

Mechanical Harvester Ires Striking Onion Pickers

The apparent use of mechanical harvesting methods in onion fields by the Howard Gault Co. here has stirred new controversy as a farm labor strike enters its third week here.

A group of 20-30 individuals picketed a field owned by the Gault Co. yesterday, angry over alleged use of harvesting equipment in the onions.

However, Howard Gault claims the equipment is experimental, and has not thrown any workers out of a job.

"Machinery will eventually replace laborers because it is much cheaper than salaries," stated Gault. "Things like this have to be developed and tried," he added.

The Gault firm was one of several local packing firms which gave mechanical onion harvesting equipment a try here last year as an engineer working on the equipment demonstrated it on an in-field basis while working bugs out of the harvesting system.

A Texas Farm Workers Union spokesman here claimed picketing was launched at the Gault field yesterday because some of the workers in the field were replaced by machinery.

That allegation was denied by Gault, however, who stated, "All of my workers were in the field."

Onion harvesting continues to move ahead in the county despite the presence of TFWU pickets at scattered harvest locations. Gathering of the onion crop here is estimated to be over one-third complete already. One local grower reported that prices on onions are down this year and stated, "Striking here is like striking the Chrysler Corporation."

Picketing activity was at a standstill in the county this morning, although it was expected to pick up again soon, possibly in Castro County.

A restraining order dealing with the activities of TFWU picketers is due to expire Thursday, and the 17 vegetable packing firms and organizations named as plaintiffs are expected to request a new order.

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says a poll seems accurate only when the results are for your side.

One of our neighbors says the best thing about a vacation is the opportunity to get back home and rest.

THE WIFE AND I did a lot of reminiscing over the weekend. The occasion was the Tornado Jubilee--a homecoming event staged every five years in Lamesa to welcome back anyone who ever attended school there.

The home folks put in a lot of work and planning for the event, including a big musical show with former students as the performers. One morning is set aside for class meetings; one afternoon for athletes and cheerleaders, and there is also a reception to honor teachers.

The Lamesa event (the fourth) drew more than 4,000 people this year from 180 cities and towns in Texas and there were 34 states represented. It is always held on the July 4th weekend. Other Hereford residents at the meeting were Genelle Clements and Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Clearman (now of Lawn). One thing Lavon and I sure did notice...some of our classmates are really looking old!

ANOTHER THING WE noticed at the homecoming event, everyone had heard about the farm worker strike in Hereford. And, after all, that seems to be the main thrust of the union organizers--to get all the television exposure and news copy they can in support of their views.

We heard a local citizen complaining the other day in a coffee shop that the so-called strike has nothing to do with the minimum wage. "What it's about is unionizing farm workers. Hereford is the stage, but all the leading actors are from out of town."

PART OF WESTERN Deaf Smith County is included in an area being considered as a possible dual basing location for MX missiles. County judges of the 19th Congressional District and their representatives will attend a meeting in Lubbock Wednesday to get more information on the proposal.

While the possibility of a West Texas base for the missiles has been posed for some time, not much talk has been heard. The reason is that our elected representatives all feel that the area will not be chosen.

Recently an article in Aviation Week & Space Technology magazine outlined the problems which are posed by MX basing in West Texas or Eastern New Mexico. These included: population density, large-scale private ownership of land, agricultural production, and decreasing groundwater supplies.

It has been reported that the Defense Department prefers the great basin of Nevada and Utah for deployment of the advanced intercontinental ballistic missiles. The only reason alternate sites are being studied is because of increasing resistance from residents of those two states.

According to the magazine, the entire MX program calls for 200 MX missiles and 4,600 missile shelters. The split basing proposal would have half of those missiles and shelters in the Nevada-Utah basin and the other half at an alternate site.

Another problem mentioned by the article is that of security

Carter Attends Japan Service

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — President Carter ended his hometown vacation and left for Tokyo before dawn today to attend a memorial service for the late Japanese Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira and his first meeting with Chinese Premier Hua Guofeng.

En route, the president stopped in Detroit, where he announced a series of proposals to help the ailing U.S. auto industry make the expensive transition to manufacturing smaller, more fuel-efficient cars to meet the challenge of imported vehicles.

The federal aid package, unveiled at a 45-minute airport meeting with auto industry executives and union leaders, includes an expedited hearing on complaints that U.S. car-makers are being harmed by imports; regulatory changes that would save the industry $500 million; and $200 million to $400 million in loans to help auto dealers finance their inventories.

Carter left Robins Air Force Base in Georgia aboard Air Force One at 5:30 a.m. EDT. After a refueling stop in Anchorage, Alaska, he was scheduled to arrive in Japan at 11:15 p.m. EDT tonight (12:15 p.m. Wednesday Tokyo time).

A White House official who declined to be identified denied speculation that Carter would discuss voluntary curbs on Japanese auto imports while in Japan.

"That is not a topic of discussion," the official said. "The trip is not designed to discuss substance." Instead, he said, the president wants to pay his respects "to the memory of Prime Minister Ohira," who died of a heart attack June 12 at

Bell Seeks $326 Million Hike

Field Ablaze

Hereford volunteer firemen responded to a wheat-stubble fire north of town Monday afternoon but let the blaze burn out on its own. The fire sent a huge cloud of smoke into the air, prompting a nearby resident to report it. Firemen have been busy responding to grass and stubble fires since last week and attribute most to fireworks. [Brand photo by Paul Sims]

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Ma Bell says she needs $1.75 a month more from residential customers and $326.3 million in rate hikes to meet the rising costs of telephone poles, cables and labor.

Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. filed its largest rate increase request ever Monday. Its previous high was a $298.3 million request; filed on Sept. 1, 1976, the day the Public Utility Commission went into business.

Bell wants to increase residential rates, limit directory assistance calls and increase business service rates. No increases are sought for long distance, WATS, or pay phone calls.

In three previous cases the commission denied the full amount sought by Bell. Paul Roth, vice president for revenue and public affairs in Texas, says Bell might be back for another rate hike next year if inflation continues.

"We see no prospects for relief, even in the long-term future," he said, citing inflation as the sole culprit.

If approved, the increase would give Bell an overall increase of 11.65 percent in intrastate business.

Basic residential service would go up $1.25 a month. There would be an additional 50 cents per month increase for customers who use Bell equipment.

Touch-tone residential service would go up $2.05 a month for customers using Bell phones.

Roth said residential rates would still "be substantially less than it costs to provide the service." He said residential customers pay about half or less of the actual costs for such service.

The biggest part of the rate hike ($120 million) would be in "vertical" or special business services.

"This proposal means the cost for business services would be more in line with our costs to provide them," said Roth.

Under the proposal, customers would be limited

City Studies Suit over Sirens

By MAURI MONTGOMERY
Brand Staff Writer

The Hereford City Commission opted Monday to consider legal action against the Dallas-based regional office of Motorola Inc. following the corporation's reported failure to honor and comply with a maintenance contract agreement concerning the city's early warning tornado sirens.

City Manager Dudley Bayne told the commission the original contract had specified the company would agree to maintain and bring all sirens to working order should repair become necessary, but subsequent corrosion to the batteries and battery contacts within the siren housings had rendered many inoperative.

He also stated that upon the advent of problems with the system, he had corresponded with Motorola several times in an attempt to get the company to honor its maintenance agreement with the city, but the corporation had failed to comply.

"When we considered bids for the current siren systems, we chose Motorola because of the included maintenance agreement it proposed," Bayne said. "But, we've had nothing but one big hassle on our hands since the system was installed, so I therefore recommend that the commission file suit against the company."

Commissioner Wes Fisher motioned that the council begin drawing up a suit to be filed against Motorola.

The commission accepted a $16,520 bid from Fuqua Enterprises in Cleburne for 20 residential refuse containers to be installed throughout Hereford. The Fuqua bid was the lowest of three other bidders.

The commission tabled matters pertaining to recommendations from the city electrical board and the installation requirements of smoke detectors in new city residences.

The electrical board recommendations encompassed additions to the city electrical code on requirements for master electricians and journeyman electricians and specifications in wrong and circuitry in residential installations.

The commission gave tentative approval to close an alley in the Chaparral

Hillerby Named Ad Manager

Robert A. (Bob) Hillerby, 36, has been named as the advertising manager for The Hereford Brand, it was announced today by publisher Speedy Nieman.

Hillerby, who assumed the position Monday, replaces

BOB HILLERBY

Bob Nigh on the newspaper staff. Nigh recently moved to Borger to accept a job there with a radio station.

Hillerby has been in the commercial printing business in Hereford the past seven years. A native of Quannah and reared in Amarillo, Hillerby studied journalism at Amarillo Junior College.

He has been self employed in the printing business here. Hillerby managed a printing shop in Plainview before coming to Hereford and also worked as printer on the Amarillo newspaper after graduation from high school.

He and his wife, Alice, have two sons--Michael 12, and David, 9.

Judge, Commissioners To Discuss MX Missile

Deaf Smith County Judge Glen Nelson, two county commissioners and some "private citizens" will attend a Wednesday morning meeting called by U.S. Rep. Kent Hance of Lubbock to discuss the possibility that the proposed MX missile might be located in West Texas.

Nelson said he was notified by letter of the meeting, which was called for area county officials and members of the news media.

"We'll probably take some private citizens along with us," said Nelson, who plans to tape record the proceedings.

Hance, congressman from the 19th District, has invited Gen. Forrest McCartney of the Air Force to the meeting to outline details of the MX system to the county officials.

"I will be contacting all county judges in the 19th District asking them to send representatives to the meeting," Hance said. "This will be strictly an information meeting. It will not be a public hearing at which we are soliciting opinion about the MX. The Air Force has stated that Nevada-Utah is the number one priority location for the MX and that West Texas - New Mexico is the alternate location. I just want everyone to be informed with the proper facts."

Hance said the meeting will be open to the public. However, questions will be limited to those from the official representatives of each county along with those from the news media.

"The Air Force will hold public hearings at a later date at which everyone will have the opportunity to express their opinion of whether they want the system located in West Texas - New Mexico. This is a meeting I am initiating so that everyone will have the proper facts on which to base an opinion. We do not want to be caught off guard and unprepared," Hance said.

"I want to emphasize that West Texas has not been chosen as a site for the missile," he said. "However, the Air Force will be studying our area in depth as an alternate site and I want everyone in the 19th District to have as much information as possible with which to make their decisions."

Heat Won't Relax Grip

By The Associated Press

As a heat wave continued to bake the South and Southwest, record high temperatures also were set from the central Plains to the lower Mississippi Valley and Great lakes region.

The deadly heat spell has been blamed for at least 11 more fatalities, raising the total to 154.

More hot weather was in store for today, forecasters predicted, with temperatures pushing above 100 degrees from the mid-Mississippi Valley across the southern Plains and southern Rockies to the Southwest.

In Chicago, the temperature reached 102 degrees at O'Hare Airport on Monday.

In Manning, Iowa, hot, sticky weather was cited as a factor in the collapse of a silo that killed one man and injured another.

The silo, filled with 500 tons of soybean meal, crushed Kenneth Weets, 41, in his office at its base when it collapsed, authorities said. Officials said heat apparently caused the meal in the upper part of the silo to stick together, creating a large air pocket that later pushed

Borrowers To Get Cheaper Insurance

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Texans who borrow money for cars and other consumer goods after Oct. 1 will find it cheaper to obtain credit life insurance.

The State Insurance Board has reduced rates for the coverage by 14 percent, effective on that date.

Credit life premiums will drop from 58 cents to 50 cents per year for each $100 of initial indebtedness. That would drop the cost of a credit life policy on a four-year $6,000 automobile loan from $139.20 to $120.

Credit life insurance guarantees payment of a loan if a borrower dies.

Nick Williams, a board actuary, estimated the cut in credit life rates would save Texans between $20 million and $40 million over the next three years.

Carter Tells Detroit That Relief Due

DETROIT (AP) - President Carter planned to bring "good news for Detroit" and its depressed auto industry in a whirlwind visit here today that Republicans said was motivated purely by political considerations.

The president was scheduled to meet with auto industry leaders and to announce a program to provide relief for the industry, which has been hard-hit by the recession and competition from imports. Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., said Carter would discuss a recent government study of industry problems and then might announce a speedup in processing of a United Auto Workers complaint seeking government action against Japanese imports.

"It will be a signal to the Japanese by the government that they should be doing something voluntarily to limit auto exports, or there will be some government action taken," he said.

Carter's stopover on a trip from Plains, Ga., to Tokyo, rankled Republican Party leaders gathering here for preliminary sessions of the GOP national convention, which convenes next Monday.

Barroom Rifleman Sentenced to Life

EL PASO, Texas (AP) - A man accused of firing a .22-caliber rifle into a crowded bar last winter, killing five persons, has been sentenced to life in prison after changing his plea to guilty.

Barry Chvarak, 21, had originally pleaded innocent, and his attorney said he was preparing a defense based on insanity.

A jury had already been seated to hear testimony in the case, but before court convened Monday, Chvarak's attorney told prosecutors the plea would be changed.

Witnesses to the Feb. 3 shooting said Chvarak had an argument with his brother as the two sat in the Starburst Lounge about 1:30 a.m. Chvarak left and returned a short time later with a rifle, according to witness John Harris.

Harris, one of three men who helped subdue Chvarak, said Chvarak began firing into the Saturday night crowd with the rifle, shooting eight persons. Two men and three women were killed. The other three wounded victims survived.

Chinese Grain Agreement Likely

WASHINGTON (AP) - A meeting scheduled later this week in Tokyo between President Carter and Chinese Premier Hua Guofeng is raising speculation that a U.S. - China grain agreement may be in the works.

"I've heard this for six months...but I wouldn't be surprised if it turned out to be true this time," one Agriculture Department official said Monday.

But the official, asking not to be identified, said he knew of "no hard line" indicating a bilateral agreement was imminent or that, in fact, China wanted such an arrangement.

Carter was scheduled to meet with Hua on Thursday following memorial services for Japan's late prime minister, Masayoshi Ohira, who died on June 12.

The possibility of an agreement to provide China with a minimum quantity of U.S. commodities including corn and wheat, could have some political attraction for the Carter administration, currently under fire from Ronald Reagan and the GOP because of its determination to stick with the embargo on grain shipments to the Soviet Union.

and monitoring the system. The bases will have to be set up with the SALT 3 negotiations in mind. The basic plan in the Great Basin called for 2,000 security personnel, a fleet of 12 to 15 helicopters and a two-layered electronic surveillance system to monitor the MX system.

About 2.5 acres of land would be fenced off around each of the shelters. If half of the missile shelters (2,300) were put in West Texas, that would require at least 5,750 acres of land.

One of the primary advantages of the Nevada-Utah basin is that the land is essentially government-owned with few people living or working in the area. Land in the West Texas-New Mexico area, by comparison, more than 90 percent privately owned and includes much farm and ranch land. An impact statement on the area is due around the middle of the month.

the age of 70. During his stopover in Detroit, Carter is being joined by Secretary of State Edmund Muskie and National Security Adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski for the trip to Japan.

After the memorial service, Carter will visit Emperor Hirohito, acting Prime Minister Masayoshi Ito and Mrs. Ohira. He will spend the night at the residence of the American ambassador, Mike Mansfield.

Shortly before Ohira became ill, the Japanese parliament voted no confidence in him, in large part over his willingness to go along with an American request that Japan increase its defense spending, now less than one percent of its gross national product.

Before leaving Tokyo Thursday morning, local time, Carter and Hua will meet for an hour at the Okura Hotel. Meeting for the first time, they are expected to discuss the Soviet military presence in Afghanistan, which both nations oppose, and other issues.

En route home 21 hours after his arrival, Carter is stopping in Anchorage for 12 hours to spend the night and to fish. From there he flies to Sapelo Island, Ga., for a week-long vacation during the Republican National Convention.

The president left Washington Thursday and spent two days in California and Florida, giving speeches and attending fundraisers before flying to Georgia.

Carter and his wife, Rosalynn, wound up his first home visit in nine months Monday evening by dining at the home of a friend Monday evening. It was the Carters' 34th wedding anniversary.

Earlier, he had pitched a winning softball game against a team headed by his brother, Billy. The score was 23-7. He is expected to return to the White House on July 17.

to five free directory assistance calls per month, down from the current limit of 10. Customers now pay 20 cents for "information" calls beyond the limit. Bell wants those calls to go to 25 cents each.

Bell says it costs 24 cents to handle information calls, and 6 percent of residential customers made 42 percent of the information calls during a recent test month.

The request includes modifications to measured service rates, now offered to customers who pay a reduced fee for 25 or fewer calls per month.

Instead of a 25-call limit, measured service customers would be given a "monthly usage allowance" of $1.85. Any calls beyond that amount would be billed to the customer.

In areas with electronic phone eq., rent, measured service calls will be billed according to duration, distance, and time of day (similar to long distance billing).

Roth said PUC's denial of full rate increases sought by Bell has not hurt the company's bond ratings. However, he said it makes it necessary for Bell to make repeated trips to PUC to keep up with inflation.

"It means we have to come back perhaps more often than we'd like to," he said. "We cannot reprice overnight like the corner grocery," he said.

Bell asked for $145.2 million in increase last year and was awarded $138.7 by PUC in November. The company said it actually needed $243 million, but cut the request to bring it in line with President Carter's anti-inflation guidelines.

Roth said those guidelines expire in September, and Bell would revise the request to meet with any new Carter guidelines.

Lott, an ERA opponent himself, said it was clear the votes weren't there to vote continued support for a strong pro-ERA plank. Thus, the result will involve at least some backing off from the 1976 provision urging ratification of the amendment. "It's just a matter of degree," Lott said.

The ERA platform fight and a similar, but less intense, battle over abortion language appeared to be the issues to challenge party unity at a convention at which the nomination of Ronald Reagan is certain.

Reagan's aides have said he would support a platform with a pro-ERA plank if that's what the convention wanted, despite his own views. There seemed to be a general reluctance among many platform committee members to force a floor fight that might mar Reagan's nomination.

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, chairman of the full 106-member platform panel, said efforts were still being made "to devise a policy statement that all Republicans can run with."

Republicans Disagree Over ERA Support

By TOM RAUM Associated Press Writer

DETROIT (AP) - A dispute among Republicans over whether the party should renew its 40-year support for the Equal Rights Amendment is heading for its first showdown vote, with anti-ERA forces initially claiming the upper hand.

A GOP platform subcommittee was expected to vote today on compromise proposals aimed at reconciling the party's traditional support for the ERA with opposition to the amendment

Scientists Join NASA

By JIM TEEL

Associated Press Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) - The class of astronaut candidates entering National Aeronautics Space Administration training this week includes two scientists from Europe, representing the agency's move from space conquest to space exploration.

The Europeans are part of NASA's joint Shuttle-Spacelab venture with the European Space Agency and demonstrates part of the U.S. agency's move from high-stakes competition to cooperative exploration.

NASA's first two non-American trainees joined 19 U.S. candidates Monday in the first day of the one-year program at Johnson Space Center.

ESA will reimburse NASA for costs of training Swiss astronomer Claude Nicollier, 33, and Dutch physicist Wubbo Ockels, 31, who were selected following a screening and selection process similar to that of U.S. applicants.

The two scientists already are Spacelab I Payload Specialists for the ESA module designed to be carried into orbit as part of the U.S. space shuttle. The training program will qualify the two Europeans to be mission specialists on the shuttle.

"We have been involved with Spacelab with the Europeans for some time now," said John McLeisch, public information director at NASA. "The two Europeans were selected, to be very candid, as payload specialists. But the space shuttle scheduling has slipped somewhat and that extra time allowed us to put them in the astronaut program."

The latest group of mission specialist trainees includes a native Costa Rican who became a naturalized U.S. citizen in 1977 and is the first Hispanic admitted to the program. And the ranks of trained astronauts and astronaut candidates now include four blacks, eight women and a married couple.

The profile of America's space explorers today is quite different from that of the original seven Mercury astronauts — an all-male, all-white group of high-powered military test pilots. But that is only one of the directional changes that has taken place since 1959, when the daily activities of the Mercury astronauts were front-page news across the country.

"It's sort of like going from the Spirit of St. Louis to the DC-3," McLeisch said. "(Charles) Lindbergh was the hero of the country, but DC-3 pilots are largely unknown."

The early space pioneers entered a program that was uncharted and full of uncertainty in a heated race for space against the Soviet Union.

Donald K. "Deke" Slayton, one of the original Mercury astronauts, recalls the era as one of experimentation.

"Nobody had a plan. We just came on board and worked from scratch," he said in a recent telephone interview.

Although a heart condition prevented him flying in the Mercury program, Slayton was aboard Apollo-Soyuz, the most recent U.S. manned flight in 1975.

One of the factor leading to his chance at a space shot despite his history of heart disease was the reduced level of stress — both physical and emotional — involved in a space launch.

More recent spacecraft carry several crew members and are considered much safer and more comfortable than the cramped one-man Mercury quarters.

"Back in the Mercury days you had an 80 percent chance of success," Slayton said. "We're trying to build up to airline safety levels now."

The 56-year-old astronaut now heads orbital flight testing for the Shuttle Program, which has been plagued with technical difficulties and launch postponements. The latest target date for the first shuttle launch is sometime after March 1981.

But Slayton said that once those difficulties are overcome and the first four test flights are completed, the shuttles will be launched on a weekly basis.

"We would like to think most everybody will fly," Slayton said.

NASA plans to recruit more astronauts every year and Slayton said physical characteristics will play a smaller role in selection of who will be launched into space.

Cash Stolen at Hospital

Five hundred dollars in cash was taken sometime over the weekend from an office in the Deaf Smith General Hospital.

According to police, the money was in a bank bag.

Several other thefts were reported over the weekend, including a burglary at Range Western Wear, 233 N. Main, where a burglar broke out the front window. They are still taking inventory there in the second theft reported in two weeks.

Several rifles and handguns were taken in the first robbery, for which one man has been arrested.

A CB radio was taken from the car of Alicia Hernandez, 910 Schley, while it was parked in front of her residence. The telephone-style radio was valued at $50. Police have issued a warrant for the arrest of a local man, wanted for evading arrest.

When officers stopped the man for squealing his tires and running a red light, he did not have a drivers' license or any kind of identification.

When the officer told the man he would have to go with him, the man replied, "No, I'm not," and ran off.

When officers were unable to catch him, they impounded his vehicle and wrote three traffic citations.

There were also several cases of vandalism, criminal mischief and attempted burglary over the weekend, according to police.

Burglars made an unsuccessful attempt to break into the City of Hereford dog pound and incinerator.

Lazaro Hernandez, 817 Blevins, reported that a door had been broken and a screen bent, and a window broken out at the home of his neighbor, Gilbert Arellano, 815 Blevins, who is out of town.

Burglars also made an unsuccessful attempt at entry at Caison's Barbecue, 828 W. 1st.

While on patrol, an officer noticed that a metal rod had been jammed in the door, and the glass on one side of the building had been broken. There was also a large piece of metal in one of the booths. Damage is estimated at $200.

A woman in the 400 block of Paloma, reported that a prowler was kicking at a neighbor's door and pulling at the latch. Police said they have a suspect.

Two concrete parking stops were broken at Park Avenue Florists, 315 Park, Ave. and some indoor-outdoor carpet was burned there.

An apartment at the Sycamore Lane Apartments was vandalized by a former occupant when he moved out, police said.

The apartment manager reported that when the renter left, he left cigarette burns on the kitchen counter, holes in the carpets and marks all over the walls.

Two bikes with a combined value of $200 were taken from the home of Birdy Brown, 237 Ave. E.

Police issued 14 traffic citations over the weekend and investigated two minor non-offense reports.

Paul Harvey News After The Volcano

I'm writing these words with my fingers crossed. The dome of lava building up inside Mt. St. Helens at the rate of 20 feet a day can become a sealing scab which will gradually heal the hurt

... Or it could cause subterranean ferment to blow out the side again; more deaths, more devastation.

But at the moment it appears that Helen is through burning, perhaps for another hundred years or so.

Yet American vacationers are staying away from the Pacific Northwest as though five states had become something of a combat zone.

The volcano spilled over only a few hundred acres but the rest of the country has been throwing rocks ever since.

Cities such as Yakima, Wash., were clean and green within a week... yet they are still hearing from tourists who were afraid to head that way, fearful they'd find roads closed and a city in gas masks.

Millions of residents of Northwestern states are not nearly so worried about another volcanic eruption as they are about the sustained barrage of scare headlines.

The dust can be swept or shoveled away but the cloud of fear appears here to stay. Tourists are staying away. Industries which had intended to move to the Northwest are reconsidering. Psychological problems are escalating.

Anxiety about ash is a greater health hazard than the fallout itself. During and since the May 15 eruption five Portland, Oregon, hospitals have treated almost nobody because of breathing volcanic ash, but many have been hospitalized because of anxiety about it.

Concern for the long-range impact is especially worrisome to population centers thereabouts.

Realistically, they remember that the last time this mountain blew her top in 1832 the eruptions continued

WTCC Leader To Visit Hereford

Jack Pilon, president of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, will be in Hereford Wednesday to confer with local WTCC members about matters affecting the region.

Accompanying Pilon will be Ed Coltharp, executive vice president, and John Barnes, membership director. Hereford directors for WTCC are Clint Formby and Speedy Nieman.

Pilon and Coltharp will outline current activities of the West Texas Chamber and invite comments and questions from the participants. A noon meeting is scheduled at Hereford Country Club. All WTCC members, as well as interested citizens, are invited to the dutch treat luncheon.

4-H'ers Keep Busy During Summertime

By AGNES TAYLOR
Ass't County Extension Agent
Summertime is a busy time for 4-H Clubs. They do not meet on a regular basis due to work and other organizational activities during June, July, and August.

Presently, we have 30 4-H'ers who are working in a Clothing Project. The Deaf Smith County Fashion Review will be held July 14th in the Library. 4-H'ers will be judged in the morning; at 1:30 p.m., awards and a public viewing will occur.

Just recently six Deaf Smith County 4-H'ers entered the District Horse Show held in Amarillo on the Tri-State Fair Grounds. These 4-H'ers all performed well. We have at least ten other 4-H'ers actively involved in the Horse Club.

Two of our older 4-H'ers, Shelley Gerk and Becky Hughes, attended Citizenship Short Course and a Heritage Tour and traveled from Dallas to Washington D.C. and back. This 4-H trip gave them leadership training while they stayed at the National 4-H Center in D.C. and participated in learning and training seminars. They specials include a gift book available for $5 - $10 or $15. Also available is a train party for $15 which includes a ride to and from one location. Party room at Fun Park, clown, balloons, caps and horns. The maximum train capacity is 50 children under age 9 or 20 adults. Free rides are offered to the one having the party.

Special prices being offered during the grand opening include golf, $1; wet Willie slide, $2; bumper boats, 75 cents; and kiddie rides, 25 cents.

The public is invited to visit the newly built Fun Park in Plainview.

At Wits End

By ERMA BOMBECK

The challenges in this world are disappearing one by one. We paint by number, connect little dots, and consult bumper stickers for our philosophy.

There are few surprises to titillate our curiosity or to test our skills anymore. The networks tell us who won the election three hours before the polls close. The media tell us how the movie ends. The sex of our unborn child has become predictable.

I am glad my father did not live to see the appearance of the sonar fishfinder.

The sonar fishfinder looks like a hair dryer. You put the nose end under water and pull the trigger. As you move it back and forth, a reading shows on the digital board. When the numbers jump, you're over the fish. Gotcha!

When I was a kid, my father went fishing four or five times a week. One Sunday in Covington, Ohio, he caught his first glimpse of a fish so big it could have swallowed Jonah and still had room left over for dessert.

Week after week, we made the pilgrimage to Covington to watch my father try to outsmart this giant carp. There were countless times he had him on the hook, but always he broke the line, ran with it behind a rock or overpowered my dad to the point where he lost his footing and ended up in the water thrashing and cussing.

One day in June after months of struggle, my dad cast his line upon the water and the carp went for it. An hour and 15 minutes later, the fish lay at Dad's feet gasping with exhaustion. Dad had won. He didn't want the fish. He wanted to have his picture taken with it, weigh it, and show it to his friends. He took it to the city park pond where he worked and gave the fish his freedom. By the next morning the 29-pound carp had eaten every exotic fish in the pond and was asked to leave. He was returned to the river.

Somehow the sonar fishfinder is just another short cut in a world that already abounds in "just add water," "blow horn for service," "instant replay" and "condensed books."

If the sonar fishfinder had prevailed years ago, there would have been no Moby Dick, no Old Man and the Sea, no Jaws, and no large picture of my dad cradling a 29-pound carp in his arms with the inscription, "Baiting my hook in Covington, Ohio."

The Lonely Heart

Ann Landers

Impossible Wife

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please stop telling people to get "professional help." My wife and I will probably end up divorced because of your advice. Ever since she has started to go to a psychiatrist she has been impossible to live with.

The psychiatrist advised her to "express herself." He said she had too many bottled-up emotions and needed to release them. Well, she is releasing them all right, and her outbursts are more than I can take.

After she has finished tearing me to pieces, she says she feels a lot better and is getting well. Maybe SHE is getting well, but I am getting sick. I'd like to hear what you have to say about this since you are the one who started all the trouble. -- Ragged Edge (Pittsburgh)

DEAR RAGGED: Expressing oneself does not mean tearing people to pieces. The psychiatrist probably suggested that your wife be more assertive and not allow herself to be tropped on.

I believe joint counseling would be beneficial. You two need to ventilate your feelings about one another in the presence of a professional who can act as an impartial moderator and counselor. Ask your wife to talk to her doctor about this.

My brother firemen and I have responded to many calls to remove cats. We have been scratched, bitten and generally mauled by cats that were terrified by heights. One of my buddies almost lost an eye. Sometimes, after a long struggle with trees and high tension wires, we would get the animal safely to the ground only to watch it climb back up the same tree.

I don't mind risking a piece of apparatus that costs over $100,000 or even my life for my fellow man. After all, that is what I've sworn to do. But to risk my neck for a cat?

I have never known of a cat who could not get down from any place it managed to get up to. If this were not the case, the trees would be littered with the skeletons of cats, and so far I haven't seen even one. -- Harold L. Mineola, N.Y.

DEAR HAROLD: By the time you read this you will have seen another letter about a fireman who risked his neck trying to rescue a canary. I responded, "If my son were on the ladder that was 'dangerously far out' I would not be inclined to applaud or cheer. I'd be horrified."

You realize, of course, that we will both catch a lot of flak from animal-lovers who believe they ARE worth the risk. I'm bracing myself for the onslaught because I'm with you, brother, all the way.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please say something about parents who leave their children under six years of age alone in the house when they go out at night. Our neighbors do this at least three nights a week and it worries me sick. They say they can't afford a sitter and they are sick of staying home all the time. Will you comment? -- No Name In Nashville

DEAR N.N.: So many terrible things could happen to those kids I can't begin to list them. Don't the parents read newspapers? So far they've been lucky. Also, they could be charged with child neglect. Please tell them so. If they don't shape up you have a moral obligation to notify the police.

A no-nonsense approach to how to deal with life's most difficult and most rewarding arrangement. Ann Landers' booklet, "Marriage -- What to Expect," will prepare you for better or for worse. Send your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611, enclosing 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Musical Groups Entertain HSC's

Two musical groups entertained a crowd of 175 Friday at the Senior Citizens' Fourth of July barbecue.

A group of singers from the Church of the Nazarene, under the direction of youth director Ted Taylor and music director Dave Roberts were first on the program. Roberts also performed some solos, including "This is My Country," "The Impossible Dream," and other popular songs.

The Andrew Sisters also entertained the group, or at least it appeared so.

Connie Huffaker, Robin Umsted, and Barbie Koelzer under the direction of their manager, Tiffie Dirks, pantomimed the famous trio while playing original recordings of the Andrew Sisters.

After the show, the girls led the audience in the singing of familiar patriotic songs, beginning with "The Star Spangled Banner," and ending with "The Battle Hymn of the Republic."

One hundred and seventy-five people were served at the barbecue lunch, which began at 11:30 a.m. Friday, and a crowd remained at the center all day.

Some members brought their out-of-town guests to the center to participate in the games and good times to be had there.

The Fourth of July barbecue, under the direction of program director Sadie Leasure, was the first holiday event for which the center has remained open.

Baptist Women Convene For Panel Discussion

The Night Baptist Women of the First Baptist Church met in Kinsey Parlor recently for their regular monthly Mission Program, salad supper, and panel discussion on "Southern Baptists Getting Started on New Mission Fields."

The panel discussion was led by Alice Christman with a brief history of the first mission work in China in 1845 and of the recent reentry into that country.

Others assisting in the discussion were Della Stagner, Jewell Smith, and Jennie Terrell. Southern Baptist presently have missionaries in 94 countries; Bold Mission Thurst calls for having them in 125 countries by the year 2000.

During the business meeting, presided over by President Leatrus Clark, reports were given of various activities the women had been involved in. These included GA Camp at High Plains Baptist Assembly, Associated Prayer retreat also at the Assembly Grounds and the annual Guest Picnic held in the backyard of the J.O. Clark's.

Plans were made for the upcoming Ice Cream Supper for the resident's in King's Manor Methodist Home which is scheduled for early August.

Sadie Shaw and Faye Brownlow were hostesses for the salad supper which preceded the evening meeting.

Additional members present were Donnie Owen, Costaline Lee, Opal Elliston, Virginia Curtsinger, Leta Curtsinger, Lillie Stagner, Leona Sowell, and Lillian Lookingbill.

Dr. Adams Receives Awards

ST. LOUIS -- Dr. Milton C. Adams of Hereford, Tx, received the American Optometric Association's 1980 Optometric Recognition Award recently in Denver, Co.

The award is given to doctors of optometry who have completed 150 credit hours of continuing education in their field over a three-year period. Only 404 optometrists in the country have earned it.

In presenting the awards, the association's president, Dr. Alvin Levin of Carlisle, Pa., said, "Your achievement is a credit to your determination to maintain currency of practice with scientific developments in optometry so that you can provide your patients with the best vision care available today."

Approximately 5,000 doctors of optometry and their guests were in Denver to attend the annual meeting of the 20,000-member association, which has offices in St. Louis and Washington, D.C.

YOU AUTO KNOW

By Don Henslee

Q. You are my last hope for finding out what's wrong with my brand new 1980 Ford Thunderbird. It's only two months old and it is already using oil... way too much. I've checked everything for leaks... the dealer has checked everything he can. Neither of us found an answer. Since you're my last hope, do you have any ideas?

A. Just one. Are you sure the car has the right dipstick? Occasionally, the wrong dipstick is put into the engine. This is the easiest thing to overlook when troubleshooting a new car. To be sure you have the right dipstick, hold it next to one from the same make and model and be sure the marks and length are the same.

STATE CAPITAL HIGHLIGHTS

By Lyndell Williams
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN — Beleaguered House Speaker Bill Clayton wanted an early trial to clear himself of Brilab charges—and he is getting one.

A Houston federal judge last week set July 21 as the date for the trial of Clayton and his co-defendants.

Speaker Clayton says he is ready anytime his lawyers are, but they say the defense case may not be completed by then and may seek a delay.

Clayton wants the trial over with as soon as possible so that he may be clear to run for a fourth term as speaker when the Legislature convenes in January. He is charged with accepting a bribe, among other counts, to award the state's multi-million dollar health insurance contract to a particular insurance company.

Castration Urged

The chairman of a House committee now investigating child-abuse and pornography told a hearing he would like to see persons convicted of incest and vicious rape offenses given a choice between castration or imprisonment as punishment.

"I'd neuter every one of them," said Rep. Doyle Willis, D-Fort Worth.

A Dallas prosecutor told the panel that children are often sold as prostitutes to clients who order them through a catalog that features nude photographs.

As Willis' comments might indicate, the committee is seeking a crack-down on crimes against children.

Public-Funded Abortions

Following a U.S. Supreme Court ruling outlawing federal funding of abortions, the Texas Department of Human Resources will restrict public-funded abortions in Texas to comply with the law.

The high court had ruled to uphold a restriction on Medicaid spending for abortions and will allow the use of funds only in extremely limited cases.

The TDHR board may meet this month to restructure its abortion policy.

Trucking Deregulation

A lobbyist for the trucking industry told the House Subcommittee on Trucking Industry Deregulation that removal of controls would hamper motorist safety on the highways and limit service to small cities.

He said deregulation would favor independent truckers who are more likely to "take chances and go further than the law allows." The highways would be crowded with trucks more concerned with profits than safety to Texas motorists.

Deregulation would also harm trucking services to small cities and communities, making it undependable and more costly.

Panel chairman Lanny Hall, D-Fort Worth, said Texas officials will keep their eye on developments in Florida where trucking was deregulated last week.

Anderson Stumps Energy

Trying to gather enough petition signatures before July 4 to get on the state's presidential ballot, Independent candidate John Anderson told reporters he favors placing a limit on the taxes that energy-producing states such as Texas place on their natural resources.

He offered statistics to show that eight oil-rich states will raise $120 billion from their severance taxes by 1990 at the expense of consumers in non-producing states.

Texas has a relatively moderate tax, 4.6 percent on crude oil and 7.5 percent on natural gas, which raises about one billion dollars annually.

Coal Hauling Rates

Texas Attorney General Mark White and Congressman Bob Eckhardt, D-Houston, met with Vice President Walter Mondale last week, seeking an amendment to a railroad deregulation bill which would protect Texas against excessive coal hauling rates.

White said passage of the bill without the Eckhardt-Udall amendment would undermine a recent court victory reducing the rate of hauling coal from Wyoming to San Antonio by as much as 25 percent.

Mondale said he would try to bring the opposing forces together for a compromise.

Coast Guard Finds More Tar Balls

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND, Texas (AP) — The Coast Guard has ordered tests on goopy tar balls that floated ashore at this South Texas resort, a startling discovery that one expert says "could be Campeche oil."

The deposits — ranging from oil-covered seaweed to pancakes measuring six inches across — prompted officials to wonder whether last summer's Mexican oil spill is resurfacing.

"I couldn't guess where it's coming from," said Coast Guard Chief Wayne Bauer. "It could be Campeche oil or it could be from somewhere else."

The Coast Guard received reports of the oil Sunday night, Bauer said.

The Ixtoc 1 well in the Bay of Campeche gushed out of control last year and stained South Texas beaches at the height of the summer season. The well was capped in March, and scientists said another large spill would be avoided.

The Newspaper Bible

YOU SHOULD BE A "SON WORSHIPER"

Long ago God spoke in many different ways to our fathers through the prophets (in visions, dreams, and even face to face), telling them little by little about His plans. But now in these days He has spoken to us through His Son to whom He has given everything, and through whom He made the world and everything there is.

God's Son shines out with God's glory, and all that God's Son is and does marks Him as God. He regulates the universe by the mighty power of His command. He is the one who died to cleanse us and clear our record of all sin, and then sat down in highest honor beside the great God of heaven.

Thus He became far greater than the angels, as proved by the fact that His name "Son of God," which was passed on to Him from His Father, is far greater than the names and titles of the angels.

For God never said to any angel, "You are My Son, and today I have given you the honor that goes with that name." But God said it about Jesus. Another time He said, "I am His Father and He is My Son." And still another time -- when His firstborn Son came to earth -- God said, "Let all the angels of God worship Him."

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor:

I'd like to respond to the letter from Veterans of Foreign Wars, Roy Wederbrook Post No. 4818 of Hereford. I'd like to say to my comrades, as a member and veteran myself, that Sheriff Travis McPiersen is only doing the job taxpayers are paying for, and as for opinions formed against Texas Rural Legal Aid are not 100 percent shared by all veterans. I, as others do, morally support TRLA for the good work in defending farm workers with their human rights.

Undocumented workers is not what this is all about, but, federal minimum wages are important and necessary to survive inflation.

I cannot understand how we veterans, who fought for humanity, for the rights and freedom of our country as well as for other countries, can now be against the one thing that cost us so many lives and hardships to win.

When our community faces an economic conflict, a solution is in order to solve this problem rather than to ignore its existence.

We are a nation of different cultures and we must respect each other according to our constitution.

Ali Prevalent In Holmes' Winning Bout

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — The battle lines are clearly being drawn for a Larry Holmes-Muhammad Ali fight following Holmes' victory over Scott LeDoux in the "battle of the eye."

While LeDoux was complaining that a thumb to his left eye led to his being stopped in the seventh round Monday night in his bid for the World Boxing Council heavyweight title, Ali was shouting about what he would do to Holmes and Holmes was saying: "The hell with Ali. Let him fight somebody else."

"Let him fight the Nos. 1, 2 and 3 contenders. He'll fade like an old man."

But before leaving his post-fight news conference, the 30-year-old Holmes said, "If I get $8 million, I'll fight Ali next year."

Holmes wouldn't get $8 million but he would get a lot of money and he might fight

Ali next fall, not next year. Before the fight, promoter Don King had said: "There is going to be a fight. That's definite...sometime in September or October."

There is a deal in the works involving Greg Campbell of Madison, Wis., who has been involved in business ventures with Ali, that could put the fight in Egypt. Caesars Palace in Las Vegas, Nev., reportedly is another contender for the fight.

"The way he looked tonight I would have whupped him," said Ali, who was among a crowd of 6,491 that watched Holmes' one-sided victory at the Met Center. "He's still my sparring partner." Holmes used to help Ali prepare for fights.

Ali said he thought the fight Monday night should have been stopped a round earlier. It almost was.

In the closing seconds of the sixth round, Holmes threw a right uppercut that smashed into LeDoux's left eye. The 31-year-old challenger dropped to his knees and put his glove to the eye. Referee Davey Pearl started counting. LeDoux got up at five, took a mandatory eight-count and lasted the round.

Pearl summoned Dr. Jerry O'Brien to LeDoux's corner to examine the eye, which was closing rapidly and had blood around it. O'Brien let the fight continue.

"I caught a thumb — bingo," said LeDoux. "You can't imagine what it's like to get a thumb in your eye. It (the pain) was unbelievable. It was unintentional."

"I hit him with a right uppercut and the bottom knuckle of my hand hit him in the eye," explained Holmes. "How can you thumb a man with a punch at 100 miles an hour."

Early in the seventh round, encouraged to keep fighting by his wife, Sandy, who has undergone two cancer operations.

LeDoux went back to his corner where he was joined by Sandy and their 4-year-old son, Joshua.

LeDoux said he was still able to see. But he also said the punch that damaged the getting hit by lefts and rights.

The referee and the two judges gave Holmes every round and gave him a two-point edge in the sixth.

In between several of the rounds, Ali, television cameras on him, would jump to his feet and shadow box. Sometimes he would point to Holmes and then point to the floor.

"I don't pay Ali no mind," said Holmes, who obviously did become upset with the former champion who retired last year. "I knew he was going to be an ass from the beginning."

Holmes' seventh straight knockout in as many title defenses, for which he earned $1 million, boosted his record to 35-0 with 26 knockouts, while LeDoux's $225,000 payday ended in his ninth defeat against 26 wins and four draws.

The Holmes family's record remained unblemished when the champion's 20-year-old brother, Mark, made a successful debut. Holmes, 158 who lives in Easton, Pa., as does his older brother, stopped Robbie Robinson, 154, of Cleveland in the second round of a scheduled four-rounder.

In the first half of the ABC-TV championship doubleheader, Saoul Mambly gave a top display of boxing punching as he stopped Esteban DeJesus in the 13th round and retained the WBC super-lightweight title.

Mambly of New York, who weighed the class limit of 140 pounds, knocked down DeJesus, 139½, of Puerto Rico in the 12th round with a right-left-left hook to the head. In the 13th round, Mambly put DeJesus down with a six-punch series to the head that was climaxed by a right.

Referee Rudy Ortega didn't even count. It was over at 1:13 of the round.

Mambly, who got $100,000 for his title defense, improved his record to 28-12-5 with 14 knockouts.

Pearl again summoned the doctor to examine the eye. Again action resumed.

"He was defenseless," said Holmes. At 2:05 of the round, Pearl agreed.

There was to be no storybook ending for LeDoux, the man from nearby Anoka who four years ago, when his career appeared at a dead end and he had $100 to his name, was eye "was a left hand, I think."

"I felt I was slipping his punches," said the challenger. "He never hurt me at all. He doesn't punch that hard."

But it was obvious to onlookers that LeDoux, who weighed 224 to 214 for Holmes, was being peppered by left jabs. And in the fifth and sixth rounds, he was

Names Steve Stone To Lead Pitching Staff

By JACK STEVENSON
AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Earl Weaver managed the American League All-Stars the last time they won and he'd like nothing better than to duplicate the feat tonight after a eight-year drought.

The Baltimore skipper took umbrage when Pittsburgh relief pitching ace Kent Tekulve told an audience that the National League had won the last eight and 16 of the last 17 because the players were faster afoot.

"We've had speed," Weaver retorted, and then pointed out that in an All-Star Game it's mostly pitching and hitting without too much strategy unless maybe the score is tied in the eighth inning.

"Then we might try to steal," he said.

Weaver named right-hander Steve Stone of his own pitching staff to start against the National Leaguers, whose Manager Chuck Tanner picked fireballer throwing right-hander J.R. Richard of Houston to start.

It was almost Mutt and Jeff when the two hurlers stood together for photos. Richard looms 6-foot-8 and Stone goes 5-10.

Richard depends on his fastball because "that's what it's all about."

Stone has more of an assortment.

Each pitcher can work a maximum of three innings under All-Star rules, and each squad has plenty of outstanding successors for Richard, with his 10-4 record in 1980, and Stone with his 12-3.

Weaver even suggested that relief pitchers work an inning between the stints of the starters because "they can warm up faster and you don't know when they might be needed."

American League President Lee MacPhail, who has had to rule on alterations between Weaver and various umpires, said he thought the punishment of this All-Star Game might be the most harsh.

"He has Paul Molitor, George Brett and Jim Rice sitting on the bench and he can't use any of them," commented the league president in noting that the top vote-getters in three positions are on the injured list.

Weaver chose Willie Randolph of the New York Yankees to replace Milwaukee's Molitor at second base. Graig Nettles to start at third base instead of Kansas City's Brett and Ben Oglivie of Milwaukee to take over for Rice of Boston.

Weaver said he chose Stone over such other stars as Tommy John of the Yankees, Larry Gura of the Kansas City Royals, Rick Honeycutt of the Seattle Mariners, and Dave Stieb of the Toronto Blue Jays "because he was coming off three days' rest."

Tanner said Richard was chosen over Steve Carlton of the Philadelphia Phillies and Jerry Reuss of the host Dodgers for the same reason.

League Players Ratify Agreement

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Major league baseball players overwhelmingly ratified the new basic agreement and benefit plan, the New York Times reported in its Tuesday editions.

According to Players Association Executive Director Marvin Miller, the vote in favor of the Basic Agreement was 619-22.

Special Master Also Eliminates "Junior Eligible" Status

NBA To Modify Awards

NEW YORK (AP) - The Marvin Webster compensation case may finally be nearing an end, but the legal wrangling over the Bill Walton award is only beginning.

The National Basketball Association was directed Monday to modify the compensation awards made by Commissioner Larry O'Brien following the signings of Marvin Webster with the New York Knicks in 1978 and Bill Walton with the San Diego Clippers in 1979, both as free agents.

The order came from Telford Taylor, the court-appointed Special Master designated to oversee disputes stemming from the NBA's agreement with its players association, commonly known as the Robertson Settlement.

In another matter, Taylor upheld the NBA's elimination of "junior eligible" status from the NBA college draft. This change, which requires players with remaining collegiate eligibility to renounce that eligibility in order to be eligible for the draft, was instituted by the league last year but was appealed by the players association.

In the Webster case, Taylor ruled as excessive O'Brien's award of Lonnie Shelton, a 1979 first-round draft pick and $450,000 from Knicks to the Seattle SuperSonics. However, he denied New York's request that the award be cut in half or that the Knicks receive either Shelton or Vinnie Johnson, the player chosen with that draft choice, in any new award.

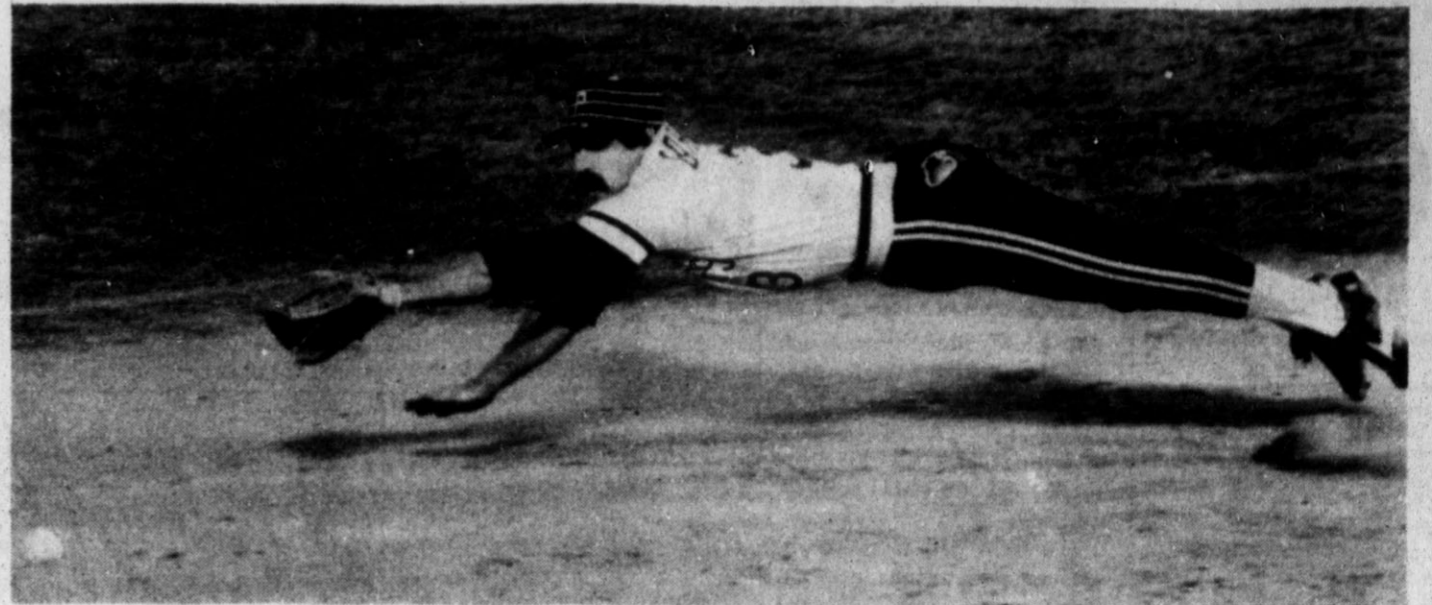

"Perhaps it was prudence rather than chance that moved the commissioner to include cash, which is refundable, in the Webster award," Taylor said in his ruling.

Presumably, O'Brien's new award will leave Shelton and Johnson with Seattle but will involve the return of some or all of the $450,000 to New York.

Webster, a 7-foot center, led Seattle to the Western Conference title in 1978 before signing a five-year, $3 million contract with the Knicks. He has been plagued by injuries during his two years with New York and not played up to the level he showed with the Sonics.

"Our position from the outset was that the award was excessive," said Knicks President Mike Burke. "Now two years and many judicial steps later, it has been determined that our position was correct."

Although Burke didn't say it in so many words, the Knicks are hoping to receive more than just money in return from Seattle in O'Brien's forthcoming ruling.

PHIL GARNER of the Pittsburgh Pirates says he's the guy who does the little things. Like diving for a baseball to keep it from going through the infield. This kind of effort has earned him a top salary.

Infield Star

Garner Laughs At Money

By Murray Olderman

BRADENTON, Fla. (NEA) - Phil Garner remembers it vividly, coming home one spring night three years ago and not knowing whether to feel ecstatic or despondent.

"Christ, honey," he said to his wife. "I just turned down a million bucks."

At the time, Garner was the second baseman on the Oakland A's. But he no longer wanted to be part of that team.

His timing was wrong. The A's had won three straight world championships, in 1972, 1973 and 1974. But by 1975, when Garner (up from the minors to stay) played his first full season for the A's, they had started their decline.

"I could have been a cornerstone for a new string of championships," Garner says. "But I go to spring training in 1977 and I see no signs of rebuilding. My second year we let players like Rollie Fingers, Joe Rudi, Sal Bando and Bert Campaneris get away. Charlie Finley signed Dick Allen, but that was no positive gesture."

"I hadn't signed my contract, but when I perceived what Finley was doing with the team, I said I wanted $1.8 million for four years, guaranteed, non-negotiable. Now, remember, this was when salaries were still in the $75,000 to $100,000 range, and I had only played two years in the majors and hit .246 and .261."

"If he's crazy enough to pay, I said to myself, I'll stay. Finley asked me, 'Would you take a million for four years?' I don't know whether to laugh or cry or sign with the team. But I said it was non-negotiable and knew he would never pay my price. So I had forced a trade."

The March 14, 1977, swap, of course, was to the Pittsburgh Pirates, for whom Garner has now played three sterling seasons of infield. Of course, he has a multi-year, big-money contract.

He was a vital factor in the 1979 Pittsburgh drive to a world championship, the championship that he had missed when he was with the A's.

Garner is now 30 years old — he'll be 31 on April 30. And he's coming off the best campaign of his five-year major-league career. He hit .293 in 150 games, slugged 11 homers, drove in 59 runs and stole 17 bases.

But the figures barely outline his contribution.

Garner, who took advantage of a few rounds of golf in Puerto Rico at the American Airlines Classic to help keep trim before coming here to spring training, has a good handle on where he fits into the Pirates' scheme.

Pittsburgh fostered a "family" feeling — with Willie Stargell as the main honcho and glamour exploits from such natural talents as outfielders Dave Parker and Omar Moreno.

"When I first walked into the Pittsburgh clubhouse," Garner recalls, "I could see immediately that Willie Stargell was the man."

"We had a lot of explosiveness. What the Pirates lacked was a steady, consistent force. Now, I can't carry a club. I can't dominate games. I don't have that kind of ability."

"But I knew I would fit in as a guy who does little things. Diving for the ball and knocking it down with a runner on second so he can't score. Or a runner on first so he can't move to third. Getting the double play when you have to have it in a crucial situation."

Hitting the cutoff man. Bunting guys over. That's the way I make my living.

"We would have won in 1977 and again in 1978, but we made little mistakes. I'll bet we lost 15 to 20 one-run games because we made bad relay throws, things like that."

But it all came together in '79, particularly after the Pirates acquired Bill Madlock from the San Francisco Giants and installed him at third base, shifting Garner back to his original position as a second baseman.

There was an irony in that, too. Garner had not wanted to play third in the first place. He had not wanted to go to Pittsburgh, either.

"Howard Hague, the Pirates' super scout, had followed the A's around for two months in 1976," recalls Garner. "He asked me how I'd feel about playing third base at Pittsburgh. I answered that, number one, I didn't want to change to third base. Number two, I didn't feel like changing leagues after I had spent so much time learning the American League. Third, I didn't want to play in Pittsburgh; I honestly thought I was going to Boston."

Which shows you how much control most players have over their destiny. Garner, a slender, intense man, deplores the grasping vogue among most players.

"I don't feel bad about not taking that million when Finley offered it," he says. "I've got enough security."

"I was never ungrateful to Finley. He signed me (in 1971 out of the University of Tennessee) and gave me a $15,000 bonus to start out my life. I got $16,000 my first year in the majors plus a $5,000 bonus at Christmas. He almost doubled my salary, to $31,500, my second year. I've done all right since."

"I'd like to see us not worry so much about making money. Instead of wondering about how much he's getting, people ought to watch Dave Parker play the game the way he plays it. No one's ever played it harder."

"No, if you ask me, and to be honest about it, I don't think baseball players are worth what they're being paid. But a car isn't worth what you pay for it, either. Or a loaf of bread."

Who Am I?

ANSWER: Jimmie Fox, 'Old Double X.' A first baseman who played (1925-65) for the A's, Red Sox, Cubs and Phillies. He is a Hall of Famer.

Only three baseball players have won the American League's MVP award three times. Yogi Berra, Mickey Mantle ... and me. In my career, I hit 534 homers. No wonder I was called The Beast. And known by a funny alphabet nickname.

The Tennis Game In 'Days of Old'

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

LONDON (AP) — If modern tennis players think they have it soft, with all the big money and attention lavished on them these days, they should hark back to Henry VIII, England's reigning monarch in the mid-16th Century.

Henry, it seems, was quite a card. In his younger days, he was handsome and athletic and, according to historians, was "passionately addicted" to the sport of tennis.

He played every day on his private court in the Hampton Court Palace and, when he was finished, repaired to the Beer Cellar where all his courtisans and even the palace commoners got pleasantly loaded on home-brewed ale.

That's not all. The king, because he was royalty, never had to serve. Instead, before every match a half-dozen strong-armed young men were lined up behind his majesty and when it came his time to serve he would turn and pick one of the youths.

"Service" he would bark.

"It was beneath the dignity of anyone of royal birth to put the ball in play," said Ronaldson. "So the king always had a choice of a substitute server. If he wanted a hard ball served, he might pick one of the youths. If he wanted a tricky slice, he might choose another."

This undoubtedly also was the birth of the "designated hitter."

"Real (or court) tennis is the ancestor of the modern game that turned out not a bit like its bearded old progenitor. It is played indoors in a huge, barn-like structure with penthouse roofs and intricate targets known as "dedans," grille and rows of little windows. If you hit the right one, a bell rings.

The equipment is primitive. The balls are made by hand, with a core and 15 yards of tightly wound webbing moulded and sewn into a spherical shape. The rackets are smaller than regular rackets and misshapen so they look as if they've been warped.

Scoring is the same as in lawn tennis — 15, 30, 40, ad, deuce, etc., with no concession to Jim Van Alen's tie-breaker system.

"Do you know how the scoring developed?" asked young Ronaldson. "A match was scored by the hands of the clock — 15 for 15 after, 30 for half-past, etc. It really should be 45 but lazy people got to calling it 40."

Tennis originated in France before the 12th century, first called "jeu de paume" because it was played like handball. As hand callouses developed, paddles came into use, finally rackets strung with sheep gut.

Royals, Yankees Favored In Playoffs

By The Associated Press

If tradition holds, the Kansas City Royals and New York Yankees will be in the American League playoffs this fall.

But they have much more than baseball tradition going for them this time — each has a solid lead in its respective division race.

As players gathered for tonight's All-Star Game in Los Angeles, the Royals were sitting atop the AL West with a comfortable 8½-game lead and the Yankees held a solid 7½-game advantage in the East.

Both the Royals and Yankees made it to the top at the halfway point despite heavy injury problems.

The Royals have had their regular lineup on the field for only four games of the season, as a result of injuries to center fielder Amos Otis, outfielder-designated hitter Hal McRae, third baseman George Brett and left-hander Paul Splittorff plus the early disability of catcher Darrell Porter.

But John Wathan, first filling for Porter behind the plate and then playing various outfield positions, has been one of the key players in the Royals' scheme, batting over .300 all season. Another has been Clint Hurdle, a .300 batter since taking over the right field position vacated by the trade of Al Cowens.

While first-year Kansas City Manager Jim Frey has been mixing and matching with the broken Royals' lineup, so has Dick Howser at New York.

Also in his first year as manager, Howser has been beset with injuries that would stagger most teams.

But capable reinforcements, including such as outfielders Joe Lefebvre and Bobby Brown and infielders, Brian Doyle and Dennis Sherrill, have helped the Yankees in their hour of need.

The National League divisional races are far more tenuous — with the Montreal Expos holding a mere one-game lead in the East and the Houston Astros leading the West by only two percentage points.

Olympic Qualifier Hangs Up Cleats

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Dick Buerkle, who set a world indoor mile record in January 1978 and recently qualified for the U.S. Olympic team in the 5,000 meters, says he will retire from international competition this month.

Buerkle, a Rochester native, now lives in Atlanta, where he is employed by a soft drink company.

"I love my country. It has given my family the opportunity to lead a good life, but the boycott is a mistake," he said in a telephone interview. "I think it would have been far more effective to compete in Moscow and boycott the awards ceremonies."

Buerkle's comments came after he finished second at 5,000 meters in the 1980 Olympic trials in Eugene, Ore. Had it not been for the U.S. boycott this spring, the top three qualifiers would have raced for the United States in the Moscow Olympics.

Buerkle, 32, missed out on the 1976 Olympics when he was beaten in a qualifying heat.

A PATRIOTIC PYRAMID is formed by champion water-skiers at an Ohio aquatic park. But can they keep their flags properly dry if their formation collapses into the drink?

Women's Group Continues Ban-the-Bottle Battle

ST. ALBANS, W.Va. (AP) — Olive Bryan has a vision — a vision of hundreds of women kneeling in prayer at the portals of your local tavern.

members were in the forefront of this year's fight over legislation allowing sale of beer containing more than 3.2 percent alcohol. The law took effect in May, but not until the Legislature had overridden a gubernatorial veto applauded by temperance and religious groups.

shrugs off the defeat, and gamely predicts the union "will be here as long as the world stands." As long as some people drink, she said, others will want the distinction of being different.

the group's political influence has faded in the face of a strong liquor lobby and changing mores. In recent years, the once-vocal union has become a soft-spoken group that quietly urges legislators to raise the drinking age to 21 and teaches schoolchildren about the evils of alcohol and how to fight intemperance among their parents.

Border Patrol Moves In on People Smugglers

AJO, Ariz. (AP) — The Border Patrol, using "hard-core, firm identification" from survivors, says it is closing its net on the "coyotes" who smuggled a group of Salvadorans into the United States and let 13 die in the scorching desert.

area where 13 bodies were found over the weekend, on the lookout for identity papers and clues to the smugglers' whereabouts. "We might be looking for some more bodies," Scott said, but added that searchers did not expect to find anyone alive in the desert, where the air temperature reached 110 degrees Monday and ground temperature soared to 150.

deodorant and even urine — to stave off killing dehydration. Among the dead were well-dressed women wearing high-heeled shoes, a man with $4,000 strapped to his groin and a woman with $200 strapped to one thigh, officials said.

"Why, I heard a girl, she looked about 12 — of course you can never tell — and she was saying about all the drinking of beer and how she had to be carried out," Mrs. Bryan said, shaking her head in dismay.

"We believe, because the Bible says it, that Christians should not drink," Mrs. Christy said. "We don't think alcoholism is a disease."

Justice of the Peace L.B. Bartlett ordered an autopsy.

UNTIL RECENTLY NATURALISTS feared that Sinai leopards like this one had become extinct. They were proved wrong in 1974 when two of the spotted cats were sighted in the Judean Desert. Other leopards have since been observed in the Holy Land — three of them just 25 miles from Jerusalem.

Two Nubian ibex engage in a bit of friendly competition at Israel's Hai Bar nature reserve. Little more than a decade ago, the species was threatened with extinction in Israel. Through strictly enforced hunting laws and careful breeding, the ibex population has dramatically revived and now exceeds 500. To find out how your family or organization can "adopt" an ibex from the reserve, contact the Holy Land Conservation Fund, 150 E. 58th St., New York, N.Y. 10022.

Once they recuperate from their ordeal, the survivors — 13 El Salvador natives and one Mexican — will be moved to Tucson and held as material witnesses. Border Patrol officials said.

Border officials still were trying to learn what became of the second group of Salvadorans. Investigators were questioning 13 Salvadorans, including three women, a teen-ager and three children, who had been arrested by the Border Patrol Friday in the Yuma area.

Statewide, WCTU enrollment is up by about 60 members from two years ago, according to treasurer Margaret Crall. But the St. Albans chapter, which has 23 members, hasn't added anyone during that period, she said.

Police Chief Joe King said the incident apparently stemmed from a "sort of domestic problem," but that the motive was still under investigation.

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — The body of a young woman missing for three weeks was discovered lying in dense brush about 25 miles northeast of Amarillo, authorities said.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Comptroller Bob Bullock said Monday his auditors are checking the books at about a dozen firms suspected of buying stolen petroleum products.

The survivors have described their guides as "three Mexican youths," according to agent John Rockhill.

Officials say smugglers assembled as many as 40 to 50 Salvadorans at a hotel in San Luis, Mexico, last week, and on Wednesday or early Thursday trucked one group of about 30 across the border to Organ Pipe National Monument park.

Rockhill said he believed some aliens had planned to go to California, based on a telephone call Monday from a Los Angeles businessman who said he was expecting his two Salvadoran nieces.

Today's sinners' souls could still stand saving, according to the WCTU, but AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown says there is enough watermelon to go around for Texas Watermelon Week, despite the recent dry spell.

Gov. Bill Clements has declared July 9-16 as Texas Watermelon Week. Brown, representatives of the governor's office, and state and national watermelon queens will be on hand at the Capitol Wednesday to mark the occasion.

The festivities will include a seed-spitting contest at a nearby shopping center.

Texas led the nation in harvested acres of watermelon in 1979.

NEW YORK (AP) — The deposed king of Sikkim has won a custody battle to allow his son and daughter to spend their summer vacation with him in the northern India state.

State Supreme Court Justice Burton S. Sherman ruled Monday that the children can spend the rest of July and August with the former king, Palden Thondup Namgyal. His former wife, Hope Cooke, had argued the visitation rights should be denied because the political climate in Sikkim is unstable.

Sherman said expert testimony at a court hearing convinced him that "Sikkim appears to be one of the more tranquil Himalayan states."

The couple met in India in 1959 when Namgyal was a 35-year-old prince and Miss Cooke an 18-year-old debutante from Sarah Lawrence College. They married in 1963 and Namgyal became king in 1965.

He was deposed in 1975 and the former independent nation was incorporated into India. Miss Cooke has custody of the children, Palden, 16, and Hope, 12, under terms of a 1978 separation agreement.

NEW YORK (AP) — Bob Gunton, who stars as Juan Peron in the Broadway musical "Evita," has married a Brooklyn girl in a quiet ceremony that turned out to be almost as much reunion as matrimony.

Performing the ceremony was the Rev. Frank DiSano, who was a classmate of Gunton's at the Paulist Seminary in Baltimore, as was the best man, James Crabtree.

Gunton said he decided to leave the priesthood training after three years because "the need to entertain couldn't be suppressed. It might have been an interesting priesthood, but it wasn't where I wanted to flourish. Nothing is worse than a lousy priest."

The Vietnam veteran says he hopes his new bride, former Annie McGreevey, gets the opportunity to "explore her full potential as an actress. She's extremely talented."

LONDON (AP) — If Prince Charles marries a Roman Catholic woman, would he be allowed to become king?

That's a question stirred up by recent press reports linking the 31-year-old prince with Catholic princess Marie-Astrid of Luxembourg.

There's a law dating back to 1701, and still on the books, that removes from the line of succession any royal family member who marries a Catholic. And Northern Ireland Protestant extremists have claimed British officials told them recently that no change was contemplated in that law.

A No. 10 Downing Street spokesman said the extremists' claim was "rubbish." And a cabinet member has said recently that the British constitution was flexible enough so the prince could wed whomever he chooses.

And the prince's choice? Not a word about that. He and Marie-Astrid are not even believed to have dated, although they have met at official functions.
