Saddam pledges cooperation, UN officials are skeptical

UNITED NATIONS (AP) - Saddam Hussein has pledged cooperation with a new U.N. nuclear inspection team, but skeptical Security Council ambassadors are considering ways to guarantee Iraqi compliance.

Spurred by the threat of U.S. military action, the Iraqi president said the U.N. team due in Baghdad today would receive a complete accounting of all his nuclear sites and immediate access to them.

Saddam on Friday promised "prompt and unimpeded access will be ensured to the locations and items designated for inspection ... in addition to guaranteeing the security and safety of members of the inspection team."

Iraqi Ambassador Abdul Amir al-Anbari said the list would be given to the inspectors in Baghdad on Sunday evening or Monday.

The White House said Friday that if Iraq violates the Persian Gulf War cease-fire agreement by hiding its nuclear sites, U.S. military force could be used to enforce compliance.

Saddam's declaration came in a reply sent to a request for full cooperation made Thursday by Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

Three times last week, Iraqi soldiers denied U.N. nuclear inspectors access to trucks loaded with equipment believed to be a crude device for enriching uranium to weapons-grade quality.

On the last inspection attempt on June 28, near the town of Fallujah, Iraqi troops fired over the heads of the U.N. inspectors to run them off.

The Security Council met privately Friday to hear a report on the incidents and on the talks that three top U.N. officials had with senior Iraqi officials who pledged their government's full cooperation.

"We've heard that many times before," said the acting U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, Alexander Watson. "The proof of the pudding is in the eating."

The acting British ambassador, Thomas Richardson, said Saddam's statement left several major problems unresolved.

"What has happened to this missing material? ... The production of a list by the Iraqi authorities of items which might have been destroyed and which might or might not have been the same material that the inspection team saw on the 28th was simply not adequate," he said.

Rolf Ekeus, the executive chairman of the U.N. Special Commission to dismantle Iraq's weapons of mass destruction, told the Security Council that Baghdad claimed to have destroyed some nuclear equipment because it might have been banned under the Security Council's cease-fire resolution.

Hans Blix, the director-general of the International Atomic Energy Agency, saw some of the destroyed equipment on July 2.

"The large pieces of equipment which were thus inspected were related to nuclear research and could not have had relevance for the production of weapons-usable material," Ekeus reported. "No meaningful explanation was given why they had been destroyed."

The council planned to meet again Monday after it sees how fully Iraq cooperates with the U.N. inspection team.

For Bryant there was never a doubt that Coke is real thing

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer
HEREFORD (AP) - For John David Bryant there was never any doubt that Coke was the real thing.

His wife, Beverly, wasn't always so sure.

On their honeymoon 15 years ago, Bryant spent most of their fun money on Coca-Cola antiques - signs, posters, clocks - anything with the cola's famous scripted white letters. "I kept waiting for nice dinners and nights out on the town, but it just didn't happen," Beverly said.

After returning from the honeymoon and realizing her husband's fascination with the carbonated drink was not going to fizzle, she decided she could share his fervent desire to collect Coke antiques or "end the marriage right there," she said jokingly.

Today, nearly every room in the Bryant's home contains some of the thousands of pieces of Coke memorabilia worth upwards of $250,000 that the couple and their three children have gathered from all over the country.

The living room houses a 1930s radio shaped as a 2-foot-high Coke bottle. The kitchen contains a 1940s Coke machine, one of several in the collection. And sprinkled throughout the house is everything from a Coke cash register and calendars to Coke ice tongs.

"I tell my wife it's a good investment," said Bryant, who began his collecting fascination with coins as a child. "But she knows me better and always responds, 'Yea, but you would never sell any of it.'"

Collecting experts say the value of antique Coca-Cola memorabilia has soared because it is becoming increasingly more difficult to find.

"The number of Coca-Cola collectors worldwide has increased so much over the past four years that a lot of the finer collectibles just can not be found," said Richard Mix of Atlanta, who publishes a price guide for antique Coke bottles.

"The fascination seems to come from Coke's ability to transcend the world. It's everywhere."

Raymond Merced, who sells Coke antiques at Back Pages in New York City, said his supply is going fast.

"Prices have gone through the roof with the increased demand, but our items are still selling," Merced said. "We are having a hard time finding items to get for our store."

Merced said the attraction comes from the generations that grew up with Coke.

"It's been one of the most popular drinks since the early 1900s," he said. "Coke did things like create special advertising during World War II and that kind of stuff takes people back in time."

Bryant said he simply "fell in love with the white scripted letters" of the carbonated drink.

Dozens of signs line the walls of Bryant's office at the Lone Star Agency, an insurance and real estate firm in Hereford.

Some of the items spill over into the agency's lobby.

"It adds something to the office for sure," said Jhonda Webb, a receptionist at the agency. "Everyone has to stop and look at John David's office. And you never know what he is going to bring in next."

The Bryants are faithful members of the Coca-Cola Collectors Club, which has more than 6,000 members internationally and holds conventions across the United States every summer.

Since 1979, the Hereford couple has attended every convention, making pilgrimages to Kansas City, Los Angeles and Nashville. They are planning to attend this summer's meeting in Scottsdale, Ariz.

After a convention in Sacramento a few years back, the Bryants decided to continue north to see the West Coast and Canada. One night, Bryant insisted on driving a few extra miles in hopes of finding a roadside antique shop.

But those few extra miles turned into hours of driving into the middle of nowhere. With no hotels, no vacancy at any campgrounds and no antique shops in sight, the Bryants ended up sleeping in their Suburban.

"I thought the family was going to lynch me that time," Bryant said. "That was one instance where the hunt got carried away."

Spin down Hereford's brick streets is a nostalgia trip

BY GEORGIA TYLER
Brand Staff Writer

Though admittedly not the smoothest ride in town, a spin along Hereford's oldest "paved" streets can be a nostalgia trip.

A common paving material in the 'teens and '20s, bricks have proved durable and, almost, indestructible.

A search in the records of the City of Hereford sheds little light on the exact time the brick was laid for paved streets.

In January 1916, though, minutes of a City Commission meeting reveal that an election resulted in a vote of 89-22 in favor of assessing property owners for a paving project.

Never, in that report or subsequent meeting minutes, was the kind of paving material mentioned.

Presumably, though, the paving would be accomplished with bricks.

In "A History of Deaf Smith County," the author, Bessie Patterson, observes that the paving brought "Hereford's business district out of the mud for the first time."

Travelers on Highway 60 also enjoyed the benefits of the paving project -- at the time, Third Street was the highway's route through Hereford.

Some controversy broke out over the assessment program for street improvements. Business owners did not like the project, even if it did accrue benefits to their shops and stores. Some wouldn't pay.

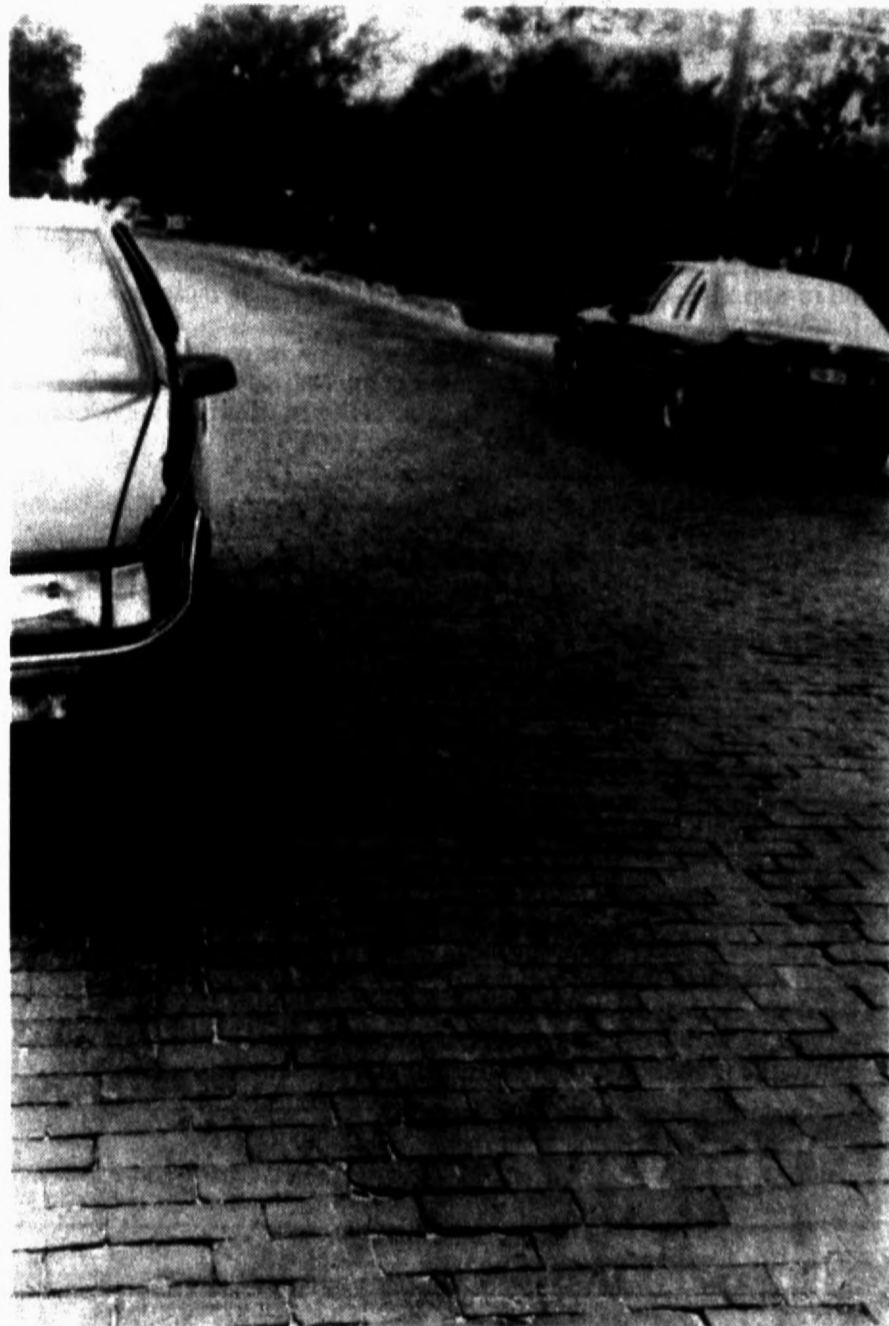

The first go-around of brick-paved streets was supposed to be 14 blocks. Sometime later, apparently, more blocks were added.

The Patterson book points out that the "last of the brick paving was laid" in 1926.

A longtime resident, though, believes that some of the brick paving may have been put down, also, in the 1930s.

For the most part, the brick paving has stood the test of time -- oh, there are some small dips here and there, but very few real potholes.

The brick apparently was removed from at least one street, near what

Sign of another era

Brick pavement on several Hereford streets takes some motorists back to another time, when asphalt had not become a common paving material. Bricks were laid in a time-honored method that keeps them in place even today.

now is Stanton Special Programs Center, because of some kind of problem.

A Hereford man reports he was able to obtain some bricks for a patio at his home. The bricks had been removed from streets for one reason or another.

In the street work, the bricks were laid on a bed of sand with a mortar to hold them together.

One of the stories about the brick paving is that a black man, with two helpers carrying bricks, put the material in place at the rate of a block a day.

Another story that periodically made the rounds was that prisoners in the county jail performed the labor.

Neither can be confirmed. More than likely a contractor was employed by the city to put in curb and gutter and paving in the the project. At least one Hereford resident remembers working on the streets in 1931 and 1932.

Regardless of who and when, the brick paving is a throwback to years gone by.

Frank Bauman immortalized the "brick road" in his classic story of Dorothy and the Wizard of Oz.

Generations of young folks who have never seen a real brick road are very familiar with the "yellow brick road."

On the other hand, their parents and grandparents at various times swear by and swear at the paving.

Because of the quality of the material used, the bricks simply don't wear out. Driving in today's cars with their highly-developed suspension systems still is a little rough on the passengers.

Think what it was for the Model-T and other vehicles of the day.

A few years ago, the Amarillo city government announced plans to remove some brick paving and vintage street lights in a particular neighborhood.

Residents rose as one to protest and the area remains one of the unique neighborhoods in that city.

Not all of the Hereford brick paving is obvious. Some has been covered with layers of gravel and asphalt. Main Street is one example.

Although some brickyards dated their products, apparently the Hereford paving materials never had a date.

Hereford residents can count themselves fortunate that they have a relic of the past in their frontyards.

It's too bad the bricks can't tell their history of the city.

Gulf citizens warned of tropical storm

Residents of the lower Texas coast have been warned to prepare for a potential tropical storm strengthening over the warm waters of the western Gulf of Mexico.

The system, born Friday as a tropical depression with 30 mph winds, would be named Bob if peak winds reached 39 mph and it was designated a tropical storm. Bob would become a hurricane if top winds reached 74 mph.

Late Friday night, the poorly defined center of the depression was located at 23.3 degrees north latitude and 97.0 degrees west longitude, or about 180 miles south-southeast of Brownsville, forecasters said. The system was churning slowly to the west at 5 mph.

A tropical storm watch was posted for the lower Texas coast from Baffin Bay to the mouth of the Rio Grande and for the Mexican coast south to Tampico.

Forecasters said squalls in the Gulf would intensify during the weekend and torrential rain could deluge the Lower Rio Grande Valley. If the storm hits the Mexican coast, counter-clockwise rotation would pound the Texas coast above the landfall site.

County budget to be adopted

A budget for operating Deaf Smith County will get a final look Monday by commissioners before they vote to spend more than $3.8 million on general operations of the county.

Adoption of the budget and setting the tax rate to fund it should take little time since commissioners already have conducted public meetings on those items.

And, they have voted to increase taxes, overall, by some 14 percent. However, the tax rate will not change. Property owners who experienced no re-appraisal or made improvements should see no increase in their tax bills.

Besides the general operations budget, the commission also will consider adoption of a road and bridge budget of approximately $808,000.

Financing the expenditures will come, in part, from the ad valorem taxes levied at the rate of 46.97 cents per $100.

The budget will become effective Oct. 1.

Other business on the agenda for the 9 a.m. meeting will be consideration of a contract for the juvenile peace officer, consideration of asking for bids for a new car for the sheriff's department and approving polling places for constitutional election in August.

CED slates first meeting

Organization of a new education unit is scheduled Tuesday when the Deaf Smith County Education District Board of Trustees meets at 6 p.m. in the Hereford Independent School District administration building.

The agenda for the organizational meeting of the Deaf Smith County Education District will begin with trustees taking the oath of office and continues with election of a chairperson, vice chairperson and recording secretary.

HISD faces Tuesday agenda

Trustees of Hereford Independent School District will have their regular monthly meeting Tuesday, beginning at 6:30 p.m. in the HISD administration building. The lengthy agenda includes reports from various school-related groups, selection of a school depository, consideration of a contract for a juvenile probation officer and an alternative school proposal.

Representing Deaf Smith-Oldham were Jim Bret Campbell, Hereford High School senior; Kelly Kirkland, Vega High School senior, and Natalie Artho, Vega junior.

Participants in the seminar are selected on the basis of academic achievement as well as character and leadership qualities.

Purpose of the event, held in June, is to provide a better understanding of American heritage and the free enterprise system.

Among speakers during the five-day conference were S.M. True of Plainview, Texas Farm Bureau president, Jack Jackson of Fort Worth and Robert H. Rowland of Oklahoma City.

Special interests studying record of court nominee

WASHINGTON (AP) - Although battle lines over the Supreme Court nomination of Clarence Thomas are beginning to form, many interest groups are taking a wait-and-see approach before deciding how hard to fight.

Liberal interest groups, facing long odds and uncertainty over just what is at stake, say their strategy now is mainly to take a searching look at the record of the conservative black judge.

"There may be a real fight. I'm not making any predictions," said Nan Aron of the liberal Alliance for Justice. But, she conceded, "Some groups are ready to throw in the towel now."

Conservatives are hoping President Bush has put his opponents in a bind by picking as Thurgood Marshall's successor a black nominee with a compelling rags-to-riches background. They are quick to support Thomas but uncertain about how hard the Senate confirmation struggle will be.

The National Abortion Rights Action League is anticipating a tough contest and is trying to give liberals ammunition to oppose Thomas.

NARAL executive director Kate Michelman called a news conference Tuesday to reveal evidence that Thomas may oppose the high court's 1973 ruling in Roe vs. Wade that legalized abortion.

She cited a 1987 speech in which Thomas praised an essay that attacked the 1973 decision.

Calling the speech to the conservative Heritage Foundation "a smoking gun," Michelman said the remarks could undermine Thomas' nomination.

"Unless Judge Thomas explicitly ... recognizes that the Constitution protects the fundamental right to privacy, including the right to choose, the Senate should reject this nominee," she said.

The NARAL strategy is intended to embolden members of the Senate Judiciary Committee who were reluctant to press David H. Souter, Bush's first high court nominee, for specific answers on abortion.

Souter, with no public record on the issue, had a relatively easy time last year in ducking those questions. He won Senate confirmation by a vote of 90-9.

The model for an all-out confirmation battle is the 1987 nomination of Robert H. Bork by President Reagan. Bork, an outspoken conservative with an extensive record, was defeated by a liberal-led campaign that accused him of rigid opposition to the rights of women and minorities.

Both sides say a similar fight over Thomas' nomination is unlikely.

With conservatives already firmly in control of the court, there is little inclination for liberals to mount a costly campaign against him.

Dr. Benjamin L. Hooks, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said "We will review (Thomas') record just as closely as if he were not an African-American."

"If his record is too bad, I just can't support him," Hooks said. "On the other hand, if it's a mixed or spotted record, I would have to consider it closely."

The Senate Judiciary Committee is expected to hold hearings on the Thomas nomination in September, giving critics ample time to research his record. The time gap will also help conservative interest groups mount a defense.

Thomas Jipping of the conservative Coalitions for America said he expects Thomas will be confirmed.

Bucy quits as financial chief for collider

DALLAS (AP) - The head of the state commission in charge of raising money for an $8.3 billion superconducting super collider has resigned, saying the project has serious funding troubles.

As chairman of the Texas National Research Laboratory Commission, J. Fred Bucy had tried to raise the state's $1 billion funding share.

But, he said, he fears a shortfall in contributions from foreign governments and Congress will kill the 53-mile super collider project completely.

"It's not beyond salvation, but it's getting close," Bucy said.

The U.S. Department of Energy had asked Japan to contribute $2 billion toward the project, and Bucy said it appeared unlikely that request would be met.

"I have grave doubts that Japan is going to contribute," Bucy said.

"Therefore to save the super collider, we must convince the Congress to support the Senate point of view - that is, that this program is so important to the country that it should be done without foreign support."

Fort Worth officer charged following brutal assault

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - A police officer who was captured on videotape beating a man in his custody was charged with assault with a deadly weapon and was suspended with pay pending the case's outcome.

Officer Edward James Parnell III was charged with assault with a deadly weapon Friday, two days after he was videotaped beating a car theft suspect with a baton.

Parnell, who declined to make a statement to police on the advice of his attorney, was released on his own recognizance.

Authorities said Parnell was driving Ernest Alvin Anderson, 21, to a police station Wednesday afternoon when Anderson allegedly kicked out a rear window in Parnell's patrol car and tried to jump out on Interstate 30.

Parnell pulled to the side of the highway and took Anderson out of the car as scores of motorists drove by. A woman who lives near the highway videotaped the officer striking Anderson 28 times with a baton.

He is survived by his wife; three sons, Matias Lopez Jr., David Lopez and Daniel Lopez, all of the home; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lazaro Lopez of Hereford; a brother, Hesiquiel Lopez of Hereford; and three sisters, Theresa Brice, Hereford; Diana Mendoza, Amarillo and Angelica Attaquile, Germany; and his grandmother, Angela Galvan of Hereford.

M.D. SOUTER

July 3, 1991

M.D. Souter, 79, father of Richard Souter of Hereford, died Wednesday afternoon in a Levelland hospital following a lengthy illness.

Funeral services were held at 2 p.m. Friday at First Baptist Church of Levelland with Dr. Steve Vernon, pastor, officiating. Burial was in City of Levelland Cemetery under direction of George C. Price Funeral Directors.

Souter was born in Hominy, Ok., and moved to Levelland from Denver City in 1977. He married Kathryn Dudgeon in May 1934 in Bristow, Ok.

A retired supervisor for Shell Pipeline, Mr. Souter was a deacon in the First Baptist Church. He was involved in the Community Action program and was a member of the Masonic Lodge of Denver City.

Survivors include his wife; a son, Richard of Hereford; a daughter, Saleta Duff of Levelland; 4 grandchildren and 6 great-grandchildren.

Congress had been asked to provide $534 million for the collider in fiscal 1992. The House cut $100 million from the request and the Senate is trying to restore $75 million.

For fiscal 1993, the collider would need about $700 million from the federal government, backers say. Funding applications for 1994 and 1995 are estimated to be about $900 million for each year.

The collider is not on the agenda of a Thursday meeting between Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu and President Bush in Kennebunkport, Maine.

The collider, which would run under Central Texas farmland, would be the world's largest scientific instrument, designed to accelerate beams of protons to nearly the speed of light before they collide with an energy of 40 trillion electron volts.

Scientists hope to discover new subatomic particles in a bid to unravel mysteries about basic matter and the origin of the universe.

Opponents of the project cite the escalating costs and question the program's actual usefulness.

Gov. Ann Richard's office said Bucy's resignation came as a total surprise.

"We had no inkling that he was about to resign," said spokesman Bill Cryer.

Soviets pass law to attract investments

MOSCOW (AP) - Two weeks before President Mikhail S. Gorbachev heads to London to seek Western aid, the Soviet legislature has approved a law aimed at attracting more foreign investment.

The law approved Friday strengthens legal guarantees and exempts businesses with substantial foreign investments from import duties and export taxes.

The measure approved by the Supreme Soviet provides the legal groundwork for Gorbachev's plans to revamp the economy with Western aid, investment and management know-how.

It gives foreign investors equal legal rights with Soviet citizens and allows new businesses to be created with 100-percent foreign ownership, the official Tass news agency reported.

Gorbachev can now present the law to Western leaders as proof he is serious about reform. He'll get that chance at the July 15-17 summit of the Group of Seven most industrialized nations in London.

Brack has more than 2,000 baseball cards, including a Nolan Ryan rookie card valued at more than $1,000.

Brooke is beginning to collect sports cards and Brynne collects stuffed animals, although she finds her parents' interest in Coca-Cola "boring."

Needless to say everyone in the family drinks Coca-Cola and doesn't even mention the word Pepsi.

"Pepsi is known as the P-word among Coca-Cola collectors," Bryant said.

Bryant says he is proud of his collection, but insists that he won't be able to rest until he finds a rare sign from the early 1900s that advertises two straight-sided Coke bottles with paper labels.

"I'll go just about anywhere for that one," he said.

And his family knows he is not kidding.

As a young woman abandoned and alone Lizzie fights for survival by becoming the wife of a dashing American. When she comes to America, Lizzie is horrified by the institution of slavery that exists in her new home, and begins a struggle to change the injustice she sees. After many years Adam and Lizzie are finally reunited.

Beast by Peter Benchley begins with a sailboat that founders in the waters off Bermuda, leaving a young couple stranded in a life raft. They reassure each other there's nothing to worry about, the weather's fine, their emergency beacon is sending out a continuous distress signal. And yet, they are afraid. Whip Darling, a recognized expert on the deep, finds himself confronted with a bizarre series of events. The first is the discovery of an empty life raft with no sign of a struggle other than a few scratch marks. Second a boat seems to explode inexplicably, within sight of the shore. And third a woman looking through a telescope for whales, claims to have seen a monster. As Darling ponders these events, he still can not comprehend the horrifying significance of what has happened. Then the beast strikes again and again.

Has man's devastation of the seas driven a creature up from the deep. A beast so enormous and insatiable that it will keep killing unless it is destroyed?

An Occasion of Sin by Andrew M. Greeley is his most "affecting and provocative" book to date. Dashing Chicago prelate John Cardinal McGlynn is martyred after his death in Nicaragua. McGlynn dies in the arms of his beautiful companion Marbeth Quinlan with his last words "God, how I love you." Two years later McGlynn is being considered for canonization, but there are troubling questions about the Cardinal's suitability for sainthood. Father Lawrence McAuliffe, McGlynn's greatest critic for years, is assigned the role of devil's advocate. McAuliffe looks for proof of the cardinal's past sinfulness, but what he discovers is a complex chronicle of spiritual longing, sensual temptation and the infinite mystery of faith.

NEW YORK (AP) - Phil Donahue learned that nuns haven't changed much from the days when he was a schoolboy: If you don't do right, they'll catch you.

Sister Mary Ann Walsh, a reporter for the Catholic News Service, discovered that the talk-show host used false names in his essay "Confessions of a Fallen Schoolboy," which was distributed to newspapers by Universal Press Syndicate.

"Dear Sister Mary Andrew," Donahue had written. "The other day someone told me you died. ... The guilt I feel for not having thanked you looms large in my chest today."

Donahue acknowledged that names were changed but said in a statement Tuesday that everything in the article was true and "every nun mentioned really existed."

Universal Press Syndicate said it would run a clarification.

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says nothing keeps a person's feet on the ground like having a little responsibility placed on his or her shoulders.

o0o

During a conversation with an old friend he hadn't seen for some time, a man asked his pal how he had been sleeping.

o0o

"There's nothing to do around here." Ever hear a youngster say that? I've heard it from kids and parents in Hereford, and I've heard it said in other towns.

Ever wonder what kids did back when there were no organized activities such as Little League, Kids, Inc., YMCA, and all the church youth activities?

They made do with what they had. The guys got together, chose up sides and played baseball. Smaller kids could create an entire day's enjoyment out of a stick and can. Some even read books.

Don't get me wrong. I'm not putting down our youth of today. It is more of a reflection on family structure and the direction being given today's youth. A youngster needs to learn the fine art of growing up from his parents, not from the television set.

We need to grow, progress and adapt to changes in society. But we must keep some of the old values, too.

The July 4th Celebration in Hereford Thursday was a fun day for us and having our son and his family here made it even more enjoyable.

It was a time of sadness, too. I received word that a good newspaper friend, Harold Hudson, had died after a bout with cancer. Hudson, 71, was the longtime publisher of The Perryton Herald and was highly respected in the industry on both the state and national levels. Among his many recognitions was the Amos Award in 1983. It is a national award for community journalism.

If you've read The Brand editorial page on a regular basis, you've seen a number of guest editorials by Hudson. He is a former president of both the Texas Press Association and National Newspaper Association, and he and his wife, Jane, have been very supportive of the Nieman's over the years.

He left his mark in many community and civic endeavors in Perryton. He will be missed in his community, and by folks in the newspaper industry all across the country.

Babbling Brooks

It was a July 4th celebration like we haven't had in a long time, wasn't it.

I was thinking about how things were back in the "old days," like the 1960s and 1970s, when it seems we had a little more sense of community to us.

We all used to do things together. I think it's a shame that we don't anymore.

Shoot, things are so bad now that I wouldn't know the names of my neighbors at my apartments, except their names are on the mailbox. I don't really know any of my neighbors. We don't do things like neighbors used to do.

I don't know that I would even go to a neighbor's door to ask if I could please borrow a cup of sugar or something 'til I went to the store. I'd just rather go to the store. I think my neighbors are pretty much the same way.

I can remember when we'd have block parties. Just everybody around gather up, have a cookout (back before barbecuing built up all those carcinogens on our food), drink a couple of beers (before that became pretty much socially unacceptable) and just visited.

Maybe because we don't have those social networks anymore, we don't seem to get things accomplished as a community like we used to do. If we wanted to do something that would benefit everyone, we'd just get together and do it. We don't do that anymore, and I think that's a shame.

If I'm even more of a nervous wreck Monday than usual, it's because I've been to a family reunion this weekend.

I'm not even part of the family, but maybe one day I'll officially be. This family has already opened up its heart and arms to me, so when I was invited I said Sure.

It's got to be better than many of the family reunions I've been to in the past.

We used to always go to my stepfather's family reunion in Sulphur, Okla.

Have you ever "enjoyed" sulphur water? I think I know the recipe for sulphur water. You take a matchbook, put it in a small glass of water, leave the matchbook in there until all the stuff has dissolved off the end of the matches, then drink it. (Please don't do this!!!)

It's a once in a lifetime experience. Once you've drank sulphur water, you'll never drink it again.

The sulphur water was not the worst part of the annual Oklahoma outing.

There was my stepfather's family. They took to me about like the Hindenburg took to landing towers. They didn't like me, and I thought they were all part of the family John Steinbeck used in The Grapes of Wrath.

These people all actually seemed to enjoy sitting along the banks of a sulphur-water infested creek catching eight-ounce perch all day long. I had caught one bass bigger than all the fish I ever caught from that green-and-yellow creek in Oklahoma.

The absolute worst part of the ordeal was the chiggers. If you have never experienced a chigger bite, it something like placing a lighted cigarette on the most sensitive part of your anatomy. It burns. It stings. It itches.

The only way to avoid a chigger bite is to keep your body completely wrapped in Saran Wrap at all times. Wear heavy woolen socks, even though it's 90 degrees and the humidity is 150 percent.

Thankfully, this family reunion is going to be mostly indoors. There are no perch to be grappled with in Tierra Blanca Creek, and I have yet to experience a chigger bite in Hereford. Should be a fun reunion.

Open records

Although the Open Records Act has been in effect in Texas for quite some time, there are still public officials who believe that they can hide certain records safe from prying eyes.

This cannot be done in this state. The Open Records Act became law in 1973 as part of the reaction to the Sharpstown scandal where the Texas Speaker of the House became involved in real estate deals which were illegal.

This law requires that all information collected, assembled or maintained by or for government bodies in Texas is "public information" and available to the public with only certain exceptions.

This means that material put on file by any government body is available to inspection by the public. The law provides that a charge may be made for providing copies of this material but all of it is available.

This also means that any citizen can go to a county clerk's office or district clerk's office and ask to see any material which has been accepted and filed for public record.

Those whose names appear in these public records may not especially want other people to inspect various documents, but the law is clear, public records are open records.

The purpose of the law is to make available to people full and complete information about the affairs of their government. It is true that very few private citizens make the effort to dig into these public records. They leave that up to the news media and expect the news media to keep them informed.

The late Price Daniel Jr., who was Speaker of the House when the Open Records Act and the Open Meetings Act were enacted into law, has to be given credit for lifting the lid of secrecy in Texas on the way government officials conduct the public's business.

Editorial opinion around the state

Here is a sampling of editorial opinion in Texas newspapers:

July 2

Dallas Times Herald on Supreme Court nominee

Twice in his presidency, George Bush has had the honor of nominating a justice to the nation's highest court. And twice now, his selections have raised serious questions about the motives of the nominator and the qualifications of the nominee.

In announcing his choice of Clarence Thomas, black federal appeals court judge, to the Supreme Court to replace retiring Justice Thurgood Marshall, President Bush was brief and blunt: "He is," the president said, "the best person for this position."

Perhaps. At the very least Judge Thomas has a more visible record than the president's last pick, David Souter. And, although the president bristled when it was suggested he had appointed Judge Thomas because of his race, it is significant that a minority was appointed to replace the court's first and only black justice.

But race alone does not a good justice make. And Judge Thomas' record, visible though it may be, may not be all that viable for a position of such stature and importance.

Whether he will eventually be confirmed remains to be seen. First he must survive the confirmation sessions, which, if the initial reactions are any indication, could be painfully partisan.

Ideally, of course, it should not matter what color Judge Thomas is, nor should it matter what his political or ideological persuasions are. What should matter is whether he has the knowledge and ability to sit as a jurist on our highest court - whether he is indeed the best person for the job.

July 2

The Dallas Morning News on Supreme Court nominee

It is said that the finest steel is tempered in the hottest fires. If true, Judge Clarence Thomas, President Bush's nominee for the U.S. Supreme Court, is a man of fine steel. A child of poverty reared by grandparents in a tenement lacking indoor plumbing, Judge Thomas, through strength of character and with the devoted help of his grandparents, has constructed for himself an exemplary life, a life that raises a standard to which future generations of Americans may repair.

Like the man he has been chosen to succeed, Justice Thurgood Marshall, Judge Thomas is black. Like Justice Marshall, he rose through great personal effort and in the face of obstacles that would have thwarted lesser men. Unlike Justice Marshall, Judge Thomas has developed a view of life and law that places greater emphasis on individual effort, individual responsibility and the sanctity of law above race. These beliefs have led him to oppose quotas and other affirmative action tools that grew out of the civil rights movement of the 1960s.

While some might take issue with that philosophy, any detractors will find it difficult to take issue with Judge Thomas' legal abilities, his mental strength, his character or his judicial temperament.

Many will find the stark contrast with Justice Marshall offensive. The goals of these two men, however, are not so different. They both believe deeply in justice. However different the roads they would take to attain that justice, President Bush has clearly found a nominee whose character, integrity and intellect equal those of Justice Marshall.

El Paso Herald-Post on Supreme Court inmates decision

Supreme Court justices have been rightly concerned with the caseload overwhelming federal appeals courts. But in their zeal to lighten the burden, they should take care not to make bad law.

In a 6-3 decision, the court sharply curtailed the ability of state prison inmates to appeal their convictions to federal courts. Any violation of state rules governing appeals, the court said, could disqualify an inmate from requesting that federal judges review his conviction.

We sympathize with the majority's argument that federal courts have an obligation to respect state rules. But in many such appeals, the stakes are high. Capital case are matters of life and death. The death row inmate in the (case decided by the court) had the misfortune of using an attorney who missed the state deadline for filing his appeal by three days.

That infraction seems slight when weighed against the consequences the court now forces upon it. The court has already limited these federal appeals to one per petitioner. It should have granted inmates latitude to ensure they have access at least to that one appeal.

June 30

Houston Chronicle on Police Searches

People should be secure against unreasonable police searches. We always thought that was one of those precious constitutional rights which separated Americans from people in authoritarian nations.

That is why the recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling giving police the power to board buses and search the bags of consenting passengers, without any probable cause or a warrant to justify a search, seems terribly wrong to us.

Such searches are intimidating by their very nature. They are an intrusion into an individual's rights of privacy whether they result in the finding of drugs or merely the embarrassment of having police rummaging through one's dirty laundry.

We believe very few passengers would feel comfortable or even safe from possible police abuse in refusing to comply. In this case, the man claimed the officers never told him he could decline to cooperate.

Honest citizens should have no reason to fear police. We though the Constitution guaranteed that. Unfortunately, this decision strikes at the heart of the Fourth Amendment and it opens the door for police misconduct.

San Antonio Express-News on NCAA rules

The public perception of college athletics clearly nettles officials at the NCAA. It should, for the image is of schools supposedly dedicated to higher learning transformed into a vast commercial combine, cynically exploiting for entertainment and profit under-educated athletes whose schooling is of secondary concern.

The danger for NCAA officials is that in countering this perception they overreact, and deprive deserving young people of the wholesome advantages that college athletics, at their best, impart.

This week the NCAA President's Commission recommended tightening the reforms, but now they are a bit too tight for comfort.

It is ironic that these new standards raise the admission criteria for student athletes above those required for non-athlete freshmen at most colleges.

Its (the NCAA's) vigor in purifying college athletics is commendable, but care must be taken that the interests of student athletes, first and foremost, are protected, too. The proposed rules fail in that regard.

July 1

San Antonio Light on foreign ownership of American land

Remember how foreigners were going to buy up all of America if they weren't somehow stopped? First the Arabs in the 1970s, then the Japanese in the 1980s?

It didn't happen. Didn't come close to happening, as a matter of fact. A massive study of the nation's non-agricultural real estate by Arthur Andersen & Co. released last week showed that foreigners own a grand total of 0.05 percent of the nation's $8.77 trillion worth of non-farm land.

In short, while some shuffling will no doubt occur, the United States is today - and will continue to be - owned almost totally by Americans and their institutions.

The United States is a huge, wealthy nation (despite its Third World federal budget policy) and foreigners are not going to steal the country, take it away or buy it up.

June 30

The Houston Post on Ending U.S. Supervision of State Prisons

A report that state Attorney General Dan Morales filed a motion to eliminate federal supervision of the Texas prison system was good news. Way to go, Dan! But even under the best of circumstances it won't result in any immediate relief for Harris County, which has the largest backlog of state inmates in its county jail.

What Morales is doing will help our county a great deal - which is more than his predecessor, Jim Mattox, ever did. But what we need is quicker relief, if possible.

Both (criminal justice board members Mamie Moore) Procter and (Sen. Gene) Green need to be raising the roof over the Harris County allocation as well as the factors used to determine it. Our county gets back 7 percent more parolees than it sends up inmates. Also, it has more than 30 percent of the total number of halfway houses in the state.

These factors don't set well with taxpayers citizens who long ago realized parolees are responsible for too many violent crimes around our parts. Local voters in the last gubernatorial election should be concerned that things haven't changed much after they provided the new governor, Ann Richards with a county-wide 20,000-vote margin over her opponent.

Why doesn't the governor realize she could repay the favor she obviously owed us by taking a more active role in helping to solve Harris County's inmate woes?

She could start by having the criminal justice board consider the factors that most affect our county, the high numbers of parolees and halfway house residents who come here, only to commit more crimes.

Corpus Christi Caller-Times

The Texas legislators' overly generous retirement plan for themselves endangers the tax-exempt status of pension plans for all state employees. The plan passed in the last session allows a legislator to retire with benefits of at least $1,526 a month - more than two and a half times the $620 legislators receive a month in pay.

That violates the IRS rule, which says that if benefits in excess of 100 percent of salary are given to even one employee, the entire pension system of a state is subject to lose its IRS code.

Now comes Sen. Lloyd Bentsen with a damage-control bill that would exempt public pension systems from the IRS code. Not surprisingly, Texas legislators have been writing Bentsen in support of his bill.

There is a better way to solve this problem. Rather than fixing it at the federal level, and in doing so getting the Texas legislators off the hook, this issue should be added to the upcoming special session and the legislators should go back and take away those overly generous retirement benefits.

The retirement benefits provision for lawmakers was added in a backdoor maneuver to a bill on state employee benefits by a Lubbock legislator, Rep. Nolan Robnett. This legislator is 50 years old, has 14 years in the legislature, and is now eligible to retire and receive $1,526 a month for life.

This amendment should never have been passed nor allowed to become law. And now that it is a threat to the non-exempt tax status of the retirement benefits of all public employees of Texas, it should be revoked. Many Texas legislators will face re-election next year and they should remember that their self-serving actions, like this extravagant retirement plan, are being judged by an increasingly skeptical public.

Monterey tags Hereford, 10-1

Wimbledon has all-German mens' final

Monterey scored in every inning but the seventh, beating Hereford 10-3 in a West Texas Summer Baseball League game Friday at Whiteface Field.

The hard-hitting Monterey team, losers of only three of its 11 games, scored single runs in the first, fourth and fifth; scored two runs each in the second and third; and scored three times in the sixth. By the first time Hereford scored—a single run in the fourth—Monterey had already scored six.

Hereford, now 0-12, had some bad luck early, when even their good plays couldn't keep Monterey from scoring. For example, with a Monterey runner on third in the second inning, the batter hit a fly ball to deep second base. Vince Castillo, playing second but normally a catcher, couldn't make a tough over-the-shoulder catch, but picked up the ball on one bounce and threw a strike to home. The runner at third had already started for home and beat the ball. He took catcher Russ Watts' legs out from under him, but Watts nearly caught the ball—he knocked it down—while flying horizontally.

Hereford hitters had trouble just making contact with the fastball of Monterey starter Tony Gonzales. He had seven strikeouts in four innings, and his replacement, Isaac Lee, struck out four batters in three innings.

Hereford only got four hits. Watts was 2-for-3 with two singles, and he reached on an error the third time. Andy Kalka, who pitched the game, and Jerry Rincon each added a single.

Three of those hits came in the fourth, when Hereford scored its first run. Rincon led off with a bloop over first base, and was replaced on the bases by Tab Hathaway on a fielder's choice. Hathaway went to second on Watts line shot into center field, and both advanced a base on Kalka's hit, which fell just in front of the left fielder.

All three advanced a base—Hathaway scored—on Gonzales' wild pitch. Fonzie Enriquez walked to reload the bases, but the rally was stopped when Monterey first baseman Chris Sheffield made a sliding catch of Shama Hernandez' foul pop, catching the ball just before sliding into the fence.

In the sixth, Hereford scored twice without a hit. Castillo led off with a walk and went to second when the Monterey third baseman misplayed Watts' hard grounder. Both moved up a base on Lee's wild pitch. Next, Kalka hit a high sacrifice fly to right field, plating Castillo and sending Watts to third. Watts scored on Enriquez' grounder to shortstop. The shortstop booted that ball, as well as Richard Sanderson's grounder later in the inning, but there was no more scoring.

Hereford's next game is Tuesday, when they host Plainview at 6 p.m. at Whiteface Field.

WIMBLEDON, England (AP)—On the day of the big servers, a pair of German buddies came up aces.

Davis Cup teammates Boris Becker and Michael Stich moved into the Wimbledon men's final by booming their way to semifinal victories on Friday.

Becker had 13 aces and never lost his serve in a 6-4, 7-6, 7-5 defeat of unseeded American David Wheaton. Becker advanced to his fourth straight Wimbledon final.

The victory moved Becker back into the No. 1 world ranking, knocking Stefan Edberg to No. 2. Becker, who was top-ranked for three weeks after winning the Australian Open in January, will stay No. 1 even if he loses Sunday's final.

Stich boomed 64 service winners, including eight aces, as he ousted defending champion Edberg in a match that featured three tie-breakers. Stich won 4-6, 7-6, 7-6, 7-6, taking advantage of Edberg's mistakes in the first two tie-breakers.

The Becker-Stich match will be the first all-German men's final at Wimbledon and the first men's final between compatriots since John McEnroe defeated Jimmy Connors in 1984.

Another German is in today's women's final. Top seed Steffi Graf was to seek her third Wimbledon crown against Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina.

Becker and Stich exchanged high fives after Stich's victory over Edberg in the opening semifinal, but Becker said their relationship will make the final more difficult.

straight sets with the amount of chances I had."

The sixth-seeded Stich, who lost in the French Open semifinals a month ago, will be playing in his first Grand Slam final thanks to lapses by Edberg. The top seed double-faulted twice in the first tie-breaker and flubbed an easy volley while facing set point in the second.

Edberg was the biggest loser of the day - he lost his title, his top ranking and the chance for a fourth straight final against Becker. About the only thing he didn't lose was his serve.

"I didn't drop a service game today but I still lost the match, which is sort of very strange," he said. "I played a few bad shots at some important times. That was the whole story of the match."

"It's not easy because we know each other so well. We have played a lot together," Becker said. "It's much easier to play somebody you hate."

Becker saved 10 break points by coming up with big serves at key moments against Wheaton, who had defeated Ivan Lendl and Andre Agassi on his way to the semifinals.

"I basically felt like I outplayed him today," Wheaton said. "I was the one with all the chances and the break points, and he came up with some shots when he needed to."

"I didn't quite convert when I should have," he added. "It's amazing that I lost that match in

Canseco, Clark have big nights

By The Associated Press
 Jose Canseco is making up for a slow start. Jack Clark is trying to make up for a slow season.

The two figured prominently for their respective teams on Friday night, as Canseco's grand slam led Oakland to a 9-3 win over Kansas

City and Clark's seven RBIs propelled Boston over Detroit 10-1.

"I just kind of muscled up on it. I didn't hit it real good, but I had a real good swing. Sometimes that compensates," Canseco said after hitting his bases-loaded homer off Tom Gordon.

Glavine wins; Astros fall 1-0

By DICK BRINSTER
 AP Sports Writer

Atlanta's Tom Glavine was closing in on victory, tiring with the bases loaded and one out to go. Braves manager Bobby Cox came to the mound ... asked a question ... got the answer and left.

"Bobby just asked me if I had one more hitter in me, and I felt like I did," Glavine said. "So he said, 'All right, you've got one more.'"

That made Glavine the ace, and he confirmed it by retiring pinch-hitter Mitch Webster to seal a 4-1 victory Friday night over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Glavine, who hopes he'll be considered to start for the National League in Tuesday night's All-Star game, got a big lift from Jeff Blauser's tie-breaking two-run homer in the sixth.

Then the left-hander did the rest. Tim Lincecum (7-5) dueling Glavine to a 1-1 tie through five innings before Terry Pendleton opened the sixth with his second single and Blauser drove a 2-0 pitch into the left-field pavilion for his seventh homer.

Elsewhere, it was New York 3, Philadelphia 1; Montreal 4, Pittsburgh 3; Cincinnati 1, Houston 0; Chicago 5, St. Louis 1, and San Diego 4, San Francisco 2.

Reds 1, Astros 0

Winning pitcher Chris Hammond had two of Cincinnati's five hits and scored the game's only run to beat Pete Harnisch and Houston at the Astrodome.

Harnisch (5-7) had 22 consecutive shutout innings until the Reds scored in the third. He gave up five hits while striking out three and walking three.

Canseco, who wasn't picked for Tuesday's All-Star Game, is one of the hottest hitters in the majors following early-season problems. Friday night's homer was his 21st, tying him with Detroit's Cecil Fielder for the AL lead.

In other AL games, it was Milwaukee 4, Cleveland 2; Chicago 4, Minnesota 2; Texas 8, California 0; Baltimore 7, New York 4 and Toronto 2, Seattle 1.

Rangers 8, Angels 0

Texas routed Mark Langston and trounced California to move past the Angels into second place in the AL West by three percentage points.

Jose Guzman (4-3) shut out California on three hits for six innings before giving way to Mike Jeffcoat, who pitched three innings for his first save of the season.

The Rangers raked Langston (12-3) for seven hits and seven runs in five innings.

HOME EQUITY

People who bought their homes in the 1930's and 40's are somewhat shocked when they find themselves paying even more for an automobile today! In fact, anyone who has lived in the same house for more than a few years would probably be surprised at today's real estate values. Prices have multiplied in many of our areas. Still, one can't just pick a high number out of the air and hope it's the right price for their home and property for sale. By choosing a price that's too modest, the seller doesn't get full value for their house. Set it too high, and the property probably won't sell; likely buyers will be scared away, and those that are willing to spend that much, will want more house for the money. Our real estate professionals have the experience and know-how to come up with the right price to make the sale. # Rangers' scout gets dream job

An AP Sports Analysis
By ARNIE STAPLETON
AP Sports Writer

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - Ever since he was a boy learning the game in Puerto Rican sandlots with broomsticks for bats and bottlecaps for balls, Orlando Gomez has had a special place in his heart for baseball. It's a shame it took the major leagues 27 years to find a place for him.

Twenty-seven years is a long time to ask a man to flail away in the minor leagues. To drag the wife and six kids from town to town and back again. As a player, a coach, a scout, a confidant and father figure whose children had to sell peanuts and popcorn at the ballpark just to make ends meet.

He started many a young man on his way to a major league career as a scout and saved many more as a coach. Perseverance, he would preach. Stick with it. You've got talent. Things will work out.

It was that same dogged determination that kept him going. As a catcher, Gomez played in nine different cities in 13 years in the minor-league systems of the New York Yankees and the Oakland Athletics.

He had eight stops as a minor league manager, not counting the places he played, coached, managed and scouted in Puerto Rico.

Every year he would tell his wife, Nylsa, that this would be his last season. Nylsa, who often cooked, washed clothes, sewed buttons, shopped for groceries and helped Latin players with their English, would never believe him. He loved the game too much.

In January, they were preparing for another year at Class A Gastonia, S.C., when Texas Rangers manager Bobby Valentine called.

Valentine needed a bullpen coach to help his catchers, especially 19-year-old rookie phenom Ivan Rodriguez, whom Gomez coached at Gastonia.

"Our scout in Puerto Rico, Omar Minaya, and I were traveling in Puerto Rico in the off-season and Omar spoke so highly of Orlando that I just had to get to meet him and observe him," Valentine says. "And, once I did, I knew he was just the guy

I needed on this team. We hadn't had a catching coach since Joe Ferguson left."

Not lost on Valentine was the fact that Gomez, who signed Ruben Sierra and Jose Guzman, had a knack for easing Latin players' transition from the Spanish-speaking Caribbean islands to the major leagues.

And the Rangers' Latin-filled lineup lacked a Latin coach and confidant. The Rangers thought Gomez was the perfect man for the job.

"I only wish they had thought that when I was a young man," Gomez says. "But now I'm here. This is what I've always wanted."

As a counsel and friend to the players, especially the young Latinos who are still learning English, Gomez "solves a lot of things that we never even know about," says Rangers general manager Tom Grieve.

"I talk to them a lot," Gomez says. "I say a lot of things quietly and privately that nobody else needs to know."

Ruben Sierra says he wishes Gomez had been here for him during his first few seasons.

"It's good for Ivan and Juan Gonzalez to have him here because they're young and still learning, and Orlando can really help them understand their roles and what's needed," Sierra said. "I never had that, I had to do it on my own."

Rafael Palmeiro says Gomez "keeps us going hard. If he sees that one of us is struggling, he'll offer to help. Not just for the Latin players, but for anybody."

Nothing about Gomez has changed from his minor league days.

Except his uniform number. He wore No. 23 for 27 years, but turned it down when he joined the Rangers, knowing that was the number Guzman wore.

Guzman had been released in the spring, but Gomez had talked him into signing a minor league contract. He was trying to come back after two seasons of rehabilitation from a partially torn right rotator cuff.

"I told them that Guzman would be back, so keep it," Gomez says. "I'll wear 13."

"He's more than a coach," says Guzman, who made it back as Gomez predicted and is wearing No. 23 in tribute to his friend.

By TOM ORSBORN
San Antonio Express-News
SAN ANTONIO (AP) - Like most advertising honchos from big-name firms, Bob Dorfman and Nova Lanktree get a bit excited when discussing David Robinson.

Hearing Dorfman and Lanktree talk about Robinson is like listening to Siskel and Ebert discuss the acting skills of Meryl Streep or Robert DeNiro. Their words are touched with emotion and admiration.

To people like Dorfman - a senior copy writer for the San Francisco-based advertising firm of Foote, Cone, and Belding - and Nova Lanktree - director of the Chicago-based Burns Sports Celebrity Center - Robinson is a dream come true, a high-visibility professional athlete who is eloquent, personable and handsome.

Those qualities have made him one of the most sought-after spokesmen in pro sports. Already he has gained an untold amount of national exposure, pitching products for Nike Inc., Franklin Sports Industry Inc., and Casio Inc.

And locally, Robinson has made some well-received commercials for First Gibraltar Savings.

"Right now, it is very wide open as to how far he can go with his endorsements," Lanktree said. "There are not too many limits on him. If he keeps playing the way he is playing and conducting himself the way he has been off the court, there is no reason he couldn't be as visible as a Michael Jordan or a Magic Johnson."

"I describe him as the next big thing. I like to call him the NBA's Renaissance Man," said Dorfman, sounding a lot like Spurs vice president Bob Bass after the Spurs announced they would use their first-round draft pick in 1987 to draft the 7-foot-1 center from the U.S. Naval Academy.

Now, four years after the Spurs drafted Robinson, the multi-talented "Admiral" has earned a place not only among the NBA's elite on the court, but also what the president of NBA Properties calls the elite off the court.

"Yes, we consider him in the most elite group along with the Jordans, the Magics, the Birds, the Barkleys," NBA properties president Rick Welts said. "We agree with the prediction Pat Riley made recently on NBC that the 1990s would be his decade."

"There really isn't anyone we are more excited about than David. He is going to be very important to the league. The Operation Prom Night commercials (drinking-and-driving spots) he did for us recently have been very well received nationally. Hopefully, he can do more of those types of commercials, but it will be up to him."

So what makes Robinson so special to Welts and Dorfman and all the others who can make a buck or two by linking San Antonio's "Edge" to their product?

Dorfman believes it's a combination of Robinson's unbelievable athletic skills and his ease before the camera.

"First things first. You are appreciated for your talent on the court and that kind of rubs off to your potential for endorsements," Dorfman said. "He has no problems there because he is such a great athlete. But the camera also loves him. He also has decent looks and the fact that he is a Navy man helps him. I often said he could be a recruiter for the military in any future war."

When it comes to getting endorsement contracts, Welts and Lanktree said Robinson's off-court behavior is as important as his play on the court.

"He is so well-rounded," Lanktree said. "Pro athletes seem to be trying to take their jobs as role models seriously these days and David is certainly an exemplary role model."

"I think it's the combination of his talent and the way he chooses to conduct his public life," Welts said. "I think he is going to be a wonderful role model for kids. He has a combination of personality and talent that makes him a very articulate spokesman for the league."

And a very articulate spokesman for the three companies - Nike, Franklin and Casio - that have Robinson under contract to promote their products.

His Mister Robinson's Neighborhood commercials for Nike are now part of American pop culture and have television devotees waiting in anticipation for the newest release. In just two years, Robinson and Nike have collaborated on 13 commercials.

"The commercials he has done for us have been really great," Nike public-relations manager Melinda Gable said. "The Mister Robinson's Neighborhood fits him to a T. He is a nice guy by nature. We have gotten a lot of positive feedback on all of them."

Gable said Nike hopes its relationship with Robinson will be a long one.

"We want him to be with us for the rest of his career," Gable said. "He is a great person to work with. When we pick athletes, we don't want just a talking head. We want someone like David, a great role model both on and off the court. He has a stellar reputation and we couldn't be more pleased to have him represent us."

Randy Hicks, vice president of First Gibraltar Bank, echoed Gable's comments.

"We are terrifically pleased with what David has done for us," Hicks said via telephone from Dallas. "We took him on as our spokesperson shortly after we acquired the San Antonio bank in March of 1990. I can't say enough positive things about what he has done for our bank in San Antonio. It's great just having his name linked with our bank."

Hicks said First Gibraltar is currently negotiating future spots with Robinson.

Like Dorfman, Gable believes Robinson's ability to "shoot" commercials also makes him a desired pitch man.

"He has been fantastic to work with," Gable said. "He is a genuine nice person and that comes across in our commercials. There have been a lot of demands on his time, but I can say that I have never seen him turn down a request for an autograph."

But Robinson will turn down requests for his services. His agent, Jeff Austin of Washington D.C.-based Advantage International Inc., said he is very selective when choosing a product to endorse.

Helping Robinson pick his spots are his parents, Ambrose and Freda, who, along with David's cousin Aldridge Mitchell, make up The Robinson Group, which helps David choose appearances and endorsements, as well as answering mail and personal requests.

"David could have received a lot more endorsements if he didn't value his time as much," Ambrose Robinson said. "I would imagine he would be as big as Michael if he didn't value his time. All of these endorsements take time. Shooting a commercial sometimes takes a week. Each time he makes a commercial for Nike it takes three days. I would guess that Michael spends about 100 days a year working on endorsements. David spends about 28."

Like the members of The Robinson Group, Austin is very selective and wary of David being manipulated.

"David wants to avoid clutter," Austin said. "He doesn't want to hawk 10 different products. He doesn't want the value of his endorsement to go down because of overuse."

But, most of all, Robinson doesn't want to endorse products or companies that don't fit his image. He even recently turned down an offer from an underwear company.

"I look to companies which are reputable, are willing to give back to the community and help me get my messages across about the positive things in life," Robinson told the Express-News in a recent interview.

"I try to be myself. I'm not different than any other person at this point in my life. I want to present as positive a kind of image as possible."

The Spurs, of course, love the attention Robinson brings the team through his commercials.

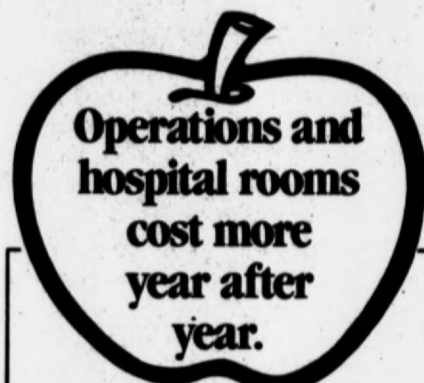

According to the NBA, the Spurs were ranked 22nd in the 25-team league in merchandise sales for the 1988-89 season, the campaign before Robinson's arrival. As of November 1990, the Spurs were ranked sixth in the 27-team league in the same category.

Bookbinder said the Spurs are pleased with the amount and quality of the work Robinson has done for the franchise.

"I think David has gone above and beyond the call of duty," Bookbinder said. "His cooperation has been superior. You couldn't ask for more. But we do try to balance the off-court activities to keep him focused on the game."

Robinson also likes to focus on charitable organizations. He is involved with several groups including Youth Alternatives Inc., Boys and Girls Clubs of San Antonio and the I Have A Dream Foundation.

He also buys tickets for each home game for 50 youngsters to sit in "Mr. Robinson's Neighborhood" in the Arena's upper deck, sponsored by Nike.

Hendricks brothers reign over sports agent world

By GENE DUFFEY

The Houston Post
HOUSTON (AP) - Randy Hendricks, half of Houston's monolithic sports agent team, took a trip to Rome in 1989, visited the ancient ruins and read about a chariot racer from the good old days, circa 100 B.C.

"He was the Cy Young of chariot racers," said Hendricks. "He dominated his era. They estimated he earned $4 million to $5 million by today's standards."

If that chariot racer were here now, chances are Randy Hendricks, and brother, Alan, would be his agents.

Together they form Hendricks Sports Management, whose tentacles stretch throughout baseball, from the mound at Boston's Fenway Park to the outfield at Seattle's Kingdome. They represent 10 percent of the 650 major leaguers.

"When we got in the business only about 10 players had agents," said Randy Hendricks. "Now, there's only about 10 or 15 who don't."

Alan, 48, and Ray, 45, employ 20 people at their firm, which also is involved in real estate.

The telephone rang in the conference room of their office at Cypress Forest. Tom Grieve, general manager of the Texas Rangers, was calling. The Rangers had just acquired pitcher Calvin Schiraldi, a client, from the Astros organization.

"I can't wait to tell Schiraldi he's going to the big leagues," said Alan, with the enthusiasm of a Little Leaguer.

The Hendrickses began in the business in 1970, when the only millionaires in sports were the owners. Their first client, University of Houston receiver Elmo Wright, signed a three-year contract with the Kansas City Chiefs for a whopping $135,000.

"You tell (players today) we've been in the business since the average baseball salary was $60,000 and the minimum was $13,000, and they look at you like you've flown in from Mars," said Alan.

In February, the brothers negotiated a $21.5 million, four-year contract for Roger Clemens, which made him the highest paid player in baseball history. Where have you gone Joe DiMaggio?

Imagine the Hendrickses representing a Roger Maris after his 61-homer season, or Ted Williams after hitting .406, or Denny McLain after winning 31 games.

"You're talking $30 million for five years, guaranteed," said Randy. Just sign on the dotted line.

Is there a limit to these salaries? Television money may have peaked when CBS signed a $1.06 billion contract and ESPN signed for $400 million. ESPN would like to continue televising baseball after the 1993 season, but not at that price.

"Because CBS has lost money, everybody has predicted doom and gloom," said Randy, accustomed to owners pleading poverty. "The game has never been more popular, the revenues never higher. Ownership is like Chicken Little predicting the sky is falling."

"Every time they cut a new deal, whether it's the NBA, NFL or you name it, the TV rights go up," said Alan, predicting more international television revenue in the future. "I think you'll see a globalization of all sports. Look at the attendance of the (World League of American Football) in Europe, and that's a yawner in America."

General managers generally regard agents with the same affection they have for New York cab drivers. The Hendrickses have earned respect.

"For agents, they're at the top of the list," said Bob Watson, assistant general manager of the Astros. "Basically, they're honest. They're tough, but they're fair. You don't mind that."

Negotiations can get nasty, an area where Randy seems to thrive.

"I started in this business at 25," he said. "I had a lot of teams try to intimidate me, try to run me out of the business. I was a gunslinger. Now I'm a statesman. There's some pretty crisp words that fly in that room."

Dick Wagner, the abrasive former general manager of the Astros, went eye-to-eye with the Hendrickses on several occasions.

Alan, the more jovial of the brothers, takes a softer approach, effectively balancing Randy. "What sets us apart (as agents) is there's two of us," said Alan.

If a team can afford to pay a player more money, bet on the Hendrickses to know exactly how much.

"It's fair to say the other side knows we come (to the table) armed," said Randy.

Case study.

"The Pirates announced they lost $7 million in 1990," he said. "Break out the violins. They wrote off their entire collusion payment of $10.7 million (as a business expense) in 1990. They didn't pay one dime of it last year. You can come up with a $5 million profit (for the Pirates) fairly easily. We make it our business to study those numbers."

The Hendrickses boast a 10-4 record in arbitration cases, well above the 45 percent victories for all players. They are 3-0 vs. the Pirates, winning twice for Doug Drabek and once for John Smiley. Drabek, last year's Cy Young winner, will earn $3.35 million this year, thanks to Alan and Randy.

"I believe they're out for the player's best interests," said Alan Ashby, a former Astros catcher and now a sportscaster in Houston. "I had a feeling they were friends as opposed to being just agents."

The Hendrickses, attending a real estate meeting in Cleveland in the early 1970s, met several members of the Indians. The players invited them to spring training. Outfielder John Lowenstein was the first to sign and within a year 15 more joined, including Ashby, then with the Indians.

Other clients include Cincinnati's Norm Charlton, Kansas City's Mark Davis, Seattle's Jay Buhner and the Astros' Mike Scott, Eric Anthony, Darryl Kile, Jim Clancy and Mike Capel. A few football players remain in the portfolio, though the Hendrickses decided about 1980 to concentrate on baseball.

Many of their more prosperous players are pitchers, which is no coincidence.

"When you're the pitcher, you're the king," said Randy, who pitched in amateur leagues as a kid. He still plays slow-pitch softball.

Randy, with a satellite dish in his back yard, will watch two to three games a night on his 8-foot TV screen.

"I watch like a scout," he said. "I've called players and told them they're tipping their pitches, or it looks like they've closed their stance. I've talked the philosophy of pitching with Roger Clemens for hours."

Alan, who travels more than Randy, sees more games in person.

"I'm convinced the players would play just as hard if you move the decimal point one place to the left," said Alan.

Tired of the cold, the Hendrickses migrated from Shawnee Mission, Kan., for college, attending the University of Houston. They got to know Wright and Cougars fullback Robert Newhouse, their first two clients.

"It's not always, 'Get the most you can,'" said Randy. "It's nurturing relationships with our client and the club."

It's taking care of business, the Hendricks way.

Local talent honored

Local artist, Bessie Sanders, is being honored by the Women's Division of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce as Artist of the Month for July. Her work can be seen at the chamber office.

Local artist displays talents

By DANEE WILSON
Lifestyles Editor

Hereford is blessed with a lot of local talent, musicians, actors, artists and numerous others. Bessie Sanders is a talented Hereford artist, who is known in the community, but few know about her artistic talents.

She has been doing arts and crafts around 10 years. A year ago she started painting.

"Art is something I have always wanted to do," Bessie, who is the Women's Division of the Deaf Smith Chamber of Commerce Artist of the Month, said. "I've been studying under Jean Lyles for the past year."

Lyles has been encouraging Sanders to enter her works in an art show, but Sanders was skeptical.

"Jean is always telling me to enter my works in a show," Bessie said.

"When the Women's Division called, I knew she had turned my name in."

Her art work doesn't have a consistent theme, but she says she enjoys painting people the most.

"People are my favorite to paint," she said. "I like Indians and scenery too. Most of my ideas for paintings come from pictures I've seen."

"I usually find a picture where I like the sky, then one where I like the background or something and I have my own ideas of what I want to do with it, then I take it to Jean. Jean helps me organize my ideas."

One of the works she has on display at the chamber is a replica of her first painting in a frame that was her great-grandmother's. After the show, she is presenting the frame to her mother for her birthday.

"I like painting real well," she said. "I had done acrylics, but have been oil painting about a year."

Although Bessie doesn't consider herself an artist, she was very excited to be asked to do the show.

"I was excited when they asked me because I have never done a show before."

Not only does Bessie paint, but she enjoys painting eggs, working with wood and other art work.

"I like to dream up my own wood work patterns and I do my own cuttings. I really enjoy painting my eggs. I call them crazy creations."

She paints plastic Easter eggs and makes stands for them.

"When I get finished with them, they don't look like eggs. It's relaxing and a creative thing to do."

Bessie said she would wait a while before showing again.

"I would like to get more paintings done before I show again."

Bessie, when she isn't doing art work, is employed at Ray's Welding and is a Sunday School teacher at First Baptist Church.

The Women's Division sponsors an artist of the month to display local talent.

"I hope by doing this we can inspire others in the community to get started painting," said project chairman Pat Fisher. "There may be some who would like to get started, but are afraid to."

The display will be in the Chamber of Commerce board room through the month of July.

Hints From Heloise

HOME FIRE

Dear Heloise: I am responding to the reader who had been taking clothes to the dry cleaner for years and as a result had a number of extra hangers. The reader was wondering what to do with all these extras.

A number of months ago my husband and I were victims of a house fire. Not all our clothes were destroyed, but in the short time between when the insurance company inspected the damage and we actually started to clean and rebuild, every metal hanger in the house rusted.

The one thing we could have used were hangers. It's such an odd item, no one thought of them.

So contact your local fire department or look in your local newspaper to locate a family which has recently been the victim of a house fire. Hangers are not a necessity, but when all your hangers have been destroyed or rusted, such a donation is surely welcome. — Hope Allen, Salt Lake City, Utah

In a case like this, your dry cleaner may sell you hangers at a very reasonable price. Why not ask. — Heloise

Gutierrez, Perez united Saturday

MR. AND MRS. JOSEPH PEREZ
...nee Lisa Gutierrez

Elizabeth (Lisa) Gutierrez and Joseph Alvin Perez, both of Hereford, exchanged vows Saturday afternoon at the First United Methodist Church of Hereford.

Rev. Joe Wood, of the church, conducted the ceremony.

Lisa is the daughter of Javier and Maria Gutierrez and Joseph is the son of Frank and Maria Trevino, all of Hereford.

The bride was given in marriage by her father in an altar setting of two spiral candelabra holding 15 white tapered candles each. White wicker baskets containing jade green and cranberry flowers were also at the altar. Brass arches with jade green and cranberry accents decorated the entrance.

Her gown was white satin adorned in miniature pearls and floral lace. The collar was accented with pearls and lace with the pearls hanging over the lace. The waistline featured a v-shaped ruffle and the sleeves were long satin lace with puffed shoulders.

The full length back was accented with a large bow and ruffles. The veil was laced with miniature beaded pearls on the head piece.

The bride's cascading bouquet consisted of shimmering pearls, white ribbons, baby's breath and cranberry roses. She wore white raindrop pearl earrings hanging from golden hearts.

Lynda Gutierrez served as her sister's maid of honor. The brother of the groom, Augustine Coronado, was best man.

Other bridal attendants include Anna Romero, Leticia Salas, Raquel Martinez and Sonia Martinez.

Groomsmen were David Cabezuela, David Salas, Edward Martinez and Jessie Romero.

The attendants were attired in jade green silky, tea-length dresses with puffed sleeves and a rose-type bow attached to cross over ruffle in front. The maid of honor's dress was of the same design, but colored cranberry.

They carried bouquets of silk burgundy roses adorned with white baby's breath, greenery and jade green ribbons.

Melissa Romero and Ruben John Leal of Dimmitt were miniature bride and groom.

Candis Coronado, daughter of Augustine and Debra Coronado, and Sarah Beth Galan, daughter of Phillip and Lisa Galan of Amarillo, served as flower girls.

Ring bearer was John Paul Gutierrez, the bride's brother. Escorts and ushers were Javier Gutierrez Jr. and Manuel Velasquez Jr. of Dimmitt.

Elaine Calkins accompanied Stephen M. Sobczak as he sang, "There is Love," and "Always and Forever." "Never Gonna Let You Down" was played on tape.

A reception was held in the FUMC fellowship hall, where a three tiered wedding cake decorated with burgundy roses and jade green leaves with a staircase leading down from each side was served.

The couple will be making their home in Fayetteville, N.C., where the groom is stationed with the U.S. Army.

The bride is a 1987 graduate of Hereford High School. She attended a year of college at West Texas State University and plans to continue her education in North Carolina.

The groom is a 1988 graduate of Hereford High School and joined the Army that same year. He is currently stationed at Fort Bragg, N.C. with the 82nd Airborne.

Out of town guests were from Weslaco, Laredo, Amarillo, Lubbock and Dimmitt.

Reunion celebrated in canyon

neck and pinned with a cowhead pin. A whiteface cowhead name tag with a different color ribbon attached identified each family branch.

A group went to Canyon to tour the Panhandle Plains Historical Museum. At the musical production "Texas," 79 cousins were recognized, which was the highlight of the reunion.

Sunday morning, after a family vote, Homer Lee Owen and Jewell Hargrave were named as King Bull and Queen Cow. They were presented a Bull Chip plaque award.

A memorial service was conducted honoring the deceased.

The family took pictures and planned their next reunion in 1994.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: In the last several weeks you have published at least five letters depicting North American teen-age girls as sex-crazed, out-of-control estrogen bombs whose principal occupation in life is boy chasing.

I am a 17-year-old Canadian girl who lives in Edmonton, and I'm not any different from other teen-age girls on this continent. Nor do I believe that the boys in Edmonton are very different from the ones in Toronto, Chicago or New York.

I do not leave obscene messages on answering machines or stand under the windows of defenseless young males at 1 a.m. and toss pebbles. I do not tape roses along with my phone number to the windshield of cars.

Where are these boys that are so irresistible? The ones I see around are mostly jerks, out for whatever they can get. I've had to slap a few faces and shove a couple of boys out the door.

The letters you have been printing certainly have given teen-age girls an uneven shake. How about a bit more even-handedness, Ann? -- Miss X

DEAR MISS X: I received a load of letters from teen-age girls who thought I was being unfair. Read on for some comments.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Most of the girls "California Mom" wrote

Rapes anniversary celebrated

Mr. & Mrs. Lester Rape were honored on their 50th wedding anniversary at Bruce Spruce Ranch in Pagosa Springs, Colorado recently.

Friends of the couple enjoyed a pot luck dinner preceding the cutting of a beautifully decorated anniversary cake.

Those in attendance were from many parts of Texas, Tennessee and New Mexico.

Lester Rape married Frances Smith on June 4, 1941 in Shreveport, Louisiana. The Rapes have one daughter, Peggy Sue Bonine who resides in Garland, Texas.

Lester worked at Texas Employment Commission and Frances worked at Dept. of Public Safety for many years before retiring.

about were high schoolers, about 15 or 16. They are the first generation to grow up in broken homes. Their fathers are either nowhere to be found, or if they are on the scene, they are too busy to pay attention to their children.

Those "aggressive" girls are starved for affection. They are not hounding the boy for sex. Actually, they would be happy to settle for a lot less. What they really want is some male person who will pay a little attention to them. They are desperate to belong to somebody. If they have to sleep with a boy to feel "wanted," even for a half an hour, it's worth it to them. This is obvious to anyone with half a brain and an ounce of insight. I cannot understand why so few people see it. Show me a 15-year-old girl who is "boy-crazy" and I will show you a young girl who is hungry for her father. -- E.B. in Shawnee, Kan.

FROM SANTA MONICA: The letters describing 15- and 16-year-old boy-crazy sexpots has spotlighted what has really gone wrong in our society. The disintegration of the family unit is the single biggest cause for America's sense of alienation.

Our kids should be taught that superficial values rooted in money and sex do nothing to establish meaningful relationships and only blind us to the things in life that really matter.

The parents who wrote didn't see any reason to trust their kids. One mother said if she had a daughter she would be worried about pregnancy, but she has a son and is worried instead that he might get a sexually transmitted disease. Something has gone awfully wrong. -- Another California Mom

DEAR SANTA MONICA and others who wrote to bemoan the sorry state of our teen-agers: All over this country we have merit scholars, 4-H champions, kids who are excelling in sports, science, literature and the arts. I am not willing to write off this generation as screwballs and sex maniacs. I believe that today's teen-agers are going to do a great deal better than the gloomers and doomers have predicted. Just you wait and see.

Gem of the Day (Credit Will Adams, Liberty, Mo.): Money cannot buy happiness but it does afford a considerably wider selection of misery.

YOUR EYES

ALL-SEASON GLASSES

Just as some people choose to buy all-season tires for their car so they don't have to have snow tires put on in the winter, many people who wear eyeglasses prefer to have photochromatic lenses that serve as sunglasses, too, switching automatically from light to dark to light again. The lenses contain millions of light-sensitive crystals that react to both visible and ultraviolet light. They turn dark in sunlight and then clear when the wearer goes indoors. It takes about a minute for the change to take place. It takes only a little while to get used to these "miracle" lenses, and most wearers are delighted with their convenience. They can be used for most prescriptions, even bifocals. One caveat: If you're going to spend a lot of time on the beach or the ski slopes, it's wise to have an extra pair of special-purpose lenses that block even more ultraviolet light.

MR. AND MRS. TREAVER LEONARD
...nee Amanda Mazurek

Mazurek, Leonard exchange vows

Amanda Kay Mazurek, of Brownwood, and Treaver Leonard, of Lamesa, were united in marriage Saturday at St. Anthony's Catholic Church in Hereford.

Amanda is the daughter of Sam and Leona Mazurek of Hereford and the bridegroom is the son of Richard and Virginia Leonard of Lamesa.

Monsignor Orville R. Blum, of the church, officiated the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a shimmering white regal satin gown, featuring an exquisite off-the-shoulder neckline bordered with re-embroidered alencon lace.

The ball gown bodice was made of Italian regal satin. Trimmed with hand beaded re-embroidered alencon lace was a basque waistline. The cotillion sleeves of triple tiered satin were accented with pearl clusters.

The full satin skirt gracefully flowed into a semicathedral length train embellished with hand clipped beaded re-embroidered lace medallion, pearl clusters and satin pedals. The back waist line featured regal satin cabbage rose and candy box bow.

The white, diamond shaped bridal bouquet was adorned with roses, stephanotis and pixies.

Bridal jewelry consisted of her mother's pearl choker necklace and pearl earrings that the groom gave to the bride on their first Christmas together.

Tori Mazurek of Lubbock served as her sister's maid of honor. Chris Norris of Midland was best man.

Bridesmaids included Paula Bearden, Lake Jackson, and the bride's sisters, Lesa Kellin, Amarillo, and Sammee Mazurek.

The attendants wore full floor length black satin skirts with fitted white satin bodices, black ruffled neckline and sleeves. They carried small bouquets of white and black roses and ribbons.

The bride's train carriers were Katie Williams, niece of the bride, and Tiane Leonard, niece of the groom.

Serving as groomsmen were the groom's brothers, Randy and Scott Leonard of Lamesa and Jeff Brown of Lamesa.

Ushers seating guests were Mike McAda, Sherman; Eric Schreiber, Midland, and the bride's brother, Scott Mazurek of Lubbock.

Junior bridesmaids and groomsmen were Angie Williams, the bride's niece, and the groom's nephew, Zack Leonard.

Meghan Leonard, the groom's niece and daughter of Scott and Stacy Leonard, served as the flower girl. Candle lighters were Josh and Jeremy Urbanczyk.

Musical selections, "There is Love," "Ave Maria," "Ode to Joy," and "The Lord's Prayer" were sung by Letha Leonard and Trina McCollum. Accompaniment was provided by Carolyn Evers.

A reception for the couple was held at the Knights of Columbus Hall. Bridget Williams and Pam Shepic, sisters of the bride, served a three-tier cake with black accents to guests. The table was adorned with a white table cloth, candles and fresh cut flowers.

After a wedding trip to Montego Bay, Jamaica the couple will be making their home in Brownwood.

The bride is a graduate from Hereford High School and Texas Tech University. She received her bachelor of science in industrial engineering. She is employed with 3M as a process engineer.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Lamesa High School and attends the University of Texas at Arlington. He is majoring in mechanical engineering.

Guests from Lamesa, Amarillo, Lubbock and White Deer attended the ceremony.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

The Wrong Reasons

The desire to own a business is as American as apple pie. Much of this country's wealth and standard of living can be attributed to our desire for personal and financial independence. Most of us dream of having our own shop, store or business. We occupy many pleasant hours contemplating what we would do if our name was on the door.

Unfortunately, many businesses are started for the wrong reasons. You should closely examine your motives for starting a new venture. If any of your reasons are like those included in this column, you may want to think twice.

Wrong Reasons No. 1

"I want to make a lot of money right away." This is not a good reason to start a business. Most new businesses do not produce quick cash or even short-term wealth. Don't expect to get rich quick. Typically, it takes several years of steady, managed growth to produce much more than a living from a small business. Many of America's greatest success stories came about after years of frustration and failure. That is the good news.

The bad news is that most new businesses end in failure. Depending on whose statistics you believe, between 50 and 80 percent of all businesses started this year will fail before their fifth birthday.

Therefore, it is wise to consider any new venture carefully. You should prepare a detailed plan to guide your venture. Preparing three-year financial projections with income and cash flow statements will help you determine how much money you'll need. Careful planning will increase your odds of success.

More Wrong Reasons

"I want to start my own business so I can have more time to spend with my family." Most small businesses require a huge commitment of time. You will have even less time to spend with your family.

According to the National Federation of Independent Businesses, many entrepreneurs work 60 to 80 hours per week. The typical worker employed by someone else puts in only 40 to 48 hours per week. So, if you're average, you'll lose another 12 to 40 hours of family time per week.

Another wrong reason to start your own business is because you hate your present job or because you can't get along with your boss. This may be a good reason to find another job. However, it is a wrong reason to go out on your own.

Every job has its adverse elements. It may appear that owning a business is glamorous and exciting. However, don't forget the typical business owner usually cleans the bathrooms, vacuums the floors, keeps the books and dusts the inventory. These chores are neither glamorous nor exciting.

Starting your own business doesn't mean you are your own boss. In fact, you have many bosses when you are self-employed. We call them customers. If you don't conduct your business in the way they want, they take their business elsewhere. This results in a very direct cut in your paycheck.

Another wrong reason for venturing out on your own business is because you have a "great idea for a new project." The patent office houses millions of "great ideas" that nobody wanted.

Before you start a business based on your new idea, do a little market research. Is there really a need for this product or service? What will potential customers pay for it? How much will it cost to produce? How can you market the product?

Several sources of free unbiased, professional help exist. For additional information on starting your own business and the resources available to you, send a large stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Start-Up Help, c/o Minding Your Own Business, P.O. Box 67, Amarillo, Texas 79105.

Air Force nurse has ties to Hereford

By EDITH M. DAVIS
EASTERN SAUDI ARABIA--No wailing sirens pierce the air as wounded are whisked to the hospital. No long hallways gleaming with waxed floors or quiet corridors exist in the medical facility. No public address systems with nervous voices frantically call doctors to the emergency room.

This emergency room consists of several sandstorm-blow tents on a flight line, 15 miles from the Iraqi border. With the war comes the unwavering knowledge there will be weary and wounded troops, even long after the fighting has ended.

Ever since the days of MASH, the world seems to have shared a fascinations with military medical units. These units have "Florence Nightingales" and "Marcus Welbys" who turn a pained expression into more of a smile.

The angel of mercy in this case is Air Force Airman 1st Class Monica T. Funkhouser, granddaughter of Antonio and Maria Cantu of Hereford.

Assigned to the 32nd Aeromedical Evacuation Group at Kelly Air Force Base, her unit arrived in Saudi Arabia on Jan. 16 to work in a Mobile Air

Staging Facility (MASF).

"I was trained to be an active part of MASF," said Funkhouser. "We received patients from the front lines and shipped them out as soon as possible. We kept them stabilized and ready to go."

"I worked as a medical administrator to make sure patients had their paper work completed. I didn't get to do too much paperwork since the ground war went so fast."

The fireworks of SCUD missiles artillery fire and tank rounds raged around the MASF. Now, the hardships include the oil wells burning just miles away and the sandstorms covering everything in a brown mist. The hardships extended beyond patients to the medical attendants as well.

"I arrived in Saudi Arabia on the eve of my birthday," Funkhouser said. "It was the most traumatic experience of my life. We landed in the middle of nowhere at night. I was a new medic and I didn't know what to expect. Living in tents wasn't all that bad. I learned I had to adapt to my environment quickly."

Still, the memories of the war will be more realistic than scenes from an award-winning comedy-drama.

"When I go home, I'm going to feel a sense of relief," she said. "I'm extremely proud to know I helped out in some way. This will be something to tell my children someday."

Checking pressure

Air Force Airman 1st Class Monica T. Funkhouser measures the blood pressure of a soldier at a medical facility in Saudi Arabia.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Unemployment hit 7 percent in June, the highest level in nearly five years, as the number of Americans put out of work by the recession swelled to almost 2 million, the government reported.

But the Bush administration insisted Friday that a recovery has begun. Private analysts agreed, noting that industrial workers were getting a longer work week, including more overtime, a key indicator of economic rebound.

The 7 percent rate was the highest since October 1986, when joblessness was still falling in the wake of the 1981-82 recession.

ATLANTA (AP) - Can't figure out the sex of that day-old chicken? Need to rent some sheep? For decades, folks with even the oddest of farming needs have turned to the Georgia Farmers & Consumers Market Bulletin.

Red wigglers, aged horse manure mixed with shavings, moon watermelon seeds, pinkeye cowpeas - if it can be grown, herded or shoveled, it's probably in this cornucopia of Peach State farm life.

The Market Bulletin, published by the state, is mailed free to 250,000 subscribers every week. It's one of the state's most basic farm tools, offering advice and an abundance of classified ads.

It takes more than blind luck to pin down the right home.

Sure, you could go on stumbling through the housing market. Running into dead ends and getting cornered with too little information.

Or you could nail down that new home the easy way. By consulting an experienced real estate agent.

An agent can point out options you may have missed. Get you inside interesting homes that you may never have seen otherwise. Even do a lot of the groundwork, so you don't have to.

Like researching financing packages. Checking through the multiple-listing service for homes that fit your needs -- and your pocketbook. Negotiating with the seller. And arranging for inspections. He or she will even be there at closing.

So instead of forging ahead without knowing what's out there, get some help from an expert. A real estate agent.

Inside The Hereford Brand, you'll find both qualified agents and valuable information about home buying. Everyday, the real estate classifieds list many properties and agents. And The Brand's Sunday housing section examine the latest market trends and housing opportunities.

With the right guide, hitting your mark can be child's play.

THERE'S MORE Hereford IN THE BRAND.

Senior Center offers a lot to the public

Hereford Senior Citizens Center offers nice facilities such as the auditorium pictured here. The HSC will host its "Senior Prom" in the auditorium July 13. For reservation of the room, call HSC at 364-5681.

HSC hosts 'Senior Prom'

By DANEE' WILSON
Staff Writer

If you missed your senior prom, chances are you'll never have that chance again, unless you're a member of the Hereford Senior Citizens.

The Hereford Senior Citizens will be hosting their second senior prom, July 13 at 7 p.m. in the Hereford Senior Citizens Center.

"Last year we had about 135 people," said HSC Director Margie Daniels. "This year we're predicting around 200."

This year's theme will be "red, white and blue" to go along with the recent burst of patriotism.

"We try to decorate just like a high school prom," Daniels said. "Last year we had some who wore formal clothes and other who wore dressy clothes. They all had a nice time."

Like most proms, the evening will feature a night of dancing, food and fun.

The meal, being catered by the center, will begin at 7 p.m. in the dining room. A dance, in the auditorium with entertainment provided by Marie Howard, will follow the dinner. Those not wishing to dance may adjourn to the commons area where games of bridge, skip-bo, dominos and others will be going on.

A professional photographer will be available to take pictures for the event. Snacks after the meal will be provided.

"Last year was a lot of fun," said Daniels. "Because it was our first year, people were skeptical, but when they came by and saw what was going on and wish they would have come."

"We had a man and his wife who didn't get to go to their high school prom and really enjoyed getting to go to a prom."

"This year ought to be better because we have the auditorium and have more room for dancing."

Proms are common over the state. Some centers have as many as 1,500 people attend their soiree.

People from Amarillo and other area towns attended the last year's prom.

"We need people to come and buy their tickets," said Daniels. "People need to know that they don't have to have wear a formal to the prom. Dress clothes are suitable. We just want people to come out and have a good time."

Seniors will be decorating for the prom next week.

Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: Is a stair-climbing machine a better way to exercise than my exercise bike? Is it better than walking? Are there any dangers in using the stair-climbing machines? I'm quite overweight and I've heard this is a better way to lose weight than an exercise bike or walking.

DEAR READER: If you are seriously overweight, I would not recommend it. Dr. Marque Hunter at the University of Texas Medical Branch in Galveston, Texas, found that overweight subjects quickly reached a heart rate of 180 to 190 beats a minute, while, ideally, people of the same age should not exceed a heart rate of 140 to 150 during exercise. They could only exercise a few minutes at a rate of 40 steps a minute. Stair-climbing also causes the blood pressure to rise more than with cycling or walking or jogging. For anyone who has high blood pressure or is overweight and at risk of a heart attack, this should be avoided. There are also orthopedic problems with strain on the kneecap and may aggravate knee problems.

You are better off to use a less intense exercise such as walking or using your exercise bike that allows you to exercise a longer period of time without the risk.

Flutist James Galway: a puckish Pan

Renowned Irish flutist James Galway leads the opening night festivities of this year's Mostly Mozart Festival at New York City's Lincoln Center. Marking the festival's 25th anniversary, Galway is joined by pianist Andre Watts and conductor Gerard Schwarz in this newest Live from Lincoln Center, airing Wednesday on PBS.

By Suzanne Gill

"I have a good time just talking about my hobby," says Irish-born flutist James Galway in a musical brogue. His "hobby" involves a performance schedule that sweeps him across continents and time zones at the dizzying pace of 100 concerts a year from Italy to Japan.

Indeed, Galway does his work with an enviable relish, performing classical and popular music by composers from Johann Bach to John Denver. When he is not in concert or in the recording studio, he teaches master classes, works on books about flute-playing or relaxes with one or another of his disciples. (They get together for the weekend and — what else? — play the flute.) He says no piece of music ever gets stale to him, betraying his secret in the very words he uses to describe his gift: "I can make a piece fresh every time I play with it. I always enjoy the turn of phrase, or the moment of sadness, or the moment of great elation."

As the world's pre-eminent flutist, Galway can perform anywhere he likes, but he chooses his concert schedule carefully. "Mostly I play in places I like. If you do a hundred concerts a year, like I do, and you considered it like a hundred dinners, and you thought, 'I'm only going to get a hundred,' you'd go to the best restaurants. And people will tell you, 'There's a good Italian restaurant here,' but you know darn well that the best Italian restaurants are in Italy." The comparison is no accident; Galway seems to enjoy playing his flute with the same gusto as his more tactile pleasures — eating, drinking or smoking a pipe or cigar.

This summer, as usual, Galway's itinerary includes a stop at Lincoln Center's Mostly Mozart Festival, where he made his New York debut some 13 years ago. "It's always a pleasure," he says, "to go back to New York and play for these people who were the first to promote me in America. And then, of course, the New York audience is wild, I'll tell you. You really have to know your onions when you sit down to play for them."

The Festival's silver-anniversary season inaugural airs Wednesday, July 10, over most Public Broadcasting affiliates. Appearing with Galway and the Mostly Mozart Orchestra, led by conductor Gerard Schwarz, is pianist Andre Watts, who will play Mozart's Piano Concerto No. 9.

Galway has chosen Mozart's Flute Concerto in G for the occasion. "It's the first one (of two) that Mozart wrote, and it really is a flute concerto beyond any shadow of a doubt. I think Mozart was more thoughtful about it and he spent a lot of time — like 10 minutes — writing it," he concludes, with a giggle.

"I commissioned a flute concerto from a young British composer, David Heath. He writes a lot of jazzy things, and he opened up the concerto with this alto flute motif.

"And that's an interesting thing," Galway adds, "because I don't have a gold alto flute, so I just ordered one, gold keys and all.

"(The debut of the Heath concerto) is coming up in about 18 months. I'm waiting for the flute to get made. Actually, I'm waiting for the flutemaker to pick himself up off the floor. Nobody ever ordered a flute like this before."

And, it can be said, nobody ever played a flute like this before, either.

HBO looks at baseball's Golden Age

Baseball great Ted Williams is among the players featured in When It Was a Game, a documentary celebrating the Golden Age of America's favorite pastime, premiering Monday on HBO.

Archival footage is featured

By Steve Paschal

Before the days of multimillion-dollar player contracts, before the emergence of television and mass exposure, baseball and those who played it captured the American imagination. Through the Depression and World War II, players like Dizzy Dean, Lou Gehrig and Ted Williams kept spirits alive simply by chasing a ball between two chalk lines.

Thanks to the discovery of more than 40 hours of film (much of it found in attics, trunks, etc.), including color footage of Babe Ruth and Jackie Robinson, HBO and Black Canyon Productions have recaptured that time in When It Was a Game, debuting Monday, July 8, on HBO.

The documentary takes fans back to the days of grass fields, when the Braves were in Boston and the A's in Philadelphia. It visits ballparks like Ebbets Field and Comiskey Park and offers highlights of the 1938 World Series, played within the ivy-covered walls of Wrigley Field. More than 40 Hall of Famers are represented in this look at the national pastime (roughly, from the 1930s to the '50s), and actors James Earl Jones, Jason Robards and Roy Scheider contribute readings from historic baseball lore.

The show offers historical perspective on the game, beginning with the hard-nosed, Depression-era play of the St. Louis Cardinals' famed Gas House Gang, and recalls President Roosevelt's assessment that "They shouldn't quit playing just because there's a war going on." It also recounts the post-War boom and now-classic battles between the New York Yankees and Boston Red Sox teams of the late 1940s.

However, the documentary spends little time chronicling the most important event in the history of American sports: integration. Players like Robinson, Roy Campanella, Willie Mays and Satchel Paige are seen, but there is no footage of the old Negro Leagues and only passing reference to the high unpopularity of Branch Rickey's bold (if overdue) decision to bring Robinson into the Major Leagues. These memories, too, belong to baseball's "Golden Age."

Fred Dryer pursued athletics before beginning acting hunt

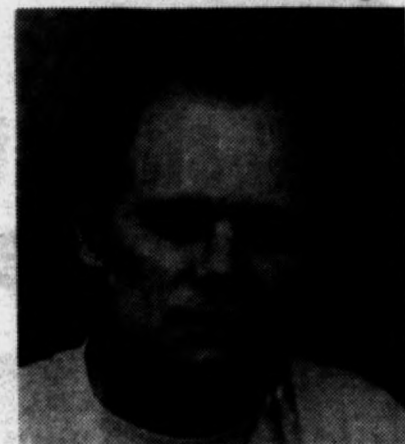

By Polly Vonetes

Q: My husband and I are great fans of Fred Dryer, star of Hunter. What can you tell us about him? We know he was a football player, but nothing else. We also liked Doc Deo McCall much better than any of his other leading ladies. —Mrs. T.W. Taylor, Prescott, Ariz.

A: Fred Dryer was born July 6, 1946, and raised in the Los Angeles suburb of Hawthorne. He began his athletic career as a baseball pitcher in high school, and only turned to football when his throwing arm collapsed. He went on to play at San Diego State and was signed by the New York Giants in 1969. In 1972 he was traded to the Rams, and in 1981 Dryer was abruptly dropped from their roster after a contract dispute. But several seasons before he was dropped by the Rams, he had set his sights on television. He had approached NBC for a chance to do some sports broadcasting and was advised to try acting. He then began studying with acting coach Nina Foch and decided in 1982 that he really wanted to be an actor. Since beginning his acting career he has appeared in numerous television movies and guest-starred on many series. His feature films include Cannonball Run and a starring role in Death Before Dishonor. He has also directed numerous episodes of Hunter. Divorced, he has one daughter and resides in an apartment in Los Angeles.

Q: I would like to get all the information I can on James Arness — about his family and what he is doing now. I would also like to know his birthdate. —Bonnie M., New York

A: James Arness has the unique distinction of having starred in the longest-running dramatic series on network television. For 20 years (1955-1975) he was Matt Dillon on Gunsmoke. He was born May 26, 1923, in Minneapolis. He fought in World War II as a combat infantryman and was wounded at Anzio in 1943. After the war he drifted to Hollywood, picking up odd jobs and bit parts in films. His friend and mentor, John Wayne, recommended him for the role of Matt Dillon. All during the series' long run, Arness was known as a loner. "Aloneness," he is quoted as saying, "is absolutely essential to my life." A divorce from his wife of many years in 1963 and the suicide of his daughter in 1975 were both borne silently. Since Gunsmoke he has made few appearances on television, but he recently appeared as an older Marshall Dillon in Gunsmoke: The Last Apache.

Q: Whatever happened to Barney Phillips? We recently saw him starring with Jack Webb in an old Dragnet rerun? —Dorothy Keane, Sugarloaf, Pa.

A: Barney Phillips, who starred as Sgt. Ed Jacobs on Dragnet, died in 1982 at the age of 69.

Q: In the last several shows of the Bill Cosby series being shown in the Paducah, Ky., area, there is something on Bill's left upper chest on his coat, sweaters, etc., which looks like an "S" and "P" superimposed on each other. What is it, and what does it mean? —Mildred Christoff, Metropolis, Ill.

A: Bill Cosby had a special pin made in honor of Sammy Davis, Jr., who died last May, and wears it in his memory. The initials are SD with a JR in smaller letters underneath.

Q: One of last season's Knots Landing was dedicated to the man who played Eric Fairgate. Was there a special reason for it? Has he passed away? —Shirley Johnson, Hibbing, Minn.

A: Steve Shaw, the actor who played Eric Fairgate, has passed away.

SOAP TALK

Blue skies ahead for Bo and Carly

By Candace Havens

Dear Candace: I'm really upset by the Victor/Carly situation on Days of Our Lives. I was hoping Bo and Carly would get together. I thought they were the best couple. Do you know if they'll ever get back together? I'm also really glad to see Roman and Isabella back together. Is this for good or will they break apart again? —Thanks, Wendy S., Washingtonville, Ohio.

Dear Wendy: I think you are going to be very happy with the way the Bo/Carly relationship changes over the next few weeks. It looks like true love may win after all — at least for a while. As for Isabella and Roman, only time will tell.

Dear Candace: No wonder Santa Barbara has lost its ratings. About a year-and-a-half ago, SB was on top because of the Marcy Walker and Roscoe Born relationship. Born was wonderful and romantic as Robert Barr, but only when he was with Eden, not Kelly!

That is when the ratings hit rock bottom. The Kelly/Quinn relationship makes Born look like a wimp, and he is definitely not a wimp. He is the sexiest guy on the soaps.

As for the other actors, I wish they would give Mason fewer lines and some time off; Julia needs some makeup; Cassandra's story line is stupid and boring; Craig is wonderful and needs Kelly.

I want them to bring back the character of Robert Barr and put him with someone like Eden, or someone who looks like her. I might consider watching it again, but right now I'm taping it and fast forwarding through the hour. —C.S., Morristown, Tenn.

Dear Reader: SB is going to take some interesting twists this summer, and the producers are bringing in some new characters that could really spark your interest.

If you've been wanting to check out the action on some of the other soaps, this is the time to do it.

I want to hear from you! If you have a favorite soap scenario you would like to sound off about, or a question about the soaps, write to Candace Havens, Soap Talk, P.O. Box 961009, Fort Worth, TX 76161-1009.

Letterman makes late-night TV varsity

By Lisa Otupal
As "the world's most dangerous band" plays, David Letterman appears on stage. He mugs for the camera, adjusts his tie and checks his hair in the monitor. They laugh and moan and sympathize and so begins another Late Night With David Letterman.

Letterman was born in Indianapolis on April 12, 1947. Even as a child he wanted to be on either radio or television. While a student at Ball State University, he got a summer job as a replacement announcer at an Indianapolis television station. Following graduation, he worked at WLWI-TV as host of a Saturday morning children's show and late-night movie, weatherman and news anchor. After a year as a radio talk-show host, he moved to Los Angeles in 1975. While there, he made his stand-up comedy debut at the famous Comedy Store nightclub.

He made his network debut as a member of the cast of Mary, a comedy-variety show featuring Mary Tyler Moore. Although Mary left the air after only three episodes, Letterman made a strong impression and was invited to be a guest on The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson. Eventually, Letterman became one of the show's guest hosts and Carson's heir apparent.

In 1980, NBC made Letterman the host of a short-lived morning program, The David Letterman Show, which earned Letterman his first two Emmy Awards.

TIME OUT

Baseball feud takes All-Star break

By Steve Paschal

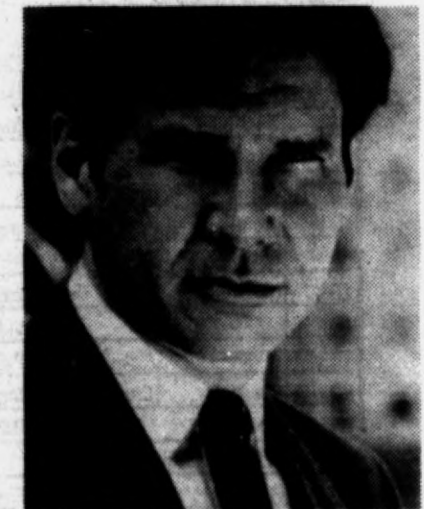

Like a dysfunctional family at Christmas, the American and National Leagues will try to put aside their differences Tuesday night, July 9, when they meet on CBS in the 62nd Major League Baseball All-Star Game.

Team owners in the two leagues have barely been on speaking terms since last month, when baseball commissioner Fay Vincent showed clear bias toward the National League by ruling that the American League must provide 50 percent of the players for new franchises in Miami and Denver while getting only 25 percent of the $95 million expected to be paid by each of the expansion cities.

There hasn't been any love lost between the two leagues since the Boston Red Sox of the upstart American League stunned the Pittsburgh Pirates of the firmly-established National League in the first World Series back in 1904. The next year John T. Brush, owner of the NL champion Giants, refused to play the AL Champion Red Sox, calling the junior circuit a "bunch of minor leaguers," and the bad blood began to flow. It wasn't until almost 30 years later that a Chicago newspaper devised the All-Star Game as a way of determining which league had better overall talent.

The American League won that first meeting, but the National League holds a commanding 37-23-1 lead in the series.

Volcanic action erupts on A&E

By Dan Rice

If you think your neighborhood is rough, try homesteading next-door to a volcano. On Wednesday, July 10, A&E's Living Dangerously completes its series of "Volcanoscapes" with "Living on the Edge!," a breathtaking look at the devastation wrought by Hawaii's Kilauea Volcano and the philosophical attitude of the local people.

For a room with no view, revisit Bangkok Hilton as it returns to TBS on Monday, July 8. Nicole Kidman stars with Denholm Elliott in the acclaimed Australian film about a woman's ordeal when she is unjustly charged with drug smuggling in Thailand.

Another rags-to-riches tale will be presented by The Disney Channel, this one the true story of a destitute child who went on to find huge success as "The Little Tramp." Debuting Saturday, July 13, the miniseries Young Charlie Chaplin traces the comedian's humble beginnings in London and his fateful journey to America.

If subtlety has no place in your brand of humor, you may be brave enough to watch HBO Comedy Hour: Sam Kinison in Concert. The roaring comic lets loose his demons with a late-night, adults-only show premiering Saturday, July 13.

Forget baseball, try underwater hockey or bungee jumping for a summer's sport. On Tuesday, July 9, ESPN's Amazing Games spotlights these and other unusual diversions. © TV Listing Inc.

Nicole Kidman stars in the dramatic miniseries Bangkok Hilton, concluding Tuesday on TBS.

FAMILY FAIR

It's summertime: What are the kids watching?

By Suzanne Gill
 Memorial Day and the Fourth of July have come and gone, but two months of summer vacation remain. Camp, swimming lessons and family vacations may fill up some of the time, but there are still vast stretches when they'll moan they have "nothing to do." That's when the TV is most likely to come on.

Summer is a traditionally dreary time for adult viewing, with endless reruns and not-ready-for-prime-time experimental pilots, but it can be even worse for kids. It seems that when school's out, all the television programmers go on vacation, too.

There are, however, some alternatives. If your kids turned off public television when they graduated from Sesame Street, try going back now for Square One TV or Reading Rainbow. Square One gives math a new spin and includes a Dragnet-style serialized mystery that keeps kids coming back for more. Reading Rainbow offers a different story every day, including Dive to the Coral Reefs, The Robbery at the Diamond Dog Diner and Barn Dance! in July. These bright, entertaining tales might help spark interest in a weekly trip to the library, where kids will find many of the titles available for further perusal.

If you're headed for the video store, look for these recommended titles: How the Leopard Got His Spots, The Amazing Bone and Other Stories, and Madeline.

TV entrepreneur Ted Turner

CNN and Ted Turner are still headlining the news as critics continue to blast the entrepreneur and the cable network for its media coverage of the Persian Gulf war. Turner's not taking any flack, though. He told his company's shareholders he would have kept a reporter in Berlin if the network had existed during World War II.

NBC read off the top ten replacements for Johnny Carson, and David Letterman came in second. Letterman reportedly is miffed by the network's decision to crown Jay Leno king of The Tonight Show. Rumor also has it ABC has approached Letterman.

First there was UB40, then there was UB43. Well, not quite. Three men claiming to be members of the British pop band have committed a rash of crimes in the Deep South. The real band, currently recording in England, has issued a statement asking those with information about their impersonators to contact police.

Oscar-nominee Rodney Grant is back on the range. Grant, Kevin Costner's Dances With Wolves co-star, is currently in Jackson Hole, Wyo., filming Lakota Moon, a new pilot for TV. The film dramatizes the Lakota Sioux's Rocky Mountain adventures.

A $10 million-dollar lawsuit has been filed against the Walt Disney Co. by a screenwriter claiming the company based the movie Honey, I Shrank the Kids on his material. Jeffrey Kouf of Saugus, Calif., claims his screenplay "The Formula" was rejected by Disney in 1986.

Forest Whitaker (A Rage in Harlem, Bird) will play slugger Joe Louis in The Brown Bomber, set to begin filming early next year. Whitaker, a Golden Gloves fighter in his teenage years, must not only drop a few punches for the role, but 85 of his 285 lbs.

HAVE FUN at the Movies

EXCELLENT GOOD FAIR POOR DON'T WASTE MONEY

NEW VIDEO RELEASES

REVERSAL OF FORTUNE: (1990) Starring Jeremy Irons, Glenn Close and Ron Silver.

Jeremy Irons is Claus von Bulow, the real-life socialite convicted of trying to murder his wife, Sunny (Glenn Close). Barbet Schroeder's film picks up the case with the appeal, handled by Harvard law professor, Alan M. Dershowitz (Ron Silver).

Essentially a legal drama, the movie is also a vivid, witty picture of life among the very rich. Jeremy Irons gives a mannered, edgy performance in what has been correctly called, "an invigorating American comedy about class and, most important, the possibility of justice in the American criminal court scene."

Perhaps because of their vast wealth and wasted lives, it is hard to take the socialites seriously. Even Mr. Dershowitz justifies his time and energy defending von Bulow by claiming that the fees he earns will pay for the defense of two innocent, poor blacks charged with murder. It's specious justification at best. What the public might be better told is that, although von Bulow was found innocent in his second trial, Sunny's children successfully sued von Bulow in civil court and used that money to establish the national Victim's Rights program. However, on whatever level you choose to view the film, it is an interesting glimpse into the life of the very rich - as well as into the life of an ultra left-wing CLU-type lawyer. Mr. Irons, who won an Oscar for his performance, well-deserved the Academy Award. Rated R.

Three Boxes

Errol Flynn fans, and fans of classic swashbucklers, have chastised this column for not recommending (along with The Adventures of Robin Hood) Flynn's immortal...

CAPTAIN BLOOD: (1935) Also starring Olivia de Havilland and Basil Rathbone. Errol Flynn gives a smashing debut performance as Peter Blood, a 17th century Irish doctor sent into slavery by James II for aiding a wounded rebel. Blood escapes from his prison to become a feared pirate leader.

All the elements are here: Michael Curtiz's lean direction, the beautiful, excellent Olivia de Havilland, Erich Wolfgang Korngold's stirring musical score, (Were musical scores better when they were written in the heads of composers then committed to paper, than now, when they come from computer key boards? Or, do they just seem better?) and the inimitable Basil Rathbone, as a French pirate who fights to the death with Flynn on a beach.

Rathbone and Flynn meet later in Robin Hood but their fight in Captain Blood stands out for the sheer joy of their rapier prowess. They even smile the whole time.

Flynn will be forever remembered in this film for his declaration that his allegiance is to his fellow man and not the king, and to his rallying cry of "All right, my hearties, follow me!"

Rent this one - it's "they-don't-make-'em-like-they-used-to" fun. Not rated. Would be a PG-13.
