Mayor sees future delays

In DOE's selection of dump

By REED PARSELL
Managing Editor
More delays in the Department of Energy's final selection of a nuclear waste repository are foreseen by Wes Fisher, Hereford's mayor.

Fisher is one of three area residents attending a DOE conference in Washington, D.C., titled, "Civilian Radioactive Waste Management Information Meeting - Nuclear Waste Policy Act (NWPA) of 1982."

Also there from Deaf Smith County are Georgia Auckerman and Tonya Kleuskens. Both are active in People Opposed to Wasted Energy Repositories (POWER), for which Kleuskens is chairman. The mayor is not a member of POWER. The conference got underway Tuesday morning with several speeches by concerned federal department leaders. Ending today, its purpose is allegedly to highlight developments made since passage of the NWPA and review the program activities necessary to provide for storage of nuclear waste.

January of 1985 is when the process is to yield the last three possible locations. After that, Fisher explained, extensive exploration - including deep digging - is to be done to the three sites. That should help federal officials decide which would be the most appropriate for housing a nuclear waste dump.

The other sites now being considered included a "basalt" site in southeast Washington state and a "tuff" one in southern Nevada. The "salt bed" locations are the two in the Texas Panhandle, one in northwest Louisiana and two apiece in southeast Mississippi and southeast Utah.

By the time he called later Wednesday afternoon, though, Fisher had learned the federal government is obligated to receive spent nuclear fuel from private utility companies by 1998. He said those non-federally-funded nuclear plants have been paying a small tax to support the DOE's waste program and are putting a lot of pressure on the government to accomplish something.

The rest of the proposed scheduled reported by Fisher coincides closely with what the DOE said earlier. By next April, recommendations are due for reducing the current nine sites to five, with public hearings slated from then until the final five are pinned down in September. "Being it an election year," Fisher guessed, "I'll bet that may change."

'Y' selects builder

Local firm to construct exterior of proposed drive-funded facility

By SPEEDY NIEMAN
Editor-Publisher
With a fund-raising campaign for a new facility past the halfway mark, optimistic officials of the Hereford & Vicinity YMCA Wednesday signed a contract for the construction of a new building.

"I'd compare this moment to the feeling of a player realizing that he's going to the Super Bowl," said "Y" President Sid Shaw after the contract was signed. The YMCA let the contract for the building to Brownlow Brothers of Hereford on a bid of $180,000. According to the specifications, the contract is for a metal building with dimensions of 93 feet eight inches, by 140 by 22 feet. The contract includes materials and labor on the exterior building.

Shaw said the contract does not include the interior work on the building, nor furniture and fixtures. "We are negotiating for work on the remaining portions of the facility. We are contracting all local sub-contractors for bids," he added. Work is expected to start on the building in the very near future, according to Shaw, and might be completed next March or April. "No definite completion date has been agreed upon," he stated. With Shaw at the contract letting was Charles Hoover, vice president; Rick Brown, building chairman; and Weldon Knabe, executive director. The "Y" building-fund goal is $925,000 and Shaw said the total in cash and pledges is approximately $510,000. He said the amount does not include gifts-in-kind, and the board is reluctant to place a value on these products and services until a later date. He pointed out that some citizens are considering contributions at this time due to year-end tax situations. Brown reported that the "Y" solicits memorials and honorariums for the capital fund drive. Included in this list are a gymnasium ($350,000), exercise room ($75,000), men's fitness center ($66,500), women's fitness center ($61,000), and youth center ($45,000). The project site is located on 15th Street, approximately one-half mile east of 25 Mile Avenue. The land was provided to the YMCA by the City of Hereford, which is leasing the property for 100 years at $1 per year.

Sugar program starting

Holly manager reports

The quality-improvement program for the 1984 sugar beet crop is now underway, according to Agricultural Manager Calvin Jones of the Hereford Holly Sugar factory.

Jones said that four-foot soil samples are taken prior to contracting in an effort to obtain a higher sugar percentage by improving the quality of the beets.

"Research has shown and history has proven that quality or sugar percentage of the beets has an inverse relationship with nitrogen in a particular field," Jones said. "Since growers are paid according to the percent sugar actually produced in a field, soil sampling and nitrogen analysis provides both the grower and Holly Sugar with an insight into expected yields."

Lower nitrogen fields may require a starter fertilizer of nutrients quickly available to maximize early growth of the sugar beet seedling. By maximizing early growth and continuing growth at a rapid rate throughout the growing season, Jones said, growers can achieve high yields, both of tonnage and sugar percentage.

"Soil sampling is a service we provide growers in an effort to assist them with their management decisions," Jones explained. "After the sample is taken, our chief chemist Don Anderson makes a nitrogen analysis. Results are then reviewed with growers before the contract is signed. We want a grower to be aware of what his yield potential on a particular field is prior to contracting."

"This avoid disappointing yields due to high nitrogen suppressing sugar percentage in this fall. Factory processing is also much improved as we have fewer impurities to remove to recover white granulated sucrose."

Agriculturalists began soil sampling this week and are to continue until all 38,750 acres to be contracted have been selected. Jones said contracting will begin within the next two weeks at which time results of soil samples will be reviewed with growers. "Soil sampling is but one step in our quality program," Jones concluded. "Leaf petiole analysis, pre-harvest root samples and good agronomic practices are also key elements to high yields and high quality."

Hereford's Citizen of the Year award, presented annually by the Hereford Lions Club, is in the process of being selected. Any readers who have nominations can turn in a resume at the chamber office. We had a column some time ago which included a list of things which give a signal that you're growing old. It was well received, and we got a few tips for another list to fit folks in another age group.

If you're at, or approaching the big "40," you know you've "turned the corner" when:

- You have an arm wrestling match with your kid and lose.
- All you want to do after going home from work is rest.
- "Old people" suddenly don't look that old anymore, and teenagers look like children.
- Your kids get hold of your high school annual and ask, "How did those girls get their hair to blow up like that?"
- You watch an old movie that was one of your favorites in high school and notice that the girls do look like their hair was blown up.
- You notice that every player on the Dallas Cowboys has a later birth date than your own.
- You decide to try some waterskiing trips that once were simple, and you can't do them anymore. And the next morning you can't move more than one inch in any direction without pain.
- You care more about the gas mileage and the comfort of a car than what it looks like.
- Someone asks you how old you are, and you lie.

American reporter hurt, second Frenchman dies

As Druse rebels battle Lebanese south of U.S. Marine base

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - Lebanese troops today clashed with Syrian-backed Druse rebels south of the U.S. Marine base, where Marines wounded an American television reporter bearing videotaped Christmas greetings to the embattled troops.

Meanwhile, two French troops were killed, including one shot in the back while putting out garbage. Unidentified jets flew over Beirut, a day after the battleship USS New Jersey turned its big guns on Syrian positions for the first time, blasting anti-aircraft emplacements deep inside Syrian-held Lebanese territory. Two other Navy ships joined in the 15-minute barrage.

It could not be determined if the planes were U.S., French or Israeli jets. A Christian-controlled radio station said the jets were Israeli, but no officials in a position to know would not comment.

Marine spokesman Maj. Dennis Brooks said a car carrying two reporters from WITN-TV in Washington, N.C., approached the "old main gate" at the compound, now closed to all but Marine vehicles. Brooks identified the Americans as Joe Corcoran, a WITN-TV reporter, and Robert Perry, WITN-TV news director. Marine sentries shouted at the Lebanese driver to stop and fired warning shots, but the driver tried to back the car out of the entrance, Brooks said. "When the vehicle failed to stop, the sentries fired (at it)," Brooks said. He said the driver was grazed in the head by a bullet and Corcoran was hit by glass fragments in the left shoulder, while Perry escaped injury. He said Corcoran was flown by helicopter to the USS Guam for treatment.

Another French soldier was killed about two hours later. The latest casualties brought to 80 the number of deaths in the French contingent since the peacekeepers were deployed in Beirut in September 1982. During the same period, 257 U.S. peacekeepers have been killed.

Brooks said "all is quiet" at the base of the 1,350 Marines serving with the multinational peacekeeping force. The base at the Beirut airport is about 1.2 miles north of where the clash occurred. In Washington, President Reagan said Wednesday he would bring the Marines home if all Lebanese authority collapses, but that a premature withdrawal would renew "full-scale hostilities."

The other condition for withdrawing the Marines, Reagan said, would be the departure of all foreign troops and the restoration of the authority of the Lebanese government. Meanwhile, a convoy of Israeli tanks and armored Druse mortar and rocket fire with a 40-minute barrage of artillery and tank cannons at 6 a.m. (11 p.m. EST). Officials said shrapnel killed a French soldier and two Italian soldiers were slightly wounded by stray bullets.

Several tools ripped off

Two boxes containing tools worth about $450 were stolen sometime after 5:30 p.m. Tuesday from 405 Witherspoon's Emmitt Manley, Hereford police reported this morning. The tools, taken from Manley's 1971 Datsun pickup truck, were used mainly for plumbing, he told police. Minor (valued at less than $200) thefts involved a window screen and four wheel covers. Also investigated was an unauthorized use of a motor vehicle. There were four non-injury accidents reported within city limits on Wednesday.

Four make 'Who's Who'

Four Hereford residents are to have their names and accomplishments listed in this year's "Who's Who in American Junior Colleges," according to a press release from Amarillo College.

They are Phillis Dawson, Nita Ebeling, Jackie Hammett and Jack Nunley. All are now enrolled as mid-management majors at the two-year school. An associate in applied science degree is earned in the mid-management program. According to the release, an individual career pattern can be tailored to fit each student's chosen field-industrial, retail, wholesale or small business management.

The five-member AC faculty committee chose a total of 46 students from a campus-wide screening for the "Who's Who" honor. To be eligible, one must have completed at least 24 semester hours and possess a grade point average of 3.0 or higher.

Four policemen promoted

Four members of the Hereford Police Department have been promoted, it was learned this morning. Elevated from officer to corporal were Ted Campos and Sammy Sanchez. Ronnie Henderson, formerly a corporal, is now a sergeant with the HPD. Also, Lieutenant Ted Langgood was promoted to detective status.

Man still in critical shape

Calvin Henderson, 32, was still in "extremely critical" condition this morning at Deaf Smith General Hospital, Administrator James Bullard said this morning.

Henderson was shot, as was 40-year-old Lewis Woolbright, Friday night during a murder-suicide at 417 Ave. F. Both local residents were shot, apparently by Gene Wiggins, 51 of Dimmitt, while sitting in a pickup drinking beer, local police have reported.

Bullard said Henderson is still on life-supporting equipment. "We just don't know about him."

Woolbright, meanwhile, was taken out of intensive care Wednesday afternoon and is described by Bullard to be in "stable" condition. Woolbright's wife, 53-year-old Polly Woolbright, was killed during the Friday incident at the couple's home. Wiggins apparently shot and killed himself shortly after police arrived at the scene.

Bell wants bigger interim hike

AUSTIN (AP) — Southwestern Bell says it needs more money, but a critic says the company already is getting "an early Christmas gift."

Both sides filed appeals Wednesday complaining about a $653 million temporary rate hike approved last week by a Public Utility Commission judge. The company wants at least $292 million more.

But Public Utility Counsel Jim Boyle says Southwestern Bell is entitled to $653 million less than the $653 million — nothing.

"I am very concerned that the PUC is setting a precedent for granting rate increases without a hearing," said Boyle, the state lawyer who represents consumers at PUC rate cases.

He called the $653 million an "early Christmas gift for a monopoly whose budget has been fattened up at ratepayers' expense."

Shuttle spends night in Texas

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A "grungy-looking" space shuttle Columbia spent the night with a special heater attached to protect the craft's Spacelab and its delicate experiments from the chilly December air.

A Boeing 747 ferrying the shuttle to Florida landed at Kelly Air Force Base Wednesday night and spent the night and was scheduled to leave on the last leg of its journey at 8 a.m. today.

The shuttle-bearing jet took off from California's Edwards Air Force Base early Wednesday and stopped briefly in El Paso to pick up some fuel before heading for San Antonio.

The special heater, attached to the craft's rear was designed to stabilize the temperature inside the shuttle.

"It's grungy looking, but it flies great," said astronaut Gordon Fullerton, a member of the flight crew on the trip to Texas. "The flight was uneventful, but that's the way we like it."

Woman to keep her benefits

HOUSTON (AP) — Two welfare agencies have withdrawn threats to cancel the benefits of a woman who received $835 in gifts after a newspaper reported she was trying to care for a dying son, a U.S. senator's aide says.

But Ann Martin says she won't rejoice about any concessions until she sees the promises in writing.

"I won't take a verbal agreement," Ms. Martin said. "With the government, you have to have it written."

Officials of the Social Security Administration and of Aid to Families with Dependent Children have taken back their threats to withdraw Ms. Martin's $368 in monthly benefits, Jack DeVore, chief spokesman for Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said Wednesday.

Kuwait embassy had CIA warning

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Embassy in Kuwait was warned about one month in advance by the CIA to expect a terrorist attack, but failed to take enough safeguards to avert this week's truck bombing, intelligence sources say.

The bombing left six people dead. A seventh person died in one of five other bombings that rocked Kuwait on Monday.

One source said both the country and the target were predicted by the CIA in late October. The source also said that warnings to Marines in Beirut went largely unheeded prior to the Oct. 23 bombing that killed 241 servicemen.

"Once again we have a situation where a warning with substantial lead time was provided," said the source. But Marine officials have said the Beirut warnings were too vague to be helpful.

Rebels say they hold base

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist rebels claim they killed 60 government soldiers in capturing a strategic army base, while the armed forces high command denounced rightist death squads and urged Salvadorans to help identify and capture them.

In Caracas, Venezuela, Henry Kissinger, heading a U.S. Bipartisan Commission on Central America, said Wednesday the region should undergo a process of demilitarization so its countries can live peacefully without foreign intervention.

The clandestine Radio Venceremos said the Salvadoran rebels took the army base on Cacahuatique Volcano, 100 miles northeast of the capital, after nine hours of heavy fighting Tuesday.

No talk resumption planned

VIENNA (AP) — Warsaw Pact representatives at the East-West negotiations on reducing troops in Europe left the talks today refusing to agree on a resumption date, a NATO spokesman announced.

The talks were the last direct East-West arms forum to remain active following Soviet suspension of nuclear arms control talks in Geneva, Switzerland.

The 31st round of the Mutual and Balanced Forces Reduction Talks ended with a plenary session earlier in the day. Under normal circumstances, the talks would have resumed in January or February next year.

Dutch Ambassador Wilem de Vos van Stenwijk, addressing newsmen on behalf of NATO, said, "The Western side has proposed that we begin the next round of discussions on Jan. 26, 1984."

Israel wants Arafat humiliated

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel is creating an uncertain and threatening atmosphere around plans for PLO chairman Yasser Arafat's evacuation from Lebanon in an effort to strip him of international protection and force him to flee in humiliation.

Israeli officials said Wednesday that Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's government has refused to reply to a U.S. request to allow Arafat to leave his besieged stronghold of Tripoli in northern Lebanon. It has said publicly it will not guarantee Arafat's safety.

"We do not want Arafat to leave like a hero. If he leaves, it should be like a dog with his tail between his legs," said one official who requested anonymity.

Israel has appealed to the United Nations to withdraw its promise to evacuate Arafat on ships flying the U.N. flag, but Cabinet ministers have issued contradictory statements on what Israel might do if the U.N. plan went forward.

How much would you be willing to bet on the public appeal of an "ugly doll"?

If you understand merchandising, you might be aware that anything can be sold with enough hype.

But even Xavier Roberts who designed the first of the Cabbage Patch Kids could never have imagined that shoppers would be lined up for hours, breaking one another's arms in their frantic determination to buy one. The unlovely yarn-haired doll is outselling anything this Christmas.

What P.T. Barnum called "puffery" was enough to fill a circus tent anywhere, any time.

But today's media proliferation of "puffery" can entice tens of millions to pay ten prices for a pair of denim jeans!

U.S. News and World Report comments: "Never have so many been bombarded with so much information that means so little."

"People in all walks of life are drowning in a sea of promotional messages touting everything from diet drinks to designer fashions to macho actors to fried chicken."

With high-powered and persistent promotion, a TV network was able to mobilize half our nation's population to watch a boring TV film called "The Day After."

Steven M.L. Aronson, author of the book called "Hype," defines this concept of merchandising as "the artificially orchestrated creation of an atmosphere of hysteria."

It sells Hula Hoops, copper bracelets, mood rings, singing groups such as "The Monkees" — and ugly dolls.

And increasingly public relations wizards have learned how to get public mention and attention without paying for it.

Doggedly, they pursue "Donahue" and "Merv Griffin" and "Good Morning America" until they get their clients interviewed and their products showcased.

And the media momentum spills over into magazines and newspapers and all of us in the information business become unwitting promoters of a person, a product, a silly movie titillatingly called "Flashdance" — and-or even an ugly doll.

Diet Coke, launched last year with a $100,000 extravaganza at Radio City Music Hall, catapulted itself into fourth place in that highly competitive market.

It takes sustained advertising to keep even a quality product out front, but the hit-and-run merchandisers don't worry about that.

It is enough for them to harvest a quick killing from enough lemmings willing to buy one cosmetic once — or one theater ticket or phonograph record or one pet rock...

Or one ugly doll at $25 times 2½ million.

Geter freed after new trial slated

By SCOTT McCARTNEY
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — On the 477th day of his life sentence for an armed robbery conviction, Lenell Geter walked out of jail with a chance at renewing his life.

The 26-year-old former E-Systems Inc. engineer was released from jail on bond Wednesday after an appeals court granted him a new trial.

"This is my emancipation proclamation from the judicial system of Texas," said Geter, whose case drew national attention because of his claims that the charges against him resulted only from racism and shoddy police work.

"I feel extremely overjoyed. I'll always remember that time when they told me this morning that I was going to be released."

Geter was convicted and sentenced to life in prison for the 1982 robbery of a Balch Springs fast food restaurant 50 miles from his job as an engineer at E-Systems. Five eyewitnesses picked him out of police lineups, but nine co-workers claimed he was at work on the day of the robbery.

Geter was one of six black engineers whose pictures were circulated to Dallas area police officials after a Greenville robbery. The South Carolina State College graduate became a suspect, Greenville authorities said, only after an elderly white woman thought Geter looked suspicious because he frequented a city park after work.

"I haven't thought much about what I'll do. My primary concern now is to clear my name," Geter told reporters, beaming a broad smile after his release.

"Maybe now I'll start planning for Christmas," he said, adding that he plans soon to marry his girlfriend and possibly return to work at E-Systems.

Geter was released from the Lew Sterrett Justice Center at about 3 p.m. after several of his co-workers drove to Dallas to deliver a $10,000 bond they had raised through personal loans.

E-Systems employees Charles Hartford and Wendell Crom, who had orchestrated a campaign for more than a year to secure his release and convince prosecutors that they had the wrong man, hugged Geter.

"I love them. I love them all," Geter said.

After his release, Geter met with his mother and went to a Christmas party sponsored by his attorney's office. He said if State District Judge John Ovard approves, he will return to South Carolina for about a week to relax.

Geter said he believed the judicial system had worked, but his court-appointed attorney was not as sure.

"The system at that particular level did not work right," said attorney Edwin Sigel. "A man that was tried and wrongly convicted has been set free. He's not been completely cleared but he has been set free."

Ovard said he would set a trial date after the first of the year. Dallas County District Attorney Henry Wade has given Geter the option of taking a second lie detector test. If Geter passes it, Wade said he would drop all charges.

Geter said he and his attorneys have not yet decided whether to agree to the lie detector test. Geter took a polygraph test last May and the results were inconclusive.

vehicles arrived today in the besieged town of Deir el-Kamar, 12 miles southeast of Beirut, to help evacuate thousands of Christians encircled by Druse fighters for nearly three months, Israel Radio reported in Tel Aviv.

Israeli officials said the army was assisting the Red Cross in the operation as a humanitarian gesture.

The Israeli army radio said 10,000 civilians and 1,700 rightist Christian Phalange fighters would leave the town, where they have been since the fierce Druse-Christian warfare erupted after Israel's pullback to the Awali River.

The army radio said some of the evacuated fighters would be driven to the Israeli-held port at Sidon and would sail from there to the Beirut area 25 miles to the north along the Mediterranean coast.

In Tripoli, PLO chairman Yasser Arafat was quoted by Beirut radio stations as saying "all is set for our departure" from his last stronghold in Lebanon once Greek ships arrive.

His aides said an Italian ship was expected to arrive today to take out 97 critically wounded guerrillas before his evacuation from Lebanon's second largest city with 4,000 trapped loyalists.

NUCLEAR

Among the factors Fisher fears might delay a final site selection are pressures from such groups as the Environmental Protection Agency. Considering all the guidelines and regulations lawmakers face, the mayor allowed, "It must be pretty frustrating to be a bureaucrat."

Rep. Morris Udall, D-Arizona, was the featured speaker at the conference's Tuesday luncheon. According to Fisher, the presentation was more humorous than informative.

Despite claiming "you can gain as much from talk in restaurants and outside as you can in these rooms," Fisher said he found the conference "very interesting." He is scheduled to return Friday.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A socialist party Wednesday said it is planning a big march against the government to protest the violent removal of a group of leftists from a city hall in volatile southern Mexico.

"We are holding the march to protest the repression of the people of Juchitan," said Jaime Trejo, spokesman for the Unified Socialist Party. He said most leftist parties and other groups in the city would participate.

Hundreds of state police and army troops drove members of a leftist coalition from the Juchitan municipal palace Tuesday, then fired on groups of townspeople who tried to retake the town hall, injuring three, Trejo said.

In Juchitan Wednesday, army troops guarded the palace and angry leftists stoned several businesses. Excelsior newspaper reported from the town of about 100,000, 480 miles southeast of Mexico City.

The leftist Coalition of Workers, Students and Peasants of the Isthmus, which won March, 1981 elections in Juchitan, had been holding the palace illegally since August when the state government ordered them to abandon the government.

New elections were held Nov. 20 and the ruling Revolutionary Institutional Party, known as the PRI, claimed victory. The coalition continued to refuse to give up the palace, claiming the vote was fraudulent.

Trejo said the government arrested 85 people in Juchitan, including former mayor Leopoldo de Gyves, and 34 more during a demonstration in Oaxaca, the state capital Tuesday.

Oaxaca district attorney Leon de la Vega announced that the 85 coalition members arrested would be charged with stealing public documents, illegal arms possession and assault.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said Wednesday he will return to Mexico for his vacation later this month, following a one-day visit here at the head of the Bipartisan Commission on Central America.

Kissinger and eight other members of the commission spent a day here Tuesday to learn the Mexican point of view about the Central American crisis.

At a news conference before leaving for Venezuela, the commission's next stop, Kissinger said he will return here Dec. 23 to spend his Christmas vacation.

"I'm happy to announce that I'll be returning for my vacation. I'll see you the 23rd," he said.

Kissinger made frequent visits here while Secretary of State under President Nixon and has continued to visit with friends here over the years.

URUAPAN, Mexico (AP) — The opposition National Action Party won mayoral elections in this large town in western Mexico, the state elections commission has announced.

The commission announced Tuesday night the victory by the conservative party, which held a large rally in the center of town to celebrate, El Universal newspaper reported. The voting was held Dec. 4 and there was no explanation for the delay in announcing the results.

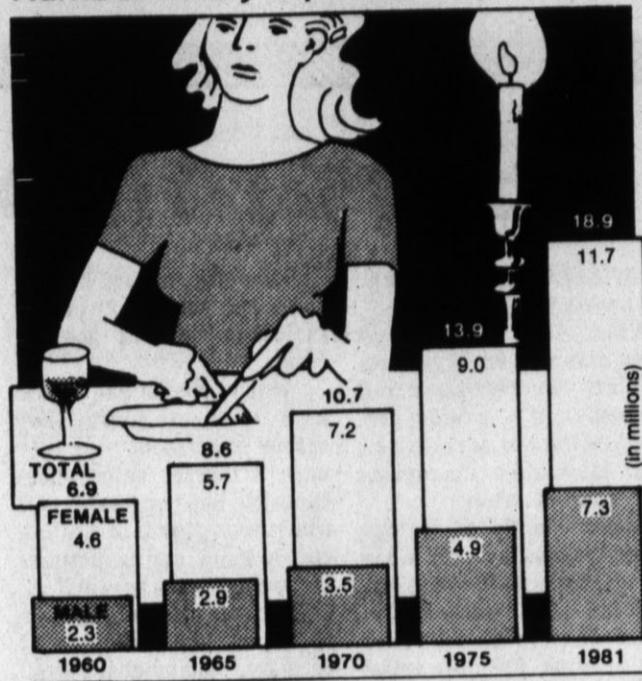

The town of 62,000 is the second biggest in Michoacan state. It is located 260 miles west of Mexico City and produces mainly handicrafts and agricultural products.

Commission official Luis Ruben Puebla Calderon handed over the certificate of victory to the National Action candidate, Federico Ruiz Lopez, in a ceremony at the municipal palace, El Universal said.

The ruling Revolutionary Institutional Party has held most public positions in the country in the last 54 years, but in the last year lost several important towns to the opposition because of public discontent over economic austerity measures.

SINGLE-PERSON HOUSEHOLDS

Number nearly tripled in 20 years

(Source: U.S. Census Bureau) NEA/Moffitt Cecil

The increase in single-person households reflects several changes in U.S. lifestyles. Included are a later first-marriage age, an increase in the divorce rate and a tendency by young people to establish their own households at an earlier age.

Glenn calls for change

By KEN HERMAN

Associated Press Writer AUSTIN (AP) — Presidential contender John Glenn says the conflict in Lebanon has deteriorated from an international peacekeeping effort into a United States vs. Syria battle.

He said Wednesday that initial U.S. military efforts in the region were worthwhile but "our purpose there then became very unclear."

Glenn started the day in Houston and, with Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby as his host, moved to Austin for a news conference, reception at the Governor's Mansion and a $1,000-a-plate fundraiser.

At the Capitol news conference he said American troops are a target in the Middle East.

"We're the great Satan to some of the Islamic nations. We are the ones they like to target," he said.

The Democratic senator from Ohio said the U.S. should serve only as a part of an international force. It's ridiculous to think the U.S. forces can "restore the territorial integrity of Lebanon," he said.

"To think that 1,600 Marines sitting there by the airport can somehow provide an atmosphere where the Lebanese government can gain control of all of its own territory, and with 50,000 Syrians already in the country and several hundred thousand massed across the border, it's just not something that's going to happen," said Glenn.

"It's becoming gradually a Syrian-U.S. confrontation. We've already had combat with them. We're so far outnumbered there it's only a matter of time before we're going to be killed," he said.

Glenn said he is the candidate most interested in peace.

"I don't need to turn on late night television to find out what it's like to be in combat. I've been there through two wars," the 23-year Marine said. "No one is going to work any harder for peace in this country than I am out of that background."

Antique Bible will go back to descendants

CARROLLTON, Texas (AP) — When Karen Forte saw a time-worn, 108-year Bible in an antique shop, she happily paid the $45 price for the book. It was the perfect Christmas gift for her children's godparents, who are antique buffs.

But later, after discovering the wealth of personal history inside, in numerous written accounts of the marriages, births and deaths of members of a Nebraska family, she and her husband were compelled to try to find the descendants of the original owners.

"It's neat and it's so old," Mrs. Forte said. "It smells old. You walk by it, and you can smell it."

Her husband, Nick, added, "From the first time I opened it, I just felt there was something there. I just got that feeling walking by it one day."

Written on the marriage page was: "James W. Berger and Susie C. Johnson were married Nov. 26th, 1874."

Mrs. Forte said, "I thought if somebody had something like that of mine, I'd really feel bad if they didn't try to find me. I just thought the family would really like to have it."

The 1875-edition Bible, weighing 20 pounds, is finely illustrated with nearly 400 engravings, and is embossed in gold on its worn brown cover.

A newspaper clipping of funeral services for Mrs. Berger, who died in 1942 at age 84, mentioned relatives in Nebraska.

Mrs. Forte contacted the Omaha World Herald in Nebraska, and reporter Lynn Zerschling wrote a story about the Bible that appeared in last Saturday's newspaper.

"I really didn't think I'd get any calls," Mrs. Forte said.

But she said Tuesday that she had received eight calls from Berger relatives in Nebraska City, Plattsmouth and Bridgeport, Neb., and in Nashville, Ill., and Stockton, Calif.

The first caller was Tom Berger of Nebraska City, a great-great-grandson of James W. Berger.

Mrs. Forte said she will sell the Bible to him for $45, the price she paid, because he was the first caller, although another relative sent her a $100 check in hopes of claiming it.

She said Berger, a furniture store owner, said he will pick up the Bible when he visits a Dallas furniture store in January.

"It just started out as a Christmas present, and it ended up being pretty exciting," she said. "Maybe we should start a Bible referral service."

President fails to quiet criticism

By MAUREEN SANTINI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's remarks that the majority of soup kitchen clients are needy has failed to quiet congressional criticism that his administration is insensitive to the needs of hungry Americans.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said Wednesday, "The president's statement of concern does not square with the Reagan administration's own actions."

Earlier in the day, Reagan met briefly with reporters in the White House press room and volunteered that some people who eat at soup kitchens may be undeserving, just as there are welfare cheats, but that most of them are truly needy.

The president's comments were prompted by presidential counselor Edwin Meese's statement on Dec. 8 that he has never seen any "authoritative figures that there are hungry children" in America and that some people go to soup lines "because the food is free and that's easier than paying for it."

Reagan said Wednesday that Meese's remarks had been taken "totally out of context," and he added his administration wants to eliminate hunger in America.

But O'Neill responded by saying that administration officials "have refused to release" $44 million Congress has approved to finance the distribution of surplus commodities to groups that operate feeding programs for the poor.

"I call on the president to tell his people that he meant what he said today about getting food to the poor, that he wants his people to do what he says they are doing," O'Neill said.

Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif., chairman of the House Agriculture subcommittee on nutrition, has accused the administration of breaking a commitment to support legislation that would provide the $44 million.

The food itself was made available by legislation passed earlier this year. The $44 million is supposed to help states store and distribute the food, but the money cannot be released until Congress receives a request from the Agriculture Department.

Legislators say the White House Office of Management and Budget is delaying the request. Last week, a budget office spokesman said the "initial inclination" had been to oppose the $44 million proposal, but that "it's under consideration again."

Georgetown wins by 30; Maryland protects record

By The Associated Press

The game figured to be a matchup of centers — Franklin Giles of South Carolina State, the nation's second-leading rebounder last season, and Georgetown's 7-foot-1 Patrick Ewing.

As it turned out, neither played very much in a game that saw fifth-ranked Georgetown pull away in the second half for a 97-67 college basketball victory Wednesday night.

Giles got off to a quick start, scoring six points and grabbing three rebounds in the opening three minutes. But moments later, he picked up his third foul and sat out the rest of the first half.

Ewing, meanwhile, played most of the first half, scored 14 points and had seven rebounds. But, after banging his head while taking a charging foul, he was held out of the second half as a precautionary measure on the advice of the Hoyas trainer.

Georgetown led 43-36 at halftime and outscored the visiting Bulldogs 10-0 in the opening 96 seconds of the second half.

"When you lose someone like that (Ewing), the other kids start to do things that they don't normally do," said Georgetown Coach John Thompson.

Gene Smith, who added 13 points for Georgetown, said, "We didn't have Patrick to clog things up down the middle, but losing him helped our quickness."

South Carolina State Coach Percy Caldwell said Giles' foul trouble hurt.

"I don't like to complain about the officiating, but they got us into trouble early," Caldwell said. "We thought we could match up well on the front line. But when we have to go to our bench, we just can't match them man to man."

The reserves for the Bulldogs, 3-3, were outscored by Georgetown's subs, 42-19.

Top Twenty
Ninth-ranked Maryland, the only other Top Twenty team in action Wednesday night, routed Maryland-Eastern Shore, 104-69.

Maryland, 5-1, set the tempo early as Adrian Branch broke loose for a dunk off the opening tap. Ben Coleman scored nine of his 18 points in the opening eight minutes as the Terrapins built a 22-8 lead.

Len Bias and Herman Veal each scored 12 points for Maryland, which led 57-27 at halftime.

Unranked Teams
In other games, Troy Taylor sank a 32-foot shot at the halftime buzzer to give Ohio State its first lead and the Buckeyes went on to beat Tulane 80-57. Tony Campbell scored 29 points for Ohio State, which handed Tulane its worst loss since Ned Fowler took over as coach in 1981.

Frank Ford sank a 15-foot jump shot as the horn sounded, lifting Auburn over Mercer 65-63. The Tigers used three timeouts to set up the winning play with five seconds left.

Freshman Ben Hinson tallied 19 points to help Baptist College, S.C., defeat U.S. International 81-63.

Junior center John Harris scored 16 points and grabbed 12 rebounds to lead New Orleans over California-Riverside 63-51.

76ers roll over Bucks, 115-93

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD AP Sports Writer

When the Philadelphia 76ers play well for 48 minutes and their opponent plays well for just 42, it's virtually certain that the National Basketball Association champions will come out on top.

That's exactly what happened Wednesday night when the 76ers scored 20 of the last 24 points of the game in the final 3:21 en route to a 115-93 victory over the Milwaukee Bucks.

Moses Malone was especially effective down the stretch, scoring 10 of his 23 points in the final 2:52.

"We played an excellent ball game for 48 minutes and our fourth quarter was especially outstanding," 76ers Coach Billy Cunningham said. "Moses Malone finally broke out from the two guys who'd been guarding him."

Despite 34 points from Milwaukee forward Marques Johnson, exceeding his previous season high of 28, Bucks Coach Don Nelson was disappointed in his team.

"We ran out of gas in the last six minutes and our turnovers created scoring opportunities," Nelson said. "Take away the last six minutes and we played a very creditable game. Unfortunately, you've got to play 48 minutes."

In other NBA games, it was Boston 110, Cleveland 108; Washington 99, Atlanta 96; San Antonio 129, San Diego 114; Dallas 117, Indiana 109; and Kansas City 105, Seattle 99.

Julius Erving played a tremendous game for Philadelphia, hitting 13 of 15 shots and scoring 29 points, including several soaring dunks.

"When you make these kind of field goals, they create excitement and they have a market value about them," Erving said. "I sometimes dream of floating out in space and sometimes the dreams seem so real."

"Doc was outstanding — he is playing like a 21-year-old recently," Cunningham said.

Andrew Toney added 21 points for the 76ers, while all-star guard Sidney Moncrief had 11 for the Bucks.

The Bucks led after each of the first three periods and entered the fourth quarter with a 79-77 edge.

The Sixers finally regained the lead with 8:22 left on a dunk by Erving, putting them in front 84-83. Philadelphia never trailed thereafter but the game was still close with 3:21 to go, with Milwaukee trailing only 95-89.

But from there, the 76ers outscored the Bucks 20-4.

"Maybe we got tired," Johnson said. "We've been this way before where we've led for 3/4 quarters, only to see other teams draw away. It's hard to pinpoint what happened. You have to give credit to their defense. They put on a spurt that we couldn't turn off."

Bullets 99, Hawks 96

Washington, which lost at home to Atlanta Tuesday night, turned the tables on the Hawks' court as Jeff Ruland scored 24 points and Rick Mahorn 20.

The Bullets never trailed after taking a 12-11 lead midway through the first quarter. Dominique Wilkins scored 25 points for Atlanta.

Celtics 110, Cavaliers 108
At Boston, Larry Bird, who missed two full games with a sprained knee, played 14 minutes off the bench and scored 13 points, including the game-winning basket with four seconds remaining.

The Celtics, who won their sixth straight, also got 30 points and 16 rebounds from Robert Parish. World B. Free had 30 points for Cleveland, who tied the score at 108-108 on a basket by rookie Paul Thompson with 28 seconds remaining.

Mavericks 117, Pacers 109

Mark Aguirre scored 30 points, his eighth straight game at or above that plateau, as Dallas handed Indiana its 10th consecutive loss on the road this season.

The Midwest Division-leading Mavericks also got 22 points from Jay Vincent, 21 from Rolando Blackman and 20 by Pat Cummings. The Pacers, who got 25 points from Clark Kellogg and 20 from Ralph Sampson, fought back from a 16-point deficit to trail 103-101 with 4:44 remaining, but Dallas held on to its margin down the stretch.

Spurs 129, Clippers 114

San Diego also stayed winless on the road this season as George Gervin scored 25 points and Mike Mitchell hit 11 of 15 field goal attempts for 23 points.

The Spurs led by at least eight points at the end of each period to hand the Clippers, who got 26 points from Terry Cummings, their 27th straight road loss dating back to last season.

Kings 105, Sonics 99

Eddie Johnson scored 33 points and played a key role down the stretch as Kansas City won at Seattle.

The SuperSonics trailed only 94-93 with 2:51 to go, but after Billy Knight sank two free throws for the Kings, Johnson grabbed a rebound and scored and then added a steal that led to a basket by Knight, giving Kansas City a 100-93 advantage with two minutes left.

Tom Chambers scored 28 points and Al Wood 24 for Seattle.

Television ratings plunge on college football games

By DAVE GOLDBERG AP Sports Writer

The news is foreboding.

First we discover that nobody's watching Neil O'Donoghue and Bill Capestre miss field goals on Monday Night Football. Now we find out that ratings for college football have dropped to the lowest point in a decade.

What is happening to America's Game, college version?

Final Nielsen ratings for college football gave ABC a 9.9 and CBS a 9.6 for the season, meaning that roughly one in 10 of the nation's television sets were tuned to college football on a given Saturday afternoon. That's a nine percent drop for each network and represents the first time in a decade that ratings have dropped to single digits.

Why? A combination of the things that have plagued National Football League telecasts — good fall weather that sent people outdoors; more cable television; the United States Football League, which has brought football to television year-round.

But most of all, it's same parity bugaboo that seems to have hurt the NFL.

Take a look at the nation's Top 20 teams.

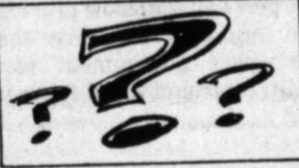

Where are Notre Dame, Southern Cal, Penn State? What are all these Boston Colleges, West Virginias, Brigham Youngs, Air Forces and East Carolinas doing there? And the 3-4-5-6 teams in the country? Auburn, Illinois, Miami and SMU, with Alabama all the way down at No. 19.

Notre Dame-Southern Cal wasn't televised this year. Nor were USC-UCLA, Penn State-Pitt or Michigan-Ohio State. Instead, we got the likes of Boston College-Alabama the day after Thanksgiving. A good game between interesting teams, but the kind of game the nation's viewing habits probably haven't caught up to.

The fanatic will watch anything that moves. The casual viewer, the one who makes a difference in the ratings, wonders what happened to the Bear in the houndstooth hat and thinks of BC as those guys who always upset someone in the NCAA basketball tournament. What's a Doug Flutie? Bring on the Trojans and the Fighting Irish.

Donn Bernstein, ABC's resident college football ratings expert, also points out that the networks are in the second year of a scheduling cycle — that is, schools are permitted a total of six appearances in two years to keep the nets from showing the Nebraska Game of the Week. By midway through the season, it wasn't necessarily the best matchup that was televised, it was the best matchup between schools that hadn't used up their appearances.

Don Henslee

Q: Could you explain what is meant by the "cold cranking power" rating on auto batteries?

A: Cold cranking power (or performance) is a relatively new rating being applied to automotive batteries. It's a rating of how much current a battery can supply to a starter in extremely cold weather. This is a good rating to be aware of for winter use, or when a vehicle normally sits outside all night in cold weather. The test measures the amperage a battery can put out at 0 degrees F. for 30 seconds. The ratings are expressed in amperes (Cold Cranking Power: 280 Amperes, for example). Obviously, the higher the rating the better the battery for cold weather.

Surgeon wins suit over breast implants

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — A plastic surgeon — who complained that 48 of 80 breast implants he performed began deflating within six months — has been awarded more than $11 million in damages from the manufacturer.

An eight-man, four-woman jury deliberated for about three hours before returning the verdict against McGhan Medical Corp., a division of the 3M Co., which manufactured and marketed the breast implants.

The suit, filed by Dr. Jack Conlee of Corpus Christi, was

BARBS

When you're 20, the world is your oyster. After 40, you find that all along you've been allergic to bivalves.

The thing that multipurpose gadgets do best is to serve as Christmas gifts for those who don't know what to buy.

There are two sides to every question, but how come you always wind up on the wrong side?

the first of 90 suits filed against McGhan to go to trial. Conlee's evidence included depositions from four other plastic surgeons who testified of their problems with implants manufactured by McGhan.

McGhan removed the implants from the market in May 1979, according to testimony.

The company contended that Conlee was to blame for the failures. It said Conlee used improper operating techniques and failed to follow directions regarding inflation of the implants.

Jurors ruled that McGhan was "grossly negligent" in failing to conduct clinical studies prior to marketing the implants and in failing to advise Conlee that the inflatable breast implants were deflating at a higher rate than had been represented to him.

Conlee and other plastic surgeons testified that McGhan officials told them their inflatable mammary implants had a rate of deflation of 1 percent or less.

The jury awarded Conlee $10 million in exemplary damages, $128,000 for economic harm and $1 million for mental anguish he suffered in the past and probably will suffer in the future. Conlee said he began using the McGhan Style 90 inflatable breast implants in 1976 and began noticing deflation occurring about six months after implantation.

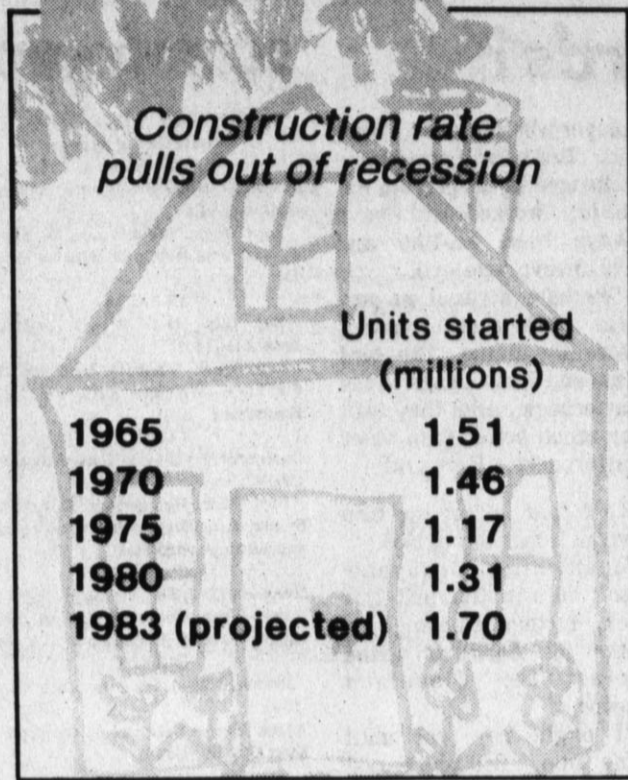

He said two patients filed suit against him and three others threatened to file suit because of problems with their implants. The two suits later were dropped.

The deflation was caused by small pinholes, which allowed saline solution in the implant to leak out, according to trial testimony. The pinholes resulted from pressure on wrinkles and folds in the implant caused when the body tissues contracted around it.

Dr. I. Kelman Cohen of Richmond, Va., who also has a lawsuit pending against McGhan, said in a deposition that he used the McGhan inflatable implants in 107 patients and that 36 patients experienced deflation.

In other depositions, Dr. Robert Flowers of Honolulu said he had 180 failures out of 260 patients, Dr. Marco Rizzo said he had 25 deflations out of 31 cases, and Dr. John Manis of Greenbrae, Calif., said he had 26 failures out of 38 implants.

Hijacker was under suspicion before flight

HOUSTON (AP) — An ex-convict from Cuba who allegedly tried to hijack a Pan Am jetliner four months ago was suspected of being a "possible hijacker" before he boarded the plane, a prosecutor says.

Alfredo Ayala, 29, is charged with attempted air piracy and interfering with the duties of a flight attendant.

The federal court trial ended Wednesday after one day of testimony. Defense attorney Tom Berg called no witnesses and conceded that Ayala was involved in the incident.

But he told the jury, "There is doubt as to whether he formulated the wrongful intent to commit the very serious crime of air piracy."

Closing arguments in the case were scheduled today. Prosecutor Michael Brown said Ayala was targeted by Federal Aviation Administration profile as a "possible hijacker" when he bought a one-way ticket on Pan Am Flight 925.

The Cuban national, who has told authorities he served two years in Cuba prisons before immigrating here in 1980, appeared subdued as his jury trial began Wednesday.

Ayala speaks no English and listened to testimony with the help of a Spanish-speaking interpreter.

Edward O'Meara, a Pan Am financial controller, testified that Ayala's boarding pass bore the letter "P" — meaning he fit the FAA profile of a hijacker.

The profile, O'Meara said, includes passengers who buy one-way tickets without reservations, males aged 18-28 and Hispanics. He said those passengers are searched and prohibited from taking luggage aboard the plane.

O'Meara said the passengers also are supposed to be watched closely by flight crews. But Jeanne Richey, a purser, said she was unaware Ayala was a "high-profile" passenger.

Ms. Richey said she was fixing salads in the galley when she noticed Ayala.

"He just looked blank-eyed. My initial reaction was he was on drugs. He looked perplexed," she said.

But soon Ayala was scuffling with Fernando Villalobos, a flight attendant, in an attempt to get to the cockpit, Ms. Richey said.

Villalobos said Ayala told him in Spanish he wanted to "conduct the aircraft but I didn't think he could mean that, so I asked him again."

Spicer Lung, a Pan Am cargo service manager at Houston Intercontinental Airport, testified that he and his son, Spicer Jr., helped Villalobos overpower Ayala and then manacled Ayala with Teflon handcuffs provided by the pilot.

At the time of the attempted hijacking, Lung, a Nicaraguan national, had been laid off from his job as the airline's catering manager because of Pan Am budget cuts. He was rehired by the airline for his heroics.

Election Central changes tune on vote-count delays

AUSTIN (AP) — Although 81 counties were shown as unreported in the state's vote-counting on election night Nov. 8, all but five of the counties apparently had reported but their vote totals were lost, the state's elections director says.

And in those five counties, clerks in four said they had tried to call in their final results but couldn't get through because the phones at Election Central were all busy, state Elections Director Karen Gladney said.

The other clerk said she didn't call on election night because two ballot boxes had not come in, Ms. Gladney said.

Secretary of State John Fainter, whose office operates Election Central, had said county clerks and computer problems were responsible for delays in counting votes in the Nov. 8 state constitutional amendment election. Some of the clerks had gone home without reporting the election results, he said.

On Wednesday, he apologized to the county clerks for any remarks critical of them and said the delays were the fault of his office. He praised the clerks for their help.

Fainter's apology was made in comments to a task force which advises him on Election Central and came minutes before Ms. Gladney's report to the panel, which afterward passed a resolution commending the county clerks' performance on election night.

Ms. Gladney said that originally the secretary of state's office believed that 81 of the state's 254 counties failed to report their final votes on election night Nov. 8.

However, a closer look showed that figures had been received from 49 of those counties, she said.

Of the clerks in the other 32 counties, 27 said they called and reported their results, Ms. Gladney said, and an examination of phone records confirms calls from 18 of those 27. She said she expected later phone records to confirm the remainder.

Ms. Gladney said the misunderstanding about how many clerks had reported resulted partly from computer problems, including inadvertent erasure of some vote totals and exclusion of some votes from totals.

Although Ms. Gladney said 81 counties were initially believed not reporting, John Cranfill, an assistant managing editor for The Dallas Morning News and chairman of the advisory task force, said his examination on election night showed only 55 counties with incomplete or no vote totals reported.

Election Central was set up by a bill approved by the 1983 Legislature. Under that law, the secretary of state's office tabulates vote totals immediately after the polls close so the media can report the results quickly to the public. Election Central replaced the Texas Election Bureau, a private, nonprofit organization which had done election night vote-counting since 1916.

Although the Nov. 8 election was the first time the secretary of state's office operated Election Central under that law, it had been in operation informally twice before that.

In the Nov. 8 election, Election Central did not report final vote totals until about 10 a.m. Nov. 9.

Moore County Clerk Rhonnie Campbell Mayer, a member of the task force and a leader of an organization of county clerks, said "99 percent" of the county clerks are excellent. She said they are trying hard to cooperate with Election Central.

"We try our best and we did in November," she said, noting that sometimes clerks get blamed for delays they cannot control.

State elections officials said they are working to solve the computer problems Nov. 8 and also are making other efforts to speed the vote-counting, including adding more phone lines to receive the clerks' calls and establishing computer-to-computer connections between Election Central and some clerks' offices, including those in Bexar, Dallas, Tarrant and El Paso counties.

Fainter has pledged to keep Election Central operating until all votes are counted, rather than shutting it down shortly after midnight as was done in the Nov. 8 election.

Panel orders state to transfer inmates

By ANDREW M. WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer
HOUSTON (AP) — Six

Texas prisoners who were abused after they testified for an inmate accused of killing a warden have been ordered transferred to federal custody, an attorney says.

A two-man panel appointed by a federal judge also called upon Texas officials to immediately release two other men because they would have been freed long ago if not for their testimony, attorney David Vanderhoof said.

The order must be implemented in 10 days, Vanderhoof said.

Texas Department of Corrections officials have not received the order, filed Wednesday, but they will abide by the decision, said prison spokesman Rick Hartley.

"Certainly we did agree to the binding arbitration in the matter," Hartley said. "Obviously we will agree to the resulting order."

The panel found that the prisoners who testified for inmate Eroy Edward Brown were abused, Vanderhoof said.

Brown, 32, was found innocent of a capital murder charge filed in the April 4, 1981, slaying of Ellis Unit Warden Wallace M. Pack. Brown testified he drowned Pack because the warden and another official were preparing to torture him.

Brown is to go on trial in April 1984 on a capital murder charge filed in the death of the second man, prison farm manager Billy Max Moore.

Robert Reed, an inmate serving a 15-year sentence, had the warden's last name — "Pack" — carved on his stomach, Vanderhoof said.

Another witness for Brown, Joe Peacock, "was assaulted while he was asleep," Vanderhoof said. "He was stabbed in the back three times," he said. "They were small puncture wounds, somewhat deep. The TDC contends they were self-inflicted."

Peacock is serving a 20-year term.

Appointed by U.S. District Judge Norman Black to hear complaints of the inmate witnesses were Alan F. Breed, of San Andreas, Calif., the former director of the National Institute of Corrections; and Roy Gerard, the former assistant director of the federal prison system, who now lives in Blumont, Va.

The panel met privately with prisoners and prison officials at Sam Houston State University, beginning Oct. 11 and concluding last month, Vanderhoof said.

The panel also found that disciplinary action taken against two witnesses resulted in their losing accumulated "good time" which would have let them leave prison by now, Vanderhoof said.

David DuBose and Robert Santellana "would have been released some time ago — maybe a year ago — but because of what we think are actions harassment as a result of their testimony, their sentences have been extended," Vanderhoof said. "TDC records will show they had been disciplined for rule violations, but those actions are questionable."

Brown himself may not ever be sentenced to the Texas prison system again, Vanderhoof said. According to the order, if he is convicted in Moore's death, he must serve his sentence in a federal prison at Texas' expense.

Ben Lacy, an inmate witness, is being held in Harris County facilities, awaiting trial on new charges, Vanderhoof said. If convicted, he will serve his time in federal prison, the attorney said.

Others ordered transferred to federal custody are Clinton Derry, who is serving a nine-year sentence; Robert Frank, serving a life term; Favis Martin, serving a life sentence; and Joe Gene King, who is serving a life sentence.

Black's order to the panel said they should reserve transfer of prisoners to federal facilities to "extreme circumstances."

Six other prisoners will receive various forms of relief, Vanderhoof said, "generally transfer away from the unit where they are serving."

Seven others received no judicial relief, he said.

Others of the eight ordered transferred to federal custody said they were assaulted or found guilty of "phony or made-up disciplinary charges which had the effect of lengthening their sentences," Vanderhoof said.

Martin, for instance, lost credit for 18 years of service toward ending his term after being found guilty of assaulting an officer, Vanderhoof said. Vanderhoof said that in fact, Martin threw a broom at a prison captain with whom he had had several disputes.

ASLEEP IN CHURCH! AND PAUL WAS THE PREACHER!

When everything was over, Paul sent for the disciples, preached a farewell message to them, said good-bye and left for Greece, preaching to the believers along the way, in all the cities he passed through.

He was in Greece three months and was preparing to sail for Syria when he discovered a plot by the Jews against his life, so he decided to go north to Macedonia first. Several men were traveling with him, going as far as Turkey; they were Sopater of Beroea, the son of Pyrrhus; Aristarchus and Secundus, from Thessalonica; Gaius, from Derbe; and Timothy; and Tychicus and Trophimus, who were returning to their homes in Turkey, and had gone on ahead and were waiting for us at Troas.

As soon as the Passover ceremonies ended, we boarded ship at Philippi in northern Greece and five days later arrived in Troas, Turkey, where we stayed a week.

On Sunday, we gathered for a communion service, with Paul preaching. And since he was leaving the next day, he talked until midnight! The upstairs room where we met was lighted with many flickering lamps; and as Paul spoke on and on, a young man named Eutychus, sitting on the window well, went fast asleep and fell three stories to his death below. Paul went down and took him into his arms. "Don't worry," he said, "he's all right!" And he was! What a wave of awesome joy swept through the crowd! They all went back upstairs and ate the Lord's Supper together; then Paul preached another long sermon -- so it was dawn when he finally left them!

Reports

Panhandle Water

AUSTIN — The recreational and future water needs of the Panhandle gained significantly by passage of the Buffalo Lake Water District in the November election.

I think that the voters of Potter, Randall and Deaf Smith counties should be applauded for voting favorably to establish the water district. I think that the vote demonstrates that voters are looking down the road and realizing that major projects such as Buffalo Lake must be undertaken if we are to have hope for our future.

During the last legislative session, I authored the enabling legislation for the project. I did so because I felt that the area had a significant resource which was not going to be utilized unless steps were taken to bring it to the attention of voters.

Voters in the three counties did reject, however, the taxing authority for the new water district. Even without the local tax revenue, there is much that the new board members can accomplish. The fact remains that the area now has a means of dealing with the government agencies that control Buffalo Lake.

Those people who ran and were elected to the board are owed the real recognition in this project. Because there is no local tax money, they are meeting and operating at their own expense. They are doing so because they believe in this area and what important contributions to our well-being and the area's economy can be gained by taking charge and diligently pursuing the recreational and future water needs that will benefit all of us in the coming decades.

There are no people anywhere who more fully realize the need for water sources than the people of the Panhandle. The future will certainly recall the first step that was taken in 1983. In the meantime, it is imperative that we assist the new board as they formulate a plan for the district.

If you have any questions about the water district or about the Panhandle water situation, please write me, Senator Bill Sarpalius, Box 12068, Capitol Station, Austin 78711.

Association officers installed in ceremony

Members of the Hereford Fine Arts Association held their annual Christmas party Tuesday evening at the Caison House, at which time Norma Hendon conducted the installation of 1984 officers in a candlelight ceremony.

New officers include June Owens, president; Loyce Brown, vice-president; Jean Lyles, program chairman; Shirley Wyssman, secretary, treasurer; Joeline Bledsoe, show director; Mary Aguirre, refreshment chairman; and Linda Minchew, reporter.

Also during the business meeting, the club voted to contribute $100 to the Cowgirl Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center. Jackie Hammett was then introduced and gave a brief account of all of the activities in which the Center participates. She thanked the club for its donation and stressed that the Center also needs volunteer workers.

A Christmas gift exchange was held with each person having a choice of taking someone else's gift that had been opened or an unopened package from the Christmas tree.

Some 30 guests and members enjoyed the fellowship and dinner. Hostesses and decorating committee members for the occasion were Gary Hammett, Shirley Wyssman and Ms. Bledsoe.

Jean Lyles announced that at the next meeting in January Gerald Vance of Amarillo will be the guest speaker. He will give a demonstration in watercolor.

Smoking in bed

DEAR ANN LANDERS: While motoring through North Carolina recently we stopped at a small hotel called Governor's Inn. At bedtime we found this rather unsettling message on our pillow. I believe it is worth sharing with your readers.—From La.

DEAR LA.: So do I. Here it is:

INSTRUCTIONS TO GUESTS PREPARING TO SMOKE IN BED

1. Call the office and notify the management where you wish your remains sent. It is a matter of record that 42 percent of hotel and motel fires are caused by this careless practice.

2. Notify guests in adjoining rooms of your intention of endangering their lives so they can take the necessary precautions to protect themselves.

3. Go to the corridor and locate the nearest fire escape, so that if you are fortunate enough to escape your room, you may reach safety.

4. Now sit down and think how foolish it is for you to take this risk—you may enjoy your smoke while thinking it over.

Fire prevention is our business and we need your help. We hope you will take this with you on your trip as a reminder that this short message was heeded by you.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Something is bothering me and I can't discuss it with anyone I know. It's my husband. Whenever we have a problem, he goes to his ex-wife's house and talks it over with her.

I'm the type of person who walks out of the house when there is trouble. I hate to argue. My husband swears he no longer has any feelings for his ex-wife but it bugs me that he goes over there just the same. Am I childish, as he says? What do you think?—Annoyed In Indiana

DEAR IND.: Hide your walking shoes, honey. The next time you two have a difference of opinion, sit down with your husband and talk to him about the problem. He will then have no excuse to go running back to his ex, and you will feel a lot more grown up.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Why does "Bug-Eyed in Sarasota" think it is out of line for a woman to expect her husband to assume part of the responsibility for thanking friends and relatives for wedding gifts?

A woman who writes her husband's social notes gives him the idea that it's HER job. This ridiculous notion is reminiscent of another century. It used to be that men were so busy they had no time for note-writing. Today's woman is just as busy as her husband—and some are a whole lot busier.

Since the gifts were sent to both, they should divide the job of acknowledging them. Right?—New Brave World

DEAR NEW AND BRAVE: Right. Many jobs that once were His or Hers are now Theirs. And it's a healthy thing for the marriage. The more that can be shared the better, including time-consuming social chores that are somewhat boring and require patience.

DEAR READERS: Over 2,000 readers have let me know I bollixed up the Churchill quote on ending a sentence with a preposition. Here is the correct version: "This is the sort of English, "Sir Winston snapped, "up with which I will not put." Thanks to all who wrote—even those whose versions were more fractured than mine.

Parents, what should you do if your teenager is having sexual relations? Ann Landers' new booklet, "High School Sex and How to Deal With It—A Guide for Teens and Their Parents," give no-nonsense advice on how to handle this delicate situation. For each booklet, send 50 cents plus a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Veleda Study Club holds Christmas party

The Veleda Study Club's annual Christmas party was held recently in the home of Donna Lindeman.

President Joyce Ritter called the meeting to order and the club collect was recited. Members answered roll call with "My favorite Christmas decoration."

Minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved and the treasurer's report was given. Members passed a motion to make a contribution to the Hereford Christmas Stocking Fund.

Also, a discussion was held to donate to the Cowgirl Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center but was tabled until the next meeting.

"The Gold and Ivory Tablecloth" was the story presented by Patricia Weldon before the group held their gift exchange.

Wassail and other refreshments were served to Marcella Brady, Juanita Brown, Janice Brownlow, Francis Crume, Betty Gilbert, Marcella McLain, Norma Martin, Jean Ruther, Norma Walden and Margaret Zinsner.

A simple holiday gift for a favorite neighbor: decorate an empty coffee can to match her kitchen decor and fill it with some handy kitchen utensils...wooden spoons, a whisk, a new rubber spatula.

Investigation yields indictments

CHICAGO (AP) — A bugged cowboy boot while befriending crooked lawyers. There also have been reports of FBI "moles" posing as corrupt prosecutors and reports that a "Boy Scout" former state's attorney, Terry Hake, became so disgusted with corruption he offered to go undercover. He worked with the FBI and posed as a shady lawyer to snare crooks.

Officials reported up to 100 criminal cases were fabricated to ferret out corruption and bugging devices were placed in judges' chambers.

Just hours before the indictments were handed down, a police sergeant assigned to the courtroom of one of the indicted judges was found dead, apparently after shooting himself. The Chicago Sun-Times reported that Sgt. Roger Murphy, 53, was to have appeared Wednesday before the grand jury.

Indicted were Cook County Circuit Court Judges Wayne Olson and John M. Murphy — no relation to the dead officer — who were relieved of their duties last week after learning they were targets of the probe, and former Judge John Devine, ousted from the bench in June by a vote of circuit judges after being criticized by the city Bar Association.

Also indicted were a Chicago policeman, four attorneys, a deputy court clerk and a private citizen.

The indictments left legal experts questioning the tactics employed by law enforcement agents and its impact on a judicial system in which 322 judges and 21,000 licensed lawyers handle nearly 6 million cases annually.

Webb defended the practices used by investigators, saying, "It was critical for undercover FBI agents to develop the confidence of people in the courts."

"Today's indictments are specific accusations of wrongdoing on the part of specific individuals," said Chief Circuit Judge Harry Comerford. "In no way should they reflect upon the judicial system as a whole."

In Washington, FBI Director William Webster said Greylord demonstrates the bureau's "willingness to follow its leads wherever they take us, and that there are no safe harbors from investigation of corruption."

Eight of the nine indictments were returned by a grand jury that heard evidence gathered in Greylord. The ninth, naming a Chicago attorney, concerned courtroom corruption but was not a result of the Greylord probe.

One attorney, Thomas Kangalos, is a former assistant city attorney who vanished over three months ago and is being sought by the FBI. There were reports he has fled to Greece.

All the defendants except Kangalos were permitted to remain free on personal recognizance bond. A $50,000 cash bond was set for Kangalos, pending his arrest.

Webb declined to say whether the dead policeman was a figure in the investigation, saying only it was "a tragic event, something that should be left behind."

Devine, Olson, Murphy and attorney James Costello were charged with mail fraud, racketeering and extortion.

Also charged were: Dean Wolfson, attorney — racketeering; John G. Phillips, attorney — extortion; Kangalos, 36, assistant corporation counsel — racketeering, extortion and obstruction of justice; Ira Blackwood, 54, a Chicago policeman — racketeering and extortion; Harold Conn, 56, deputy circuit court clerk — racketeering and extortion; Alan Kaye, 33, private individual — racketeering, mail fraud, extortion and extortionate collection of an extension of credit.

The word "lieutenant" comes from the Latin Locum tenens, meaning "in the place of". A Lieutenant-Colonel, for instance, is the colonel's deputy.

Book ranks best places for retirement

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — It may not be as well known as traditional Sun Belt retirement havens, but homey Brevard, N.C., came out on top in a new guide that ranks the best places to make a fresh start when your career is over.

While the long-established retirement centers of Miami, San Diego and Phoenix fared well in climate, health care and recreation opportunities, the authors of the "Places Rated Retirement Guide" scored many tiny towns like Brevard, Clarksville, Ga., and Crossville, Tenn., as among "the best places in America for retirement living."

Brevard, in the mountains of southwestern North Carolina, was first on the list of 107 places ranked by a cumulative score that considered factors that commonly concern the elderly.

Those factors identified by the authors were climate and terrain, housing, affordability, crime rate, health care facilities and recreation opportunities.

It was typically in crime rate, cost of living and homeowning costs that big cities took a back seat to small communities like Brevard, population 5,323.

The authors compared Brevard to the neighboring fictional town of "Mayberry R.F.D." featured in the old television show that bore its name.

In Brevard, "If you enter the local pharmacy to buy film or tobacco, you'd better be prepared to stay and shoot the breeze for a few minutes," the authors said.

Brevard was followed in the top 10 by nearby Asheville, N.C.; Clarksville-Mount Airy, Ga.; Crossville, Tenn.; Lexington-Fayette, Ky.; Las Cruces, N.M.; Harrison, Ark., and Roswell, N.M., with Camden-Penobscot, Maine, and Cookeville, Tenn., tied for ninth.

Among large cities, Albuquerque, N.M., was ranked 16; San Antonio, Texas, was 25; Tucson, Ariz., 27; Miami, 31; San Diego, 37, and Phoenix, 44.

"It's surprising, isn't it? If you look at some of the places we ranked, people haven't heard of them," said co-author David Savageau, 40, who runs a Lynnfield, Mass., firm that advises executives about relocating.

Co-author Richard Boyer of Asheville, N.C., has written mystery novels, and was the author with Savageau of the "Places Rated Almanac," which ranked U.S. metropolitan areas for livability.

The retirement book is expected to be on the shelves in January. Penn State University demographer Daniel Lichter, who served as a consultant, released an advance copy to reporters in this college town, which ranked 12th on the list.

More and more, people are not staying put when they retire, said Lichter, an expert on the migration of retired people.

"Their kids are spread out all over the country and they have transportable pensions and Social Security," he said.

The writers used Census Bureau figures to come up with 107 areas attracting significant numbers of people over 65 and representing each of the nation's major geographic areas, said

Savageau. In all, 35 states were represented.

Some "subjective" considerations were made, Savageau said.

For example, State College, "was recommended to us by a demographer at the Census Bureau," he said.

The demographer "said there were maybe a dozen college towns in the United States that were starting to attract retirees. He recommended State College as a way to give some balance to the northeast," Savageau said.

The only other area in Pennsylvania to be ranked was Lancaster, which placed 74th.

Boost From Lions

The Deaf Smith County Foster Parents organization received a $54.50 contribution from the Hereford Lions Club at the weekly civic club meeting Wednesday.

President Ed Line made the presentation to Melvin Jayroe, who accepted for the foster parent group. The money came from a weekly fund-raising project.

Report shows

Pilot suffers heart attack

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — An autopsy has determined that the 29-year-old pilot of a plane that crashed last month at Midland's airport, killing eight people, had suffered a heart attack.

The Texas Western Aviation pilot, Keith Elkin of Midland, suffered "hyper acute changes of contraction band necrosis," the pathologist, Dr. David Schneidman of Midland, said Wednesday.

Elkin, six employees of KOSA-TV and a passenger were returning from high school football playoff games in Fort Worth and Wichita Falls when the aircraft plummeted to the ground.

A Midland cardiologist, Dr. Brian Mohr, told the Odessa American that the type of heart attack that Elkin suffered "is the cause of sudden death and there is no warning whatsoever."

"Part of the heart died. It's rare, but not unusual. The incidences of heart attacks increase as you get older. It's happened a couple of times in a year to people of that age in Midland," Mohr added.

Sneidman said the final autopsy report on Elkin was being prepared and would be released later to Midland County Justice of the Peace Bob Pine.

The accident is being investigated by the National Transportation Safety Board, which has not yet issued its conclusions.

The pilot was trying to land a chartered twin-engine Beechcraft King Air 100 turboprop Nov. 16 at Midland Regional Airport when the craft crashed 1,500 feet east of the main runway.

Killed in the accident were Elkin; KOSA Assistant News Director Gary Hopper, 32, of Midland; Sports Director Jeff Shull, 25, of Odessa; Chief Engineer Bob Stephens, 47, and Assistant Engineer Ed Monette, 26, both of Odessa; production assistants Bruce Dyer, 26, of Midland and Brent Roach, 24, of Odessa; and Hopper's brother-in-law, 37-year-old Jay Alvin Price of Midland.

Horses were first tamed in Asia some 10,000 years ago, historians say.

Housing project nearly complete

CLARKSVILLE, Texas (AP) — George Lackey hitched his brown suspenders, dropped some tobacco juice into a spittoon and prepared to get pushed around for the first time in his 87 years.

By Thursday, Lackey and a few of his neighbors will have been moved from the white portion of a small public housing project in Northeast Texas to the black portion under a federal court order.

In legal terms, U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice's order is intended to integrate the 104 publically operated apartments in Clarksville.

But in human terms, Lackey said, forcing 25 white elderly residents to trade apartments with 25 black elderly residents two weeks before Christmas is "criminal."

"The judge says I got to move, so I'll move. I don't understand why," Lackey said, boxes of his belongings stacked in his living room for the move. "But they ain't going to run me out of Clarksville. I've been here 57 years."

Clarksville Housing Authority director Rosemary Caviness said only five white families chose to move to the black sector. The 20 others opted for more expensive private housing or moved to relatives' homes, nursing homes or public housing projects in other towns. All of the blacks chose to move to the white section by the Dec. 15 deadline, she said.

"I haven't started to fill the vacancies yet. To fulfill the judge's order, I'm going to have to try and find white families for those vacancies," Ms. Caviness said. "Whether I can find whites to move in remains to be seen. They'll get preference for housing, but I've got to keep occupancy up to keep my rents up."

Two black families filed a civil rights suit against the housing authority in 1980 claiming they had been denied housing in the white section even though apartments were available.

Clarksville attorney Pat Beadle, representing the housing authority, said a full hearing on case's merits is pending.

Justice, who has previously sparked controversy in Texas with orders revising prison standards and requiring public education for the children of illegal aliens, issued the order without a trial, Beadle said.

The judge's order, however, has already been upheld by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Beadle said the case is probably headed for the Supreme Court.

Implementation of Justice's order, apparently the first of its kind for public housing projects, is being closely watched by other public housing associations in Northeast Texas who are now a part of a class action suit.

The Department of Housing and Urban Development in Washington said this could become a test case for 40,000 public housing units in the country.

Lackey said he chose to make the move because he had no where else to go.

"This is the first time in my life that I've been pushed around," he said. "I've cried and I've prayed but it don't look like there's any other way out."

"We was living happy, but it tore down pretty quick," Lackey said. "I was just raised to stay away from niggers."

In October, Justice ordered the housing authority to impose a quota system so that no project was less than 45 percent black. Last month, names were drawn from a hat to determine which tenants would move.

Ms. Caviness said several white residents had expressed reservations about the safety of the black section, but she said neither side had reported any break-ins or assaults in the last 2½ years.

Women from the local Church of Christ helped Doris Holder move into the black section Dec. 5. She found that she knew a couple across the street who had taught her children in school.

"It's been better than I expected. Everyone's pretty friendly," she said.

Carrin Middleton, 78, wrapped herself in a quilt and huddled in a closet to stay warm. She moved into the white section on Tuesday, but her gas heater wasn't turned on yet.

"If I had my choice, I'd have stayed there," she said of her old apartment. "It's quite natural for all of us to want to stay if you can stay."

Since most of the apartments in the white section are designed for the elderly — the average age is 77 — nearly all of the transfers involve senior citizens, Ms. Caviness said.

"It's cold this time of year and we've had rain," she said.

"It's been very trying for all of them."

Utilities oppose sharing costs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Utility companies in western states, calling acid rain "a regional problem," are fighting legislation that would spread the cost of cleaning up that pollution among electric consumers across the country.

"It is just not fair. We have done our fair share" to combat acid rain, Evorn Wall, president of El Paso Electric, said Wednesday.

"We believe acid rain is not a national problem," he said. "It is a regional problem."

Wall led a delegation of western utility executives to Washington for a round of briefings with members of Congress and reporters. It was their first step in an effort to block a number of measures now before Congress.

Several of the bills that would fight acid rain call for sharing the costs of controls on sulfur dioxide emissions among all electric consumers in the country.

One bill, sponsored by Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., and Rep. Gerry Sikorski, D-Minn., carries an annual price tag of $2.2 billion for controls on the 50 dirtiest coal-fired generating plants in the country — all of them in the East.

Partly because of the cost, Budget Director David Stockman and other presidential advisers are opposed to having the federal government pay for the cleanup.

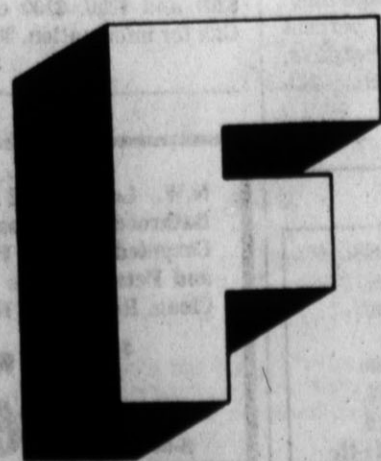

Charles de Gaulle resigned as president of France on April 28, 1969, after narrowly losing a referendum.

Texas Migrant Council is now registering children 2½ year olds. For more information please call 364-5972 or come by at 101 Domingo St. (Labor Camp) Time 1:00-4:00 p.m.

Lack of sexual desire

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have a problem that is affecting the happiness in our marriage. I am 55 years old and have no interest in sex except to wish I had the life of my earlier years when I was able to please my husband.

I also have a problem with dryness. I spoke to my doctor about it nine months ago after reading about it in one of your columns. I asked him about trying estrogen, but he said my symptoms didn't warrant estrogen and prescribed Vagitol cream instead.

When I first started my menopause and complained of hot flashes, he said that ordinarily he would prescribe estrogen. But that was when the estrogen cancer scare was becoming prevalent, so he didn't prescribe it.

Maybe estrogen is not the answer, but Vagitol definitely is not, either. I still suffer pain during sex. I am in need of help, since there are emotional problems arising from what my husband refers to as coldness.

DEAR READER — You do need help. Vagitol is not a hormone cream, nor is it a lubricant. It ordinarily is prescribed for trichomoniasis, a common infection that causes a discharge.

An examination, including looking at cells from your vaginal area, can assess your need for estrogen. Women who are low on estrogen often have dryness, and that can lead to the problems you describe. And in that case, estrogen replacement is a great help.

Most doctors have avoided prescribing estrogen because of the cancer scare regarding estrogen. But it is time to review that approach. New information has shown that this is not a great problem if a woman uses a combination of estrogen and progesterone medicine.

A recent study sponsored by the National Institutes of BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Officials have stepped up security at the Port of Beaumont after a man walked aboard a Soviet ship recently and berated the crew for their government's downing of a Korean airliner.

Guards said the unidentified man seemed harmless enough when they waved him through the port's main entrance on the morning of Nov. 17. He said he wanted to board the Kapitan Panfilov, a Soviet carrier in port to load grain at the Continental Grain Co. elevator.

By the time port and shipping officials learned that the man had gone through the gate, he had spent about two hours aboard the ship, gotten into his car and driven away.

But not before he had offended the crew, wandered the ship from top to bottom, and tape-recorded the entire episode, according to Seamen's Center Chaplain Bill Bauer, who spoke to crew

Today in History

Today is Thursday, Dec. 15, the 349th day of 1983. There are 16 days left in the year. Today's highlight in history:

In 1963, three men were charged in Los Angeles with kidnapping Frank Sinatra Jr., and most of the $240,000 ransom paid for his release was recovered.

Today's birthdays: Actor Tim Conway is 50 years old. Singer Dave Clark is 41.

members afterward.

"He was asking why they had come to America to buy grain after killing people on the Korean 007," Bauer told the Beaumont Enterprise, referring to the Soviet downing of Korean Airliner 007 and its 269 passengers over the Sea of Japan on Sept. 1.

"He left a real impression with the men. He was obnoxious and running them down.

My impression was that he was basically calling them killers," said Bauer, who worries about what the Russian crew now thinks of Americans.

A man, describing himself as a resident of nearby Vidor and a Navy veteran, called the Enterprise about noon on Nov. 17 and said he had just finished a visit aboard the Kapitan Panfilov, the newspaper reported Wednesday.

The man told the newspaper he had gone out of curiosity and enjoyed himself. He said he asked crew members about the whereabouts of Soviet leader Yuri Andropov, who had in recent months not appeared in public. The sailors replied they didn't know, he said.

The man added several comments that were derisive of the intelligence of the crew members, saying on a scale of 1 to 10, they rated about a 2.

The newspaper said its reporter listened politely, then forgot about the phone call until port officials began stepping up security and restricting access to Soviet ships — blaming the visit of an unidentified man.

John Roby, spokesman for the port, was unhappy about the incident.

"It's kind of embarrassing to me to think there are people who do such things," he says, adding that guards will be more careful in the future. Still, it's the captain of the ship who controls who can board his vessel, Roby said.

"Once you're on the gangway, you have to have permission from the captain to go aboard," he said.

Bauer said a good guess is that the Russians were too polite to throw him off the ship.

Though Soviet ships routinely carry a KGB political officer — called the commissar — who discourages defections and exposure to foreign ideas, even commissars don't like to get nasty, Bauer said.
