Radiators Crankcases Cylinder Heads Cost Money and Time

To avoid cracked cylinder heads, broken crankcases and other expensive damage due to freezing, make sure at once that cooling systems of tractors and engines in storage are drained. Machines used during frosty weather should be drained at the end of every run.

I. H. C. and McCormick-Deering Machinery Needs Care In Cold Weather

Three openings must be made to drain the cooling systems of the following tractors and power units: T-20, F-30, I-30, P-30; current and late type 15-30 (22-36) tractors, Model 30 Industrial and Model 300 power unit with thermostat in water outlet manifold. These three openings are: (1) Winged drain cup under radiator; (2) Pipe plug or drain cock close to or in crankcase water inlet elbow at lower part of crankcase, left side; and (3) Pet cock on top of water outlet manifold above cylinder head.

One opening only is required to drain all 10-20, Model 20 Industrial No. 20 TracTrac-Tor, regular Farmall tractors, Model 200 power units, and 15-30 tractors not having thermostatic type water control. This is the winged cap under the radiator. Removal of plug under flange on lower water tank of radiator drains L. H. C. powered F-12 Farmalls.
