

Azim Shahalemi

In Afghan Affair

His Interest Is Personal

By PAUL SIMS Managing Editor

When Jimmy Carter announced his boycott of the Moscow Summer Olympics because of Russia's invasion of Afghanistan, he gained at least one staunch fan in Hereford.

Azim Shahalemi, a 21-year-old Afghan who works as a medical laboratory technician at Deaf Smith General Hospital, Wednesday praised the president for putting pressure on the Soviet Union to withdraw its troops from the Mideast country.

"I'm proud of Mr. Carter." Shahalemi said. "He proved that he respects human rights. Of course, I support the Olympic boycott."

Shahalemi has more reason to support Carter than simply the fact he was born in Afghanistan. His father, an Afghan diplomat, was murdered during a pro-Soviet coup when Shahalemigwas 17.

Shahalemi's father, a friend of the king, had served as Afghanistan's ambassador to India, Japan and Saudi

"While he was in Saudi Arabia, he was nominated to go to London. He came back to Afghanistan, but he wasn't lucky. Supporters of Russia killed just about everyone fromthe old government." Shahalemi said.

"They put my family in jail. Uncles, cousins, everybody. They took my mother for investigation, but they didn't bother her any more. They didn't put me in jail because I was so young.

Shahalemi finished high school in Afghanistan, then went to Germany to further his studies.

"The German language was very hard for me. And, it was crowded. It was hard to live there, so I came to the United States," he said. He moved to the United States in 1977 and decided to study to become a laboratory technician at Georgetown

School of Science and Technology in Washington D.C. * had always wanted to study political science and become a diplomat like my father. But when my father got killed, I changed my mind and studied medicine." Shahalemi said his "love for horses" brought him to Texas and Deaf Smith General.

"I heard Texas has a lot of horses, so I wanted to come here for my practical training. At Georgetown, they said I could go to Hereford, Texas. But, I found out there weren't any horses here." Shahalemi said.

For the first time in his life, "I felt alone. But I've met a lot of people in Hereford and I feel at home now."

Shahalemi, naturally, resents Russia for its invasion of Afghanistan which is part of the fourth pro-Soviet coup in that country in four years. Through the news, Shahalemi closely follows the situation and says he often takes pride (See AFGHAN, Page 2)

Portugal Backs U.S. in Crises

LISBON, Portugal (AP) - President Carter arrived in Lisbon today to offer visible encouragement to Portugal's sixyear-old democracy and thank the government for supporting his policies during the continuing crises in Iran and Afghanistan. The president's plane, Air Force One, landed at 4:25 a.m. EDT at Lisbon's Portela Airport, the last stop on Carter's eight-day European tour. Portuguese President Antonio Ramalho Eanes stood in a brisk wind at the foot of the ramp to welcome the first American president to visit the Portuguese mainland in two decades.

In addition to Gen. Eanes, who was elected after putting down an attempted countercoup in 1975, Carter was to meet with Premier Francisco Sa Carneiro and Mario Soares, leader of the opposition Socialist Party.

Squeezing a bit of sight-seeing into his six-hour stopover, Carter toured the 16th century Jeronimos Monastery and laid wreaths at the tombs of explorer Vasco da Gama and the poet and adventurer Luis de Camoes.

While Portugal's left-wing extremists prepared protest rallies before and after Carter's stop, government leaders were determined to offer a warm welcome for the first visit of an American president here since Dwight D. Eisenhower passed through in 1960.

Gen. Eanes downgraded a summer 1974 meeting between then Presidents Richard Nixon and Antonio de Spinola in the Azores by terming Carter's the first official visit by a U.S. president since an army coup toppled 48 years of right-wing dictatorship on April 25, 1974.

Carter flew to Lisbon from Spain, where he also paid a one-day, democracy-boosting visit. After his departure from Madrid, the government issued a statement saying Carter declared his satisfaction with Spain's progress toward entering the European Common Market.

Field Strike Enters 2nd Day

By JIM STEIERT Brand Farm Editor

80th Year, No. 255

Activities of the Texas Farm Workers Union spread southward Wednesday night after the second straight day of strike activities in onion fields in the Hereford area.

Strikers picketed an onion field owned by right-of-way.

Griffin & Brand of Hereford just west of the Griffin & H city yesterday and upped their demands for sacking onions from the 80 cents per bushel figure sought during the first day of the strike. Tuesday to $1 per bushel.

"It's not like we're asking for anyting illegal. We are just asking for what these people are entitled to. Mainly we are asking for dignity and respect for the farm worker." commented TFW organizer Jesus Moya during a meeting in Earth last night that followed a day of activity here.

TFW pickets disrupted harvesting operations by some 200 workers at the Griffin & Brand field Wednesday before proceeding to the firm's packing facilties on West Highway 60 for an afternoon of demonstration.

Deaf Smith County sheriff's officers and reserve deputies were on hand at the Griffin & Brand property to discourage trespassing as TFW supporters gathered along the highway

Griffin & Brand officials declined to meet with the strikers or allow them on the firm's

The strike here began Tuesday with picketing of a field owned by the Howard Gault Co. west of Hereford. Pickets returned to the Gault field Wednesday morning "to make sure no one had come back to the field," as one union supporter put it.

After a visit to the Gault field, pickets moved to the Griffin & Brand field, where Mova addressed workers in the field over a loud speaker system from a country road.

In short order, most of the 200 workers in the field departed, although some remained on the far end of the field, out of earshot of the strikers, and continued working for a time.

Strikers returned to the Griffin & Brand field around 5 Wednesday afternoon following a report that crews were scheduled to resume work there at that time, but according to a report from a sheriff's deputy at the scene work crews had arrived about 3 p.m. and had completed their work and departed for the most part by the time TFW officials made a return visit.

Organizers of the strike, who claim they have about 400 farmworkers involved now, report that picketing of local packing sheds will continue and predict that it will also spread into neighboring Castro County.

The Howard Gault Co. offered Wednesday to increase the piecework rate for onion gathering to 50 cents per bushel.

Moya claimed farmworkers met Wednesday morning and decided to turn down that offer, electing instead to seek $1 per bushel, 20 cents over their demands of Tuesday. TFW strikers are also demanding a union contract, portable restroom facilities and drinking water in the field.

Portable restroom facilities were available at the Griffin & Brand field Wednesday, but when questioned about their presence Moya commented, "They were filthy, and there were only two for 200 people."

He claimed a restroom facility should be available for every 20 persons in the field.

Onion gatherers at both the Gault and Griffin & Brand fields were receiving 45 cents per bushel for sacking in the field, a figure comparable to wages being paid by most area packers and shippers.

Attorneys for Texas Rural Legal Aid here claim workers are not being paid the $3.10 per hour minimum wage required by law under the 45-cent rate. Wes Fisher of Barret-Fisher Co. here stated that he has crews that easily make more than $5 per hour at the 45-cent rate.

Ag Panel Skeptical of Embargo

WASHINGTON (AP) - Despite growing challenges in Congress and among farm groups, the Carter administration is holding fast on the grain embargo issue.

A skeptical House Agriculture Committee on Wednesday heard Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland defend the suspension of grain sales to the Soviet Union, an action ordered by President Carter on Jan. 4 in response to the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

The partial embargo, he said, has hurt the Soviet Union by interfering with its food production timetable.

Bergland also denied there was a shift in policy when department officials told multinational grain companies they could resume selling the Soviet Union grain that did not originate in the United States.

"We remain convinced that our policy is correct, that it has been effective and that it will deny the Soviets the maximum amount of grain at a highly vulnerable time," said Dale E. Hathaway, undersecretary of agriculture for international Bergland added, "The fact is that the Russians have felt the sting." He said they are short of grain, milk production is down, poultry prices are high and beef production is sagging. "Now how much of that pressure can be charged to the embargo i is, of course, debatable." Bergiand acknowledged. About 17 million metric tons of U.S. grain, mostly corn, were affected, but an earlier agreement for the shipment of 8 million metric tons of wheat and corn was let stand. The United States and the Soviet Union have a similar agreement for the shipment of up to 8 million metric tons of grain in the year beginning Oct. 1. Bergland said that also would be honored. But, "the decision on whether they will take more ... will be up to them. It depends upon their behavior in Afghanistan," Bergland said.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 36.7 bushels of wheat or 39.4 bushels of corn. When the embargo was announced, the United States asked other major grain exporters to refrain from sending the Soviets more than their normal shipments of grain. But last week, the department confirmed that it told large grain companies they could resume selling foreign grain to the Soviet Union. Hathaway told the committee the request that companies halt foreign grain sales was intended to allow other exporting countries enough time to adopt their ewn restrictive policies. He said that after the uncommitted grain had been sold and it became clear the effectiveness of an embargo on 1980-81 crop grain would be dependent on the export policies of other nations, the department told the grain companies the informal sales restriction was no longer necessary.

Rep. Paul Findley, R-III., asked whether the United states (See EMBARGO, Page 2)

House To Approve Fuel Boost

WASHINGTON (AP) - Legislation creating a government corporation with a $20 billion bankroll to launch a synthetic fuels industry in the United States is nearly over its final congressional hurdle.

The House was expected to give easy approval today to a compromise bill supporters say will help the nation begin moving toward breaking its dependence on foreign oil. One week ago, members of the Senate spent several hours praising the bill as being a "milestone" and "the largest, most flexible set of energy initiatives ever enacted by the Congress" before approving it on a 78-12 vote.

Congressional conferees - 35 from the Senate and 23 from the House - had been working since late last year to fashion details of the bill.

Favorate House action sends the measure to the White The importance President Carter attaches to the legislation - especially in an election year - is indicated by plans the administration is making for signing the measure into law,

White House spokesman Ray Jenkins said late Wednesday that "more than merely a signing ceremony" will be used to call attention to the bill. This is "a very significant" measure that "sets energy policy for the next 10 to 15 years," he said.

Plans are not final, but Carter may visit a synthetic fuel project, such as a coal gasification plant, in connection with signing the bill, Jenkins said.

The bill creates a federally owned synthetic fuels corporation which will oversee a five-year, $20 billion program of loan and price guarantees aimed at building plants to produce so-called synthetic fuels.

Synthetic fuels are manufactured from non-petroleum materials, such as coal, or extracted from material such as oil Ending a five-month battle in Congress, the House of Representatives gave final approval Wednesday to Carter's plan to renew draft registration, which will have an immediate effect on some 4 million young men.

On a vote of 234-168, the House approved Carter's request for $13.3 million to revive the dormant Selective Service System and begin registration of young men 19 and 20 years old. The Senate earlier gave its approval to the program on a vote of 58-34.

Carter will issue a proclamation next week putting the draft registration plan into effect and requiring young men to sign up possibly as early as July 21, knowledgeable sources said.

Muskie was quoted as saying the U.S. Olympic boycott, curtailment of grain and technology sales to the Soviet Union and increased funding or new bases in the Middle East were examples of U.S. sacrifices and that he expected the allies to do an equal

Man Charged In Sheriff Death Plot

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) - A man who allegedly tried to hire a truck driver to kill Walker County Sheriff Darrell White is in jail after being charged with criminal solicitation of capital murder.

John Benge, 35, is being held in Walker County jail in lieu of $250,000 bond after he was charged Wednesday. He was arrested Tuesday in front of the Walker County Courthouse.

"Luckily, he (the truck driver) was a policeman's friend and he contacted us about the contract." White said, declining to identify the informant.

White said he found out about the alleged plot three weeks ago when the trucker reportedly contacted the called him.

White said Benge reportedly approached the driver about a "hit" on the sheriff. He said Benge first offered to pay the man $20,000, but later lowered the price to $15,000.

Israeli Gunboats Assault Guerrillas

TEL AVIV. Israel (AP) - Israeli gunboats pounded Palestinian guerrilla bases about 30 miles north of the border in southern Lebanon. A Lebanese captive told Israeli interrogators that two U.N. peacekeepers aided guerrillas who killed three Israelis in a cross-border raid in April.

There were no immediate reports of casualties in the Wednesday night gunboat raid along Lebanon's Mediterranean coast. The Israeli military command gave no details of the attack, the latest in a series aimed at keeping the guerrillas on the defensive.

Lebanese leftist sources said the intruders fired guns and rockets at three sites along the coast, about 30 miles south of Beirut, the Lebanese capital.

Thé sources also reported daytime Israeli reconnaissance missions over Palestinian refugee camps in southern Lebanon while gunboats patrolled off shore, staying just out of range of guerrilla guns.

"I can't answer that because I know the matter has been under intensive review by the president and leaders of the Western summit in Venice," Bergland said.

Legislation with bipartisan backing has been introduced in the House and Senate to lift the partial embargo. Bergland said earlier in the week that adoption of that legislation would be harmful to U.S. foreign policy efforts.

The National Farmers Union last week urged the administration to end the embargo no later than July 31. NFU President George W. Stone said continuing it beyond then "would be an empty gesture" because other major exporting countries are reluctant to continue much longer.

Earlier, the American Farm Bureau Federation, which initially s supported Carter's action, called for an immediate end to the embargo.

Bergland was asked if the embargo has been a success.

"Success compared to what, is the way we have to measure." Bergland said. "And I think that compared to the alternatives it has been a success."

"The amount of grain that we withheld from the Soviet Union is less than half of the corn crop of my congressional district, and you're telling me that that's brought the Russians to their knees?" asked Rep. Tom Harkin, D-lowa.

Howard Hiort, USDA's chief economist, said the grain suspension hurt the Soviets because it came in a short period of time, not spread over an entire year.

Fuels-

The legislation sets a goal of producing the equivalent of 500,000 barrels of oil a day by 1987. That's about 4 percent of current U.S. oil consumption.

By 1992, with an additional $68 billion, the legislation envisions a synthetic fuels production level of 2 million barrels a day.

During the period the corporation is organizing, the legislation calls for $2.2 billion to go to the Energy Department to proceed with programs for the alcohol-gasoline mixture gasohol and other projects.

The measure also directs the president to resume filling the Strategic Petroleum Reserve - the nation's oil stockpile - at the rate of 100,000 barrels a day.

Filling, the reserve was halted in 1978 due to rising oil prices and fears that foreign oil producers, especially Saudi Arabia, would cut production if filling operations continued.

The administration's opposition to this directive is outweighed by its desire to get the synthetic fuels corporation, which Carter called for last summer.

"I don't get very excited about daily records," said National Weather Service forecaster Jack Paup. "Those are meant to be broken. But this is an all-time record for June. This is the first time we've ever had 10% in June. That's impressive."

In Wichita Falls, the temperature soared to a record-tying 114. El Paso, at 108 degrees, experienced its 16th day of 100-plus readings.

Dallas-Fort Worth Airport's reading of 109 marked the area's eighth day of above-100 temperatures in June, and the fifth time during the month a daily record was set.

Dallas police said they have received 20 complaints of window air conditioners stolen this week. Many of those who still had air conditioners, however, found the heat too much for the machines and swamped repair firms with calls for service.

Dallas Power & Light Co.'s' customers established a record demand for electricity at 4 p.m. when they used 2.7 million kilowatts of power. The Dallas area's record high of 112 has been reached twice - in August 1909 and 1936.

"If there is a problem and they're not making minimum wage, we'll adjust it. But with TRLA leading this whole thing, no. It's illegal for TRLA to lead or encourage strikes," stated Fisher.

Concern was mounting Wednesday over onions in the Gault and Griffin & Brand fields which had already been turned up for harvest and were left subject to 100-degree heat.

Cameron Gault, part owner of the Gault packing shed here reported that production costs of $650 per acre could cost growers and shippers in the Hereford area $2 million or more if the crop cannot be harvested.

Iran and Libya are making "extraordinary efforts, fit only for fiction movies" in attempts to assassinate the deposed shah, an Egyptian official said today. Meanwhile, Iranian firing squads executed five more people, including a Jewish man convicted of having sexual affairs with Moslem and Christian women.

Writing in Egypt's semiofficial Al Ahram newspaper, Rashad Roushdy, an assistant to Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, said "The Libyan and Iranian revolutionary regimes are in agreement. Extraordinary efforts, fit only for fiction movies, have been undertaken by them to reach the shah on Egyptian soil."

Roushdy, Sadat's assistant for cultural affairs, did not describe any of the previously - undisclosed assassination attempts against Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi. The deposed monarch has been living with his family in a presidential palace in suburban Cairo. with Egyptian and Iranian security guards. He arrived in Egypt last March after a three-month stay in Panama following cancer treatment in the United States.

Roushdy suggested that last week's imposition of martial law on Egypt's frontiers with Libya was designed to prevent further attempts against the shah as well as Libyan nationals opposed to the regime of Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy.

The executions in Iran were ordered by Ayatollah Sadegh Khalkhali, who has sent scores before firing squads since the revolution ousted the shah in January

The Jewish man executed, Jalal Massarrat, was convicted of "producing and distributing heroin, having sexual affairs with Moslem and Christian girls and becoming wealthy by selling the deceived girls to brothels."

Patient Attacks Marijuana Pills

WASHINGTON (AP) - A man who gets marijuana cigarettes from the government for his glaucoma contends a federal plan to make synthetic marijuana pills available to cancer patients during chemotherapy is "medically reckless."

"It promises people relief that isn't there," charges Robert Randall, who says cancer patients should be able to get marijuana cigarettes instead, just as he does.

A Food and Drug Administration advisory committee was meeting today to hear a proposal from the National Cancer Institute to make up to 1 million pills containing a derivative of marijuana available on prescription to help cancer patients avoid nausea and vomiting during chemotherapy.

The acknowledged that tests marijuana show the ingredient. tetrahydrocannabino! (THC), appears to help cancer endure patients " chemotherapy treatment. The National Institute on Drug Abuse is planning to have 500,000 pills ready by Tuesday, and 500,000 more by the end of the yeaf.

Randall contends federal bureaucrats are pushing the idea of issuing marijuana pills because they can't meet states' demand for marijuana cigarettes.

New Mexico became the first state to legalize the medical use of marijuana in 1978 and 23 other states have followed suit. However, all 24 still must get their supplies through the federal government. Marijuana is still classified under the strictest federal drug controls, along with heroin and LSD.

The cancer institute's plan would not change that, but it would allow thousands of doctors to write prescriptions for THC pills that could be filled at pharmacies in 400 to 500 comprehensive cancer care centers and medical school hospitals around the country. It would make THC available on the same basis that doctors can prescribe experimental drugs for cancer patients.

Randall, 32, has been getting a free supply of 70 marijuana cigarettes weekly since November 1976 for his glaucoma. He contends smoking the marijuana reduces eye pressure and has kept his vision from deteriorating.

Randall said it does not make sense to give someone suffering from nausea a pill he or she may not be able to keep down. Also, he said, "The cigarette works in 10 minutes as opposed to the one-to-three hours that it takes for the pill to break down."

Randall charged that the THC pills are "a major hallucinogenic, not a mild euphoriant," and could create a new black market.

The cancer institute says tests have found THC could help 30 percent to 50 percent of patients avoid nausea during chemotherapy. Some 800,000 Americans are stricken by cancers each year. Two hundred thousand undergo chemotherapy, but half avoid nausea with conventonal drugs.,

The cancer institute says THC may not be suitable for older patients unaccustomed to getting high.

CULVER CITY, Calif. (AP) Television's most notorious crime, the shooting of oil-rich villain J.R. Ewing of CBS's "Dallas," apparently has prompted someone "who knew exactly what he wanted" to steal the script that may reveal the esolution to the case. Lorimar Productions, which makes the weekly prime-time soap opera, reported Wednesday that someone had broken into a "Dallas" story editor's office. The thief took three versions of a script "dealing with the revelation of who shot J.R.," according to Philip Capice, executive producer of the show.

The script was entitled,

"Whodunnit?" "Dallas" is one of television's most popular shows, and speculation about who shot J.R., played by Larry Hagman, in last season's final episode has become something of an international obsession. Ladbroke's booking house in England has taken thousands of wagers on the caper and Lorimar has taken precautions to keep the culprit's identity secret. Until this week, while Hagman and the producers wrangled over a contract, no one was certain that J.R. arrived on the set Tuesday.

Lorimar has been scripting and filming several different outcomes involving different suspects. Capice said the show's producers have decided on one of the suspects, but added, "It would be counterproductive to say whether this (the stolen script) is the correct one." Even if it is the right script, Capice said the revealing episode would not be changed.

In filming Wednesday in Dallas, J.R.'s wife, Sue was taken into custody for the shooting, the third arrest so far.

Meanwhile, a police officer in Culver City - where the theft of the script was: reported - said she thought the script had been recovered, adding, however, that she wasn't sure.

Lorimar denied that report as well as suggestions that a publicity hoax was being perpetrated. "Look, we' couldn't afford to pull a stunt like that," said a Lorimar publicist. "We've got sponsors and stations that would come down on us."

According to a report filed by security officers at MGM. Studios, where "Dallas" is filmed, the theft occurred sometime between June 3 and June 24, while story editor Andrew Lewis was on

Storm Clouds Follow In Wake Of Illinois Town's Windfall

ARGENTA, III. (NEA) -Grace Winings never got along well with the people of this small farming community. She lived in the area for 91 years, but made few close friends, cultivated an eccentric reclusion, and was the embittered subject of a good deal of cruel gossip and careless derision.

And so when she died last year she may have made amends and gotten even at the same time. What she did was leave a $1.9-million estate to the town, and the gesture has turned out to be both a welcome blessing and a troublesome scourge:

On the one hand, the Winings windfall is a gift that provides Argenta with financial security almost in perpetuity.
On the other it's a vexing nuisance that has set neighbor how best to spend the money.

Some think the money should be given to the churches. Others insist it must be used to lower the tax burden on residents. A few older people believe it would be nice to build homes for the elderly. And Mayor Jerry Camfield says he'd be delighted to see some of the cash applied to civic reforms.

"Everyone wants a share," Camfield sighs, "and that's a problem. It's a whole lot of money, but it's not enough to go around. Who gets it, and who don't — that's the question.'

The question was raised officially in 1979, when Mrs. Winings died of the infirmities of her advanced age. She held 480 acres of highly valuable cropland at the time, and instructed her executors to set it up in the form of a trust for the benefit of the 1,000 people who reside in Argenta.

To say the least, the residents were puzzled. Few of them knew the woman; and fewer liked her. She lived alone in an old house where she wore Depression-era dresses and kept plastic covers on the furniture. Her former maid says she rarely had visitors and never took part in community affairs. Yet her will was gracious and generous. It stipulated that the farmland would continue to be worked, and all profits would go to the people. Given the elevator economy of farming, no one knows what the profits will be. One guess is the town will receive between $20,000-$50,000 annually.

Even the low figure would be handsome here. Mayor Camfield says Argenta doesn't have a formal budget. When we need to buy something, we just see if the money is in the bank." But he thinks it's less than $20,000. That means the Winings money would be at least as much as all tax revenues. This comparison isn't lost on the residents. They say the will makes it possible for the town to do away with local assessments. A man at the feed store claims if taxes were cut he would personally lay the bricks for a Grace Winings memorial. "Even if she was an old, well, you know

Others in town would construct the statue if the Winings money were used to fix the roads. Or repair some of the neglected buildings on Main Street. One merchant suggests some money be used to "put up big-city Christmas decorations" because he thinks everyone goes to Deca-

And don't forget the community projects. Mayor Camfield says the water system here has a 150,000-gallon-perday capacity, and during the summer it is barely adequate. Besides this a $1-million sewage system is needed because Argenta voters have refused to raise the money though special levies.

Above all, perhaps, are the religious interests. Mrs. Winings was a member of the local Presbyterian church, and its pastor says she wanted the bulk of her estate to go to God. Rev. William Keagle says he talked with the woman before she died. "It was clear the church would get the

That clarity, however, is apparently not reflected in the will. Ed Wallace, a banker who is administering the trust, says the will does provide some money for the church. "But Mrs. Winings also wanted the rest of the town to benefit. So we are open to suggestions from anyone with serious proposals."

Rev. Keagle says he disa-grees with the banker's interpretation of the will, but won't contest it. Actually, he adds, "I don't think the money would be good for the church,

German Awareness on Upswing

By DAVID MINTHORN

Associated Press Writer BONN, West Germany (AP) - In West Germany, tests on new products are published each month, brace for consumer reaction. After one poor rating, the maker of a German sparkling manufacturers and retailers wine was flooded with 250,000 bottles sent back by dealers.

Such is the power of the highly regarded Foundation for Product Testing, which runs the tests.

"Products that test 'good' or 'very good' are practically assured of heavy sales. Those that get a 'defective' rating quickly disappear from the market," said the Foundation's Juergen Teves.

The tests, some say, have made. West German consumers perhaps the world's most knowledgeable people on household gadgets and services such as insuranceand banking.

Rising consumer awareness in West Germany has paralleled the country's soaring prosperity, and consumer groups have flourished in the last decade as the variety of products mushroomed.

Now, with German products trusted around the world for their high technical quality and reliability, the consumer organizations are battling misleading advertising to make sure the "Made in Germany" label will continue to guarantee top quality goods.

High standards in West German industry have largely eliminated unsound or unsafe products from the market, but "the biggest loophole is misleading advertising," said Thomas Schlier of the national Consumers' Cooperative headquartered in Bonn.

"Unlike in the United States, a consumer here can't demand his money back if the product fails to meet exaggerated advertising claims. That's only possible

A West German retailer or manufacturer cannot be fined for making false claims about his product, Schlier said. A retailer may offer television sets at vast savings as a come-on, but have only three in stock, or advertise "fullsized" stoves that have only two burners and lack an

Consumer groups are fighting back with class action suits, but even where abuses are proven, court fines are usually so nominal that the risk is worth it for manufacturers.

Schlier's organization, which operates 150 consumer counseling centers around the country with government subsidies, is lobbying for a change.

"We believe every consumer should have a moneyback guarantee and the right to sue for compensation if the product is sold by misleading advertising," he said.

On paper, West Germany has among the world's toughest safety, standards for consumer goods, especially electronic and household appliances, which must meet tough industry standards before going on the market.

But in direct comparison with foreign competition, the products sometimes rate lower in practicality, design or level of advancement, said Teves of the testing foundation.

"Our tests emphasize appliances, hi fi and optical goods. We test some food and household products and compare prices and services of banks, insurance and other goods in general are better or worse than those of other Western countries," said Teves. "It depends on the article But Germans dominate the household appliances, partly because there aren't as many foreign products offered on the domestic market."

The 15-year-old foundation runs comparison tests on five or six products each month, and the results are printed initially in Test magazine. which has a circulation of 780,000 and a readership 10 times as high, said magazine spokesman Friedrich

The results are then reprinted by newspapers and magazines, reaching a potential of 40 million to 45 million West Germans. Many buyers of basic appliances check the results before making a purchase. Industry initially had little more than an indulgent smile for the foundation when, in 1966, it published its first test results on the performance of electric hand mixers and juice presses.

But when the tests' effects on the public were gauged, industry sat up for another look. In 1969, a ski binding maker sued for damages of 1 million marks (then about $250,000) after getting a poor rating, but the West German supreme court dismissed the case, upholding the foundation's right to publish test

"Surveys show they have come to be an important power factor as far as retailers are concerned. Ninety-five percent of radio, TV, phonograph and photographic retailers reckon their customers are conversant with test results," reports the Deutsches newspaper.

Summer Sports Programs--Not Best

By FRED ROTHENBERG AP Sports Writer

One of the telltale television signs that summer is here is that the networks' sports anthology shows are turning a little rancid again.

Except for live boxing and car racing, these catch-all programs generally reach into the bottom of the barrel every July and August. That's when many clear-thinking, clear-viewing Americans are opting for the great outdoors rather than sitting through such TV treasures as a repeat of the World Frisbee Disk Championships on ABC; the Professional Underwater Competition (shark-tagging) and a repeat of the Hollywood Stunt Competition on CBS, and the Astrodome Thrills Show Demolition Derby and World Cup Windsurfing on NBC.

The realization that TV sets are sitting idle while beaches, hedges and golf courses are being attacked convinced NBC to keep in the can one highly-regarded segment for its "SportsWorld" show, rescheduling the World Invitational Pairs Bodybuilding Championship for sometime later when weekend watching becomes more acceptable.

But if the anthologies aren't too exciting, the networks' cloak-and-dagger maneuvering for events is causing some sparks to fly.

Last week, NBC Sports took out a full-page ad in the New York Times, -trumpeting: "Thanks! You've Made Us No.1 On Sundays!" -But in the smaller print, the ad revealed that "SportsWorld" was top-rated among the anthologies...not for the year or even the spring quarter, but for just the month of May.

May is one of the crucial ratings periods setting future commercial rates for the local stations, but an ABC spokesman who called the paper plug "misleading" and a CBS official who labeled the chest-thumping "bush" were making valid points.

ABC's "Wide World of "Sports" and CBS' "Sports Spectacular" are on both Saturdays and Sundays, while "SportsWorld" is only on Sunday. Since January, "Wide World" is still the ratings leader by a wide margin on both days. "It was only one month of the second quarter, which we won overall," said the ABC spokesman. "And it's an even bigger rout going back to January for the first quarter of 1980."

"At no time in May did the two shows go herd to head," said the CBS official. "You can do anything you want with ratings." The stakes in the anthology war are high. - CBS and NBC.

Theoretically, the better the events, the higher the ratings and then the higher the profits.

In addition, network macho comes into play. Besides pro football, which all three networks cover, the anthologies are the only other vehicle for comparing the sports efforts of ABC,

No-Name Player Netter Praises Borg's Play

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) - Just over a year ago, Shlomo Glickstein was a sergeant in the Israeli army. Thursday, he faced Bjorn Borg, the world's No.1 tennis star, at Wimbledon.

"It's a great opportunity for me," said Glickstein after he had upset Raul Ramirez of Mexico in the first round:

"I am sure I will learn a lot from the match and gain a lot of experience, and I hope to do my best."

But when he was asked about his chances of winning, Glickstein just rhapsodized about Borg, who is bidding to win Wimbledon for the fifth straight year.

"Borg is just a great player," said this virtually unknov.a Israeli, who is one of the few men from his country who have played at Wimbledon.

"He's out there on the court to win. His concentration is unbelievable. Psychologically none of the top players can beat him."

John McEnroe, seeded to meet Borg in the final for a prize of $46,600, was paired against Terry Rocavert of Australia.

Jimmy Connors, seeded third, had a more difficult looking assignment against Sherwood Stewart, ranked No.36 in the United States bút with a lot of Wimbledon experience behind him.

Vitas Gerulaitis, seeded fourth, faced Sashi Menon of India. Roscoe Tanner, last year's defeated finalist, was aiming his booming services at Australia's John Fitzgerald.

There was a chance Chris Evert Lloyd and Billie Jean King might get on court Thursday - if the men's schedule is completed. Neither has hit a ball yet.

Glickstein was the star of the third day's play, defeating Ramirez 4-6, 6-2. 3-6, 7-5, 8-6. He saved two match points at 5-3 in the fourth set.

Rain on the first two days has left the tournament seriously behind schedule.

The first seed fell Wednesday. Hank Pfister, a 6foot-4 power player, edged 6-7 Vic Amaya, the No.14 seed, 3-6, 6-4, 6-0, 3-6, 6-3.

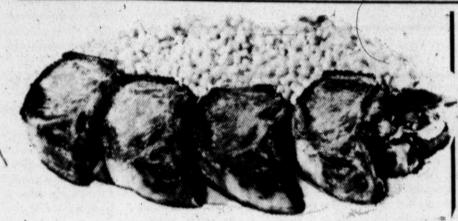

Winning seeds were No.15 Stan Smith, who downed Rhodesian-born Andrew

Pattison 5-7, 6-3, 6-3, 6-4 in a match that had been dragging on between rain showers since Monday; Jose-Luis Clerc of Argentina, who beat Vijay Amritraj of India 1-6, 3-6, 7-5, 7-5, 6-4, and Pat DuPre, ranked ninth and a semifinalist last year, who served and volleyed his way past sometime Hollywood actor Vince Van Patten 6-4. 3-6, 6-1, 6-4 in an all-American duel'.

Andrea Jaeger, 15-yearold from Lincolnshire, Illa the youngest-ever seed at Wimbledon, beat Britain's Anthea Cooper 6-3, 6-3.

Opponents contend putting the burden only on men violates the Constitution's Fifth Amendment guarantee of due process under the law.

The ACLU suit also will seek an injunction against starting registration until the court challenge is settled.

The House voted 234-168 Wednesday to give final approval of Carter's request for $13.3 million to register all 19- and 20-year-old men this summer. Both the House and the Senate previously rejected Carter's original proposal to register women as well as men.

Carter is to issue a proclamation next week renewing registration for the first time since 1975. Knowledgeable sources said July 21 is the likely effective

All men born in 1960 would be required to fill out registration forms in local post offices that week and all men born in 1961 would be required to register the following week. The maximum penalty for failing to register is five years in prison and a $10,000 fine, but no judge has ever imposed

Sergeant Due Release

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) - Air Force Staff Sgt. Joseph J. Byers, severly burned during the aborted rescue mission in Iran, has "fully recovered" and should be released Friday, said doctors at Brooke Army Medical Center.

Byers, 37, of Charleston, S.C., was the most seriously injured of the five commandos hurt in the ill-fated April 24 mission designed to escue - the American hostages in Tehran. He was burned in the fiery collision of a helicopter and transport plane, and originally was in critical condition in the center's intensive care unit.

A spokesman for the center said Byers would be released by Friday, but gave no specific time.

Still hospitalized is Marine Maj. Leslie B. Petty, 34, of Jacksonville, N.C. Petty is listed in serious condition, as he has been since he was admitted to the center, the spokesman said.

The other burn victims -Marine Maj. James Schaefer Jr., 36, of Los Angeles and 26-year-old Air Force Lt. Jeffrey B. Harrison of Warren, Ohio - were released previously.

A fifth man, Airman 1st Class William Tootle, suffered a bruised knee during the mission and was released shortly after treatment at Lackland Air Force Base's Wilford Hall.

Friendly Bank Teller

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I've seen many subjects discussed in your column but this one, never. It's a plea on behalf of bank tellers.

Most people believe we work from nine until three. and when the doors close we put on our coats and go home. Not true.

We have paperwork up to our necks, thousands of dollars to count, bundle and record. And we had better be accurate. But this isn't really why I'm writing. I want to get a message across to those clowns (Mr. and Mrs. John Q. Public) who hand us their money upside-down, insideout and backwards.

Please don't blow smoke in my face or jabber in an attempt to make small talk while I am trying to count your deposit. And when I ask for identification before I cash a check; don't scream at me and say, "You know who I am, I come in here all the time." The bank requires identification.

And I'd appreciaté it if you wouldn't rob me. I get very upset when ahyone points a gun in my face. Thanks a lot. - Your Friendly Neighbor-

Cooperation improves, relationships. The ability to cooperate affects children's relationships with others.

Effective group participation demands cooperation. · Cooperation builds responsibility. No family, commun-

As children grow, it's important for them to assume responsibility for their actions and rely less on the authority of others.

FAMILY PARTICIPATION

Cooperation is attained slowly over time prough daily practice in exercising judgment and making choices, Mrs. Wilson explains.

Sympathy, tolerance, giveand-take, self-control and respect for others are all involved in the ability to cooperate.

Parents who demonstrate these behaviors and talk about them easily help children learn cooperation.

WHAT PARENTS CAN DO Parents can do several things to teach cooperation.

Mrs. Wilson says. GIVE CHOICES. When children have a choice, they feel they have some say--so about their lives. This makes it easier to cooperate.

It is important for children to learn how to make decisions. It builds their feelings of confidence and a sense of "I can do it."

These feelings help children try, new things and increase their confidence in similar situations.

When chidlren are given a choice, accept their decision, even when their choice is not the wisest.

When health and safety are not in danger, experience can teach valuable lessons.

Everyone is talking about pyramids -- the make-money-quick scheme that is a lot like a chain letter only you send $1,000 to everyone on the list and by the time your name is at the top you owe IRS a lot of money.

But how many of you have been involved in the spend-money-by-association chain?

It works like this. Your best friend (?) invites you to a plastic party. Everyone likes you and wants to be your -friend--especially the plastic person with the order book who approaches you to host a party. She promises you a plastic cantaloupe keeper that will lock in flavor and lock out offensive odors.

You invite 12 of your friends to your party. The next day you have invitations from six of the 12 who attended your party to attend their plastic party. The other six invite you to attend a plant party, sports clothes party, pots-and-pans party. perfume party, encyclopedia party and silverware party.

At the plastic parties, you meet 72 new faces who also invite you to their plastic parties. Out of the other six parties, three of them are into fabric parties, toy parties and home interior parties.

At the home interior party, you meet another who is into copper parties, one into smoke alarm parties and another who is giving a bra party.

By the end of the second week, you have invitations to 388

The spend-money-by-association chain started long before home parties. It was begun innocently enough by a professional volunteer fund-raiser who one day pledged to fill a table of eight for a group of mothers who wanted to go to camp. She filled the table with only seven phone calls.

However, the next day, one of the women sold her a ticket to a dogs-born-under-Virgo luncheon, another sold her a raffle ticket on a pony, another a box of peanut brittle for Scouts, and another nailed her for a donation which would benefit women who could not uncross their legs in hot

Unlike the pyramid or the chain letter, you never get off the list, let alone make it to the top. A few women have said "No" to tickets and offers of parties, but I know something awful would happen to me like it did to Wanda Goodroad. She announced she had gone to her last home party and the next day....her cantaloupe keeper leaked!

COLLEGE STATION - In spite of gloom on the economic horizon, we "have come a long way," and here's a bright tidbit to prove

It started with a question --"How do you wash a crystal chandelier?"

Someone really asked Dr. Jane Berry, a housing and that question.

Mrs. Berry, on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. The Texas A&M University System, decided to share her answer with the public, because it says something: our level of living today in "mainstream America" IS better, since many of us will read this story with personal interest -- to find out how to wash OUR crystal chandelier.

Here are her instructions: Remember, the whole thing will be easier if you do it step-by-step.

1) Remove light bulbs. Wash, rinse and put them aside.

2) Lay a folded towel on the bottom of a sink or dishpan. Half fill it with warm sudsy water.

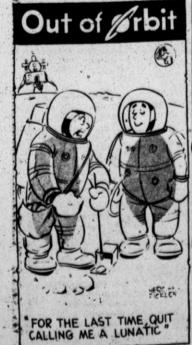

3) Pad another large pan with towel. Fill it with clean water for rinsing.

Add some ammonia for sparkle.

Press as you sew. Don't cross a seam with another seam before pressing it, says Nancy Brown, a clothing specialist on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M

"Fancy Flounder:" Line Season Jackets With thick fish fillets Ready-To-Wear Techniques 4 cup margarine or cooking oil

COLLEGE STATION Line this season's fashionable jackets in a snap by copying ready-to-wear techniques, says a clothing specialist. Becky Sanders is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. The Texas A&M University System.

Save time, and make an attractive lining by following these tips:

When cutting out the. lining, lay the center back one inch (2.54 cm) in from the fold or back seam at the neckline, but angle the pattern so that no extra fabric is allowed at the hemline.

This allows needed fullness across the shoulders for comfort. However, extra fullness is not needed at the hem.

Stitch a one inch (2.54 cm) pleat two inches (5 cm) long at'the center back neckline.

Sew sleeves into each armhole, leaving a large opening in the center of one underarm sleeve seam, approximately 10 inches (25.4 cm).

Sew the lining to the jacket by machine after the jacket is completed except for sewing on buttons and making machine-made buttonholes.

To sew the lining to the jacket, follow these steps. Check lining fit carefully before sewing each area.

1) Begin at the center back neckline at the pleat and sew with right sides together around the neck and center

Carter's November strategy

WASHINGTON (NEA) - The Carter-Mondale camp is not all that worried about polls showing Jimmy Carter lagging behind Ronald Reagan in the presidential race. The Carter people know the election is more than four months away, and they believe their strategy will result in a Carter victory, perhaps an easy Carter victory

The Carter camp is gearing up for what essentially will be a negative campaign - one in which the candidate runs not on his record but against his opponent

Obviously, Carter cannot run on his disastrous record Instead, he will paint the presidency as a nearly impossible job that no one could do any better. He will say that the nation's economic problems were caused by outside forces and that he has made the hard decisions necessary to bring the economy under control.

Carter's polis show that many Americans already believe that the presidency is an almost impossible job - and therefore that it doesn't really matter who occupies the White House. The president's camp figures that if voters are told often enough that Carter, "a good man," has done his best against almost invincible forces, by November they will

Carter's key planners think their most effective commercials during the primary campaign were those that featured a series of ordinary people saying. "I just don't trust Ted Kennedy." In the fall campaign, they will do much the same to Reagan by trying to paint him as "dangerous." Look for a lot of talk about Reagan's "adventurous foreign policy."

Also look for a lot of talk about Reagan's record as governor of California and about every misstatement he has ever made. An almost encyclopedic evaluation of Reagan's record has already been assembled by Martin Franks, issues director for the Carter-Mondale committee, and White House staffers under the direction of David Rubenstein.

To win in November, Carter must recapture those traditionally Democratic constituencies that during the primaries tended to defect to Kennedy labor, ethnic groups, the poor, middle- and upper-income liberals, Jews in the Northeast. To do this, the president will move sharply to the left. He and his aides will spend quite a bit of time before the convention appeasing Kennedy supporters.

It is within this liberal constituency that John Anderson poses his biggest threat to Carter. The Carter camp is sure the liberals would never turn to Reagan. But Anderson will give

So, the Carter campaign will spend a lot of effort trying to discredit Anderson. They will paint the congressman as a deep conservative who has often distorted his record and switched his position on fundamental issues. They will thus suggest Anderson is dishonest, challenging a key ingredient of his

They will also try to show that Anderson is not a serious candidate, that a vote for Anderson is a vote thrown away. That tactic has already been seen in Carter's reluctance to debate Anderson

The Carter camp has made a big issue of the independent committee that intends to raise and spend millions of dollars on Reagan's behalf. But while Carter's people are crying foul because the committee is taking advantage of a loophole in federal election law, they are simultaneously planning to do much the same thing themselves.

Last year Carter's forces quietly pushed through an amend-ment to the federal election law eliminating limits on what state political parties can spend on general-election campaigns. So in key states from New York to California, state Democratic parties will be raising of dollars on things that would normally fall within the campaign committee's budget.

Election law bars independent committees like the one backing Reagan from having any contact with regular campaign committees. But no such restriction applies to the relationship between state parties and regular campaign committees. In fact, the state-party effort is being run by White House aide Les Francis, who is, on leave to the Democratic National Committee; Francis remains in close contact with Hamilton Jordan, who is running the re-election campaign.

'Texas Recipes From Texas Places' Celebrates the Flavor of Texas

Welcome to the wonderful, exciting, sometimes zany, often wacky, but always entertaining and delightful world of Texas festivals, food fests, and cook-offs. It is a world of Miss Vacant Lot Contests and Shakespearean drama, of strawberry auctions and barbecued goat cook-offs, of fish fries and shrimp jamborees, of historic home tours," arts and crafts shows and salutes to the black-eyed pea.

Yes. Texans do like to celebrate. Sometimes we get the idea that Texas must be the festival-holding champion of the world. There are celebrations for everything, and no matter where they live, or what time of the year, chances are there's a festival going on.

Some events fall in the "crazies" category, others are rather straightforward, and then there are some that are just hard to classify. Events such as "The World Championship of Pickled Quail Egg Eating" or "Cuzin Homer Page Invitational Eat-and-Run Stewed Prune Pit Spitting Contest" or "Turkey Fest and Gobbler Gallop" or the "World Championship Corn Shucking Contest.'

But whatever it is that's going on is more than likely tied to a big Texas-style barbecue, a cook-off of one kind or another, a whole festival of foods, or some sort of fest honoring a regional food speciality. Which only goes to prove that whatever, else Texans do at the festivals, they do love to eat.

It's hard to travel anywhere in Texas without bumping smack into the chicken fried steak. Or a steaming bowl of red, or catfish and hushpuppies, for that matter. These are high on the list of Texas favorites, but there are times, when even they take a back seat to other culinary delights. One such time is Labor Day 'weekend in Brady, and the dish that reigns supreme is that gourmet's delight, that epicurean masterpiece -- barbequed goat!

What they have in this beautiful town at the top of the Hill Country is something billed as the World's Championship Barbecued Goat Cook-off and County Fair. You know almost right away that this is no ordinary barbecue because upwards of 70 chefs actually pay money to compete. For their fee each entrant gets wood and half a goat. From then on they are on their own.

One of the zainer festivals around is the International Armadilio Confab and Exposition held at Victoria. Here, between Houston and Corpus Christi, you will find people participating in the World's Championship Body Painting Contest, the Miss Vacant Lot 'Contest, and the Jalapeno Gobble. It all happens on Memorial Day weekend and is best classified as one of those "you've got to see it to believe it" type of things. Especially the Jalapeno eating contest.

Unless you've got a cast iron, asbestos lined stomach, this is one event better watched than entered. Even a few of these fiery little peppers can bring tears to your eyes.

Texas chili is one of those great provincial dishes that everyone knows how to make and each think his or her bowl of red is better than that made by anyone else. One reason for this seems to be that there is no single accepted way to prepare it. There appear to be as many recipes as there are cooks, which leads to interminable arguments, which finally leads to a showdown in the form of a cook-off.

. The whole idea of chili cook-offs was hatched by the Chili Appreciation Society of Dallas. Obviously, they were thinking big because they dubbed their event the World Championship Chili Cook-off, and they chose Terlingua, out in the Big Bend Country, as the site because someone thought it would be fun to have a party in a ghost town. The Founding Fathers claim it all started as a joke. Some say it still is but, nevertheless, knights and ladies of the fiery pot come from all over the country to do their stuff. Terlingua in November is no place for the weak! If you're traveling along in the heart of the truck farming region of South Texas and you are suddenly assailed by the sweet smell of strawberries, it must be around the middle of April and you must be near Poteet.

It is and you are. Poteet. population 3.018, is the Strawberry Capitol of Texas, and their Strawberry Festivat is one you won't want to

This big two-day affair, which has drawn as many as 175,000 people, features the crowning of the Strawberry Queen, a big parade and a fiddler's contest.

Our friendly neighbors in Louisiana have their Mardi Gras, but many a Texan will tell you, you haven't seen anything until you've seen the Texas Folklife Festival. held four days in early August in San Antonio.

Held on the grounds of the Institute of Texas Cultures, it literally food from around the world. There are 27 ethnic, national and cultural groups that have made Texas their homes, and this is where they get together to celebrate their heritage with colorful costumes, old-world arts and crafts, folk dancing and native food.

Texans don't seem to care what a festival is called as long as it calls for a celebration with plenty of music, dancing, fun and good food. The Oktoberfest qualifies on all counts.

One of the larger and more well-known of these Germanfests is the New Branufels Wurstfest. This ten-day long. tribute to the best of the wurst begins the first weekend in November, and it has become an annual pilgrimage for thousands upon thousands of Texans from all over the state. Fresh sausage of every conceivable kind. German breads and pastries, beer and oompahpah music are the order of the day.

No self-respecting Texan will eyer turn his or her back

Fruit In Season

Nothing takes the place of "fresh fruit in season" and that, very simply, explains the enormous popularity enjoyed by the many fruit festivals you'll find throughout Texas. Luling has its Watermelon Thump in late June, Pecos pays tribute to its world famous cantaloupes and DeLeon celebrates with a Peach and Melon Festival the first full week of August. If you like the just-picked flavor of fresh fruit, drop whatever you're doing and head for the nearest fruit harvest festival. Or try this recipe for "Strawberry Festival Shortcake" and start a festival of your own. The shortcake is from Imperial Sugar's newest cookbook, "Texas Recipes from Texas Places," Volume III. Recipe for "Strawberry Festival Shortcake" and ordering instructions for the free cookbook are in the adjoining story.

and while it is not a major crop, it is the object of a major celebration, If you're near the East Texas town of Athens in late July, drop in on the Black-eyed Pea Jamboree. You'll not only enjoy black-eyed pea favorites, you'll learn ways to use this Texas favorite you never dreamed existed. When it comes to cooking, black-eyed pea lovers get downright serious.

Newcomers to Texas and even many long time residents are often surprised to learn that Texas has a thriving dairy industry. It's understandable. Beef cattle get all -the publicity and, besides, you don't raise dairy cattle for the barbecue grill. Hopkins County in Northeast Texas produces nearly fifteen percent of the state's milk. and in Sulphur Springs, the county seat, they have not one but two festivals to celebrate the fact.

First off is the Dairy Festival, held three days in May. The other is the Fall Festival, the third week in September, highlighted by the world Championship Hopkins County Stew Cookoff and another dairy show.

The biggest harvest festival of them all is one Imperial Sugar wouldn't miss for the world ... the Sugarcane Festival at Weslaco down in the Rio Grande Valley, held the third week in February.

For ten days the atmosphere is one of fun and games, entertainment and eating. You can participate in the Candy Cane Olympics and enter contests like the musical ice blocks '(that's musical chairs with ice blocks for chairs), sugar cube building, push the sugar cube, sugar wagon relay, sugar cube throwing, grapefruit seed spitting and the sugar cube spoon race. In between times there are parades, a carnival, street dances, the Kiwanis chifi supper, the Lion's fish fry and the Rotary spaghetti supper. And there are food booths galore where you can enjoy the favorite recipes of the Valley.

You've heard this one before. You've been fishing all day in what is supposedly a "hot spot" and for your efforts you come up with only a sore casting arm. No sooner are you back on the dock when someone says to you, "you should have been here last week!" Not so at Aransas Pass down on the Gulf. Here you can fish from shore, wharves, piers and jetties and expect to catch redfish, speckled and sand trout, sheepshead, flounder, croakers, skipjack and drum. This is where "they bite every day." If you're coming down to try your luck, come in May and enjoy the Annual Shrimporee with its giant shrimp boil luncheon and colorful blessing of the fleet.

For 16 days every October, Dallas plays host to the biggest festival of them all ... the State Fair of Texas. During that time more than 3 million people will visit 200-acre Fair Park. It is 4-H Club and junior livestock show time, Future Homemakers of America, Broadway musicals, extravaganzas, prize livestock and horse show performances, and it is food from all over Texas. It is corny dogs and bake-offs, fried chicken and bagels. cotton candy, snow cones, and a delicate morsel called State Fair Donuts, which is unlikely any donut you've tasted. Yes, the State Fair of Texas is big, but it is no bigger than the state it honors. And that, in the final analysis, is the beauty of it

The festivals, food fests. fairs and cook-offs offer everyone opportunities to share the flavor and bounty that is Texas. At each of them you are a friend, a neighbor, a guest.

Many of the foods you find in Texas, and the events held to commemorate them, have been captured in Imperial Sugar's newest free cookbook, "Texas Recipes from Texas Places," Volume III. The cookbook is a continuation of an Imperial Sugar cookbook concept that began in 1977. Intended as a welcoming gift to newcomers and native Texans. Today. over 300,000 copies of Volume I and Volume II have been ordered by Texas homemakers.

Volume III includes a series of forty-two interesting new recipes for barbecue, chili, shrimp, chicken and other main dishes -- as well as recipe for side dishes, soup, salad and desserts. All of the recipes, with festival names and festival themes. were perfected and kitchentested by Imperial Sugar's Texas-born home economist, June Towers.

Instead of replacing the earlier editions, Volume III has become their companion. All three volumes are available and can be ordered free from Imperial.

Here are four of the forty-two recipes from Volume III of the "Texas Recipes from Texas Places' Cookbook series.

Blessing Of The Fleet

One of the many colorful events associated with the Texas Gulf Coast fishing industry is the traditional Blessing of the Fleet which takes place at Galveston, Aransas Pass and other port cities. These events are often accompanied by shrimporees and gumbo or creole cook-offs. This recipe for "Shrimporee Creole" is one of 42 new recipes featured in Imperial Sugar's newest cookbook, "Texas Recipes from Texas Places." Volume III. The cookbook, a companion to Volumes I and II, is free to users of Imperial Sugar. Recipe for "Shrimporee Creole" and ordering instructions for the free cookbook are in the adjoining story.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (NEA) -No one would have blamed Allan Rawlinford if he had given up on life in 1955. That was the year that his second wife died of the paralyzing Lou Gehrig's Disease and that his 26-year-old son was killed in a traffic accident. Those deaths seemed the final blow after the loss of his first wife to cancer eight years before.

At first, Rawlinford did lose hope. But soon his courage won out and he began what has turned out to be 25 years of adventure and heartbreak, victory and defeat.

Rawlinford, now 82, has traveled all over the world to help handicapped and under-privileged children and to encourage other elderly peo-ple to make the most of life. "When my second wife and my son died, I decided to retire early from the Postal Service and leave Chicago," recalls Rawlinford. "I got in my car and started driving, not knowing where I would go. "I ended up in Acapulco (Mexico). I had always loved became widely known as the "Santa" Claus of Acapulco" during his 14 years there.

Rawlinford's work began on a small scale. One of his first projects was to take a young polio victim to Mexico City for surgery and braces. Again, Rawlinford picked up the tab. Then he became interested in the children at the Latin American Orphanage and began making regular trips to rehabilitation center in Mexico City, his car filled with children.

Rawlinford saw the ships from many countries that docked at Acapulco as an opportunity to bring some fun into the lives of his orphans. He convinced commanders of some of the ships to invite orphans aboard for tours. meals and entertainment. The sailors enjoyed it so much that ship captains began contacting Rawlinford as soon as they docked, offering to entertain more children.

Because his pension money and savings were not enough for his many projects, Rawlinford convinced a group of wealthy Americans living in Acapulco to pay tor wiring and poles so that the orphanage could get electricity, to finance repairs at a local boys' town and to help the Salvation Army acquire a new

Utilities Warn: Don't Count Out 'Unexpected'

By LOUISE COOK

Associated Press Writer Utility companies say they're ready to take the heat his summer. Most officials say energy supplies are more than adequate to meet demand, and they expect neither brownouts power reduction to selected customers - nor blackouts - total electricity cutoffs or failures.

But the utilities contacted in an Associated Press survey earlier this week warned that the unexpected can always happen.

'We're entering the summer with good reserves." said Vic Poirier of Kansas City Power & Light Co. in Missouri. "Like any summer, we're covered for any contingency. But if we have a rash or unscheduled dutages, if a lot of (generating) units would come down, that could throw a monkey-wrench in our operatons."

A similar "if" came from Emmanuel Forde of Northeast Utilities, the major power supplier for Connecticut and western Massachusetts. "If everyone turned on his air conditioner and dishwasher at once, the answer is simply: We couldn't handle it," he said.

As long as there are no surprises, however, the situation "looks com-fortable," according to Forde. The utility's three nuclear power plants are shut down for equipment changes and refueling, but will reopen during the summer.

Conservation by customers has helped insure there will be enough power. "People are trying to cut back wherever they can, whether by patriotism or pocketbook," Forde said.

Across the country, Dave

Morse of the California Energy Commission described power supplies as "tight, but adequate."

Bob Krauch of Southern California Edison, which serves 3 million customers in the southern part of the state, said: "Everything will be fine." But he prefaced his statement by saying: "Barring unforseen equipment failures."

Like Forde, Krauch said customers are trying to use less electricity. "For years, we've been encouraging energy conservation," he said. "But it never worked until now and it's probably because prices have gone

Southern California Edison also has been conducting an experiment involving four big corporate customers whose energy use is monitored by computers. At times of peak demand, the companies are told to cut consumption. In exchange, they get a break on their rates.

The Department of Energy said recently it was impressed with the results of the program so far and is trying to encourage other utilities to set up similar cooperative projects.

One of the most pessimistic assessments of the outlook for summer came from North Carolina where officials say reserves are smaller than they have been in the past. "There's no doubt that this summer is tighter than last summer." said Dennis Nightingale, director of the electric division of the Public Staff of the state's Utilities Commission.

"The companies are playing it very close to the vest," said Nightingale. "It's got us bothered.'

Virginia Electric & Power

Co., reduced its output by 5 percent and almost had to impose rotating blackouts on June 2 and 3 because of hot. humid weather which came at a time when 10 of the utility's 64 generators were out of service.

Serious problems were avoided by appealing for conservation and buying electricity from other A Vepco utilities. spokesman, Kerwin Fisher, said all 10 units are back in operation and the utility expects'a 20 percent reserve for most of the summer. A new nuclear unit which will begin operations late in the season will boost reserves still further.

Arizona Public Service Co. also has a new plant — a coal-fired unit opened about a month ago. "It appears that we'll have adequate supplies," said Charlie Boyd, a company spokesman. The new plant, he said, "gives a better situation that we had last

Robert Wischmeyer of Consumers Power Co. in Jackson, Mich., said: "We three years ago - said there see very little likelihood of blackouts and brownouts this summer." The recession, which has hit hard in the auto-dependent state, has reduced power demand, Wischmeyer said, and "our operating equipment is in good shape."

Officials at Consolidated Edison in New York City scene of a huge blackout 'Island Lighting Co., which should be no problem. But Dan Walden, a Con Ed spokesman, added: "We always look at weather forecasting. Our peak load comes from air conditioning. We're asking our customers to keep their thermostats Hickman, Jan spokeswoman for the Long serves nearly 3 million suburban residents, also said she anticipated no trouble. "We expect to be in fine shape this summer," she said. There was, however, the obligatory "if."

"If a combination of several extremely unlikely things occurred at the same time, then any utility could have problems," Ms. Hickman

Women Attack Ads

Close-up: two bankers meet on Wall Street. One says, "I've tried everything, Fred, but I can't get my bathroom bowl sunshiny fresh. What do you use?" And Fred pulls out a can of new, improved...

Of course, that's ludicrous. But so is the way women appear in lots of TV commer-cials, say those who bristle at them. (A recent survey conducted for the Newspaper Advertising Bureau reported that in a national sample of 1,041 women, 59 percent who worked and 51 percent who didn't "expressed disapproval of how TV commercials treat their sex.")

Which is not to say, at the same time, that appearances haven't improved some. According to Jerry Miller, senior vice-president and group creative director of Young & Rubicam, a New York ad agency which earns $150 million annually promoting 35 products, many geared to women, "Now in commercials we show women more likely having lives outside the kitchen. For instance, one Birdseye commercial begins with a woman saying to her do, but not what he always business; you'll have to make what clients will go along your own dinner.' ".

But, he says, bristling feminism had nothing to do with that: crisp currency did. "I haven't heard any hue and cry from clients about women being disturbed at their images in commercials, but the figures speak for themselves. There are fewer women in the, kitchen, so we have to do commercials that reflect that.

"Still, as a creative man,". he says, "I'd prefer to show women having varied interests anyway, even if only as aspirational advertising. To show a woman as she'd like to be seen. I think most of them stuck in the house are hoping there's a way out:

"Also, that kind of advertising is a positive reflection on the product. It says, look, this worldly, involved woman has chosen this item. And I try to avoid sexual stereotyping because commercials have an enormous influence on people. Showing women doing housewifely things exclusively can limit v tions.

That's what Miller likes husband, 'I'll be out of town on can. "I'm a little restricted by with," he says. "There's a culture lag, for one thing, so we tend to be running behind the time. You start a survey and by the time you act on it, years have passed. Also, I suspect a lot of clients are living back in the '30s. They're out in the suburbs, away from the real world, and their own wives are still at home behind picket fences.

Those clients tend to say, women's lib, women's schmib. If my soap suds are selling, don't bother me about new, improved commercials that depict role reversals. And it's precisely the soap sud or household product advertising that generally hasn't been liberated, Miller says. "But," he adds, "don't forget there are still a lot of women intensely interested in cleaning clothes." And that's whom these commercials are directed at; with the best of intentions, adds Maureen Christopher, deputy executive editor of Advertising Age, an industry trade paper.

"As a specialist in the broadcast area," she says, "I know that advertisers don't deliberately set out to offend consumers. I think companies get caught in a bind because this is a time of changing mores. They want to sell merchandise to women who are for ERA and to those who aren't." Since that's as hard to do as removing stubborn grease stains, "they'll concentrate on that percentage of women still basically housewives."

But there's another rub According to Rena Bartos, senior vice-president and director of communications development for J. Walter Thompson advertising agen-cy, there is no such basic housewife. An on-going chronicler and analyst of the changing roles of women, Bartos has come up with "new demographics" housewives who stay at home and housewives who plan to work; women who work just to make money and women who work at a career. All may be married, rearing kids, divorced, etc. So the old conception of the American housewife aged 28 to 35 is invalid. And it irks.

Says Bartos, "The greatest amount of money in advertising is in mass supermarket products, I think, and that's where the greatest amount of irritating advertising comes from, based on those unconscious assumptions about the Still, she says, "Put-down, insipid advertising will fall of its own weight in the next few years, I think. The seeds of change have been planted and you just have to look back to discover how far we've Remember how Mrs. Olsen would save the newlywed's marriage by telling her what coffee to make? "I showed that commercial among others in a recent speech," Bartos says, "and the audience burst out laughing.

You Don't Get Rich' as a Country Doctor

FENNIMORE, Wis. (NEA) It is 8:40 a.m. Dr. Charles Shields rises with a sigh from his second cup of coffée. His day can't be postponed any longer.

People are waiting ~ children who have seen no other doctor since they first opened their eyes, elderly women who met him when they were expecting their youngest, fac-tory workers, businessmen,

Shields has practiced medicine in this town of 2,000 for 28 years, as a young partner for the first nine and as "the doc" for the rest.

The doctors that Shields tries to recruit as his eventual successors complain that the nearest hospital is 10 miles away. They talk about cultur-al isolation, an X-ray machine that might qualify for Social Security, weekends on call. Shields can't blame them.

They want to work a 40hour week," he says on his way to morning rounds. "Out here it can't be done. I missed things. I watched my daughter sweat through the Girl Scout father-daughter banquet every year for fear I'd be called away. Often I was.

He remembers the night when a farmer with an ailing wife attached a travois to the back of his tractor and dragged Shields to his house through knee-deep mud by the light of a flashlight. He remembers coming in at 11 p.m. from a house call simply to head out again on another.

Most folks today know itwon't make them sicker to come to the doctor's office, but they are still informal enough to drop by his home.

"That's one of the reasons young doctors want to stay in the city," Shields says. "They want their privacy. Or their wives do.

. "You don't get rich out here, and in the family practice groups they're starting at about $36,000. We don't make much more than that now, after all these years."

Shields has seen many changes in medicine since he graduated from medical school. Then, "the doctor" was someone who could set a bone, calm an expectant mother and remove an appendix. But soon general practitioners being replaced by specialists.

"I guess I went this route because I had an old G.P.," recalls Shields. "In terms of therapy, he didn't have much to give me. There was no sulfa or penicillin when I was a boy.

But after he looked at me, my sore throat felt better. And about fifth grade, I decided making people feel that way was a pretty fine thing."

Shields pulls his Chevette into the "doctors only" space at Lancaster Memorial Hospital, where his patients today occupy three of the 49 beds.

The visit is brief. He chats baby so bad.' with a nurse about a diabetic

He returns to find on his examining table a young woman with her knees drawn up in pain. Shields gives one of her legs a characteristic squeezing shake and, his voice low with concern, asks, "How's it going, Sally girl?"

"It hurts," she quavers.
"I'm bleeding." Qutside the room, Pat Bender, Shields' nurse of 21 years, voices her own suspicion: another miscarriage Rolling up his sleeves, Shields shakes his silver shock of hair in dismay. "Damn," he says. "And they wanted that husband's' mother is the diabetic he counseled earlier. After a quick examination, he telephones Ken Bauman, a friend and surgeon at Lancas-ter Hospital. Shields fears Sally has an ectopic pregnancy (a fetus growing in the Fallopian tube). The condition virtually demands quick surgery as the tube could rupture at any moment and Sally could bleed

With Sally en route to the hospital, where Bauman will look her over and call if surgery is indicated, the office takes on a quiet tension. An arthritic senior citizen needs

Then the call comes. Bauman agrees with Shields' diagnosis. The afternoon appointments will have to be canceled, Shields tells his At noon, the doctor drops honre for lunch with his wife Susan, a sturdy, gentle womar who once taught physical education and still shines in golf a passion she shares with her husband. After tuna casserole he takes time for one of the little cigars he favors. The couple's two Siberiar huskies come for a pat, weaving their way through a living room full of fragile mementos of Kenya, Japan, Sweden and plans to meet China's "barefoot doctors" and see the Great Wall.

By 1:45 p.m., Shields is scrubbing up for surgery in the hospital's green-tiled ante-

On the table, Sally, her fair hair held back by a cap, is biting her lip. "I'm not scared," she says. "I just don't much want this to happen. But as I told my husband, there's no choice."

Shields is helped into his gown by surgical nurse Sandy Waldman. Inside the operating room, the 33-year-old nurse is all business. But the case has personal meaning for
