Three children die in house blaze

Playing with matches

By SHAWN COCKRUM
Staff Writer

Three Hereford children who were left alone in a house for only a few minutes, died Friday in a fire believed to have been started by one of the children playing with matches.

Pedro Flores, 4; his nephew Moses Flores, 2; and niece Joelda, 1; were alone in the house at 110 Alamo when the fire started at about 12:40 p.m.

Hereford Fire Marshall Jay Spain said that apparently the oldest child had the matches in a closed bedroom closet.

The two other children were in another room watching television. Although autopsies have not been released, Spain said he believes the two younger children died of smoke inhalation while Pedro suffered burns on his face and arms.

The two youngest children's mother, Andrea Flores, was being held in the Potter County Jail at the time of the fire.

It is the first fire fatality in the county in three years, according to fire officials.

The first firefighters on the scene were Fire Chief David Spain and Dale Broadstreet. When they arrived they found a neighbor working to save the life of the 4-year-old who was found in the back room. Chief Spain began CPR on the first child as Broadstreet entered the back of the house to look for the other children.

"I just started turning over mattresses and looked in closets," Broadstreet said. "I would look for a while then find a window so I could get some air. By the time I made it to the front of the house, they had the other kids outside."

A preliminary investigation by the fire marshal stated that the fire had been burning for 10 to 20 minutes, filling the house with smoke.

"There was not very much fire in the house, it was mainly in a closed closet full of clothes," Fire Marshal Spain added.

Steve Cortez, who was also one of the first firefighters on the scene told The Brand, "All you can do is think about your own kids when something like this happens, I have a lump in my throat the size of my fist."

All three children were dead on arrival at Deaf Smith County

General Hospital.

Fire Marshal Spain said that a relative who was watching the children had gone to a neighbor's house. The relative said he was away from the children for only six minutes when the fire was discovered. Fire Chief Spain said it took firefighters two minutes to respond to the call. More arrested as county-wide drug raid continues

By CINDY SMITH
Staff Writer

Five more drug delivery suspects have been arrested since the early morning drug raid on Friday in which 56 people were arrested and taken to Deaf Smith County Jail.

Jimmy Hudgens, Deaf Smith County criminal investigator, said there are 19 more arrests to be made and authorities believe they know the locations of those suspects. Eighty-one indictments for 70 adults and seven juveniles were issued by a grand jury Thursday.

Most of the charges were for felony delivery of marijuana, but some of those arrested were charged with delivery of harder substances—heroin, LSD and cocaine.

"I think at this point, only five of the 56 arrested have bonded out," he said of the subjects taken in the first raid.

Bonds have been set from $10,000 to $100,000.

"Our percentages were super-high for arrests made early Friday morning," said Hudgens.

Hereford policemen found four pounds of marijuana in the first car seized Friday morning. The owner of the car, who was not there when the car was seized, was one of the three arrested Friday.

The seizure teams, headed by Randy Williams, Sgt. Detective of Hereford Police, were responsible for inventory of everything found in the vehicles.

"All kinds of drug paraphenalia was found, from pipes to roach clips," said Hudgens.

According to undercover investigator Raul Sanchez the county-wide arrest was much bigger than a recent arrest made in Pampa.

"Pampa had approximately 60 indictments whereas we had 81 defendants," agreed Hudgens.

The first arrests began Friday at 1 a.m. when 92 lawmen from around the Panhandle surrounded and

Libyan jets avoid confrontation

WASHINGTON (AP) — American and Libyan jets roared toward each other during the first day of naval exercises off the North African nation's coast, a U.S. government official said, but the planes veered off without a confrontation.

Pentagon sources Friday described the first day of operations by two American aircraft carriers as "without incident."

But a senior administration official, also requesting anonymity, disclosed that warplanes from the two sides had crossed paths.

The source said a group of four Libyan fighters had flown northward into the Mediterranean earlier in the day, apparently to observe the Navy force. A group of U.S. F-A-18 fighters, already flying, were directed toward the Libyans, the source continued.

But as the Navy fighters moved within vision of the Soviet-made MiG-23's and MiG-25's, the planes veered off and returned to Libya without making threatening moves. The source described the meeting as "a non-event."

Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy branded the start of the Navy maneuvers an "aggressive provocation." And Libya's state-run radio said the "provocation ... will not go unanswered."

Pentagon sources, referring to Khadafy's remarks as "more rhetoric," said late Friday the carriers Coral Sea and Saratoga would continue to conduct flight operations off the Libyan coast over the weekend as planned.

"But we don't expect any news, unless Khadafy does something stupid," one source added.

Administration officials had disclosed Thursday the carriers were steaming southward in the central Mediterranean for a week of flight operations off the Libyan coast. The officials described the exercise as a "show of resolve," meant to demonstrate the United States would not be deterred from using what it considers international airspace and waters.

The United States has accused Libya of supporting a Palestinian terrorist group believed responsible for the Dec. 27 attacks on the airports in Rome and Vienna. As tensions in the region heightened and Khadafy moved his military forces to alert, the Saratoga joined the Coral Sea in the Mediterranean in an American show of force.

Pentagon sources, meanwhile, stressed the Navy fighters had not flown Friday over the Gulf of Sidra, a large contested body of water that cuts into the coastline. Libya claims the gulf as part of its territorial waters.

But in a prepared response to queries, the Defense Department refused to rule out such flights next week, noting the United States views the gulf as "international airspace over international waters."

The last time the United States and Libya engaged in combat was over the Gulf of Sidra, in 1981, when Navy fighters shot down two Libyan jets.

Khadafy, responding to the start of the Navy exercise, told Western reporters he had ordered Libyan aircraft out over the Gulf "to defend Libya's territorial waters" and ordered all military forces on "total alert."

But there was no outward sign of such a move among Libyan naval forces or among troops around Tripoli. Several Libyan warships and patrol boats and an outdated diesel submarine of the Libyan navy remained moored at the harbor.

Abalos files for city commission post

Paul Abalos, who previously served on the Hereford City Commission for two terms, has filed for that entity's Place 4 seat.

Abalos said some of his priorities for the city would be to consider paving more streets and seeing what can be done about cleaning up property on the highways into town. He also said he was interested in bringing more industry to the city.

He is the owner of Mrs. Abalos Lil Charro, Too, the Landmark Club and plans to open another restaurant soon.

He has been a teacher, assistant principal, a bi-lingual evaluator and a director of a parent involvement program for Hereford schools.

He is a graduate of Rankin High School and earned his bachelor's degree from Sul Ross State University.

His master's degree is from West Texas State University.

He has lived in Hereford since 1962.

Teacher's test offered

All persons issued Texas teacher certificates prior to February 1, 1986, must pass the Texas Examination of Current Administrators and Teachers (TECAT) in order to be employed in public education after June 30, 1986.

Professional educators presently employed in public schools will be taking the test March 10, 1986.

Individuals who hold a valid Texas teacher certificate and are not presently employed in the public schools may now register to take the TECAT offered on April 12, June 28, July 12, and Oct. 4 of this year. Only a limited number of people will be tested on each date so interested parties should register early. The test will also be offered the first Saturdays in February, June, and October of 1987.

A fee of $30 will be charged for taking the test.

Hereford has applied to be a test site but no determination has been made by the state agency. The Texas Education Agency Division of Assessment (512-463-9525) will be administering the test.

Persons interested in taking the test should contact Marc Williamson at the Hereford School administration office for a registration packet.

For additional information, contact National Computer Systems, P.O. Box 30, Iowa City, Iowa, 52244 (1-800-553-5553) or the Texas Education Agency.

American traveler investigates Caddo Mounds

By The Associated Press

American traveler Amos Andrew Parker paused to investigate some baffling ancient Caddoan Mounds in East Texas and recorded in his diary: "I have seen no satisfactory explanation given of the origin and use of these mounds ... and, at this late state of the world, their origin and use may never be fully and satisfactorily understood." The year was 1834.

Today, we know only a bit more than this 19th-century traveler, according to a Texas Parks and Wildlife booklet, the source for the quote. Even contemporary Caddos know little of their ancient ancestors. After periodic study by archaeologists during the last century, we do know that prehistoric Caddos were an industrious people, more complex than their prehistoric neighbors to the west. Although most prehistoric people who lived in what we now call Texas for over 11,000 years were hunters and gatherers organized into small, migratory bands, a more settled way of life based on farming developed in late prehistoric times. Most notable of these scattered sedentary communities were the Caddoan-speaking tribes in the woodlands of Northeast Texas.

The cultural tradition of the Caddos can be traced back more than a thousand years, says anthropologist Dee Ann Story, to at least 800 A.D. They dominated an area that extended from the central portion of East Texas northward in to the Ozarks. The evident success of the Caddos derived partly from the mixed nature of their economy and partly from the social and religious systems they developed for integrating individual villages into cohesive and apparently peaceful large social groups.

Archaeological evidence indicates that large groups of Caddos with varied hierarchical status coexisted in prehistoric times. Of particular interest are the regionally distinct details of material culture, especially decorations on pottery vessels, marked differences in the amount of energy expended in the burial of some individuals, and the existence of sites that served as ceremonial centers.

Ceremonial centers are distinguished by the presence of earthen mounds. The centers vary considerably in size and complexity, perhaps reflecting the degree of socio-political integration among Caddoan groups, Story says. The smaller, less complex centers appear to have functioned primarily as special places for rituals. The major centers, among them the Caddoan Mound State Historic Site on the Neches River, served as seats of civic, economic and religious power, as nodes in far-reaching inter-regional exchange systems, and as special mortuaries for the elite members of society. It is primarily these centers that have yielded such extraordinary objects as human-efigy smoking pipes sculpted in stone, copper-covered ear ornaments, elongated cells and many other items signifying high social status.

By the time of European colonization in the 17th century, most of the Caddoan Mounds had long been abandoned, though many characteristics of the culture remained. A social hierarchy still existed, archaeologists believe, but on a more localized scale. To judge from early European accounts, the majority of these "late" Caddos lived in small villages and hamlets located on easily farmed soils next to streams and rivers. A typical settlement consisted of several pole-andthatched houses, sometimes plastered with mud. These dwellings housed from two to eight nuclear families. Their food came from gardens, a variety of wild animals and seasonally available wild plants. Corn was the staple cultivated crop.

While each village functioned as an independent entity in most daily affairs, there were ties and positions of leadership that united the individual villages into larger groups. Villagers living in the central portion of East Texas were organized into tribes, and the tribes into a confederacy.

Today, only a few thousand Caddos live in Indian territory in Oklahoma, far from the lands of their ancestors.

"Everybody at the Labor Camp was seized at the same time," said Hudgens. "We captured 12 out of 15 suspects there and four or five have already bonded out."

"I think one of the reasons this execution was so successful is because of the planning," said Hudgens.

"Not a shot was fired. Everything went smooth because of 10 months of minute planning laid out by Texas Ranger Jim Mull of Lubbock, Lt. of Hereford Police Department, David Wagner, and Vernon Hope, criminal district attorney," said Hudgens.

"If I hadn't been burned, I could have 20 to 30 more indictments," added Sanchez, referring to his identity being discovered.

"We just thank God nobody got hurt," smiled Hudgens.

An in-depth interview with undercover agent, Sanchez and update on arrests made during the weekend will be in Tuesday's Brand.

Arrested were Reynaldo Rangel Suarez, 114 Ave. I, delivery of controlled substance, cocaine; Robert Abalos, 500 Blevins, deliveries of marijuana, two under 4 oz. and over 1 quarter; Juan Palacios, address unknown, delivery of marijuana, one under 4 oz. and over 1 quarter; Richard Gonzalez, 421 Ave. E, delivery of marijuana, one under 4 oz. and over 1 quarter; Vincente Inez Galan, 204 Raymond, delivery of marijuana under 4 oz. and over 1 quarter.

Growers may be liable

Growers may be liable for payment of minimum wages to farm workers even when using a crew leader as an agent, according to a recent ruling of a Texas Rural Legal Aid case by Judge Mary Robinson of the U.S. District Court in Amarillo.

The final order of Beliz vs. McLeod and Sons Packing Co. and Waldo Galan requires the defendants to pay $18,009 damages plus costs in a 1979 case involving three Castro County farm worker families. Robinson ruled that the McLeods were the employers and that the case showed that the workers were paid as low as 32 cents an hour.

Robinson's ruling comes after the Fifth Circuit Appeals Court reversed her first decision that the crew leader, Galan, was the employer. The case was sent back to Robinson's court to decide the plaintiff award.

The farm crew had been recruited in Dimmitt, then transported to the McCleod farm in South Carolina.

Principal fired for grammatical errors

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A school principal hired to be a teacher at the age of 19 was forced to give up his teaching certificate after he wrote a letter filled with grammatical errors pleading to keep his job when officials queried his education.

Officials say they are amazed that the man, Kenneth Ballard, could teach in the state for three years without anyone checking his credentials.

Ballard left his job at 150-student Elk Valley Elementary School in the rural East Tennessee community last week, although superintendent Kenneth Miller asked that he be allowed to stay on.

"Mr. Ballard was doing a very good job," Miller said this week. "He just did not have the credentials."

Ballard's problem began when Robert K. Sharp, an attorney for the state Department of Education, questioned whether he really had a college degree.

Sharp said records indicate that Ballard graduated from Jellico High School in May 1981, three months before he claims to have received a bachelor's degree in elementary education from a DePaul University, for which he listed an address in Paris.

He said the department's letters to DePaul in France were returned saying no such school existed there.

Sharp said he wrote Ballard Sept. 11, saying he could have completed his degree only by correspondence, given the time span, and that correspondence work may not total more than 25 percent of the credit needed for state certification as a teacher.

In a handwritten letter Sharp received a week later, Ballard wrote (sic): "The school in which I attended DePaul University I have wrote several times myself. I was informed there had been a fire which destory most if not all of it. I hope this explain why yours letters have been returned."

Ballard went on to plead for his job. He said (sic): "At the time which I took my courses I wasn't aware of the percentage of responses ... I love teaching more than anything and I hope to remain as a teacher."

Miller said Ballard was about 19 or 20 when he was hired as a teacher three years ago.

"I'd like to meet him," said Nelson Andrews, state Board of Education chairman. "I don't know how he did it. The most amazing thing is how did he get to be the principal?"

Andrews said Ballard's credentials should have been questioned.

"That really fell through the crack," he said. "He just got what I would call a bogus diploma. Having that in hand, he went through the process. What they didn't catch was where that diploma came from."

Ballard agreed to give up his certification and leave the school rather than consent to a hearing to revoke it.

And though Ballard surrendered his certification in early December, he was allowed to remain at the school until last week at Miller's request.

"Myself and the board members in that district felt we needed him through the Christmas holidays until we could find a replacement," Miller said. "We could not get someone at that time."

Ballard said Friday he still hopes to teach.

"I just need to go back and get some more credits," he said.

Colleges cannot give credit for remedial work

AUSTIN (AP) — Twenty-nine Texas community colleges and college systems have been ordered to stop giving credit for remedial courses in English and math.

The coordinating board for state colleges and universities, in issuing the order Friday, said it will follow with a similar edict in April for senior colleges.

By next fall, board chairman Larry Temple pledged, "there will not be a junior or senior-level college in the state that is giving credit for high school-level remedial courses."

The board said it discovered in a survey that the 29 community colleges and six senior colleges were giving credit for catch-up courses in English and math, the Dallas Morning News reported.

"Remedial courses are necessary, they ought to be funded and they should be available for those students that need them. But college-level credit should not be given for them," said Temple, an Austin attorney.

The coordinating board adopted guidelines in 1979 to discourage colleges and universities from giving credit for remedial classes, but Temple said the guidelines have been ignored in some cases.

"Apparently, some people were confused," Temple said. "We wanted to remove all doubt — and this rule should do that."

The new rule, which takes effect this fall, says compensatory courses "may not be used to satisfy degree requirements. Such courses may be used as co-requisites or prerequisites for degree courses as determined by local institutions."

Credits for compensatory courses

"may be recognized on student transcripts, provided that they do not count toward satisfying degree requirements," the rule states.

Senior colleges giving credit for remedial work were identified as the Lamar University campuses at Orange and Beaumont, the Pan American University campuses at Edinburg and Brownsville, the downtown campus of the University of Houston, and Texas Woman's University at Denton.

Mission Hereford to provide new building

As part of a statewide plan to build 2,000 new churches by 1990, Mission Hereford is being sponsored by local Baptist churches to provide a new building for Hispanic Baptists.

Construction is already underway on the building, located on Country Club Drive, just west of S. Main Street. Much of the work will be accomplished by volunteers, including help from the Builders for Christ in the Amarillo Association.

The project is called Mission Hereford in keeping with Mission Texas, a project of the Baptist General Convention of Texas. The goals are to reach people, strengthen mission, disciple believers, pray for spiritual awakenings and begin 2,000 new churches by 1990, according to the Baptist Standard.

The new church will soon "reach out to the area's fast-growing Hispanic population," said B.L. Davis, director of missions for Amarillo Association. The Hispanic mission has been meeting at Avenue Baptist Church.

There were no Hispanics attending Avenue Church when C.G. (Buster) Grigg came as pastor about five years ago, but the church started the Spanish department that developed into a mission in 1983. Avenue Baptists knew their mission would never grow much without a building of its own, and the solution came when five other churches volunteered to help provide a structure.

The other churches helping on the project are Temple, Primera Iglesia Bautista (the only Hispanic Baptist Church in town), First Baptist, Frio, and First Baptist of Vega. A "Mission Hereford" rally in November kicked off the cooperative effort. Keynote speaker for the event was Winfred Moore, pastor of First Church, Amarillo.

Grigg said the new building can be erected for much less than the normal construction cost because almost all of the work will be done by volunteers. "The key to Mission Hereford is the spirit and fellowship of pastors in the area," said Grigg.

Ronald L. Cook, pastor of First Baptist, said a new level of cooperative missions endeavor is needed "if we're going to establish 2,000 new churches in Texas by 1990. A number of our folks have made commitments, and we hope to start several other new works in the area."

HEAVENLY FIREWORKS

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP) — A spectacular display of lights is one of the free attractions of winter in Alaska.

The aurora borealis, or Northern Lights, sends colorful bands of light dancing across the northern sky. The visible curtain of swirling streams of green, white, purple and crimson colors often extends horizontally across the night sky for up to 124 miles at an altitude of about 62 miles.

Scientists say the lights are created when high-speed, gaseous particles, known as plasma, are emitted by the sun, and bombard the magnetic envelope and atmosphere surrounding the earth. The auroras encircle the entire solar region as a result of the magnetic interaction between the solarwind and the earth.

There are only about 1,000 pandas left in the wild in China, according to National Geographic.

'Don't call us—we'll call you'

By RICHARD L. LESHER
President

WASHINGTON — Last spring, the prospects for genuine tax reform looked bright. Along with the fragrance of the capital's cherry blossoms, talk filled the air of a program that would promote "simplicity," "fairness," "efficiency" and "economic growth."

But in autumn, spring's blossoms wither—and with the passage this fall of a "tax reform" package by the House Ways and Means Committee, it seems the prospects for genuine tax reform have died on the vine, too.

To hear Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D. Ill. chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, tell it, this tax reform plan is a masterpiece. In a letter to his colleagues, Rostenkowski crowed that the bill "measures up to our goals of fairness and economic balance. It provides tax cuts for everyone, with special emphasis on the needs of middle-income working families. The Committee's most important accomplishment is this bias."

Translation: To buy support from low-and-middle-income earners, soak the rich and corporations.

Rostenkowski admits, "The corporate community should pay more." But wait—only the bad guys would get socked. "We've made a series of changes to guarantee that profitable corporations pay taxes... This has allowed us to lower the corporate tax rate and respond to the special needs of small businesses."

Translation: To blunt business criticism, we'll divide and conquer. We'll offer special incentives to small businesses that have a more popular political profile. This will allow us to raise taxes $140 billion on corporations as a whole by taking away the pro-growth incentives that produced economic recovery.

There are two flaws in Rostenkowski's reasoning: 1) "Working families" can only benefit from lower taxes if they are indeed working and 2) The most important "special need of small businesses" is to stay in business.

According to an analysis of the Ways and Means plan by the consulting firm of Laurence H. Meyers and Associates, the plan leaves the fulfillment of both those conditions in doubt. The firm's findings can be summarized in one word: "Ouch."

By 1991, the bill would reduce economic growth by 2.7 percent and business investment by 19 percent. The budget deficit would be $26 billion higher—and unemployment 1.3 percent higher.

And even if the plan doesn't pass right away, it will hang like a black cloud over millions of decisions by businesses and consumers alike. What's more, it will distract Congress from addressing the truly crying economic need to reduce federal spending.

Unfortunately for those of us who harbored high hopes, in the hands of Chairman Rostenkowski, tax reform has become like a wayward teenager. You want to give the kid every chance—but sooner or later, you have to take away the car keys before someone gets hurt.

With an election year approaching—when congressional joy riding is every more pronounced—it's time for the president and Congress to put tax reform back into the garage for the foreseeable future. That seems to be the only way to avoid a hit-and-run job on economic recovery.

Slightly behind schedule, the Hereford Whitefaces will face the dangerous Phillips Blackhawks here Tuesday night in another important 1-AAAA district contest.

A brief snowstorm dumped two to five inches on the county Thursday and Friday, slowing some activities down and canceling others. Temperatures also went plummeting to near zero during the second snow of the week. Low temperature Saturday morning was four

JESSE

He is my candidate for the happiest man in the town of my youth. He was always a bundle of joy. Everyday he was the same.

I always wondered where this spirit of joy came from. Maybe he was performing for our benefit and in that sense he may have been degrading himself to fit what was expected of him. I doubt that he was performing. His joy seemed to come from a deep giggle within his being.

He had the best business of its kind in our town. His business was good because we loved to be around him. Every young man looked forward to the day when Jesse would know him by name and share some of his stories on an adult level. It was a passage to manhood when you became one of Jesse's customers. A person did not choose Jesse, he was sort of accepted by Jesse as a customer.

I have always wondered where happiness comes from. Some folks seem to just have it. Maybe they have it because they discover where to look for it, or where not to look for it. Some folks keep looking for happiness in their jobs, as if the job could somehow give them such a gift. Some folks look for someone else to make them happy. A marriage partner, a friend, a counsellor, or someone else is supposed to bestow happiness.

When happiness does not come then the person is confronted with unfulfilled expectations. The results can be devastating. The job is no good, the marriage has failed, and no one cares.

Happiness is a homemade deal. No one can bestow the gift. Happiness comes from a sense of self pride and self acceptance. The happiest days of anyone's life are those days when a person is at peace with who they are.

Jesse was a happy man because he was happy with Jesse. This peace came from a correct perception of purpose. He knew his task was not his job. His task was letting Jesse become the person Jesse was meant to be.

By the way, Jesse was black. His job? He shined shoes at Alex's Barber Shop.

Will taxpayers pay premium price?

By RICHARD L. LESHER
President

WASHINGTON — Pop quiz time again.

Question 1. (multiple choice): The Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation (PBGC) is:

- a. A company that makes personal loans.
- b. A rock group.
- c. The parent company of a nursing home chain.
- d. A quasi-governmental pension insurance agency.

Question 2. Who cares? The answer to question one is "d." And the answer to question two is "thousands of companies"—and if recent developments continue, you as a taxpayer may come to care as well.

The PBGC was established by the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 to place a safety net under the nation's private pension plans. The idea was simple: Companies which sponsored plans would pay a premium to PBGC for each plan participant. Then, if the corporation went out of business or was forced to terminate the plan, PBGC would pay the benefits when the plan's participants retired. But then, even the best-laid plans of mice and men...well, you know. Far more plan terminations occurred than Congress anticipated—in part because three recessions sent many companies down for the third time, with their pension plans.

By the start of 1985, the PBGC had taken on the liabilities of more than 1,000 plans—and run up a staggering $400 million deficit. Then came a $600 million straw that threatens to break the PBGC's back. This year alone, two nearly bankrupt corporations have terminated plans with $165 million and $425 million dollars in liabilities, respectively—doubling PBGC's liabilities.

To reduce the flow of red ink, PBGC wants to triple the premium from $2.60 per participating employee to more than $8. Many businesses, however, fear that the deficit may be pushed even higher if other hobbled companies are forced to terminate plans. This uncertainty could start a series of panic withdrawals similar to a run on a bank—drying up PBGC's contributions. And if that happens, you can picture who the contributor of last resort will be.

Legislation now before Congress could staunch the bleeding at PBGC—and reduce the sting of future premium hikes—by making it tougher for corporations to terminate pension plans.

That would be a welcome move for the business community, which would be more than willing to trade a reasonable premium increase and reduced flexibility in getting out of plans for heightened security. It would be good news for employees, who would have greater assurance that their pensions would be there when they are needed.

And the rest of us? We can go back to blissful ignorance of the PBGC and its operations.

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnsons farm on Tierra Blanca Creek ponders the urban problem this week, somewhat.

Dear editor:

According to an article I read the other day, urbanization of the United States is continuing on a massive scale. Before long, three-fourths of the population will be living in big cities.

I have been pondering what happens when you urbanize a man from the country or from a country town. You know, the urban experts consider any town a country town if it doesn't have 5 o'clock smog and four potholes to the block.

How can you tell, when a man moves from the country to a big city, at what point he becomes urbanized? I know people who've moved from the country to the city and as far as I can tell they've stayed about the same, except maybe they twitch a little more when they get home from fighting traffic.

I had my hair cut once in a big city and I couldn't tell any difference from the barber there than one in a small town, except he charged more. The only difference between a big city banker and a small town banker is that the former makes loans with more zeroes on the amount. The principal is the same; get the money back with interest.

Most national office-holders get most of their votes from urban areas. Thus I suppose you're urbanized when you can get taken in by political promises the same as the rest of us.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

It must be a near-ultimate anguish for anybody with a terminal illness to hear or read of a "possible new cure" which is just beyond his reach.

"Yes, there is an exciting new remedy which has proved successful in 11 of 25 patients but—sorry—the drug is still 'experimental,' is not available."

What's wrong with allowing patients who have no other hope access to such new remedies before they are "clinically proved"?

It happened again just recently when the National Cancer Institute announced that cancer patients who had not responded to radiation, had not responded to chemotherapy, "had" responded to a new procedure involving interleukin-2.

Thousands of calls poured into my office, every newspaper office and to the NCI asking, "Please, where is this treatment available? I'll go any place, pay anything!"

Such callers could be told only that general availability of IL-2 is at least five years away.

The Wall Street Journal recently noted that frequently the news prescribes for incurable patients nothing better than "patience."

The dying are advised that they'll "just have to wait."

Should we of the media not mention at all these promising medical breakthroughs until they are proved, approved and available?

That would not be fair, either. That replaces false hope with false hopelessness—and it takes the pressure off the researchers and bureaucracy to expedite their procedures.

Partly in response to that avalanche of phone calls, the National Cancer Institute did expand and accelerate IL-2 research.

But who gets treated "now"? Clearly, the Wall Street Journal says, "you would have to get yourself into a research protocol and, at best, only a handful can accomplish that."

So Americans continue to bootleg drugs or travel abroad for access to promising therapies which our own FDA is not yet prepared to pronounce "safe."

Anybody dying is not seeking something "safe" but is seeking anything which offers any hope. A corporation called Biotherapeutics in Franklin, Tenn., has sought and got permission to treat patients with IL-2 at their expense: $19,400.

It is a "for-profit" corporation. It is controversial. It can take but a few patients at a time. But this response tells us that there should be a streamlined way for physician-supervised administration of new therapies. The dying can't wait.

Administration plans to sell equipment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration has begun briefing Congress and will send a special delegation to Japan to try to win approval for the sale of $500 million worth of radar and navigation equipment for China's air force.

Japan's security concerns must be eased and the Western European allies also must be persuaded to accept the deal, a process that could take months, administration officials said Friday.

State Department officials testified behind closed doors Friday for the proposed sale before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in the morning and the House Foreign Affairs Committee in the afternoon.

Congress has the power to veto the deal.

The NATO allies and Japan, under an agreement with the United States, also can block the sale if they consider it contrary to allied security interests.

If approved, the deal would strengthen the diplomatic ties established with Peking in 1979, which ended a quarter-century of hostility.

But West Germany and Italy have reservations on commercial grounds, hoping to acquire the avionics sale for their own firms. And Japan and Taiwan are likely to raise objections on security and commercial grounds.

Still, one U.S. official said, "It will fly" if Japan's concerns can be allayed.

Consultation with Japan and the West Europeans, in a grouping known as COCOM, would take several months and ultimate approval is expected, said the official.

who spoke on condition of anonymity.

In a special gesture, a U.S. delegation will be sent to Tokyo to discuss the projected sale with Japanese leaders, said another official who also spoke on condition he not be identified.

"The Japanese are always sensitive about our relationship with China," he explained.

The equipment is designed to upgrade China's F-8 interceptor planes. The sale, under discussion for at least a year, would be the second since 1979.

The first was a relatively minor $98 million sale of equipment and a design for China to build a factory for artillery and other ammunition.

The State Department, responding to reports of the deal, said only that it had been "under consideration for some time." Other officials confirmed the deal had been completed but said formal announcement was being withheld until Congress was consulted.

James A. Kelly, U.S. deputy assistant secretary of defense, has been in Peking for weeks discussing details with Chinese leaders. Pentagon sources said he would return home at the end of the week.

Taiwan, which keeps a wary eye on the strengthening of U.S. ties with China, has been trying unsuccessfully since 1982 to purchase a squadron of all-weather fighter planes. The State Department said Friday night that the Taiwanese had no need for the planes.

The United States, in establishing relations with Peking, accepted the principle that Taiwan is properly part of China.

Senator Bill Sarpalius Reports

AUSTIN — Members of the Select Committee on Higher Education this week made a prudent decision by announcing they were taking the committee meetings to nine Texas cities, including Amarillo and Lubbock.

We maintained from the day the committee was formed that it would have no credibility unless it toured the state. A blue-ribbon panel responsible for overhauling Texas' entire college and university system couldn't hope to accomplish such an awesome task without the support of the people.

Statewide meetings, such as the ones announced Tuesday by committee director Victor Arnold, may not guarantee support for an overhaul. But, no statewide meetings certainly would have ensured overwhelming opposition to any committee plans.

The schedule announced by Arnold calls for a meeting in both Amarillo and Lubbock on Feb. 13. The committee will convene that morning in Amarillo at the Amarillo College campus. It will recess sometime around noon, and members will be transported to Lubbock, where the committee will reconvene in mid-afternoon on the campus of Texas Tech University.

The precise times of the committee meetings have not been announced and probably will not be until shortly before Feb. 13.

Other meetings planned by the committee include Corpus Christi on Jan. 30; El Paso, Feb. 27; San Antonio, March 10; Harlingen, March 11; Beaumont, March 12; Tyler, March 13; and College Station, March 14. Committee meetings already have been conducted in Dallas and Houston, and, after March 14, all future committee meetings will be in Austin.

Many people might have thought statewide committee meetings a foregone conclusion, but there was a time when committee members seriously were considering having meetings only in Austin.

Some members reasoned that almost all the resources needed for a study of Texas higher education were available in Austin. Those resources that weren't could be transported to the capital city.

That logic, however flawed, almost prevailed at a recent committee meeting. However, Amarillo's Wales Madden Jr., a member of the panel, pointed out just how little credibility the committee would have if it conducted Austin-only meetings.

Madden rightly argued that the committee owed it to the citizens of the state to travel to various cities and solicit citizen input. He said it is unrealistic and unfair to expect the average Texan to travel to Austin, just because he or she wants to have a say in the future of our higher education process.

The argument made an impression on the panel members, as the committee schedule clearly demonstrates. On top of that many of you in the 31st District wrote letters to members of the Committee. The combination of the argument and your letters proved unbeatable. Now that the committee has committed to Amarillo and Lubbock meetings, it is up to the citizens of the 31st District to do the rest. If you feel strongly about our higher education system in Texas, plan on attending one of those meetings. Pick the one closest to you and voice your opinion about the critical issues facing our colleges and universities.

Should West Texas State University and Amarillo College be merged? Do we need to devote more state dollars to research or to classroom work? Do the people on the committee realize how valuable the Texas Tech Health Sciences Center is?

Ponder these questions and others concerning higher education and give the committee your opinion. That's what democracy is all about.

If you have any questions about the select committee's meetings, please write us at P.O. Box 12068, Austin, Texas, 78711.

Varied streamflow expected

WASHINGTON (AP) — The West can expect "varied streamflow" later this year if early winter rain and snowfall patterns hold up, according to the Agriculture Department.

Wilson Scaling, chief of the department's Soil Conservation Service, said Friday that precipitation during the fall was generally above normal over the Colorado, Rio Grande, Wyoming and Great Basin areas. However, it was below normal over the Columbia and California basins, and "variable" in the remaining western basins.

The agency surveys water reserves and snowpacks to help forecast Western water supplies for later in the year. Snow accumulated during the winter and spring provides about 75 percent of the West's annual water supply.

PYRAMIDS TO PROTEIN

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — The contributions of ancient Egypt to modern civilization were many — mathematics, pyramids, astronomy. But the Egyptians of that time also discovered that certain yeasts could preserve food and leaven bread dough. What the Egyptians started, modern scientists continue.

Scientists here are using yeast to produce protein. The protein is being used in its mameade form as a supplement to animal feed and eventually may be suitable for sale into the human market.

Agriculture officials defend administration

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reports that the Farmers Home Administration plans an all-out crackdown on delinquent borrowers are "the height of irresponsibility," says a top Agriculture Department official.

Frank W. Naylor Jr., the department undersecretary who oversees lending programs, told a Senate panel Friday that the alarm was similar to rumors that have been heard frequently during the Reagan administration.

"Those didn't come true," he told the Senate Appropriations Committee's agriculture subcommittee. "That never has been the policy of this administration, is not now, and will not be in the future."

Naylor said reports of FmHA planning a sweeping new crackdown on delinquent debt were "the height of irresponsibility" by "those who wish to cause stress and fear."

"The American farmer is already under severe stress, and certainly doesn't need any more," Naylor said.

The official suggested that some of the alarm may be politically motivated. He mentioned no specific sources for the reports, citing only news stories and unspecified "farm groups," but he is known to be particularly annoyed by Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower.

Hightower recently said FmHA "has declared war on its own borrowers ... What FmHA is doing, Jesse James got shot for. It's the greatest bureaucratic heist in American farm history."

Naylor said independent reviews of the FmHA have been critical "not because it has been unfeeling ... but because it has been far too liberal" in making loans that have little chance of being repaid.

"It is expected that with all the options and assistance available to FmHA borrowers, many will be able to work out of their financial difficulties," added Vance L. Clark, FmHA administrator. "There are some that are so far behind that no amount of assistance can help."

The flap is over plans by the FmHA, often referred to as the farm lender of last resort, to mail out tough notices next month to farm borrowers who have made no effort in three years to repay their loans or who have violated loan terms in the handling of collateral.

Reagan's address will stress family budgets

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will campaign for deeper domestic budget cuts by saying he is fighting to save family budgets from the demands of "a bloated federal budget," according to White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan.

Regan previewed Reagan's State of the Union address in a speech Friday to the Republican National Committee. The president will deliver his annual message Tuesday night before a joint session of Congress.

While the Republicans were holding their annual meeting, Vice President George Bush continued his courtship of conservatives with a speech Friday to the Liberty Foundation, a lobbying group established recently by the Rev. Jerry Falwell, founder of the Moral Majority.

Bush told the Falwell group that the involvement of fundamentalist Christians in politics should be welcomed as "a great revival of an old American tradition."

The vice president said government should never tell citizens what religion to belong to, and he praised the principle of "a solid wall between church and state."

"But there was never and should never be a solid wall between church or synagogue and politics," he said. "Some have lost sight of this truth, at least when they consider the political participation of conservative, rather than liberal forces."

Bush said that during the 1920s, many fundamentalists and other religious leaders withdrew from politics, a trend he called "one of the great losses of American political life."

Early last year, Falwell endorsed Bush for president.

In his speech to the Republicans, Regan said that a central theme of Reagan's speech Tuesday will be that "when it comes to the family budget versus the federal budget, the primary one we have to think about is the family budget and not taking money out of the family budget in the form of new taxes or what have you to satisfy the desires of a bloated federal budget."

He said the government must "restrict its spending so that the American people will have more money to spend themselves."

The party leaders also were told by pollster Richard Wirthlin that 74 percent of Americans approve of how Reagan is doing his job.

On February 19 with his Shooting Stars basketball team

Meadowlark Lemon to play in Hereford

Meadowlark Lemon, known as "The Clown Prince of Basketball," returns to Hereford on Feb. 19 when his team, the Shooting Stars, play the California Lasers.

The game is set for 8 p.m. at the La Plata Junior High School gym. The game is sponsored by Big Brothers-Big Sisters of Hereford.

Organizers for the Shooting Stars tour, who visited Hereford Friday, said that "Meadowlark Lemon is an all-American tradition," and that "the Shooting Stars are his funniest basketball team of the century."

Alva Lee Peeler, executive director of Big Brothers-Big Sisters of Hereford, announces that ticket prices are $7 for adults and $5 for children under the age of 12.

Tickets may be purchased at the Big Brothers-Big Sisters office located in the Hereford and Vicinity YMCA building, or at the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce office.

Meadowlark Lemon played with the Harlem Globetrotters for 22 years, leaving that team eight years ago. He was then in a movie, "The Fish That Saved Pittsburgh," and performed in a television series called, "Hello Larry."

In 1979 Lemon organized his own team, the Bucketees, and now plays for the Shooting Stars team. The Bucketees team played in Hereford on March 8, 1983.

Los Angeles Times columnist Jim

Murray once described Meadowlark Lemon as "an American institution, whose uniform should hang alongside the Spirit of St. Louis and the Gemini Space Capsule in the halls of the Smithsonian Institute."

Lemon began developing his basketball skills at the age of 11 in Wilmington, N.C. In the late 1950's and early 1960's, he played more than 7,500 consecutive games while traveling more than four million miles in the U.S. and around the world.

Lemon also has recorded an album called, "My Kids." He said he recorded the album because "it was something I always wanted to do because I deal with a lot of kids, on the road and at home."

The father of three girls and two boys continues, "Just about everything I've ever wanted to tell a kid is laid down in that record. The message was one of universal love." "The Clown Prince of Basketball" has also been involved with such organizations at Sclerosis Foundation, the March of Dimes, the City of Hope, and the U.S. Olympic Committee.

Meadowlark Lemon, discussing his religious feelings, has said, "It is God who has given me the talent to entertain and make people laugh, and I thank God for that gift."

"I know there are lots of kids watching my life, so I'm going to live clean. I tell them, 'You don't have to take drugs, or drink or smoke, to be somebody.' I tell them that the solution to every problem is God, and that the things they will have to give up 'are the things that are killing them.' I tell them Jesus will straighten out their lives if they allow Him to."

"Some people think I've gone off the deep end; others think I'm going in the best direction ever. But I'm satisfied that I'm moving in the direction that's right for me," he adds.

Lemon's teammates on the Shooting Stars, who will play in the game in Hereford, are these: Larry "Gator" Rivers, who is 6-0 and also formerly played with the Harlem Globetrotters; Jerry "Love Bug" Venable, still another former Globetrotter who is 6-6 and who played at Kansas State University;

Brent "BJ" Johnson, a 6-4 athlete who was all-conference and captain of his team when he played at East Tennessee State University; Cliff Pruitt, 6-8, attended UCLA and the University of Alabama-Birmingham, played in the NCAA playoffs, was all-conference, and played in European and Swiss leagues;

Lee Stephens, a former All-American at Indiana State University; Eddie Brown, 6-6, played for California Polytechnic University in Pomona, Calif., and was all-conference and an All-American;

Ernest Aughburns, 6-8, played at Tulane University; Fred Gilliam, 6-8, a leading rebounder in the Atlantic Coast Conference during his days at Clemson University; and Phil Hopson, a 6-6 player.

Members of the California Lasers who will play in Hereford are: Laser team captain Steve Flint, 6-7, who played at the University of Nevada-Las Vegas; Tim Arnwine, 6-3½, former Cal-Poly Pomona player; Sherwin "Baby Magic" Durham, who is six feet tall;

David McGuire, the tallest member of the Lasers at seven feet even and a former Brigham Young University basketball team member; Kenny Owens, 6-1, who played with the Athletes in Action;

Willie Patterson, 6-3, who received all-California honors in high school and was named to the McDonald's high school All-American team; and Emory Wells, 6-9, who played the the University of South Alabama.

HHS varsity girls beat Caprock 73-56

Turning in their highest scoring first half of the season, the Hereford High School varsity girls led 40-19 and went on to defeat Caprock 73-56 Friday night in a District 3-5A basketball game played in Amarillo.

The victory puts Hereford back at the .500 mark in the district standings at 6-6. Hereford is 7-9 overall.

In junior varsity action Friday, Caprock scored a bucket at the buzzer to defeat Hereford 40-39. The HHS junior varsity team is now 5-11 for the season.

On Tuesday night, Hereford plays at home against Amarillo High School. The varsity game starts at 6 p.m. at the HHS gym, and the junior varsity game is set for 7:45 p.m. at the Stanton Junior High School gym.

The rest of the 1985-86 season schedule for Hereford is at Lubbock Coronado on Friday, at home against Lubbock Monterey on Tuesday, Feb. 4, and at Palo Duro on Friday, Feb. 7.

Natalie Sims and Susie Kalka combined for 37 points to lead the Whiteface varsity past Caprock 763-56. Sims made eight of 17 field goal attempts and seven of eight free throws for 23 points, and Kalka hit five of seven shots from the field and four of six foul shots for 14 points.

Kim Williams and Terry Valdez each added eight points to the Hereford offensive attack. Williams made three of five field goal attempts, and Valdez made all six of her free throws.

Three HHS players fouled out in the game—Williams, Shelly Edwards and Emma Gonzales.

Other statistical leaders included Sims with 12 rebounds and eight steals, Edwards with eight rebounds, Kalka with five rebounds and five assists, and Gonzales with five rebounds, two steals and two assists. Williams also had two assists.

The Hereford junior varsity held a 32-24 lead after three quarters of play, but Caprock outscored Hereford 16-7 in the final quarter for the 40-39 win, with the winning basket being scored when the final buzzer sounded.

Kim Edelman led Hereford with 10 points, Lana Kosub had eight points, and Tricia Kahlich added six points.

Edelman also led in rebounds with 12. Jeanette Mumau totaled seven rebounds and four blocked shots. Amy Coneway led in steals with five, and Coneway and Kahlich each had four assists.

Fencik says Bears not taking Patriots lightly

By JOE MOOSHIL

AP Sports Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Veteran safety Gary Fencik wants the New England Patriots to know the Chicago Bears are not taking their Super Bowl opponents lightly.

"We have people who do a lot of talking, but they can back up their words," said Fencik. "We have some great athletes on this team. We have a lot of confidence, but we are not cocky."

"The Patriots might be thinking that we are not taking them seriously, and that would be a mistake," added Fencik, a 10-year veteran who has seen the bad times with the Bears and now is basking in the good.

Fencik is a Yale graduate with a degree in history. He spent the summer of 1975 studying in London. He originally was drafted and cut by the Miami Dolphins before the Bears signed him as a free agent in 1976.

He has been selected twice for the Pro Bowl and there are those who think it was an oversight that he didn't make it this season.

"I'll just have to work harder next year," he said philosophically.

Fencik led the Bears in tackles with 118 during the regular season and had five interceptions. The safety laughed when he was recently lumped with a group of players as being the dirtiest in the NFL.

"I don't think I'm a dirty player," said Fencik, who teamed in the Bears' secondary for years with Doug Plank. Plank had a reputation for being a late hitter.

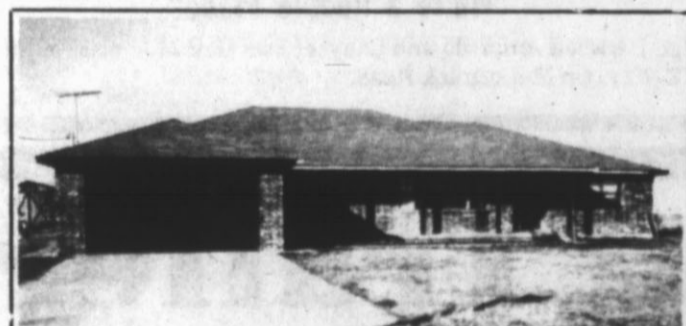

"I think people confused me with Doug," he said. "I'm really a nice guy."

Instead of traveling to Spain or the Far East, as he has in past off-seasons, Fencik said he's going to spend this summer pumping iron.

"I want to get on a program to improve my quickness and hopefully my speed. I know the older you get, the harder it is to get into shape. I'm in pretty good shape, but I can get in better shape," said the 31-year-old Fencik.

Fencik said defensive coordinator Buddy Ryan has talked to him about retirement.

"Buddy has told me I'm at the point where I have to start thinking about retirement, but that will be on a year-to-year basis," he said. "I still enjoy playing. I can't see more than a couple of more years, but you never know... If I stay healthy, I'll be back."

Varsity boys' basketball game

Caprock buries Herd 97-54

The most points that the Hereford Whiteface varsity boys' basketball team had allowed any opponent in regulation time was 65 points before Friday, but Caprock High School came close to the century mark in defeating Hereford 97-54 in Amarillo Friday night.

Hereford, which is not 3-7 in District 3-5A games, plays at home Tuesday against Amarillo High at 7:45 p.m. Overall, the HHS varsity is 8-14.

The junior varsity game was also won by Caprock, 64-55. The Hereford junior varsity, is 7-13 for the season, plays at 6 p.m. Tuesday against Amarillo High, at the Stanton Junior High School gym.

In Friday's varsity contest, Hereford trailed by eight points at halftime, 34-26. But Caprock's shooter got hot in the third quarter, hitting 17 of 22 shots, to outscore Hereford 38-12 and build up a 72-38 lead enroute to its 97-54 win.

Rodney Torres led Hereford with 21 points, and Doug Watts was also in double figures with 10 points. Torres also led in assists with four.

Watts was the leading rebounder for Hereford with seven, and also the leader in steals with four. Jerry Brown had six rebounds and three steals.

Hereford played without the services of Rodney McCracken who missed the game because of an illness. Bobby Baker, who is still recovering from an ankle injury, saw little action in the second half. The HHS junior varsity led Caprock 14-13 at the end of the first quarter. Caprock outscored Hereford 35-18 in the next two quarters and went on to defeat Hereford 64-55.

Todd Weaver hit nine of 13 shots from the field and three of five free throws to lead Hereford with 21 points. Bobby Robbins added nine points.

Casey Daniel led Hereford in rebounds with seven. Vincent Brown, who had six rebounds, led Hereford with 10 steals and three assists.

2 teams unbeaten in 'Y' high school league

The Bacwapt Wolverines and the Roman Catholics are the undefeated teams in the YMCA high school basketball league after two weeks of games.

On Thursday night, the Bacwapt Wolverines defeated the Woodworkers 49-19, and the Roman Catholics beat the Ko Ya's 32-26.

In other action, the Bandito Bombers tripled the Silver Bullet Bandits 45-15. The Bandito Bombers and the Ko Ya's both have 1-1 records.

Freddie Gamboa and Philip Webster combined for 27 points to lead the Bacwapt Wolverines to their 49-19 win over the Woodworkers. Gamboa scored 14 points, 10 of them in the second half, and Webster had 13 points, all in the first half.

Brett Clements added nine points for the Wolverines, who led 22-12 at halftime and 28-15 after three quarters of play. The high scorer for the Woodworkers was Johnny Pena with nine points.

The Roman Catholics trailed the Ko Ya's 16-14 at halftime, but moved into a tie, 20-20, in the third quarter of their 32-26 victory over the Ko Ya's. Keith Anderson and Todd Shire each scored four points in the final quarter to help pace the Roman Catholics to the win.

Shire was high scorer for the Roman Catholics with 10 points, and Arthur Valdez scored seven points. For the Ko Ya's, Larry Backus and Dean Murphey each scored eight points.

The Bandito Bombers built up a 22-7 halftime lead in defeating the Silver Bullet Bandits 45-15. Derrell Page led the Bandito Bombers with 12 points, Robby Collier scored nine points, and Bill Ruckman added eight points.

Kelby Hagar and Shaun Moore each had four points for the Silver Bullet Bandits.

On Thursday this week, the Bandito Bombers and Roman Catholics play at 6 p.m., the Woodworkers meet the Ko Ya's at 7 p.m., and the Bacwapt Wolverines go against the Silver Bullet Bandits at 8 p.m.

Grogan may have to rescue Eason

By HOWARD ULMAN
AP Sports Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Steve Grogan rescued New England once when Tony Eason was sidelined. It's far from certain, but he may have to do it again Sunday in the biggest game in the Patriots' history.

Until Friday, Grogan harbored no illusions about his chances of playing quarterback in the Super Bowl against the Chicago Bears.

"I don't expect to play," the 11-year veteran, who wasn't on a winning playoff team until this season, said this week. "I'm not saying it can't happen. It more than likely won't."

But Eason began feeling ill Thursday night. He missed practice Friday with what team physician Bertram Zarins described as a "mild viral illness."

Zarins said it "doesn't look serious" and added that Eason's condition was improved Friday afternoon.

Coach Raymond Berry wasn't as optimistic.

"There's a possibility it could be a whopper," he said. "There's a couple of types. One might be over quickly. The other might not be over quickly. I don't think they really know which one it is right now."

Grogan, who hasn't played a single down since suffering a broken leg and an injured knee Nov. 24, took all the snaps during Friday's workout. New England planned its final practice, a one-hour session, this afternoon and there was a possibility that Eason could go into the Super Bowl without having practiced since Thursday.

There also was a possibility that Grogan's dream would be fulfilled.

"When the year started, I told my wife my dream was to come off the bench and win the Super Bowl," he said before Eason became ill. "It's probably not going to happen, but you've got to dream."

If it does happen, Grogan thinks he may be rusty. But that may not keep the tough quarterback, known for his leadership abilities, from playing well.

"When you've been around as long as I have, you don't have to play a lot," he said. "But you have to be mentally ready and know what you're doing."

That happened in the sixth game of the season after Eason suffered a separated shoulder. Grogan threw for 282 yards and a touchdown in a little more than a half to rally New England from a 3-0 deficit to a 14-3 victory.

The victory was the first of six straight before Grogan was hurt in a loss to the New York Jets. He went on injured reserve Nov. 30 and was activated Jan. 3.

"The quarterbacks who have done well against the Bear defense in the past have been the experienced quarterbacks," said Chicago free safety Gary Fencik. "Steve is an experienced quarterback. Because of what he accomplished in the earlier season, they have a lot of faith in him."

Grogan said he would settle for less than throwing the decisive pass or scoring the winning touchdown. He would love simply to get onto the field.

"It's not life or death," he said, "but it's close. I've been joking with the special teams coach that I'd go in on an extra point or field goal and he thinks I'm joking."

A TOUGH YEAR
VERMILLION, S.D. (AP) — Looking back at the 1985 college football season, Dave Triplett, the coach of South Dakota, sounded a doleful note.

"Injuries never seemed to leave us," Triplett said. "We had as many as nine starters who missed games. I had the feeling that there was more health in Europe during the Black Plague than there was in our squad in the fall of 1985."

Patriots coach, players on both teams

Illnesses crop up just before Super Bowl

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The momentum of the Super Bowl medical report has shifted from the sore rump of Chicago quarterback Jim McMahon to the illness of New England quarterback Tony Eason and Bears' placekicker Kevin Butler.

After yielding the spotlight all week to McMahon and his delicate derriere, Eason hogged the limelight Friday as the countdown began in earnest. The third-year quarterback missed practice with what was described as a "mild viral illness" and the Patriots' team doctor said he was optimistic that Eason would be ready for Sunday's Super Bowl.

Butler, the Bears' rookie placekicker, also missed his team's practice after being treated for flu symptoms.

Patriots Coach Raymond Berry said Eason, who has gone almost unnoticed while attention centered on McMahon's bruised buttock, became ill Thursday night during a meeting of quarterbacks and receivers.

Veteran Steve Grogan, just activated after missing seven games with a broken leg and a knee injury, took all the snaps at practice with a brace on his knee. Berry said Grogan would start if Eason wasn't ready.

"It looks like he (Eason) has a mild viral illness," Dr. Bertram Zarins, the Patriots' team physician. "We kept him out of practice to give him some rest. At this point it doesn't look serious ... we're fairly optimistic he'll be all right."

Berry wasn't so optimistic. "I don't know how serious it is right now," he said. "There's the possibility it could be a whooper."

Bears trainer Fred Caito said he expected Butler's virus to last 16 to 20 hours. Coach Mike Ditka said Butler would kick today when the Bears practice in the Superdome.

The furor surrounding McMahon, his acupuncture rear and the insults a New Orleans TV station erroneously said he directed toward the Crescent City's female population, were further proof that the Super Bowl may annually be the most over-promoted sports event, with even the most mundane incident becoming a cause celebre.

Ultimately, however, it comes down blocking and tackling, picking up assignments, holding onto the ball, finding the seam in a zone defense. The Super Bowl is, after all, a football game.

McMahon can wear whatever headband he chooses and say the most outrageous things, but if he overthrows his receivers, blows a snap count or fumbles the handoff, no amount of bravado will save him.

New England guard John Hannah may have the credentials as the greatest offensive lineman in the history of the sport, but if he misses a block, gives up a sack or gets called for holding, no amount of reputation will protect him.

"It's got to happen up front," Ditka said Friday. "It's going to be their offensive line against our defensive line, and vice versa."

NBC is televising the game, and CBS, admitting defeat, is moving its popular "60 Minutes" back two hours to avoid losing its audience. The game generates more than $100 million for the host city and more journalists will be on hand than attended the summit talks in Geneva.

"With a game of this magnitude, it has to happen," Ditka said of the pregame publicity. "I think the only thing that sometimes is unfair is that maybe the game doesn't quite match what everybody hoped it would be."

If there is one concern the Patriots face and the Bears can ignore, it's the flatness factor.

Chicago was expected to win its playoff games at home against the New York Giants and Los Angeles Rams, and did so with shutouts.

But New England, a 20-7 loser in Chicago on Sept. 15, comes to New Orleans riding a tide of three straight upsets — against the New York Jets, Los Angeles Raiders and Miami Dolphins.

Teams with a similar record, like the Philadelphia Eagles and Denver Broncos, have come out of conference championships so drained they had nothing left for the ultimate game.

"The thing to do is approach this game the way we approach each game all year, and the way we approached each game was as though it was the biggest game of the year," Berry said. "So this is the 20th biggest game of the year we've had."

The Bears and Patriots, each making their Super Bowl debut, are not from the same mold that produced the San Francisco 49ers, Miami Dolphins and Oakland-Los Angeles Raiders, a trio of teams that have dominated the Super Bowl over the past five years. They were truly teams of the '80s — electrifying offenses overshadowing fundamental defenses.

The Patriots attack the ball on almost every play. They are schooled by defensive coordinator Rod Rust in the art of forcing mistakes.

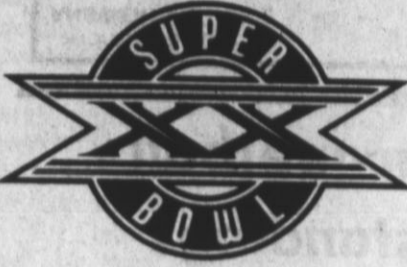

Chicago had the best turnover ratio during the regular season, the end result of wave upon wave of ferocity known as the "46," defensive coordinator Buddy Ryan's cunning alignment that turns the most sophisticated of offenses into just so much mush.

McMahon says he expects to be close to 100 percent by kickoff, that he doesn't expect his celebrated rump to hinder him. No matter. He would play in pain.

The nation's fans will be looking forward to the Bears' nosing up to the New England goal line. That may signal the return of the "Refrigerator" to the Chicago offense. William Perry, the 306-pound defensive lineman, became a national phenomenon during the season, first as a run-blocker, then as a runner, finally as a receiver.

Berry joked that his biggest fear was Perry falling on Hannah. To which Ditka later replied: "I'll guarantee you this — William Perry will fall on John Hannah. If that's his biggest concern, it's going to be a reality."

Landry's boys are Super Bowl coaches

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Raymond Berry looked puzzled one day in 1968 at the Dallas Cowboys' training camp, and Coach Tom Landry asked him what was wrong.

"I think the field is too narrow," said Berry, an assistant coach, who was showing the receivers how to run sideline routes.

Though the Cowboys had practiced six summers on the California Lutheran College field at Thousand Oaks, they brought out the tape measure at Berry's behest. Sure enough, the field was several feet short of being 53 yards wide.

"That," Landry said, "is the kind of cool perfectionist you have in Ray Berry. He's so dedicated and pays attention to detail. It makes him what he is."

Mike Ditka was the Cowboys' special teams coach on Thanksgiving Day 1979, when Dallas had too many men on the field during a Houston Oilers punt. The Oilers got the ball again and scored the game-winning touchdown.

After spiking his clipboard, which splintered into several pieces, Ditka refused all interviews and roared off in his sports car.

"That was always the biggest drawback to Mike," Landry said. "He had such a bad temper he was always out of control. I couldn't recommend him as a head coach until he matured."

In 1982, Landry gave the late George Halas the green light to hire his Cowboy assistant of nine years.

Landry's boys, fiery Ditka and icy Berry, will match strategy Sunday in the Super Bowl as the Chicago Bears and New England Patriots make their first appearance in the big game.

Landry has picked Ditka's Bears to win, but wouldn't be surprised if Berry's Patriots find a way to do it.

Berry, Landry said, has always surprised the experts.

"Remember, Raymond perfected such great moves against the man-for-man defense as a player with the Baltimore Colts that he helped start the demise of single coverage," Landry said. "A lot of teams started going to zone defenses against him."

Landry said the Patriots are reflecting Berry's confident attitude.

"Raymond is very low key and has the ability to give players confidence," he said. "You notice he never gets upset during a game."

"He has the players believing in themselves. They've always had the talent. They will be very well-prepared against the Bears."

While with the Cowboys, Ditka progressed to the point where he became one of Landry's most valuable assistants.

"Mike always had a lot of enthusiasm and kept the players fired up all the time," Landry said. "He believed greatly in the toughness of a player to get the job done. He didn't worry too much about finessing anybody."

Sometimes Ditka's enthusiasm nearly drove Landry crazy, like the time Ditka drew a personal foul penalty for throwing the ball in an opponent's face for a late hit on a Cowboy ballcarrier.

"Mike was always a hard worker and it was just a matter of time before he was ready," Landry said. "He just needed to get more under control. When Mike first came to us he was a copy of the Bear-type player — hard, tough and language

Boston, Chicago mayors make food wagers

By DANIEL BEEGAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Either Boston Mayor Raymond Flynn or Chicago Mayor Harold Washington will be eating well after Sunday's Super Bowl game.

The two mayors wagered some of their city's gastronomic delights on the outcome of the National Football League matchup between the Chicago Bears and the New England Patriots.

Washington put up some of Chicago's best known and best loved ethnic dishes against Flynn's offer of a feed of New England clam chowder and two lobsters.

New Orleans Mayor Dutch Morial, whose city is host for the Super Bowl, was even more generous. He promised both men and their teams a meal of spicy Cajun cooking. Morial "refereed" a news conference Wednesday by Flynn and Washington. The three mayors were attending a meeting of the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

Washington's list of goodies included Polish pastries, Irish soda bread, Italian beef sandwiches, Greek spinach pie, Oriental egg rolls, Latin American beans and rice, barbecued ribs, Eli's cheese cake and deep dish pizza.

"The reason we can be so lavish in our bet is because there is no way we can lose," Washington quipped. He was not alone in his optimism. Oddsmakers rate the Bears heavy favorites going into Sunday's game.

The space between the opposing scrimmage lines in the NFL is the length of the football. The exception is the center who is allowed more latitude.

Charlie Root of the Chicago Cubs, who delivered the famous home run pitch to Babe Ruth in the 1932 World Series, won 201 games during his major-league career.

Dallas Cowboys' new home

Intruders common at Valley Ranch

An AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The intruder said he had been sent by God to Valley Ranch to help the Dallas Cowboys.

Coach Tom Landry was watching film when the man barged into his office and, a week later, the man infiltrated the Cowboys' security again through a clever ruse.

"I've seen a lot of kooks, but this guy took the prize," said the Cowboys' chief of security, Larry Wansley, a former FBI man.

When Wansley hands out prizes they mean something. His assignments in the FBI ranged from the Watts riots to the Patty Hearst case.

The "kook" in question came to the Cowboys the next time in a hard hat, holding a clipboard, and carrying a tape measure. Mumbling something about being a construction inspector, the man bluffed his way into the main Cowboys' complex and sought out equipment man Buck Buchanan.

Not only didn't the Cowboys have his size helmet, they warned him that if he did it again they would prosecute for trespassing. He was impolitely shown the door.

"It's been unbelievable since we moved to the Ranch," said Wansley. "When we first got here, we had people wander in and steal helmets and footballs. There were so many construction workers we didn't know the good guys from the bad guys."

Wansley finally got control of security around the 200-acre Cowboys Center, but the souvenir hunters took more a more direct tactic. They struck in the night.

"We had two break-ins," said Wansley. "It's just so dark out here. You can't keep every square inch lit. They just slipped around until they found an area where our security guards weren't watching."

The Cowboys have traveled lock, stock and helmets to the Ranch, closing down their Dallas headquarters of 25 years on Central Expressway. Developers call the move "the most impressive gain in football history."

The Cowboys' headquarters should be an "impressive" place someday, but right now it's a good place to get a rusty nail in your foot.

"Post One to Post Two" a walkie-talkie crackles as you pull into the parking lot. Two security guards have given you the hard eye and asked your business, and now they are checking you out.

With admission approved, you approach two unpainted wooden doors that wouldn't look good on a barn.

Once inside, you're greeted by "Post Two," an attractive blonde

SPEEDY COLEMANS
MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Greg Coleman, the punter for the Minnesota Vikings, comes from an athletic family. He is a cousin of Vince Coleman, the rookie flash who played left field for the St. Louis Cardinals this year and set a record for stolen bases for a first-year man.

Greg says he talks to Vince a couple of days a week and rooted for him all through the 1985 baseball season.

"Vince is great," Greg said, "but the best base runner of them all was my father, Maxie. He could really turn it on."

The Cincinnati team in the National Football League in 1933 scored only three touchdowns all season, a record low.

time to start getting things."

Rose Marie Ruddins of Inglewood, Calif., the mother of Kim Ruddins, another member of the U.S. Olympic team, said her daughter called her from Sacramento, Calif., to find out if the news of Hyman's death was true.

"She could hardly talk to me with all her crying," Mrs. Ruddins said. "We all so shocked. She (Kim) is going to fly home whenever we hear the particulars. It's such a terrible shock."

With Hyman the star of the team, the United States was considered the best in the world in 1980. But then came the American boycott of the Moscow Olympics, and the volleyball team decided to stay together for the 1984 Games.

Miller, at his Colorado Springs, Colo., office said, "the shock of her death affects all of us in the Olympic movement."

"She was one of those rare athletes who was the best, and unselfishly gave back effort and support to her sport at all times," Miller added.

Aia Selinger said Hyman's mother died "a long time ago."

"I talked to Flo's oldest sister," she said. "We're all very shocked over this. ... It's hard to believe."

There are seven officials working National Football League games on the field and, depending on the situation, they deploy in five different positions.

and watching the Daiei match on television when Hyman collapsed.

"Rose ... saw the whole thing," Aia Selinger, wife of U.S. Olympic volleyball coach Arie Selinger, said from her home in Laguna Niguel, Calif. "She called me immediately and said, 'Please don't get panicked but I think something bad happened to Flo because they interrupted the match and said that Flo was rushed to the hospital.'"

"Rita Crockett, who was playing with Flo, called me a half-hour later and gave me the bad news."

Kazunori Yoneda, the Daiei team manager, said Hyman "seemed well at the player change. She called out to the new players to play hard. Those were her last words."

Japanese television showed Hyman being carried out of the gymnasium on a stretcher. She was taken by ambulance to Matsue Red Cross hospital, where she later was pronounced dead.

Crockett, a Daiei teammate and also a veteran of the U.S. national team, was with Hyman in the emergency room, the spokeswoman said.

Hyman, who began playing Daiei in November 1982, was considered one of the most dominant players in the sport. She became a member of the U.S. team in 1975 and competed in every major competition for which the United States qualified.

In 1981, she was among six players selected to the All World Cup Team, and was honored as the best hitter at that competition.

Debbie Green of Westminster, Calif., also a member of the U.S. Olympic team and the All World Cup Team, was obviously in tears when she said in a telephone conversation: "It's sort of obvious how I feel. I just remember Flo came to my wedding in October. That's the last time I saw her."

"She was the one person on the team who trained the longest; she was the most dedicated player there was. ... She gave so much. It was her

TOKYO (AP) — For years they worked together, aiming for the same goal — the women's volleyball gold medal at the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics.

When the dream was shattered by China, there were tears, bitter tears born of defeat.

On Friday, the hurt was even deeper when Flo Hyman, the leader of the U.S. team, collapsed and died while playing for Daiei in a Japanese women's volleyball league game in Matsue City, 380 miles west of Tokyo.

"She was the finest female volleyball player in the world," U.S. Olympic Committee Secretary General George D. Miller said of the 6-foot-5 Hyman, 31, of El Toro, Calif.

Hyman sat down on the bench after a player change, then collapsed. She never regained consciousness.

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Texas Tech University football coach David McWilliams filled the last of his coaching staff positions Friday by naming Jack Kiser as his tight end coach, school officials said.

"David McWilliams is the reason I wanted to be here," said Kiser, 36. "I have a tremendous amount of respect for him."

Kiser played on McWilliams' first team at Abilene High in 1967. He joined McWilliams at Texas as a graduate assistant coach in 1971.

"Jack is a young guy who I have a lot of respect for and confidence in," McWilliams said. "He has good ideas and the players he has been associated with have a great deal of respect for him. He can really help the Texas Tech program."

Indoor soccer not well-known in Dallas

By CATHY HARASTA
Dallas Morning News

DALLAS (AP) — Tatu, Dallas Sidekicks star, lives for the day more of his fan mail comes bearing local postmarks.

"I get more letters from Cleveland than from Dallas," the Major Indoor Soccer League's leading scorer said with a laugh. "Wherever they come from, I can't bring myself to throw one letter away."

After almost two years in Dallas, Tatu, who earned almost $100,000 last year, says he is getting comfortable if not famous. Though he sounds hopeful, he does not sound so sure the second-year Sidekicks have found a secure home in a territory where football is sovereign, the Mavericks are hot, and the Rangers have their faithful.

"There are a lot of people who maybe have heard the name Tatu, but don't know the face," said Tatu, 23. "They wanted me as a player in Cleveland. But I knew I'd never be happy there. I like it here. But I knew soccer would take time to get going here." Whenever he gets to feeling lost among the local sports titans, the biggest star the Sidekicks have ever had takes comfort from his mail. Letters are stashed in drawers throughout his home in the north Dallas suburb of Carrollton.

"My favorite is from a kid who wrote he wanted to grow up to be just like me," said Tatu, known around the league and throughout its arenas as the hotshot who tops off scoring by stripping off his jersey and tossing it into the stands.

"That is the kind of pressure I want on me, the pressure put on by a kid to be close to perfect. Many of my fans are kids. I feel I need them. In pro football, baseball and basketball, nay players don't give the feeling they need the fans. Look at guys like Moses Malone, who won't sign autographs. When I throw my jersey after a goal, I always try to aim it where kids are sitting."

Tatu, who with his league-leading 32 goals, posterboy smile and zeal for mingling with his predominantly pin-sized public, is the Sidekicks' best asset.

Saddled with fourth-class status as late-comers to an urban area stocked with pro football, basketball and baseball, the Sidekicks are fighting red ink. The one thing they can depend on is Tatu's popularity, especially with women and children.

"With his baby face and marvelous smile, he got instant recognition when he came to Tampa," said Sidekicks coach Gordon Jago, who coached the Rowdies during Tatu's American initiation. "After seeing her first game, a 40-year-old neighbor told me she wanted to give him a hug. And Tatu is a Pied Piper with children. Children can identify with him because of his size."

Tatu is listed in the Sidekicks' program as 5-6, 160 pounds. Although it probably is exaggerated — he seems closer to 5-4 at close range — the Sidekicks were not exaggerating when they named Tatu their most valuable player last season. From hurling his jerseys to his willingness to make personal appearances for the club, Tatu gave the Sidekicks an ace.

"Kids love him," said Ron Adkins, the Sidekicks' vice president and general manager. "And kids are the most honest people in the world. You can't outlick them. A lot of people have kids. And Tatu has patted those kids on the head."

Tatu, who grew up in Maringa, Brazil, said childhood ended for him at 15 when he left home to play for the Sao Paulo team. He was the one in 100 who survived the tryout, but had problems adjusting to the regimen.

"You sleep in the club. You eat in the club. You play soccer seven days a week, with practices and games. You go to school at night."

But he said the discipline forever rid him of the notion he forever would be pampered.

"My only brother was 10 years older," he said. "In my house, my mother would cook something and I'd say, 'I do not like this.' Right away she would go and cook me something else. In the club, I learned to eat everything. If you got hungry and it was not time to eat, you stayed hungry. You slept with 10 kids in a room. If you don't love the game, you don't make it through this."

Through an exchange agreement between the Rowdies and Sao Paulo, Tatu was designated to leave home in December 1980 for Tampa Bay. The timing was not favorable, he said.

"I did not want to come to the United States. I was getting over hepatitis. The move meant I would not be home for Christmas. My club forced me to come because of the deal Tampa had with the club. They sent me because they had sent a party boy before, and he did not work out. They sent me because they trusted me. But they forced me."

The bright side was that only a handful of pro players in Brazil earn notable salaries, Tatu said.

"In Brazil, I would have no chance to make the money I make here. In my country, most players make just enough to pay the bills. Their career is over at 30, and they have nothing. I have bought 10 houses in Brazil. I could retire now, not on what would sound like good money here. But I do not come from a rich family. My father worked nights. I could live well there."

His original plan, he said, was to spend no more than two years in America, making money. Now he says he is not sure whether he will return home. After a spectrum of incidents of culture shock in Tampa, he began to get used to the American way.

But he still laughs about the days he recognized just "chill" and "orange juice" on a menu, and got pretty sick of both. He laughs about the anxious moments spent expecting to be hauled off to jail for pumping the wrong kind of gasoline into his car. And he laughs about all the things lost somewhere in the translation.

His Tampa-to-Dallas move required another transition, one he calls almost as dramatic as his Brazil-to-Tampa adjustment.

"Dallas is much bigger and more formal," Tatu said. "In Tampa, you could go to one of maybe three places and run into all your friends sometime in that evening. Here, it is so big."

He said he quickly tired of the Dallas nightclub scene, and prefers low-key, out-of-the-way socializing. Despite his sure-footedness on the field, he claims to have two left feet.

"I'm a terrible dancer, so I don't feel comfortable in the nightclubs. You're not sure what they want in the clubs."

Though he says he was a Cowboys fan when he lived in Tampa, his biggest disappointment upon moving to Dallas was the Cowboys.

"I saw how the Cowboys would do finger-pointing at each other after a game," he said. "Dirty laundry, you clean at home. But Monday through Sunday, you read about the Cowboys this, the Cowboys that. You get sick of it."

Tatu, whose name means armadillo in Portuguese, is known in the MISL as "The Fantastic Armadillo." Tatu, whose real name is Antonio Carlos Pecorari, says he was called Tatu because his father was called Tatu. But if an armadillo association means more Texans will notice soccer, that's fine with him.

And he says his trademark jersey-throw, protected in his contract with the Sidekicks, is not a cheap trick but a means of attracting attention to his sport. The jerseys don't cost the club money; Adidas supplies them. And indeed, the jersey-throw has become a TV sportscasters' highlight staple in MISL cities.

But beneath the layer of energetic public relations, Tatu bases his hopes for pro soccer's future in the children. He said kids know it best.

"The kids understand soccer better than their parents. When these kids get older and have their own families, things will change," he said.

The coach of the Sidekicks said Tatu takes too much personal responsibility for the franchise's success, which leads to frustration and occasional shows of temper.

"We have had some problems from time to time," Jago said. "He has got a Latin temperament. I sometimes give him a little more leeway than I might give other players. He is our home run hitter, but he is not a law unto himself. If things don't go quite right, he gets upset with himself or sometimes with other people."

Tatu said he recognizes his tendency to let frustration erupt into a tantrum.

"I'm sick to look at the score and see we're behind," Tatu said. "The team doesn't put pressure on me, but I put it on myself. If I see something go wrong, I just go crazy. I try to control it. Gordon knows how to deal with me. Give me two minutes and I'll be all right."

His biggest fans can make him feel all right, no matter what.

"One time, I was feeling bad after a loss. As I walked into the hotel, about 15 little kids jumped on me, giving me a hug. We all fell down. When I got up, I was smiling and thinking, 'At moments like this, the thing I need is a hug.'"

BASEBALL
PITTSBURGH (AP) — As many as eight Pittsburgh Pirates have agreed to undergo voluntary testing for drugs under their new contracts, even though the ballplayers' union opposes the procedure, according to team officials.

The players, who were not identified, agreed to random testing during the season as part of their 1986 contracts, said club General Manager Syd Thrift.

The Pittsburgh organization suffered from adverse publicity when several former Pirates were named during federal trials of seven men convicted of dealing cocaine to major league ballplayers last year.

BASKETBALL
NEW YORK (AP) — Four players have been fined a total of $5,000 following two fighting incidents in recent games, National Basketball Association Executive Vice President Russell T. Granik announced.

Steve Johnson of San Antonio was fined $1,500 and Bob Thornton of the New York Knicks $500 for fighting in a game last Friday. Ken Bannister of the New York Knicks was fined $2,000 and Larry Smith of Golden State $1,000 for another fight that occurred in a game on Tuesday.

James Bailey of the Knicks also was fined $500 for leaving the bench area during the Bannister-Smith incident.

HOCKEY
HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Wales Conference Coach Mike Keenen announced that he has selected left-wing Sylvain Turgeon of the Hartford Whalers to replace injured teammate Ron Francis in the National Hockey League all-star game.

Turgeon, 20, the second overall choice in the 1983 draft, has 26 goals and 20 assists for 46 points in 43 games this season.

Francis, a 22-year-old center, broke an ankle and tore ligaments during a victory over the Quebec Nordiques last week.

GENERAL
INTERNATIONAL FALLS, Minn. (AP) — If Chicago Bears defensive Jackie Williams Perry rumbles onto the field for Super Bowl XX wearing a "minus" in front of his jersey number 72, it could be a sign to the people in International Falls.

The Chamber of Commerce in this Canadian-American border community that prides itself as "The Icebox of the Nation" sent this telegram to Perry, the 325-pound "Refrigerator," on Friday:

"From the Ice Box to The Refrigerator, we're wishing you the best of luck in Super Bowl XX — Freeze the Pats! (Signed) International Falls, Icebox of the Nation."

Mike Williams, executive director of the chamber, said late Friday that Perry hadn't replied to the message.

"But we just sent it out and really don't expect to hear from him," he said.

Williams said most local residents are fans of the Bears, the team for whom hometown hero Bronko Nagurski was an all-time, all-pro player a half-century ago.

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — The basketball game between No. 14 Louisiana State and Auburn, which had been scheduled to be regionally televised Saturday, was postponed for reasons of health, with an outbreak of chicken pox decimating LSU's lineup.

Auburn officials said the game would be rescheduled at a date to be determined later.

HORSE RACING
HALLANDALE, Fla. (AP) — A Lauderdale man suffered a broken leg and six other spectators were injured when a thoroughbred bolted over the infield fence during a race at Gulfstream Park Friday.

Berra Berra was well back of the field passing the 16th pole in the first race when he threw jockey Jose Velez Jr. and headed for the crowd, according to witnesses. The horse cleared a cement retaining wall and crashed into a chain-link fence a few feet away.

Egyptian wall paintings date the sport of wrestling back to 2500 B.C. But until the 20th century there were no weight classifications.

The production, technical and management crew needed to televise the 1984 World Series totaled 150 people.

Shantytown dwellers battle eviction

NEW YORK (AP) — Rabbit, Eli and Raymond huddled around the fire blazing in a dented metal trash can while Doc slept off the booze in his unheated shack, curled up next to a stray dog for warmth.

Mike Cruzado ushered a visitor into the muddy, vacant city lot past a junked sedan and a pile of crumbled bricks.

"Welcome to Shantytown," he said with a sweeping gesture.

Cruzado, his wife Delia Torres, and six other homeless men built the cluster of plywood shacks because they were afraid to stay in city shelters that they describe as overcrowded, dangerous and inhumane.

Shantytown is their home "and we live here with dignity," said Torres.

But now Shantytown is becoming a battleground in an unusual suit the street people hope will pave the way for squatters to build "Hoovervilles" across the city. Hoovervilles, named for President Herbert Hoover, were the towns of shacks built across the nation by unemployed and poverty stricken Americans during the Depression.

The trouble began in November when the city Department of General Services sent an official to Shantytown to tell the residents to get off city property.

"They threatened to bring in the police to force us to leave, and they said they were going to clear the lot and throw our houses away," said David Jacobs, a bearded 34-year-old ex-Marine.

On Dec. 20, an eviction notice was posted on the swaying chain-link fence around Shantytown, advising the residents to vacate within 10 days.

The residents instead turned to the Center for Constitutional Rights, a nonprofit civil liberties organization that filed suit on their behalf Thursday in state Supreme Court. A hearing is scheduled in the trial court Tuesday.

The suit against New York City, Mayor Edward I. Koch and General Services claims Shantytown is a symbolic protest against the government's failure to provide adequate shelter for the homeless, and that dismantling it would therefore violate its residents' First Amendment rights.

General Services has "no plans to move them out anytime soon," said spokeswoman Barbara Perkins. "It's winter, and they've refused to go to shelters or be put on lists for low-income housing."

"We're somewhat sympathetic to their plight, but they are there illegally and it is city property."

The Shantytown residents have all been street people for years, and say they're tired of sleeping in squalid city shelters, parks and subways, in doorways and on rooftops.

They built their ramshackle community using scavenged wood, plastic sheeting, tarpaper and foam rubber. They support themselves through odd jobs, panhandling and rummaging in trash bins.

Candles provide the only light and blankets the only heat in the shanties. A bucket serves as the community toilet and water is hauled in five-gallon drums from a garage up the street. A resident of an apartment nearby sometimes lets Shantytown residents use his shower.

The Shantytown residents cook over the trash can fire and sleep on old mattresses on the plywood floors of their closet-sized shacks. They share whatever food and clothes come their way.

"We feed people who come by every night," said Delia Torres. "We do a better job taking care of ourselves than the city could."

Rabbit, a slight 32-year-old man, said, "This is 200 percent better than any shelter. Shelters are hell. You sleep next to a guy who's picking bugs out of his hair and when you wake up, you're lucky if you still have shoes. You can get stabbed over something to eat."

Doc, a beefy 46-year-old, founded Shantytown in a larger lot across the street two years ago when he invited Mike and Delia to build a shack next to his own and become neighbors.

"We're a self-help shelter, and our system works," said Torres, a 33-year-old mother of five whose children live with their grandmother. A child's crayon drawing decorates the wall of her shanty above a jar of wilted flowers.

Randolph Scott-McLaughlin, the Center for Constitutional Rights attorney representing the Shantytown residents, described his clients as "refuseniks."

"They are refusing to participate in a shelter system that is abominable and a welfare system that is demeaning," he said.

Space probe starts sending pictures

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Voyager 2, speeding away from its closest encounter with Uranus, sent Earth "one big bucketful" of pictures and data today, and scientists studied the planet's rings, and the craters, faults and valleys of some of its icy moons.

"What we've seen thus far has been spectacular," said Ellis Miner, deputy project scientist at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Jet Propulsion Laboratory. "What has remained unseen to this point is going to turn out even better."

The spacecraft flew to within 50,679 miles of Uranus on Friday, using television cameras and sensors to study the planet, its nine known rings and the five biggest of its 14 known moons.

At its closest encounter with Uranus, Voyager came about four times closer to the planet than the Earth is to its moon.

Miner said completion of the Uranus encounter was "somewhat akin to the feeling a new mother has after carrying a child for nine months and finally holding it in her arms."

The spacecraft's cameras are still gazing at Uranus as it speeds away from the solar system's third-largest planet toward its next stop — Neptune, 3½ years away.

Voyager started sending the stored information from Friday's historic encounter back to Earth on Friday night. Most of it will continue to arrive through Tuesday, NASA spokesman Les Reinertson said.

"It's almost as if all of the most important data were stored to be poured out on us in one big bucketful," Miner said. "The reaction of our scientists as all that data descends on us is going to be one of awe."

The information Voyager is transmitting includes studies of the structure of Uranus' rings, obtained by beaming radio waves through them and by photographing them against a backdrop of star light — a technique that led to the rings' discovery by Earth telescopes in 1977.

Measurements of how the moons' surfaces scatter sunlight will tell more about their texture, project scientist Ed Stone said.

Photographs showed "what appear to be impact features on a number of the satellites," said Voyager imaging team leader Brad Smith.

U.S. Geological Survey geologist Larry Soderblom, another member of the team, said he was surprised by the fault zones and valleys on some of the largest Uranian moons because he "did not anticipate this degree of (internal) geological activity on the Uranian satellites."

Smith said Voyager's recent photographs show the rings have different colors, for reasons not yet understood.

Some of the rings appeared to be redder, Miner said, while others appeared bluer compared with the plain black of the outermost, or epsilon ring.

USGS geologist Harold Masursky said interesting features on the moons included a peculiar, chevron-shaped valley on Miranda and "a number of what look like down-dropped, linear valleys probably caused by faulting" on Titania.

Hours before the close encounter with Uranus, Voyager's instruments finally proved the planet has a magnetic field.

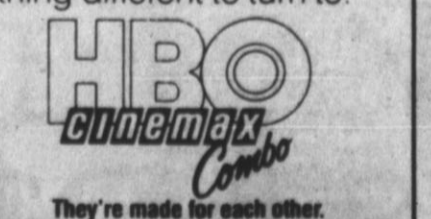

Radio signals generated by the magnetic field had indicated it was about one-tenth as strong as Earth's, but NASA scientist Norman Ness said direct measurement showed the Uranian magnetic field was more powerful and enveloped all the planet's moons and rings.

THE HBO/CINEMAX COMBO. Twice the choice, twice the entertainment.

HBO* and Cinemax.* The only two cable TV channels made for each other. Over 160 features a month. There are blockbuster movies, specials, sports and comedy on HBO. And hit movies, original and exclusive rock and comedy programs, classics and foreign films on Cinemax.

Entry forms available for Hereford pageant

All unmarried girls from age 16-20 are invited to enter the Miss Hereford Scholarship Pageant to be held at 7 p.m. March 8 at the Hereford High School auditorium.

The three categories to compete in will include evening gown, talent and interview.

Those interested in representing Hereford in the 1986 pageant may pick up entry forms from Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce office or from any of the participating merchants.

A total of over $2,500 will be given away in the form of scholarships and wardrobe to the top three contestants.

Miss Hereford 1986 will receive a choice of three scholarships from West Texas State University, South Plains Junior College or Clarendon Junior College.

With a scholarship from the college of her choice, Miss Hereford will also receive a $600 wardrobe from any of the following merchants: Anthony's, Betty's Shoes, Little's, Etc.,

Pant's Cage, Louise's, Penney's and the Vogue.

The pageant winner will also receive a commemorative Texas 1986 sesquicentennial pin to wear to all festivities during her reign.

First runner-up in the pageant will receive a $400 wardrobe and second runner-up will receive a $200 wardrobe from local merchants.

Each contestant in the pageant will receive a Miss Hereford Survival Kit loaded with various goodies donated from Buy-Wise Beauty Supply, Merle Norman Cosmetics, Caryn's Hallmark, and other local businesses.

A Miss Congeniality will be selected among the girls as well as a winner of the talent competition which will be selected by the judges. The winner of both categories will also receive a prize.

Along with these prizes, the Miss Hereford steering committee will present each contestant with a 14K gold heart pendant.

It's Feeding Time

Look's like Brian Stanaland (pictured in dog house) may get a bowl of dog food served to him by Don Carl Tardy. The pair are starring in the production of "You're A Good Man Charlie Brown" to be presented by the Good Guys Nazarene Youth Jan. 30 and Feb. 1-2 at the Hereford Community Center. Stanaland is playing the part of Snoopy and Tardy is Charlie Brown.

Good Guys to present musical production

Once again the Good Guys Nazarene Youth will be presenting a Broadway musical Jan. 30 and Feb. 1-2 at the Hereford Community Center. This year's production is entitled "You're A Good Man Charlie Brown."

Desserts will be served during the dessert theatre at 7 p.m. Thursday Jan. 30, with the performance to begin at 8 p.m. Showtime for the following evening will also begin at 8 p.m.

The Sunday matinee performance, Feb. 2, will start at 2 p.m.

Tickets for the dessert theatre are priced at $5 for adults and $3 for children 12 years of age and under. Other performance tickets may be purchased for $4 for adults and $2.50 for children.

Tickets are available at Caryn's Hallmark, Thames Pharmacy or by calling the Nazarene Church office at 364-8383.

Directing the play are Ted Taylor and Keith Ann Gearn.

Cast members include Don Tardy, Mary Ruth Hamman, Chris Coleman, John Guy Ford, Brian Stanaland, Wendy Sanders, Anjani Wuerflein, Wendy Connally, Michelle Hamilton, Chris Tardy, Michelle Solomon and Tracy Garrett.

Proceeds will benefit the Haiti Missions Project.

A nursery will be provided free of charge at the Nazarene Church during the performances.

Red Cross Update

Special thanks to all of the volunteers and donors that made our garage sale possible. The funds from the garage sale will be used for disaster relief.

The National Red Cross has already spent more money this past six months on disaster relief than was spent for the entire year of 1984. We are hoping to raise $1,000 here in Deaf Smith County.

Extra special thanks to the folks at Hereford Grain for letting us use the old Shook Tire building. Donations can be made at the Red Cross office-224 South Main St.

The CPR class scheduled for this week has been postponed until this coming week. Call the office 364-3761 if you are in need of a class.

A first aid class will begin Feb. 13 at 7:00 p.m. at the Red Cross office. Reservations may be made by calling the office.

A vital signs class will begin Tuesday, Feb. 11, and finish Wednesday, Feb. 12. The classes will begin at 2 p.m. and finish at 4 p.m. This class will teach students how to take pulse, respiration, temperature and blood pressure. The class will be held at the community center.

A class on nutrition is being planned. This class is a 12 hour class and will probably begin Tuesday, Feb. 25. Please call the office if you are interested in this class.

A class on coping with high blood pressure is being planned. For information on any of these classes, call the Red Cross office.

The Deaf Smith County Chapter of the American Red Cross is a United Way Agency.

DR. GOTT Help immunity with flu shots

DEAR DR. GOTT — I get the flu every winter and have to see my doctor for a shot of penicillin. What over-the-counter medicine is available for flu virus?

DEAR READER — To begin with, penicillin is ineffective against viruses. It just doesn't work and, in the opinion of experts, should be limited to therapy for specific bacterial infections. It is not appropriate for flu.

Second, there are no over-the-counter (or prescription) drugs for influenza. Doctors can treat the bacterial complications of flu, but we are powerless to treat the disease itself.

While there is no guarantee that flu shots will protect you from all types of influenza, I believe you would be helped by having a flu shot every year. The injections may enhance your immune system so that you are not as susceptible to each annual variety of flu virus. Ask your doctor if he or she would consider giving you flu shots.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am somewhat "hard-of-hearing" as is commonly said. When I hold my nose and mouth shut, then blow hard, a little click occurs in both inner ears. Then, immediately, I hear twice as well. Could you tell me how I can cure my hearing?

DEAR READER — Your deafness seems to be due to a malfunction of the ear's venting mechanisms, the two tiny Eustachian tubes that connect the middle-ear chambers to an area behind the nose. These tubes serve to equalize pressure between the outside world and the closed compartments of the middle ear. When the Eustachian tubes remain closed, pressure alterations make hearing difficult. I think an ear, nose and throat specialist would benefit you tremendously.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I injured my eyelid quite a few years ago when I ran into an iron door at work. I have trouble raising the lid. Is there anything that can be done?

DEAR READER — Yes. You may have injured the muscle (or the nerve that operates the muscle) of your eyelid. Reconstructive surgery by an eye specialist may return your normal blink. If you were injured on the job, the Workers' Compensation Board in your home state will supply a list of ophthalmologists who are qualified to perform the surgery you may need.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My 35-year-old husband hurt his lower back and was out of work for eight months. During that time, he had a treatment to his back called chymopapain. He was told the treatment would be minor, with no complications. Well, his reaction was that he could not move for four days. He still can't tie his own shoes or slip on his pants in the morning, he's so stiff. Did this treatment affect his organs? Is his injury permanent?

DEAR READER — The injection of chymopapain is a new method to relieve the pain of a herniated disc in the back. It is supposed to allow patients to avoid surgery. Evidently, in your husband's case, the treatment was ineffective. Although the injection cannot directly affect his internal organs, it can permit continuation of pain and stiffness if the disc remains herniated. I think your husband needs to see a neurosurgeon or an orthopedic specialist who specializes in back disorders.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am a 59-year-old male who has had open-heart surgery with complications. I am getting along fine, except for one thing. Being single, I have been dating a lovely lady. We both enjoy sex, but I can't get any erections. Could the pills I'm taking be causing the problem? Should I talk to my doctor about it?

DEAR READER — My answer to your question is an unequivocal "yes." Although your performance problem may be the result of arteriosclerosis, medicine may contribute to the difficulty. By all means, talk this over with your doctor, and if he throws up his hands in despair, seek another opinion.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I had a stapedectomy in each ear 20 years ago. One morning last year, I woke up deaf in one ear. I have had constant loud ringing, pain that comes and goes, a pinching feeling, a feeling that something is moving in the ear, and also some dizziness and a lot of discomfort when lying on that side. My doctor says nothing can be done. This is driving me nuts!

DEAR READER — Stapedectomy is a procedure to remove the small bone (stapes) in the middle ear and replace it with a plastic substitute. Directly after surgery, patients may experience dizziness and headache for several days. However, symptoms that recur after 20 years are unusual. Because ears that are repaired can go bad, I suggest you see an ear specialist who is familiar with middle-ear problems. If you cannot be helped by another operation, at least the otolaryngologist could prescribe medicine to help your pain and dizziness.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I had an operation in both knees and have new kneecaps. I go for a walk every day. Is that good for my knees?

DEAR READER — As long as they give you no discomfort, I assume it is. What advice does your surgeon give you?

What are the benefits of VITAMIN E? Dr. Gott's new Health Report tells what's true — and what isn't. Send 75 cents plus a long self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2597, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to ask for the Health Report on Vitamin E.

German Texans is topic of program

Margaret Schroeter presented a program entitled "German Texans" when members of La Plata Study Club met Tuesday at the home of Betty Quillen. Rosemary Shook served as co-hostess.

Most of Schroeter's information was taken from the book "Memoirs of a Texas Pioneer Grandmother" written by Otilie Tucks Goeth. The author was a cousin to Schroeter's late husband, A.J. Schroeter.

The speaker discussed the importance and extent of influence the German immigrants played in the settlement and development of Texas.

The next meeting will be Feb. 18 in the home of Mary Lyles. Bill Lyles will present a program on stained glass. Co-hostesses will be Sunny Brush and Peggy Fox.

Members present included Schroeter, Julie Helms, Avis White, Yvonne Simpson, Mildred Furhmann, Betty Taylor, Brush, Lyles, Mozelle Neill, Dorothea Prowell, Dorothy Mercer, Shook, Audine Dettman, Virginia Woodford and Quillen.

POLLY'S POINTERS Pillowcases are cinch to make

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — Can you tell me how to make pillowcases out of a flat sheet? — MRS. G.B.

DEAR MRS. G.B. — There's really nothing to it! The easiest way to do it is to fold the sheet in half lengthwise with right sides together, then cut out the cases with the open end at the wide top hem of the sheet.

Since the fabric is folded, you'll be cutting out both sides of the case at once. You can use an old pillow case as a pattern or just measure the proper dimensions with a tape measure or yardstick. Then just seam around the three remaining sides, turn the case right side out and you're done!

One case, the one cut at the lengthwise fold, will only have to be seamed on two sides, since the lengthwise fold will make up one finished side.

Cut as many as you can from the top end of the sheet, then cut additional cases from the bottom, using the narrow bottom hem as the open end of the cases. These cases won't have as pretty a hem on the open end, but they'll be perfectly serviceable and attractive.

If you want to dress up your cases, decorate at the hemline with cording, lace or machine-embroidery.

I'm sending you a copy of my newsletter "Recycling Clothes and Linens" that has more ideas for getting a little extra mileage out of old sheets, towels, tablecloths and clothes. Others who would like a copy of this issue should send $1 for each copy to POLLY'S POINTERS, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1216, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to include the title. — POLLY much of the glass in the top few inches of soil.

Another, easier method would be to build raised beds and fill them with a fresh soil mix. To make raised beds, build simple frames out of wood (you can use scrap lumber) as wide as you want the glass-free soil mix to be deep. (Considering your problem, it would be ideal to make your beds 8 to 12 inches deep so the glass is well-buried.) Then fill these boxes with a soil mix.

Here's a recipe for a homemade soil mix that is excellent for vegetables and flowers. This quantity will fill a 4-foot-square box to the depth of 12 inches: one bale of peat moss, one large (4 cubic foot) bag of vermiculite, 10 pails of sand, two pails of wood ashes, 10 pails of compost, one coffee can full of lime and one coffee can full of organic fertilizer (such as manure).

Dump all these materials into your garden box, dampen, using a hose, and mix thoroughly with a shovel. Dampen again and spread the mixture evenly in the box. Spray with water once more and your raised bed is ready for planting.

Of course, with both these methods, the glass will eventually work its way up through the soil again. If you want to avoid that, build garden boxes with plywood bottoms on them or garden in large containers that can be sunk into the ground.

Most vegetable gardening books can give you more information about building and maintaining raised beds. I do hope this helps solve your problem and you'll be able to garden more easily next season. Good luck! — POLLY

Heart-healthy habits legacy for lifetime

Good health is as much habit as heredity.

The chances of getting heart disease increase if there is a history of heart disease in the family, according to William L. Winters, Jr., M.D., president of the Texas Affiliate of the American Heart Association, but adopting a heart-healthy lifestyle may help delay or prevent the triggering of disease.

"We should begin now with our children," Winters said. "The good habits we teach them today will save them from having to 'unlearn' bad habits later on."

Winters defines a heart-healthy lifestyle as reducing cholesterol, fats and excessive salt in the diet; quitting or avoiding smoking; controlling high blood pressure; maintaining ideal body weight through exercise and diet; and keeping diabetes under control.

According to Winters, young people form lifetime eating habits based on what they eat at home, what their peers eat and what appeals to them through advertising. The menu at home may be the only place parents can influence the eating habits of their children. Good eating habits can help control high levels of fats and cholesterol, the fatty substance that is a major part of the plaque buildup in blood vessels that leads to heart disease.

By choosing not to smoke, a person with tendencies towards heart disease can reduce the risk of early death as much as four-fold. In the area of smoking, studies confirm that children are strongly influenced by peers and parents when it comes to deciding whether to smoke.

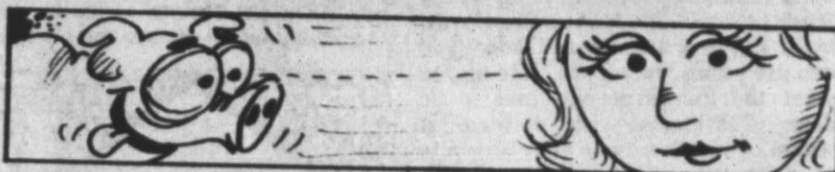

"We need to influence youngsters and teens in a positive way," said Winters. "There is solid evidence that if a person has not started smoking by age 20, he or she probably never will."

On the positive side, a child who learns to enjoy exercise early has the best chances of living as a fit adult. Regular exercise improves blood circulation and helps develop bone and muscle tissue.

"Almost one million people died from heart disease, stroke and related diseases in 1983, which makes cardiovascular disease the number one killer in this country. We can reduce the toll for heart disease by setting a good example and encouraging our children to protect their hearts," Winters said. "The chance to live a long, healthy life is one of the greatest things we can give them."

Engagement announced

May 31 is the wedding date set by Lori Li Fischer of Amarillo and James Allan Mongold of 709 Irving. The couple will exchange nuptials in the Amarillo Federated Women's Club.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Fischer of Amarillo and the prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harley Griffith of 709 Irving and James W. Mongold of Borger.

Miss Fischer is currently enrolled at West Texas State University and is employed at Casual Corner in Amarillo. She graduated from Tascosa High School in Amarillo in May of 1983.

Mongold, a 1982 graduate of Hereford High School, attended Brigham Young University and is now employed as a police for the city of Hereford.

Scholars taking votes

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Some New Testament scholars are taking a series of votes on the authenticity of sayings ascribed to Jesus, using scholarly analysis to sift what they think were his actual words from those believed put in his mouth by gospel writers.

In the first voting, a favorite beatitude, "Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called sons of God," was held to have been a later addition. Votes on about 500 sayings attributed to Jesus were scheduled over the next six years.

Robert Funk, organizer of the project, says scholars have not fulfilled their obligations to the public-at-large in reporting their conclusions about such matters.

"They have limited their pronouncements to the classroom or buried their considered judgments in scientific journals and technical jargon," he says.

"They have hesitated to broadcast the assured results of historical-critical scholarship out of fear of public controversy and political reprisals."

Ann Landers

Talk to someone

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband (to whom I have been married for 48 years) has Alzheimer's disease. I decided the time had come to clean out his office, which has been closed for several months.

For two weeks I have been going through the files and what I learned has made me sick. I found love letters from 16 women. They go back to 1955. There were pictures of him with young girls in nightclubs. I found cocktail napkins with phone numbers and a diary that spanned 15 years. I knew some of the women he slept with.

The type of business he was in made it easy for him to be out evenings. I had to stay home with the children and never complained. I was suspicious of some of his excuses, especially when he would come home drunk, but I never dreamed he was leading such a life.

I am so full of anger and hatred for this man I can barely stand to look at him, yet I have no choice because he is sick. He is incontinent and I must clean him up several times a day. I also have to feed him.

The expenses from his illness have almost wiped us out. What makes it so terrible is that I cannot even tell him what I now know. He has no memory. Some days he doesn't even recognize me.

I don't know why I am writing to you, but I must unburden myself or go crazy. I don't want to tell my children because it would kill all respect they have for their father and I wouldn't want that.

Can you give me some encouragement or advice? I feel so alone and my resentment is making me sick.—MRS. X IN THE EAST

DEAR MRS. X: I've read about thousands of problems through the years, but yours is one of the most heartbreaking. You must be a woman of great character to want to preserve your children's high opinion of their father after what you have learned.

Ask your husband's doctor to help you get some counseling. You must talk to someone. There are several good mental health centers in your area. Also, consider seeing your clergyman. And please write again whenever you feel like it. Sometimes it helps to put your feelings down on paper. Meanwhile, God bless. I will sign this.—An Admirer

DEAR ANN: Our society no longer refers to those with a drinking problem as "boozers." They are now called "alcoholics." Drug addicts are victims of "substance abuse." Similarly, crippled persons are now "disabled." The deaf are "hearing impaired" and the blind are "visually handicapped."

Recently a correspondent wrote about a problem with FALSE TEETH!! When you responded, I was amazed that you also used that outmoded (and degrading) designation.

I challenge you to find a single reference to this archaic term in any dental literature or telephone directory listing. Those of us without our natural teeth now wear DENTURES.

We don't need to limit our diet to soft noodles anymore (thanks to the progress in dentistry), but I invite you to take 10 lashes with one.—DIGNIFIED DENTURE WEARER

DEAR D.D.W.: For shame. I can't believe I said it, but I did. Ten isn't enough. Make it 20.

Are your parents too strict? Hart to reach? Ann Landers' booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How to Get More Freedom," could help you bridge the generation gap. Send 50 cents with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

CYNTHIA DIANE DUCKWORTH, MICHAEL MORGAN

Couple to wed

Cynthia Diane Duckworth and Michael Ray Morgan, both of Hereford, plan to exchange wedding vows Feb. 14 in LDS Temple in Dallas.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Robert G. and Rena M. Duckworth of Laredo and the prospective bridegroom is the son of Ray and Doris Morgan of Hereford.

Miss Duckworth is a 1979 Hereford High School graduate and also graduated from Brigham Young University. She is currently teaching music at Northwest Elementary School.

Morgan, a 1982 graduate of HHS, is majoring in pre-chemical engineering at West Texas State University. He is employed by Arrowhead Mills.

PAINTING ACQUIRED

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Madonna and Child," a major newly discovered painting by the 15th century Italian artist Jacopo Bellini, has been acquired by the Los Angeles County Museum of Art.

The museum says the acquisition is a rare example "by this Venetian master of the early Renaissance as very few examples of Bellini's work survive today."

It says of the work, "Bellini has infused one of the most popular subjects of Christian art with a sense of humanity rarely encountered during the early Renaissance. The Madonna's introspective gaze is knowingly echoed by the Child's; they share an awareness of the tragic future and Christ's essential significance in the redemption of mankind."

Interior designer gives program to study club

Carmen Flood, owner of Finishing Touches, was the guest speaker when members of Toujours Amis Study Club met Tuesday evening in the home of Lori Hall.

Flood, an interior designer, presented to the group an interesting and informative program concerning space design and utilization, color planning and decor.

Following the program, Hall, along with co-hostesses, Nena Veazey and Melissa Richardson, served members a buffet supper of lasagna, salad, hot bread and dessert.

Veazey, club president, conducted a business meeting in which Debbie Donaldson, projects chairman, gave a complete report of the recent benefit bridge tournament that the club sponsored. The event was successful in raising enough money to enable the club to offer the second annual scholarship to a graduating senior at Hereford High School this spring.

Various upcoming social events were discussed by Pam Perrin, social committee chairman. A financial report was given by Trisha Workman, treasurer, and thank you's followed.

Other members present included Donna Tidmore, Elaine McNutt, Leisa Lewis, Robbi Ames, Cindy Black, Shannon Hagar, Becky Reinart, Terri Laing, Kathy Carthel, Kim Bigham and Karen Keeling.

FREE CIRCULATION

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — One of the most popular magazines published here is distributed free to more than 700,000 readers from many parts of the world.

To encourage tourism, the Alaska Division of Tourism distributes a 108-page, four-color publication, The Vacation Planner, which contains facts, figures, maps and other information about the state.

Don Dickey, director of tourism, says requests for the magazine exceeded 600,000 in 1984 so 700,000 issues were published in 1985.

Child abuse in day care centers program topic

Child Abuse in Day Care Centers and knowing how to choose a good one was the topic of discussion when Xi Epsilon Alpha Chapter met recently in the Reddy Room. Oleta Tisdale presented the program and led the discussion.

Nan Gauthreaux of Alpha Alpha Chapter was welcomed as a guest.

A crazy T-shirt party was hosted by the social committee on Saturday evening at the Reddy Room.

The next meeting is scheduled for Feb. 4 with Brenda Thomas presenting a program on Beta Sigma Phi with Donna Grady and Oleta Tisdale serving as co-hostesses.

Members were reminded of the Sweetheart Tea to be held on Feb. 9 from 2 to 3 p.m. in Kinsey Parlor of First Baptist Church. Hosting the tea will be last year's chapter sweethearts, Phyllis Neill, Sharon Bodner and Jackie Fangman.

FANTASY

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Troubled with rats, or disobedient children?

You may want to try the "Pied Piper Fantasy," a concerto for flute and orchestra recently recorded for RCA by flutist James Galway with the Eastman Philharmonic at the University of Rochester's Eastman School of Music.

The piece, written by John Corigliano, is based on the legend of the Pied Piper of Hamelin, who after riding the town of rats changes his tune and marches off with all of the townspeople's children following.

Tickets for the Valentine Dance Feb. 16 where the sweethearts will be honored also, are available and will cost $20 a couple.

Charla Edwards, hostess, served refreshments to Jody Blackwell, Lynda Brown, Oleta Tisdale, Brenda Thomas, Sharon Bodner, Connie Matthews, Margie Waddell and Susan Shaw.

Wagon train trails on despite problems

IRVING, Texas (AP)—It will take more than a few sore seats and broken wheels to stop the Texas Sesquicentennial Wagon Train, a sponsor says.

Acknowledging that some of the original wagon riders have dropped out, Glen Courson said that's not unusual for a group whose members are probably a "little softer" than their ancestors.

The wagon train hit the trail at Sulphur Springs two weeks ago and the opening day parade consisted of 200 riders and 82 wagons. There are now fewer than 100 riders and between 42-46 wagons, said Courson, a sponsor and honorary assistant wagonmaster from Irving.

Courson said the decreases were expected.

"We knew from the very beginning that they were going to be people who would join up just for a while and then go home," he said.

Some participants wanted to ride in the train for a short time, while others planning to ride the entire 3,000 miles have had a change of heart, he said.

"Even 150 years ago, on wagon trains they had some dissension," Courson said. "There's no difference today. People are a little softer than there were then."

The wagon train on Wednesday was in Conroe near Houston.

Courson expects the number of wagons to fluctuate, dwindling to as few as 35. But he said the numbers will pick up as the train nears metropolitan areas, or on weekends and during the summer.

"There will be a core that will go all the way," he said.

The wagon train has received no state funds.

Charles Oliver of Dallas, president of the Irving-based nonprofit organization that is staging the trail ride said the organization is "meeting our expenses and will continue to do that."

Organizers said the wagon train's operating expenses will be raised through private and corporate donations and by royalties from sales of concessions and official wagon train souvenirs. Courson said the journey will cost about $2 million.

Oliver said his organization has raised less than $300,000.

Despite the problems, Courson said he believes the mood of most participants is "excellent." He is not a full-time participant in the wagon train, but often visits the group.

Huge crowds have been turning out to watch the procession winding through cities along the route.

Courson said sore muscles and seats have been a problem, but he says he knows of now major accidents.

"It's been on the road long enough that everybody is kind of getting into the groove," he said.

Cleveland wants hall of fame

CLEVELAND (AP)—All kidding aside, what's the first thing you think of when someone says "Cleveland?"

A fire breaking out on the Cuyahoga River? Municipal default a few years back? Put-downs on the David Letterman show? Not the Cleveland Indians, surely.

If you said rock 'n' roll, you've got the same beat as thousands of people in this city that's often mentioned only in punchlines.

For years Cleveland has called itself the home of rock 'n' roll, and the city tried to prove it this week by generating 110,315 phone calls supporting its bid to become the site for the national Rock and Roll Hall of Fame.

If Memphis, the haunt of Elvis Presley and other rockers, seems a more likely site, consider that in the call-in poll published by the newspaper USA Today, Clevelanders

Committee accepting nominations

Nominations for the "Hereford Family of the Year," an annual event sponsored by the Jesus Christ of the Latter Day Saints, begins today.

Deadline for turning in nominations is Feb. 15. A committee from the church will select winners.

The presentation of the coveted honor will be made March 9.

Families are nominated and selected for their family solidarity, home environment, community activity, religious activity, being good neighbors and love of country.

PETER STILL CAN OUTSMART THE WOLF
NEW YORK (AP)—For half a century the musical fairy tale "Peter and the Wolf" has delighted both young and old.

Russian composer Sergei Prokofiev could personify animals and create personalities with music, and he represented each character by a musical instrument appropriate to its physical and emotional image.

Composed in the spring of 1936, "Peter and the Wolf" tells the story of a boy who goes against his grandfather's wishes, follows his own path and succeeds in outsmarting the wolf.

Prokofiev's musical fairy tale has been played by orchestras ever since.

outdistanced Memphians by a margin of better than 15-to-1. Other cities were even farther behind.

And when a petition supporting the city's bid for the hall of fame circulated recently, it picked up 650,000 signatures in a metropolitan area of about a million and a half.

"I'm so tickled pink, being from Cleveland, to see the city take so much interest in this," said Norm N. Nite, a disc jockey on New York's oldest station, WCBS-FM, in a telephone interview. "It kind of makes you puff your chest out."

Nite, who is on the board of directors of the group that will soon choose a site for the hall of fame and museum, is not the only music business figure citing Cleveland as the place to beat for the shrine.

"I think Cleveland has the edge," said Jann S. Wenner, editor and publisher of Rolling Stone magazine. "I think this poll is really impressive. I think the city really wants this."

But why? Rock music reference books don't exactly bulge with references to the city by Lake Erie.

While acknowledging the city's enthusiasm and calling Cleveland "pretty much a shoo-in at this point" to attract the hall of fame, Memphis disc jockey Steve Conley wondered if a station here could play an hour of "Cleveland rock 'n' roll"—as he had just played an hour of Memphis-based rock.

Stuart Mintz, president of a chain of music stores in Cleveland, conceded that Eric Carmen might be the city's best-known rocker. He mentioned some others: the Raspberries, the Outsiders.

Haven't heard of them? That's not the point. The point is, "The term rock 'n' roll was the vehicle to allow it to expand to what it is today," according to Mintz.

His father, Leo Mintz, helped coin the term, passing it on to the late disc jockey Alan Freed of local station WJW. "At Mintz's suggestion, Freed introduced a euphemism for rhythm and blues by calling his show 'Moon-dog's Rock 'n' Roll Party,' which started in June 1951," reports the rock history book "The Sound of the City."

Freed recalled in an interview later that he had been amazed to see white adolescents dancing excitedly in Mintz's store to the saxophones and pianos of R&B, the book notes.

Freed went on to fame as a radio personality at stations in New York and was among the first 15 people inducted Tuesday night into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame—at a ceremony not in Cleveland but in Manhattan's Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

Cleveland was the site of one of the earliest rock concerts, back in 1952, and, local broadcasters note, remains a test market that can make or break rock songs.

Eating habits of young affect adult health

What children in Texas eat today may make them prime candidates for heart disease in adulthood, according to the American Heart Association.

A diet rich in cholesterol and saturated fats in childhood can promote atherosclerosis which in turn can cause heart attack, according to William L. Winters, Jr., M.D., president of the AHA's Texas Affiliate.

"Cholesterol is a fat-like substance that is found in most of the animal products we eat," Winters said. "Over time, cholesterol and other fats build up on the inner lining of the blood vessels, making them narrow and eventually closing them, which is called atherosclerosis."

Although atherosclerosis is usually not detected until adulthood, evidence of plaque buildup has been found in children and young adults.

American children consume too much cholesterol, fat and salt, according to nutritional studies. Snack foods and quick meals made of processed foods are easy to prepare and make kids happy, but they are not the kinds of food that are healthy for their hearts, according to Winters.

"Often kids will want foods they see on television commercials or snacks their friends get to eat, but it's important for parents to resist giving in all the time," he said.

One recent study found that children between the ages of 8 and 12 are the largest single consumer group of salt.

"While the verdict is still out on salt," Winters said, "there is increasing evidence that salt is a contributing factor to high blood pressure, a major risk factor of heart disease and stroke."

Earlier studies have also shown that American children consume far more cholesterol than their counterparts in other countries. In these same countries, the prevalence of heart disease is much less.

The American Heart Association recommends that healthy children over age two make moderate changes in their diets to reduce the intake of cholesterol and salt, while maintaining a nutritionally sound diet. The American Heart Association's recommendations for children are:

-The diet should be nutritionally adequate, consisting of a variety of foods.

-Eat lean meats, poultry, fish, fresh fruits and vegetables.

-Eat less salt foods and processed snacks. (For instance, replace pre-packaged snack foods with crunchy vegetables.)

-Reduce the intake of high-cholesterol foods, like butter, eggs and fatty meats. Daily cholesterol intake should be 100 milligrams of cholesterol for every 1,000 calories, not to exceed 300 milligrams of cholesterol a day.

-As for adults, only 30 percent of total calories consumed should be from fat and of that amount, only 10 percent come from saturated fat.

According to Dr. Winters, parents can easily create heart-healthy snacks and meals for the family.

"There are heart-healthy cures for the childhood munchies," he said. "Choose things even a kid could like, such as popcorn, (cooked without oil and flavored with cheese or cinnamon), unsalted sunflower seeds, apples, breadsticks, whole-grain bread and low-fat cheese and yogurt. The same advice holds for adults."

Tierra Blanca cafeteria employees hostesses

The regular monthly meeting and covered dish supper for 58 employees of Hereford Independent School District Cafeterias was held Monday evening in the junior-senior cafeteria.

Tierra Blanca cafeteria employees hosted the gathering.

Ruby Williams, cafeteria manager, welcomed all present and introduced the speaker, Mike Carr, executive vice-president of Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce.

Carr distributed a test sheet concerning the Chamber entitled "Questions You Either Always Wanted to Ask or Didn't Want to Ask." He then gave a brief history of the C of C, its purpose, growth and functions and listed good things that are happening in Hereford and in the Chamber of Commerce.

The Chamber in Hereford started 80 years ago with 18 members. Today there are 750 members. He noted that in 1940, the population of Hereford was 2,585 and in 1986 it had climbed to approximately 18,000.

A box of Hereford Baby Bull Chips was given as a door prize.

Serving as hostesses were Williams, Pat Esqueda, Irma Elizda, Kay Shipp, Karen Jones, Irma Murillo and Nicolisa Foster.

The February meeting will be held in the junior-senior cafeteria with Shirley School cafeteria employees serving as hostesses.

WOMEN AND HISTORY

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Women of the 18th and 19th centuries made contributions to the writing of history that are perhaps only now being appreciated, says Bonnie Smith, a historian at the University of Rochester.

"Historians today ask whether it's better to write about great public figures or the lives of ordinary people," Smith says. "If you look back, women writing 200 years ago wrestled with the same questions. They enlarged the scope of history by writing about things that men didn't, from court customs to domestic life."

Pruitt, Knabe speak vows during ceremony

Cindy Karen Pruitt became the bride recently of Raymond Leon Knabe during a wedding ceremony held in St. Anthony's Catholic Church. The Rev. Pat Walsh of the church officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Sam and Lois Pruitt of 334 Ave. J and the bridegroom is the son of Beatrice Knabe of Star Route.

Shonda White served as maid of honor and Johnny Carrillo was best man. Guests were escorted by the bride's brother, Keith Pruitt, and Kyle Schuder.

Serving as flower girls were the groom's niece, Angie Knabe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Darrell Knabe; and the bride's nieces, Rebecca Henderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ronny Henderson, and Summer Kincannon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geri Kincannon.

The bride's nephew, Jason Hamilton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Hamilton, was ring bearer. Bobby Pederson served as lecturer.

Susan Stubbs vocalized wedding selections and was accompanied by Carolyn Evers.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and wore her wedding dress as something new. She carried a bouquet of white carnations and baby's breath accented with royal blue ribbons and ribbon streamers.

The groom's sister-in-law, Karen Knabe, invited guests to register at the reception held in the E.B. Black House.

The bride's cake was served by Vicki Carrillo and the groom's cake was served by the bride's cousin, Jennifer Holt.

The groom's sister-in-law, Linda Knabe, poured coffee and punch was served by the bride's niece, Tamara Hamilton.

Other members of the houseparty included the bride's sister, Randy Hamilton, and her aunts, Dorthy Holt and Joan Ward.

The couple are making their home at 304 E. Sixth St.

The bride graduated from Hereford High School in 1983 and is employed by Long John Silver's.

The bridegroom, a 1983 HHS graduate, is a junior at West Texas State University. He is employed by Moore's Jack 'n' Jill.

Out-of-town family members who were present included the groom's grandmother, Francis Reiter of Muenster; the bride's grandmother, Wilma E. Pruitt of Coleman, Ok.; and the bride's aunt, Mrs. Pete Pederson, and her son of Oklahoma City, Ok.

FOUNDATION GETS GRANT

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The Meadows Foundation of Dallas has granted $250,000 to the Van Cliburn Foundation Inc., for the purpose of permanently endowing one of the foundation's Cliburn Concerts each year.

Since its creation in 1948, the Meadows Foundation has contributed to programs in the areas of health, education, social service and the arts.

It's a 'go' for 'Amerika'

NEW YORK (AP) — "Amerika," the miniseries that Moscow wanted killed, has survived political pressure and ABC's accountants to get a new life on TV for its depiction of the United States under fictitious Soviet rule.

The 12-hour movie from ABC Circle Films has been in production limbo for several weeks, but it got the go-ahead from ABC Entertainment on Wednesday. The script has been approved and production will start in two months, ABC said. It is scheduled to be broadcast in the spring of 1987.

"In light of the inherent dramatic quality of the material, the decision to present 'Amerika' was an easy one," Brandon Stoddard, president of ABC Entertainment, said in a statement.

But political pressure suggested otherwise — first from the Soviet Union to cancel the project in the name of detente, then from a Reagan administration official to carry on with the production in the name of freedom.

"Good for them!" Secretary of Education William J. Bennett said Wednesday. "Whatever the merits of the show, I think every American will be pleased that ABC is making its own decisions."

Two weeks ago, Bennett criticized the production's delay and said postponing the filming was "a bad lesson for our children. The American people might be denied a television series because the Kremlin does not like it."

A spokesman for the Soviet Embassy in Washington said Wednesday that Soviet officials were not available for comment.

On ABC-TV's "Nightline" on Wednesday night Alexander Palladin, Washington bureau chief of the Soviet newspaper Izvestia, commented on "Amerika" and other U.S. movies that have been criticized by the Soviet Union.

"I don't think this is the kind of movies which necessarily promote friendship, or at least good relations between the two countries, especially at a time when our relations have finally, after five or six years of extremely strained level, have hopes of improving," Palladin said.

The film paints a what-if picture of life in the United States 10 years after a peaceful Soviet takeover. Stoddard said scenes of occupied America would be gray and drab, depicting long food lines, despair and drug and alcohol abuse.

SAVE THE Dear Hereford

This newspaper ad could be very valuable for you. It could win you a 1986 Chevrolet. It could win you a week in Hawaii, a trip to Las Vegas or a color TV. But most importantly, it will tell you about Save'n'Gain — a brand new store we're building just for you!

YOU DESERVE THE BEST!

Hereford is the heart and soul of the High Plains. The farmers and ranchers in this area pump in millions of dollars a year to the local economy. And if there are two things ya'll know by heart — they're quality beef and fresh food.

That's why you deserve the best when you go grocery shopping. Your farms and ranches help feed the entire nation, and you should be able to shop at one of the most progressive and innovative stores in the US. That's why we're building a new Save'n'Gain right here in Hereford.

OLD FRIENDS WITH A NEW LOOK!

You might not realize it, but you already know us! Save'n'Gain is a division of Furr's Inc. and Furr's has been in business for 81 years right here in Texas. We're a Texas tradition and we know and understand the Lone Star way of life. We're not a chain store based out of Chicago or Los Angeles. Our corporate headquarters is only 90 miles down the road from you in Lubbock. Furr's Inc. also owns the Priceless and the Bag & Save stores here. We realized that we weren't meeting your needs with these two stores, so we decided to close them down and build a new store. You'll see all your old friends from both stores at work at Save'n'Gain, so don't worry about losing your favorite checkers. Save'n'Gain has proven to be one of the most successful retail grocery concepts in the country, and the progressive attitude here in Hereford is the perfect atmosphere for a Save'n'Gain.

Robbins reviews books for study club

Susan Robbins gave six book reviews as the program when members of La Madre Mia Study Club met recently in the Hereford State Bank.

Hostesses included Lucy Rogers, Mysedia Smith and Frances Berry. The books reviewed included "Journey of Three Englishmen Across Texas", "The Last Trail Drive Through Downtown Dallas", "Dining With the Cattle Barons", "Free the North Wind", "The Wind" and "The Best of Best From Texas", a cookbook for the sesquicentennial.

The speaker pointed out that among the books, her favorite was "The Wind" by Dorothy Scarborough. Roll call was answered by telling something about Texas.

During the business session, it was announced that Bettye Owen will drive for King's Manor Retirement Home during February and standing committees gave reports.

Also, a letter was read from the Hereford Sesquicentennial Committee telling of activities planned for Hereford this spring.

Betty Taylor's sister, Bernice Pyeatl from Clyde, was welcomed as a guest by those present. They included Joyce Allred, Carolyn Baxter, Berry, Jeri Bezner, Francyne Bromlow, Beverly Bryant, Sharon Hodges, Owen, Rogers, Jenna Simons, Tricia Sims, Smith, Georgia Sparks, Betty Taylor and Mary Beth White.

Debbie Tardy went inactive.

CowBelle members, guests meet for regular luncheon

Members and guests of the Hereford CowBelles met recently at the Hereford Country Club for their monthly luncheon and meeting.

The meeting was called to order by President Dee Ann Trotter and Roberta Caviness gave the invocation. The treasurer's report was submitted by Zulu Arney.

Guests in attendance were June Nolan, daughter of Marna Jane Dameron, and Jean Reinauer and Genevieve Guseman, guests of Peaches Reinauer.

The award for best scrapbook at the Texas CowBelle Convention was presented to Jolene Bledsoe for her entry of the Hereford CowBelle's scrapbook.

Trotter announced the American

National CowBelle Convention will be held in San Antonio Sunday through Wednesday.

The Texas Beef Cook-off will be held Feb. 17-19 in Houston.

It was announced that a scholarship fund will be established in the names of Wayne Owen and Opal Caviness.

The group sang Happy Birthday to Mrs. Dameron who recently celebrated her 90th birthday.

The next CowBelle meeting will be held Feb. 18 at the Hereford Country Club. Mike Bowles will be the guest speaker.

All interested persons are invited to attend any of the monthly meetings.

Missing Bubba continues to spark controversy

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Residents in this coastal city are going hog wild over Bubba, a domesticated javelina who hasn't been seen since state wildlife officials took the animal from its owners.

Bumper stickers say, "Bring Bubba Back, Bubba Call Home, and Is Bubba In Hog Heaven."

There's a Bubba aid fund and even a ballad, "Bring Bubba Back, Jack." A nightclub concocted a "Helluva Javelina" drink for its Bubba benefit Thursday night, and even Texas Gov. Mark White was questioned about the missing animal Thursday in Austin.

White said he plans to talk with Texas Parks and Wildlife Department officials about Bubba.

And what will the governor ask them?

"Where's Bubba?" he replied.

But only wildlife officials know for sure, and they have not disclosed Bubba's whereabouts.

On Jan. 3, wildlife officials took the 90-pound peccary from its Corpus Christi owners, Buddy and Patsy Thorne.

Thorne said that when Bubba was released to the wild, "they just actually sentenced him to die."

When the 10-year-old javelina was a baby, Patsy Thorne would feed the animal milk from a bottle, and the couple would take it, wrapped in a blanket, out to restaurants. Bubba would sleep and play with the Thorne's two teen-age daughters, who would brush his teeth.

But Parks and Wildlife officials thought Bubba should live in a habitat more suitable for javelinas. They tranquilized Bubba and then transported the animal to the city pound, Thorne said.

Check Presentation

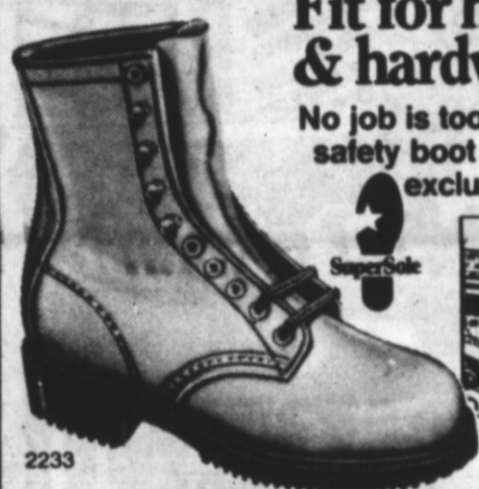

Member of Hereford Study Club, Virginia Winget, left, presents a check to Alva Lee Peeler, director of Big Brothers-Big Sisters organization. The check presentation certifies the club as a Silver Friendship Sponsor of the BB-BS program.

Residents' grandson places first in recent readathon

Stephen Polan of Albuquerque, N.M., nine-year-old grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Polan of Hereford, is being called "Stevie Wonder" by his friends.

Stephen, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Polan, former Hereford residents, recently read 216 books in one month and raised $240 to beat out more than 1,000 other children for a readathon championship.

The readathon was the New Mexico Multiple Sclerosis Society's recent fund raising effort that attracted young readers from Albuquerque, Roswell, N.M. and Las Cruces, N.M. Participants collected pledges for each book they would read.

Stephen, who has a variety of interests including playing chess, Monopoly and Chinese checkers, also makes craft articles and is involved on a soccer team.

He is the oldest of three children. His sister, Tonya, is seven years old, and his brother, Jared, is four.

SIT IN COMFORT

ATLANTA (AP) — Finding a comfortable chair can be a tough challenge for people with arthritis, reports the Arthritis Foundation.

A chair for someone with mobility limitations should be high enough so the person can rise from it without a lot of pain. Struggling to rise from a low chair can put unnecessary stress on arthritic joints in the knees and back.

However, the foundation cautions that the chair should not be too high for the person's feet to rest comfortably on the floor. Armrests can provide good support in helping the person get up from the chair.

Partially filled boxes of dried fruits (raisins, prunes, apricots) keep their freshness longer if stored in the freezer.

Dr. Wendt testing chemical treatments

When a person is ailing, a doctor may prescribe from a well-stocked drug store the proper medication for the symptoms.

When a crop on the farm is suffering, scientists at the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station north of Lubbock believe that a "pharmacy" of chemicals now undergoing extensive research will eventually be available to control growth.

Dr. Charles Wendt, who has been studying soil and water properties at the Lubbock station for 30 years, said the "youngest field" of research now in his program is growth regulator chemicals.

"It is like for a group of illnesses there are different prescriptions," Wendt said. "There also are many chemicals that can do different things. Eventually, we will have a whole series with which to manipulate a crop."

Already, more and more High Plains farmers are doctoring their crops with such chemicals, the researcher said.

Wendt said work on such manipulative chemicals began in 1979 when a growth regulating chemical, PIX, was made available to suppress cotton growth.

By holding back the leafy growth of a cotton plant, more bolls (and thus a higher yield) presumably would result.

But Wendt said because of the weather and cultivation variations on the High Plains, research was needed to determine proper usage of the chemical.

"We found that if the farmer has a good supply of water to the crop between the first bloom through the peak bloom, he would get a positive effect with a growth regulator," Wendt noted.

but the scientist noted that application of the growth regulator may vary from year to year.

"In a very dry year, the farmer would not think of using PIX," Wendt said. "But in a year with a very wet August, one might want to suppress any new growth that could occur on the plant."

While PIX is beneficial mainly to irrigated cotton, Wendt said, other chemicals are being examined for use on dryland acreages.

Another chemical, DCPTA, increases the seed weight of cotton seed. In some varieties micronaire is increased.

An invaluable part of the Soil Plant Water team's research, Wendt noted, are the six rain-out shelters in the station's experimental fields.

The shelters are metal sheds which can be pulled over a hand planted test plot to prevent undesired weather from affecting the outcome of the research. Wendt said in an area where weather conditions may vary greatly from day to day, the shelters are vital to accumulating accurate data on the different trials.

With the stepped-up chemical regulators research and increasing availability of products, Wendt said, area farmers will eventually have "a whole pharmacy" with which to treat a crop to control growth as well as diseases, insects, and weeds.

Doctored Crop

Dr. Charles Wendt, soil and water scientist at the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station north of Lubbock; heads up a team of researchers testing chemical treatments for different crop symptoms. Part of the studies involves rain-out shelters or tin sheds, like in a background, which can be pulled over an experimental crop during rain storms for strict control of moisture in the variable High Plains climate. The soil scientist believes that a "pharmacy" of agricultural chemicals soon will be available to remedy many crop problems. (TAES Photo).

Annual meeting slated

State agriculture commissioner Jim Hightower, Frank Ford of Arrowhead Mills, and Sen. Bill Sarpaluis will be guest speakers at the 13th annual Texas Corn Growers annual meeting on Feb. 3 in Dimmitt.

The public meeting will begin at 9:30 a.m. in the Exposition Building on the fair grounds.

Other speakers scheduled for the meeting are:

Weldon Davis, chairman of the Texas Corn Producers board, who will give a report on 1985 activities.

Carl King, president of the Texas Corn Growers Association, is to give his welcome and report.

Fred Lundgren, Texas Department of Agriculture, is to discuss farm legislation.

Marion Garland, director of American Agriculture Movement.

Bart Kaderly, Texas Department of Agriculture.

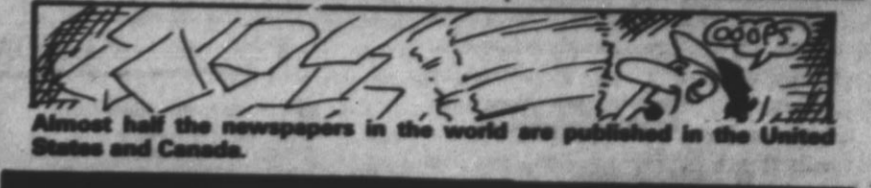

Leisa Boley, reporting on Texas Agriculture in the classroom.

And, Pat Morrison, area entomologist.

Most Texas farmers have postponed financial problems

LUBBOCK — While Texas farmers have not generally had financial losses as severe as other farmers nationally, Texas farmers may be reaching the same crisis situation. Texas Tech University agricultural economists Dean W. Hughes and Don E. Ethridge write that while national net farm income has dropped to the lowest levels since the Depression, Texas farmers in general have been able to postpone some financial problems in large part because of a relatively strong land market. Their report deals with breakeven and shutdown prices. Land values in some Midwestern states have declined by as much as 50 percent from their highs earlier this decade, according to the report. Texas farmland values in 1984 increased by 16 percent while values fell by 13 percent nationally. The state's size has given Texas a variety of soil types weather and economic conditions. As a result, Texas agriculture has more than 20 different farming regions, each growing a different mix of crops. "Farmers in the Northern Panhandle may share an economic environment more closely associated with Oklahoma, New Mexico and Kansas than with farmers located near rapidly growing cities such as Dallas or Austin," Ethridge said. While Texas farmers may not be experiencing the same magnitude of economic problems as other parts of the country, Ethridge and Hughes warn that many Texas farmers are in serious financial trouble and more may follow.

Farmers in the Upper Gulf Coast region may be facing the worst conditions since rice and soybeans, their two major crops, both are currently priced below shutdown levels. The Northeast region, the Winter Garden region in the Rio Grande Valley and the Edwards Aquifer region are also facing difficult times because the majority of their major crops have shutdown prices exceeding recent market prices.

farmers will continue to produce as long as market prices enable them to make some payment on fixed obligations such as land payments. "If farmers continue production at below the breakeven price, they must supplement their returns with additional funds to pay their bills and their banker," Hughes said. "And, if prices continue below breakeven levels, land and machinery values decline. If prices fall below shutdown levels for all commodities in a region, farmers eventually cease production and land is idled."

Price drop not hurting exports

WASHINGTON (AP) — The oil-rich countries of the Middle East and North Africa are not reducing their food imports because of the sharp drop in oil prices, but they are ordering fewer limousines and other luxury items, says an Agriculture Department economist.

John B. Parker Jr. of the department's Economic Research Service said that the 19 countries from Morocco to Iraq will probably continue food imports at around $31 billion this year. "It means things other than food are being cut back very severely," Parker said Thursday. "Because of the subsidies and the bargains they're getting, they're not cutting back on food."

But the drop in crude oil prices — from a world average of about $28 a barrel last year to $20 or lower this week — is forcing oil-rich countries like Saudi Arabia and its neighbors to take economy measures. "Saudi Arabia had (been spending) $5 billion a year with South Korea just to build roads. A lot of the infrastructure things that they were splurging on have been brought to a halt," Parker said.

The United States exported about $3.4 billion worth of commodities to the region in 1983-84, dropping to about $2.7 billion in the fiscal year that ended last Sept. 30.

But Parker thinks that U.S. credit deals and the new export subsidy program will help recoup part of the decline, with total shipments rising to around $3 billion in 1985-86. Much of the gain will be for Egypt and Iraq. Five years ago, Parker and some other USDA trade experts thought U.S. farm exports had a bright future in the Mideast and North Africa. It is still considered a lucrative market, but one threatened by war and political strife.

"There's been tremendous competition," Parker said. "The European Community's more than double what we are in the region, and competitors like Australia and Argentina, some of the southern hemisphere suppliers, have had a feast in the Middle East."

But with oil exports declining, "It's a kind of game finding customers for oil, and the developing countries are really having a lot of trade agreements" worked out with some of the oil nations, he said.

Parker said Iraq — which he recently visited — will trade $100 million worth of oil to Uruguay for a shopping list of commodities. With additional oil difficult to move into Europe, producers want to buy products from less-developed countries through "counter trade" arrangements, a kind of barter. Other participants include Brazil and Turkey.

When the world oil crunch hit in the early 1970s, one idea popular in the United States was to trade surplus farm commodities for foreign crude oil. It never got off the ground.

Parker said the global abundance of food also is working in favor of the oil countries, along with the competition among suppliers.

"They're getting wonderful buys from the European Community and from Turkey, and from Thailand ... excellent prices and good delivery," he said.

Iran has boycotted U.S. products for years but is still a big customer in the world market, probably spending about $3.5 billion annually, making it a bigger food importer than China, Parker said.

The countries studied by Parker include: Morocco, Algeria, Tunisia, Libya and Egypt, in North Africa, and Turkey, Cyprus, Syria, Iran, Iraq, Israel, Jordan, Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, United Arab Emirates, Bahrain, Oman, Qatar and North Yemen in the Middle East.

Farmers phone installed

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas farmers and ranchers with questions about the new program to furnish low-cost loans to buy family farms and ranches have a direct line to Land Commissioner Garry Mauro's office.

The toll-free number is 1-800-292-FARM.

The Texas Farm and Ranch Voters Program, approved by voters last November, will provide up to $100,000 in loans to qualified Texas farmers and ranchers to purchase 50 or more acres of land.

The gestation period for an Asian elephant is 645 days.

High performance hybrids to make the most of your irrigation program!

Water isn't cheap. So naturally, you need corn hybrids with the genetic potential to come along with you and yield the highest level your management can reach. That's why 3377 and 3186 make the perfect combination on the Plains. Plant full-season 3186 on your best land where it can express its full potential. Then round out your irrigated corn program with earlier maturing 3377. As companions, they give you a powerful combination of high yield and performance characteristics you need.

3377 Superior yielder. Outstanding heat and drought tolerance. Excellent for delayed plantings. Tall wide-leaved hybrid with good ground shading. Large, gritty ears.

3186 What a yielder! Excellent heat and drought tolerance. Tall, semi-upright leaved hybrid. Superior standability. Excellent late season plant health plus MDMV and heat smut resistance.

A LITTLE TLC MAKES FOR HEALTHY SOYBEANS, according to soybean research scientist, Dr. Charles Laible. While quality seed is the key to a quality soybean crop, tender loving care is required to maintain the original quality. He urges farmers to be careful with soybean seed during handling and storage on the farm. "Handling soybeans as if they were eggs is the best recommendation I can make," says Laible. He warns against throwing or dropping bags of seed as the beans may split and crack. He believes extra precautions should be taken in January, February and March, the months when growers usually pick up their seed. Laible cautions, "Soybeans are even more fragile and susceptible to damage in cold weather." A little extra tender loving care will contribute to good seed germination, high stands and overall crop performance, says Dr. Laible.

CLASSIFIED ADS
Classified advertising rates are based on a minimum of 20 words. One day is 13 cents per word or $2.60 minimum. Rates below are for consecutive issues, no copy change, and apply to solid ad lines only.

TIMES	RATES	MIN.
1 day per word:	.13	2.60
2 days per word:	.22	4.40
3 days per word:	.31	6.20
4 days per word:	.40	8.00

5th day FREE
Add 9 cents per word for additional days: 10 days (3 free) is 15.20 minimum; 15 days (3 free) is 22.40; month 77.80.

Classified display rates apply for special captions, paragraphing, bold type or larger type, and ads not set with full lines. $2.00 per column inch, $2 a column inch for additional insertions, or $1.75 a column inch per month.

LEGAL
Advertising rates for legal notices are $3.50 per column inch for the first insertion and $3 per column inch for consecutive insertions.

Deadlines for classified ads are 3 p.m. daily for the next day's edition; 3 p.m. Friday for Sunday's edition.

Cash is required on advertisements under $10.

ERRORS
Every effort is made to avoid errors in Classified Ads and legal notices. We will not be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion. Advertisers should call attention to any errors immediately after the first insertion. In case of errors not the fault of the advertiser, an additional insertion will be given.
