About Iran-Contra deal

Nothing to hide in diaries, Reagan says

Reagan denies an assertion by the head of the Senate's inquiry into the Iran-Contra affair that some writings in presidential diaries on the matter might be embarrassing to the president.

'The only thing I'm embarrassed about is my scrawly handwriting," Reagan joked Friday

The White House said everything in Reagan's diaries about the sale of arms to Iran or the alleged diversion of profits to U.S-backed rebels in Nicaragua will be open to congres-

The president commented after Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, the chairman of the Senate select committee investigating the affair, was quoted in The Washington Post as saying the diaries "could cause some embarrassment.

Inouye said entries show Reagan was "rather knowledgeable of what happened" instead of being detached and ill-informed as the Tower commission portrayed him earlier this year after its investigation of the secret sale of arms to Iran and the alleged diversion of profits to the Contra rebels in Nicaragaua.

Administration trying to remove arms restriction

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Reagan administration said Friday it will work in the Senate to remove two Democratic-sponsored arms control restrictions from a nearly $9 billion money bill that the House passed in the early morning hours.

The State Department was especially critical of a Republicanbacked amendment which killed the administration's request for more foreign aid money.

But Democratic leaders said the House, which before final passage trimmed the bill down to budget limits, proved it was serious about reducing the deficit.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the White House opposes the arms control amendments, one of which would forbid most nuclear weapons testing and another which would require the administration to obey arms limits set in the unratified SALT II pact.

"We are opposed to both of the amendments, we oppose the bill, we're disappointed in the vote," he said, reflecting the White House threat of a veto

We will try to change it when it goes to the Senate and the (House-Senate) conference. ... We're hopeful for a much better bill in the Senate," Fitzwater said.

State Department spokesman Charles E. Redman said deleting the entire $651 million in foreign aid from the fiscal 1987 supplemental appropriations bill would badly hurt U.S. diplomacy. The failure to approve supplemental assistance will seriously damage efforts, for example, by the Central American democracies to foster economic recovery, and efforts by the Philippines to meet important security requirements," Redman said.

The House, in more than 15 hours of debate, did not vote separately on the arms control amendments, as Republicans decided not to fight a losing challenge

Instead, debate focused on the spending in the package - which as originally drafted would have violated the limits of the fiscal 1987 budget. And before final passage, in what some said was a demonstration of the deficit issue taking hold in the House, amendments passed that cut the $11.3 billion bill to about $8.8

Democrats rebuffed a series of GOP amendments attacking piecemeal many of the cherished spending programs lawmakers were trying to squeeze in before the fiscal year runs out on Sept. 30.

A question about Hereford was recently used on the game show "Jeopardy", and the lady contestant answered it correctly. The question, we are told, had to do with the electric plant to be built here and asked what kind of fuel would be used to fire the boilers. The answer, of course, was "manure." Mike Carr, C of C manager, said an official of the TV show called last year to verify the question and answer.

With Deaf Smith County in the national news because of being selected for the nuclear waste repository study, newspaper and TV reporters in the big cities seem to look for controversial topics in Hereford when they don't have any hot news stories to pursue in their own territory.

An article in the Fort Worth Star Telegram last Sunday, written by Mike Shlachter, is one of the latest attempts to dig out the dirty linens in the community and air them before the world.

This one attempts to magnify and enlarge on the rift in the community over the nuclear waste project, and to predict that some violence will occur. And, like some other reporters, the writer missed some facts and used some statements out of context.

The reporter re-located Canyon in his article, saying that it is 31 miles northwest of Hereford. It doesn't change the effect of the story but those who know their geography may wonder how many other facts are incorrect. The reporter also noted that local residents pronounce the county's name as "Deef" Smith. I've never heard a local citizen pronounce it that way.

After saying that "a farmers' action group, POWER, has mounted a series of angry protests, radically changing the mood of the quiet but hard-working county," the reporter

The senator said "there are some passages in there that may cause some embarrassment and some injury to persons. ... For the president, it will be a mixed bag.

He said the embarrassment would be because "remarks are made about people and recollections of certain dealings with people ... which they thought were off the record."

Asked if the diaries contained anything indicating he knew about any diversion of money to the Contras, Reagan said, "No, because I didn't and still don't. I'm still waiting Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said that under an agreement with Congress. White House counsel A.B. Culvahouse reviewed all of Reagan's diary entries from Jan. 1, 1984 until Dec. 19, 1986 and culled out all Iran-Contra references.

All of the material now is ready for inspection, he said, and leaders of the congressional committees investigating the affair may get their first look at it next week.

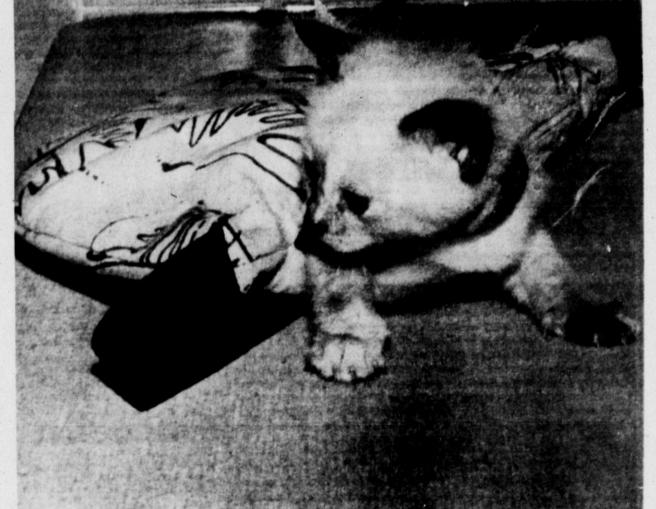

Fitzwater said that "everything related to Iran would be included (in the material that Congress can see)." He said he did not know how much paperwork that entailed but said it would be more than was given to the Tower board.

Congressional sources, commenting on condition they not be named. said Thursday for the first time that Senate and House investigators have traced the diversion of at least $1

Congressional Iran-Contra public hearings are scheduled to begin May 5 and last through July. In other developments

The New York Times reported today that congressional investigators have evidence that U.S. military personnel were involved in funneling supplies to the Contras at a time when there was a congressional ban on such aid. The newspaper quoted an unidentified official as saying U.S. soldiers were involved in refueling private supply planes and storing weapons and ammunition in American military warehouses.

-The Times, in another report, said investigators have traced the origin and use of almost all the money involved in the covert operations, except for $10 million reportedly donated by the Sultan of Brunei. The newspaper said investigators believe Elliott Abrams, assistant secretary of state for Inter-American affairs, may have accidentally deposited the Sultan's money in the wrong Swiss bank account due to a possible error in transmitting the account number.

Consumer prices show slow but steady climb

WASHINGTON (AP) - Consumer prices continued their slow but steady climb last month, moving up at an annual rate of 5.1 percent, the government reported Friday.

Economists said the pace, nearly five times last year's inflation rate, probably is typical of what Americans can expect for the rest of

The Labor Department said the Consumer Price Index rose 0.4 percent in March, identical to the February increase and double the March rate of increase in Americans' personal income.

The inflation rate would translate to 5.1 percent if it continued unchanged for a year. For the first three months of the year, consumer prices have increased at an annual rate of 6.2 percent.

In a related report, the Commerce Department said personal incomes rose 0.2 percent in March, the crease in February.

Wages and salaries increased at an annual rate of $7.4 billion in March, down sharply from February's gain of $16.6 billion. Part of the weakness ed. came from a drop of $1.3 billion in after a rise of $2.5 billion in

At the White House, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the inflation figure was higher than the administration's prediction, but said it should slow as energy costs work their way through the economy.

Private economists have been predicting inflation of 4 percent to 5 percent for the year, and several said the March inflation report reinforces their forecasts.

Cynthia Latta of Data Resources Inc., in Lexington, Mass., said the in-

Gasoline prices rose by 2.3 percent manufacturing payrolls in March in March and have risen 13.7 percent so far this year, the government said. Despite those increases, however, gas prices still were 5.9 percent below March 1986 levels and 31.2 percent below their peak level of March 1981.

Energy increases were a major factor in the March report, the government said. Another factor was clothing prices, up 1.7 percent, their sharpest increase in nearly 13 years.

The government attributed that rise to new spring fashions. Economists said the falling value of the dollar, which makes imports more expensive, also contributed.

School board sets 3 meetings

Hereford school trustees will meet Sunday at 1:30 p.m. and on Monday at 5 p.m. to meet with consultants to assist the board in a search for a new superintendent. All meetings will be in the administration building.

Tuesday at 6 p.m., the Band Boosters will present a check for payment on the new band uniforms purchased last fall. Also, the issue of shorts will be discussed and the board will vote on whether to allow the High Plains Underground Water District to be part of the Waste Deposit Impact Committee.

County panel meets Monday

Deaf Smith County Commissioners will consider the request for commitment to the pursuit of the Super Conductor-Super Collider when they meet at 10 a.m. Monday in the courthouse.

Also on the agenda: discussion of the telephone system, social services relocation and salaries, discuss a central purchasing agent, a trip to Washington, D.C, by the Waste Deposit Impact Committee, relocation of offices in the courthouse, an application for a grant for the juvenile probation office, a bid to advertise for part time summer help in the juvenile office, resolution of rthe computer grant, and consider vacation pay for the Social Services director.

Suit filed against park

The family of Miguel Perez has filed suit seeking compensation for the youth's death Sunday at Wonderland Park, according to the Amarillo Daily News. Perez, 15-year-old student at Stanton Junior High, died after a fall from the Zyklon roller coaster.

Filed in 47th District Court, the suit asks no specific monetary amount, but request that a jury decide the value of the life. It also asks for compensation for the pain Perez suffered before his death in the fall.

Police report

Charges have been filed on a 23-year-old male for assault by threat and retaliation, according to Hereford police reports from Friday.

Also, a 25-year-old male was arrested for driving while license suspended, driving while intoxicated, possession of drug paraphernalia, and exhibition of acceleration; a 17-year-old for no insurance and expired driver's license; and a 27-year-old for inhaling a volatile

Other reports filed were of trespassing, trespassing and assault, a prowler and a child custody problem.

Drug Week needs sponsors

Planners of the Drug Awareness Week slated for May 3-9 are still needing some financial help, according to Lupe Chavez of The Chemical People Task Force. Chemical People are part of an ad hoc committee of citizens and representatives from the school district, the district attorney's office, the county and city law enforcement agencies, ministers and civic clubs, which have planned the week.

Highlight of the week will be an evening for parents with Lonise Bias, mother of the late Len Bias, the University of Maryland basketball star who died from a dose of cocaine; and Fr. Dan Egan, the famed "Junkie Priest" who has worked for years in drug

The parents night is Wednesday, May 6, at 7:30 p.m. in La Plata Gym. Both speakers also will be in the public schools to talk to the youth.

Clubs or individuals wishing to help may contribute to the special fund of The Chemical People at Hereford State Bank.

DOE targets 2007 for second dump site

WASHINGTON (AP) — It will be another 20 years before the Energy Department selects possible sites for a permanent nuclear waste repository in the Eastern part of the country, the department says.

And it will be 29 years before the president recommends to Congress which of the possible sites should be used, according to tentatively set target dates in an addendum to written testimony prepared by Energy Secretary John Herrington for a congressional hearing.

Herrington did not mention the dates - 2007 for department selection of sites and 2016 for the president's recommendation - in oral testimony Thursday before the Senate Environment and Public Works nuclear regulation subcommittee.

The secretary last May announced that a search for the site was being postponed indefinitely, a move applauded by Eastern lawmakers but criticized by Westerners who said it violated the 1982 compromise law that calls for two underground repositories for spent nuclear fuel.

'It has now become clear to me that leaving it open-ended has in itself led to confusion regarding our intent," the prepared testimony said. "DOE remains fully committed to a two-repository system and to carrying out the intent of Congress."

The 1982 Nuclear Waste Policy Act calls for two repositories, each capable of holding 70,000 metric tons of radioactive waste, the bulk of it produced in the East. While Westerners agreed to take the first site, they successfully demanded that the East receive the second one.

Herrington said he was delaying the search for an Eastern site because the first repository in the West would be able to handle all of the nation's commercial nuclear waste through 2020.

The Energy Department is considering sites at Hanford, Wash., Yucca Mountain, Nev., and Deaf Smith County, Texas, for the first share with those states where the need is greatest.

"Although some states have exhausted their original allocations of operating loan funds, overall we have ample funds," he said. "Consolidating will let us use those funds in the most efficient and effective way."

Clark said about $200 million in FmHA funds for lending directly to farmers may be consolidated for redistribution on a needs basis. The national reserve fund was scheduled to be effective at the close of business Friday.

More than $1 billion in direct operating loans and $700 million in guaranteed operating loans have been obligated so far this season by the agency, he said.

The FmHA direct operating loan program was authorized at $1.425 billion in the fiscal year that began last Oct. 1, and the guaranteed loan program was pegged at $2.17 billion.

Bakker, 47, and his wife have remained in seclusion at their home in Palm Springs, Calif., since he resigned as PTL president last month after acknowledging he had had a sexual liaison with Jessica Hahn, a 27-yearold church secretary.

Efforts to obtain a telephone number for Bakker were unsuccessful. PTL, which stands for Praise The Lord or People That Love and is based in Fort Mill, S.C., released a statement saying, "We have no knowledge of any such problems and are not able to comment on Mr. Ankerberg's accusations at "Our ministry at PTL is that of love and restoration, and wé hope you will pray with us that God will help all of his people during his time. Again, it is only Mr. Ankerberg's accusations."

Ankerberg, whose "John Ankerberg Show" is broadcast weekly by three satellite television networks, made his allegations in interviews Friday night on two television programs, CNN's "Larry King Live" and ABC's "Nightline." He claimed in March that he had evidence PTL officials had tried to cover up evidence of Bakker's adultery. Ankerberg also denied reports that he and another evangelist, Jimmy Swaggart, had conspired to seize the PTL network.

Ankerberg said on "Larry King Live" that his own investigation had led him to believe what he had earlier thought were rumors of homosexual activity by Bakker.

"I talked to people that were there and people that ought to know who have said they have been witnesses to the fact," Ankerberg said. Asked whether he believed them, he said, 'Yes, I do."

ticipate, according to people I talked with, with prostitutes.

He said he had tape recordings of interviews with the witnesses, and that he had promised he would protect their identities as best he could.

Ankerberg said he had interviewed several people who had worked at PTL between 1976 and 1985, and based his statements on those interviews. He alleged that an inner circle of top PTL officials had sex with each others' spouses and used prostitutes. He would not name the individuals.

"There's about 50 people, a little circle I would call them, that there's been wife-swapping that's gone on, I've seen testimony from that," Ankerberg said on "Nightline."

He also said some PTL staffers he would not name were involved in misappropriation of funds. He gave no specifics as to what the money was used for, but said many top officials in the PTL organization knew about the funds.

The Rev. Everret Stenhouse, a top official of Bakker's denomination, the Assemblies of God, said on "Nightline" that the organization's investigation of Bakker was not complete, and that he could not comment on the new allegations.

That's when Foster told him he supposed someone could put sugar in a gas tank on some big equipment. "I asked him not to quote me on that," added Foster.

The article quoted Mayor Wes Fisher as saying, "Some of the farmers are mad at the business community because they think it's after the buck-at the disregard of safety, which I don't think is true." DEAR ANN LANDERS: Thank you for warning your readers about the dangers of becoming involved with strangers through lonely heart

In the past 12 months, three Virginia prison inmates have been successfully prosecuted in federal court. Each of these men corresponded with people they "met" through lonely hearts personal ads. All three had significant criminal. records. Two placed ads portraying themselves as women. The men who answered the ads were unaware they were writing to inmates at an allmale maximum security prison. Respondents were sent photos of young attractive females and the story was, "I am serving a term for drunk driving. I will never drink again and I want to start a new life with a good, loving man.

Several men believed they would be the lucky new husband. They sent money and gifts. Both inmates were found guilty of mail fraud and sentenced to additional time.

The third inmate answered personal ads placed by women. "Al" concocted an elaborate story to make himself appear glamorous. He lavished attention on his victims with a profusion of cards, letters and collect phone calls. He hauled in more than $20,000 which he spent on his girlfriend. Al pleaded guilty when apprehended and received another stiff sentence.

Colleen McCullough is featured this week at the Deaf Smith County Library along with Bette Davis. Colleen McCullough's newest book is THE LADIES OF MISSALONGHI and Bette Davis's book is THIS 'N THAT. THE LADIES OF MISSALONGHI takes place in a small town in the Blue Mountains near Sydney, Australia. John Smith came into the small town of Hurlingford and stole their valley out from under their noses. But his arrival seemed to matter most to the youngest of the three ladies who lived in the house called Mississippi.

Missy Wright's existence stretched drearily in front of her, the future holding no more promise than the past. Like her mother and maiden aunt, Missy was another of the Hurlingford clan's manless women.

Supplements not needed

COLLEGE STATION - Selenium, a trace mineral, is becoming a popular item in health food stores; but taking too much of it could be

"Claims that selenium deficiency causes cancer, hot flashes, and other menopausal distresses are overstated and out of proportion. There's no evidence that large doses. of selenium will alleviate these problems," warns Dr. Alice Hunt, a nutritionist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension

Selenium is an essential nutrient that's only needed in small quantities," says Hunt. "It's safe range is much narrower than other minerals and as little as ten times the dietary amount could be toxic.

As an antioxident, selenium helps keep cell membranes functioning properly.

Seafoods, liver, kidney and whole grains are good sources of selenium," the specialist claims. "Fruits and vegetables can also be good providers, depending upon the selenium content of the soil in which they are grown.

Missy's mentor advised her to consult a wildly romantic novel for the answer to her plight. Her mentor was a librarian with a taste for purple prose and a scandalous past, who understood that beneath Missy's drab exterior there beat the heart of an enchanting and adventurous woman. On one level THE LADIES OF MISSALONGHI is a classic fairytale, on another it is a wickedly accurate picture of life in a place where men may dominate but women rule.

THIS 'N THAT by Bette Davis is full of fabulous anecdotes as well as opinions pro and con on a wide range of subjects. A woman of strong appetites and opinions, Miss Davis minces no words. She talks about her stroke and mastectomy and inspires us with the story of her complete recovery

The real terror for Bette Davis was the possibility that she would never work again. For her, this would have been living death. Kathryn Sermak, her assistant, had full faith in her employer's ability to come back.

Now in her mid-seventies, Bette Davis has completed two TV film specials, and is about to start on two more. THIS 'N THAT is a unique and controversial book by one of the most incandescent and unconventional acting talents of all times. Miss Davis declares, "IF anyone likes you, you're doing your job wrong.

The Hereford School Board has caught some flak over the decision to buy out the one year left on Supt. Harrell Holder's contract. Most of the complaints we've heard deal with the $50,000 settlement agreement, not the decision to let him go.

The only explanation the public got was: "Conflicts and differences have arisen between Holder and the District which adversely affected achievement of the purposes, goals and objectives of the District."

Since we elect trustees to handle the school's business, that statement might have been sufficient if a $50,000 payment not been involved. The public deserves to know why it was necessary to make such a settlement agreement with the superintendent, but it appears that part of the agreement was for the board and Holder to keep quiet about the situation.

Since those decisions were made in executive sessions(behind closed doors), we may never know for sure just what happened and why. Personally, we believe it started more than two years ago when a citizen's group formed to protest the implementation of a mastery-learning program in the school system. A number of parents and teachers were unhappy with the way it was handled. Voters elected two trustees in 1985, and two more in 1986, who were known to be unhappy with the superintendent.

The bottom line, in our opinion, was that the majority of board members had been wanting to oust Holder for some time. Trustees had previously voted not to extend the term of the superintendent's contract--possibly thinking he would resign, but this did not happen. Unlike private business, teacher contracts are not easily terminated. Firing, without strong justification, can lead to court action. We have been told that the board could still have faced some legal problems next year at the end of the contract period.

What we have here, a wise man once said, is a lack of communications. The public deserved a better explanation from its school board.

Better idea

A bill to revise the no-pass, no-play law is an improvement on the original law, but still is not the best bill to serve the students of Texas.

Legislation authored by Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Hereford, would reduce the weeks of ineligibility of students who fail a class to three from six...

Certainly, it was a hardship on many teams when the six-week rule was implemented. In the first year, some athletic teams were cut back drastically whent he first round of grades came out. But by the second year, students had learned to deal with the rule and fewer students had to drop out of extracurricular activities...

But the old rule, and even the amended rule, if passed, isn't the best way. A student who has all As and Bs, but perhaps flunks one difficult class, isn't allowed to play. But another student who makes straight Ds still is allowed to continue extracurricular activities.

Wouldn't a grade average be a fairer judge of academics? Require that students meet 75 or C grade averages to stay in extracurricular activities. Then, if not, ban them for three weeks.

It would be a better improvement of a well-intentioned law.

Tort reform

Texans Against Tort Reform advertisements on television show a little girl about to be run over by a tractor-trailer rig driven by an apparently intoxicated driver and suggest Florida's experience with tort reform has not been good.

The irony of tort law and tort reform is that it pits insurance companies and lawyers against one another. Insurance companies want to limit the amount of money they pay out for punitive or exemplary damages. Lawyers, who often derive a lot of money from these punitive damages, of course want to continue our system of awarding whatever a jury says is

It's a complicated issue, to be sure. But surely, it shouldn't be decided on the kind of advertising Texans Against Tort Reform are using. It's an argument waged over money, but obviously intended to elicit an emotional response, the very thing the anti-tort-reform side says juries should be counted on to sublimate when they decide who should pay.

The Penultimate Word

DO NOT BE AFRAID

Last Sunday was Easter. Lots of folks went to church and were fussed at because they had not been since last Easter. Lots of new clothes were worn, not just to show off, but because Easter is the signal of a new

It's time to get out of the old clothes and put on the new. The Pope held his annual Mass and blessed the thousands in the square. The story of the resurrection was told again, and it needed to be told again. Our heritage and our hope need such repeating.

One day of Easter is not enough for me. I have been rethinking what it all means. I know it is strange to have my Easter column a week after Easter, but maybe the idea is bigger than any one day.

Matthew 28:9-10

Suddenly, Jesus was there in their path. He gave them His greeting, and they came up and clasped His feet, falling prostrate before Him. Then Jesus said to them, "Do not be afraid."

If some morning a resurrection happens, I want to be there-in person-when it happens. If I can't be there I want the event to be recorded on video tape. If there is no video tape then I can only hpe there are some reliable witnesses I can interview. I want to know how the person looked when he or she first left the grave. I want to know the first words spoken.

This is important to me because I do not feel all that sure about how it is on the other side. Is it peaceful or frightening? If the person comes out of the grave with fear in their eyes and horror in their face then I will know. If the person comes forth like Lazarus in Eugene O'Neil's play LAZARUS LAUGHED, with laughter on their face, repeating over and over again, "There is nothing but life there", then I will know.

On Easter Sunday morning He arose. Reliable witnesses were there. God inspired persons to write a record as good as video tape. When He came forth His countenance glowed with joy, and the first words out of his mouth were, "DON'T BE AFRAID."

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnsongrass Farm on Tierra Blanca Creek discusses tax write-offs this week.

Dear editor:

When politicians stand up and say they want to close the tax loopholes, I've always said I don't want them closed, I want them pointed out.

Well, some big shows apparently without a sense of humor have found out they need to be mighty careful about who they pick to point out the loopholes.

The operators of an investment firm in New York announned that they could get you a paper loss tax write-off of $4 for every $1 you invested with them. Some big shots, figuring a million saved is a million earned, fell for it.

For example, the head of CBS, Laurence Tisch, saved $1.1 million on his income tax. I guess he'd been watching too many crime stories on his network.

The producer of "All In The Family" Norman Lear, was able to deduct $1.5 million. He must have gotten himself confused with Archie Bunker.

Michael Landon, who stars in "Highway To Heaven," deducted $1 million. He must have thought the road to heaven wound around through loopholes.

And the Postmaster General, Preston Tisch, benefited from a $480,508 write-off. I guess he was hedging against a rise in the postal rates. In all, the promoters of the scheme have been charged with providing $550 million in false tax write-offs to the ultra-rich and famous. Although the victims may have to pay all the millions of taxes they saved, they haven't been charged with wrong-doing. But jumping at a chance to invest $1 to create a false $4 paper loss on

'Official whatever' out of control

By KEN BRODNAX The Odessa

Among the items of business for this session, the Texas Legislature has voted to make the Lightning Whelk the official state seashell. Naturally, this should excite seashell fans everywhere. But wait just a minute. Isn't this whole "official whatever" thing getting a bit out of hand? Sure, there are certain items that a state can't get along without.

For instance, the ball started rolling back about the turn of the century when the 21st Legislature name in the race. designated the bluebonnet as the state flower.

Naturally, no state would want to be caught without a state song. That problem was solved in 1929 when "Texas, Our Texas" was adopted by lawmakers.

Of course, that melody has endured plenty of trials and tribulations ever since. Seems most Texans insist on considering "The Eyes of Texas," which really belongs to the University of Texas, as the real state

In logical — or maybe not so logical - progression, legislators have created a state tree (pecan), a state gemstone (topaz), a state grass (sideoats gramma), a state stone (palmwood) and even a state dish (chili, what else).

Rep. John Willy, R-Angleton, offered the resolution to add the Lightning Whelk to that honored list.

"It is fitting we name the Lightning Whelk the official seashell to represent the coastal areas of the state," Willy claimed, adding that the shell is appropriate as a state symbol because it is found only on the Texas Gulf coast and in no other

That brings to mind several other unique things in the Lone Star State that are being ignored.

Doesn't it seem perfectly normal that J.R. Ewing should be proclaimed the official state villain? After all, he's focused plenty of attention (even hough a lot of it is unwanted) on Dallas and the great state of Texas.

Odessans might want to hop on the bandwagon and get the statue of the World's Largest Jackrabbit as the official state standard location to take a touristy photograph.

Carrying the theory to its ultimate end could create some complications, however.

Can you imagine the agonizing that would take place before an official state eyesore could be designated. Heck, all those West Texas locations wouldn't even have a shot if someone threw the Houston Ship Channel's

Chances are the official state joke would have something to do with Aggies, although several officeholders also come to mind. But considering the number of Aggie jokes that have made the rounds, a final decision might take years. And figuring out an official state pun might leave most citizens gagging in disgust.

But a lot of the deliberations would be quick and painless. For example, the state drink would have to be a longneck bottle of beer. The Bloody Mary might offer a bit of competition, but martinis, manhattans and White Russians could be eliminated right off the bat.

Speaking of bats, lawmakers would have to find a species of that creature to honor. Preferably the nominees wouldn't include any bat that Ozzy Osbourne ever laid a lip on. After all, his alleged offense against the Alamo has made him persona non grata in these parts.

But that does bring up the point that Texas would need an official state rock star to go along with Willie Nelson, who would be the obvious choice as official state country music

Creating all the enactments would be beneficial in that it might keep the big cheeses in Austin from fiddling with the budget for a couple of decades or so.

But you can bet the whole trend would get plenty tiresome, which surely would call for an official state

Capitol Report by Smithee

Voters may get to decide fate of state income tax

By REP. JOHN SMITHEE Article 8, Section 1, of the Texas

Constitution states that the Legislature may tax the incomes of persons and corporation. This may change if the members of the House of Representatives get their way. This week, House members passed a measure to constitutionally prohibit a state income tax on persons and corporations.

Amending the Texas Constitution to prohibit such taxes will ensure that they cannot be imposed without two-thirds vote of each house of the legislature and a majority of the voters. Because taxation of income would be such a fundamental change in the state's long-standing tax policy it should be subject to this more stringent test.

A constitutional ban on a personal and corporate income tax will help the state's business climate at a time when it most needs to attract new jobs. Companies moving to Texas from high-tax states frequently cite the absence of a personal-income tax as an important incentive for their top executives to relocate.

Since Texas is one of only four states with the advantage of having no personal or corporate income taxes, businesses and individuals making long-range relocation plans can be assured that changes in tax policies will not occur without advance warning.

A personal-income tax would inevitably fall most heavily upon middle income Texans who already bear a substantial tax burden. A corporate income tax would fall most heavily on the profitable companies which are the key to maintaining economic growth and the source of new jobs in Texas.

Finally, prohibiting income taxes would restrain the Legislature from spending more money each fiscal year. Allowing easy access to the large revenues an income tax would provide only encourages uncontrolled spending rather than a careful and conservative approach to

This measure, HJR 1, was sent to the Senate on April 22. Should it pass, Texas voteres will decide its fate November 3, 1987.

Computer age literally comes into a football

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) - Football is about to be hurled into the computer age - literally.

A ball implanted with a computer chip that tracks how far it travels was scheduled for testing this weekend in the University of Georgia's annual "G-Day" intrasquad game.

The chip enables the referee to place the ball in the precise spot on the field where it belongs after each

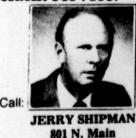

"It's really something," said Georgia Coach Vince Dooley. "The chips in the ball will be able to exactly measure the forward progress of the ball. It's the first tracking system in the history of football."

The computer ball was developed over 20 years of spare-time tinkering by Ralph Oxios, a Providence, R.I., ironworker. Oxios said Georgia was one of the few collegiate programs interested in the project.

Besides a computer chip in the ball, the process involves antennas, satellite dishes and computer equipment. The ball can be tracked to within a quarter-inch, Oxios said.

After the test at Sanford Stadium, Oxios hopes to gain the attention of college football administrators, the National Football League and the TV networks.

Dallas Cowboys need help in almost all positions

By DENNE H. FREEMAN AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) - The Dallas Cowboys, picking higher in the NFL draft than they have in 23 years, need help in every position but running back to bolster a team that lost seven of its final eight games last Unless they swing a trade, the Cowboys will be drafting from the 12th position Tuesday.

"I think we will get some very good players out of this draft, particularly in the first round," Dallas scouting director Gil Brandt says. "There are a lot of good linebackers and offensive linemen, and some defensive linemen who can play."

The Cowboys need help in all three areas, and throw in a placekicker, a defensive back, and perhaps another wide receiver for good measure.

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) -Ricky Rudd insists there is a big difference between being aggressive and being reckless on a racetrack.

"Aggressive driving is when you drive down inside of a guy, make a little contact, scrape and little and go on," said Rudd, who enters the Sovran Bank 500 Sunday at Martsinville Speedway as the defending champion.

Rudd and the rest of the NASCAR stock car drivers in the 500-lap race will be the good to stop Dale Earnhardt's hot streak.

Earnhardt has won three straight races and five of the first seven events this season. But he has not done it without controversy.

Earnhardt, the defending Winston Cup champion, again is embroiled in controversy involving his always aggressive style of racing.

In the last race, two weeks ago at Bristol, Tenn., Earnhardt knocked Sterling Marlin out of the lead and into the wall midway through the race.

Marlin at first vowed retaliation, although later softening his words, and NASCAR warned Earnhardt to 'keep his nose clean.'

Oilers seek players for skill positions

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) - The Houston Oilers started last season with a "here we are, come and stop us" offense, and most teams did just that.

Coach Jerry Glanville wanted a simple, rugged running attack, but his personnel was better suited for finesse

We need to make you chase us all over the field and try to find us," Glanville said in assessing last year's 5-11 finish.

The Oilers closed out last season with four straight home victories and a 4-4 record in their final eight games, their best second-half finish since 1980

A passing attack featuring quick receivers Ernest Givins and Drew Hill helped the late-season surge, and it's skill positions the Oilers will seek in Tuesday's NFL draft.

Hill and Givins were the fourth most prolific wide receiver combination in the NFL last season, catching 126 passes for 2,174 yards and eight touchdowns to average 17.3 yards

The Oilers have the eighth and 20th picks in the first round and two more selections in the second round. The Los Angeles Rams gave Houston their first-round pick as compensation for quarterback Jim Everett, and the Oilers got an extra secondround pick from Detroit for tackle Harvey Salem

The Oilers have tried to improve seasons that Ladd Herzeg has been Rams

general manager

Five players from the 1986 draft made the Oilers club and 10 players from the 1985 draft still are members of the team.

The Oilers and San Francisco are the only teams with two first-round selections this year and the Oilers have four selections among the first 36 picks, more than any other NFL

Besides a wide receiver. Glanville's wish list also includes a top linebacker and a defensive lineman with pass-rushing skills.

The Oilers would like to deal for Alabama linebacker Cornelius Bennett on the defensive side, but more running backs may be available by the time Houston makes it first pick.

Auburn's Brent Fullwood, Miami's Alonzo Highsmith and D.J. Dozier of Penn State are among the top running backs available in the draft, and Texas A&M's Roger Vick also could have first-round potential.

The Oilers hope off-season surgery for three starting offensive linemen and quarterback Warren Moon will solve part of Houston's offensive problems. Despite drafting heavily in beefy offensive linemen in recent years. Moon was a moving target against last season, leading the NFL with 26 interceptions

Bruce Matthews underwent back surgery and Dean Steinkuhler and Jim Romano had knee operations in the off-season.

Dallas Cowboys to still use computer

By DENNE H. FREEMAN AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) - The Dallas Cowboys will discover in Tuesday's draft whether they have successfully squashed the jokes about their lack of success in drafting "the best athlete available."

Salam Qureishi of New Delhi is back helping the Cowboys try to avoid wasteful draft choices like Larry Bethea and Rod Hill, two firstrounders who were bigtime flops.

The Cowboys gambled and traded up for wide receiver Mike Sherrard last year, thanks to advice from Qureishi's computer, and were rewarded with a rookie who became 'The trick is to try to find a competitor, not somebody like Hill who wouldn't reach down and work hard," says Gil Brandt, who directs the Cowboys' scouting network and previously concentrated on selecting the best athlete available.

'A computer can only work with what you put into it. It's hard for a computer to measure desire, but we're trying to come up with new ways to make the computer smarter," Brandt says.

Qureishi once was head of the Cowboys' computer operations, but had a falling out with the front office in 1970 when the late Dallas owner Clint Murchison decided to form his own computer company.

The Indian and the Cowboys resumed business last year.

"Football is too complex for humans, and that's why they need computers," Qureishi explained. "I feel I've already helped the Cowboys get their computer judgments back

Club President Tex Schramm found Qureishi in 1962 in Palo Alto, Calif., after some IBM whiz kids recommended him as a sharp guy with computers.

The only problem was that Qureishi didn't know anything about

All he knew was soccer," Schramm said. "We had trouble communicating in the English language. It took a lot of patience to teach him the game.

Finally, Qureishi came up with a computer program that rated a player's quickness, body control, competiveness, mental alertness, strength and explosion. It was a model program used by computer. combines throughout the NFL.

The "competiveness" part of the program is what still gives scouts and personnel directors fits.

"That's how we missed on Mike Singletary when he was at Baylor," Brandt says of the 5-11 All-Pro linebacker for the Chicago Bears. "The computer said he was too short to be a middle linebacker in the NFL. We wanted all the players to look like Tarzan in the computer, but unfortunately some of them we drafted played like Jane.

Brandt says the Cowboys paid for passing on Singletary, who became the catalyst for Chicago's world championship. "We learned a lot from that," Brandt says. "We learned how important a man's desire to excel should be.' Qureishi says a computer operation is like a grand piano.

"You have to fine-tune it, and the Cowboys didn't tune theirs for years," he says. Dallas hit so many bad notes it army dropped to a 7-9 ledger in 1986, but the Cowboys were lucky in some respects.

They got some players as free agents that they should have drafted, like Michael Downs and Everson Walls in 1981. Walls grew up a mile from the Cowboys' practice field, but they didn't think highly enough of him to spend a draft choice.

Qureishi has even evaluated the performance of the Cowboys scouting corps - by scouting the scouts - and he predicts Dallas eventually will return to the top of the talent pool.

Why? "Because the Cowboys have the most data," Qureishi says. "They had just simply been abusing their data. They are still the best in the

Unleaded gasoline harmful to tractors, farm equipment

WASHINGTON (AP) - Low-lead gasoline protects older engines from excessive valve wear, but government tests show that tractors and other engine-powered farm equipment are vulnerable if unleaded gasoline is used.

The 'Environmental Protection Agency and the Agriculture Department said Thursday in a joint report that gasoline without any lead causes damage to valve seats, particularly those in older engines that lack hardened seats. Lead serves as a lubricant to help protect the valves.

In 1985, the EPA reduced the amount of lead in regular leaded gasoline from 1.1 grams per gallon to 0.1 gram per gallon, effective Jan. 1, 1986. With that action, the amount of lead in gasoline has been reduced by about 99 percent since the early 1970s as part of a program to reduce pollu-

But farm groups objected to total elimination of lead in gasoline on grounds it would be harmful to engines. The Food Security Act of 1985 directed that the study be made.

The American Farm Bureau Federation said the tests "show conclusively that total elimination of lead from gasoline results in extensive damage to older farm engines" and asked the EPA to abandon plans for removing lead entirely from all

In 1985, the EPA proposed to ban leaded gasoline entirely as early as Jan. 1, 1988, but has not proceeded because of concerns about damage to older engines and because the agency still is evaluating the health effects of the small amount of lead remaining in gasoline.

Farm Bureau President Dean Kleckner said a complete ban on lead 'would have tremendous economic implications" for farmers and ran-

"America's farmers are suffering through some of the worst economic times in our history," he said. "They are ill-prepared to retool existing engines or to purchase new equip-

Kleckner said the federation's surveys show that farmers own an average of 10 older engines per farm and that to replace them would cost an estimated $100,000 per farming

The EPA-USDA report said some non-lead additives "may have potential as substitutes for lead, although these products would have to be developed further."

Eight engines were tested at the National Institute for Petroleum and Energy Research in Bartlesville. Okla. Those included four tractor engines, one combine engine, two farm truck engines, and one recreational vehicle engine. The tests were run on leaded, low-lead and unleaded gasoline.

The engines tested were for John Deere B, Farmall H, International Harvester 240, and Ford 8N tractors: a John Deere 303 cubic-inch combine engine; two General Motors 292-inch, six cylinder truck engines, and a General Motors 454-cubic inch V-8 recreational vehicle engine.

Farmers operate some 1.8 million gasoline-powered tractors, 271,000 gasoline-powered combines and 750,000 trucks larger than 1-ton capacity that use leaded gasoline. Gasoline tractors represent about 40 percent of all tractors, with the rest powered by diesel fuel.

The EPA will accept written comments on the study until July 10 and will hold public hearings June 1 in Washington, June 4 in Indianapolis, and June 9 in Des Moines, Iowa Officials said EPA will report to Congress later this year on its findings and recommendations on the need for leaded gasoline for farm equipment.

Winter wheat, beet growers may get payments if fields flooded

WASHINGTON (AP) - Winter and speed up $2.8 billion in federal administration was "not very enwheat and sugar beet growers unable to plant because of flooded fields would receive federal payments under legislation headed for a House-Senate conference com-

The bill cleared the Senate on a voice vote Thursday after lawmakers beat back a drive to attach a $1.6 billion soybean subsidy payments to corn producers.

Success in fighting off major budget items buoyed sponsors hoping to obtain President Reagan's signature if conferees manage to iron out details. But they said there is no assurance it will escape a veto.

"It's possible," said Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee. He said the thusiastic" about the measure even without the corn and soybean

The measure would allow winter wheat growers to receive 92 percent of normal payments for their 1987 crop while idling all their acreage which was eligible for the farm program but too waterlogged for plan-

It would in effect make the growers eligible for a share in $400 million in disaster aid approved by Congress last year in the wake of rain and floods that wrought havoc in farm fields across the South and Midwest.

But the legislation also would expand the program to provide assistance for all applicants, although the additional money would not be available until appropriated by Congress.

Also eligible for relief under the bill would be an array of other growers including those whose hay and straw were swept away, Colorado sugar beet producers, northern Maine vegetable farmers and Missouri River landowners whose private levees were topped or breached by the raging waters.

The major dispute in two days of debate came over a proposal by Sen. Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn., to attach a so-called marketing loan for soybeans at what the Senate Budget Committee estimated as a first-year cost of $1.6 billion.

Marketing loans are subsidies designed to cushion growers, accustomed to relatively high, federally supported prices, against drastic price slashes needed to make U.S. farm goods competitive in world markets. Cotton and rice exports shot up as a result of marketing loans approved under the current farm program.

Landowners need to take close look at farm bill

People who own cropland and lease or rent it to others need to take a close look at the conservation provisions of the 1985 farm bill.

If your land is highly erodible, or if it falls under the swampbuster or sodbuster provisions of the Food Security Act of 1985, you and your tenant could lose most USDA farm program benefits by January 1, 1990 unless you take action soon.

Contact the Soil Conservation Service where your land is located this year to find out if the following four provisions of the Act affect you:

1. The conservation compliance provision affects you ify ou or your tenant plants annually tilled crops on highly erodible fields. To remain eligible for program benefits, you and your tenant must develop and be actively applying a locally approved conservation plan for those fields by January 1, 1990. The plan must be fully implemented by January 1,

2. The sodbuster provision applies if annually tilled crops are planted on a highly erodible field that was not used for crop production during the period 1981-85.

If you or your tenant plows out the plan needs to start during 1987 to remain eligible for USDA program your tenant converts playa lakes to cropland after December 23, 1985, the date the Act was signed. With some exceptions, your tenant must discontinue production of annually tilled crops on newly converted lakes to remain eligible for farm pro-

The loss of USDA benefits applies to all the land you and your tenant farm...not just the affected fields.

4. The conservation reserve program offers producers help in retiring highly erodible cropland. If your land is accepted into CRP, USDA will share up to half the cost of establishing permanent grases, on your highly erodible cropland.

Under 10-year contracts, USDA will make annual rental payments as long as the terms and conditions of the contract are met. The land will be ineligible for farming during the 10 year contract.

The lease of hunting rights on CRP land is permissible, so some landowners are establishing plants ruch a field, a conservation plan is preferred by wildlife. No other needed this year and installation of harvest will be permitted during the contract.

More than 2.3 million acres of land has been accepted into CRP in Texas 3. Swampbuster applies if you or during 1986 and 1987. Deaf Smith County has accepted 96,823 acres which is approximately two-thirds of the allowed amount for the county.

The average bid accepted in Texas during the February 1987 signup was $39.70 and the average contract size was 228.8 acres. The average bid accepted was $51.17 and the average size was 124.6 acres.

The goal under CRP is to retire 45 million acres of highly erodible land from cultivation to reduce erosion and the production of surplus crops.

Survey respondents gave top rankings to interpersonal and communication skills, notes Schneider. Also, the differences in technical skills needed by employees in the agribusiness industry tended to vary greatly. According to a U.S. Department of Agriculture survey, farmers will reduce corn acreage by 12 percent from 1986; sorghum acreage, 23 percent; wheat acreage, 11 percent; and soybean acreage, 7 percent. However, cotton acreage is expected to be up 3 percent.

In Texas acreage cuts are expected as follows: sorghum 31 percent; wheat, 16 percent; corn, 14 percent; and coton, 3 percent. Soybean, sunflower and rice acreage will also be less. Hay and peanut acreage, however, is expected to increase slightly, says Dr. Carl Andereson, economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

"Because of depressed farm income, adverse weather and the resulting financial stress, Texas farmers plan to cut acreage much more than farmers across the nation," Anderson points out.

Home affordability looks promising

WASHINGTON - Reasonable mortgage interest rates are keeping home purchases within reach of budget-conscious buyers. Home affordability continues to look promising, according to indicators from the National Association of Realtors.

The association's Housing Affordability Index, which gauges the economic feasibility of home buying, was 109.6 in February, rising more than 9 percentage points from 100.2 in February 1986. It dipped only marginally from 110.3 in January. February's index denotes that a family earning the median annual income of $29,417 for February had 109.6 percent-more than enough-of the income needed to qualify for a mortgage covering 80 percent of the February national median existinghome price of $85,000.

At the 100 mark, the index indicates that the median family income equals the qualifying income. At February's 109.6 index, the qualifying income was $26,852. A family with taht income could make a 20 percent down payment on a home

HOUSING DISCRIMINATION IS AGAINST THE LAW

In 1968, just one year before an American walked on the moon and just one week after the death of Martin Luther King, Congress passed a law prohibiting housing discrimina-

The Realtors of Hereford have pledged support through their Code of Ethics for the idea of equal access to quality housing for all Americans. They believe that equal opportunity means selling free and informed choice in the sale of rental of the nation's housing.

priced at the month's median and qualify for the resulting mortgage of Falling mortgage interest rates have pushed affordability up, keeping the index above the 100 point since June 1986, said William M: Moore, 1987 NAR president. "With interest rates, real estate values and prices where they are, I think we are in the best part of the housing cycle, in terms of buying a home," Moore said.

"There has always been the thought 'Is this the best and right time to buy?' But, I think people who were apt to put off buying in the past are now making their move. They feel they better get with it now, before conditions start to change."

The 9.25 percent interest rate used to calculate February's index was 1.58 percentage points lower than the interest rate included in the index for February 1986. Continuing a downward movement that began in September 1986, the interest rate recorded for February was the lowest since March 1978. The index rate reflects the average effective interest rate on loans closed for existing homes. It includes points paid at closing and is a composite of the interest rate offered on fixed-rate and adjustable-rate mortgages.

The interest rate drop, combined with a $109 increase in the median income from Janaury to February, worked to offset the $2,900 month-tomonth median-price increase for that period. February's $85,000 median was 9.8 percent higher than the $77,400 median for February 1986.

"So far, the decline in mortgage interest rates has been sufficient to offset home price increases, keeping the Housing Affordability Index constant," said Dr. John A. Tuccillo, NAR's chief economist. "We anticipate that as interest rate declines start to slow down, and with price increases continuing, the index will edge downward. But, we are not looking for a substantial drop in affordability."

Tuccillo added that NAR expects mortgage interest rates to edge downward toward the middle of the year and stay at that level through Lending standards set by the Federal National Mortgage Association require that a borrower making a 20 percent down payment should use no more than 25 to 28 percent of his gross annual income to make monthly principal and interest payments on a conventional loan. The affordability index is calculated with a formula based on using 25 percent of the income for principal and interest payments.

The monthly principal and interest payment on a $68,000 mortgage (80 percent of the $85,000 February median price) would be $559, which represents 22.8 percent of the median monthly income. This monthly payment is $23 less than that for February 1986, when the monthly principal and interest payment was 25.0 percent of the median monthly income. It is only $5 higher than January's monthly payment, which represented 22.7 percent.

$20,000 annual income would have to buy a home costing $158,100 met qualifications to purchase a

$63,300 home. A family with a $30,000 income could qualify for a $94,900 home; and one with a $40,000 income According to February's affor- could afford a $126,500 home. Those dability statistics, a buyer with a with a $50,000 income would be able

Auctions fun for finding good home furnishings

Although many people are afraid of buying at auction, they shouldn't be. A person furnishing a home can use them to find interesting, beautiful and useful home furnishings at affordable prices, according to Emy Leeser, an interior designer who is associated with the John Stuart showroom in New

The collector can gratify his thirst for knowledge and secure additions for his collection at auction, says Richard Manney, a collector.

To Leeser, "the surprise, spontaneity, excitement and aura which pervade an auction surpass any visit to a gallery or antique store." It's worth learning how to buy at auction, she told a group of designers recently, since they can be sources of great finds, sometimes at reasonable prices.

Although reputable auctioneers attest to the authenticity of the objects for sale, they do make mistakes on occasion so the rule is buyer beware, she

However, she continued, those buying primarily to decorate don't need to be concerned about authenticity. For them, the best reason to buy at auction is to find objects of quality and interest. Find out about sales through

Examine objects carefully for possi-ble flaws. If there are one or more things you want to bid on, buy a catalog and mark the items along with estimated prices. Find out the approximate time these items will be called and be there ahead of the time of sale, she said.

In order to bid, you must register with the auctioneer. You will be given a number; usually it is on a paddle which you will raise to bid. Based on your review, decide how much you would be willing to bid for an item; make a note of it and then stick to your gress, impulse bidding should be only a rare occurrence.

Leeser says dealers and private individuals have very different bidding styles. "Private collectors may get locked into competitive buying at all costs. That is the time for you to lie low. Don't ever feel bad if the bidding goes over your limit. There are always other opportunities.

Besides furnishing or refurbishing a home, another occasion when auctiongoing is called for is when starting or adding to a collection. Collector Manney says the auction process helped him learn and make early mistakes anonymously.

Manney, whose collections of Federal furniture, contemporary sculpture and 19th-century Belter furniture are of museum quality, still loves an auction because it adds to the thrill of the chase which is a part of collecting for him.

Besides learning from his mistakes, he also learned from watching dealers at auctions because "they don't overpay." An important value of auctions is to study the pre-sale estimates and actual bids. That way you get a good sense of where the current market is.

When buying for a collection or investment, authenticity is important, and Leeser advises obtaining documentation of an object's history from the auctioneer (who gets it from the consignor). If there is no provenance, consider hiring an expert to view and give an opinion of the work in question at the preview.

Auctioneers can also be helpful if you want to know what some of your collectibles are worth. A number of large houses, such as Sotheby's, Christies and Phillips, hold free appraisal days from time to time during the year when people can bring in an item or a photo of it and get some idea of what it is and what it might bring at auction.

These verbal estimates are rendered by the auction house's experts, but are not usable for insurance or estate purposes. Those who live outside the New York area can send in photos of their objects, along with any additional information such as a tracing or drawing of identifying marks, said spokesmen for both Sotheby's and Christies.

Both houses also offer such appraisal days in other parts of the country, often decision. When the auction is in pro- in connection with a local arts group or museum which charges admission and uses the event as a fund-raiser.

- Our fireplace had paint on the bricks. Following instructions I read somewhere, I used a paint remover to get off the paint. It worked pretty well, out left some paint in the area of the joints. Any suggestion on how these bits of paint can be removed?

A. - Another coat of remover probably will take off the leftover paint. Use a stiff brush for rubbing the joints after the remover has stayed on for the recommended period of time. Incidentally, for all those who may contemplate taking paint off fireplace bricks, be sure you use a water-rinse, non-flammable paint remover. Get the type of remover that does not flow too easily on vertical surfaces. And be sure there is plenty of ventilation in the room while the remover is being used. Be certain, too, there is a drop cloth over the fireplace hearth while you are working, since spilled liquid is likely to damage the floor.

Q. — I will be putting down a wood deck at the rear of our house. Should I use latex or the alkyd-oil stain?

A. — One authority on exterior stains says that as a general rule of thumb, latex stains should be chosen for wood uprights, but alkyd-oil stains for walkon surfaces, such as steps and deck floors. He adds that latex has advantages for vertical surfaces, but may show footmarks on decks.

Industry concern diminished over tax reform act

WASHINGTON - Industry-wide concern has diminished over a tax reform act rule that requires property sales to be reported to the Internal Revenue Service. The government. agency's release of interpretive regulations helps clarify the new law, according to the National Association of Realtors.

The rule, mandated by changes in federal tax laws, applies to transactions closed since Jan. 1. It requires the settlement agent--the party handling the transfer of property from a seller to a buyer-to report details of the transaction to the IRS.

Settlement agents' reports for sales this year are not due before early 1988. Now, closing agents are only responsible for accumulating the data for submission. A form, 1099-B, has been available since the rule took effect for closing agents to use to report real estate transactions. However, confusion resulted over which sales to report and whom should report them.

Delayed filing instructions, distributed March 31, specify that sales or exchanges of residences with four or fewer units must be reported. The regulations apply the reporting duties to settlement agents, as designated on the Uniform Settlement Statement form issued by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. Such forms are widely used in property settlements.

If a HUD form is not used, filing duties lie with the person who prepares the closing statement transferring payment from the buyer to the seller. If that person cannot be determined, the IRS regulations include an order of responsibility as to whom must submit the report. Real estate brokers. are listed behind attorneys, title companies and mortgage lenders in 'Real estate agents seem to be way down on the list, so I think we came out of it pretty well," said 1987 NAR President William M. Moore. There had been a lot of confusion about it before, but I don't think these requirements will significantly affect that many agents.

There are a lot of papers to fill out at closing, and this is just one more for the person who closes the transaction," he added.

Depending on the area or individual circumstances, the closing agent might be one of several real etate professionals involved in a transaction. Customarily, the real estate professionals who assisted the buyer and seller will accompany the two parties to a closing.

Sometimes, attorneys for one or both parties will be present, as well as a representative from the company who conducted the title search confirming the property's ownership. If the seller is using sale proceeds to pay off an existing loan or if the buyer obtained a mortgage, a representative of the lender might Weigand pointed out that the extra also attend.

In other states, the entire closing is conducted by a neutral third party, an escrow agent, who handles the property transfer for both the seller and buver.

NAR Executive Vice President William D. North is concerned that the filing instructions use the term 'broker' to refer to the person responsible for reporting the transaction to the IRS.

Using "broker" to denote the settlement agent responsible for reporting transactions could lead to confusion over whether the sales associate or the broker would still be considered liable for filing, even though the broker is not, in fact, the settlement agent responsible under the regulations for filing, North noted. 'We are watching this carefully," he

"Obviously, this could cause added consternation at the time of closing, and places an extra burden on everyone," said 1987 President Elect Nester R. Weigand Jr.

Reports including the names and federal identification numbers (Social Security numbers for individuals) of sellers and buyers, date of sale, and amount of proceeds must be submitted on form 1099-B. papework for the closing agent likely means ana dded closing charge for

"It's hard to say who pays the cost, or if it will be a separate item added to the closing statement, or if closing agents will add it to their overall charge. But it is added overhead, and someone, either the seller or buyer, will pay," he said.

A fine of $50 could be charge by the IRS for each transaction not reported by the proper party; a $100 fine per transaction could be charged if the violation was intentional. The maximum yearly penalty is $100,000. However, the IRS indicated no penalties will be imposed for transactions taking place before May 4.

The National Association of Realtors is the nation's largest trade association, representing more than 750,000 members involved in all aspects of the real estate industry.

You can buy concrete in large quanities that is mixed before it is you get when you are making a patio or driveway or something similarly big. It can be poured right into the forms you have constructed or put on the side or placed according to your wishes. Or you can buy aggregate in large quantities and cement in 90- or 94-pound bags and do your own mixing. either in a wheelbarrow, a commercial mixer or anything that will hold enough of the mixture to suit your purposes.

For smaller jobs, you can buy concrete in a ready-mixed package. It contains the aggregate and cement, scientifically mixed in the proper proportions. All you have to do is to add the stipulated amount of water. There are various kinds of mixes, some for making concrete, some for making what is called a sand mix and some for making a mortar mix. In the mortar mix, lime has been added so the final product can be used for laying bricks, stone and block.

In all cases, no matter what the mixture is being used for, its strength, durability and water-tightness depend primarily on the amount of water used, just as it does when using mixtures for large projects. The amount of water should be just enough to permit the mixture to be worked easily, which is why the instructions of the manufacturer should be followed precisely. When you do your own mixing, the directions come on the cement containers. If you want an especially

The steel can be in the form of wire fabric, plain mesh, reinforcing rods and other specially made steel shapes. There are many ways in which the steel can be placed in the concrete, but for most concrete work, about half-the thickness of the mixture is poured, the steel laid in place and the remainder of the mixture installed. On smaller projects, where some reinforcement might be needed, small rods can be purchased for placement in the mixture.

In mixing your own concrete, be sure the sand in the mixture is not too wet. If it is, it merely adds too much water to the mixture. A good way to test is to to grab a handful of it, then drop it. If your hand remains wet, the sand is a bit too wet, in which case use less water than specified. If the sand falls apart as you squeeze it, it is too dry. If the sand compacts when your squeeze it, but does not readily leave your hand when you let go of it, the chances are

Try to fix your own plumbing problem

By The Associated Press

Straightened-out wire coat hangers may be useful for something other than hanging up clothes. Sometimes they can open up clogged drains in sinks.

Minor plumbing problems can frequently be solved, say the experts, with a little knowledge about the paths that water takes to and from sinks, toilets, washing machines and septic systems.

Water enters a house by way of a water main, and there is always a main valve that can shut off any incoming water, explains Elmer King. senior chemist at d-Con Co., Inc. The main line connects to a hot water tank, with hot and-or cold lines continuing to the appliance, where there is another shut-off.

If the problem is a clogged drain in a sink, King suggests, first try to pull up the basin plug and remove any debris that may have collected. Next, you can probe with the coat hanger - but do so gently to avoid puncturing thin-walled pipes.

If all drains are clogged, the trouble is probably at the main drain, says King, so "check with your neighbors to see if it is a local problem or yours alone.'

If confined to your home, he adds, you can try using a plumber's snake. but if nothing seems to work, a professional plumber probably is re-

Another common complaint rumbling noises in the pipes - may be due to pipe vibration, which King says may be stopped by having brackets built to support the pipes and inserting felt between the brackets and the pipes.

If brackets don't help, the problem may be water pressure that is too high, and the solution could be a pressure-reducing valve.

Small towns need strong retail trade to just trying to attract new industries to boost the local economy, community leaders may need to give more emphasis to strengthening existing retail trade and service sec-

"Strong retail trade and service sectors are vital to the economic development of small Texas communities," points out Dr. Don Stebbins, community development specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Communities that do not have adequate trade and service sectors face two major problems, according to Stebbins. First, local employment opportunities will be lacking, so some people may be forced to move. need employment for some family development efforts will be reduced.

jeopardy of suffering financial loss.

A second problem in communities lacking adequate trade and service sectors is that the community income multiplier will be unusually small because a large proportion of consumer spending goes to other communities.

"I believe many small Texas towns have income multipliers of 1.5 or less because consumers find it necessary or desirable to travel to some other community to spend a large portion of their income," say Stebbins. "Thismeans that every dollar received from outside is worth only $1.50 or less to the community after the multiplier effect."

An important disadvantage is that Others, especially farmers, who the impact of other economic

COLLEGE STATION - In addition member, may be in additional Thus, even people who have a strong interest in other types of economic development should encourage the creation and expansion of retail and service busiensses to increase the impact of their efforts.

> Undertanding consumer decisionmaking is essential to increaase local spending, says the specialist. Three quetions need to be answered: What do consumers purchase out of town? Why do consumers prefer or find it necessary to buy these goods and services out of town? What will it take to attract their spending locally?

> "While it is not possible to satisfy every consumer need and capture all consumer spending locally, it is frequently possible to obtain answers to these questions and identify new economic opportunities within the community," Stebbins points out.

He encourages small town community leaders and business people to take a lesson from shopping malls in large cities. "Even though each individual business is independent and competitive with others, there are times when cooperation is beneficial," notes Stebbins. "Tenants in large city malls recognize that the first thing they have to do is to get consumers inside the mall. Once that is accomplished, businesses can compete for their spending. Small town merchants can benefit by cooperating to create a shopping environment that induces local spending."

In communities where large amounts of consumer spending are being lost, leaders and merchants will find it advantageous to work together to develop strategies for attracting consumer spending.

model. Money "saved" at the time of purchase is actually paid out several times over in later years. At this time of year, when many Texans are contemplating replacing worn-out or inefficient air conditioneres, it is important to make energy-wise purchase decisions.

For many types of appliances, including hot water heaters, refrigerators and room air conditioners, helpful information may be found in the familiar black-andyellow EnergyGuide labels attached to each model. These labels show how the energy consumption of a particular model compares to similar models. Many consumers feel intimidated by these labels, but most appliance sales representatives are more than willing to explain what the labels mean. And some utility companies will provide customers with information that will help in selecting new appliances.

Annual fund-raiser set Saturday, May 2

Each year members of L'Allegra Study Club sponsor a plant sale with proceeds used to benefit the community. Some of the money has been used to purchase medical equipment for Deaf Smith General Hospital, buy draperies for the Hereford Community Center and assist with the funding at Girlstown, the YMCA and Satellite Work Training Center. This year members will be selling geraniums beginning at 9:30 a.m. Saturday, May 2, at Sugarland Mall. The plants are excellent for beautifying a garden as shown by (from left) Jan Weishaar, club treasurer; Hilda Perales, corresponding secretary; and Mary Kay McQuigg, president.

Study club discusses endangered species

The Pioneer Study Club met recently at Something Special.

Hazel Ford was hostess and gave the invocation. Willie Wimberly led the Pledge of Allegiance and Salute to the Texas Flag.

After luncheon, Bessie Hill presented the program on "Preservation of Endangered Species: Animals and Plants.

She stated: "All living things are part of a complete, delicately balanced system called the biosphere, which is composed of ecosystems: the set of interrelationships between plants and animals and their physical environment. Working in close cooperation with the Humane Society of the United States; the G.F.W.C. President's special project-Preservation of Endangered Species-presents an opportunity for all club members to be involved in the future of the biosphere. What we do affects the eco-system, whether we plow the soil, cut down a tree, build a dam, urbanize an area or dispose of wastes

The rate of extinction today exceeds that of any prior period in earth's history. Many believe that by the end of this decade, the earth will lose more species each week than the scientists estimate disappeared over the previous three centuries."

Hill suggested that groups and individuals should join the Humane Society of the U.S., the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, the U.S. Forest Service, and National Marine Fisheries Service to help turn this critical problem around and protect all species in the nation.

President Mary Panciera conducted the business meeting.

Serna, Reyna wedding vows spoken recently

Alice Serna of Hereford became the bride of Mario Reyna during an evening wedding ceremony April 6 at St. Anthony's Catholic Church of Hereford. Fr. Joe Egan of the church officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pedro Serna of Hereford and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Nemecio Reyna, Jr., of San Antonio.

Decorating the sanctuary were altar decorations of brass candelabra and two large arrangements of white gladioli enhanced with greenery.

Maid of honor was Rosie Serna, sister of the bride. Best man was Carlos Charles.

The bride's dress was styled with a high lace collar and lace-trimmed Victorian sleeves. Embroidered lace accented the bodice, and the full skirt swept into a chapel-length

To complete her ensemble, the bride wore a veil of silk illusion attached to a headpiece of tiny silk blossoms and pearls, with garlands crossing the forehead and draping the sides. Her jewelry included pearl

Independent scholars may learn more about libraries Dianne Pierson, director of Deaf Smith County Library in Hereford, will participate in Saturday's program for "independent scholars" set for 2:30 p.m. at Amarillo Central Library, 413 E. 4th.

Titled "Getting To the Facts," the program is a panel composed of representatives of the Harrington Library Consortium.

The program is free and is designed to help anyone interested in using libraries better. Areas to be covered in 15-20 minute segments by the speakers are "Some New Secrets of Reference Research" by Louella Stewart, Assistant Director for Public Services, Lynn Library and Learning Center, at Amarillo College; and "Independent Study Instructional Support Services" by Arvela Voth, Coordinator for Computer Aided Instruction, of the Lynn Library and Learning Center.

Also speaking will be Frances Jones, Director of Cornette Library, West Texas State University, on 'Finding and Using Government and Historical Documents." "Audio-Visual" and "Tracing the Book from Acquisitions to Cataloguing to You' will be addressed by Karen Ruddy, Technical Services Director at Amarillo Public Library

The Hereford Brand-Sunday, April 26, 1987--Page 7B

Mrs. Ruddy will also address "The Trouble With Subject Matter Indexes." Dianne Pierson, Director of Deaf Smith County Library, will conclude the program with "How The Texas Panhandle Library System Can Work For You.

The Harrington Library Consortium was formed in 1983 as a cooperative effort to automate and combine the library resources of Amarillo Public Library, West Texas State University, Amarillo College and Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center.

In 1984, an additional grant was secured to bring on line Deaf Smith County Library, Lovett Memorial Library in Pampa, and the libraries at Frank Phillips College, Austin Junior High School, and Caprock High School.

In 1985 Hutchinson County Library was added, and databases shared with Perry Memorial Library of Perryton, Carson County Libraries in Groom, White Deer and Skellytown; and Killgore Memorial Library of DUmas. Rhoads Memorial Library of Dimmitt, Friona Public Library and Canyon Public Library are in the process of being added this year.

The art of quilting, still popular today, has been practiced for thousands of years. Soldiers of the Middle Ages wore quilted coats and hoods under their armor.

A beaming Stuart Mitts was recently selected Sophomore of the Year by the Texas/Oklahoma district of Kiwanis, International. Each of the 38 divisions in the Texas/Oklahoma district sent a candidate into the competition. Out of these 38 entrants, only 10 were selected as Sophomores of the Year. Young Mitts received a certificate, plaque, and $300 scholarship during an award presentation by the sponsoring Hereford Kiwanis Club. A member of the Hereford High School Key Club, Mitts submitted a list of his activities and achievements in the competition. He is the son of Cal and Judy Mitts of Hereford.

Beef cook-off yields easy, tasty recipes

"I've been cooking ever since I was seven years old and had to stand on a box to reach the stove," said Alyne Lawson of Ore City, winner of the 1987 Texas Beef Cook-Off.

Alyne, grandmother of of four and soon-to-be great-grandmother, won the $500 First Prize with her "Steak For The 80's--Fine Dining At Home"-a panfried top loin steak served with a fresh thyme sauce.

Upon being asked the origin of her recipe, Alyne, with a twinkle in her eye, told of an occasion when her son took her to a fancy restaurant where the waitress handed her the check by mistake. "I almost fainted when I saw the cost of that meal," she said. "Oh, goodness," I told him. "I could prepare just as good a meal at home for a fourth of the cost!" So a friendly wager was made, and Alyne's winning recipe is the result.

The Texas Beef Cook-Off is sponsored by Texas CattleWomen (formerly Texas CowBelles), a nonprofit organization whose primary purpose is promoting beef.

The 10th Annual Texas Beef Cook-Off was held at the Embassy Suites Hotel in Austin on April 14.

Five finalists gathered to prepare their dishes for a judging team consisting of Kitty Crider, Food Editor of the Austin American-Statesman, J.E. Birdwell, president of Texas and Southwestern cattle Raisers Association, Mike Bowles, pastpresident of Texas Cattle Feeders Association, Sue Sims, gournet cooking teacher and food consultant and wife of Representative Bill Sims), and Anne Anderson, a dietitian and Executive Director of the Texas Beef Industry Council.

The second place winner, who was awarded a $300 beef gift certificate, was Brenda Adams of Irving with her recipe for Hot Spicy Pepper Steak. Janine Williams of San Antonio received a $100 beef gift certificate as the third plce winner. The two runners-up, Michelle Mueller of Seguin and Martha Pior of San Antonio, each received a $50 beef gift certificate.

In addition to receiving the First Prize of $500, Mrs. Lawson will also receive an all-expense-paid trip to the National Beef Cook-Off, which will be held in September in Sun Valley, Idaho. At that time, state winners from all 50 states will compete for the Grand Prize of $5,000.

FIRST PLACE WINNER STEAK FOR THE '80s By Alyne Lawson Ore City, Texas

4 beef top loin steaks (about 2 pounds), cut 34 inches thick 2 cloves garlic, minced 14 cup butter, divided

1 cup quartered fresh mushrooms 14 cup shallots, minced 12 teaspoon salt

Nursing test scheduled

A pre-entrance test for the vocational nursing program at South Plains College in Levelland is scheduled for April 27.

4 teaspoon freshly ground black

Cook garlic in two tablespoons butter in large frying pan over medium high heat for one to two minutes. Add mushrooms and shallots and continue cooking two to three minutes. Remove from frying pan to small bowl, cover, and set aside. Quickly cook steaks in remaining butter in frying pan over high heat-two minutes on each side or to desired doneness. Season with salt and pepper and place on a warm platter. Add mushroom mixture to pan and bring to a boil. Cook and stir until slightly thickened-about one to two minutes.

4 cup peach brandy

1/4 cup dry sherry

4 teaspoons good prepared mustard 1 teaspoon beef drippings sauce (not beef broth)

1 teaspoon snipped thyme

Mix well in a sauce pan the peach brandy, dry sherry, mustard, and beef drippings sauce. Heat, but do not boil. Spoon sauce over steaks and sprinkle with thyme.

Approximate preparation time: 35 minutes. Serves 4.

> SECOND PLACE WINNER HOT SPICY PEPPER STEAK By Brenda Adams Irving, Texas

2 pounds tenderized beef round steak (cut into 11/2-inch X 1/4-inch strips) 3 tablespoons soy sauce 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

3/4 teaspoon ginger 11/2 tablespoons cornstarch 3/4 cup picante sauce (medium) 4 tablespoons vegetable oil 1 garlic clove, minced cut into short thin strips 1 cup sliced fresh mushrooms 6 green onions, cut into 3/4-inch pieces 3/4 cup water

2 cups cooked rice fresh parsley and lemon slices, optional

1 medium sized red or green pepper,

Combine soy sauce, Worcestershire sauce, ginger, cornstarch, and picante sauce in small bowl and set

Over high heat in large skillet or wok, heat 2 tablespoons of the oil until hot but not smoking. Add meat and stir-fry 2 to 3 minutes. Remove with slotted spoon and set aside. Drain skillet (if necessary).

Heat remaining 2 tablespoons oil in skillet. Add garlic, peppers, mushrooms and onions to skillet. Stir-fry 3 minutes. Return meat to skillet. Stir picante sauce mixture to blend ingredients, then pour into skillet. Add water. Cook and stir about 1 minute or until sauce thickens. Serve over hot rice.

Approximate preparation time: 30-45 minutes. Serves 6-8.

> FLORENTINE BEEF ROULADES By Michelle D. Mueller Seguin, Texas

1 beef flank steak, a bout 1 pound (see

3 tablespoons vegetable oil 1/4 cup diced onion

3 large cloves garlic, crushed 1 package (10-ounces) frozen leaf spinach, thawed and drained 1/2 cup coarsely grated Mozzarella cheese 1 teaspoon salt 1/2 teaspoon black pepper 2 cans (28-ounces) whole tomatoes, drained and chopped

1/4 cup chopped fresh parsley Steamed broccoli florets and baby

Divide flank steak into 4 equal pieces, cutting in half lengthwise then crosswise. Cut each piece in half horizontally to make 2 thin slices, resulting in 8 thin slices altogether. Place each slice between two sheets plastic wrap. Using meat pounder or rolling pin, pound so each measures 5x3 inches. Set aside.

In1 0-inch skillet over medium heat, heat 1 tablespoon oil. Add onion and 2 cloves garlic. Cook about 5 minutes, stirring occasionally until tender. Remove onion mixture to medium-size bowl. Add spinach, Mozzarella cheese, 1/2 teaspoon salt and 1/4 teaspoon pepper and mix well. Spread equal portions of spinach mixture over beef slices, leaving narrow border uncovered on all sides. Roll each slice jelly-roll fashion, starting with one 3-inch side. Secure roll at each end with string.

Note: One pound beef eye round steak may be substituted for flank steak. Carefully cut round steak into 8 slices; pound each piece to about 4x4 inches

Approximate preparation time: 45 minutes. Serves 4.

Helping With Cook-Off

The male peacock's brilliant back feathers are called a train, and are about five times as long as the bird's body

Mrs. Argen Draper

We wanted electricity but nobody would serve. Then. . . Deaf Smith Electric Delivered!

And believe me it was the brightest day of our lives. Our rural area was not considered profitable for electric service and we had to make-do the best way we could. Then Deaf Smith Electric delivered power to our place and our lives were transformed.

We own the system, we enjoy a marvelous electric service, and we share in $51/2 million in capital credits. Deaf Smith was, is and will be the greatest friend possible for rural people.

If you want to see the future, take a look at the past.
