLASSES FOR EVERYONE

Scientists are coming up with more and more reasons to wear sunglasses. Our eyes cannot handle excess ultraviolet rays that come from the sun. Whether it's due to the thinning of the ozone layer, the extended time we spend outdoors, or the fact that we are more aware of the damage the sun can do, it's more important than ever to wear quality glass or plastic sunglasses that can filter UV-A and UV-B light.

The Food and Drug Administration has approved a rating system to indicate the light absorption of sunglass lenses. "Cosmetic" lenses absorb only 70 percent of UV-B; they may be comfortable but offer limited protection. "General-purpose" lenses, absorbing at least 95 percent of UV-B, are recommended for most outdoor activities. "Special purpose" lenses, for bright sun on sand, snow or water, block at least 99 percent of UV-B rays.

Get your child immunized

Do you consider yourself a good parent? Surprisingly, many people who do, have not really done all they can to protect the health, perhaps even the lives, of their children. According to health officials, in 1990, there were more than 17,000 cases of measles in the U.S., a disease which until recently had been all but forgotten. According to the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, recent outbreaks of measles and mumps and an increase of whooping cough in children under five could be due, in part, to parents not getting their children vaccinated. Public health officials say only 50 to 60 percent of all children under two have completed the recommended infant immunizations:

- four DTP shots;
- three doses of oral polio vaccine;
- one MMR shot for measles, mumps and rubella;
- appropriate immunizations for Hib, to protect against a form of meningitis. Booster doses are also needed for DTP and MMR before the child starts school. Vaccination is vital for three key reasons, say the experts at the FDA:

- Even though vaccines sometimes cause side effects, not getting vaccinated is riskier for children because childhood diseases may cause even more serious problems. The childhood Vaccine Injury Act compensates individuals for the rare cases of injury or death related to the DTP, MMR and polio vaccines. Parents should discuss this subject with their physicians. For more information on this important new law call 1-800-338-2382.
- Not getting immunized during childhood can also cause problems for adults.
- States require certain vaccinations before children can enter school.

OIL SPILLS

By RUSTY DUTTON

Oil spills will have a great effect on the 21st Century. There are many ways they will effect the world.

Major oil spills such as the Gulf spill, Valdez and the Middle East spill will have the greatest effect.

Exotic and innocent fish, mammals and plants will become extinct. They will be poisoned and covered by oil and will die. Bodies of fish, mammals and plants will be washed to shore dead. The next generation will miss the exotic waters of the world and beautiful things in the water.

Oil spills can ruin the environment and kill the habitat around it. Land should not be wasted when it has no reason to be wasted.

The oil could get in water plants and do major damage. People could be poisoned and get sick, or maybe even die. The oil could shut down factories. People would lose their jobs.

RAIN FORESTS

By BRANDON STOW

People who are cutting down the rain forests are taking away our oxygen. Each time a tree is cut, a breath of fresh, clean air is lost. We need to stop cutting down the rain forests so we can breathe.

When a tree is cut down, an animal's home might be lost too. We need to stop cutting down the rain forests. It is taking a tremendous amount away from us and the earth. When we cut down a tree, we are damaging our air and our lives. I pity the fool who cuts down our air supply. I really, really do, I wonder, do the people who cut down rain forests have a conscience? I don't think so. I wish they would stop cutting down the rain forests. We are stupid to cut down all of these trees. We need to stop.

THE FAX MACHINE

By ZACH

I think the fax machine will have a great effect on the 21st Century.

More will be made and owned. People will send letters faster and easier this way.

With the fax machine, people wouldn't have to go to the grocery store. Just fax your list to the grocery store and have your food delivered. It would also be easier to make travel reservations: just fax for a room. It would also speed up mail urgency. If something is happening, just fax the people the occasion. You could also send money faster than in the mail.

A fax machine could be good for old or crippled people. If they needed something or were hurt, sick or anything they could send the news faster and a lot easier.

THE PERSIAN GULF WAR

By JOSH ROWE

I feel the war in the Middle East will effect the 21st Century in many ways.

First, we are creating a huge debt that will have to be paid. This means that taxes will be higher and higher and people will be poorer.

I also feel that the U.S. will be viewed as a nation that will not tolerate aggression from other countries.

The oil prices in the 21st Century will go higher and higher because there was so much oil dumped in the ocean.

It is also possible that Iraq might become part of Saudi Arabia or Kuwait by the 21st Century.

I hope our troops will soon be coming home. I hope for peace in the Middle East and for no more lives to be lost.

STUDENTS!
This is Newspaper in Education Week. Your newspaper can help you learn in many interesting ways. Try one of these ideas with the news pages of your paper:

Elementary — Find a news story about a famous person. Make a list of things the story tells you about this person. Then write two questions you would like to ask the person and the answers you think he or she would give.

Secondary — The U.S. Constitution guarantees freedom of the press. Clip articles from your newspaper that could not be printed in newspapers in a nation that forbids this freedom. Design a poster on the theme, "Freedom of the Press."

SINGLE PARENTING
By MAYRA

I think single parenting will change our future because children need both parents. I say it affects the oldest. I am the oldest of my mother's children. I had been raised for three years just by my father. It was very hard on all of us, especially my father. I wish that I could stop single parenting before it got worse. This situation could cause children to run away. Some parents would feel so much pressure they might commit suicide. The kids might feel blame or may feel pressure. If parents get divorced, kids might use that as an example, or they might use the kids for revenge. The situation should stop because it hurts more people than it should.

DRUG WARS RAGE ON
By BETHANY TOWNSEND

This is a headline I see in almost every newspaper. It tells about drugs and their harmful results. It's true, we do have other problems in this world. War, crime, poverty and homelessness are among these. Our ozone layer and the environment are important, too. We can no longer ignore drugs. The adults use them, the teenager use them, some of the children use drugs...who next? Some of the most common drugs include: Stimulants--These drugs speed up the nervous system. You seem to have more energy. This could be good, but there are some side effects. You can feel nervous and have trouble sleeping. Violence and fear occur if a heavy dose is taken. Some stimulants are crack, cocaine and "ice." Depressants--These drugs, including alcohol, slow down the heart rate. Your muscles relax and your reaction time is slower. You can have trouble thinking and loss of memory can result. A coma or death is possible.

Narcotics--These are depressants that contain opium or other pain reducing medication. People who use narcotics become so involved with the drugs they stop taking care of their body. AIDS or malnourishment is possible. Heroin, codeine and morphine are narcotics. Hallucinogens--The drugs that change the senses. They increase the heart rate and hands and feet feel numb. People see, hear and smell things that aren't there. Hallucinogens cause users to become violent. LSD and PCP are hallucinogens. Inhalants--They are probably the most common drug. A person has more energy for a short time, then a feeling of anger might occur. You feel dizzy and lose your memory. Brain damage is one of the effects. Glue, white out, paint thinner, fingernail polish remover and gasoline are inhalants. Some children can't buy expensive drugs, so they use glue or paint thinner instead. Sometimes, the parents are unaware of their child's addiction, and don't find out until their child is gone. Why do people use drugs? Some children think they have a horrible life. Maybe their parents are divorced and there was a death in the family. They use drugs to make their problems disappear. The only thing they're helping is their own death. Drugs shorten your life and decrease mental and physical abilities. No matter how bad your life is at home, it can never be as bad as a life with drugs. Another reason is peer pressure. Their friends who take drugs offer it to them. Some people believe that if you refuse it, they won't be your friend anymore. True friends respect a good friend. If someone gets mad at you for doing something you think is right, they're not your real friend. Some parents teach their children to use drugs. The kids think that if their parents do it, it must be all right. After all, parents are supposed to teach their children the right things to do. If your parents jumped off a 1,000 foot building, would you? Don't do what you think is wrong. If we don't do something about the drug problem, the world could end. They might destroy the United States. We have to clean up the drug problem so we can live freely. We've been fighting the drug war, but we're losing.

Drug War Over, No More Drugs
Drugs can kill, they can hurt. They destroy you. If you lead a drug-free life, be proud of it. Do what you think is right and stay drug-free forever.

THE POLLUTION PROBLEM
By CAREY LYLES
Pollution is a very serious problem. Pollution affects everybody and we all suffer from it. I think we need to do something about pollution or we could all die. One kind of pollution is too much trash. Chemicals from trash hurt the soil, kills wildlife and people, and destroys plants. Landfills also take up precious land. People need to buy things that are recyclable, biodegradable and chemical-free. Air pollution is another serious problem. It causes breathing difficulty, diseases of the respiratory system, and death. Factories, cars, trucks and nuclear reactors make harmful gasses. Factories and vehicles put out carbon monoxide. A radioactive cloud hangs over many nuclear facilities also polluting the air. To stop air pollution people must put filters on their cars and factory smokestacks. We also need to stop the depletion of the ozone layer. Use products without CFCs (chlorofluorocarbons). CFC destroys the ozone. With less ozone we could have more skin cancer, dead crops, eye problems and melting of glaciers causing flooding. How we choose will effect the 21st Century. If we take care of the earth, hopefully it won't get much worse. But if we neglect the earth things will be awful. What you and I do will determine the effect of pollution on the 21st Century.

THE GULF WAR
By DUSTIN LEWIS

I feel that the war in the Persian Gulf will become a historical event. I think it will effect the 21st Century. It will be a story that I can share with my children or my grandchildren. That is why I am paying a lot of attention to what the news has to say about the war.

The soldiers show be how brave men and women they are. They are making sure that my children will have the same privileges I have.

I think that the war will change the world if we use too much money or nuclear weapons. We may not have enough money to support us in America. I think it will also hurt the United State is Iraq does not elect a new leader. If Saddam Hussein wants to get back at us he could come to the United State and try to kill everyone in America.

Then, if we had lost he could come and take over the United States and have two countries to rule. If he had won, he might have taken over the world.

I think Hussein is a very dangerous man. I would not want to do something that involved him.

COMPUTERS

By LAURIE GILBERT

The computer technology of today will affect the 21st Century. One think I think they will be used for is making clothes. You may be able to draw a design, put it in a computer, and it will come out made.

You may also be able to order some things from the store and they will come directly to your home. Just think, no more grocery shopping will be necessary. You can order anything and everything you wish (maybe).

You might even walk into a classroom and find the teacher is a computer! If that happens we will not need teachers any more! Kids then would have to listen very carefully. If they do not understand they will just push a button.

I think these things will happen because computers are so smart. Of course, they will never replace people, because people will create computers, even in the 21st Century.

ANN RICHARDS
By EDITH MONTOYA

In November 1990 the new governor of Texas was elected. The new governor was a woman, Ann Richards.

What will the year 2000 be like as a result of the election? Gov. Richards has sent an education person to "clean up education." He may make us have more days of school. Instead of 175 days it could be 200 days in the 21st Century. We could have longer hours.

We might learn more subjects and may have to spend more years in school. We may have stricter schools. Then, because we have better schools, we could have fewer gangs, fewer bums and less violence.

If Gov. Richards does a good job there could be more woman governors. It is very likely we could have a woman president in the 21st Century. On the other hand, there might not be another woman governor, or president, if she does a bad job.

It was a great election, and a woman was elected as governor. She is not like Ma Ferguson, who was elected just because of her husband. This election will effect the 21st Century in some way. Now we just have to wait and see.

ROBOTS

By JESSICA WUERFLEIN
Modern technology has led to the development of robots. Who know how these robots may effect the year 2000? I do not know but here is my idea.
If robots get too out of hand they may take over the world. Their wires may get cross and the robot would go crazy. If they do that they cannot be controlled.

If and when they break down, we may have to live on them since they are made of metal and cannot be disposed of. That will cause the world to be an ugly place.

A good thing that could happen is they could entertain you, or bring you breakfast, fight for you and get you all kinds of things.

These are only my ideas but they could happen. Please try to control it.

DRUG ABUSE

By VANESSA CABRERA
By the year 2000 there are going to be more people addicted to drugs than people not addicted to drugs.

California and Mexico contain more drugs and deadly pills and stuff like that than the rest of the states put together. The largest city in California has people who grow more marijuana than anywhere else in the United States.

Mexico grows a lot of weed because of its hot, dry climate. In Mexico you find more drug dealers on almost every street corner. The drug dealers are able to cross the border from Mexico in cars, and have hidden the drugs in places inside the car.

The most dangerous drug is ice. People don't know what they are getting into with drugs.

COMPUTERS

By TRENT ALEXANDER
I think the effect of computers in the 21st Century will be tremendous. The technology will be so great that computers will figure out some of the biggest problems.

Tax returns would be no problem. There would be a problem with people at the bank being out of a job. Teaching school would be the same. The business secretary would need more programming skills. There would be more electricians. There would be more computers in security systems, and more airline would use steward computers.

The air force would use more computers to target things, but that does not mean that computers are smarter than humans.

THE PERSIAN GULF WAR

By PRISCILLA CORONADO
I think the war in the Middle East will effect the 21st Century because the bombing will mess up the clean air we breathe. It will also ruin more lives of babies, children and adults. It will affect us because we won't get to know what our future will be like. The beautiful plants and animals will die. And more kids will lose their parents.

It will also cause more tax for us because we have to help support them with our money. We will also have to pay more money because gas and oil prices will go up. More money will be used to rebuild buildings they messed up. Mothers and fathers of the soldiers will get very sick because of all of the worrying they have done.

SPACE

By JUAN MARTINEZ
The first landing on the moon was a great step for mankind. It showed we were getting closer to the mysteries of space, like the black holes, and whether there are other lifeforms out there. If they are out there, will we ever meet them? And if we meet them will they be foes or friends?

In the 21st Century, will we get closer to the mysteries of space? Will we make cars that can travel through space? And, will the people of the 21st Century grow on this knowledge and learn to live in peace? If we do meet other lifeforms, will they share knowledge with us and will we share ours with them?

I think pollution will really effect the 21st Century.

The air pollution in our air is getting worse. Pretty soon there won't be any clean air and that will really effect the 21st Century.

The water pollution is even worse. People are throwing things in the water that can destroy the water and kill animals. People should either recycle their trash or keep it.

Many fish and birds are dying from oil spills. Many rare species are dying because of oil spills.

Many people should recycle instead of polluting.

The biggest problem that I think will effect the 21st Century will probably be drugs. It will cause more people to die.

The reason why I think this is because people will probably be suing drugs more than they do right now. If they do keep this drug problem going, then I think that they will raise the price for all this horrible stuff going on. Then people will be stealing, committing suicide and killing.

POLLUTION
By AMANDA CASAREZ
Pollution will effect the 21st Century and other bad

The dirty air you breathe in will hurt your lungs. A lot of people die if they have heart diseases or any other sickness. The dirty chemicals will also hurt people by getting in eyes or other things.

Pollution could also kill very many animals the same way it kills humans. Animals have a life, too. They could die by eating foods that have dirty chemicals in it. They could die just from sniffing it in their body. Pollution could probably kill plants, too.

I think if pollution keeps on killing people, animals and plants the world will hardly have any people in it. I think the world needs people to do work and live a good and happy life. If there is so much killing people will be sad for a long time. But just remember, pollution is harmful and I think it should stop.

OIL IS WASTING
By MISTY TICE

I think the oil spill in the Persian Gulf is important both now and for the 21st Century. If the oil keeps spilling it could waste even more oil than it has. Kuwait is a rich country right now from all the oil in the land, but if all the oil is getting wasted they might not be so rich in the year 2000.

From what is happening, oil prices could increase a lot by the 21st Century. The big oil spills also affect food chains. Food chains affect food webs, and soon there could be endangered animals. There could even be extinct animals in the year 2000 from the oil spills today.

AMERICA AND RUSSIA
By MARCI GOLDSMITH

America and Russia are sharing more things than we have in the past. Sending a McDonalds to Russia was a good thing to do. I think so because they could want more restaurants there. So then we could have a good relationship with them.

They may want to know more about American literature. They may want to taste more American foods. They may want to send a few people from their country to America to find out more about our business.

The only way it could be a bad idea is if the meat was bad and some of the people got sick and died. Then they might think we put poison in it. So they might turn against us and it could ruin our friendship with them. We would then have to start all over, trying to be friends again so that we would have peace between each other in the 21st Century.

OIL SPILLS

By CHARLES HUBNER

I think that oil spills will be a big effect in the 21st Century. The sea animals would die and there would be no more Red Lobster restaurants and no more Long John Silver's restaurants. People at home couldn't have seafood. The water would be polluted and nobody could swim and dive underwater. Nobody could drink water if it had oil in it. People would die if they didn't have water and more deaths would happen. Cold ice cream and other things couldn't be made if they used water because the water would be polluted with oil. I also think that whoever polluted the water should clean it up.

AIDS

By MITCH WAGNER

AIDS is spread by sharing needles mostly among drug users. It is a virus that is transmitted by blood. It causes you to have no immune system. You are unable to fight off any infection. You become sick. Eventually you die. AIDS is a very deadly virus. People all over the world have it. They spread very easily. By the 21st Century I think that there will be a cure. Doctors and researchers are looking and finding new cures for AIDS.

The Franco-Prussian War began in 1870.

EARTH AWARESM
Here are some simple things you can do to help save the environment, and save you money!

On the average, a single car adds it's own weight in carbon to the atmosphere each year. Walking, biking, car-pooling and taking public transportation all help spare the air.

FOOD AWARENESS By Ann Crowley R.D., Ph.D.

The Power of the Potato

The Irish potato famine changed the entire country of Ireland and greatly influenced the culture of this country. Potatoes were a mainstay of the diet of the Irish people back in the middle of the nineteenth century. When the potato crop became diseased and other food was not available, much of the population died or left Ireland for the United States or other countries.

In the United States the displaced Irish were again able to use their favorite potato recipes. Colcannon is a potato-cabbage dish that can be a full meal. I have given this recipe before, but I thought you might like to try it on this St. Patrick's Day.

Colcannon

- 4 medium size potatoes, peeled and sliced thin
- 1 medium onion, peeled and sliced thin
- 1 1/2 cups green cabbage shredded fine
- 2 cups boiling water
- 1/4 tsp salt
- 2 Tbs. cream
- 2 Tbsp. margarine or butter
- 1/8 tsp ground white pepper
- dash of nutmeg

Boil potatoes, onion and cabbage in salted water until tender. Drain. Return to heat. Add margarine, cream pepper and nutmeg. Stir to mix and melt margarine. Mash mixture until fluffy. If still add more cream
