Doctor Uses Ancient Science To Control Smoking, Treat Pains

By PAUL SIMS Managing Editor

Chinese doctors back in 2,000 B.C. killed pain by inserting sharp stone needles into designated points on the

They did not know how acupuncture worked, only that it was their most effective way of treating numerous ailments.

Four-thousand years later, acupuncture still lives. It has gained wide acceptance in the western hemisphere, and most states permit physicians to use it as a form of therapy.

About six months ago, acupuncture made its way to Hereford--via Dr. Edwin Hui, a Hong Kong native who has studied the ancient science for the last 11/2 years, training primarily at the Acupuncture Foundation of Canada in Toronto.

Hui uses acupuncture to control cigarette addiction and relieve various pains, particularly migraine headache, chronic low back pain and musculoskeletal disorders of the neck and shoulder. Needles, much finer than the honed rocks used by the ancient Chinese, are selectively inserted into a few of the approximately 1,000 acupuncture points on the body, and an electrical current-something else the Chinese did without-is passed through the needles into the nervous system.

"I'm treating two or three people a day for smoking," Hui said. "This theraputic technique for treatment of addiction first occurred in 1963, when a neurosurgeon in Hong Kong, employing acupuncture to achieve surgical anaesthesia, happened to treat a narcotic addict going through withdrawal symptoms. "This happened by accident. The neurosurgeon happened to be operating on an addict involved in a car wreck. After the needles were inserted for the pain, the patient immediately experienced a suppression of the withdrawal symptoms. The neurosurgeon subsequently experimented, and he found it to be an extremely effective way of suppressing narcotic withdrawal. He's now treating about 60 narcotic addicts a Hui said a two-year study done by that neurosurgeon showed that 51 percent of the addicts who had undergone acupuncture stayed off hard drugs. Methadone, a more widely-used treatment for heroin addiction, is 36 percent effective, Hui said.

"Since cigarettes contain nicotine, it was felt that people could be addicted to nicotine in a manner similar to narcotic addition. Therefore, this treatment technique has been applied," Hui said.

A study done by the acupuncture foundation in Toronto showed that 60 percent of all smokers who underwent acupuncture treatments were able to kick the habit and 20 to 25 percent smoked less than half their original amount of cigarettes.

"But, for it to work, you have to make up your mind to quit. That is because, cigarette smoking is predominately a physiological dependence. Acupuncture treats the physiological dependence by suppressing the physical withdrawal symptoms, but it plays a very little part in helping patients out of their psychological dependence," Hui said.

A smoker seeking help from Hui first receives a physical examination and various laboratory tests. "If the patient is considered to be a candidate for acupuncture, he'll be asked to come back for treatments," Hui said.

For effective control of cigarette smoking, it usually requires anywhere from four to six treatments. The first three treatments are given in the same week and, depending on the response of the patient, one to three additional treatments are applied in the following one to two weeks.

Two needles are inserted into acupuncture points in each ear, and an electrical current is applied to the needles for apprxoimately 30 minutes.

The patient experiences only minimal discomfort during the entire process. At the end of each session, Hui presses tiny needles back into the same acupuncture points, and tape is ap, lied to allow the patient, who wears the needles until his next treatment, to press them periodically for stimulation.

"The patient receives intense stimulation in the office, and maintenance stimulation by pressing on the needles manually until his next treatment," Hui said. Soon, his dependence on cigarettes disappears.

How does it work? "For a long time, nobody knew," Hui said. "It was just trial and error that derived and evolved this system.

"The needle stimulates peripheral nerves causing nerve messages to produce an effect either locally--at the spinal-cord level--or centrally--at the thalamic-pituitary level. The needles set up nerve impulses. Anytime you stimulate nerves, there'll be a reaction either at the spinal-cord level or other higher levels.'

It is the reactions at the various levels of the body which enable the patient to find relief.

Hui said the reason for acupuncture's

"In the last few years, there has been some very definitive scientific evidence which indicates that stimulation of some (See ACUPUNCTURE, Page 2) effectiveness goes even deeper.

An experiment to improve communications between the speaker of the Texas House of Representatives and his constituents has been successful enough to ensure its continuation for probably a second year

In September, 1977, House Speaker Bill Clayton of Springlake introduced what he called "a district office on wheels" as a means of providing assistance to the people in District 74.

The office was a van; its driver Bill Sarpalius, a voung, ex-vocational agriculture teacher at Boys Ranch whom Clayton dubbed his district office manager. Sarpalius comprised a schedule of communities where he would drive the office to each week

Sarpalius has since visited each of the approximately 30 towns in the district at least every two weeks, meeting people and helping them with their problems. Before he began the visits. Sarpalius spent time in Austin, going through state agencies to learn everything he could about the operations of the state

"It's all justified itself tremendously." said Sarpalius, whose residence is in Hereford. "We'rve reached people on a one-to-one basis. Some people in these towns, when I pull up, they're standing there waiting for me.

"A lot of people will see the van as I drive through town, and they'll think of something they want to ask. Yeah, I'd say it's been a success."

Inside the van, which has logged about 18,000 miles since the project began, are filing cabinets full of information concerning various state agencies and all the laws created by the last session of the Sarpalius also has set up an office in his house by refurnishing a bedroom. In that office he has a teletype, more files, and a direct telephone line to Clayton's Austin

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - Gov. Delph Briscoe called a special session of the legislature for July 10 but he's not sure what tax relief measures he will present the lawmakers.

"I have concluded that our best hope for real tax relief for our citizens requires action now." Briscoe told a news conference Friday afternoon

He said he would meet with Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Speaker Bill Clayton after the July 4th holiday, probably Wednesday, and discuss the rest of the

"I may not say what the other subjects are until the session opens." he said. Briscoe said that "as a practical matter" he expected the session to last at least two weeks. This means the Senate will be asked to confirm the long list of appointments Briscoe had made since the last special session, which started July Special sessions, which may be called only by the governor, are limited to 30 days.

Briscoe said the call would include essentially the items he supported in his unsuccessful campaign against Attorney General John Hill, including:

-Repeal of the 4 percent sales tax on utility bills.

Steers Mutilated In Northwest County

Law enforcement authorities and ranchers in the northwest part of Deaf Smith County are baffled over a series of recent steer-mutilation incidents, the latest of which was discovered Friday afternoon.

An 800-pound steer owned by James Bullard was found mutilated near the Bippus community at 2 p.m. Friday. The animal's lips, tongue and rectum had been removed, and someone had apparently cut the steer from the corner of its mouth to the jaw.

Bullard said there was no blood on the ground neaf the animal. "There was a little blood oozing out of a hole in its neck near the jugular vein." Bullard said

"It has to be witchcraft or something like that--some kind of nuts. Nobody kills a steer to eat its tongue and buns."

Bullard said he has had three other steers die "suddenly" in the same area lately. "but I don't know if they died from bloat or what. We didn't think about checking them. I finally got around to telling a fellow who works with me to check the next one that died. He did, and the steer had been killed.

Hereford Bi-Products manager Garth Merrick, who picked up the steer from Bullard's property, said that whoever killed the animal "did a neat job--it looked like it was done with a surgically sharp instrument.

Merrick said he did not know if blood had been drained from the animal "but there wasn't as much blood coming out of him as there normally is. "I have no idea who would do something like this. Martians, maybe. It was sure somebody a little bit weird." Another county resident in the

Fireworks Display Scheduled

The annual Fourth of July fireworks celebration will begin at approximately 9:30 p.m. Tuesday in Veteran's Park.

The 30-minute show--free and open to the public--will be sponsored by the City of Hereford. The Hereford Volunteer Fire Department will shoot the fireworks.

Fire Marshal Jay Spain has asked that people not use the south road to the park in order to allow firetrucks out of the area should a fire occur during the show. The north road to Veteran's Park off

U.S. Highway 60 will be open, Spain said. "We need to remind people again not to shoot off their own fireworks inside the park. We had some problems with firecrackers and other fireworks last year," Spain said.

Hereford Police Capt. Ray Morgan said, "It is against the law for anyone other than the fire department to shoot off firecrackers during the show.

"We've had at least four complaints already about firecrackers damaging cars and other things. We ask that people refrain from this. If we have to file on these people, there's going to be a fine."

Children Kept Caged In Northeast Texas

HOOKS, Texas (AP) - County welfare officials have taken away three of James "Chief" Williston's children because they found them naked, covered with dirt and excrement, and penned in a chicken-wire cage behind his shack. The children ranged in age from 1 to 2.

"I had them back in the pen, I made me a little, old pen to keep the babies in. so they wouldn't get out on the highway," said Williston, 57, a fullblooded Choctaw Indian who says he has two wives, both retarded, and four other children living at home.

Bowie County Sheriff Earl Sabo said the pen was about 4 feet by 6 feet, and about 3 feet high - "just tall enough for them to stand in.

Williston and his family live on U.S. 82 west of this Northeast Texas community. The other four children range in age from 11 months to 5 years.

"Herman is the one that's 5, and he'll be starting to school soon, if they don't take him away too. They're trying to get my other babies now," he said.

The welfare officials, accompanied by sheriff's deputies, drove 18 miles from Texarkana Thursday afternoon after a cali from a woman who lives near Williston.

"She turned the kids in about being naked and in the pen, starved to death and no water. She told a big story, because those kids were well fed, and I kept them in there because I didn't want them to get on that highway 82 and get run over," Williston said.

Bob Crane's Murder Called Well-Planned

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) - The bludgeon murder of actor Bob Crane was not a crime of passion, but a "well-planned" killing, the Maricopa County medical examiner says.

Among those interviewed Friday was Los Angeles businessman John Carpenter, a long-time friend. Police said he was with Crane much of Wednesday night and early Thursday morning. He is not a suspect, police said.

Police Lt. Ron Dean, who heads the murder investigation, said the killer 'could have been someone he (Crane) knew since there were no signs of a struggle...or forced entry." The actor's apartment door was unlocked, although acquaintances told police Crane was known to bolt it. Police said they have ruled out robbery as a motive.

Fingerprints were found, but none has been identified in connection with the slaying, Dean said.

Crane, 49, former star of the long-running television series, "Hogan's Heroes," was discovered Thursday murdered in his apartment, his skull fractured by two blows to the head and an electrical cord around his neck. The murder weapon, police said, was "of the shape and size of a tire iron" but no such instrument has been found. The cord did not contribute to his death, Karnitschnig

Shatwell Innocent Of Perjury Counts

Shatwell said the verdict ended "a year and a half nightmare."

The senator exchanged kisses, hugs and handshakes with friends and relatives in the courtroom, saying "bless you' to many of them.

"I'm just humbled." Shatwell said. "I want to thank my wonderful family ... and two of the greatest trial lawyers in the country," state Sen. Gene Stipe and Larry Oliver, the Shatwell defense team.

Message to Hart

PRYOR, Okla. (AP) - In his marathon search for details of the investigation into last year's slayings of three Girl Scouts, attorney Garvin Isaacs stumbled across information potentially damaging to his client Friday. Gene Leroy Hart, 34, is charged with three counts of first-degree murder in the sex slayings of three young Scouts June 13, 1977 at Camp Scott, a northeastern Oklahoma summer camp.

A preliminary hearing to determine whether the state has enough evidence to hold Hart for trial began June 7. The state rested its case in six days after calling 23 witnesses.

Isaacs has called 53 witnesses in six days, and faces a court-imposed deadline after two more days of testimony on Monday and Thursday of next week.

Isaacs called a witness Friday who he told reporters he realized would be "hostile" to the defense.

Thomas Pittman, a handwriting analyst, said outside of court Friday that he believes there is "no question" that a cave message claiming "the killer was here," was written by Hart.

But Pittman, 47, of Muskogee, was stopped from testifying about his opinion when Isaacs challenged his expertise on the subject.

But. Bullock emphasized that the story was not all bad. There is a vast difference in the tax structures and taking authority in California and Texas. For example, California has a personal income tax that costs the average household $400 a year; they have a gasoline tax of 7 cents a gallon; employers pay higher unemployment insurance taxes, and the property taxes, with the rollback, are still higher

Texas is one of the few states with no personal income tax; there is no corporate income tax; the gasoline tax is just 5 cents a gallon-one of the lowest in the nation; Texas employers have one of the lowest unemployment insurance tax rates; and, overall. Texas has the second lowest tax burden per capita in the nation.

Technical Revolution Behind Deeper Search for Oil Reserves

drilling deeper and deeper these days in the search for new reserves and Max G. Pitcher says a seismic-computer technical revolution is a major factor behind such operations.

Pitcher is vice president for North American explorations for Continental Oil Co.

"We are seeing more deep prospects today because of our seismic data enhancement at these depths," he said.

"Heavier equipment and more sophisticated computer processing have opened provinces to us that were seismically invisible in prior years."

The current seismic-computer technical revolution, Fisher said, has produced impressive results.

Pitcher said Continental has 85,000 gross acres and 36,400 net acres in the area 75 miles east of Atlantic City.

"Even though the government has extended all Baltimore Canyon leases seven months due to the drilling injunction, we will need to remain active to get our leases evaluated during the remainder of their term," he

Pitcher said data obtained from a stratigraphic information well drilled in the Baltimore Canyon by industry participants was encouraging.

"As we interpret the data, mature source rocks and good reservoirs were encountered in this well which was drilled in 1976," he said.

Pitcher said Continental followed its technology and spent $58 million to gain majority lease ownership on the largest structure in the sale. -

"Our leases in the Baltimore Canyon are not on top of the Enterprise structure, it is flank acreage, and while we are optimistic for the province as a whole, finding commercial hydrocarbons under a specific drill site is risky," he said.

considers imposing tariffs on imports, President Carter wants to know what effect it will have on inflation, Ambassador Robert S. Strauss said Friday.

Strauss, who is Carter's trade ambassador and his chief inflation adviser, said Carter is avoiding "the politically expedient course of protectionism."

In a speech to the Texas State Bar, Strauss said every time relief has been granted, "it was tailored for the least possible inflationary impact without being unfair to American

"But if the cost of goods is held down by artificial means, such as dumping, or subsidies, or predatory pricing, then we have only an artificial savings

High Production cost!

Get Tough, Jimmy!

How can we control inflation? And is the President's inflation strategy a realistic means of getting inflation under control? Leading economists disagree greatly on the proper approach to our inflation crisis.

Former Federal Reserve Chairman Arthur Burns has commended President Carter for attacking the inflation problem as the nation's number one priority. In addition to the voluntary wage and price policies the President has adopted, Arthur Burns suggests the President act more boldly:

"A salary increase of 7 percent is indicated for federal employees. The President ought to cut it in half. I would have moved more boldly. I would have liked to see the President cut his, own salary and invite all presidential appointees and members of Congress to do tikewise. As ar as corporate executives are concerned, ! would have requested or suggested to top corporate executives that their salaries remain entirely unchanged for a period of two years."

Economist and former presidential adviser Pierre Rinfret believes the key to attacking inflation goes beyond talking down wages and prices:

'I think the President has to start by setting examples: (1) Stop the federal budget from going up. (2) Try and drive down the deficit. (3) Stop introducing legislation that is inflationary; the phrase I use is inflation by legislation. I think he sets the example. Then, he sets up targets for the rest of society. Look, this has been your complaint, this is our response to your complaint, this is what we're going to do and we would like you to try to work on it, and I think if he started to set the example, the rest of society would follow."

Both Pierre Rinfret and Arthur Burns point out that it took a long time for inflation to develop and solving the problem will also take a long time. One thing is certain, however, the President is not short on inflation-solving advice to ponder.

Any horse fancier will tell you a loose rein works better than a tight rein.

The same applies to the economy, and is the main issue in the current Washington debate over the Humphrey-Hawkins bill and the goal of a stable, growing economy. Just as a horse usually performs better when given his head, so the economy is likely to improve when the government allows it to. It's a matter of subtlety: creating a climate for natural forces to work with a slight tug here, an encouraging nudge there, rather than by whipping the animal half to death and yanking on his reins, which happens (figuratively) when government burdens the economy with big spending and regulatory programs.

Humphrey-Hawkins, awaiting Senate action, is a "tight rein" bill. True, it is not as bad as some grandiose schemes of the past, but it does estabish goals in employment that many economists consider outdated and unrealistic. And by setting those goals it builds up pressure for implementing them with make-work projects and the infusion of billions of dollars.

The best that can be gained by such an approach is an initial spurt in temporary jebs, bought at the cost of increasing inflation which, recent history has demonstrated, leads to a slowdown and ultimately the loss of many more jobs than were initially provided.

We prefer to see the economy operate on a loose rein - less regulation, less spending, less nitpicking red tape for business and individuals, less inflation, and more encouragement for business to invest, create jobs and keep the economy moving down the track.

Real Riches

"Is it so," began the assessor, "that you have

"Yes," said the minister, "I am a rich man." "In that case," said the visitor interestedly, pulling out his book, "I shall have to assess you. What are your possessions?" "I am enjoying good health," said the preacher,

'and health is worth very much." "Well," said the caller, "what more have you?"

"I have a good wife--worth more than diamonds." -

"Congratulations," exclaimed the tax man, "but don't you own more?'

"Yes, I have healthy, intelligent, upright sons and daughters, and that is a possession of which any man can feel rich.' "Do you own anything else?" asked the inquirer. "Yes, I own citizenship in the United States, and an assured inheritance in Heaven. What more could a man own?" "But, don't you own any money or real estate?"

"No, otherwise I own nothing," said the man happily.

'My friend," said the assessor, as he closed his book, "you are indeed a rich man, and your riches no man can take away-not even the government."

Another, similar, method is to limit the growth of total taxes either to increases in personal income, or to increases in total economic activity, or to the rate of inflation. Such limits leave politicians the freedom to move funds from one budget cate to another and allow for reasonable growth of government to keep up with the growth of the society, while still

THE EIGHT TRACK SUPER PREACHER

They have computers for everything else why not have one to do our preaching for us? Think of the possibilities.

All of the sermons ever preached could be fed into its memory and be recalled at the flip of a switch. The computer could choose the ideas that fit and deliver a masterpiece each Sunday. No more boaring sermons. No more wangy preacher tones. No more sermons lasting past twelve o'clock. There could be an automatic cut-off switch built-in which stops the machine on time no matter what is being said.

The churches could have some great things to advertise each Sunday on the Church page: Such as:

Come to our Lady of The Homecoming Queen Baptist Church our computer sounds like Tom Landry. The message this Sunday is the Power of Positive Winning.

Try our computer at Grace Church. It sounds like Billy

Or the computer at Hope Catholic delivers the high mass in Latin for the conservatives; English for the more modern, or shorthand for those with early tee times.

This is of course quite far fetched. How would a church ever agree on which computer to buy and how it should be programed. They cannot agree now and programing is not even possible. Seems like we try to program anyhow. Every preacher knows the pressure to be whatever he isn't. If he appeals to one group he turns off another group.

All of this means my latest invention has a real market. I shall produce an eight track Super Preacher.

When the congregation gathers they will be given ear phones just like the airlines use. Some churches may want to rent the ear phones if the offerings are poor. The earphones are plugged into a console at each seat and a channel is selected. Each channel has its own brand of Sermonic application:

Public Comments Usually Reserved

WASHINGTON (AP) - You can influence public policy.

But most people don't take advantage of their right to do so. Under the law, federal agencies are required to give the public a chance to comment on proposed rules and regulations. Only the most controversial plans draw more than a few dozen letters and even then, the number is tiny by comparison with the overall population.

Officials generally say they believe they are getting more comments than they used to, but no one could provide any figures. The number of people interested depends on the subject - only five comments were received on a plan to set new standards for canned clingstone peaches; almost 5,000 came in when the Department of Agriculture proposed letting meat contain tiny pieces of ground bone.

The record shows that public participation CAN influence public policy.

When the Federal Highway Administration, for example, proposed converting road signs to metric measurements by Dec. 31, 1979, at a cost of $100 million, it got 5,000 comments, nearly all negative. The idea was shelves. A USDA proposal for grading ice cream also was dropped, when it became clear from the comments that people did not understand what the plan would mean.

The first indication that a rule is in the offing comes when the proposed regulation is published in the Federal Register, a daily newspaper issued by the government. The more controversial issues generate publicity in the news media and from consumer groups. That publicity pulls comments.

Clingstone peach standards were not controversial. Hence five letters. Four of the comments were in favor; the fifth was from a letter writer who complained that peaches stored in the refrigerator after opening often spoil. The standards were approved.

Ground bone was controversial. The USDA's Food Safety and Quality Service got 4,532 comments on the plan to allow meat to be mechanically deboned - leaving some ground bone in the meat. There were 3,826 comments from individual consumers. Their major concerns were that the meat be clearly labeled and meet certain nutritional requirements. The USDA decided to okay the plan, but included labeling and nutritional requirements.

Here's a look at some other proposals, the number of comments received and the

-A Federal Trade Commission rule allowing price advertising in the eye care industry: 1,000 comments received, mainly in favor. Pending.

-A Treasury Department regulation allowing sale of wine in bottles larger than 3 liters: 89 comments, 95 percent in favor.

A National Credit Union Administration rule letting credit unions make long-term mortgage loans: 70 comments, all consumer comments in favor, a few, from banks, opposing. Approved.

-A Consumer Product Safety Commission plan to exempt some powdered aspirin products from child-resistant packages: 36 comments, more than half in favor. Approved.

Diet Important Says Health Exec

SEATTLE (AP) - Scientists should devote more energy studying how diet can cause or prevent cancer in humans than investigating sources of the disease in laboratory rats, says the president of the American Health Foundation.

Dr. Ernst L. Wynder also urged the food industry to work with scientists to discover ways to modify diets by reducing fats and cholestorol - two suspected causes of breast, colon and prostate cancers.

TP&WD Budget Will Change Little in 1979

AUSTIN - The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department will operate in 1979 at approximately the same budget level as the current year.

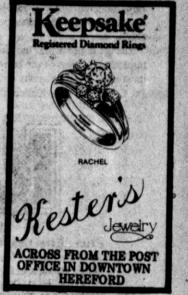

In a public meeting in Austin June 19, the Parks and Wildlife Commission made minor revisions to the 1979 budget request and asked for more staff review of certain sections of the budget, which will be within the $56.9 million appropriated by the Legislature.

A 3.4 percent pay increase and department payment of F.I.C.A. taxes already had been approved by the Legislature and is scheduled to go into effect Sept. 1.

The commission also made some changes in the department's 1980-81 budget request for appropriations of $66.6 million in 1980 and $68.7 million in 1981. The 1980-81 biennium request included a 10.2 percent salary increase each year, plus buying.... "Later, when defects are returns to the seller seeking repairs, he learns not only that his sales contract fails to hold the seller responsible, but also that the assertions about the mechanical condition of the vehicle may have been untrue."

Sound familiar? James P. Greenan, a hearing officer for the Federal Trade Commission, says he repeatedly heard this complaint against used car dealers and salesmen during 35 days of hearings he conducted in six cities between December 1976 and May 1977.

Things were held in Boston, Cleveland, Dallas, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Washington, D.C., on a proposed FTC rule which would require special window stickers on every vehicle on used car lots. The commissioners will decide later this year whether to require posting of the stickers.

The stickers would tell potential buyers such things as the total mileage a car had been driven, the major repairs performed on it and whether it previously was used by police or as a rental car.

The proposed FTC rule on the window sticker disclosures would apply only to businesses that sell used cars. More than half of all used car sales are private transactions between individuals, and they would not be covered by the rule.

Greeman's conclusion, published in a 250-page report on s the testimony of 244 witnesses, is that many used car dealers misrepresent the mechanical condition of vehicles they are no selling to unsuspecting conas sumers.

Ma A spokesman for the National Automobile Dealers Association was unavailable for comment. In the past, spokesmen for the used car industry have complained that the proposed *FTC rule would jack up their costs and mean higher prices for used car buyers.

Reed T. Draper, president of gethe dealers association, testified to during the hearings that dealers termust make sure customers anteceive satisfactory service to keep them returning for future

Greenan said the bulk of the mechanical information about complaints concerned misleadng oral representations by salesmen about a car's condition discovered and the buyer beyond any legal requirement in fixing problems in cars they have sold, Greenan said.

However, he added, "many dealers and their salesmen display little reluctance in making general assertions about mechanical condition for the purpose of encouraging the buyer's favorable disposition toward a particular vehicle."

Credit Unions Provide Impetus for Savings

HOUSTON (AP) - The big Houston where the wages are businessman can borrow millions. The middle-class worker can borrow thousands with the proper credit rating and collateral. The low-income worker has a problem getting a dollar.

There was a young man who worked at the Houston ship was zero because he had a reputation as a drunk.

One day the Immaculate Heart of Mary Federal Credit Union decided to lend him $10 for an emergency. The next week the loan was repaid.

The young man then borrowed $20, then $50, then $75, then enough for a second-hand car and finally a mobile home

Each loan has been repaid on time and Mrs. Margaret Garcia, manager of the credit union, told The Associated Press, should see them when they "after he repaid that $10 loan reach that point. They feel we were sure he was a good credit risk. He has proven that and since the first loan, he has not taken a drink."

There are other stories of the non-profit credit union working in the poverty pockets of low establishing a good credit rating is blocked by financial barricades built by many leading agencies.

Mrs. Garcia said the church-sponsored credit union attempts to encourage savings first and then take out loans for necessities, such as a car to get channel and his credit rating to a new job, or medical expenses, or schooling.

Mrs. Elvera Aldape, a cook in a Houston restaurant, saved a few dollars each week and eventually was able to borrow mand only one now behind in emough to send two children to payments and that is a total of the University of Houston and one to St. Marys's University in San Antonio.

Mrs. Garcia said, "We attempt to start with the children. They bring in their pennies and nickles and when they have $5.50, they own a share in the credit union. You proud. They feel rich. And, from these chidlren come the adults who save with us and borrow from us and establish credit throughout the city.

"Some of our members have called and said certain stores in Houston refused to accept the credit union as a reference. When that happens I am on the telephone the same day and let those stores know these are honest people who pay their bills and have a savings."

Jennette Johnson, credit union manager for a Houston recycling firm, said, "Our workers don't make much money, but many have started saving a few dollars each week. In the past eight months we have made many, many loans, Msgr. Joseph A. Fiorenza of the Catholic Diocese of Galveston-Houston, said, "We believe that the purpose of the credit union is to help people. Temporary Grasses Provide Grazing COLLEGE STATION -Fields lying idle this summer planting. They do not regrow can be put to good use by growing annual grasses for hay or grazing, says Don Dorsett, forage specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Annual grasses include hybrid sudan, sudan-sorghums or forage sorghums. Millet could be used in sandier soils.

"These annual grasses make rapid growth for high quality grazing or hay," points out Dorsett. Because they are annuals, they die after the growing season and the field from roots the following year."

Annual grasses take advantage of warm temperatures and adequate moisture to produce forage high in protein and digestibility until seedhead formation. After seedhead formation, protein and digestibility decline rapidly unless the grasses are used for grazing or hay, notes the forage specialist.

"As with any grass, fertility is a key factor in producing the desired amount of pasture or hay," says Dorsett.

Teachers Association Powerful Lobbyists

EDITOR'S NOTE: Which Austin lobby is most powerful? This, the second in a two-part series, explores some of the elements of lobby power and focuses on the Texas State Teachers

By LEE JONES clated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Ask a legislator or lobbyist who has the most powerful lobby in the Capitol and he'll probably name the one that whipped him the worst.

These names of lobbyists and organizations lobbying groups cropped up frequently in conversations about lobby influence: -Texas Trial Lawyers Assolation Phil Gauss

-Texas Motor Transportation Association Terry Townsend -Texas State Teachers Association Callie Smith and Jim Hooser -Marion "Sandy" Sanford, hired lobbyist for over a dozen organizations and businesses, including Houston Natural Gas, Alcoa and the Texas Association of Bank Holding Companies. "I've never seen Sandy fail," Rep. John Wilson, D-LaGrange, said of the young Houston lawyer.

-Texas Automobile Dealers Association Gene Fondren -Texas Good Roads Public Transportation Association Eugene

-Texas AFL-CIO Harry Hubard and Sheran Fricks

-Texas Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association Bill Abington -Texas Chemical Council Harry Whitworth

-Texas Railroad Association Walter Caven Who's the most influential?

"There's no question about it, school teachers and labor," said Sen. Bill Moore, D-Bryan, chairman of the powerful Senate State Affairs Committee and no fan of either lobby

Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin, who is friendly with both lobbies also named them first.

In terms of success last session, however, the TSTA came out second best to the good roads association, the choice of Rep. John Bryant, D-Dallas, as the No. 1. lobby. "All you've got to look at is the dollars they got out of the Legislature - over $500 million for their industry," he said. Bryant said the highway lobby's power flows from its close ties with the Texas Department of Highways and Public

Texas Death Toll Estimated at 33

AUSTIN - Colonel Wilson E. Friday, June 30, and midnight today estimated that terrific accidents during the 102-hour July 4th holiday weekend will claim 33 lives in Texas.

"July 4th is traditionally one of our more dangerous driving periods, and I am hoping that all Texans will do their best to prevent accidents," Speir said.

The DPS director asked that motorists join DPS Troopers in burning their low-beam headlights during daylight hours throughout the holiday period as a safe driving reminder to

"There was widespread citizen participation in this Light the Way for a Safe Holiday' program during the Christmas and New Year weekends, and we believe it had a very positive impact," Speir

Speir, director of the Texas Tuesday, July 4th, which is the official nationwide holiday period set by the National Safety Council. They will be keeping a close watch for drunk driving, excessive speeding and other hazardous violations.

Speir said that during the past two years, July 4th weekends have been 78 hours in length. There were 35 traffic deaths in Texas during the 1977 holiday period, and 48 in 1976.

During the 17th century, Am-sterdam was both a center for merchant fleets and the capital of Holland.

Wilson said state colleges and universities "get all they want," using state-paid officials and old grads to lobby for them. "When their ox is in a ditch, they can call on all these people who have graduated or support that college or university. They just say, 'If Texas wants it, vote for it. Or if it's for A&M, vote for it and be a good ol' A. UT and A&M were successful in the 1974 Constitutional Convention in maintaining the Permanent University Fund as their private preserve, he recalled. Caven, the railroad lobbyist, and Pickens, the medical lobbyist, have old wounds from bouts with the Texas Trial Lawyers Association and rank it at or near the top in legislative

"They are almost ready to wring the neck of the state whenever they want to... They do the best job. There are so many lawyers in the Legislature...They figure, 'If I can pass this bill, I can make a million dollars from my next fee,"' Caven said. Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange, said truckers have a high success rate and are "probably the most professional."

"I remember one time when their members came to town. They thought the thing to do was get the representatives drunk and were keeping them up all night... Their lobbyists went and got them and told them that's not the way you do things,' Callie Smith of the Texas State Teachers Association was asked if he disagreed with those who call TSTA the No. 1 lobby. "I don't think I would tend to disagree with them totally, but I would say also that we have a large membership," he said. making him the only lobbyist interviewed who ranked his group at or near the top. TSTA has over 140,000 members, and as Pickens said, "It's iust like in actuarial science, the law of big numbers helps." Last year, TSTA had 56 persons registered as lobbyists.

Sometimes TSTA scores big, as when they lobbied through fat raises in 1975, including a jump in the minimum for beginners from $6,600 to $8,000. But it has its failures, too, winning only a 5.75 percent pay boost in 1977.

Business lobbyists don't mention TSTA when asked to name lobbies with the most stroke.

Legislators sometimes say they are intimidated by TSTA's election year surveys of their views on teacher issues, which then are published in the organization's "Texas Outlook."

"If we only knew whether TSTA could bloc vote 'em," a lawmaker said last session.

Bryant questions TSTA's effectiveness, despite the potential voting power backing up its lobbyists' work.

The TSTA's very good at it. The TSTA guys run around behind the education committee chairman and the governor, piddling around and never have a definable position. They got cut out of the education bill, and we took up teacher salaries separately. They thought that was the worst thing that could happen to them, and it did," Bryant said.

"What they get is in spite of the TSTA, not because of the TSTA," said Rep. Hamp Atkinson, D-New Boston, a former TSTA members who serves on the House Education Committee.

Before House Speaker Bill Clayton's administration took over in 1975, TSTA usually had a friend at the helm of the House Education Committee - Dan Kubiak of Rockdale or the late George Hinson of Mineola. Sen. A.M. Aikin, D-Paris, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, and Sen. Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas, chairman of the Senate Education Committee, usually

Another influential House member, Rep. DeWitt Hale, D-Corpus Christi, is married to a teacher and often carries TSTA

Hale and Aikin, however, are in the last six months as legislators, having decided to retire.

TSTA's members sometimes can be their own worst enemies, hampering the effectiveness of their lobby. "Some of the most obnoxious lobbying I've seen has been TSTA lobbying," says a legislator who is generally friendly to The lawmaker recalled the time in 1975 when some San Antonio teachers left a note, "Why weren't you in your office when you are dealing with the most crucial issue in the state?"

"I wasn't in my office because I was out at Memorial Stadium" for a rally attended by 35,000 teachers seeking higher pay, the lawmaker said. The same legislator said, however, that TSTA can be counted on to furnish accurate information on education faster than the Texas Education Agency. The numerous local teacher associations that are active politically are a TSTA asset but occasionally become a liability, as when Kerrville teachers sought out an opponent for Rep. Jim Nugent, D-Kerrville, in 1976. Nugent, a rather unforgiving man, won and ever since has lost few chances to embarrass or thwart the TSTA. Smith said the overzealousness of some teachers "really doesn't annoy me. Sure they are a problem with some legislators. But members are also citizens of the state, and we can't control their actions and wouldn't try to." He said TSTA succeeds not only because of its numbers but also because its cause is right. "I have to believe that what we are working with the Legislature on is of importance to everybody in the state...I don't know many people who are against education as such," he said. "What it boils down to is they want money for their own pocket," snorts Nugent.

TSTA probably is no better and no worse than other lobbies. Its members might be less open to compromise, as some legislators say, but like all lobbies it plays the high stakes game of power and persuasion.

"It is the new hula hoop," Jeffrey Rosenberg said. "It is more than that. Skating is the new, sport."

Jeffrey Rosenberg, an athletic man of 28 who has no doubt where his head's at, had a hunch two years ago that skating could match jogging in this era of fitness as a pleasant start a craze than Venice, man? So he quit his job at Aardvark's Odd Ark and invested $1,200 in 25 pairs of skates and a van to rent them

"When you see somebody skating, you want to do it yourself," Jeffrey Rosenberg said. "It's contagious.

"Everybody has skated. Everybody knows how. And with today's skates, its such a soft, flowing rhythm. Your mind wanders. You enjoy the wind and the sun. It's a good feeling. "The first time I tried it, I'll Plainly, it worked. Now about 20 skate-rental shops have opened along the California coast from San Francisco to San Diego and Rosenberg has gone national.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) -Attorney General John Hill said Friday that Texas taxpayers will get cheated if they get tax limitation without changes in the property tax law.

Hill, Democratic nominee for governor, also told the special Senate-House committee on property taxes that he thought any action on limiting state and local taxes or putting a cap on state spending should wait until the 1979 Legislature.

However, Hill said he saw no reason why tax relief measures for the farmers, home owners and the elderly could not be handled at a special session. "It doesn't matter what "We need more time," he said. "If I am successful in November you have my word, as I promised in the campaign, I will veto any state tax bill that reaches my desk, so there is no immediate crisis. We have time to study these matters." On limitation of state spending, Hill said it would be better to consider that during the regular session.

Can Wimbledon Maintain Dignity after Success?

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) Wimbledon, dowager queen of all tennis tournaments. Austere. Changeless. Stauffy. Proud. A green-carpeted anachronism.

Now she reels from the heady wine of the modern boom. The question everyone asks: can she maintain her dignity? Can she survive?

She is choking from the glut of success.

The aisles dividing her 15 lush grass courts are now clogged with humanity. Every day it's wall-to-wall people on the rich areas along Old Church

Thousands queue up for tickets, wait patiently in all kinds of weather, pay $2.50 to get into the grounds and never see a ball hit with a racket.

"It's like trying to stuff a quart into a half-pint bottle." said one blue-coated committeeman of the All-England Tennis and Croquet Club, shaking his head. "I don't know what will be the outcome."

On Wednesday, the third day of the tournament, 38,290 poured through the gates. With less than 25,000 seats in the center court prices at $9, sold out for months, stadium and field court areas, more than 10,000 were immobilized.

Many of them stood - packed like sardines - just outside the southwest hall, blinking at changes on an electric scoreboard.

They cheered wildly as the scores changed. They strained for a look at one of the stars - a Bjorn Borg, an Illie Nastase, a Chris Evert or Billie Jean Kingelbowing their way into the dressing rooms.

"I touched him - I touched Vilas," a teen-age girl screamed in delight after Guillermo Vilas, the popular Agrentine, lost a third-round match to Holland's Tom Okker. Giggling, stampeding teen-agers infest the place.

This week there have been queues of anxious spectators stretching for more than a mile and half. Scores of them spent an all-night vigil.

On Thursday, 27,000 fans battled their way into the premises only to be drenched by an all-day rain. They never despaired. Not a shot was played. There were no refunds.

One man spent close to $12 in cab fars, waited for hours and finally got into the premises around 6 p.m.

"I just hoped to see Borg hit a shot," he said. He didn't begrudge the taxi fare or the $2.50 admission, on which there was no rain check.

"It's the English symdrome," said Ted Tinling, noted designer who has seen every Wimbledon since 1927. "This is an excursion for them. The punishment they take is part of the excitement.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) - Based on what he's learned this season in Grand National stock car racing, Al Holbert says he could probably knock a couple of seconds off his lap times if he went back again at tracks like Daytona and Talladega.

At the same time, drivers who are doing what Holbert used to do - compete in the International Motor Sports Association races for Grand Touring sports cars find they can step down to the smaller, less powerful IMSA Racing Sedans and knock a couple of seconds off the best times of the RS hotshots.

No one is sure whether that means someone like Holbert, who's two steps up the competition ladder, could go back to RS racing and be four seconds faster than everyone else or not. But it's a tantalizing thought.

It was reported this week that a researcher who compared the heights of several famous persons throughout history has come to an interesting conclusion: shorter people live longer than taller ones haven't heard such good news since I found out that Debby Boone recorded another song. (I heard "You Light Up My Life" so many times that I decided she was in love with Reddy Kilcwatt.)

But it is nice to have learned that there is a proven advantage to being 4 ft. 11 in. tall. I may always miss seeing the touchdown when the fans in front of me jump to their feet and I may never look a giraffe eyeball-to-eyeball, but at least I'll outlive them all-football fans as well as giraffes.

Do you know what it's like to walk into an elementary school and be told by the principal to get back to class? I was so intimidated that I scurried to the first room I saw and scooted into a little desk. I finally understand the new math.

I never get to go to an R-rated movie (yes, Mother it's true) without showing the manager the crow's feet around my eyes. I've even considered the thought of putting streaks of gray in my hair, but the lady at the cosmetic counter keeps telling me to come back when I grow up.

Well, I am grown up, it's just that my "up" is at a lower altitude than most people's.

This year, there was a popular song released, entitled "Short People," much to the chagrin of us little folks. To say the mildest criticism, the song was less than complimentary to its subject. After hearing it, tall people began to saunter with their heads in the trees, looking down upon those of us who are diminutive in stature. One man was humming "Short People" within my earshot so I ran over and bit him on the kneecap. I escaped without so much as a reprimand--he couldn't see anything but the top of my head.

Sometimes, it's even beneficial to be short. I can practically ride inside a Tonka truck without getting cramped, while my taller peers suffer an awful fate if they are forced to travel in a sports car. I think that the Japanese invented those tempting little bitty cars so as to get even with Americans for being taller. "Big American will have rots o' ruck in getting out of this," they head on anything, with the exception of the sink perhaps. Neither do I have to worry about being hit by a diesel truck; I could even check their axies as they pass overhead.

Even better, now I harbor the knowledge that the shorter one is, the longer the road of life that stretches out before him. I'm rather relieved to know that not only the good die young -- basketball players are right behind 'em.

That's a shortcoming if I ever heard of one.

Have you seen The Ladies Home Journal's latest issue yet? Included in its pages are the results of a survey of 800 junior and senior high school students throughout the country, who were asked to name the famous people they love and hate the most. Their answers are surprising.

They replied to the following questions: In your opinion, which famous man and which famous woman...

1. Is the most intelligent? Albert Einstein and Madame Curie

2. Brings the most laughter to the world? Bob Hope and Carol Burnett

3. Makes you angriest? Richard Nixon and Anita Bryant

Good Luck Party Planned July 11

Local residents will have the opportunity to extend best wishes to Miss Hereford Stephanie Stringer as she reaches for the Miss Texas-Universe title by attending a Good Luck dinner in her honor July 11.

The Chamber of Commerce Women's Division, which will ponsor Miss Stringer in the state beauty pageant Aug. 21 at El Paso, will be staging the upcoming dinner. All interested persons are asked to confirm their reservations by telephoning the Chamber of Commerce office, 364-3333. Tickets to the event will cost $6 each.

In addition to the dinner, a special style show will be presented, featuring Miss Stringer in the wardrobe which she will wear in actual state pageant competition. Her contest wardrobe has been donated by several local merchants.

Also preparing in the style show will be Miss Dee Ann Caison, Miss Hereford 1977, who will act as official hostess during the Miss Texas-Universe Pageant next month. Miss Caison was invited exclusively by the producers of the state pageant to serve as official hostess, the first time that anyone has served in that capacity.

Summer fashions will be modeled by Miss Teen Hereford Tammy Stringer and runners-up to the 1978 Miss Hereford crown, Kathy Wilson and July Hill.

Additional entertainment is planned, including an organ performance by Miss Caison.

The Good Luck Party will be the Chamber Women's Division's quarterly general membership meeting, according to Margaret Formby, president. All division members are urged to attend the event in support of the Chamber and the reigning Miss Hereford.

Carolyn Langley Weds In Methodist Sanctuary Here Saturday Afternoon

Lighted tapers set in two pairs of brass pyramid candelabra cast a soft glow in the sanctuary of First United Methodist Church Saturday afternoon for the double-ring marriage of Miss Carolyn Langley and Damon Charles Darden of Lubbock.

Green foliage trimmed the tapers, which were suspended in large twin pyramid candelabra flanking the altar. Mixed flowers in the bride's chosen colors were clustered in large urns atop pedestals in the chancel. The outer edges of the wedding scene were illuminated by smaller pyramid candelabra.

Performing the wedding ceremony was the bride's brother-in-law, the Rev. James E. Dorff, minister of Highland Park United Methodist Church at Dallas.

The bride, who was raised in Hereford, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earnest Langley, 502 Star St. The bridegroom, whose hometown is Lubbock, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Howard Darden, Lubbock.

Escorted to the altar by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of ivory silk chiffon and re-embroidered French Alencon lace designed by Phyllis for Bianchi of Boston. The gown was fashioned with a high scalloped neckline of lace, sheer English net yoke and princess waistline. Alencon lace jeweled with seed pearls and crystal beads was heavily appliqued on the bodice and deep, fitted cuffs of her bishop sleeves. Miss Payne, Hill United In Candlelight Wedding

A Unity candle nestled in a bouquet of white crystal chrysanthemums and babybreath was lit by Miss Frances Renee Payne and Cameron Charles Hill Friday afternoon in First Presbyterian Church as a symbol of their marriage.

The couple exchanged nuptial vows during a service conducted by the Rev. Doug Manning, pastor of First Baptist Church. Immediately behind the altar was a large arch candelabrum. entwined with greenery and flanked by spiral brass candelabra.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Gerald G. Payne. 237 Ranger Drive, and the bridegroom is the son of Francis W. Hill, 217 Ranger.

Serving as the couple's attendants were Miss Dana McLain of Hart, maid of honor, and best man, Wallace Hill, brother of the bridegroom.

Ushering guests were Brady Brookhart and the bride's brother, Gerald Payne Jr. of Austin. Another of the bride's brothers, James Payne, lighted the tapers at the altar.

As the ceremony began, Miss Donna Kendall rendered "Wedding Song" with Mrs. Bob Ward offering organ accompaniment. Miss Kendall sang "We've Only Just Begun" after the vows had been read. The bride, presented in marriage by her father, wore a formal wedding gown of snowflake chiffon designed by Priscilla of Boston. The dress was fashioned with Queen Anne neckline, long, Bishop sleeves and contoured waistline. Seed pearls and irridescent sequins were sprinkled on the reembroidered Alencon lace bodice over English net and chiffon. The shoulders and back yoke were sheer. Her full bishop sleeves were gathered into deep cuffs of Alencon lace over English net, jeweled with pearls. The cuffs closed with tiny self-covered buttons. The unadorned, full skirt fell in soft folds to a simple hemline and Chapel train.

Completing the bride's apfingertip veil of imported bridal illusion. A blusher veil was draped above a lower tier of illusion, which was edged in Alencon lace. The lace-covered headpiece was encrusted with pearls and sequins.

Gardenias, stephanotis, babybreath and English ivy were combined in a cascade, carried by the bride. She wore a diamond brooch with matching diamond earrings and ring.

The maid of honor was gowned in a formal-length dress of apricot-colored print chiffon. It was styled with ruffled neckline, cape sleeves and gathered flounce. The Sonja roses and babybreath in her cascade matched the flowers worn in her hair.

After the wedding, guests were invited to the church Fellowship Hall to congratulate the newlyweds. Miss Tami Lawson and Miss Terry Hetzel served cake while Miss Margaret Spearman of Pampa ladled punch.

Securing the signatures of guests was Miss Lisa Phillips.

The bride chose a mint green and white checked skirt and blouse with a mint green vest and white accessories as her traveling costume. The couple will be at home at Tulsa, Okla. following their honeymoon.

A 1976 graduate of Hereford High School, the bride is a iunior student at Texas Tech University, Lubbock, where she is a member of Chi Omega Sorority. The bridegroom graduated from HHS in 1975. He is currently enrolled in Spartan's

Glittering Glaze

Baking a ham today is an easy task, and glazing it for a special occasion isn't any more difficult. Glazing is done 15 to 30 minutes before the end of the cooking time, depending upon the amount of sugar in the glaze. If a second coating of glaze is desired, brush on only half the glaze initially. It's not recommended to spoon glaze that has become mixed with drippings over the ham, says the National Live Stock and Meat Board. This is because the drippings in the pan will dull the luster of the glaze.

Weighty Matters

Weight reduction means choosing foods with special select the meat for the menu when you look to pork. In the roast department you can consider a loin roast, fresh or cured ham or a fresh picnic shoulder. But you aren't limited to roasts. Pork chops are in the low calorie group as are pork tenderloin and a center ham slice. Broil or roast the meat and omit sauces, gravies and stuffings.

COLLEGE STATION - Best food buys at Texas grocery markets this week include dairy, poultry and fresh produce items. Gwendolyne Clyatt, reports.

Fish also offers budget buys, says Mrs. Clyatt, a consumer marketing information specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Her summar of current price-quality trends is as DAIRY - With production at a peak, look for features on milk, skim milk, yogurt, sour cream and several cheeses.

POUNTRY - Egg prices are low, but buy now, since they will go higher. Fryer chickens have attractive prices, and the summer outlook says they will stay "reasonable." Whole birds are the "key" feature.

Turkey roasts offer economy buys, along with whole birds weighing 10-14 pounds.

FRESH VEGETABLES - Best values are carrots, corn, onions and soft-shell squash.

Moderate prices appear on blackeve and cream peas, cucumbers, peppers and okra. Lettuce supplies are down, and some prices are drastically

FRESH FRUITS - Watermelon prices are down about 12 cents, or less, per pound in most stores, and peach prices are dropping. Banana imports are heavy, and they may have lower prices. Moderate prices appear on cantaloupe and honeydew

Ann Landers Keep Good Character

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My best friend's husband died last week. He worked for my husband. To all appearances they were a very happy couple. His wife (widow, really) asked me if I would clean out his desk because she couldn't bear to do it. Of course, I said yes.

At the bottom of the desk drawer I found a pile of filthy pictures. In a locked file cabinet (which I pried open with a screwdriver and hammer), I discovered dozens of obscene magazines, films, and gadgets - all pertaining to sex.

I wonder how many people who keep such things "semihidden" ever think of what might happen if they should die suddenly from a heart attack or in an accident.

I destroyed everything I found and now I wonder if I had the right to do it. Perhaps I should have boxed the stuff and sent it heel.

to her. Please advise, and thanks, Ann, for letting me get this off my chest. -- A Loval

DEAR LOYAL: You did the right thing. Sending your friend the garbage would have been extremely upsetting and possibly marred her fond memories of her husband and their life together.

And now I hope every person in my reading audience will put him- (or her-) self in the place of the man who died suddenly. Ask yourself, could your wallet. purse, or desk drawers stand the scrutiny of your family? If not, do something to protect them and yourself in the event that tomorrow you become a statistic.

DEAR ANN: I'm 5-9 in my stocking feet. Since I don't go barefoot you can figure me at 5-11 because I like a shoe with a

DEAR ANN LANDERS: 1 just took the "Prospective Parents Test" which appeared in your column and I'm glad it wasn't composed by you. It's off the wall, Annie.

I got a 63, which is pretty low but then I'm only 15 years old. My mom who is 50 took the test and got a 33! She has five children from 12 years of age to 18. Then my little sister took the test and scored higher than my mom -- a 53! This letter is to warn you to be prepared for a load of buckshot. You're sure to get it. -- Shook-A-Plenty

DEAR SHOOK! You are so-ooo-ooo-o right. That test generated a lot of complaints. Many people wrote to say the questions were goofy, others said that the wording was unclear, still others criticized the scoring. In any event, forget it, folks. It wasn't one of my better efforts and for lunch today I am eating a large hunk of humble pie, thank you.

Candlelight Ceremony Unites Area Couple

Marriage vows were pledged Saturday evening by Miss Odie Beth Lloyd of Plains and Kenneth "Kenny" Milton Altman of Stephenville in the sanctuary of First Baptist Church at Adrian. Bob Miller, pastor, officiated.

A candle arch at the altar formed the background for a smaller, heart-shaped candelabrum, dressed with fresh flowers. The kneeling bench was flanked by spiral brass candelabra, seven-branched candelabra and flowers with palms of woodwardie.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lloyd, Route 4, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Aubrey Altman of Plains.

Miss Vicki Lloyd of Muleshoe served as her sister's maid of honor in the processional, which commenced with the singing of "Sunrise, Sunset." Also preceding the bride down the aisle were Miss Donna Laminack of Plains and Mrs. Kellee Lloyd of Brookings, S.D., sister-in-law of the bride.

Attending the bridegroom were his father, who served as best man, and the bride's two brothers, Randy and Ricky Lloyd, both of Adrian.

Guests were escorted to their seats in the sanctuary by the bride's brother, Billy Lloyd of Brookings, S.D., and Jay West, cousin of the bride.

Bruce Peterson of Muleshoe vocalized "What A Difference You've Made in My Life," "Wedding Song," "I Couldn't Be Me Without You," and "Again," as well as the processional. For their recessional, the couple chose "I Can't Smile Without You." Accompanying Peterson were LeeAnna Whitten, organist, and Ninnette Boydstun, pianist.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a summer-theme wedding gown of white cotton eyelet. The dress was designed with a gathered, portrait neckline, edged in double ruffles, which formed brief, cap sleeves. A narrow band of lace encircled the natural waistline. Matching lace edged the contoured flounce of her full skirt, which swept into a Chapel train.

Completing her trousseau was a picture hat of white evelet, trimmed with matching ruffles and eyelet ribbon, plus streamers which cascaded from the crown at back. A cluster of fresh daisies also garnished the back of the hat.

Her nosegay was formed of white satin roses, stephanotis, and babybreath with satin picot streamers and seed pearls. For sentimental significance, she clasped a face handerchief belonging to her great-grandmother. Her jewelry included diamond stud earrings, a gift from her parents, and a gold wedding band owned by her maternal grandmother, Mrs. Lewis West. The bridegroom's grandmother, Mrs. Mary Lou-Hamilton, provided pennies worn in the bride's shoes.

The bride's attendants were gowned in identical dresses of apricot and white checked gingham, styled with white eyelet lace ruffles at the shoulders. Each dress was patterned with a wide ruffled flounce, trimmed in lace. They wore chokers of matching gingham with white daisies and babybreath. They carried nosegays of white daisies tied with apricot streamers. Guests were invited to a reception in the church Fellowship Hall immediately after the ceremony. The bridegroom's sister, Jena Easter served cake while Miss Kim Ehresman of Glenrio, N.M. poured coffee and punch. Miss Janice Wood of Grand Falls. presided at the guest registry.

The serving table was draped Apricot-tinted carnations and babybreath were arranged in a silver compote, which served as the centerpiece. Matching flowers embellished the threetiered wedding cake.

The bride's traveling costume was an apricot-colored street-length dress with a white gardenia corsage. The coupl after July 1.

The bride has taught English at Plains High School for the past three years. She is a graduate of Adrian High School and Texas Tech University at Lubbock. A graduate of Plains High School, the bridegroom is currently employed by STD Drilling Company of Santo.

father, the bride wore a formal wedding dress of sheer nylon over organza with Venise lace trim. Lace motifs outlined the cameo neckline of the fitted bodice, which was also appliqued with lace. Her elbow-length, sheer sleeves fell in two tiers, flaring from the shoulder. Narrow lace edged her sleeves and denoted the hemline of her A-line skirt, which swept into a Chapel train.

Her multi-tiered veil of bridal illusion billowed to her fingertips from a headpiece of Venise lace, jeweled with oval beads. Small flowers clustered around a cymbidium orchid in the bridal bouquet.

The bride's attendants were gowned in floor-length dresses of yellow fabric with an embossed rose on the yoke of each. They carried long-stemmed yellow roses. Her junior attendants wore slipper-length dresses of pink floral print fabric.

At Wits End BY ERMA BOMBECK

(Author's Note; This is one of a series on "How America Vacations" and how shots can help. Today's column deals with the ever-popular camping.)

The first thing you notice is the convoy of vehicles groaning under the load of supplies of equipment, headed out toward the campgrounds where they set up food tents, toilets, sleeping facilities and map out the strategy for the week. They call it camping.

We use to call it World War II.

There are various degrees of camping, depending on your adventurous spirit. There's "primitive camping," where you tough it out with a sleeping bag, toothbrush, a saucepan, and only one Bee Gee album.

There's "car camping," which is inexpensive and lends itself to some great home movies. A word of caution: Children tend to grow spear-like elbows, fathers become moody and often hide, and mothers often sit around in a nightgown rocking back and forth.

"Tent camping" is interesting. A lot has been written about it, but all you have to know is don't undress when the light is INSIDE the tent.

The most popular form of camping is the self-contained camper, or as a priest said one day a a campground mass, "Look upon this ceremony as a 'hookup' with God." Hookups become your entire life. Many women do not like camping because they do not like to cook with a shovel. Some find it inconvenient to scale a tree and hang their food out of the reach of bears. Many women accept challenges heartily, but cooking with solar heat duirng rainstorm is not one of them. Children, fathers and dogs usually love camping as they never see a meal being prepared. They think eating out a Frisbee is neat, making an oven out a cardboard box is far out and feeding quarters to a dryer for three hours to dry wet sleeping bags is a real swell time.

One of the plusses of camping is that it is an entire family effort and there are moments of real beauty and closeness. You are banded together by a strong sense of survival and somehow you want to say, "let's keep in touch. We'll write one another after this is over." I think the survivors of the Titanic felt like that.

Dear Editor We enjoyed so much the story and the pictures of Otis and Costaline Lee's home in The Sunday Brand, but were disappointed one area was not covered & that was the history of the house they used as the center of their new home.

That house was the home of Walter and Elizabeth Marnell & their family from 1922 until Elizabeth's death in 1954. It was purchased from Roy Rogers, who had built it and just completed it.

This couple had homesteaded north of Clovis, where six of their seven children were born, the oldest son, John, being born in Kansas. They had gone to Clovis with three other couples, but were apparently the hardiest and were the only ones to stay and prove their claim. At a time when sons were physical assets to farm families, Walter and Elizabeth were blessed with five sons, three of them still living-Dick and twins, Speck and Ike, who were 4 when they moved into that house.

The house may have looked 'decrepit" and "abandoned," but it held a wealth of memories. I think it must have been "new with laughter" when the family moved in as Walter had a great sense of humor and passed it on to his sons. I know of much laughter I heard in that house the short time we lived there after Mr. Marnell's passing and until the farm was

PIT BARBECUE SPREADS SOUTHERN CHARM"

If the signers of the neclaration of Independence celebrated the event today, you can be sure festivities would include an abundance of many kinds of meat, vegetables and desserts and good company to make the feast enjoyable.

Southern hospitality bloomed long before seeds of revolution sprouted in the Colonies. Virginia plantations were large and neighborless, lonesome and begging for some traveler to breathe fresh life and news from the outside world.

George Washington is said to have kept slaves at crossroads near Mount Vernon to invite any strangers who passed to come to dinner. What great generosity their loneliness brought! The meal was a banquet in itself. One dinner included beef, veal, mutton, venison, turkeys, geese, fowl, and pork; greens, potatoes, pudding and cheese, fresh fruits and nuts. Looking for an enjoyable, informal way to entertain guests this Fourth of July? Why not capture that spirit of Southern hospitality with an old-fashioned barbecue? You will find plentiful supplies of beef and broiler-fryers and adequate supplies of pork and turkey for your eating pleasure.

To plan a barbecue, you need to consider how many people you'll be feeding, the amount of time available for preparing the fire and cooking, the equipment and party location. For large groups, nothing is so tasty as meat smoked all day over a pit of coals. Large cuts of lamb, beef, pork, turkey--all may be slowly steamed over hardwood coals and served dripping with your own special barbecue

How much meat will you need for a large group? You can select practically any cut of meat you normally broil, panbroil or roast for pit cooking. Allow about ¼ to 1 pound per serving for bone-in cuts, and 1/3 to 1/4 pound of boneless cuts. When serving turkey, figure ¼ pound

- tiny flecks of fat within the lean - that give them flavor.
USDA Good is leaner and not as juicy: however, it may be more economical. Remember, cuts of meat from the less-used muscles along the back of the animal -- the rib and loin sections -- will always be more tender than those from active muscles such as the shoulder (chuck), flank and round.

Pork, fike lamb, is generally produced from young animals and is therefore less variable in quality than beef. In fact, USDA grades for pork reflect only two levels of quality -- acceptable and unacceptable. If you plan to buy a pork carcass or side from a wholesale meat dealer, use the yield grades - - the radio of lean meat to fat and bone. A U.S. No. 1 pork carcass will give you more than 53 percent of its weight in the four major lean cuts -- the ham, loin, Boston butt and picnic shoulder. A U.S. No. 2 will yield 50-53 percent in those cuts; U.S. No. 3 - 47-50 percent; and U.S. No. 4 - less than 47 percent.

When buying turkey, U.S. Grade A birds are the most fully fleshed and their meat is well finished and attractive. Young birds are more tender than older

To prepare your meat for the barbecue pit, season with salt and pepper. Wrap it in paper, burlap or cheese cloth basted with a flour and water paste, then with burlap. Store in the refrigerator until you're ready to place the cuts on hot coals.

You decide the cooking capacity of a pit barbecue. Usually, you need the pit to be dug 3 to 5 feet deep, not more than 3 to 4 feet wide and as long as required to hold the cuts you'll prepare. Allow one foot of length for ever 30 pounds of meat. Dig the pit in well-drained spot, preferably of clay soil. Keep the walls straight with one open side for work space.

About 16 to 18 hours before the scheduled serving time, fill the pit slowly and loosely with hardwood, the most desirable fuel. Add wood until the bed of coals fills about two-thirds the depth of the pit. (This will take about 6 hours.) When coals have been heaped to about 1 to 11/2 feet from the top of the pit, level coals with a rake, and spread a 14-inch layer of gravel or coarse sand over them. This quiets burning flames and allows heat

Now, dip the wrapped meat in water and place in the pit, arranging the largest bundles in the center. Cover the pit as quickly as possible to retain heat. Corrugated galvanized roofing, sheets of iron or metal roofing make good covers. Over the metal covering, pile 10-12 inches of dirt, dampen, and tramp down around edges. In about 10 to 12 hours, you'll have tender, juicy barbecue bound to charm Southern hearts and

That's something the author of our Declaration of Independence certainly would have celebrated, too! Thomas Jefferson, known as the "gourmet of the White House," preferred vegetables to meats. While he was in office, the White House garden contained artichokes, asparagus, several kinds of beans, broccoli, summer squash, eggplant, lettuce, tomat-toes, peas (Jefferson's favorite vegetable), peanuts, salad greens, potatoes, onions, spinach, turnips and sugarbeets.

If a particular vegetable wasn't available in Washington, Jefferson sent wagons to Richmond, Baltimore or Monticello to obtain it. Jefferson could be considered one of the "first market news reporters" of the day. For 80 years, he meticulously kept track of the first and last appearance of 37 vegetables on the Washington market.

Market reporters also keep careful records of fruit and vegetable crops. Spinach, onions, carrots and beets are coming in from Texas producers. Tomatoes and cantaloupe supplies are up from last year. The cantaloupe crop is expected to be up 11 percent from last year. Supplies of summer squash, potatoes, greens, turnips, corn and markets. Since heavy rains disrupted the planting of lettuce, supplies were sharply cut back, but are gaining ground

With fresh vegetables in good supply now, consumers can take advantage of them for summer meals. Savory roasted corn-onthe-cob, steaming baked potatoes, crisp tossed salad, luscious casseroles, crunchy carrot and celery sticks or tangy potato salad may be just the touch that special Fourth of July feast needs.

Corn Farmers Keeping Eye On Spider Mites

Potato Harvest to Kick Off This Week

By JIM STEIERT Brand Farm Editor

Deaf Smith County's 1978 potato harvest will kick off this week after the initial stages of the local onion harvest for this year got underway during the past week.

Local vegetable growers are hoping for good potato yields as they eye generally favorable markets, especially after they have discovered that their onion yields are down and the market for that commodity provides for a break-even proposition at

And while vegetable growers are occupied with harvesting and marketing of their perishable products, county grain farmers are keeping an eye on the population of spider mites appearing in some local cornfields and hoping to avert the massive damage these pests caused to the area's corn crop last year.

Onion harvesting began in the Hereford area about a week ago, according to Wes Fisher of Dick Barrett Produce here, and early indications from both the onion fields and the marketplace point toward a disappointing year for onion growers.

"The yields will be light this year. Hail and recent hot weather have combined to bring down the yields. It's hard to say just how much the yield will be reduced, but I would estimate 20 to 25 percent," said Fisher.

To add insult to injury, Fisher reported that the onion market is low, right along with the vields.

"Onions are bringing $3 to currently, and jumbo onions are bringing $5, but there are hardly enough jumbos to put in your hand. It takes about $3.50 per sack for the grower just to break even on onions, so things aren't overly bright right now," Fisher commented.

The poor onion market here corresponds with low prices during the spring onion harvest in the Rio Grande Valley region.

Prices were at such a low level in some areas that farmers elected to plow up their onion crop, rather than incurring the expense of harvesting it and adding to their losses.

Things are a bit brighter where the potato harvest is concerned, and according to Fisher, spud harvesting in the Deaf Smith County area should get underway full speed this week as the July 4 holiday concludes.

"We'll be starting on potatoes the middle of the week, with red potatoes moving first. We'll be running those for a week or ten days, because we have to get them out fast before another area starts their harvest and depresses the market with a flood of potatoes. Then we'll start in with white potatoes, and harvesting will move at a rapid pace," he reported.

According to Fisher, the market outlook for potatoes is good at this time, and with numerous varieties of potatoes, income from the crop should be good.

Albert Maxwell of the Hereford office of La Mantia-Cullum-Collier and Co. located in Dimmitt reported that his packing firm expects to launch the potato harvest in neighboring Castro County this week as

The LCC firm grows Russet variety white potatoes, and Maxwell pointed out that expanding production of white potatoes has been a trend in the local vegetable producing area for the past several years.

"There are a limited number of outlets for red potatoes. Russets are in greater demand, and they will bring more. Ten years ago, the area was half and half on the production of white and red potatoes, but whites are becoming more predominant," Maxwell explained.

"Prospective potato yields look good right now. We've had excellent vine growth, and the potatoes are sizing out well. The prices are standing at a good level, and I don't expect them to change too much," he contin-

Area vegetable producers and packers will move ahead with the potato harvest on a regular schedule, looking to finish up the work by late August or early September with favorable wea-

The prospect of harvest is a factor keeping local corn growers and aerial applicators aware of the presence of a pest in their corn fields as gradual buildups in spider mite populations are monitored closely.

A combination of hot, dry weather and heavy spider mite infestation served to decimate the area's corn crop last year, causing extremely early maturity and poor yields.

Ray Frye of American

Dusting Co. of Hereford reports that mite populations are spotty at this time, but a number of area farmers are already looking to avert a major buildup in the spider mite population if possible.

We are putting out some Comite, which lasts for about 30 days. We hope to get some of it on enough acres to take a look at it and see if it is gonna' do us any good in controlling mites." said Frye, pointing out that pesticides had virtually no effect on the mite population here last

"The mite population is light right now. They're not building up as fast as they did last year, and we didn't have them in the wheat this year like we did in 1977 either. For that reason, they're not moving from wheat to corn in the Hereford area." he continued.

Olan K. Moore, consulting entomologist in Castro County, reported that low numbers of mites are being found in the borders of fields from an area eight miles north of Dimmitt to the Easter community and southward to the Sunnyside-Hart area.

"Predators are abundant in fields at this time, and hopefully, will increase in number to help keep the mites in check," Moore stated.

Fry opined that with corn acreage reduced this year, farmers may have better luck avoiding the moisture stress of their crop that invites mite infestation.

"If farmers can keep their corn . watered and avoid moisture stress, this would be in our favor," Frye pointed out.

"A good slow rain of an inch or two with some cool temperatures and high humidity will do more for us in controlling mites than all the pesticides there are. Right now, it looks like a lot of growers and southwestern corn borer control applicators will try to head them program in corn fields is still off with Comite if possible," he

three weeks away here, although

According to Frye, the has been necessary in some beginning of the annual isolated area fields.

When the second generation of the corn-girdling borer emerges here, aerial applicators will be flying long hours to bring the pest under control before it can inflict sufficient damage to

New Insulation Standards Made Effective by FmHA

HEREFORD - New insulation standards for housing in rural areas financed by the Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) will be put into effect, Melvin L. Hoover, County Supervisor reports. Implementation of the standards, first scheduled for March 15, had been held up during federal court consideration of a suit by the National Association of Home Builders challenging the new code. After FmHA prepared additional environmental material and a further hearing on the case was held, U.S. District Judge George L. Hart. Jr., dissolved a preliminary injunction. While certain aspects of the lawsuit remain to be resolved, the new insulation standards can not be implemented. The new thermal standards are designed to provide for heavier insulation and other measures to make FmHAfinanced housing less costly to heat or cool, and to conserve energy. They will apply to. newly-built homes and apartments financed by FmHA, and,

Better weatherizing through more effective insulation, storm doors and windows and other techniques will help families to reduce high fuel and energy expenses that icopardize their ability to afford adequate housing. Details of the standards. which vary by climatic zones, are available from the Hereford FmHA county office located at apartments for Deaf Smith 313 West Third Street, County during fiscal year 1978.

Housing loans administered by FmHA, a U.S. Department of Agriculture agency, serve all rural areas including towns of up to 10,000 and designated towns of 10,000 to 20,000 that are not in Standard Metropolitan Statistical (SMSA) Areas and have a shortage of mortgage credit for families of low and moderate income. FmHA will finance approximately 60 homes and 24:

Onion Harvest Underway

A field worker trims the tops from onions in a local field, prior to readying them for sacking and eventual movement to a Hereford packing shed. Onlon harvesting in Deaf Smith County got underway during the past week, while the potato harvest here will begin this week at the traditional post-July 4 time. Although onion markets are poor and growers are looking to break even at best, the outlook is good for the potato market. [Brand photo by Jim Stelert]

Texas Seeks Weapon In War On Fire Ants

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - Texas the EPA. oined with the Environmental Protection Agency Tuesday in seeking use of a new pesticide for the fight against fire ants.

Agriculture Commissioner . Reagan Brown and the Texas Department of Agriculture filed a motion to intervene on behalf of the EPA in a District of Columbia federal court.

The Environmental Defense Fund Inc. filed an injunction suit against the EPA after the governmental agency granted Mississippi an emergency exemption to use ferrimiacide in fighting fire ants.

The defense fund claimed that no emergency existed and that fire ants did not create a problem in the South.

The EPA and Mississippi are seeking to have the injunction suit dismissed. Texas, which has seeks the emergency exemption also, is supporting

"We intend to take every step possible to obtain effective control of the imported fire ants," Brown said. "Imported fire ants infest 93 counties in the state. Their sting is harmful to people and animals and can cause injury and economis loss. The ants have been known to damage crops, gardens, machinery and such earthen structures and evees and Brown said Texas has been using the pesticide Mirex to control fire ants, but this will not be available after June 30. He said ferriamicide, a form of Mirex that biodegrades more rapidly in the environment, was developed to take its place.

"The decision on the Mississippi request will have a direct bearing on the Texas application," Brown said.

Milk Order Changed Temporarily

A milk pooling provision under the Texas federal milk marketing order has been suspended for July, a U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) official said, following a Dallas hearing.

Paul W. Halnon, dairy official with USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service, said the action suspends the requirement that a dairy farmer have his entire production pooled on the Texas market from September through November if he wishes to have his milk pooled on that market during the following February through July.

The suspension was requested by Southern Milk Sales at a public hearing earlier this month in Dallas. The cooperative requested the suspension to reassociate 138 dairy farmers with the Texas market. Those dairy farmers had lost their producer elibibility in the Texas market because some of their milk was delivered to other markets during September through November 1977.

This temporary action. Halnon said, will suspend the provision until hearing evidence can be analyzed to see if the marketing order should be

Farmers normally grow their own hay, but their cattle diets must be supplemented with other feeds which are bought, a fact that makes dairymen keep at least one eye on grain market and futures.

"We have no control over what price we get for our milk," Odom said.

I hadn't realized just how much of a country home person I was until the other day when we had occasion to stop in and look at a dwelling up for sale within the confines of the city.

Brand Farm Editor

I got along fine through about three quarters of the place as the owners showed us around, but by the time we got to the business section of the house out toward the kitchen and the back yard area, I was beginning to get a little edgy.

And when we finally stepped out into that "big" back yard that cut off my view of the outside world along about the top of a seven foot picket fence, I had a classic case of claustrophobia.

To borrow an old cliche, something inside of me was screaming "don't fence me in."

Maybe it comes from growing up where I always had at least a quarter section of land to more-or-less consider my back yard, and where I could pretty well see the world going by and another year's crops growing around me.

Somehow, the prospect of neighbors a few feet away, heavy traffic, drawing back alley trash brigade duty, and scrounging around for a few square feet of ground in the midst of "civilization" to plant a garden on leave me cold.

Walking into the urban sprawl sorta' gives me the feeling that maybe I'm closing the gate on a whole tradition of rural upbringing.

And it's pretty hard to close the gate on things like being able to see a norther coming in while it's still half a day distant....Or watching the corngrow, the neighbor's new calves frolicking, a cock pheasant sneaking up to your back yard to roost in the old evergreen tree, snow tranforming the landscape to a white-hued expanse of drifts, or the thirsty countryside drinking in a slow soaker.
I'd miss the "see forever" feeling a fellow gets on some of those incredibly clear and crisp fall mornings, and the smell and feel of the earth you just don't get in town.

Even now, I live on the edge of the city. But there's an old barn with a lot of personality out back, a pasture full of cow and calf pairs out on the north side, and a sprawling expanse of farm land

Added to the old house we're in right now, it makes this "city living" fairly bearable...I can still feel like a farm boy at heart anyway, and if it get so's I can't stand it any longer, John will break down and even let me run one of the tractors out

I guess the house does as much as anything for me. It's in its "golden years" now, but from the first time the wife and I saw it, the place said "home."

Holly Will Submit Purchase Proposal

COLORADO SPRINGS — The board of directors of the Holly Sugar Corporation announced Friday that it has considered a recent offer made by Irvin L. Jacobs, a Minneapolis investor, to purchase substantially all of the Holly Corporation's assets and assume substantially all of the company's liabilities for $45 million cash.

The Holly board concluded that such a transaction, in principle, appears advantageous to Holly stockholders, and should be submitted to stockholders for approval.

The Holly board met just prior to the annual meeting of corporation stockholders in Colorado Springs.

John B. Bunker, board chairman, explained that the board has instructed Holly management to meet promptly with Jacobs to review his proposal in detail.

Recommendations from an independent investment advisor will also be obtained.

Jacobs contacted Holly officials through a letter June 21, stating his interest in purchasing Holly's

He advised the firm at that time that he was the owner of approximately 150,000 shares of Holly stock, and desired to begin negotiations on a definitive purchase agreement.

Jacobs indicated that the combination of cash and tax benefit from the sale of assets at a loss would result in approximately $36 per share being available to Holly stockholders.

"A vote by two-thirds of the outstanding Holly shares would be required to approve the transaction," Bunker concluded.

Brand Farm Editor DIMMITT - The area's vegetable production and processing industry received renewed emphasis here Friday with the opening of the new Dimco Industries vegetable processing plant, located east of the city on Highway 86.

Construction of the 300x120 ft. facility had been underway since the first of the year, following nearly a year in the planning stage.

The $1 million vegetable facility, scheduled to begin processing potatoes and onions grown in Castro County this week, is equiped with various forms of up-to-the-minute vegetable packing equipment, according to Truman Touchstone, president of a corporation of Dimmitt area farmers who own the plant.

Other owners include Carl Bruegel and Ben Holcomb, vice presidents, Jerry Watts, secretary-treasurer, and Allan Mc-Clure, manager.

Roy Lyles will serve as the facility's general manager.

During the peak of the vegetable season here in July and August, the facility is expected to employ 125 workers, with an additional 150-175 field hands employed.

The packing shed will process carrots and lettuce this fall after the summer run of onions and

- Remember Jacobs windchargers? This four kilowatt Dakota wind unit. which is similar to the Jacobs design, is currently being tested by WTSU wind energy researchers.

Wind Unit Testing Begins

WTSU — Members of West Texas State University's Alternative Energy Institute have begun testing of a four kilowatt Dakota wind unit located on the WTSU Nance Ranch.

The unit, which resembles the popular pre-rural electrification Jacobs windcharger, rests on a 40-foot tower and has an installation cost of $7,500.

"We are looking at it in terms of reliability and average annual energy production," said Dre Vaughn Nelson, director of the institute. Testing will continue for a year.

The unit is producing electricity used to run the ranch's office and swine facility, which have energy requirements of 5-6,000 kilowatt hours per month, according to Nelson.

It is connected to a Gemini inverter "which takes the DC power, converts it to AC and feeds it back into the line." Nelson said.

Installation of the unit and the related electricial equipment was done in cooperation with Gary Gibson of Southwestern Public Service Co.

'They are mterested in the data on how much electricity will be fed into the line," Nelson said, but it is doubtful that any will 'due to the ranch's high energy requirements.

Initial testing of the unit over one week found it producing approximately 170 kilowatt hours of power, the director In a month's time the unit could be expected to produce 800 to 1,000 kilowatt hours of electricity, "but that's what we're trying to find out," Nelson said.

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - The daily increasing number of screwworm cases in Texas are caused mostly by flies that "hitch-hike" into Texas on cattle from western states, the Texas Animal Health Commission said.

Arizona has reported 1,102 cases, Arkansas 1, California 27, and New Mexico 224.

The current total compares with only 39 cases in 1977 and 29,241 in 1976.

It is felt that, with the exception of the cases reported in deep South Texas, these flies 'hitch-hiked' on livestock coming in from the western states," the commission said.

"In an effort to combat this infestation, since May 31 the commission has required all livestock from New Mexico and Arizona to be inspected and esprayed with an approved pesticide before coming into Texas. A prior permit issued by the Texas Animal Health Commission is also required."

Soaring Temperatures Deplete Soil Moisture

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) - Hot, deying winds-which boosted temperature readings to 100-plus degrees in much of the state this past week-have hastened hay harvesting operations and general crop maturity. The extreme temperatures also scorched young crops and ranges and further depleted soil moisture in many areas.

Hay baling activities have accelerated in areas that have had sufficient moisture to produce a crop, reports Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Baling wire for the hay harvest is in short supply in South Texas, he said.

Ranges and pastures, along with many dryland crops, are showing moisture stress as a result of the searing temperatures. Irrigated crops, on the other hand, are making good progress. Stock tanks are

The watermelon, cantaloupe and onion harvests are continuing in the Rio Grande Valley, portions of the Winter Garden and Coastal Bend. At Presidio, the cantaloupe harvest has just begun, with the quality reported to be "excellent."

Gillespie County's peach harvest also is under way, with both the quantity and quality reported to be outstanding.

Insect problems in cotton are causing grower concern in several areas, and mosquito problems are reported in the Coastal Bend and along the upper Gulf Coast. Jefferson County reports a heavy infesta-

Grasshoppers also are damaging pastures and crops in some high-moisture areas.

District Extension agents reported the following specific conditions.

PANHANDLE: Hot, dry winds reduced soil moisture in many counties. Much of the dryland wheat crop is now harvested. Corn is making adequate progress. Much of the cotton has been replanted, but stands are late. Cattle markets continue to decline, and pastures are showing stress

SOUTH PLAINS: Irrigated cotton is growing well as a result of extreme heat, and insect activity is minimal. Pastures and ranges need moisture. Sunflowers are being planted on hailed-out cotton acreage. ROLLING PLAINS: Surface moisture has been depleted by hot, dry winds. Cotton, home gardens and pastures need moisture. A grasshopper buildup is becoming a problem, and a case of screwworms in cattle has been confirmed in Motley County. Wheat harvesting has moved into final stages, and pecans continue to make excellent progress.

NORTH CENTRAL: Moisture

is short and fleahoppers are showing some buildup in cotton. Most wheat and oat crops have been harvested, with yields generally good. Hay crops, cotton, corn, home gardens and pastures all need moisture. Cattle are in good condition with the market continuing strong.

NORTHEAST: All field crops. gardens and pastures need rain, as hot winds further deplete moisture. The hay harvest continues with low yields. Peas, pinto beans and peaches are being harvested, and the pecan crop looks good. Grasshoppers and other insects are causing some problems. Livestock prices are down.

FAR WEST; Extremely hot, dry weather is depleting soil moisture. The heat is causing cotton to make fast growth, although there are some insect problems. Ranges are beginning to brown due to dry conditions. Irrigated crops are growing well. The cantaloupe harvest is under way at Presidio with the quality excellent. Some feeding of livestock is continu-

WEST CENTRAL: Range and crop conditions continue to deteriorate with the onslaught of hot, dry winds. Cotton and sorghum show moisture stress. Stock tanks are low some already dry - in Runnels, Coleman, Callahan and Taylor Counties, forcing producers to haul water or market livestock. Peaches are being harvested in Gillespie County with excellent quality and quantity being reported.

CENTRAL: Small grain harvesting is complete, with light vields reported on fewer acres than normally havested. Extreme temperatures and drying winds of the past week have resulted in short moisture supplies. Cotton looks good, although insect activity is increasing. The peach harvest is under way, with good yields reported. Pasture grasses are short and dry.

EAST: Hay yields are down due to dryness, with the harvest hastened by hot, dry weather. Corn, home gardens, pastues increasing. Pecan crop prospects range from good to below average. Peaches are being harvested. Livestock are in good condition with grazing fair. The cattle market ranges from strong to slightly down.

SOUTHEAST AND UPPER GULF COAST: Soybean planting continues. Peanuts are up to a good stand in Colorado County, where the hay harvest is reported to be better than average. Pasture grasses are responding to recent rains and providing average grazing. A heavy mosquito infestation is reported in Jefferson County.

SOUTH CENTRAL: Hay baling and insect control work are major farm activities. Soil moisture is very short. Cotton, corn and sorghum are still progressing, but need rain. Grasshoppers are still a problem in home gardens. Pastures are below average to average, and livestock markets are mostly steady to firm.

SOUTHWEST: The dry spring and late rains are taking a heavy toll of hay yields in southwest Texas, with most generally low. Hay cutting and baling kept many farmers and ranchers in the field during the past week. Moisture getting short in many areas. Part of Comal County has received only 4 inches of rain during the past 12 months. Cotton in Maverick County and corn in Zavala County are growing well. Pecan and ranges all need rain. Insect growth in Bandera County is and disease problems are slow and peaches are small this COASTAL BEND: The corn harvest has begun and sorghum harvesting will be under way soon. Some rice is starting to head. Vegetable gardens and watermelons continue to be harvested, and hay baling is in full swing. Pecans are contin-

SOUTH: Baling wire is in short supply as the hay harvest continues. Pastures are starting to produce some grass, but more rain is needed. Livestock

Cattle Raisers Call For Tax Limitation

FORT WORTH - A constitutional limitation on state and local taxes similar to California's Proposition 13 has been called for by the president of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association, John Armstrong of Kingsville, Texas, representing one of the larger groups of land-owners in Texas.

In a letter to Governor Dolph Briscoe, Armstrong said, "I would like to request that you give serious thought to calling a special session of the Legislature to consider a constitutional limitation on state and local taxes. This would provide the people of our state with the power of initiative and referendum. In this way, the people of Texas will have the same mechanism to influence a state government on this issue as the people of California."

Armstrong referred to the landslide vote for Proposition 13 in California which has caught the attention of public officials and private citizens all over the nation. "We must strike while the sentiment is strong to limit taxation, thus slowing down the overdevelopment of bureaucracy. In six or eight more months, this enthusiasm and concern may well have cooled. Meaningful tax limitations put on by the Legislature depend on the backing of an aroused citizenry." Armstrong added that the upward trend of property taxes must be stemmed.

The Texas Constitution provides for regular sessions of the Legislature only in odd numbered years from January to June. Unless called into a special session by the governor, the Legislature will not meet until January, 1979.

USDA Sending Schools *74 Million

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Agriculture Department is sending $74 million to school systems in 48 states to make up for the turkeys and beef it says it was unable to provide for school lunches this past school year.

The amount is more than double what was paid out a year ago under what the Ford and Nutrition Service calls "commodity shortfalls." Both surplus commodities and cash subsidies are given to schools under the program to underwrite lunches. and breakfasts.

The commodity for the 1977-78 school year worked out to 12.75 cents per lunch, but the department was able to provide only about 11.05 cents worth in commodities, so the cash amounts to 1.7 cents for each of the 4.2 billion lunches served.

Agency spokeswoman Beverly Wooten said that it did not get bids on all the whole turkeys and beef it had planned to buy and its programming was also thrown off by an accounting switch from fiscal years to school years.

Such a large make-up payment is not expected again, The Sudan

The Sudan is Africa's largest country, but most of its territory is uninhabited and unproductive. Even though the population center and farming belt is known as the rainlands, the rains are variable, and the Sudan's main cotton, food and fodder crops are raised through use some of the world's most elaborate irrigation systems. Baseball players aren't the catfishing. Seidensticker believes, is that they are easy to catch if you bait a "hole" properly and fish with a sufficiently smelly bait. A full-scale round of jackpot trap shooting events will be conducted by the Hereford Gun Club Friday, July 7, according to Nancee McClendon, club president:

The events will be held as the next regularly-scheduled function of the HGC, and will get underway with practice rounds at 7 p.m.

Competitive shooting will begin under the floodlights at the trap range at 8 p.m. A wide array of events will present area

Among events will be a 50-round jackpot shoot . from the 16-yard-line with a $7 entry fee. Payback will be 50 percent.

A second jackpot event of 25 rounds from the 27 yard line will also be conducted, with a 50 percent payback. Entry fee for that competition will be $4.

An Annie Oakley event with a 70 percent payback will be staged from the 27 yard line, and gunners will pay a $2 entry fee in that elimination competition.

The Sportsman's Den

Jim Steiert

It's the "not much longer until" time right now. Those big ole' feisty cutthroats are about through with their spawning run up on the Yellowstone River in the "big sky" country of Wyoming and Montana, and it's not much longer until the fishing season on the Yellowstone inside that lovely national park will be open again....

And not much longer until I'll be on the road for that stretch of countryside looking to lay a dry fly on the chilly waters of that river once again, and hoping that one of those magical creatures from the depths of that ancient stream will rise to my offering and set my heart pounding...

Only a couple of months to the opening of dove season now. You see the bluish-gray morning dove pairs in the countryside nearly every day.

They are enthralled in their summer schedule of courtship and nesting.

Innumerable hastily-prepared nests are being thrown together through these few weeks of summer, and these little speedsters with the stuttering wingbeats are busily turning out the incredible number of dove generations that will give us sport in September.

....Pheasant season is still a ways off, but the ringnecks know it's really not all that much longer until fall.

The mottled brown hens already have broods hatched, and the little rainbows are dining on the grasshoppers and varied seeds that are their summer smorgasbord.

They are clumsy, gawky little tufts of feather right now, but it's not much longer until they'll have throughly mastered the stealth and running speed that are their inherent key to survival. And then too, it won't be too long before those dull little brown fellows go through the metamorphosis. that will transform them into the wondrous rainbows of rust and turquoise, black, green and red that leave fellows like me trembling when they come up in a thunderous rise come December.

Except for a few resident mallards, the ducks are far to the north right now, as are the majestic snow and Canada geese.

Those waterfowl, perhaps more so than many other creatures, are very much aware that it is not much longer until fall and the need to heed the timeless instinct to move south.

Ducks and geese are nesting in many areas of the far-flung Canadian prairie lands.

Young broods are learning the day-to-day lessons of survival, growing in strength and size. and preparing to test their wings for the long ordeal of the southward migration that will severely try them in their first year.

For now, it is a time of swimming in broods, growing fat on aquatic growth and insects, moulting, and developing the plumage that will serve as a key to survival.

The teal are far away now, but it won't be long before they come whooshing in to the playa lakes here in September, for once finding plenty of water to receive them.

And the half-grown geese still swimming in Canadian waters will be grown before long and winging their way on a journey that will eventually lead them to local grain fields.

Mule deer and whitetail fawns are on the ground in the canyon breaks to the east and southeast of us right now, and antelope fawns are learning the skill of running with blinding speed on the vast rangelands up in the northern

It's the "not long until time" for the young of all the creatures that will create magic for us here this fall and winter.

But, if we think it's not long until the magic they'll bring to us then, maybe we ought to take a good look around.

Doggoned if there isn't a lot of magic going on for us to see right now!

Texas Deer Hunting Priced Out of Reach

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) - Deer hunters say they are responding to something more complex than the mere procurement of meat for the family table.

And that seems pretty obvious when you consider that many hunters spend hundreds of dollars each year to be allowed to sit in a stand and live in the rough just for a chance at bringing home 100 pounds of venison.

Regardless of the reason, the costs are starting to price this activity out of the reach of lots of people.

Texas has the largest whitetail deer population of any state - about 3 million by the latest official estimate. Deer are the property of the people but getting access to them is the tough, and expensive, problem. Each year it gets tougher.

With all but 2 percent of the land in Texas privately owned, a hunter must almost always pay a landowner a fee to hunt on his property.

Hunters recall when they paid $10 or so to sit in a tree for a day and get a chance for a trophy animal. Today, it can cost $100 or more.

Recently, a group of four hunters from Dallas paid $50 daily per person to hunt for two days on 8,000 acres near Sterling in West Central Texas.

They didn't shoot a deer. Some season leases in the South Texas brush country go for $3 per acre. A 10,000-acre tract thus costs $30,000 for a season of hunting. The fee has about doubled in the past three years.

Who can afford these prices?

Big corporations and sporting clubs, both of which can find tax advantages to help ease the expense, the independent hunters complain.

Kerr County Extension Agent Dwight Harkey sympathizes with hunters but says the income is important to landowners in his Hill Country area, where a hunter "is lucky now to get a lease for $250 to $500" for a season. A few years ago, he said, the average lease cost about $100 per season per

Hunting leases are usually even more expensive in the South Texas brush country than in the Hill Country because the whitetails there are usually bigger.

Ed Stanfield, general manager of the 70,000-acre Chaparrosa Ranch in South Texas, said Chaparrosa is closed to hunting this year in order to "try to build up our big buck population.

"When people get a lease and lay down a lot of money, they want to take big bucks out. We have to protect our breeding stock," he said.

The Department of Parks and Wildlife says the number of arrests for illegal hunting in Texas is increasing about 10 percent each year.

One veteran game warden said he recently arrested a man for hunting along a public road, illegal in Texas.

"I couldn't say it, and still have to enforce the law," the warden said. "but I almost had to sympathize with the man. It's getting to the point where the common man can hardly afford to hunt anymore,"

TEXAS PARKS AND WILDLIFE DEPT.

ANTELOPE COUNTED

CANYON - The annual Panhandle antelope count was flown June 4-18 by personnel of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department with the tally about the same as 1977.

"This was the earliest the survey has been taken by air and with the low number of antelope fawns spotted, we will run a ground survey later this summer to verify the total population," said David Dvorak, project wildlife biologist.

"The western part of the Panhandle showed an increase in the number of animals and the eastern Panhandle was down even though both areas have excellent range conditions from the good spring rains,' Dyorak continued.

The doe, fawn and heel count to be run later will probably show an increase in the number of antelope fawns. These counts along with comments from game wardens, landowners, and other interested individuals will be presented to the Parks and Wildlife Commission for study. The P&W Commission will then decide upon the best season for Comparisons with the 1977 survey will be difficult since this recent survey was conducted on different ranches in the Panhandle. A better view of the overall antelope population should be gathered by the P&WD with the running of the county on new ranges Other interesting notes kept by the P&WD spotters showed a total of 76 coyotes counted over; the entire route. No comparisons have been made as to the increase or edecrease in the coyote population.

Crowded Lakes Increase Hazardsis

An estimated 2.5 million holiday visitors to Corps of Engineers lakes and navigation projects within the Tulsa District during the 4th of July weekend will result in crowded beaches, an increase in boating traffic, and additional safety problems, Col. Anthony A. Smith, District Engineer, said today.

Last year, when high waters flooded many of the recreation facilities at Corps lakes during the Independence Day weekend, there were 2.3 million visitors to the 32 lake and navigation projects.

Col. Smith placed the "life safety suggestions to reduce deaths at the lakes over the Fourth of July and during the summer months. "From January I of this summer through the first day of summer, we have recorded six fatal water accidents at three of our lakes," he said. "Of this number, only one of the victims -- a skiier -- had life saving devices available."

Corps safety officials suggest Be sure all non-swimmers particularly all children, wear life preservers at all times. Have a Coast Guard approved life jacket or cushion for everybod aboard the boat. It is goo practice to have the seat cushio jacket" rule at the top of a list of tied to a belt loop while in a
