Texas & Texans

By WILL H. MAYES
of Austin, Texas

Texas Should Know Texas.

Texas is so large that it is difficult for the people of one part of the State to know what is going on in other sections and almost impossible for anyone to know the resources and possibilities of the entire State. When the Texan in the Panhandle is told about the wonderful citrus fruit farms of the Rio Grande Valley he usually has a blank look on his face as if he can not quite grasp what is being said, and the Valley fruit grower looks like a dumb bell when anyone attempts to describe North Texas to him. A piney woods farmer who has always stayed at home can't imagine just what West Texas is like. Good roads and flyovers are slowly overcoming this, for people travel more now than formerly, but in a lifetime of travel one could not know all that is to be known about this great state. Texas is changing rapidly and few parts of the State are at all what they were five or ten years ago. The most important task before the newspapers is to teach Texas to Texas.

What Texans Should Know.

Most Texans know something of the magnitude of the State, but few of them know that Texas produces about everything necessary to the welfare of its people. Not one in a hundred knows its resources in sulphur, in salt, in granite and marble, in lignite and coal, in iron, in potash, in gas, in water power, in all kinds of manufacturing possibilities. Most of us think of Texas in terms of sheep, or oil, and of the tie and sheep, of oil, and of the larger exploited resources, and know little of those things that are not much talked about. Knowledge of Texas products would be the background for loyalty to Texas products, and would make the people more generally patrons of Texas institutions. We need more than most anything else a spirit of pride in what the State is doing and trying to accomplish. This should be cultivated and the press is the medium through which it must be done. Some papers are suffering from what is termed "narrowed localism," and are communicating it to their localities to their detriment.

Sectional Organizations.

The size of Texas makes community and sectional organizations of more importance than they are in smaller States where people from all parts can get together in a few hours and at small expense. For this reason we have many regional meetings for all the professions and occupations, in which those of a territory having common interests can get together to discuss their problems and to know each other. Such district gatherings create increased interest in the State meetings. Community pride is the first step toward State pride and interest in local affairs is a prerequisite to interest in the State, but these should not supplant entirely the larger matters that concern our entire population.

Complete the Cotton Mill.

The San Marcos Record says that the cotton mill, construction of which was started there about two years ago, is to be completed. The work on the plant was temporarily abandoned because of the local financial stringency due to the drought. By all means it should be finished or else that which has been built should be torn away. The building foundation is close by the railway and highway and as it stands is a monument to wasted effort. The thousands who pass that way ask what it is and why it is not finished. A little farther along the road they see the splendid cotton mill at New Braunfels with its spindles humming and they wonder why the difference. Not finding an answer they conclude that San Marcos must lack the enterprise that characterizes New Braunfels. The effect of such thought is bad for San Marcos. If for no other reason than this the San Marcos mill should be completed right away. Another reason is that Texas cotton mills are proving good investments.

Dairying Is Urged.

The deprivations of boll weevils, leaf worms and other pests on the cotton crop this year have again proven the fallacy of depending on a single crop. Many farmers who had prospects a month ago of making a bale of cotton to the acre will now be glad to gather a fifth of a bale. This causes the Cuero Record to urge farmers to practice intelligent diversification. That paper states, and correctly, that, with ten good cows, some poultry, a few hogs, supported by ten acres of feed crops and a small pasture, whether a cotton crop is made or not, no farmer will suffer or even be unable to meet all reasonable obligations. To depend on cotton entirely is merely to gamble on weather conditions and on the prevalence of numerous cotton field pests. Why not hedge against failure in the way suggested by the Cuero Record?

Big Bend Goes In for Poultry.

The Big Bend country, which is generally understood to include the counties of Presidio, Jeff Davis and Brewster, has organized a poultry association and will go extensively into the poultry business. A few years ago Big Bend people would have treated with contempt a proposition to consider growing anything smaller than a cow, certainly nothing below a sheep in size, but it has been found that as a steady money producer, year after year, the lowly hen can be depended on more certainly than the haughtier animals of the Western Texas ranches.

Banks Finance Hog Buying.

In an effort to interest the farmers in stocking their farms with pure bred hogs, the banks at Corsicana have agreed to finance the shipment of hogs to Navarro county under the management of the local Chamber of Commerce which is conducting a campaign for "hogs on every farm in the county." The business men have learned that it pays to interest themselves in helping farmers to practice diversification.

Organizing Community Clubs.

The San Saba Chamber of Commerce is taking an orchestra and local speakers to such communities as are interested in forming community clubs and is rendering assistance in getting such clubs properly started. Wherever community clubs are earnestly at work and are helping to make community life attractive they are valuable assets and the towns are finding that a contented country population is for the betterment of country life, essential to the prosperity of both town and country.

Texas Oil Field.

Just where is the Texas oil field? Almost every day the papers report a new field opened. The field in Texas seems to have no limits other than the boundaries of the State, and even then it "leaps over" into the Gulf of Mexico.

Tree Planting at Alpine.

Although already noted for its shade trees, Alpine is arranging to plant some 2,000 shade trees along its streets this fall. There is little excuse for the shadeless streets of many Texas towns. Co-operative effort in tree planting, as in most other things, gets results.

Any hen-pecked husband admires the strength of women's clubs.

WASTE BASKET ADVERTISING.

Along with many other business men we are receiving much literature with attractive prices on "DIRECT BY MAIL ADVERTISING." All this junk goes into the waste basket where all right-thinking men place it. Direct by mail advertising costs about six times as much as newspaper advertising; it isn't worth one-tenth as much, for most people receiving such junk put it in the waste basket quickly and never read it. The business man who uses direct by mail advertising is losing more than 90 per cent of his money and very little returns on same, while an enormous price is being paid out.—Claude News.

He found out that he was very lonesome without this continual female supervision. A man can get used to anything and probably he can turn nagging to his advantage and comfort.

Exports Of Sporting Goods Show Gain

Exports Valued At Nearly $10,000,000 Sold Abroad by United States. Nearly $10,000,000 worth of American sporting goods, including guns and ammunition, were exported during the fiscal year 1925-26 according to a report just made by M. Calvin, of the Specifications Division of the Department of Commerce. This was a gain of 17 per cent over the previous year and indicates to some extent, it is the popularity of American goods abroad. Canada, Mexico and Cuba purchased practically one-third of all American sporting goods exported from the United States. Their purchases included fishing tackle, balls, park playground devices, bicycles, and balls and accessories, boat and paddles and all sorts of guns, pistols, rifles, shotguns and ammunition. United States supplied more than two-thirds of the Canadian market for sporting goods. Mexico is a rapidly growing market for American sporting goods.

Frank Crane Says

NAGGING HELPS—SOMETIMES. JOHN W. SUMMERFIELD is authority for the statement that nagging sometimes does a husband good. It is probably upon the principle that we all need petty annoyances in order to develop patience and wisdom. A philosopher sees some use in nagging the devil. There is no courage without danger, there is no virtue without temptation, there is no commendation without a shadow, and where there is a shadow there can be no light. In the same way fears and annoyances of all sorts are needed in order to keep us alert. Nagging in this line it may be a good thing for a man to be nagged a bit to prevent him going wrong. He would not do for him to be nagged too easy. Character is not developed in a uniformly quiet environment. A course no man would choose to be nagged for it, but his public height is largely determined by how he responds to it. It comes his way. He can either be irritated and nagged by it, or he can deliberately hold his course and ignore it. A man can make him a lesser man

Swordfish Catches Are Reported Large

Marked Increase Also Shown In Mackerel Hauls Off New England.

Marked increase in the swordfish and mackerel catches off New England are reported by the Bureau of Fisheries of the Department of Agriculture. THE SICK LION.

A Lion being unable from old age and infirmities to provide himself with food by force, resolved to do so by artifice. He betook himself to his den, and lying down there, pretended to be sick, taking care that his sickness should be publicly known. The beasts expressed their sorrow, and came one by one to his den to visit him, when the Lion devoured them. After many of the beasts had thus disappeared, the Fox discovered the trick, and presenting himself to the Lion, stood on the outside of the cave, at a respectful distance and asked of him how he did; to whom he replied, "I am very middling, but why do you stand without? Pray enter within to talk with me." The Fox replied, "No, thank you, I notice that there are many prints of feet entering your cave, but I see no trace of any returning."

Total of 12,465,000
Coins Made In August

Billion Silver Dollars Made, and 1,335,000 Pieces Cast For Foreign Nations.

Coinage by the United States mint in August amounted to 11,230,000 pieces of domestic money and 1,335,000 pieces of foreign coins, according to an announcement made recently by the Director of the Bureau of the Mint.

Included in the month's output were one million silver dollars. It was explained officially, however, that no significance attached to the production of the silver dollars, which was slightly larger than usual, the amount being described as routine mint operation.

In addition to the silver dollar coinage, which constituted almost two-thirds of the value of the domestic coins executed, 1,248,000 quarter dollars, or $312,000 in that form of money, was produced. Subsidiary coinage included 2,814,000 nickels, or $140,700, and 6,068,000 pennies, of $60,680.

The production for foreign governments in August consisted of 2,295,000 pieces of silver for Venezuela, and 40,000 pieces of gold for Guatemala.

Warning Is Issued
Against Placing Sale
Bills in Mail Boxes

Receipts on Rural Routes Said to Be Only For Matter On Which Postage Is Paid.

The placing of unauthorized matter in rural mail boxes is subject to the rules governing the mails, including proper addressing and the payment of postage at regular rates, according to a statement issued by the Post Office Department.

The statement was signed by H. H. Billany, Fourth Assistant Postmaster General, and warned all persons concerned that the boxes on the routes are for the reception exclusively of mails and not advertising and other similar matter.

Carriers finding advertising matter, such as circulars, sale bills, etc., in the boxes, are to take such matter to the distributing post office and hold it for postage under existing postal laws and regulations.

The full text of Mr. Billany's announcement follows:

The frequent finding by the carriers of advertising and other similar matter in the boxes of patrons on rural delivery routes makes it necessary to remind all persons concerned that those boxes on these routes are exclusively for the reception of matter regularly in the mails, and that any mailable matter, as circulars, sale bills, etc., deposited in them is subject to the rules governing the mails, including proper addressing and the payment of postage at regular rates.

The regulations (Section 773, Postal Laws and Regulations of 1924) provide that when a rural carrier finds deposited in a box mailable matter on which postage has not been paid, addressed to or intended for the person in whose box it is deposited, he shall take such matter to the distributing post office to be held for postage and treated as prescribed by Section 529.

China Best Customer
For Electric Fans

China is the leading market abroad for American electric fans, according to a statement by the Electrical Division of the Department of Commerce. In 1925 China bought one-fifth of nearly $1,000,000 worth of exports of that commodity.

The extent of the American foreign trade in electric fans is set forth in a report, the full text of which is as follows:

In the seaports of North China and the bazaars of India, in the inland stores of Australia and on the Argentine pampas, the whirling blades of American electric fans blow cooling breezes to peoples of many lands.

China is the leading foreign market for American fans and absorbs about one-fifth of the total yearly fan exports of this country. In 1925 the total value of fans shipped abroad from this country was $916,553, of which China purchased $205,235.

Argentina is second in importance as a buyer of American fans, importing a total valued at $143,265 in the past calendar year. Cuba ranked third with imports valued at $112,975; Mexico fourth with receipts totaling $61,339; India fifth with purchases amounting to $40,430; and Australia sixth with receipts of fans from this country valued at $46,982.

A specially devised light, which in areas of clear visibility can throw a narrow beam visible for 150 miles, was used by the Coast and Geodetic Survey, Department of Commerce, in recent triangulation surveys in the Cascade Mountains.

The light is equipped with a special contracted filament about the size of a grain of wheat. The beam thrown is not widened beyond a maximum angle of 1 1/2 degrees.

By throwing these beams from mountain peaks engineers running lines 20 to 40 miles in length were able to make night observations.

 "Making a picture of yourself, aren't you?" he asked. "Going into the sick room with your little hands full of flowers?" But even as he scoffed he was unwrapping his own flowers. Bangs was right. The act of handing a pasteboard box to a sick friend lacked esthetic value.
 Jepson returned with a cordial message. Mrs. Ordway would be charmed to see both young men, but she received only one visitor at a time. Would Mr. Bangs come up now? And perhaps Mr. Devon would drop in again during the afternoon or evening.
 Rodney grasped his floral offerings and mounted the stairs two steps at a time. He was excited and his brown eyes showed it. It was most awfully good of Mrs. Ordway to let him come up in this informal way. Standing by the chaise longue where she lay, he told her so, his suburn head shining among the flowers he carried. He particularly large chrysanthemum. Then, selecting some empty vases, he sat down on the floor beside her and began to arrange his flowers, while she watched him, at first with surprise then with growing admiration.
 Rodney had no social airs and graces, no parlor tricks. If he had been formally sitting on a chair holding his hat he would have been a self-conscious and unhappy young man. As it was, with hands and eyes busy, and wholly at his ease, he talked his exuberant best.
 "How about Laurie's romance?" Louise asked at once.
 Bangs told her about the vision in the mirror. As he did so, lunch was served, and he was casually invited to share it. Susanne, moving shuttle-like between the table in the sick room and the dumb-waiter in the upper hall, presently confided to a young footman a surprising piece of news, which he in turn confided to the incredulous Jepson. Young Mr. Bangs, who was lurching with Mrs. Ordway, must be as amusing as young Mr. Devon himself. He had actually made the mistress laugh both times he came. She was laughing now, as Susanne had not heard her laugh for weeks. To be sure, this was one of her good days. But it wasn't easy to amuse Mrs. Ordway at any time. Jepson summed up the situation in an oracular utterance:
 "Henny one that's a friend of Mr. Devon's his hall right."
 When Rodney was leaving Jepson's mistress expressed the same thought to her guest in a different way.

"Come often," she said, "You have given me a new interest. I don't think you can quite realize what that means to me."
 When Sonya arrived at five that afternoon, she found Jepson still studying reassurance. With two doctors within call, a nurse in the house, and Mr. Devon and Miss Oriensaff to telephone to at a moment's notice, "nothing much could happen." So reasoned Jepson. He beamed approvingly on Sonya, informed her that Mr. Devon was in the sick room now, and waved her through the hall with an effect of benediction.
 She found Laurie just leaving, and they had a moment's chat on the upper landing. Mrs. Ordway, he told her, was rather restless this afternoon, but she seemed better than she had been yesterday. However, he didn't like her looks at all, and he fancied the nurse was disturbed. Suppose Sonya sounded Louise about calling for Warren? Surely, Warren would want to know, Laurie thought.
 For the moment Laurie's striking good looks were slightly dimmed. He was hollow-eyed, almost haggard. Things were coming just a bit too fast for him. The habit of carrying the burden of others had been taken on too suddenly. Under the strain of it, his untrained mental muscles ached.
 It was the irony of fate that Sonya, looking at him with the clear brown eyes that were so much softer than Bangs', and so much less beautiful than Doris', should misinterpret his appearance, his emotion, and his reaction from the high spirits of the morning. He was again going the pace, she decided; and, mingled with her pity for him, rose the scorn of a strong soul that was the absolute master of the body in which it dwelt.
 His newly aroused perception carried some hint of this scorn to the boy, covered though it was by the friendliness of Sonya's manner. The knowledge added to his wretchedness. He had a childish desire to explain, but he conquered it and hurried away. Some day, if not now, Sonya would understand.
 What he himself did not understand was the long stride he had taken in the moment when he felt and repeated her unspoken criticism. Heretofore his attitude had been one of expressed and sincere indifference to the opinions others held of him. He wanted them to like him, but he didn't care a hang whether or not they approved of him. Now, suddenly, he wanted Sonya's respect as well as her liking. The discovery added to his mental confusion.
 If Sonya, when she entered the sick room, was shocked by the change in the appearance of her new friend, she showed no sign of it. Sitting down beside the chaise longue, she entered briskly upon a description of the recent experiences of Samuel. When she left the hospital the house surgeon was obediently endeavoring to look down the throat of Hullen R. J., and every nurse on Samuel's floor was scuttering in and out of his room. Nevertheless, the infant, though graciously accepting these attentions, had demanded and received Sonya's personal assurance that the particular game of the morning was not to be repeated. There was an unpleasant element in that game which grown-up might not notice but which Samuel had caught on to.

 Louise laughed and expressed hope that Samuel would now be able to breathe without disturbing his neighbors. Sonya came to the real purpose of her visit.
 "He and his mother are going back to Devon house Saturday," she said, "but I've got to stay in New York for a few months, on account of my literary galumphings. I wondered if you—if it would be convenient for you—to put me up in a hotel and—" Louise lay silent for a moment. Then she reached out and took Sonya's hand.
 "Yes, you unkillable prevaricator," she said, "You may come—and see me through."
 Sonya held the hand tightly in her own.
 "There's one thing more," she went on, hesitatingly. "Laurie and Mr. Bangs and I wondered if perhaps you wouldn't feel more comfortable if Mr. Warren came home. You know he himself would want to—"
 Louise closed her eyes.
 "Yes," she said, "Bob would want to, if he knew."
 She was silent for so long that Sonya began to think she was not to have the answer to her question. Perhaps Mrs. Ordway was leaving the decision to her.
 "But to leave to others decisions that concerned herself was not Louise Ordway's habit. Instead, she was fighting a battle in which the lifelong devotion of a supreme self-centered nature was struggling with a newborn unselfishness. Though newborn, it was strong, as the invalid's next words showed.
 "If I were calling him back from anything but his honeymoon," she said at last, "I'd do it. But he'll utterly happy. His letters show that in every line. I want him to stay so, as long as he can. I want his honeymoon to be long drawn out and perfect." Her manner changed.
 "I have an idea that perhaps after all, I'll be here when he gets back," she added more lightly. "Life still has its interests. But if I happen not to be here, tell him why I didn't cable."
 "I will tell him," Sonya promised.
 Neither of them referred to the subject again.

CHAPTER IX
 An Invitation.

THAT evening Laurie walked across the square to Doris studio with a decision in his stride which definitely expressed his mental attitude. He had come to the conclusion that something must be done. What this something would be was still hazy in his mind, but the first step at least seemed clear. Doris must move.
 He was so convinced of the urgency of this step that he brought up the subject almost before the greetings of guest and hostess were over. Tossing his hat and coat on a convenient chair, he stood facing Doris, his hands in his pockets, his black eyes somber.
 "We've got to get you out of this you know," he abruptly announced. Her eyes, which had brightened at his entrance, grew as somber as his own. Without replying, she

THE GIRL IN THE MIRROR

Laurie, walked across the room to the window, and stood looking down into the street.

"Is he there?" she asked at last, and without moving her head.

"Shaw? Great Scott, no! At least, I didn't see him. I suppose he takes a few hours off now and then, during the twenty-four, doesn't he?"

"Oh, yes, he comes and goes sometimes secretly, sometimes openly. I did not see him at all today until late this afternoon. Then he took up his post across the street just opposite this window, and stood there for almost an hour."

Laurie ground his teeth.

"What does he expect to gain by that performance?"

"Several things, I suppose. For one, he wants to get on my nerves, and he does," she added somberly, and still without turning.

Laurie made a long tour around the room and brought up by her side.

"You know," he confessed, "I haven't really taken this thing in yet. Even now, this minute, it doesn't seem possible to me that Shaw could do you any real harm."

She nodded. "I know. Why should it? Even to me it is like a nightmare and I keep hoping to wake up. There are hours, even days, when I convince myself that it isn't real." She stopped. "It must be very hard for anyone else to understand," she ended, when he did not speak.

"Nevertheless," admitted Laurie, "I can't forget it. I can't think of anything else."

She took this as naturally as she had taken his first remark.

"It's going to be very hard for you. I was wrong to draw you into it. I am realizing that more and more, every minute."

"You couldn't help yourself," he cheerfully reminded her. "Now that I am in it, as I've warned you before, I intend to run things. It seems to me that the obvious course for you is to move. After you're safely hidden somewhere, I think I can teach Herbert Ransome Shaw a lesson that won't react on you."

She shook her head.

"If I moved, how long do you think it would take him to find me?"

"Weeks, perhaps months."

Again she shook her head.

"I moved here a few days ago. He appeared exactly forty-eight hours later. If I moved from here it would only mean going through the game of hares and hounds again."

"But—" he began. She interrupted him.

"I've reached the point where I can't endure that any more." For the first time her voice broke. "Can't you imagine what that sort of thing would be? To get up in the morning and wonder if this is the day I'll see him under my window? To go to bed at night to ask myself if he is lurking in the shadows below, or across the street, or perhaps outside my very door? To know that sooner or later he will be there, that his coming is as inevitable as death itself?" She broke off.

"I sometimes think I'd rather see a boa-constrictor crawling into my room than see Shaw down on the sidewalk," she ended. "And yet—I know you can understand this—there's a queer kind of relief in the knowledge that at last, and finally, he has got me."

She whirled to face Laurie and threw out her hands. There was nothing theatrical in the gesture, merely an effort of entire finality.

"We have come to the end of things," she finished. "Since you would not have them end my way, they must end his way. Whatever happens, I shall not run and hide any more."

For a moment silence hung like a substance between them. Then the visitor resolutely shook off the effect of her words.

"I promise you I will get to the bottom of this," he quietly told her. "In the meantime, will you try to forget it, for a little while? You know you said you could do that, occasionally."

He was clearing the table as he spoke. Now he proceeded to unpack a basket he had sent over an hour before by Griggs, and which, he observed, had not been opened. Dropping back into her big chair, she watched him with an odd look. If he had seen that look it would have sorely puzzled him, for it held not only interest but an element of apprehension, even of fear.

"In the past two days," she said, after an interval, "you have sent me five baskets of food, four baskets of fruit, six boxes of candy, and three boxes of flowers. What do you suppose becomes of them all?"

"I know what becomes of the flowers." He cast an appreciative glance around the transformed room. "And I hope," he mildly added, "that you eat the food."

She broke into her rare laugh, soft, deep-throated, and contagious. Under it his spirits rose dizzyingly.

"You are feeding half the people in this building," she said, "not to mention Sam and his home circle. Sam has absorbed roast chickens, cold partridge, quail, and sweetbreads till he is getting critical. He asked me this morning if I shouldn't like ham and eggs for a change."

Laurie felt slightly aggrieved.

"Do you mean to say that you're not eating any of the stuff yourself?" he demanded.

"Oh, I eat three meals a day. But I don't keep boarders, you know; so I give the rest to Sam to distribute. His foods several dozen art students, I infer, and stagers home every night under the burden of what's left."

"There won't be anything left this night."

She had risen now and was helping to set the little table. Laurie looked at her with shining eyes. One of her rapid changes of mood had taken place, and she was entering into the spirit of the impromptu supper as cheerfully as if it were a new game and she a child. She had become a wholly different personality from the tragic-eyed girl who less than ten minutes ago had somberly announced that she was making her last stand in life. Again, as often before, Laurie felt overwhelmed by the rush of conflicting emotions she aroused.

"Shall we have this big bowl of roses in the center, or the four little bowls at the corners?" she asked absently.

As she spoke, she studied the flowers with her head on one side. For the moment, it was clear, the question she had asked was the most vital in the world.

"The little ones," decided the guest. "The big one might shut off some of you from my devouring eyes." He was mixing ingredients in a chafing-dish as he spoke, and he wore the trying air of smug complacency that invariably accompanies that simple process.

"No," he objected, as she tried to help him, "I will do the brain-work. Your part is to be feminine and rush briskly back and forth, offering me things I don't want. And at the last moment," he added gloomily, "you may tell me that there isn't a lemon in the place." He looked about with the helplessness of a great artist facing the failure of his chef d'oeuvre. "I forgot the lemons."

She went across the room to a small closet. Even in the strain of the moment he observed the extraordinary grace and swiftness of her movements. She was very slender, very lithe, and she moved like a flash of light.

"Fancy my being caught without a lemon!" she scoffed, as she returned with the fruit. "Your brain-work stops abruptly sometimes, doesn't it?"

She handed him the lemons with a little gesture expressing amusement, triumph, and a dash of coquetry. Laurie's eyes glowed as he looked at her. For the second time in her actual presence, a sharp thrill shot through him. Oh, if she were always like this!

happy, without that incredible, unbelievable background of tragedy and mystery! He turned his mind resolutely from the intruding thought. This hour at least was hers and his. It should be prolonged to the last moment.

What he longed for was to hear her talk, but that way, he knew lay disaster to the little supper he began to talk, the forbidden topic now dormant, would uncoil its hideous length and hiss. He must hold her attention to other things.

He plunged at random into chat for the first time he told her about Bangs, his chum, and about Epstein, their manager; about their plays and their experiences in rehearsals and on the road. Being very young and slightly spoiled he experienced some chagrin in the discovery that she seemed all-important to the men and the plays. Worse yet, she seemed not ever aware that she should have known who Bangs and Epstein were. She did not recall having heard the name of "The Black Pearl." She was not only unaware that "The Man Above" had broken all box office records; she seemed unconscious that it had ever been written. Observing his artless surprise she gravely explained, "I have been interested in other things," she reminded him.

The forbidden topic was stirring, stretching. To quiet it, Laurie leaped into the comedy scenes of "The Man Above." They delighted her. Her soft, delicious laughter moved him to give her bits from "The Black Pearl," and, following these, the big scenes from the latter play. This last effort followed the supper; and Laurie, now in his highest spirits, added to his effects by the use of a brilliant Afghan and by much raising and lowering of the light of the reading lamp.

He was a fine mimic. He became by turns the star, the leading lady, the comedian and the "heavy" of the big play. It was only when he had stopped for a moment's rest and Doris demanded a description of the leading lady's gowns, new description failed. "How so beautiful that most people think I made them," he said, "But I didn't, really, so I can't give you any details, except that they're very close-fitting around the feet."

LOOK FOR FACES YOU KNOW.

ATTENTION Farmers

—One dollar extra per hen per year is the record of poultrymen who keeps hens under electric light a few hours in the winter mornings and evenings.

—Prof. Rice, of Cornell University, recently completed some tests with pens of fifty hens each. Pens lighted with electricity during the winter months, from 5 a. m. until daylight, and from 4 p. m. to 9 p. m. showed an increase in egg production that netted a yearly profit of $1.69 per hen over pens not electrically lighted.

—With a flock of only 100 hens, a profit of $1.69 per hen annually in three years will more than pay for a Delco-Light Plant. All the electrical conveniences for the home—light, power, running water—all these benefits can be had without much additional operating cost.

—It is easy to install Delco-Light, and the fact that it can be used to increase egg production, at a time when eggs are high, is beyond argument. Prof. Rice, and others, have fully proved its value.

—Why not put Delco-Light in your home now and let the extra poultry profits pay for it.

THEREFORE, BE IT ORDAINED BY THE CITY COMMISSION OF THE CITY OF HERFORD, TEXAS: That the report of Montgomery & Ward, City Engineers, having been examined, is hereby approved.

BE IT FURTHER ORDAINED, that a full and fair hearing be had, as provided herein, and part of the cost of said improvements shall be assessed against the abutting property upon the streets so improved and the owners thereof and that the total cost of said improvements shall be apportioned and paid, as follows:

(a) The City of Herford shall pay one-third (1-3) of the whole cost of said improvements exclusive of curb.

(b) The owners of property abutting upon said streets named to be improved shall pay the whole cost of the installing curbs in front of their property, and shall pay the remainder of said cost of improvements of said streets after there has been deducted the amount payable by the City of Herford under Section "A," above provided, however, that in no event shall more than three-fourths of the entire cost of such improvements exclusive of curbs be assessed against such property owners and their property.

(c) That the portion of the said cost to be paid by the City of Herford shall be payable upon estimates made by the City Engineers during the construction of said work on the first day of each month after the beginning thereof, ten per cent (10 per cent) of the estimate being held back and reserved and payable to the Contractors upon the completion of same and acceptance by the City.

The manner of payment of the cost of the improvements payable by the owners of the abutting property shall be payable in ten equal installments, one payable within thirty (30) days after the completion of the work in each District, and its acceptance by the City, one payable within one year, one payable in two years, one payable in three years, one payable in four years, one payable in five years, one payable in six years, one payable in seven years, one payable in eight years, and one payable in nine years after said date of completion and acceptance by said City of said improvements, and to bear interest, from the date of acceptance at the rate of seven (7%) per cent per annum, payable annually, provided, that said owners shall have the option to discharge any installment before the maturity thereof by paying the same with accrued interest.

The portion of said cost to be paid by the owners of property shall be assessed against them, and their property in accordance with the provisions of Chapter 11, Title 22, of the Revised Statutes of Texas, of 1911, and constitute a personal liability of such property owners and a lien against their respective property, and shall be assessed in accordance with the "Front Foot Plan or Rule," in proportion as the frontage of each owner on each particular street is to the whole number of front feet of abutting property to be improved on that particular street; provided, that if, in the opinion of the City Commission, the application of this rule shall be unjust or unequal in any case, then the City Commission shall adopt such rule of apportionment as shall be just and equitable and effect equality between said owners, having in view the equities of each owner, the benefits to each and the burden imposed upon each by means of such improvements; and in no event shall any assessment be made against any owner or his property in excess of the actual benefit to such owner in the enhanced value of his property caused by such improvements, and provided that no such assessment shall be made until after the notice to such property owners and a hearing to them as provided in said Chapter 11, Title 22, of the Revised Statutes of the State of Texas, of 1911, heretofore legally adopted by said City.

The assessment shall constitute a personal liability against the owners of property and the lien upon their property as fixed by said assessment shall be enforced as is provided by Chapter 11, Title 22, of the Revised Statutes of Texas, of 1911, by the sale of said property as for ad valorem taxes of the City, or by suit in any Court having jurisdiction, together with all costs and reasonable attorneys fees, if incurred, and after such assessment the City Commission shall cause to be issued to the Contractor doing the work assignable certificates in accordance with said Chapter 11, Title 22, of the Revised Statutes of Texas, of 1911, setting forth the amount assessed against each owner and his property, and the terms and time of payment thereof.

BE IT FURTHER ORDAINED BY THE CITY COMMISSION OF THE CITY OF HERFORD, TEXAS, That a hearing shall be given to said Owners, or their Agents or Attorneys, and all persons interested in said matter as to said assessments and as to the amounts to be assessed against each owner and their property by reason of such improvements, and that they shall be given a right to contest the regularity of the proceedings with reference to the improvements and the benefits of said improvements, to their property, and any other matter with reference thereto, which hearing shall be held at the City Hall, in the City of Herford, Texas, on the 11th day of October, 1926, at 10:00 o'clock, A. M., at which time all of said owners, their Agents or Attorneys, or persons interested in said property, are notified to appear and be heard; at said hearing said owners or other persons interested in said property, or persons interested in said property, may object to the assessment and be heard; and if the assessment is found to be correct, the same shall be adjourned from day to day until fully accomplished.

The City Secretary is hereby directed to give notice of said hearing by inserting a copy of this Ordinance at least three times in some newspaper published in the aforesaid City, the first publication to be made at least fifteen days before the date of the hearing. The City Secretary is also directed to give further notice of said hearing by mailing to said owners, their agents of attorneys, a copy hereof, whenever the address of said owner, agent or attorney is available on the tax records of said City.

The daily papers of September 21 carried dispatches stating that Cannon Ball Baker had arrived in Los Angeles, Calif., after slicing a generous slice off three coveted trans-continental motor records in one great spur—driving his own privately owned Ford roadster sealed in high gear just five days, two hours thirteen minutes after leaving New York City. He was officially timed a start and finish by Western Union officials. This cuts eleven days, five and three fourths hours off the old high-gear speed record over this course—made by a six-cylinder car.

It is also 2 days 13 1/2 hours faster than the fastest time ever made before by any kind of a car with one man driving the entire distance from coast to coast without relay of drivers. The previous record over this course had been made by Baker in 1920, driving a high-priced car, and had never been equalled until he made this flight at the wheel of a lowly Flivver.

Baker's new record with the Ford is also 16 hours faster than the best time ever made across the continent on a motorcycle. In other words, this was the fastest trip from ocean to ocean that had ever been made by any sort of road vehicle with one man doing all the driving without relief.

It was Baker's seventy-fourth trip across the American Continent.

The Sunday School Lesson.

BY W. R. HILL, Baptist Pastor.
(Adapted from Dargan's Notes.)
Golden Text: Come thou with us, and we will do thee good. Numbers 10:29.
Connection.
1. Course of Events. After our special lessons we go back to the orderly course of events. The Tabernacle was completed and set (Ex. 4:17), the census was taken (Num. 1), directions were given for camping and marching (Num. 1, 2), the first passover was observed (Num. 9:1-14), the cloud appeared (Num. 9:15-23), and directions were received and recorded concerning the making and use of silver trumpets for assembling the congregation (Num. 10:1-9).
Introduction.
Now and then in the thoughts of nations some one year is so filled with great and telling events that it is called "the wonderful year." The first year of Israel's history as a people well deserves that title. They were now just entering on the second year from their departure out of Egypt. Just before taking up their march to Canaan they celebrated the first anniversary of the Passover. As they looked back over the year they could recall that last fateful night in Egypt, the passing of the Red Sea by a miracle, the journey to Sinai, the receiving of the law, the building of the Tabernacle, the numbering of the people, and their arrangement into a host for marching. It was indeed a year full of critical events, and now they are ready to move.

Explanatory Notes.
In the second year, in the second month, on the twentieth day of the month, that is, of their coming out of Egypt. They had spent about a year in the region of Sinai, receiving the law, building the Tabernacle and organizing the people. "A great task quickly accomplished. The cloud was taken up. The signal for marching, as explained in 9:15-23. According to their journey. That is, in the beginning of their wanderings upon leaving Sinai. The wilderness of Paran. This was to the northeast, a rougher and more desolate country than the valleys of Sinai. And they first took their journey, etc. At the outset they recognized that God was in command, giving directions through Moses. Verses 14-28 describe the thorough and admirable military and marching arrangements as these had been ordered of God and were more fully set out in chapter two. And Moses said unto Hobab, etc. Owing to some uncertainties in the meaning and position of the words there has arisen much debate as to the personalities and relations of Jethro, Reuel (same as Raguel) and Hobab. The scriptures bearing on the matter are Ex. 2:16; 17; 3: 1; 18: 2, 12; Judges 1:16; 4: 11. The most probable explanation is that Reuel (Raguel) was the name of the priest of Midian and Jethro was his title, and that he was the father of Hobab, though this is not anywhere stated. In Hebrew the same word is used for father-in-law and brother-in-law. So the word decides nothing. But the view that Hobab was the brother-in-law of Moses is made more probable from the fact that Moses would hardly have asked an elderly man like Jethro to go with him. Besides it appears from Exodus 18:27 that Jethro returned to his home after his visit to Moses, and either left or later sent back his son Hobab. We are journeying, etc. This was not news to Hobab, but only the statement of a well known and often discussed fact used by Moses as the basis for his appeal. Neither is it necessary to suppose that this was the first and only time that the subject was brought up between Moses and Hobab. Come thou with us, etc. Hobab would receive both temporal and religious blessing if he would come with Israel. I will not go, etc. Moses presses his argument, and this time adds the reason, "Thou shalt be to us instead of eyes." That is, a competent guide in that country with which Hobab was well acquainted. It is implied, and from Judges 4: 11 reasonably inferred, that Hobab consented and went. And they set forward . . . three days' journey, etc. The meaning seems to be that the pillar of cloud went ahead this distance and stopped at the place they were to encamp awhile, but the host moved slowly for three days, resting during the night.
Comments and Reflections.
Winning our friends to Christ. On this all important matter the instructive incident of Moses and Hobab is full of rich practical suggestion. Notice that these were men in high place, serious and responsible, with much in common and closely attached to each other by friendship and marriage. It was a very fitting invitation for Moses to give and for Hobab to accept. Between friends, men of thought, character and standing, is there not often a call for the Christian, the church member to urge on the one hand, and to accept on the other the invitation to become a Christian? Moses was deeply convinced that God was with his people and would fulfill his great promises. This must ever be the basis of our approach to others. God is with us and his promises are sure. The Christian man has the truth with his blessing here and hereafter. Then there is the argument and appeal of affection. We are sure that for our friends on the outside there would be blessings beyond words if they would come in with us into the kingdom of God. What better thing can we do for a man than to urge him to accept Christ, and what better thing can he do for himself than to accept? But this is not all. Moses showed Hobab how by coming in he could materially help the cause of God. He could be a guide in the desert to God's people. His knowledge of the land and his evident high character would be a powerful help to Israel. So he should come in not only for the good he could get, but for the good he could do. It is a glorious thing to make a fine man see how his business sense, his influential personality, can be of real service to God and man.

Divine and Human Guidance. God guides his people but he calls and qualifies human guides also. He led the Hebrews out of Egypt but he did it through Moses, and Moses in his turn asked Hobab to be their guide in the wilderness. By this providence and by the presence and enlightenment of the Holy Spirit God is still wondrously guiding his people. In the wilderness and difficulties of this world God often raises up and invites human leaders. Moses greatly needed Hobab, Pastors, churches, need the help of strong and able men whose talents consecrated to the service of God would be an influence beyond estimate for the righteousness and truth in the world. Oh, for more Hobabs!

A drizzling rain began falling Friday night, and continued three days and nights without stopping and without the sun coming out. The farmers are taking courage again, as some had decided to quit sowing wheat because of dry weather. However, there are many thousands of acres of wheat already sowed in this community and a great deal of it is already up.

The only ones of her children who were not present were Mrs. Lola Nichols and family, who live at Wellington, Texas, and Mr. A. A. Dethrage who was away from home. J. D. Cameron and family and F. A. A little boy was told that he must go to a hospital to have his tonsils and adenoids removed. The youngster was not visibly disturbed by the prospect, according to a visitor who called with his mother. The visitor found the little boy deep in thought, and questioned him to find out if he were afraid. The reply was addressed partly to his mother.
"Mother, I ain't 'traid of going to the hospital. I'll be brave and do just as they tell me. But I'm not going to let them palm off a baby on me, like they did to you when you was there."

A good rain has fallen for the past few days—a very slow rain which was just what has been needed on the land that is ready for wheat planting. Some of the farmers can hardly wait until the fields are dry enough to sow their wheat.

PAY PRISONERS. PAY TERRIBLE! OWN'S POWER. IS AUTO FUEL.

THAT OWN RAILROAD is, and never do, never did, or will do any hard work, and that the men working on the railroads should get one million dollars more a year would be a great deal. Thirty cents a day average each man, while the railroads have the Government and State Commerce Commissions ready to force the public higher rates if railroads do not.

Government, compelling the public to pay more for railroad without giving the public anything in return, also compel railroads to work to working people with the railroads anything to put it. But Government works are arranged by that OWN the railroads, not that WORK on the railroads.

years ago fewer than two women worked for pay in the United States. Now 8,000,000 women are working in "gainful occupations." It is the practical mind, like to see the horse and working German farmers on the cow.

young man arrested for robbing the house of Cardinal. I didn't dare take the diamond studded gold worth $25,000. I was afraid to jinx me. I also left a cup. Something told me they were in church. I wasn't looking any trouble like that.

modernist will call that religion, others will see in that religion has power in the case of a young man who tells the police, "I no religion."

treat prisoners cruel is vile. make a joke of their crimes.

Governor of New York tell officials of Sing Sing he thinks of their Labor pie eating contest, twelve with their hands tied behind their backs, eating pie like swine, for a $5 prize.

How does that impress men and women out of prison, seeking to buy food for their children.

However stupid it is, a prison with pie eating contests is not as bad as the prison of that good bishop, in which prisoners wore iron collars, with sharp spikes turned inward, so they could not lie down to sleep, or the Spanish prison in which the noble-hearted English prison reformer found a man fastened to the wall, his feet above ground, starving, his face clotted with blood and tears, or the prison mine, in which Peter the Great chained each prisoner to his wheelbarrow, to stay chained night and day until death released him; better than the ancient galley, where the man chained to the oar was released when he fainted or died, his hand cut off to save time, body thrown overboard and another slave chained in his place.

We are sentimental fools in our prisons, but we have improved.

When men talk of harnessing the electron it should be remembered that Providence does not allow trees to grow into the heavens, or permit conquering man to move up too rapidly. Air, water, the earth, nature gives us to free, and the sun's light and heat. We must work for everything else.

You read that an automobile engine has been made to run with the explosive power of dust from a grain elevator instead of gasoline. Messrs. Noel and Hellbach, Department of Agriculture engineers, showed that ordinary dust might be used to create an explosive force greater than that of gasoline.

What's Doing In West Texas

Stamford—With the close of the first week of September, most city, public and rural schools are either now open or have openings underway. Reports for school systems seem to indicate a general rise in enrollment over the state and indicate improvements in the administration and organization of many institutions. A partial list of the schools with record attendances include Munday, Haskell, Hale Center, Tulla, Sagerton, Artesia, Rule, Lubbock, Mobeetie, Hereford and Plainview. Among an incomplete account of school developments are the following: A new school building and auditorium for Carey; heating plants, new home economics building and a new school building for colored pupils at Brady and new school building at Mineral Wells; new text books, and repaired building at Jackboro; a teacherage for Vivian; two new trucks and larger school cafeteria at Littlefield; increased faculty for Hale County's rural schools, departmental system in all grades of the Wheeler schools; new buildings at Sandhill; ward school at Florida, also addition of home economics and commercial departments.

Balmorhea—A contract was recently let for the construction of a graded road to Maderia Springs, work upon which has already begun. The road will connect with the O. S. T.

O'Brien—Two modern gins, both equipped with latest machinery, cleaners, burr extractors, etc., and with a capacity of 100 bales a day, have been opened here. Three cotton buyers will work in the district this season.

Childress—C. W. Mullen, staff writer for the Oklahoma Farmer Stockman, was recently in the city to collect material for the magazine he represents. His articles will tell Texas of the success of Childress county in leading the production of dairy products and poultry so that other localities may follow its example.

Memphis—Recent developments here include the opening of a Coffee Shop and Dining Room in the new Memphis Hotel, a new garage business, a dry goods store and a bakery.

Stamford—Counties in the West Texas Chamber of Commerce territory will have opportunity to "strut their stuff" if the "Raised in Texas" dinner to be given by officials of the State Fair of Texas at Dallas is kept as representative as it is planned. The dinner the demonstrated climax of a year of diversification in Texas, is to consist of a menu of everything from soup to nuts, strictly Texas products from Texas farms. Agricultural exhibitors at the Fair are to be the honored guests. Counties can contribute such products as their particular section is noted for producing to the "Raised in Texas" dinner.

Bledsoe—Bledsoe will be one of the leading shipping points over Texas and New Mexico this year if expectations are realized. Receipts of cattle at the Santa Fe yards have grown rapidly, twenty-five cars of cattle being shipped recently. Shipments of cotton and corn will go out within the next two months beside a large quantity of grain sorghums. Twelve thousand acres of cotton is growing around Bledsoe, none of which will produce less than a quarter of a bale per acre, according to authoritative estimates. Large acreages of corn here will yield close to 30 bushels an acre. It is believed that the bean, maize, kafir, cane and higeria crops will produce in proportion.

Stephenville—A parade led by children will be a unique feature of the fall fair at the sixth annual Erath county exposition according to plans of the committee in charge. All children eight years old and under are invited to join the group and lead the march over the course planned.

Vernon—Plans have been made here to open war on coyotes, prairie dogs and rodents of Wilbarger county late this fall. A. L. Coleman of the U. S. department of agriculture has announced his intention of returning to this section to kill the pests and to distribute poison for their extermination.
