McDougal likes to spend time with soil

By KIM THOGMARTIN
Staff Writer

"I love the harvest most. I love to be there when the wheat is tall and golden and beautiful. In fact, I plant a crop for the harvest. I think about feeding the hungry people of the world, and it makes me feel a part of it. There is a sense of productivity that a person really cannot get any other way."

Eloise McDougal is one of those women who seem to grow more beautiful with the years, a soft-spoken example of the kind of woman who has brought life and love to the West Texas plains for the past century or so. She talks with tear-moistened eyes about her love for "State Line Farms" and why she has clung to ownership of the land since her husband Claude died 14 years ago.

"I don't think my husband thought I would stay with it," McDougal said. "But it is a challenge and also fulfilling to spend time with the soil. I enjoy the peace and quiet and the wildlife. Away from the telephone and the doorbell. I feel a sense of appreciation for nature. I am thankful that I have been granted the stewardship of this land."

The couple completed purchase of one-and-a-half sections near the New Mexico border in 1955. Various dryland crops were grown there through the years and, for the last ten years that Claude was alive, the couple developed an angus herd. They raised both registered and commercial stock and often sold the registered calves to 4-H'ers for show.

McDougal still lives in the brick home the couple built on the west edge of Hereford in 1953. For a while she drove the 35 miles to the farm every day. In recent years she has planted only wheat, so the daily trips are no longer necessary year-round.

McDougal said she took part in the physical work that first year, but since then has had the crop custom-sown and harvested. She makes all the decisions about when to plow and plant and does the marketing as well. "When anything is going on, I am there," she explained.

As a former school teacher, McDougal enjoys meeting the young men on the harvest crews. "They are usually college boys from various parts of the country," she said. "I like to visit with them and find out what their plans are for the future, what they are thinking about." She said she usually rides along on that first trip to the elevator.

"I also enjoy talking with the other farmers in the area," she continued. "We stop along the roadside and chat about moisture levels, when to plant, when to spray, things like that."

"I don't think I am discriminated against because I'm a woman. I feel that the men listen to me and appreciate what I have to say. They have given me a fair deal, so that is one battle I do not have to fight."

The Concho variety of wheat is currently grown on McDougal's farm. "It is a good dryland variety, a sturdy type that is not as easily damaged by wind and hail."

"And," she admits, "it grows taller. I like to see it waving in the wind and reflecting the sunlight."

The responsibility of the farm does not seem to slow McDougal down when her services are needed in the community. She has devoted a number of years to Operation Good Shepherd and the American Cancer Society and is active on the state and local boards of Church Women United.

Her work with the Northwest Texas United Methodist Conference has blossomed into numerous ecclesiastical assignments throughout the state.

"I have seen a broad picture of wheat Christian unity is supposed to mean in the life of the community," McDougal commented. "I am thrilled at the way the pastors here are working together. I can see that the heart of the community is going in the right direction."

A high school English teacher for 23 years, McDougal said her students have become her best friends. "I depend on them for whatever needs I have. At Christmas time they come and bring their children, and now even their grandchildren."

Traveling in Europe, the Holy Land and to Hawaii have been a special joy for McDougal. "I was finally able to visit the places I had taught about all those years." Now, she said, she would like to see more of the United

Villarreal case continues

By REED PARSELL
Managing Editor

As well as time-consuming, the case of Abel Villarreal vs. Deaf Smith County has become both multi-dimensional and expensive.

Earlier this month, U.S. District Court Judge Mary Lou Robinson certified a class discrimination request resulting from Villarreal's suit, filed back in 1981. The firm representing Deaf Smith has been paid $41,921.97 this year, almost $24,000 of that billed in the last two months.

Last week, Randall Marshall of the local Texas Rural League Aid office explained ramifications of the recent decision, detailed the case's history and offered some possible future results. TRLA was originally asked to defend Villarreal. Marshall, though not directly involved in the matter, said he knows much about it and acts as an "unofficial spokesman" for the office.

Two years ago, Villarreal filed the suit claiming the job he was being offered carried a lower rate of pay than whites would receive. In 1982, Cecil Garza was interviewed into the same suit. This was done, Marshall explained, since her claim also involved discriminatory hiring practices by the county.

Certification granted; county spending much

According to Judge Robinson's decision, testimony indicated Garza appeared at the sheriff's office after seeing a secretarial position advertised in the Brand. Though the advertisement instructed applicants to "contact Eva (McKnight)," Garza reportedly did not ask for her and left a telephone number with the contact. After a week of no phone call, Garza returned and learned the position had been filled.

Defense lawyers argued Garza had not actually applied for the job since she never completed a written application form, interviewed or was formally rejected. According to the judge, though, she "manifested a sufficient demonstration of interest in employment."

This year, class certification was requested for the suit, meaning the 484 Mexican-Americans who applied for and were denied

The next step, Marshall said, will be a trial on the merits of the class claim of discrimination by the county. That court action may take place, he pointed out, anytime within the next year or, pessimistically, beyond.

Should the defense win, Deaf Smith would, naturally, not be required to change anything. If the plaintiffs prevail, however, Marshall said possible results could be the county having to pay each member of the class a small

Students have Monday off

There will be no school Monday for either the Hereford or Walcott Independent School Districts.

While children have the day off, teachers will be subjected to another "in-service" program. Regular school schedules resume Tuesday morning.

Lighting ceremony Monday

The annual Christmas-tree-lighting ceremony, sponsored by the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Women's Division, is scheduled to begin at 6:30 p.m. Monday on the south lawn of the courthouse.

Special guests, Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus, are to make an appearance to take orders from the children. Also, Gary Morgan is supposed to be featured soloist and will lead the singing of Christmas carols.

The Christmas tree, planted by members of the Women's Division several years ago, is to be lit during the event.

Sue Malamen is chairman of this year's event.

Commissioners plan to meet

Deaf Smith County Commissioners are set to gather for a regular meeting Monday at 10 a.m. in the Deaf Smith County Courthouse.

Listed on the nine-item agenda is Ray Cowsert, to be included in a discussion on a new sheriff's fee for execution on an order of sale. Also, commissioner Bruce Coleman is to lead a talk on changing county policy to allow work-release prisoners to be employed in precincts without advertising.

Christmas fund initiated

A foster children Christmas fund has been established at the Hereford State Bank to provide foster children with toys and needed clothing for the holidays.

Donations may be sent to the Golden Spread Foster Parents Association Christmas fund, in care of the Hereford State Bank, P.O. Box 272, Hereford or sent to Rita Burges, Christmas chairman for Deaf Smith County, at 137 Ave. B, Hereford.

All donations are tax deductible.

Annual breakfast slated Thursday

The 6th annual "Eat Your Heart Out, Neiman-Marcus" Fun Breakfast is scheduled Thursday morning in the Community Center with prizes, surprises, entertainment, and a big display of Christmas gift ideas you'll have to see to believe.

In case you haven't been around, or can't stand fun and excitement so early in the morning, the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce has been sponsoring these breakfast affairs for eight years.

The general format is the same each time, with co-emcees Doug Manning and Lynton Allred calling on folks for community announcements, naming "volunteers" for fun games, doling out Hereford Bucks in special drawings, presenting a "Bull Chip Award" to a deserving local citizen.

This one is special, according to chamber exec Mike Carr, because it includes many booths, manned by local merchants, with a host of Christmas gift ideas. And, since it is the last breakfast of the year, a "Golden Bull Chip" will be presented and special musical entertainment is to be presented.

Manning and Allred have been the "ringmaster of the circus" for eight years, according to Carr, who plans to make special note of the work of the volunteer emcees at the breakfast.

Any merchant who wants display space at the breakfast should contact Carr Monday. Those who plan to attend the breakfast are also urged to call the chamber office, 364-3333, and make reservations for breakfast.

The breakfast line starts at 6:30 a.m. Thursday. Mark your calendar, make your reservations, set your alarm and join the fun!

WOODSTOCK SAYS ONLY 24 SHOPPING DAYS 'TIL CHRISTMAS.

H.B.P. Special - Nieman

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says Thanksgiving should be a daily habit, not a seasonal ritual.

The breadwinner's main trouble today is that his family has developed a taste for cake.

The Hereford Brand is handling contributions again this year for the Christmas Stocking Fund, and we hope you will support this worthwhile cause to help less fortunate families at Christmastime.

An anonymous group of men started this project four years ago and, through the generosity of Hereford citizens, the fund has brightened Christmas for many needy families in the community. Contributions totalled more than $8,400 last year.

The money is used by the CSF group to buy food and clothing for needy families. The non-profit organization screens all requests to assure that the most needy persons receive the help. Citizens are asked to recommend families who need help.

The screening process has been changed this year. All recommendations or requests should be mailed or taken to the Christmas Stocking Fund, Room 101, Deaf Smith County Courthouse. All contributions should be mailed to CSF, Hereford Brand, Box 673, Hereford, Tx. 79045. Contributions can also be taken to the newspaper office.

The CSF group has named Ben Childers, McCasin Lumber, as the treasurer of the organization. All contributions will be used in the program; there are no administration expenses. Only monetary donations are accepted, since the group does not have the time or manpower to accept food or other items.

The newspaper will report the contributions on a regular basis between now and Christmas. Those who wish to make anonymous donations should so indicate. The opportunity to share with needy neighbors is now underway. Remember, recommendations about families goes to Room 101, Courthouse, and contributions go to The Hereford Brand, Box 673.

Santa ready for letters

Santa Claus
North Pole

Dear Boys and Girls:
Hi, Kids! You better watch out; you'd better not pout cause ole' Santa is coming to town!

It's time to get out your pencil and paper and tell me what you'd like for Christmas. Once again, my friends at The Hereford Brand have agreed to help me collect letters from all the youngsters in the Hereford area.

This sure helps me out during the Christmas rush. It helps me cut down on overtime for my elves here at the North Pole, and lets me have time to get my reindeer and sleigh ready for my Christmas Eve visits.

So, write down what you'd like me to bring you for Christmas this year and take your letter to The Brand office at 313 No. Lee, or mail it to Santa Claus in care of The Hereford Brand, Box 673, Hereford, 79045.

The newspaper staff will make sure letters get to me in time for deliveries, and they'll even publish your letter in the paper.

Be good boys and girls and mind your parents. Watch for me on Christmas Eve...Ho, Ho, Ho!

Task force to help in investigation

AUSTIN (AP) — The Department of Public Safety has created a task force to help local law enforcement agencies investigate killings that may have been committed by Henry Lee Lucas, a self-proclaimed mass murderer already convicted of two Texas slayings, authorities said.

The DPS director, Col. Jim Adams, ordered the creation of a task force to coordinate the exchange of information and to assist local agencies in investigating Lucas, 47, and Otis Elwood Toole, a man who claims to have assisted Lucas in some killings.

The task force, which will be headed by Texas Ranger Sgt. Bob Prince, will consist of Rangers, officers from the DPS Crime Analysis Service and officers from the DPS Criminal Intelligence Service, said Adams.

Lucas, who has been convicted of two killings in Texas and who is charged with eight others, has claimed to have killed about 165 people, mostly women, since he was 13.

Striking pilots arrested with bombs

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Federal agents are investigating a possible plot by striking Continental Airlines pilots to bomb non-striking workers after two striking pilots were arrested and charged with possessing explosive weapons.

The two striking pilots — Frances Calvin Earley, 43, of Houston and Charles Weldon Hall, 47, of Humble — were arrested in San Antonio with a pair of pipe bombs and pictures of at least three homes of non-striking employees, officials said.

Earley and Hall were stopped by Department of Public Safety troopers during a routine driver's license check. After a paper sack containing two pipe bombs was found, each was charged with possession of an explosive weapon and released Wednesday on a $10,000 bond.

The federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms has launched an investigation into the activities of Earley and Hall, said Phillip Chojnacki, acting special agent in agency's Houston office.

Chinese defection prompts jet land

CHICAGO (AP) — A Chinese diplomatic courier remained in an undisclosed location today after defecting aboard a Pan American jumbo jet, arguing loudly and angrily with a countryman and prompting an unscheduled landing for the cross-country flight.

The courier, identified by airport security officials as Gogiang Yang, was aboard a 747 jet carrying documents from San Francisco to his country's United Nations delegation in New York when he made his plea Friday for political asylum, authorities said.

The 88 passengers aboard Flight 72 witnessed a 90-minute standoff and "vehement" quarrel between the defector and a Chinese companion, apparently over which of them would keep pouches containing official documents, said airport police Sgt. Karl Mueller.

After the pilot landed in Chicago, Yang was removed from the aircraft. The pouches remained on board with the other courier, and after a two-hour delay, the flight continued to New York's John F. Kennedy International Airport, officials said.

Pentagon concerned about plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — While the Reagan administration denies the Soviet walkout on arms talks amounts to a crisis, the Pentagon is concerned that Moscow's plans to deploy new missiles might disrupt the nuclear balance.

Administration spokesmen studiously tried to dispel the impression Friday that a new confrontation between the superpowers would ensue with the suspension of arms talks and the Soviet announcement of new weapons to counter NATO's decision to install 572 Pershing 2 and cruise missiles in Western Europe.

Alan Romberg, deputy State Department spokesman, denied that the new Soviet deployments, including rockets on submarines off the North American coasts, would be a new threat to the United States.

Soviet leader Yuri Andropov outlined the new deployment measures in a statement issued Thursday, a day after Soviet arms negotiators said they were "discontinuing" the talks in Geneva on medium-range missiles.

Romberg said there was nothing new in Andropov's announcement.

Ambassador denounces squads

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — U.S. Ambassador Thomas Pickering strongly denounced El Salvador's rightist death squads, calling for an investigation and saying "no one seems to be trying to develop evidence that will stand up in court."

Pickering spoke Friday night to the American Chamber of Commerce here and expressed what he said was increasing U.S. concern about rightist violence in the U.S.-backed country.

"The important thing is that the terrorists are murderers, torturers and kidnapers. As such they deserve nothing less from society than open and honest punishment for such crimes," Pickering said.

Pickering said even though "there is information available to many of us about some of the personalities involved ... my deep concern is that no one seems to be trying to develop evidence which would stand up in court."

Gunmen take $45 million in gold

LONDON (AP) — Six ski-masked gunmen raided a security warehouse at London's Heathrow Airport Saturday and fled with about three tons of gold bullion valued at $45 million, Scotland Yard said.

It was one of the biggest robberies in British history, topping the Great Train Robbery of 1963, in which $6 million in bank notes was stolen from a mail train near Mentmore, England.

A Scotland Yard spokesman said the robbers broke into the Brink's Mat Ltd. depot, handcuffed the staff and poured gasoline over them, threatening to set the workers on fire if they interfered.

The robbers wore ski masks and were armed with handguns, said a police spokesman who asked not to be identified.

Six members of the staff were in the building when the robbers broke in by undetermined means, police said. All six workers were taken to a hospital for treatment for skin burns caused by contact with the gasoline.

Something Different

By KIM THOGMARTIN

Friday morning's newspapers featured front-page stories of how America celebrated Thanksgiving. Most were stories about compassion; people who are blessed helped those who are not. Most were good-news stories, the kind that show this county at its best.

Buried deep inside Section B of the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal was the story we were really interested in. In just four short paragraphs, an Associated Press writer described with great thoroughness how the holiday was celebrated by the Reagan family.

First, the story let us know that persistent rains forced the President to cancel plans to go horseback riding. For some reason the entire country goes into mourning when it is learned that Mr. Reagan has missed a chance to go galloping through the California hills. We have always followed the hobbies of our leaders, everything from golfing to boating to training beagles, and somehow those presidential diversions have become important to us.

But then we got into the real "meat" of the story, the menu. It was the traditional turkey and all the trimmings of course, with one exception. The first family dined not on homemade cloverleaf dinner rolls, but on "monkey bread."

Our diligent AP writer did his-her homework, of course, with the last paragraph describing monkey bread as "a sweet bread that is crisscrossed and baked in a mold." I mean let's face it, we cannot have the President of the United States eating something as strange - sounding as monkey bread without letting everyone know that it is really a fairly ordinary dish.

The point is, why are we so interested in knowing what the Reagans ate for Thanksgiving dinner? Is it really anyone's business? I cannot answer that one, but I do know that it is the only story in the Friday A-J that I read every word of. And I would almost bet money that housewives all over the nation serve monkey bread this weekend. I have the recipe at home somewhere, maybe I will dig it out tonight.

News From Our Area

Perryton — Following the lead of certain business in the private sector, the city of Perryton is now in the process of implementing a safety program as an in-house vehicle aimed at effective accident prevention. A safety committee has recently been organized, with members coming from the various departments within the city government so as to maximum exchange of ideas and pinpoint areas of hazards, problem areas and safety promotions.

Canyon — Encouraging other television cable companies to bring Public Broadcasting Service to Canyon was one solution suggested by city commissioners to citizens interested in seeing PBS return.

Four Canyon residents attended the commission meeting to present a petition signed by more than 300 Cablevision of Canyon subscribers seeking answers to why PBS isn't broadcast here. Approximately 2,000 homes subscribe to Cablevision. Cablevision is in its eighth year of a 12 year franchise with the city. The primary responsibility of cities in granting in the franchise is controlling prices and seeing that proper service is maintained by the cable company.

Dimmitt — Sales taxes in Castro County for November 1983 are up from what they were in November a year ago, although the totals are still running a little behind for 1983 to date compared with the year to date for 1982.

In month to month comparisons, Dimmitt has shown the first increase in over four months.

The rebate check for Dimmitt for November 1983 is $19,779.43 based on the city's portion of the one percent city sales tax. In November of 1982, Dimmitt received $18,503.19. All the monthly checks Dimmitt has received in 1983 total $122,885.93, a decrease of 6.23 percent from the year-to-date total of $131,046.10 received in 1982.

Tulia-Continental Telephone of Texas has officially announced that it has agreed on a compromise settlement with the Public Utility Commission of Texas regarding its recent request for increased rates. The commission has approved an annual increase of $1,769 million, effective Nov. 3, 1983.

Director of Public Affairs, Loma Allen Jr. stated that what his firm feels that the original amount of its request was fully justified, they are nonetheless pleased with the PUC decision. "This decision approved and established several new service and pricing methods," Allen stated, "and we feel they are critical in the new competitive environment of our industry."

Friena — Bernie Gowens, auditor, and Ron Procter, Farmer County Tax appraiser, appeared before the Friena School Board this week to discuss an error in collection of the 1982 tax rolls which resulted in the school receiving some tax monies which should have gone to the City of Friena.

Procter told the board that steps are being taken to guard against this happening in the future.

It was reported that of the 1983 tax roll, a total of $128,838 has been collected, or about ten percent of the total.

Bank given special recognition here

Hereford State Bank has received special recognition as a "High Performance Bank," it was announced Friday by the Bank Administration Institute.

In being identified as being one of the nation's top performing community banks, BAI noted the honor was based on HSB having a return on assets which was in the top 50 percent in Texas every year for the past five years.

The notification came from the BAI headquarters in Illinois. Richard F. Needham, director of the Center for High Performance Banking, extended congratulations to Craig Smith, HSB president, for the bank's accomplishment.

In addition to recognizing honor banks, the Institute also holds assemblies for the bank's chief executive officers. They are designed to provide participants with a unique opportunity to share ideas with, and learn from, other successful bank executives.

BAI has been honoring high performance banks for the past three years.

amount of damages. Another possibility is Deaf Smith would look through all the involved applications and pay an award to each "qualified" person.

"I would think that the best result for this kind of lawsuit," Marshall said, "is that the county must stop discriminating against Mexican-Americans." This could be done, he suggested, by initiating some sort of voluntary affirmative action policy.

Among the factors to be considered is whether, as the plaintiffs contend, the county employs an unsystematic method of hiring. Marshall believes there are many people in the courthouse who make personnel decisions, that these decisions are subjective and almost exclusively made by Anglos.

Marshall pointed out an apparent lack of written county policies for hiring and firings. There is not a definite promotion policy either, he thought, nor any equal-opportunity program.

Between and including the first quarter of 1979 and third quarter of this year, there were a total of 1,039 people (532 Hispanics) who applied for county jobs. Of the 178 hired, only 48 were Mexican Americans. This ratio represents either near-impossible chance or discriminatory policies against Hispanics, TRLA maintains.

"Looking at these statistics, the one explanation," Marshall said, "is that the reason why Anglos are hired into the jobs at a higher rate than the Hispanics is the fact that they are white, and that would be discrimination."

Debra Smith of the local TRLA has been an attorney for the plaintiff since the suit was filed. Joe Cruz, a member of Dallas' James C. Barber law firm, later joined her.

The defense was initially represented by Roland Saul, district attorney. He bowed out of the case last summer, saying it represented a conflict of interests. Soon A.W. Sorelle of Underwood, Wilson, Berry, Stein and Johnson - of Amarillo - was hired to replace him. Sorelle did not return his message last week to comment on the case.

Conservative engineers assist jailed black co-worker

EDITOR'S NOTE: Five eyewitnesses identified Lenell Geter as the man who robbed a fried chicken restaurant at 3:20 p.m. on Aug. 23, 1982. Nine white co-workers said the young engineer was at work all day. Many of Geter's colleagues believe he became a suspect only because he was a black in a town that until the mid-60s had a neon sign over Main Street proclaiming it the home of "The Blackest Land, The Whitest People."

By SCOTT McCARTNEY Associated Press Writer

GREENVILLE, Texas (AP) — Wendell Crom, a 56-year-old bow-tied engineer for a defense contractor, describes himself as a conservative who became politically active only once to stop a traffic light planned for his street. He recently found himself planning strategy alongside a black NAACP attorney from Brooklyn.

Charles Hartford, 53, a supervisor at E-Systems, Inc., lives in a comfortable new home but has trouble sleeping at night because he believes a black man has been wronged.

Debra Cotten, 29, spends her off-hours attending Bible study and playing softball. She ignored her parents' advice to steer clear of a black man's troubles. She said she had to get involved because she believed she knew the truth.

And then there's Lenell Geter.

They are unlikely allies. Geter, 26, worked with Crom, Hartford and Ms. Cotten before he was arrested on armed robbery charges, convicted and sent to prison for life. He claims he is a victim of mistaken identity, shoddy police work and racism.

Geter now sits in a prison in Tennessee Colony, Texas and prays that his former co-workers will be able to spring him.

"Some things reek so bad that you just have to do something about it," said Crom, one of a group of about 15 that has met regularly since Geter's conviction. The group has raised $9,000, hired detectives, funded a lie-detector test and sent books to Geter's prison cell.

"We know the man, we know where he was when they say he robbed the restaurant and we know he didn't do it. Why wouldn't we get involved?" Crom asks.

E-Systems design director Ed Garrett said he knew of a lot of reasons why his employees might not want to get involved in a feverish campaign to free Geter.

"It's a peculiar reaction in some ways," Garrett said. "These are not the kind of people who go hunting a cause. They are basically very conservative. But we have people who would jump up and down and get red in the face if you told them he was the robber."

Geter came to E-Systems with five friends from South Carolina State University. Soon a Greenville police lieutenant was distributing their pictures to suburban Dallas police departments.

Geter's roommate, Anthony Williams, was tagged with a $317-Eleven robbery in nearby Dallas County but was acquitted earlier this month in a well-publicized trial.

The FBI is now investigating whether Geter's civil rights were violated.

Garrett said Williams and Geter "demonstrated good work habits, good attendance and an intelligence that we don't usually find in minority candidates. We thought we had some good people that could help us as engineers."

Geter was the only black in his work group. "He stood out like a raisin in a bowl of rice. We knew he was there at the time they said the robbery happened," Garrett said.

In a jailhouse interview, Geter said he was friendly with his co-workers, but not "real close until this happened."

"I consider them as my family here. They help me with all the love and support that I would receive from my regular family if they could be here," he said. "They have confirmed that old saying: 'A friend in need is a friend indeed.'"

Geter said he has remained confident he will be exonerated. He is leading Bible study classes in prison, teaching inmates to write and working as a draftsman for the Texas Department of Corrections.

"I have a lot of reasons to be strong and I'm pulling on their strength," he says of his co-workers. "At first, the guys seemed to be very conservative and I didn't think they'd become so involved. But when it comes to the truth, they really stood up for me."

Wendell Crom says that beyond fighting a plan for a new traffic light, Geter's case is the first thing in his life he's really stood up for. He and his friend's agree that Lenell Geter has changed their lives.

"It may be easier to do it to a black, but I now believe we are all susceptible to the police. If they are allowed to perpetrate this on our community, we are all in trouble," Crom said.

"I think the police fully counted on the fact that these boys were far from home and didn't have many friends. But the boys had a lot more friends than the law thought."

The campaigning for Geter did not hit a feverish pitch until after he was convicted Oct. 18, 1982.

"Most of us couldn't believe that could happen — couldn't believe that the man could possibly be convicted when he had us for an alibi," he said.

Geter's trouble began because he frequented a city park after work. A 68-year-old woman thought he was suspicious and called Greenville Police Lt. James Fortenberry, who photographed the young engineer and his five black colleagues from E-Systems and sent their pictures to Dallas-area police departments labeled as robbery suspects.

Five clerks at a fried chicken restaurant which had been robbed in Balch Springs, 50 miles from Greenville, identified Geter. He was convicted in Dallas less than two months after his arrest. Geter's defense attorney, Edwin Sigel, charged that the identifications were faulty and should have been dismissed by the all-white jury.

In addition, restaurant employees initially described the robber as about 5-foot-6, and Geter is about 6-feet tall.

"I have no doubt that whoever did rob the place looked like Geter," said Wayne Bennett, 47, another E-Systems supporter. "But they've got the wrong guy."

Fortenberry testified that he had talked with Bamberg County, South Carolina, Sheriff Ed Darnell, who said Geter had been a robbery suspect there. Darnell later traveled to Dallas and testified at a hearing on a request for a new trial that Fortenberry had misquoted him and that Geter both had no police record and had never been a suspect.

Geter's supporters say they, and Sigel, were not as well prepared for Geter's trial as they were for Williams. They say the speed with which the case went to court and what they thought was the absurdity of the charge gave them a false sense of ease.

After the conviction, the group's efforts led to the involvement of attorneys from the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, who assisted Geter's court-appointed lawyer. With the NAACP's help, Williams was acquitted and Geter has petitioned to have his conviction overturned.

"About two weeks ago I was sitting here on a couch with George Hairston of the NAACP and I told him could never imagine in my life that I would be sitting next to an NAACP attorney and agreeing with him," Crom said.

"He smiled and told me he was glad we were on the same side," Crom added.

Charlie Hartford, like Wendell Crom, keeps a notepad and some pens in his breast pocket and pauses when contemplating his transformation from a low-profile engineer working on top-secret aerospace projects to a rabble-rouser who has appeared on national television pleading Geter's case.

"I wrote my first letter to the editor the other day, if that gives you an indication of how active I was before this. We're not bleeding-heart liberals by any means," Hartford said.

"I don't sleep much at night when I think of Lenell. And you know, it's so frustrating now. We just don't know what to do."

Hartford said he was attacked by prosecutors at Geter's trial who claimed the supervisor was lying to protect his job.

"I don't have anything to gain by this," he said. "One of the most disturbing things is that the prosecutors wanted so badly for him to be guilty. And the police just wouldn't believe at first that Lenell was employed at E-Systems because they couldn't believe he had a job that good."

Debra Cotten remained quiet at first about what she knew, until Crom, Hartford and others asked her about Aug. 23, 1982.

"It was a Monday and I came in late — about lunchtime. I know Lenell was here because we have a Bible class at lunchtime on Tuesdays and I asked him if he was interested. He said he was. Also, we had a softball game that weekend and we needed one more man, and I had heard he was good. So I asked him to play," she said.

The next day Geter was arrested.

"My parents told me I should not get involved, that it was a small town and there could be trouble. But I had to. I knew he didn't do it," she said.

On his birthday, the E-Systems employees sent Geter a new Bible and a card they had all signed. They have sent him spending money and handled some of his debts and obligations after he was arrested, he said.

Crom says his group is gradually becoming more sophisticated in the ways of raising money and drawing attention to Geter's case.

"Can you believe it? I've now got bumper stickers to distribute. They say 'FREE GETER. Paid for by the Lenell Geter Fund,' and they have my post office box on them."

26.7%* for your IRA?

Values at September 30, 1983 of $2000 invested each year since 1973.

Oppenheimer Special Fund

As you can easily see, a little difference in the amount your IRA earns each year can make a large difference in the amount you retire with. Happily, the same law that allows you to start an IRA also allows you to switch it anytime you wish, with no extra tax penalty. This law gives you the opportunity to seek better returns for your investment, no matter where it is now.

You could, for example, switch to the Oppenheimer Special Fund. Just compare the average annual return on your IRA with the 26.7 percent average annual return on the Oppenheimer Special Fund as shown above. If you had been able to out $2000 a year into a Special Fund IRA, since its inception, it would have been worth $111,097 as of September 30, 1983. **

* Assuming a $2,000 investment on March 15, 1973 (inception of fund) and $2,000 annual investments on first business day of each year thereafter, with all dividends and distributions reinvested. Past performance is not an indication of future results as net asset values fluctuate due to market conditions. The period shown was one in which common stock prices fluctuated severely and were generally higher at the end than they were at the beginning.

Tax should rise

It appears the State of Texas will soon be seeking additional funding for teacher salaries and highway improvement. We hope the added revenue comes from an increase in the state sales tax.

Any number of studies have shown that taxpayers prefer the sales tax over other methods, and it is a fair tax because it is based on consumption rather than on production.

The Texas sales tax is 4 percent and has been at that figure since 1971. Last year the sales tax provided 39 percent of all tax collections, making it the state's largest single tax source.

While the sales tax brought in $3.3 billion last year, Texans pay an average of only $211 a year in sales taxes. Because it is paid a little at a time, instead of a lump sum, people don't really realize they are paying it. One state representative said a 1-cent increase in the tax would bring in enough funds for teachers and highways.

The state property tax has all but been abandoned now and taxes on oil and gas have about reached the limit. What we don't want is higher taxes on property nor a state income tax. Both discourage incentive and production.

There is little doubt that we will see some kind of tax boost, and the sales tax appears to be the best method.

Americas diverse

Turkish Cypriots on November 15 declared their third of the island of Cyprus "independent."

Official Washington responded with displeasure but conceded, because of historic hostility between Greece and Turkey, there's nothing we can do about it.

We don't have to do something about everything! Of all the lessons experience has taught me, this is one of the big three: We don't have to do something about everything.

In the news business there is ever the temptation to prescribe a pill for every ill.

Frequently, asked by an interviewer what our country should do about so-and-so, experience has taught me to say "I don't know" when I don't know.

I wish I had said that early of the Diem regime in Vietnam instead of joining the chorus urging American intervention there.

Our nation does not have to do something about everything.

My experience in the Middle East has taught me only how much I don't know about the Middle East. The complexities of that area's historic and interminable "differences" may be fully comprehensible by no one; certainly not by a quick-visit limited access journalist.

Even our profession's old hands in the Middle East are frequently embarrassed because they interpreted some Arab utterance literally.

Now we come to the subject of Latin America.

Without knowing why, the American people favor intervention in Grenada and non-intervention in El Salvador.

What sounds inconsistent reflects a gut recognition of our hemisphere's cacophonous composition.

Latin America is many places, many problems.

Neither can be equated with the situation in Grenada where Americans were in jeopardy.

We don't have to do something about everything.

Central America, South America, are a patchwork of diverse interests.

The United States may be able to lead the toward self-government. For most of our first 150 years we did.

But any attempt to superimpose our understanding of "democracy" is predoomed.

You try to hitch all those unbroken horses to our wagon, you're going to end up with a busted wagon and horses that are wilder than ever.

As The Years Turn

75 YEARS AGO

The real first cold wave for the winter came across the Plains last week reaching the crest Friday night, when the mercury column went down to eight degrees above zero, just 24 degrees below the freezing point. Exposed water pipes were "busted" and the plumbers have been busily engaged since that time preparing damages. The same cold wave hit Fort Worth but the thermometers down to the freezing point Whites thought they had had a "hog killing time."

50 YEARS AGO

On June 30 Deaf Smith County completed a fiscal year with total tax and license fee collections of $52,041.93. For the same period $26,992.80 was delinquent and prior unpaid taxes totaled $34,978.23, bringing the delinquent county taxes to $61,901.03.

25 YEARS AGO

Friday night, Hereford Whitefaces will mark up a rare honor. They will be the first basketball team to play Amarillo's newest high school, Tascosa.

Stan Sigman of Hereford has been named the campaign chairman for the Christian Rural Overseas Program and will organize this year's Deaf Smith County appeal for farm commodities to be shared with hungry people overseas.

10 YEARS AGO

Deaf Smith County has just about completed one of its most outstanding harvest seasons in history, with total agriculture income estimated at more than $168 million for 1973.

1 YEAR AGO

The newly unemployed helped small lines for free meals as charities handed out Thanksgiving dinners in record numbers, while more fortunate Americans celebrated with traditional turkey, parades and football.

Radar aimed eastward from the U.S. space shuttle last revealed ancient river systems as mammoth as the Nile buried beneath the desert sands of southwestern Egypt, according to a report published today.

The Penultimate Word

GRATITUDE

She was past 90 years of age. She sat through one of the tirades I call a sermon.

She waited patiently for me to get through the normal people greeting after the service. When I got to her she quietly shared her secret with me. She had been through the good, the bad and the indifferent of life. A few years ago she had lost her beloved husband. Her major concern in life is why there is so much delay in her getting to join her husband. She is not morbid, just ready.

She briefly told me her story and then said, "The one thing that has carried me through life is gratitude. I have somehow been able to remain grateful."

She did not mean a "mindless whooping it up" type of gratitude. Nor did she mean the "Trying to act glad when bad things happen" sort either. She did not mean she was glad when her husband died. What she meant was that through it all she has been able to maintain a sense of gratitude about life. Gratitude in spite of it all is gratitude indeed.

That kind of gratitude is the kind that created the first Thanksgiving. In the middle of unbelievable hardships a group of people decided to focus on the meager good instead of the almost overwhelming bad. The sense of gratitude carried them and inspires us.

How does this kind of gratitude happen? Does it happen by always remembering that there are folks worse off than us no matter how bad our condition might be? The old idea of "I felt sorry because I had no shoes until I met a man who had no feet" sounds good, but does not really work. I still want a pair of shoes.

The secret may be focus. Focus may be a habit formed in life. Somehow some folks just see things clearer than other. Instead of reacting blindly they look for the positive in every situation. The result is a continuing sense of gratitude.

Some poet wrote:

Two men looked through the self same bars.

One saw mud, the other stars.

It's Thanksgiving. See the stars.

Warm Fuzzies,

Soviet system not all that great

There are some people in these United States to whom the idea of a system like the Soviet Union has does not seem such a bad idea.

It is a system in which the Soviets boast that they have no unemployment, have no poverty, everybody is equal and shares alike. This is a way of life in which the struggle to survive seems to be eliminated. But it is a way of life far from comfortable.

Jude Wanniski, a former Wall Street Journal editorial writer, was one of 36 persons who toured five Soviet cities recently and his impression of the Soviet Union is about like that of the rest of us who have made the same trip.

Wanniski, along with a group composed largely of independent oil men and their wives, was bothered by the Soviet guide's frequent emphasis of the fact that there is no unemployment in that country.

It finally dawned upon Wanniski that the Soviet Union is not a nation at all, but a vast national penitentiary. Everyone is guaranteed a minimum standard of living, everyone works and eats and has medical care and shelter. But the same can be said of the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth.

Wanniski noted that there is a serious economic depression without unemployment. There is a depression characterized by an incredible scarcity of both goods and services dribbling out of a fully employed work force that is really not working.

Tax Demands

By Richard L. Lesher
President
WASHINGTON -- There they go again.

The Washington politicians on both sides of the aisle, Republicans and Democrats, are doing it again. Doing what? Demanding higher taxes, of course.

Last year during the recession, the politicians clamored for higher taxes to fix the economy. Now as the economic recovery continues to surge ahead Republicans and Democrats in Congress want to clip taxpayers for some $50 to $70 billion in higher taxes over the next three years. This year's reason: to lower the federal deficit. The reasons change, but the demand is always the same: more money for Washington and less for the working men and women of America.

Deficits, as bad as they are, are not an argument for higher taxes. If we look back to 1974, we find that taxes and government spending were both roughly 19 percent of the Gross National Product (GNP). Today, federal taxes remain at about 19 percent of GNP but federal spending has jumped to almost 25 percent of GNP. Some simple subtraction tells us that the national deficit is six percent of the GNP. As Ed McMahan is fond of saying, "A child can plainly see" that the culprit is on the spending side of the equation.

Still we face this relentless drive for higher taxes.

Now according to our raise-taxes-to-close-the-deficit friends, Sweden should be enjoying large budget surpluses. They are not. The Swedish deficit is over 12 percent of GNP—twice that of the United States.

We shouldn't be surprised.

The Weakly Reeder

-a partial view of the news

By REED PARSELL

When asked to name some of the "really nice" male characters who have been on television in the last 10 or 15 years, most people would probably cite Mike Brady. You know, the man named Brady with three boys of his own; they were four men, living all together, yet they were all alone. Curly-topped Robert Reed portrayed the righteous, upper-middle class father of "The Brady Bunch." From watching that long-running show, one would likely conclude Reed must be a great guy off-camera, too.

For soap opera buffs, Tom Hallick would probably be assumed by many to possess an agreeable personality. His character, Brad Elliot, was usually an upstanding, exemplary presence on "The Young and the Restless."

If their dealings with the Brand are any indication, though, neither Reed nor Hallick would make anyone's "really nice" list.

Reed, now starring in "Wake Up Darling" at the Country Squire theatre in Amarillo, four times made or had made for him appointments to come talk with one of our staff members. Like the day California was severed by an earthquake and fell into the ocean, however, Reed has yet to drop in.

The first interview was set up by his secretary. She soon called the day he was supposed to arrive to say Reed claimed he was ill. The second missed date was also accompanied by a call from her. According to our reporter, "She said he felt he needed to work on the set, and she called him a 'creep.'"

Twenty minutes before his third appointment, Reed himself phoned. He told our reporter he did not know he was supposed to come that day, as his secretary had not informed him. Actually, our reporter thought she was either too embarrassed or fed up to notify us of the third cancellation. Whatever was the case, Reed made another appointment, proclaiming, "I'll make this one myself so I can keep it."

Needless to say, he did not show up. We left a couple of messages at the theatre, begging reasons for the latest cold shoulder. No response has been offered.

Hallick, star of "Send Me No Flowers" earlier this fall at the same playhouse, deserves some credit for making it down here when he initially said he would. His visit, though, was a little less thrilling than another one of our reporters thought it would be. Mr. Wonderful was transformed, in little more than an hour, to "a jerk."

After arriving 35 minutes late, the former soap star gave the impression of needing to clean up his act. He seemed more interested in playing with our reporter than reporting on his play. "He seemed to want to chase women," she understated.

Hallick was "nothing like" she had dreamed him to be. She described him as "short, skinny and very ordinary with a personality to match." He admittedly was, though, "very intelligent."

It is not difficult to understand why Reed would not want to come here, but that does not excuse his irresponsibility of missing appointments. As for Hallick, maybe he should have stayed in California and out of the Pacific.

Bootleg Philosopher

Traffic problem

Editor's Note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Deaf Smith grass farm reports on a visit he made recently to a big city.

Dear Editor: It was necessary for me to visit a big city recently. No need to name it. Just flu in the name of any city above half a million population and it'll fit what I've got to say about its unbelievable traffic snarl.

I don't see how city people can endure spending an hour in the morning driving to work in bumper-to-bumper traffic, spending a half hour looking for a place to park, and then after work spending another hour in bumper-to-bumper traffic going home. After I got back to my house out here and got my nerves calmed down I got to thinking about this and I've figured out what the problem is.

It's plain. City people are the world's worst mathematicians. They've never been able to figure out you can't put 50,000 cars in space big enough for only 25,000. I suppose it's a break-down in the public education system. I suppose that somewhere in the primary grades some under-paid teachers forgot to tell them that while you can put a mediocre man in Congress you can't put a gallon of water in a quart jar.

I thought about this problem long and hard and have concluded the problem goes beyond mathematics.

The trouble with cities I've been to, where everybody and everything are all jammed up together, is they've all been built in the wrong place.

Cities ought to be built out in the country where there's more room.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

Trouble traced to rules revision

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the best of motives, the Democratic Party is in a terrible tangle that threatens to turn its priorities upside down and distract members from beating Republicans next year.

Ironically, the trouble can be traced to the rules revision designed to do away with the internal bloodletting that characterized earlier battles for the Democratic presidential nomination.

One might wonder what difference it makes if Iowa holds its caucuses and New Hampshire its primary a week earlier than rules require.

But to party Chairman Charles T. Manatt the rules are the rules and everyone signed off on the deal and ought to stick by it.

Manatt has acted as if prepared to fight to the last Democrat to prevent Iowa and New Hampshire from undoing the calendar.

His concern goes beyond those two states. If Iowa and New Hampshire can buck the rules then how can Manatt insist that Wisconsin abandon its open primary, which permitted any voter, including Republicans, to vote in the Democratic primary?

It took no time at all for the contenders for the party's presidential nomination to decide their best interests lay in giving support and comfort to the two states. Sen. Alan Cranston needs Iowa and New Hampshire votes more than he needs Manatt.

Alonzo, Gonzales vows exchanged

Wedding vows were exchanged by Ruth Alonzo and Albert J. Gonzales in a late afternoon ceremony Saturday at the Knights of Columbus Hall with Ed Warren officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Manuel Alonzo of 210 Ave. I. and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Severo Gonzales of 413 Knight.

The Hall was decorated with carnation bouquets and greenery.

Sara Alonzo served her sister as maid of honor and best man was the bridegroom's cousin, Tracy Gomez.

Wedding selections were provided by a local band and the bride's father sang "Dressed in White."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white organza and satin gown designed with a Victorian neckline decorated with tiny lace appliques. The long, sheer sleeves were gathered at the wrists and were decorated with matching lace and formed ruffles over the hands.

The gown also featured a fitted waist enhanced by lace and the skirt formed a chapel-length train. She wore a hat with a short bridal illusion veil and carried a bouquet of white carnations edged with pink and decorated with baby's breath and long satin ribbon streamers.

The bridal attendant was attired in a long organza beige gown designed with a Victorian collar and long Bishop sleeves with lace trim.

The bridegroom's sister, Yvette Gonzales, invited guests to register at the reception held in the KC Hall.

The bride's mother served the three-tiered white wedding cake from the refreshment table covered with a lace cloth. It featured a water fountain at its center and six smaller cakes encircled it. The cake was decorated with pink wild roses and doves made by Hope Torres and it was topped with miniature figurines of a bride and bridegroom standing beneath an archway covered with white wild roses.

The couple will make their home at 413 Knight.

The bride is currently a senior student at Hereford High School where she is a member of the HHS band, VOC program, printing trades class, and flag corps. She was a 1983 homecoming queen candidate.

The bridegroom, a 1982 HHS graduate, is currently employed by Gonzales Plumbing.

Economy: Surprise, surprise

NEW YORK (AP) — As even Martin Feldstein might admit, there have been more than a few pleasant surprises in the evolving economic recovery.

Like the very strength of the recovery, which has been at a rate double the 3 percent to 3.5 percent foreseen a year ago by Feldstein, full-time chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers and an in-house critic too.

There is also genuine surprise among many so-called experts that there has been little crowding out, in spite of almost daily reminders that the budget deficit would force Washington to sop up all liquidity in the financial pool.

It will come, they say, but so far it hasn't. The housing people claim the government's financing needs have kept mortgage rates higher than they might have been, but buyers did get their money. They didn't get crowded out.

Neither has business been bumped from its position at the water hole. It simply didn't need the money, a fortunate circumstance resulting mainly from its rapidly improving profits, which also weren't entirely foreseen.

The swift descent of the jobless rate also ranks as a surprise, even to folks in the White House who would have loved to tell you a year ago that the rate would be under 9 percent of the civilian work force by late 1983.

Very few economists, including those in the administration, foresaw such a labor market turn. To the contrary, one year ago — when the fourth quarter jobless rate was 10.7 percent — many of them spent their energies telling us why we shouldn't expect anything very much below the double digits.

But in just one month, October, the rate dived from 9.3 percent to 8.8 percent. While some of the improvement might be attributable to statistical neurasthenia, a good deal of it represents a healthy improvement.

Data Resources Inc., the

Lexington, Mass. statistical factory, points out that all major categories of the labor market shared in the latest improvement, and that compared to a year ago, civilian employment is 2,752,000 higher.

Many people list among the surprises the performance of the stock market, which in a year's time has added hundreds of billions of dollars to values. But it is in the nature of things that the stock market always surprises.

Geter eager for new trial

TENNESSEE COLONY, Texas (AP) — He is a college-educated engineer who works as a draftsman, volunteers to teach prison inmates how to write, conducts Bible study classes and organizes chess tournaments.

He also is serving a life sentence for armed robbery.

Lenell Geter, a 26-year-old former engineer at E-Systems Inc. in Greenville, Texas, claims he is the victim of mistaken identity, police harassment and racism. His case has drawn the attention of national television news shows and the FBI, which is investigating whether his civil rights have been violated.

Behind a steel and glass partition, Lenell Geter still smiles.

"Now that I'm here, I'm trying to look at this in the most positive aspect," he said. "I believe this is a test for me. I can say that my faith in the Lord is being tried. But I believe I will be exonerated and be a stronger person for it."

Geter was heavily recruited by engineering firms after graduation from South Carolina State University. He turned down higher-paying jobs in Boston, Detroit and South Carolina to come to Greenville, which has a small-town atmosphere he liked.

"I wanted to live in a small town and raise a family," he said. "I worked all my life preparing for a family and this career. I maintained my integrity and my character and I avoided being in circles that might get me in trouble."

Hereford snaps long Dimmitt win streak, 61-45

Whitefaces go 2-0, at Pampa Tuesday

By SPEEDY NIEMAN

Hereford's hustlin' Whitefaces scored a 61-45 win over the defending AA state champion Dimmitt Bobcats here Friday night and, in the process, snapped a 49-game win streak for the visiting neighbors.

The Herd fashioned a 29-25 lead at halftime and used a pressing defense to widen the margin in the second half. Jeff Streun and Mike Scott led the Whiteface scoring with 13 and 10 points, respectively.

"We let them stay in the ball game in the first half on free throws," said Coach Bobby Decker. "We're still reaching and grabbing too much, but the team buckled down in the second half and played better defense."

It was a physical contest. Hereford was whistled for 31 personal fouls and Dimmitt was charged with 28. The Herd hit 19 of 39 at the charity stripe, but Decker said the team was going to have to do better. "We've got to hit better than 48 percent at the free-throw line; that could kill us in most games."

Dimmitt, however, didn't do as well at the charity line, hitting only 13 of 32. The Bobcats were led by Brad Holcomb with 13 points, and Richard Saucedo added 6.

Decker said Kevin Redus "did a great job on the boards for us, and Eric Walterscheid and Lee Brockman also came in to grab some key rebounds."

Hereford recorded a 12-11 advantage after the opening period. After leading by only four at halftime, the Herd stretched the margin to 8, 39-31, going into the final quarter. The Whitefaces outscored Dimmitt, 22-14, in the final stanza.

Hereford is now 2-0 for the season. The Whitefaces travel to Pampa Tuesday, then go to the Roswell Tournament next Thursday. Hereford will meet host Roswell in the opening tourney action at 8 p.m. Thursday.

Buffalo, Rams in crucial game

By KEN RAPPOPORT AP Sports Writer

After having difficulty with one Los Angeles team, the Buffalo Bills expect more trouble with another when they meet the Rams in a battle of playoff-hopeful National Football League clubs Sunday.

"The Rams are such a difficult team to prepare for because, if you become preoccupied with stopping (running back Eric) Dickerson, they can hurt you in so many other ways," said Buffalo Coach Kay Stephenson. "(Quarterback) Vince Ferragamo is having a super year and they have great receivers like Mike Barber and Preston Dendard to torment the secondary."

After last week's 27-24 loss to the Los Angeles Raiders, the Bills have a 7-5 record in the American Conference East, same as the Rams who are tied for first in the NFC West after losing last week to Washington 42-20.

"This game is crucial for both of us," said Rams Coach John Robinson. "I think we're both teams that have to bring something extra to the game in order to win consistently."

Both teams have something else in common — quarterbacks who have been injured recently. But Ferragamo and Buffalo's Joe Ferguson are both expected to start.

Robinson assesses the Bills as one of the league's "dangerous" clubs.

"Buffalo seems to be a team that finds a way to win," he said. "They don't have any overwhelming statistics, but they have Joe Cribbs and Joe Ferguson."

In other games Sunday, Philadelphia is at Washington; Minnesota is at New Orleans; San Francisco at Chicago; New England at Tampa Bay; Baltimore at Cleveland; and the Giants at the Los Angeles Raiders; Denver at San Diego; Kansas City at Seattle and Green Bay at Atlanta.

Monday night's game pits Cincinnati at Miami. In games on Thursday, Detroit trounced Pittsburgh 45-3 and Dallas beat St. Louis 35-17.

The 10-2 Redskins are 15½-point favorites over the 4-8 Eagles, the largest spread of the year in the NFL.

"I don't think we'll take the Eagles lightly," said Washington Coach Joe Gibbs. "We know they have had problems but they gave us a battle earlier this year and have played a lot of tough games."

Gibbs' biggest task would seem to be to keep the Redskins from looking ahead to the Dec. 11 showdown in Dallas with the Cowboys, who moved one-half game ahead of Washington Thursday with their victory over St. Louis.

Both the Vikings and Saints are in dogfights.

Alabama upset by B.C.; Navy romps by Army

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — It was a day that might have struck fear in the heartiest of men — rainy, windy, raw and dark. Boston College Coach Jack Bicknell was no exception.

"It was looking a little scary," Bicknell admitted referring to the fact that Alabama had the ball on its own 20-yard line with a 13-6 lead and less than nine minutes to play.

Soon, though, Alabama would be the team with something to worry about. In an 83-second span, 15th-ranked Boston College, 9-2, turned two fumble recoveries into touchdowns. Then the Eagles withstood a last-minute threat by the No. 13 Crimson Tide, 7-3, and pulled out a 20-13 college football victory Friday.

"You just can't give up on what you believe in," Bicknell said. "You're not going to panic. I knew if we could get the ball in any kind of field position we had a chance because we had the running game going well."

Six plays after Dave Thomas recovered a fumble by Kerry Goode at the Alabama 35, Doug Flutie threw a five-yard touchdown pass to Bob Biestek. Brian Waldron's extra point tied the score, 13-13 with 6:29 remaining.

On the Crimson Tide's next offensive play, Ricky Moore fumbled and defensive end Steve Lubischer pounced on the ball at the Alabama 33. Four plays later, Biestek bulled over from the 3 for the winning touchdown with 5:06 to go.

The game was the regular-season finale for Boston College, which plays Notre Dame in the Liberty Bowl Dec. 29. Alabama has one game left against third-ranked Auburn next Saturday before facing Southern Methodist in the Sun Bowl Dec. 24.

Alabama was outgained, 350 yards to 327, but piled up 246 on the ground. "It hurts when you beat yourself," said quarterback Walter Lewis. "We ran the ball well but "Fumbles killed us," said Moore, who rushed for 109 yards to crack the 100-yard mark for the fourth consecutive game. "We gave the game away in the fourth quarter. I never really had control of the ball."

The first half was played in a driving rainstorm, and both teams had trouble mounting sustained attacks. Alabama's Van Tiffin kicked field goals of 20 and 28 yards before Steve Strachan scored on a one-yard run 19 seconds before intermission to tie the score 6-6.

Shortly before the second half, a power outage attributed to a transformer problem in Foxboro knocked out the field lights, scoreboard and other electricity. But the game went on and, before the power returned 39 minutes later, Anthony Smiley raced 58 yards with a blocked punt for a touchdown to put Alabama ahead 13-6 with 4:20 left in the third quarter.

Then, the power returned to Boston College.

"The weather hurt them even though it hurt us because we're a throwing team," Bicknell said. "They're an option team and it's tough to stick the ball in (a runner's arms) and pull it out again" when the ball is wet.

Alabama had six fumbles and lost four. Boston College lost one of its three fumbles.

"We felt the weather conditions were an advantage for us because of our strong running game," said Alabama Coach Ray Perkins. "We felt like we could run the ball against them but it doesn't matter unless you hold onto it."

Alabama was outgained, 350 yards to 327, but piled up 246 on the ground. "It hurts when you beat yourself," said quarterback Walter Lewis. "We ran the ball well but because of the wind and the rain we had problems passing."

Flutie managed to cut through the soggy skies to complete 14 of 29 passes for 198 yards.

"Going into the season, we wanted to beat Clemson, Penn State and Alabama. We beat those teams," Bicknell said. "Clemson only lost to one team in America and that's Boston College. Penn State is Penn State and Alabama is Alabama. We certainly belong with the national teams."

In Friday's traditional football game, Navy used a 21-point first-quarter outburst to down Army 42-13. The game, usually a standard played in Philadelphia, was played before a crowd of 81,347 — including a total of 9,000 student from both schools — in the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Calif.

Eric Wallace returned the opening kickoff 95 yards for a touchdown, Napoleon McCallum ran 14 yards for a touchdown and Steve Brady returned an interception 85 yards to give the Midshipmen, 3-8, a three-touchdown advantage with 3:57 gone in the game.

Army, 2-9, narrowed the difference to 21-13 on field goals of 42 and 40 yards by Craig Stopa in the second quarter and a one-yard touchdown run by Bill Turner in the third. But Rick Williamson capped a 77-yard drive on a one-yard touchdown run with 4:17 left in the third period to build the Midshipmen's lead to 28-13. Two more Navy touchdowns late in the contest, a two-yard run by Williamson and a 30-yard burst by Ron McDonald, completed the scoring.

In another game played Friday, Jose Ocegueda kicked two field goals in the last 68 seconds — including a school-record 55-yarder — to give Long Beach State a 6-3 victory over Utah State.

Friday's contest began well for HHS, as it quickly jumped ahead 8-2 and, nearly six minutes into the second quarter, had increased its advantage to 26-14. That 12-point lead, gained when Angela Richburg connected after a four-on-one break, was due largely to good and poor execution by Hereford and Dimmitt, respectively.

"We were moving the ball around pretty well, getting some good shots and hitting them," HHS coach Larry Sowers commented. "Basically, we were doing what we were supposed to do."

By halftime, the lead had been severely cut to 26-24. Hereford managed to hold off the Bobbies until, with 1:35 remaining in the third quarter, Debbie Washington put Dimmitt up 35-34 by grabbing a rebound and hitting from 10 feet on the left baseline.

When HHS scored again, pulling to within four in the final quarter, it ended a dry spell of more than five and a half minutes. The Bobbies did not allow any further comeback, though, coasting to the eight-point win with Washington leading the way.

Trying to explain the collapse, Sowers said, "It kind of turned around when I tried to rest a few people. I certainly don't want to blame it on our bench. We made some mistakes there late in the first half that gave them the momentum and we just couldn't come back."

"Dimmitt had a pretty good ball team," Sowers continued. "They had some people that could do some good things. I wasn't really happy with the way we played as a team in the second half." The guards did not run the offense too well, he claimed, while forwards took unwise shots

HHS girls defeated by 49-41

By REED PARSELL

Dimmitt, riding a 35-15 scoring spree in the game's final 18 minutes, managed a 49-41 victory Friday night over host Hereford High School.

The loss was Hereford's second straight, as the Whitefaces opened their season Tuesday with a loss in Levelland.

Friday's contest began well for HHS, as it quickly jumped ahead 8-2 and, nearly six minutes into the second quarter, had increased its advantage to 26-14. That 12-point lead, gained when Angela Richburg connected after a four-on-one break, was due largely to good and poor execution by Hereford and Dimmitt, respectively.

"We were moving the ball around pretty well, getting some good shots and hitting them," HHS coach Larry Sowers commented. "Basically, we were doing what we were supposed to do."

By halftime, the lead had been severely cut to 26-24. Hereford managed to hold off the Bobbies until, with 1:35 remaining in the third quarter, Debbie Washington put Dimmitt up 35-34 by grabbing a rebound and hitting from 10 feet on the left baseline.

When HHS scored again, pulling to within four in the

and no one was being aggressive enough under the boards.

Washington, though netting 12 points in the second half, was scoreless during Friday's two initial quarters. Bobby Tischler, with 13 first-half points, led everyone with 17. Darla Alford's 12 points paced the Whitefaces, who got 10 more from Cathy Bartels and seven from Stacey High.

Hereford shot 19-of-60 from the floor and was 3-for-six at the line. Dimmitt connected on 9 of its 18 foul shots.

District play for HHS starts Tuesday at 6 p.m., when Amarillo-Palo Duro comes to town.

Hereford's junior varsity girls prevailed 40-39 Friday, surviving a late threat by visiting Dimmitt. Natalie Sims led HHS with 12 points.

Older Gridiron Champs

The Dolphins, coached by David and Mal Manchee along with Arthur Valdez, were first-place winners of the YMCA Flag Football League's division for fifth and sixth graders. They won the championship thanks to a 22-13 triumph over the Steelers.

Holmes stops Frazier

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Young Marvis Frazier could have used his father's help. And maybe that wouldn't have been enough.

Frazier, 23 and a veteran of only 10 professional fights, undertook the major challenge of stepping into the Caesars Palace ring with unbeaten World Boxing Council heavyweight champion Larry Holmes Friday night. It proved to be a serious error in judgment.

Frazier threw the first punch, a wild left as the fight began. For all intents and purposes, he never threw another.

Holmes floored his young foe with a short right hand after 2:09 of the nationally televised affair and, with Frazier being punished unmercifully, referee Mills Lane called a halt to the bout with three seconds left in the round.

The fight was scheduled for 12 rounds. The WBC refused to recognize it as a title bout because Frazier is unranked by the organization.

"I don't know what to say, this is probably the first time I've been at a loss of words," Holmes, 34, said afterwards. The champion then said plenty.

"I didn't want to hurt him, I feared that I would. It turned into a picnic. You don't drop your hands against a man who can throw a jab 100 miles an hour."

Holmes referred to a tactic used by Frazier early on, when the son of former heavyweight champion Smokin' Joe Frazier began to dance with his hands at his sides.

"I was clowning around a little bit because he couldn't hit me with the jab," said young Frazier. "I forgot about the right hand."

Frazier across the ring and onto his back. According to Lane, he arose at the count of eight but he could have saved himself some trouble by staying down.

After that, Holmes threw an estimated 19 punches without an answer. The bout ended with Holmes pounding away in Frazier's corner with the youngster's father, only a few feet away, being forced to witness the carnage.

Three times during the pounding, Holmes gestured to Lane to stop the fight. Finally, it was over.

Holmes, who raised his record to 45-0 with 32 knockouts, is required by the WBC to meet top-ranked Greg Page early next year in a mandatory defense. He didn't seem too concerned about that.

"I'm going to Miami with my wife, I'm not even going to think about doing anything," said Holmes, who weighed 219 pounds. "I'm going to let them come to me. It sounds good, OK."

Holmes collected $2.7 million for his 177 seconds of work. Frazier, who weighed 200 pounds, earned $500,000.

Holmes has indicated he'd like to fight World Boxing Association champion Gerrie Coetzee in the near future but only at his price.

"I want $100 million to fight that apartheid South African," said Holmes, referring to Coetzee, who was among the standing room only crowd of 4,993 at the fight.

Oiler-Buc clash called 'Stupor Bowl'

By FRED GOODALL AP Sports Writer

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Call it what you will: the Turkey Bowl, Stupor Bowl, Battle for the Bottom Bowl or Repus (super spelled backwards) Bowl.

The Houston Oilers and Tampa Bay Buccaneers, the teams with the worst records in the National Football League, square off Sunday in Tampa Stadium, site of upcoming Super Bowl XVIII.

"This game has already been labeled by some as the Turkey Bowl and other monikers that aren't very complimentary," said Oilers interim Coach Chuck Studley. "I find them somewhat insulting and not very flattering."

Ditto, he added, on suggestions that his team might not give its best because a victory very well could ruin Houston's chances of receiving the No. 1 pick in next spring's NFL draft.

"Our remaining four games are terribly important to us ... We realize how important winning is in professional football," said Studley. "I don't think any player or coach on this team wants to be labeled as being the worst team in the National Football League," he added. "Only two teams are remembered by the fans: the winner of the Super Bowl and the one with the worst record."

Losing for the sake of obtaining the top draft pick will not be an incentive for the Bucs, either.

The Cincinnati Bengals own the team's first-round choice because of a trade that sent quarterback Jack Thompson to Tampa Bay.

For nine weeks, the Bucs and Oilers were traveling a course that would leave them winless heading into Sunday's 1 p.m. EST showdown.

Tampa Bay snapped its longest losing streak since 1977 with a 17-12 victory at Minnesota on Nov. 6, however, and Houston stopped a 17-game skid with a 27-17 triumph over Detroit two weeks ago.

The Bucs haven't scored a point since beating the Vikings. And the Cincinnati Bengals humiliated the Oilers for the second time in three weeks last Sunday.

Tampa Bay Coach John McKay, however, said neither club is as bad as their 1-11 records.

He attributes most of the Bucs' problems to injuries, and said Houston has had difficulty winning because it is rebuilding with young players.

"Developing this talent can take time. But even so, they have played good football much of the time," said McKay. "They have beaten Detroit and taken three teams into overtime."

Oliver Luck, the second-year quarterback who took over for Gifford Nielsen this month, will make his third professional start Sunday.

He's completed 57 of 97 passes for 599 yards and four touchdowns, but has thrown six interceptions, three of them during last week's 38-10 loss at Cincinnati.

Whitley is hospitalized

HOUSTON (AP) — Wilson Whitley, the Houston Oilers' 6-3, 265-pound defensive lineman, was hospitalized with a severe concussion but does not remember how he got it.

Whitley was found unconscious Thursday at an automatic bank teller in northwest Houston, his wife, Norma, said in a telephone interview from his hospital room Friday.

Mrs. Whitley said her husband was brought home by people she didn't recognize.

The Bengals trounced the Oilers 55-14 in Houston on Nov. 6, and the second loss lopsided decision in three weeks left Studley disappointed.

"It's a mystery to me and if I had the answer to it, I would be a wealthy man," the coach said. "I felt after we won and the stigma of a terrible losing streak had ended you would see a different and more spirited Oiler football team."

"I thought the players would be foaming at the mouth to get back at a team that had beaten them 55-14."

Despite the controversy surrounding his desire to be traded and speculation that he may head for the United States Football League at season's end, Earl Campbell has been a bright spot in the Oilers offense.

The sixth-year running back has rushed for 853 yards, third best in the American Conference, and scored a team-leading eight touchdowns.

Tampa Bay's offense, meanwhile, ranks 28th in the NFL and has lost its most effective performer — tailback James Wilder — for the year because of a rib injury.

Thompson missed last Sunday's 27-0 loss to Chicago because of a bruised elbow, and McKay has said that if he can't play Sunday, Jeff Komlo will start at quarterback for the Bucs.

Project Christmas Card campaign opens

Past Benefits

Cathy Revell explains to her son, Brian, that in past years Project Christmas Card proceeds have been used for such things as furniture, dental equipment, emergency radio equipment, portable respirator, cardiac monitors, and other improvements at the local hospital. This year the funds are to be used for a transport incubator, with a portion for health scholarships. Looking on are Doris Rush (top) and Carolyn Johnson, this year's PCC chairman.

Campaign Posters

Margie Mims, at left, and Hilda Perales look over posters describing the 27th annual Project Christmas Card campaign, whereby residents donate money normally spent on sending Christmas cards locally to a fund used for improvements at Deaf Smith General Hospital and opportunity plan scholarships for students going into health-related careers. Names of contributors are published in a full page joint greeting which appears annually in The Hereford Brand's Christmas edition. Project Christmas Card was first conceived in 1956 by a local doctor's wife and since that time the Medical-Dental Auxiliary has sponsored the campaign.

Deadline Set

During a recent planning session of the Medical-Dental Auxiliary, made up of local doctors' and dentists' wives, Sylvia Khuri, left, and Claudia McBrayer discuss the deadline for making Project Christmas Card donations. In order for contributors' names to appear in The Brand's Christmas edition greeting, donations should be made by Saturday, Dec. 17.

Display Canisters

Shannon and Sean Revell, children of Dr. and Mrs. Tim Revell, drop their donation in a Project Christmas Card display canister like the ones which are being set up at various locations throughout Hereford, including both banks, TG&Y, Jack and Jill, J.J's Hair Fashions, Furr's, Taylor & Sons, Park Avenue Florist, Little's, The Range, and Monograms by Jan.

Lifestyles

Ann Landers

Weight embarrassing

DEAR ANN LANDERS: There's a young lady I am very much drawn to. She is pretty, intelligent, has a fabulous sense of humor, dresses in fine taste and smells good. She also sings like a nightingale and has a talent for working with children.

I want to ask her out, but I'm reluctant since I wouldn't feel right taking her to a place that wasn't nice. At the same time I would be embarrassed if my friends saw me with her. She is about 40 pounds overweight. I don't want anyone to think I can't get a date with a thin girl.

She is on a diet and has lost about 15 pounds. Should I wait until she slims down a bit more? Please answer in the paper. I'm a freshman in college, and if my roommate saw a letter from Ann Landers, he would think something is really wrong.—Uncertain In Buffalo

DEAR UNCERTAIN: Something IS wrong. You've got oatmeal where your brains belong. Do this girl a favor and leave her alone. I'd hate to have her suffer through an evening with a knucklehead like you.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have been married for 13 years to a guy who has a serious booze problem and is rarely at home. My life has been a story of poverty, confusion and quiet despair.

We have a son, 12, and a daughter, four. The boy walks the floor at night, crying because of his nightmares. He is petrified of monsters, dragons and snakes and talks about them all the time. His friends don't want to play with him anymore.

I can't take him anywhere because he fights with everyone, is nervous and loud. Now the four-year is picking up his ways. I give in to her tantrums so I can get some peace and quiet.

We live with my parents because Tom is out of work a lot. I find myself letting them take over the kids because I can't cope anymore.

My parents insist it is normal for a boy entering his teens to have weird dreams. The girl, they say, is just spoiled.

I feel like a failure as a mother and don't know where to turn. Can you help me?—Mamaroneck, N.Y.

DEAR N.Y.: First, go to Al-Anon (it's in the phone book and free) and learn how to live with your husband's alcoholism. Then, go to the school and talk with the teacher and the school counselor. It may be that your son needs to be evaluated by a psychologist and a physician.

You need help with your children. The school is the first line of defense. Your parents undoubtedly mean well, but they are too permissive. Get those kids back in your domain and start calling the shots. They need a firm hand and yours is the only one around.

Wedding planned

Omega Salazar and Leonard Morris plan to exchange wedding vows Dec. 31 at First Church of the Nazarene. The bride-elect is the

A Clovis High School graduate, Longoria enlisted in the Marine Corps in 1979 and is presently assigned to the U.S. Embassy with Marine Security Personnel in Managua.

He is the son of Roland Longoria, 404 W. Second St.

Rene Victor Longoria

DEAR ANN: For our 10th wedding anniversary my husband wants to take me to a fancy French restaurant. We are people of modest means. Can we bring our own wine? Any other suggestions?—S.L. In Fort Dodge

DEAR S.L.: Don't take wine from home. Buy an inexpensive bottle there. As for the food, if you can't pronounce it, you can't afford it.

Couple celebrate 60th anniversary

A luncheon and reception honoring the 60th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd H. Lookingbill of Summerfield was held Saturday at the Summerfield Baptist Church Fellowship hall.

Guests were greeted at the door by the honored couple and their grandchildren and were registered by several of their great-granddaughters.

Cake and coffee were served by all of the granddaughters including Mrs. Greg Richards, Mrs. Dwight Lyman of Wilton, Conn., Mrs. Pat Betzen, Mrs. Paul Hart of Baton Rouge, La. and Mrs. Ladd Gofford.

The serving table, covered with a floor-length candlelight cloth, was decorated with an arrangement of red roses and gold appointments. The two-tiered cake was trimmed with white cascading roses and topped with "60th Anniversary."

Several musical selections were presented following the luncheon. The couple's niece, Ann Clearman, and her daughter, Kristi, performed at the organ and piano. Also,

Mrs. Sid Lookingbill was one of the featured soloists and Tomi Sue Lookingbill played "How Great Thou Art."

Mmes. Richards, Betzen and Gofford sang "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree."

Lookingbill came to Summerfield in 1920 and Lillian Johnson moved to the Black Community with her family from Oklahoma in 1917. The couple were married Nov. 24, 1923, at Baptist Parsonage with the Rev. Hill officiating.

They lived on a farm in Summerfield and Black until 1956 when they moved to Hereford. Lookingbill continued to farm and his wife continued to take an active interest in community affairs, her family and home.

He retired from farming and his wife has continued work in Summerfield Study Club and Pioneer Study Club. She became an inactive member of Garden Club recently.

They belonged to Summerfield Baptist Church and then joined First Baptist Church after moving to Hereford.

They have two children, Mrs. John Winkler of Baton Rouge and L.H. Lookingbill Jr. of the Black Community. They also have nine grandchildren and 13 great-grandchildren.

Question: Do men get thyroid cancer?

ANSWERline: Thyroid cancer occurs almost twice as frequently in women as in men, and more frequently in whites than in blacks. It also occurs more frequently in the older age groups.

Question: Does difficulty in swallowing indicate cancer?

ANSWERline: Difficulty in swallowing may be an early symptom of cancer of the gullet or esophagus. Weight loss is also a symptom of this cancer. There should be no delay in reporting such signs and symptoms to one's physician. This is very important since there is a period when extensive local spread takes place before metastasis or spread to other organs via the blood and lymph system.

As consumers become more and more aware of the important role nutrition plays in overall good health, oats are being recognized as a nearly perfect food.

This new recognition is well-deserved, since oats are: nutritious, 100 percent natural (no additives or preservatives), whole grain, low in sodium, high in fiber, low in fat, cholesterol free, low in calories, free of added sugar.

In addition, oats are a great buy; they are economical, versatile and convenient. Oats can fortify any recipe by adding important nutrients. Ounce-for-ounce, they contain more protein than any other grain; more iron than raisins, spinach, eggs, or lean ground beef; more thiamine than enriched rice.

Although there is no U.S. Recommended Daily Allowance for fiber, it is recommended that Americans eat a well-balanced diet which includes sources of fiber. Oats contain a significant amount of fiber; ounce-for-ounce they contain more fiber than cabbage, apples, or celery.

Old-fashioned, quick-cooking, and instant oat flakes have the same nutritional value. The only difference is the size of the

OATMEAL COCONUT PIE
Two-third cup oats
Two-third cup butter or margarine, melted
Two-third cup granulated sugar
Two-third cup light corn syrup
Two-third cup coconut
2 eggs, beaten
1 tablespoon brown sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
1/2 teaspoon salt
One 10-inch pastry shell, unbaked

Mix all ingredients except pastry shell together. Pour into pastry shell. Bake in a 350 degree F. oven about 45 minutes or until done.

YUMMY YAM BAKE
1 cup oats
Two-third cup milk
1 18-ounce can sweet potatoes or yams, drained
18-ounce can crushed pineapple, drained
1/2 cup packed brown sugar
1 egg beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla

Combine oats and milk; set aside. Mash yams. Stir in pineapple, brown sugar, egg, vanilla, and oat mixture; blend very well. Pour into a greased 1 1/2-quart baking dish. Bake in a 400 degree F. oven for 30 minutes.

Variations:
Cranberry Yam Bake: Just before baking; swirl in 1/2 cup whole berry cranberry sauce.
Marshmallow Yam Bake: Just before baking, swirl in 1/2 cup marshmallow cream.

Gladys Conway's True Story:

I never worried about my weight, until my husband started telling me a couple of years ago that I needed to slim down. He was right. At 170 pounds, I was just too heavy. I was determined to get rid of that weight, and since a friend of mine was having a lot of success at Pat Walker's I started going there, too.

Now I'm the successful one! I'm down to 112 pounds, and I've lost a total of 68 inches - ten inches from my waist alone. I love the way my figure has stayed firm and smooth all along...Pat Walker's Symmetricon passive exercise unit takes care of that.

Vows solemnized by local couple

Barbara Hobbs became the bride of Sam Finley Saturday evening at Temple Baptist Church with Doug Manning officiating.

The bride is the daughter of MaryLou Williams of 511 Schley and the late John Williams. The bridegroom is the son of Marvin and Shirin Finley of 414 Ave. F.

The bridegroom's sister, Crystal Finley, was maid of honor and Linda Gilliland served as matron of honor.

The bridegroom's father, Marvin Finley and the bridegroom's grandfather, S.T. Wiseman were best men.

Mark Berryman and David Kreig were groomsmen.

The bride's daughter, Michlyn Hobbs, was flower girl.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Edwards sang "You Look at Me" and Edwards sang solos, "How Great Thou Art" and "We've Only Just Begun."

"The Wedding Song" was vocalized by Crystal Finley. They were accompanied by Sharon Cramer and Carolyn Evers.

The bride was escorted by her brother, Stephen Richardson of Los Angeles, Calif., and given away by her mother.

She wore a polyester auvergne knit gown designed with a stand-up illusion collar and front and back yokes of point de'espirit lace. She carried the bridegroom's mother's Bible, great-grandmother's handkerchief and white and violet roses.

Her jewelry consisted of a pearl necklace belonging to the bride's mother and pearl earrings given to her by the bridegroom.

Bridal attendants wore sheer polyester huckleberry colored gowns fashioned with sweetheart necklines, double puff sleeves with lace flounces and satin ribbon bow trim. They carried wicker fans decorated with white and violet roses.

The bridegroom's cousin, Toni Dudley, invited guests to register at the reception held in the church fellowship hall.

Cake was served by the bride's cousin, Jayne Martin, her nieces, Brandi Webb and Shantel Cornelius, and Gloria Shirley.

Punch and coffee were poured by the bridegroom's sister, Sandra Finley, and Deborah Koonz.

The couple left for a snow skiing trip to Colorado and will make their home at 419 Paloma Lane.

The bride, a 1975 Hereford High School graduate, is employed at Applan Corporation.

The bridegroom attended Amarillo College of Vocational Arts and is self-employed.

Between the Covers

By DIANNE PIERSON
County Librarian

Non-fiction bestsellers head the list of new books available this week at the Deaf Smith County Library. "Fatal Vision" by Joe McGinnis and "Of Murder and Madness" by Gerry Spence will be available on Monday for checkout.

"Of Murder and Madness" is the remarkable true story of a little-known Mexican-American from a remote Wyoming town who one day killed his white wife in a room full of witnesses—and it is attorney Gerry Spence's own story as well, as he pleads his client, Joe Esquibel, "not guilty by reason of insanity."

Later, after the John Hinkley verdict, America was rocked by protest that in our country a would-be killer should escape by claiming insanity. Who is really insane? Rarely has a writer thrust us so straightforwardly into such frightful and squalid places out of which murder and madness are spawned. Spence, in search of these answers, takes us with him into the racking drama of the insanity trial of Esquibel.

This is the compelling story of two Wyoming boys who grew up on opposite sides of the social and moral tracks; one to become a killer and the other the killer's lawyer. It is the story of their heroic mothers, of a tormented people, and of men fighting to find themselves, to find justice, and to find meaning in what often seems to be a meaningless world.

Gerry Spence is also the author of "Gunning for Justice."

From one of America's most accomplished writers of non-fiction, Joe McGinnis, comes the tragic, baffling, and electrifying story of Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald, Princeton-educated physician, Green Beret officer and convicted triple murderer.

It was in 1979, nine and a half years after the fact, that MacDonald was found guilty of having slain his pregnant wife and two small daughters in their Fort Bragg, N.C., home. To this day, he claims the murders were perpetrated by a band of drug-crazed hippies in an apparent copycat version of the Manson cult's killing of Sharon Tate.

For three years following the guilty verdict, McGinnis probed every aspect of this intricate case, gaining access to secret records and private documents that provided startling disclosures. The result is a penetration to the heart of the darkness that had enshrouded one of the most complex criminal cases ever to capture the attention of the American public.

Wedding vows spoken in Dallas

Stacy Lynn Armitage of Dallas and Dwayne Ray Waters of Denton exchanged wedding vows Saturday afternoon at Cliff Temple Baptist Church in Dallas with the Rev. J.L. Bozeman of Hereford officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson B. Armitage of Dallas and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald R. Waters of 224 Ave. E.

The main church altar was decorated with spiral candelabrum holding ivory tapers and trimmed with baby's breath and English ivy.

Mrs. Jamie McDaniel served her sister as matron of honor and the bridegroom's father, Donald R. Waters, was best man.

Bridesmaids included Monika Bruner and Judy Johnson, and the bride's niece, Holly McDaniel, was junior bridesmaid.

Groomsmen included the bridegroom's brothers, Richard Waters of Vega and Kenneth Waters of Hereford, and Nim Ashley of Denton.

Escorting guests were Alan Brunelli, Steve Grimsley and Greg Dozier, all of Denton; Rex Lee of Hereford; the bride's nephew, Heath

McDaniel of DeSoto; and the bridegroom's cousin, Steve Thompson of Lubbock.

Eugene Batiste sang principal wedding selections including "The Lord's Prayer," "Candle on the Water" and "The Long Way Around the World" accompanied by organist Joan Grimsley, the bridegroom's sister, and pianist, Ann Robinson.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an ivory chiffon and alecon lace gown which cascaded into a cathedral length-train dotted with lace and hand-sewn pearls.

She carried a bridal bouquet of pink sweetheart roses combined with baby's breath and English ivy. Her only jewelry were pearls given to her by her father.

Bridal attendants were attired in ivory taffeta and Georgette gowns featuring wide pink satin sashes.

The bridegroom's cousins, Lorie Ingram and Jennifer Ingram, invited guests to register at the reception held at Top O' The Cliff Restaurant.

Cake was served by Michell Brunell and the bridegroom's sister-in-law, Judy Waters. Terri Thompson and Carol Dozier poured punch and coffee.

The white cake with strawberry filling was covered with ivory shells and pink roses and was served from a table decorated with silver candelabra and fresh pink roses.

As her going away costume, the bride wore an ivory wool dress trimmed with tiny pink flowers designed by Laura Ashley.

The couple will make their home at 508 Kingsfisher in Denton.

The bride is a graduate of North Texas State University and member of Zeta Tau Alpha Sorority and Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity.

The bridegroom, a 1975 Hereford High School graduate, also graduated from North Texas State University. He is currently manager of Briscoe's Precision Alignment in Denton.

Red Cross Update

By BETTY HENSON
Executive Director

The uniformed volunteers will meet for their Christmas luncheon Thursday, Dec. 8 at the Red Cross office. The meeting will be a covered dish noon meal and those interested in joining the volunteers are invited to attend.

The physical therapy program is still in need of several volunteers to work one hour one day each week. Call the office if you can share one hour a week with friends at Westgate.

The Carrier Alert program is continuing to sign up persons who live alone. The mail carrier will call the Red Cross office if mail accumulates in the mailboxes designated by a special decal. The Red Cross then checks on the person and takes whatever action is necessary.

Call the office for further information on this program.

The high school art department, Gayla Kimball instructor, the Deaf Smith County Social Services Office and the Red Cross are working together to do the toys for Christmas program. The art students are painting and fixing up broken toys, the King's Manor residents are making doll clothes and we are collecting toys. Applications for the toys program can be made at the Social Services office.

The Deaf Smith County Chapter of the American Red Cross is an agency of the United Way.

Shinofield, Warren wed here Friday afternoon

Bouquets of white gladiolus and an arrangement of apricot tiger lilies, ivory daisies and baby's breath adorned the altar of St. Anthony's Catholic Church Friday afternoon for the wedding of Mary Ann Shinofield and James Warren.

Father Frank Eldridge officiated at the ceremony, assisted by Deacon Kenneth Artho. Lector was Joe Artho.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Walter Burch of Oskaloosa, Iowa. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Birkenfeld of 421 Avenue K.

Norma Burch of Oskaloosa served her sister as maid of honor and Leander Reinart Jr. was best man.

Mrs. Robert Gerber and Mrs. Arnold Wieck of Umberger, both sisters of the groom, were bridesmaids, and Robert Gerber and Arnold Wieck, brothers-in-law of the groom, were groomsmen.

Escorting guests to the pews were Ron Fleener of Oskaloosa, uncle of the bride; Sam Haschke of Umberger, brother-in-law of the groom; Larry Fleener of Lawndale, Calif., uncle of the bride; and Norbert Skypala.

Mrs. Glen Phibbs and Mrs. Joe Artho, aunt of the groom, carried gifts to the altar.

Krista Nicole Shinofield, daughter of the bride, was flower girl and Russell Wieck, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Wieck, was ring bearer. Mass servers were Mark Artho, cousin of the groom, and Bruce Wieck, the groom's nephew.

Mrs. Sharon Cramer played wedding selections and accompanied Glen Phibbs as he sang "Ave Maria," "Our Father" and "On This Day O Beautiful Mother."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white organza designed with a lace neckline embroidered with lace and pearls. Satin buttons accented the back. The long, sheer Bishop sleeves were gathered at the wrists to form deep lace cuffs. Both the bodice and sleeves were accented with embroidered lace and pearls.

The gown's full skirt fell into a lace ruffled hemline which swept to back fullness and extended into a cathedral-length train.

She wore a chapel-length veil accented with embroidered lace along the edge. It was attached to a Victorian style cap covered with lace and pearls.

She wore her maternal grandmother's wedding ring as something old, her bridal gown as something new, a diamond watch from her sister as something borrowed, and a blue garter as something blue. She also wore pearl earrings, a gift from the groom.

The bride carried a bouquet of apricot roses, white dogwoods, apricot daisies and baby's breath trailing with white satin and apricot lace ribbons.

Her attendants wore full-length apricot satin Victorian style dresses and wore apricot and ivory flowers attached to combs in their hair. They carried apricot roses and ivory baby's breath trimmed with streamers of apricot lace.

The flower girl wore a full-length apricot Victorian style dress with a ruffle at the hemline and carried a brown wicker basket filled with brown, apricot and ivory carnations and daisies. Small apricot carnations and ivory baby's breath accented her hair.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in St. Anthony's Auditorium. Mrs. Glen Phibbs and Mr. and Mrs. Sam Haschke, sister of the groom, registered guests at a table covered with an apricot and lace tablecloth and accented with the bride's bouquet.

Presiding over the gift table was Mrs. Joel Salazar; Mrs. Robert Gerber, sister of the groom; and Norma Burch, the bride's sister.

Mrs. Ronald Matthews and Christie Artho, the groom's cousin, served cake; Ms. Minnie Roddy and Mrs. David Walker, aunt of the bride, served coffee; and Mrs. Leander Reinart Jr. served tea.

The bride's table was covered with a satin apricot cloth overlaid with lace. The tiered wedding cake was centered over an apricot colored fountain and stairsteps with miniature bridesmaids and groomsmen decorated in apricot and brown joined two tiered cakes on each side. Accenting the table was a candelabrum decorated with fall flowers and apricot candles.

The groom's cake was decorated with a tractor and baler and was set on a lace covered table.

As the couple left for a wedding trip to Corpus Christi, the bride chose to wear a three-piece brown suit with gold accessories and a corsage of apricot tiger lily, ivory daisy and baby's breath.

The couple will reside at 405 Avenue G.

Special guests included the bride's grandmother from Oskaloosa and others from Temple, El Paso, Eddyville and Oskaloosa, Iowa, and Lawndale and Hawthorne, Calif.

The bride graduated from Oskaloosa Senior High in 1972 and attended Indian Hills Community College in Ottumwa, Iowa. She is currently employed as a registered nurse at Deaf Smith General Hospital.

The bridegroom is a 1970 graduate of Hereford High School and attended Oklahoma State Tech in Okmulgee, Okla. He is presently self-employed in custom swathing and baling.

POLLY'S POINTERS

DEAR POLLY — I have a problem with my toaster that's driving me crazy. The pop-up mechanism just does not work properly. The toast toasts, the heating element goes off, but the toast doesn't pop up. I have taken it into a repair shop, where they tried it out and had no difficulty. I took the toaster home and it worked perfectly for a while, but then the same problem recurred. Do you have any ideas? — MRS. G.T.

DEAR MRS. G.T. — It really sounds to me as though bread crumbs are clogging the lift mechanism of the toaster. When you took it into the repair shop, transporting the appliance probably dislodged the crumbs so that the mechanism worked properly. Unplug the toaster, shake out the crumbs and clean out the crumb tray.

Husbands, wives attend Thanksgiving dinner

A Thanksgiving dinner was served to La Plata Study Club members and their husbands Tuesday evening in the Flame Room of Energas.

Tables were laid with white cloths and centered with vases of fresh bronze colored mums. Hostesses included Margaret Schroeter, Ruby Boston, Julie Helms and Peggy Fox.

Truman Hazelrigg gave a Thanksgiving prayer for the food and following the dinner, the group played Bunco. Winners were Speedy Nieman and Frank Prowell.

Sarah Hazelrigg, club president, conducted the brief business meeting. Karla Patterson's resignation was accepted with regret and Ms. Schroeter presented the budget for the year, which was accepted.

The club's next scheduled meeting will be on Dec. 13 in the home of Beverly Jayroe at which time a gift exchange will be held.

Attending the November meeting were Messrs. and Mmes. Jay Boston, Jack Brown, Jeff Brown, Don Brush, Truman Hazelrigg, Jim Mercer, O.G. Nieman, Fred Fox, Ken Helms, Frank Prowell, Phillip Shook, Don Taylor, Harlan VanderZee, Raymond White, Louis Woodford and Ms. Schroeter and Audine Dettmann.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexicana Airlines ended a labor dispute with its stewards' union by agreeing to 26 percent salary increases and allowing 54 stewards and stewardesses to return to work.

The agreement affecting 1,500 employees was signed at the Labor Department by Manuel Sosa de la Vega, director of the state-run airline, and Rene Casco, secretary-general of the Association of Air Stewards.

The dispute was 19 days old but disrupted air traffic only briefly. The government had declared it illegal and ordered all back to work

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The vice president of Ecuador says there still is time to control the violence in Central America.

Speaking to reporters at Mexico City International Airport before his departure for Costa Rica, Nicaragua and Panama, Leon Roldos Aguilera said progress has been made by the Contadora group.

He reiterated Ecuador's support for the Contadora group — made up of Mexico, Panama, Venezuela and Colombia — which is trying to find a peaceful solution to the regional tensions in Central America.

But Roldos Aguilera cautioned that the group's objectives must be made more concrete, so that each side will not be able to interpret agreements in its own way.

Mrs. Bell, Wartes honored by Classroom Teachers Association

Margaret Bell, who retired as head of the Hereford High School English Department in May, and Larry Wartes, assistant superintendent for Hereford Independent School District, are being honored by the Classroom Teachers Association as retiree of the year and administrator of the year, respectively.

Mrs. Bell, who earned her master's degree from West Texas State University, taught public school 26 years and private school two years.

She has instructed children and youth from kindergarten through grade 12 as well as freshman and sophomore English classes for Amarillo colleges.

She has been a member of Texas Classroom Teachers Association for over 20 years, serving two terms as local unit president, vice-president in charge of welfare and vice-president in charge of professional growth, and she was a delegate to at least three state conventions.

Mrs. Bell has also been vice-president and president of the Panhandle Council, Texas Joint Council of Teachers of English; delegate to two national conventions of the National Education Association; and vice-president and president of Texas State Teachers Association.

She has been named Teacher of the Year for the local schools and Outstanding Teacher of the Nine Weeks at Hereford High School.

She has also been active in community affairs including United Way, the Women's Division, Delta Kappa Gamma, Daughters of the American Revolution, and First United Methodist Church.

Convinced that teaching is a high calling, Mrs. Bell stated, "At every turn, I was determined to engender a stronger sense of self-worth and a feeling of personal dignity which many young people lack. Life is not a game to be played out in derision of moral values and in 'good times for all' but a challenge which requires discipline and goal setting all along the way."

She is married to Charles Bell and resides at 132 North Texas.

Wartes, who has been in the education profession for 32 years, earned his master's degree and Professional Administrators Certificate from Hardin-Simmons University. In addition to his present position, he has been administrative assistant, athletic director and coach in the Hereford schools, as well as athletic director, coach and classroom teacher in the Stamford, Stanton and Meadow Schools.

He was a member of CTA while teaching at Hereford High School and currently holds membership in the Texas State Teachers Association, National Education Association, and Panhandle School Leaders Association.

Active in local affairs, Wartes has served on the Panhandle Private Industry Council, Juvenile Board, Welfare Board, Youth Council of Panhandle Regional Planning Commission, and has been on the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce and the Texas High School Coaches Association.

He helped create the Juvenile Probation Office in Deaf Smith County, organized the local CETA program for the school district, received an honorary Bull Chip Award for education, and was inducted into the Texas High School Coaches Hall of Fame. He is a deacon at the First Baptist Church.

Wartes, an administrator who has earned the confidence and respect of many local teachers, noted that "without a feeling of trust you lose effective education programs. Working together and getting along with each other seems to be the most important objective in schools today. We believe in this philosophy as a vital strength to the education process of the Hereford schools."

He and his wife, Joyce, reside at 236 Northwest Dr.

Off the Runway Glamorous evening bag heirloom

By ANNE WINSTON
Do you ever wonder what will be the heirlooms of the future? A sure bet is this season's gem, the evening bag, which is both elegant and costly.

There are small draped alligator clutches with jewel studded frames and black silk satin convertible clutches sprinkled with rhinestones. Among the most glamorous of evening accessories are the matching beaded cummerbunds and convertible clutches designed by Guy Laroche.

Be sure to invest...

It's a good idea to buy a few belts without the big flashy buckles we've all come to know and love from the likes of Judith Leiber and Alexis Kirk.

With all the statement piece jewelry out these days, it's easy to compete for the focal point. And it's a no-no to have two focal points—you don't need one for each eye.

With the resurgence of formal weddings and high school proms, young and old men alike are appreciating formalwear for what it is—a return to the elegance of the 1930s when stars such as Fred Astaire and Clark Gable defined the look.

Although silhouettes have not deviated far from the original formalwear of the 1800s, today's accessories bring newness to the dressy attire. Men are adding spirit to their look with ties and cummerbunds in such unheard of shades as pink and purple. They are every carrying canes and sporting top hats, suspenders, gloves and boutonnières.

Black remains the leading color for tuxedos, while white wing or straight-collar pleated bib shirts complete the look. Watch for white dinner jackets to show up on those who yearn for the look of Bogart.

If you're starting to think about Christmas, use your fashionmart to come up with this year's gifts.

A travel raincoat rolls up into a great stocking stuffer and later a wonderful suitcase companion. What better way to show that you're a city "slicker" than to choose red, yellow or green to cheer up dreary days.

Fund started at bank for foster children

The Golden Spread Foster Parents' Association of Castro, Deaf Smith, Parmer and Oldham counties is making preparations for a special Christmas for the foster children in these counties.

A Foster Children's Christmas fund has been established at the Hereford State Bank. Money donated will be used to help purchase toys and needed clothing for foster children.

Any donations to the non-profit organization are tax deductible. An individual or group wishing to sponsor a child or help in any way may contact the Christmas chairperson, Rita Burges, at 137 Ave. B or call 364-6766, or contact the Deaf Smith County co-chairperson, Sylvia Brockett at 600 Ave. G or call 364-0947. Donations may also be made at the Hereford State Bank to the Golden Spread Foster Parents' Christmas Fund, P.O. Box 272, Hereford, Tx. The deadline for donations is Dec. 9.

GO WITH A TRAVEL AGENT.

It does not cost the consumer anything additional to buy an airline ticket from a travel agent. The agent's commission is paid by the airline. A travel agent has direct access to computer information which reveals which airlines fly to your desired destination and which fly for the lowest cost. If you were to try to call airlines in an attempt to book your own flight, it would probably not always be revealed that alternative indirect flights are available at considerable savings over direct flights. A travel agent has the incentive of getting your travel business to justify putting all of his knowledge at your disposal. You have everything to gain.

Up-scale retailers crowd wealthy area

By SCOTT McCARTNEY

Associated Press Writer
DALLAS (AP) — If Santa Claus needs some help this Christmas filling the stockings of affluent Texans, this is the place he should shop.

In a radius of about three-quarters of a mile, Santa — like thousands of shoppers — would find 12 major department stores all clustered in what retailers call Dallas' "golden triangle."

Bloomington's recently moved in, joining Neiman-Marcus, Marshall Field's, Saks Fifth Avenue, Lord & Taylor and others in a Texas-sized shootout for upper-income customers.

"I made the comment the other day to someone ... that it is the most competitive (retailing) area I know of," said Robert Sakowitz, whose Houston-based Sakowitz chain opened its own shopping center — Sakowitz Village — across the street from Neiman-Marcus, Lord & Taylor, Montgomery Ward, J.C. Penney and Joske's stores in Prestonwood Town Center.

"It's very competitive, it's in better merchandising and it has become a major magnet (for customers) with all these stores," Sakowitz said. "You don't exactly want to go into a location where the people aren't."

Valley View Mall, first on the scene in 1973 when the "golden triangle" was farmland, was renovated this year and reopened with 60 new stores including Bloomington's largest store outside of New York. Federated Department Stores, which owns Bloomington's, already had a Dallas-based Sanger Harris department store at the mall competing with Sears Roebuck and Dillard's department stores.

Sanger Harris considers its Valley View store, tops in sales for the chain, to be its flagship and Sears' store is No. 1 in sales in Texas, officials said.

About 2,500 feet down the street, Marshall Field's and Saks Fifth Avenue anchor a year-old, three-story Galleria that includes smaller stores such as Gump's from San Francisco and F.A.O. Schwarz from New York. About 1½ miles to the north is Prestonwood and Sakowitz Village.

"We have been open about 12 months and all I can say is that our anchor stores are exceeding (sales) projections by between 9 and 11 percent and the majority of our other 142 interior tenants are doing about the same," said Galleria marketing director Barbara Womble.

"I think what's happened is that there is a complement here," said F. Scott Buzzell, general manager of Valley View. "North Dallas has greatly expanded, and we draw customers from up to 40 miles away."

Ms. Womble put it another way: "It's the old car dealership theory. Did you ever see a car dealership all alone? No. They are all together because the higher concentration draws traffic."

But Buzzell warns that the "golden corridor" has reached its point of saturation. "It's forced everyone to be very aggressive with their own stores ... to maintain market share," he said.

Spokeswoman Kelley Moncrieff said Bloomington's opening Oct. 10 was the best, in terms of sales, in Federated's history.

Fort Worth and East Texas cities like Tyler. On an average Saturday at the Galleria, 3 percent of the cars are from Oklahoma, Ms. Womble said.

Having 12 department stores rubbing elbows with each other "is something that baffles all the experts," said Mike Hyatt, general manager of sprawling, 1.2 million square-foot Prestonwood.

"I don't think anybody would have a problem agreeing that this is one of the most competitive retailing areas in the country," he said.

Hyatt said sales figures for September in the stores at his mall rose 16 percent over the same period of 1982.

"I think, of course, the Mark Twain is buried in Woodlawn Cemetery, Elmira, N.Y.

Competition goes beyond price tags and advertisements for some stores, particularly Texas rivals Neiman-Marcus and Sakowitz. President Richard Marcus would not comment, a spokeswoman said, because he did not like to be quoted in the same story with Sakowitz.

According to the North Dallas Chamber of Commerce, 80 percent of all homes in north Dallas are valued at more than $100,000, and the majority of annual incomes in that sector of the city exceed $30,000.

"I would imagine that 80 percent of the total retail sales in the city are in north Dallas, but there's no way I can prove that," said Gordon Rose, manager of the organization.

The northern half of Dallas has other shopping areas besides the "golden triangle," but none as concentrated or competitive.

Valley View's Buzzell said most of the up-scale stores "are homeruns" in the "golden triangle."

"The trade area itself is growing at twice the national average," he said. "The thing with Dallas is that ... it is comprised of a consumer who fits pretty much into the same customer profile. It's a trendy customer — middle-management types that like things new and different and are concerned with entertaining and socializing. Dress is very much a part of their lifestyle."

Buzzell also said stores in the north Dallas corridor are drawing wealthy customers from outside of Dallas, particularly oil families from economy is picking up. And I think it's because of the phenomenal growth in north Dallas," he said. "But places like the Galleria and Bloomington's helps everybody."

Decision may be weighty

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A labor issue to be weighed in court beginning this week could decide the future of Wilson Foods Corp., and the resulting answers will be heard in board rooms and union halls throughout the country.

Wilson executives say the company's tactic that led them to unilaterally break its contract with more than 6,000 wage-earning workers was a legitimate recourse provided by bankruptcy laws.

The United Food and Commercial Workers alleged Wilson reneged on a previously agreed-upon deal and violated labor law in the process.

A trial scheduled to begin Monday before U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Richard Bohanon will aim to determine if Wilson illegally rejected its contract.

It began when Wilson, which is based in Oklahoma City, filed for reorganization under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy laws on April 22.

That gives a troubled company protection from creditors while it reorganizes itself. Under the law, a firm may also rid itself of "onerous" contracts that threaten its survival.

Officials of the meatpacking giant announced that the company was not in danger of going bankrupt. Executives said the company's labor contract was too burdensome and kept Wilson from competing with other concerns whose labor costs were lower.

Hourly wages were cut from a base of $10.69 to $6.50. At the root of the controversy is whether the labor contract was killing the firm.

In documents filed with the bankruptcy court, Wilson listed debts of $214 million and assets of $277 million.

Company officials said profits, when there were any, were sliding rapidly. Stunned union leaders alleged Wilson had lost its shirt in the unpredictable commodities market and was cut blue-collar pay to recoup its losses.

Before this started, Wilson executives said they were optimistic about the company's future.

For the fiscal year ending July 31, 1982, nine months before the bankruptcy court filing, Wilson proudly showed it had turned a profit of $16.7 million. That followed a year in which the company had lost $37 million.

One thing Wilson did during that profitable year was break away from LTV Corp., ending a 15-year business relationship. Wilson board Chairman Kenneth Griggy said the independence helped morale. "There's been new enthusiasm in our people since we've been off on our own," he told a reporter in October 1982.

Another thing the company did was cut its personnel roster from about 10,000 to 8,800. About 2,000 of those remaining were salaried workers. Expenses in that profitable year were cut $10 million. Griggy said company leaders were still trying to improve employee productivity and automate as much as possible.

But by the following April, Wilson said it could not compete in its market with its present labor costs and abrogated its union contract through the bankruptcy filing.

Union officials went back to the bargaining table to demand the old contract without success and 6,000 workers from seven plants walked out on June 4.

The labor strife ended June 26 for most of the workers when the Food and Commercial Workers members agreed to a compromise and went back to work for $8 an hour. Three locals held out and their members continued to be paid $6.50 per hour. One of them, in Marshall, Mo., later struck a deal similar to their coworkers.

Last week the second holdout, a UFCW local in Louisville, Ky. at a subsidiary's plant, announced it had reached a tentative agreement.

But 20 members of the United Teamsters who work at Wilson's Logansport, Ind. plant, will apparently hold the company's feet to the fire and cause the question of its tactics to be debated in court.

Bohanon said that all the union locals would have to settle their differences with Wilson to deter the trial. Ben Marsh, secretary and treasurer of the Teamsters local said it won't settle with the company while a ruling on the issue by the National Labor Relations Board is forthcoming. He said that isn't expected for at least three months.

Wilson has asked Bohanon to issue a summary judgment based on the facts already provided him. The judge refused, saying early this month that the case was a "genuine issue of material fact."

Wilson's is not the first case of its kind to be examined by the courts.

Already thick in the debate is the case involving Bildisco, a small New Jersey building supply partnership. That company filed for bankruptcy and refused to institute wage increases agreed upon in a contract with the Teamsters Union.

The case was argued for an hour before the U.S. Supreme Court in October. At issue was whether the bankruptcy court could authorize a company to break its contract. Before the case got there, lower courts had issued conflicting opinions.

"I Believe in Spending My Money in Hereford."

Elmer Combs-Salesman

After reading an article in the Nov. 23 issue of the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal concerning a former Hereford resident's decision to resign his position from a prominent board, because of out-of-state money making operations, Emmett Milburn of Milburn's Motors decided to use this space in the Brand to make Hereford residents aware of similar operations which are occurring in our own town.

Area cities are stealing Hereford's business! "In the past, Amarillo, Lubbock, and Clovis have stocked merchandise for local businesses in Hereford, which has in turn rail-roaded profits into other cities, counties, and states. Even though this gives the consumer a wider variety, it hurts our economy. This town has no room for freeloaders (business owned or stocked by companies outside Deaf Smith county). These people were not here to do any of the plowing, yet they intend to be here to reap the harvest."

With over 51 years in business in Hereford, Milburn believes that the pioneers of this city promoted it in its progress, both in agriculture and industry, and without their promotions Hereford wouldn't exist today. "Hereford residents owe it not only to the city, but to themselves, and to the future generations to SHOP HEREFORD FIRST."

MULTIFOCAL LENSES

QUESTION: What is a multifocal lens?
ANSWER: A multifocal lens is a lens that contains two or more different powers or corrections. The most common multifocal lenses are bifocals (two powers) and trifocals (three powers). Quadrafocals, which are four different powers in one lens, are prescribed for special purposes.

Another type of multifocal lens is the PROGRESSIVE ADDITIONAL LENS. This is designed to provide clear vision from far to reading distance without break or interruption. They contain no dividing lines between the different viewing sections. All multifocal lenses are prescribed in order to meet the specific visual needs of each individual.

Scientists and engineers working in wind and water erosion have developed a variety of instruments to evaluate soil, including a dry-aggregate sieve to determine soil cloddiness and estimate soil erodibility. A rapid rotary sieve (RRS) was developed by USDA agricultural engineers in cooperation with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, to determine if the wind erodible fraction and the aggregate stability of soils could be obtained with a single sieve and in a shorter time than with the standard compact rotary sieve. The RRS takes about one sixth of the time to process a sample compared to the standard sieve. The RRS can be constructed with a welder, drill and less than $200 for materials.

A study by scientists with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station was conducted on the Texas A&M Native Plant and Animal Conservancy in Brazos County to determine the effects of season burning of rangeland on runoff, sediment loss and vegetation. A brush-dominated community and a grass-dominated community were examined. Mean runoff from both communities tended to be greater from unburned plots than from burned plots, although differences were seldom significant. Trends suggested that plots burned in the spring lost less soil than did unburned plots or those burned in the fall. Parent foliar cover of live vegetation was greater on burned than unburned plots but total foliar cover was greatest on unburned plots.

Improvement of shallow sandy-textured surface soils underlain by clay-textured B horizons may be possible by mixing a controlled fraction of subsoil with topsoil, according to scientists with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station. If thorough mixing of a carefully controlled fraction of the subsoil with the topsoil could be achieved so that subsoil clods would remain intact, soil water retention and effective rooting depth could be improved without causing an unacceptable decrease in infiltration. Research on mixtures of zero through 50 percent by volume of the clay B horizon with A horizon were made and tested for water retention. Tests of infiltration rate under simulated rainfall indicated increasing percentages of subsoil significantly reduced infiltration rates; however the final rates remained within acceptable limits.

Pricklypear is a management problem on 28 percent of Texas rangeland. Mechanical methods of brush control, such as root plowing, chaining and rootraking have usually increased pricklypear density. Individual plant treatment has been used effectively for pricklypear control but is labor intensive. Research for the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station recently compared effectiveness of liquid and pelleted picloram and evaluated relative efficacies of two formulations at three phenological states of Texas pricklypear in the southern Rolling Plains. Applications were made in March, June and November 1981. Foliar sprays were more effective than pelleted picloram when evaluated 15 months after treatment in March.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan probably will not decide the fate of hotly contested dairy legislation passed by Congress until next week, according to aides.

The Reagans flew to their California ranch for Thanksgiving and plan to return to Washington on Sunday night. Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said it was unlikely the president would sign any of the bills Congress sent him until he returns.

Under the legislation, dairy producers for the first time would be paid federal cash subsidies for cutting milk production by as much as 30 percent over a 15-month period.

The measure also would reduce the government's milk price support rate from the current $13.10 per 100 pounds to $12.50. It would help finance the subsidy program by an assessment of 50 cents per 100 pounds of milk sold.

Currently, dairy farmers do not get cash payments. The market price of milk, however, is supported by federal purchases of surplus butter, cheese and non-fat dry milk, a program that has led to huge stockpiles of dairy products and a record cost to taxpayers of $2.6 billion in the fiscal year that ended on Sept. 30.

Budget director David Stockman and others close to Reagan are reported to be favoring a veto of the bill. The administration had wanted a simple cut in milk price supports as a way of discouraging farmers from producing surplus milk.

The bill, however, includes provisions that freeze tobacco price support levels for two years and provide at reduced prices government-owned grain to drought-stricken farmers and ranchers.

Although dairy interests lobbied long and hard for passage, the bill was fought equally hard by various livestock and consumer groups. The National Cattlemen's Association, for example, fear that as dairy farmers cut production their extra cows will glut the market with cheap meat.

But the legislation also has some powerful allies, including Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., the Senate majority leader, and Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee and a staunch supporter of his state's tobacco interests.

Agriculture Secretary John R. Block, who was in Rome this week for the windup of a Food and Agriculture Organization conference, has not announced a recommendation on the dairy bill.

Block's press aide, John Ochs, said on Wednesday that Reagan had until Dec. 3 to sign the bill. If he doesn't, with Congress in adjournment, the measure would be vetoed automatically.

Although Reagan might share the philosophical view of some that the dairy bill is still too expensive, cumbersome and complicated, he is expected to weigh the political virtues of letting the measure become law. Certain Republicans, including Helms — who wants his state's tobacco farmers protected — will be up for reelection in 1984.

Signing the bill also would please the dairy lobby, which has poured millions of dollars into campaigns of members of Congress — Democrat and Republican — over the years.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Department analysts say that U.S. cotton stockpiles could be up two years from now because of a larger crop in 1984 and some dampening of use by textile mills.

This year's harvest is estimated at 6 million bales, down sharply because of drought and the government's payment-in-kind acreage curbs. The cotton carryover on Aug. 1 was 7.9 million bales, making a total supply for 1983-84 of 15.5 million bales.

Cotton use or "disappearance" this season is expected to be about 11.6 million bales, up from 10.7 million bales in 1982-83. That would leave an inventory of old-crop carryover next Aug. 1 of about 4 million bales.

"Disappearance may not continue to rise in 1984-85," says the department's Economic Research Service in a new outlook report. "A sustained large cotton textile trade deficit and competition with manmade fibers could limit further gains in mill use. Increasing foreign cotton production could pressure U.S. exports below this season's level."

Therefore, the analysis said, if 1984 cotton production returns to normal and produces a crop of 10.5 million to 13 million bales, the reduced cotton disappearance would mean a rise in inventories by Aug. 1, 1985.

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the gainers in October's cost of living was the price of eggs, although broilers and other poultry showed declines, according to the latest government figures.

Egg prices rose 5.7 percent from September and were 13.8 percent above year-earlier levels, says the Agriculture Department. Poultry, however, was down 2.3 percent during the month, averaging only 2.1 percent above a year ago.

Red meat prices, on the other hand, held steady in November but averaged 5.3 percent below year-earlier levels. Beef and veal rose 0.9 percent during the month while pork prices declined 1.5 percent.

William Leshner, assistant secretary for economics, said food prices will probably remain stable during the next few months because of large meat supplies.

"But upward pressure on food prices will develop in 1984 from further increases in marketing costs, stronger consumer demand and smaller meat supplies in the second half of next year," he said.

Leshner's comments followed a Labor Department report on Wednesday which showed food prices overall rose 0.5 percent in October.

STRIPPER HARVESTERS EQUIPPED WITH FIELD CLEANERS can significantly reduce problems associated with trash during handling, storage and ginning of harvested cotton. Lower operating costs, higher harvesting capacities and higher efficiencies are some of the benefits listed by a Texas A&M agricultural engineer of stripper pickers over mechanical pickers. The trash that's harvested with the crop reduces those benefits, he said. Field cleaners have come into their own in correcting many problems created by stripper harvesting, and strippers can be equipped with cleaners modified to remove additional trash, yielding cleaner, more valuable seed cotton, he said. Plans for machine modification can be obtained from Texas A&M's Department of Agricultural Engineering.

Water use key to dryland farming

Water management is one of the keys to successful dryland farming, according to David Reed, District Conservationist for the Soil Conservation Service in Hereford.

"Since dryland farmers depend entirely on snow and rainfall for crop production," Reed said, "it is essential to utilize every inch of moisture to its fullest."

Hereford area farmers receive an average of 18 inches rainfall annually. Often it falls in the form of heavy thunderstorms which dump the rain too fast for the soils to absorb all that falls. This not only reduces the productivity of the soil due to erosion but lessens the benefit received from the rain.

"Farmers are becoming increasingly aware of the need to hold as much moisture as possible on the fields long enough to allow the soil to absorb it," Reed said. "There are several inexpensive practices used by local farmers which are helpful in reducing runoff and increasing yields."

In the Texas Panhandle, there are generally measurable amounts of snow through the winter months and usually enough wind to make it blow across open fields and drift into bar ditches and roadsides. By leaving the crop residue standing after harvesting wheat and sorghum, any snow that falls will be trapped and held there until it melts and is absorbed into the soil profile, instead of blowing off the field into the bar ditch.

"This practice alone can mean the difference in having soil moisture in the spring to get a crop going or not, if we don't get any good early rainfall," Reed explained. "Crop residues not only trap moisture, but they shade the soil, therefore decreasing loss of moisture due to evaporation."

Weed control is always a problem and added moisture can increase weed problems. The type of plow used by the farmer will have a direct effect on the amount of crop residue left. For example, using an offset disk, about half of the residue will be buried, while by using sweeps to control weeds about 90 percent of the residues are left on top of the surface, where they are still available to trap and hold moisture.

"There are times when the soil is benefitted by deep plowing or by the use of implements which leave little or no residue on the surface," Reed said. "When this situation occurs we often recommend the use of furrow dikes to keep the rainfall on the field."

Furrow dikes are small dams within the rows of bedded or listed land, approximately six to 10 feet apart. The pockets or depressions left between the dikes catch and hold the rainfall in place, where it stands until absorbed into the soil profile and evaporated.

Jim Cavin Jr. is one area farmer that uses furrow dikes on his dryland maize crop. Jim started using them in 1980 and has proven that they make a substantial difference in crop yields. "It's the difference in making or not making a dryland crop in the average year," Cavin said, adding that he does not plan to ever put in another dryland maize crop without them.

One of the problems encountered in the past with furrow dikes was at harvest, when the combines had trouble traveling down diked rows. "With the larger floatation tires on most combines today, this is rarely a problem any more," Reed explained. "There are also plow out attachments that can be added ahead of the tire on the combine to knock the dikes out if necessary," he added. "Some farmers just dike every other row and leave the rows that the combine will travel down undiked."

Contour farming is another practice that saves runoff from rainfall. This is accomplished by plowing across the slope of the land and planting the crops on rows that are nearly level.

"Leaving as much residue on the surface as possible, using furrow dikes and contour farming are just a few of the conservation practices used by local farmers to increase water penetration into the soil," Reed said. There are other methods and practices involving land leveling and terracing which are extremely effective, but the initial cost of installing these practices is the main drawback at this time.

"The practices we discuss are done annually and are not what we consider permanent practices," Reed continued. "These methods work well with little cost to the farmer."

Cotton harvests dominate farm week

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Cotton and pecan harvesting dominated Texas' agricultural picture the past week, says Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Cotton harvesting made good progress in the South Plains and Trans-Pecos area until the latest cold front brought scattered showers, he said. Harvesting is winding down in West Central, North Central and Northeast Texas, and some farmers in the Rolling Plains are still awaiting a killing frost to prepare the crop for harvesting.

A good pecan crop is coming off trees throughout the state although Hurricane Alicia in August and dry conditions in late summer and fall caused some crop reductions. This year's crop is the best in several years, noted Carpenter.

A few late peanuts are still being harvested in parts of West Central and North Central Texas while limited soybean harvesting continues in some eastern counties and along the Upper Coast. Harvesting of second-crop rice is virtually complete in coastal areas, Carpenter said.

A good sugarcane harvest continues in the Rio Grande Valley while harvesting of the state's other sugar crop — sugar beets — is winding down in the High Plains.

Harvesting of oranges and grapefruit is gaining momentum in the Valley and this year's crop looks good, noted Carpenter. Fall vegetables also continue to move to market in the Valley and in the Winter Garden of Southwest Texas.

Livestock over the state remain in reasonably good condition, with supplemental feeding active in some locations due to poor grazing, particularly in western, central and northeastern areas. Small grains are providing some early grazing over parts of Texas, but many fields need a good rain for continued growth, Carpenter said.

Reports from district Extension directors showed these conditions.

PANHANDLE: Cotton harvesting is active while harvesting of grain sorghum and sugar beets is winding down. Carrot harvesting remains active in Deaf Smith County. Wheat pastures are providing limited to excellent grazing but need more rain. Stocker cattle continue to move into the area to graze wheat.

SOUTH PLAINS: Cotton harvesting made good progress during the past week, with about 65 percent of the crop in. Yields in some counties are better than expected following adverse fall weather; however, crop quality is down. A few soybeans are still being harvested along with some sugar beets. Wheat is making good growth.

ROLLING PLAINS: Cotton harvesting is active in areas receiving a killing frost. However, this year's crop is short. A good pecan harvest is under way. Most wheat has been seeded, with early fields providing some grazing for livestock. Stockers continue to move into the area; death losses in incoming stockers are high.

NORTH CENTRAL: Harvesting of cotton and peanuts is about complete, with yields generally low for both crops. A good pecan harvest is getting under way. Wheat and oats are making good growth and providing some grazing; some fields need rain. A little hay making continues.

NORTHEAST: Farmers are winding up cotton and soybean harvests; yields of both crops have generally been down. A fair peanut harvest has been completed. Sweet potato harvesting continues, and the pecan crop is light to average. Wheat, oats and winter pastures need rain.

FAR WEST: The cotton harvest has been slowed by scattered showers. Harvesting ranges from 30 to 50 percent complete, with generally poor yields. Harvesting of bell peppers and cabbage is about complete. Most livestock are in fair shape, with feeding active due to poor grazing conditions.

WEST CENTRAL: Harvesting of cotton and peanuts is about complete; cotton yields have generally been poor while the peanut crop has been fair to excellent. Small grains are making good progress and providing some grazing; some planting continues. The pecan crop varies from fair to excellent. Most livestock are in good shape; ranchers are providing supplemental feed.

CENTRAL: Pecan harvesting has increased with the recent frost; yields are good but prices are low. Most small grains need rain; some farmers are replanting due to poor stands caused by dry conditions. Livestock feeding is in full swing as grazing conditions are poor. Stock water is also short.

EAST: A few fields of soybeans remain to be harvested. Pecan harvesting is active, with the crop ranging from poor to good. Dry conditions are hampering the growth of oats and winter pastures. Livestock remain in good shape.

UPPER COAST: Soybean harvesting remains active while most of the second rice crop is in. Some wheat and oats are still being planted for winter pastures; early fields are making good growth. Livestock are in good shape, with good grazing. Seasonal marketing of cattle remains heavy.

SOUTH CENTRAL: Winter pastures are making good growth although some areas need additional moisture. Livestock and pasture conditions are good for this time of the year. The pecan harvest is in full swing; yields and quality are generally good.

SOUTHWEST: A good pecan harvest continues along with harvesting of carrots and cabbage. Most winter pastures need rain for continued growth. Livestock feeding is widespread due to poor grazing conditions.

COASTAL BEND: Harvesting of the second rice crop is about complete; yields are poor. Some wheat is still being planted; early fields of wheat and oats are making good growth. Cattle and forage conditions are good. Seasonal marketing of cattle continues, with prices a little stronger. A good pecan harvest is about complete.

SOUTH: A good sugarcane harvest continues, and the citrus harvest is gaining momentum. Peppers, cucumbers, broccoli and cabbage continue to move to market. Some hay making continues. Livestock remain in good shape, with marketing light.

Migrant fruit pickers decrease

By DON KENDALL AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new Agriculture Department survey of farm workers in the United States shows a 47 percent decline between 1979 and 1981 in the number of migrant laborers traveling from area to area harvesting fruit, vegetables and other crops.

One reason for the sharp decline — to 115,000 in 1981 — after holding fairly steady in recent years — is that illegal aliens may have taken over many of the jobs formerly held by American migrants, the report said.

But that is uncertain. Other possibilities include further radical changes in crop production patterns and errors in the sampling.

The report was written by Susan Pollack and William R. Jackson Jr. of USDA's Economic Research Service.

In 1979, when the previous survey of migrant workers was made, there were 217,000 reported. That was comparable to most years going back to 1970 when 196,000 were reported. The number of migrant workers stood at 409,000 in 1960 and gradually declined in the following decade.

"Reasons for the decline in the number of migrants from 1979 to 1981 are not clear," the report said. "One possible explanation is that the demand for migrant labor in agriculture has declined because of changing production levels and agricultural practices."

However, it added, a review of the available information "did not provide conclusive evidence to support decreased labor demand." Also, there was no general support for that theory among other federal agencies that keep tabs on migrant workers.

"Another explanation for the decrease may be that farm operators are increasingly substituting illegal aliens for domestic farm workers," the report said.

Ther0nbj f, 'probably enumerates few illegal workers' because they return home before it was taken or because they dodge enumerators because of their illegal status.

"Therefore, an increased substitution of illegal workers for domestic laborers would appear as a decrease in the number of migrant workers in the survey data," the report said.

Finally, it said, because the migrant figures are derived from a survey, there is a possibility of errors. Further surveying scheduled for this year will have to be analyzed to draw conclusions.

Looking at the overall farm labor situation, the report said that about 2.5 million hired farm workers earned cash wages or salaries in 1981. That was "not significantly different" from estimates going back to 1968, it said.

Migrants, therefore, made up about 4.6 percent of the nation's total hired farm work force in 1981.

According to the survey, most of the migrants were white males under 25 years of age "who spent most of the year out of the labor force as students." More than half worked fewer than 75 days at farm jobs.

The average annual earnings of migrants from farm work and non-farm work was $3,995 in 1981, compared to $4,314 for non-migrant workers, the report said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president of the National Association of Wheat Growers blames "commodity factionalism" for the failure of Congress to enact special legislation that would give wheat farmers a sweeter 1984 federal program than the one already announced.

Don Loeslie said that corn interests blocked passage of the wheat bill in the Senate just before Congress adjourned for the holidays.

Kansas water public property

Texas property owners control the use of their own groundwater. But in Kansas water is public property, managed by state-created agencies.

The controversial, federally-funded High Plains Ogallala Aquifer Study, released late last year, ignores these regional groundwater institutional differences and the public perceptions of the water depletion problem, said two Kansas State University geographers. Both issues would be pertinent to decision-makers and policy formulators of groundwater management.

Professors David Kromm and Stephen White have launched a two-year, $1,000 project to collect this information which they believe will be a useful supplement to the High Plains Study.

By next spring they will be ready to survey some 3,000 residents in the six-state High Plains area and make their preliminary findings available in the winter of 1984.

The K-State scientists are documenting the variety of existing laws and the groundwater management groups that operate in the six states. When they have completed this fact finding, the data will be used to list various alternative management strategies and institutional arrangements.

Their survey questionnaire will present these alternatives to people living in selected counties in each of the six states. The counties, which have not been identified, are to be representative of all the 185 counties in the Ogallala Aquifer area.

The geographers want to question a wide spectrum of people who depend on water from the Ogallala. Included will be city dwellers, dry land and irrigation farmers, well drillers, and farm implement dealers.

Using statistical analyses, the geographers then will determine the public preferences for groundwater management strategies and control institutions. They also will point up regional differences of opinion.

'We are the lucky ones . . . That's why we can talk about it'

'Alicia Album' outlines devastation of hurricane

By JOHN LUMPKIN
Associated Press Writer
GALVESTON, TEXAS
(AP) — 1:40 a.m., Thursday,
August 18, 1983.

The sight must have been awesome if any creature saw it. Hurricane Alicia's full force of 115 mph winds hit the modest beachfront development of Sea Isle, 16 miles west of downtown Galveston where the island is slender as a thread.

Tornadoes sprang from the darkness. Twelve-foot tides submerged the grassy plots of land beyond the two-lane highway.

An AP dispatch a day later, based on an aerial survey, said, "Few houses in the western subdivision of Sea Isle were left untouched by the storm. The hurricane reduced some dwellings to mere platforms on stilts; others were destroyed altogether and were only piles of lumber."

Before Sea Isle, there wasn't much for Alicia's predecessors to victimize. It was ranchland before development began in the late 1950s on about a square mile bordered to the south by the Gulf of Mexico and to the north by the bay.

Hurricane Carla is said to have taken about 16 of the 50 houses built at the time. The first developer sold to a corporation which hit the skids in the Sharpstown Bank scandal that elsewhere involved some of the state's top politicians.

Property owners took over in 1972 and elected a board of directors. Sea Isle was annexed by the city of Galveston in 1975.

In 1976 the board hired Lloyd Thompson to manage the subdivision. Thompson and his wife Auvarie moved to Sea Isle from their lifelong small-town home of Nocona, Texas, 400 miles inland, after seeing a son and daughter through college.

The Thompsons selected an elevated three-bedroom house across the blacktop from the beach, one with a deck to catch the breezes off the surf perhaps 200 yards away.

"We were the lucky ones," said Mrs. Thompson. "Maybe that's why we can talk about it."

So, open the pages, if you will, of an Alicia album, pieced together in retrospect by the Thompsons with the encouragement of an outsider. It begins just before the winds begin to stir at Sea Isle:

August 15
The news is saying there is a little something out there. We are not too concerned.

August 16
Alicia is now a tropical storm. Lloyd realizes we are coming into a dangerous situation and he shuts down the normal operations and boards up, moving the equipment to high ground. We go into town about 6 p.m. and when we get back home, the phone is ringing and people are evacuating and we hear the road will be closed by 3 a.m.

Everybody should be behind the sea wall in town. We don't want to get behind the sea wall so we decide to get off the island. The phone rings a lot now and Lloyd is helping property owners. Auvarie picks out the quilts her grandmother made, the wedding pictures, pictures of the children and the tax records to take. The IRS says it is no excuse if you lose your papers in a storm.

August 17
We leave at 1 a.m. and get to Houston about 2:30 a.m. to spend the night. After we wake up, we drive north, stopping about five times to confer about whether to go on because we hear on the radio water is over the road in Galveston and then we hear something else. When we lose the Galveston station, we decide to go on and stay with our children in Dallas. When we get there, we follow the storm on television.

August 18
Just after midnight, Auvarie says she almost feels like going to bed because the eye of the hurricane is going directly where we live and how could we have anything left?

It hits at 1:40 p.m. The television says the Galvez and Flagship hotels behind the sea wall are being devastated. How could our house, with no sea wall, still be there? We are almost totally resigned that nothing is there. but, with no news of our area, we still hope. We do not sleep at all until 11 a.m. Lloyd says, "Well, we have that extra lot and we can build something fairly quick there. We already have the pilings and we can get an apartment over on the mainland until we get rebuilt."

We buy a generator, candles, flashlights, water cans, gas cans to prepare to return. We would learn later Galveston's water supply was shut down today.

August 19
Torrential rains hit Dallas and Lloyd sets out by himself for home as the hurricane passes through. It is a day-long trip, with roadblocks at the causeway to Galveston Island where the National Guard says you have to have a Galveston address on your driver's license to go through.

"The closer I got to Sea Isle," Lloyd would recall, "the more devastation I saw. All the houses on the beach were gone. Houses on the bay side looked to me like they were bad. We ended up with one lane on the highway and I was following the bulldozer clearing the highway: Every house I saw was gone. Devastated."

"The pit in my stomach was growing. I could just see my house was on longer there, too. Just as I arrived and turned into the entrance of Sea Isle, a friend was leaving Sea Isle and she hollered at me and said, 'Your house looks all right.'"

The house has some damage but it is standing. The doors are jammed and it needs a crow bar to get in. The office five blocks away is not too bad, either. A window is broken and there is a little roof damage. The office phone rings. This is a shock because no other phones work. You can call in but not out. The caller is a property owner from Houston who asks some questions and then asks if there is anything he can do. Lloyd asks him to call Dallas.

The phone rings at our daughter Martha's house. It is a man Auvarie doesn't know to this day. "It's all right. It's there," she yells. Steaks already thawing in a freezer that isn't working is Lloyd's dinner. Spending the night on Sea Isle is very eerie when you are in an area with no lights and no traffic. The Texas National Guard is patrolling the roads with rifles on their shoulders and that is a comfort.

August 20
It looks like close to 400 houses are lost. Many friends' houses are gone. Many are half gone. Auvarie and son Doug arrive by early afternoon with a generator bought in Dallas. This can run the refrigerator and a fan. We spend the afternoon trying to get stuff pushed out so we can get to the stairs and get around the yard. When you pick up a board, all you can think of is finding a snake.

We eat thawed shrimp and oysters from the freezer tonight. Anybody that comes by gets a couple of pounds of shrimp. The table we make out of a door that had blown down. Auvarie says she did the dumbest thing, loading the dishwasher. She unloads it and cleans the plates with boiled water from the butane stove. They feel greasy still so they go back in the dishwasher, which will be turned on two weeks from now.

August 21
Doug is repairing the roof during the afternoon when Auvarie climbs up with Gatorade because it is so hot. She must have been like "a zombie" because Doug says, "Mother, you got to look straight ahead at what you're doing because you never can get anything done because you'll just be awed about what's around you." August 22

At 2 a.m., the wind dies while we are sleeping in the living room.

We go out on the deck and the mosquitoes are awful. So we had to come back in and then the generator ran out of gas. Lloyd goes downstairs and puts gasoline in the generator and turns the fan back on. We shift the furniture to get more air. It is like when you were young without air conditioning, you wake up in the middle of the night covered with sweat. And the sheets are wet. It's been a long time since that happened.

During the day, the Baptists from Louisiana arrive. They set up an outdoor dining room out of a truck and serve breakfast, lunch and dinner free and give out free ice. Budweiser and Coors bring drinking water in quart beer bottles. Lloyd goes into town to use the phone and also stand in line at his insurance agent's office to file notice of loss. There will be four different adjustors to deal with — one each for windstorm damage, for flood, for homeowners and for the sailboat. One adjustor arrives to view the house and departs without a deposition. August 23

We put up our mailbox. Auvarie discovers the pictures she wanted to take to Dallas are still on the wall. In the rush, she had been

Middle-aged women run risks if smoke

By PAUL RAEBURN AP
Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — In a study of heart attacks in middle-aged women, researchers have found that those who smoke are five times as likely to have heart attacks as those who don't.

Sixty-five percent of heart attacks in women under 50 could be prevented if the women gave up smoking, the researchers wrote in today's Journal of the American Medical Association.

In a separate report published in the same journal, researchers said smoking reduces the blood flow to the brain, possibly increasing a smoker's chances of having a stroke.

Researchers found that women under 50 are subject to many of the heart attack risk factors identified in other groups — high blood pressure, elevated blood cholesterol and a family history of heart attacks at relatively young ages, for example.

Smoking, however, is the most prominent risk factor, according to the study conducted by Lynn Rosenberg and colleagues at the Drug Epidemiology Unit at the Boston University School of Medicine, in collaboration with the U.S. Food and Drug Administration and the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine.

The researchers studied 255 women under 50 who had had heart attacks and 802 women who had not. The relative risk of myocardial infarction (or heart attack caused by damage to heart muscle) rose with the amount smoked.

In women who smoked 35 or more cigarettes a day — almost two packs — the risk of heart attack was 10 times greater than in non-smoking women.

Almost 600,000 Americans suffered heart attacks from various causes in 1980, according to the most recent figures available from the American Heart Association.

In the other report, researchers from the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston and the Houston Veteran's Administration Medical Center measured brain blood flow in 192 volunteers, 75 of whom were cigarette smokers.

They found that smoking appears to enhance the buildup of fatty substances on the inner walls of arteries that nourish the brain, thus narrowing the opening through which blood can pass and cutting down the flow.

Last week, the U.S. Surgeon General released the latest edition of his annual report on smoking and health, which concentrated on the extensive evidence linking smoking to various forms of heart and blood vessel disease.

distracted by a phone call and left them.

So Auvarie could wash her hair for her first day back on the job at the school system, we cut everything else off the generator to use the hair dryer. The mosquitos are horrible in the car and she spills coffee on herself as she tries to swat them. It rains heavily in Galveston and she has to move her car because of rising water. On the way back to Sea Isle, the battery dies but someone offers a jump-start.

Everyone has been together in rebuilding but the rain and 70-mph winds today destroy a lot of things they had done. We are talking about people who normally don't do physical work who are getting up on their roofs because it is difficult to find someone else to do it, regardless of how much money you have. Today was a setback. The mood changes.

Our water is turned on, although we won't be able to drink it for four days. You cannot imagine the elation when someone could push a button on the commode and it flushes. We can take a shower. Of course, it is a cold one because there is no electricity but that is quite a luxury as the swimming pool is beginning to turn green.

The phone in the office dies. We trade one utility for another.

We receive our first mail delivery since the hurricane. One piece is a sale catalog from Houston and another is an advertisement to buy magazines.

August 27

This is Saturday and most of the out-of-town property owners arrive for the first time, asking numerous questions about insurance, streets, water and electricity — everything one would ask if you had your house half torn down.

We plan to go to church and we go through the closets to find that the clothes have begun to mildew. The shoes are beginning to turn green. We wear shorts and flip-flops and most of the other people in church do, too.

It rains again. We go into town to pick up the mail which collected at the post office while there was no delivery. There is an electric bill and we haven't had electricity in two weeks.

Lloyd has his first flat tire. In the afternoon, he starts having another one. He has learned to fix his own flats with a can of something he picked up at the automotive store. The tires are pumped back up with a little compressor that works off the cigarette lighter in the car. Flats are a fact of life with so much debris in the roads.

We get electricity at the office but not at home. We can start normal operations with the electric typewriter, electric copier, electric calculators, etc.

Mattox, the attorney general of Texas, comes to Galveston to explain the position the state will take on the homes on front row beach.

Lloyd's pickup has a flat, so he airs it up with the little compressor and goes into town. Some people who had property right on the beach no longer are behind the vegetation line and they cannot rebuild. The property will belong to the state. It is depressing.

On his way home, Lloyd sees a friend's car in a hole and he hooks it on the pickup to pull the friend out. Instead of putting it in forward, the friend puts it in reverse and throws mud all over Lloyd, who had dressed up for the meeting in town.

About 5:30 p.m., Houston Power and Light trucks are at the house across the street and we may be hooked up next. Auvarie hears them say on the walkie-talkie, "Let's wrap it up and we'll finish tomorrow." We had better go into town and check into a motel.

Auvarie turns the air conditioning in the motel down as low as it can go and gets into the hottest tub of water she can make.

Electricity at the house is turned on in the afternoon. The elation of having water and electricity, which you have had most of your life, is a feeling you can't realize.

We have a Sea Isle board of directors meeting. Everyone decides to make Sea Isle again one of the best developments on the west end of the island.

This is Labor Day, but very few people know it is a holiday. The first contracts for removal of the debris are let and work begins. It is a time of trial. They are picking up half of a house or whole roofs and having to crush them and put them into trucks.

On one house, we pull all the rubbish and half of the roof off and pile it in the street so the trash trucks could pick it up. The owner comes running out and says the insurance people haven't seen it. So, we push it back in the yard and it stays there for several weeks.

We finally see another one of the adjustors today. He makes a list and says he will get back to us in 10 days. He doesn't.

We know tons of trash have been hauled off but it doesn't look like it. The devastation is still here. Some people with a lot of damage become despondent because you can't make permanent repairs until the insurance company gets its work done.

A friend of Lloyd's finally gets an appointment with his adjustor. He takes off a day's work and meets the adjustor, who turns out to be one for fire insurance. Of course, he had no fire, so after two minutes, they both go back to Houston.

Our friends and we go into town for dinner and Auvarie orders all vegetables. Lloyd comments, "What will we all do when we don't talk about the hurricane anymore?"

The phone company puts a little truck with pay phones at the entrance to Sea Isle. This is another thing that gives you a little thrill, even if it is five blocks from your house.

The remains of two houses between our house and the Gulf are hauled off to the dump site to be burned, leaving our house with a clear view of the Gulf.

We get the walls back up on the deck and install garage doors. At last it is beginning to look like our place.

A former board member and the property owners' president mails a letter which starts out, "There is a hero in our midst!" It says Lloyd "really performed heroic deeds to assist in minimizing damage to the property of the Association and also that of the property owners, long after he should have left the area ... Lloyd showed an outstanding character by disregarding his and his wife's own safety ... These are rough times for us all but they've been made a little more bearable by Lloyd."

The weather is beautiful. This is the nicest time of the year in Galveston. The subdivision looks cleaner. Some of us decide to have a weenie roast on the beach and things seem to be getting back to normal in Sea Isle.

We finally have a phone at home, two days after Lloyd got one at the office. We call our children in Dallas.

It has been two months since the hurricane. It seems like two years. The streets are fixed where you can drive down them and not get flats. However, many people haven't seen their adjustors or gotten their money.

We finally sign a proof of loss with the "big" adjustor, the one for windstorm and flood. We won't have a check for some time. October 19 was the first appointment but the adjustor was a no show. We called him every day until now.

The state insurance commission holds a 2 p.m. meeting at the courthouse in Galveston to hear complaints. The room is full, but there are maybe about 12 people left after 4 p.m. when they get around to calling on the citizens. Lloyd's written comments about the Texas Catastrophe Insurance Pool begin, "It seems that your group of adjustors were the most highly unorganized people I have ever known." Another Sea Isle resident, in writing, tells the commission, "We pay insurance premiums to protect us from loss. Who protects us from you and the insurance companies?" He claims the contents of his home were ruined after the hurricane from rain coming through temporary repairs in the roof while he waited for a settlement.

Lloyd writes a relative, "Well, I'm back in the land of debris and water. It must have rained five inches yesterday. No leaks in my house or office...Will let you know when and if I receive a check."

Today a suit has been filed challenging the Open Beaches Act. Eighty-two plaintiffs who own property in three subdivisions, including Sea Isle, claim they should be able to rebuild without interference from Attorney General Mattox and that the natural vegetation line has not shifted.

Almost the whole day passes before Lloyd realizes this is the three-month anniversary of the hurricane and that is only when someone asks a question about it. Sea Isle really looks a whole lot better. More and more people are beginning to rebuild, although some people who see Sea Isle for the first time still think it is pretty messed up.

Oh, yes, there is still no insurance check and even if it does arrive in the next few days, we won't see it because we are going to take a vacation.

The odds are no one will so much as notice if you reply "dead" when asked "How are you?"

Lone survivor did not know how mishap went

BAYTOWN, Texas (AP) — The man federal investigators hope will provide the clue to the causes of a freight train wreck that killed four crewmen told two ambulance attendants he didn't know how the accident happened.

James Muchow, 41, of Hempstead suffered broken legs and other injuries when he was thrown from a 13-car Southern Pacific freight train that slammed into a line of parked boxcars a week ago Saturday.

Federal investigators have said Muchow, the lone survivor of the wreck, may hold the key to providing information about the accident.

National Transportation Safety Board safety inspector Thurman Toal said his investigation indicates the crew may have been distracted or dozing because the train's brakes apparently were not applied.

Muchow, who was in a caboose directly behind the train's engine, remains in stable condition at Houston's Hermann Hospital.

Muchow "said that although he didn't know why the train crashed, he remembered everything that happened because he was never knocked unconscious at any time either during or after the accident," Roger Lay of Baytown, one of two ambulance attendants who treated Muchow at the scene, told the Baytown Sun.

Toxicology tests on the four men who died in the wreck were negative, meaning none was under the influence of drugs or alcohol, the Harris County medical examiner's office reported.

Autopsies performed earlier indicated the four died of head and chest injuries.

A Southern Pacific spokesman, Tony Aleman, said that the railroad's investigation of the accident blamed it on human error.

Both Lay and Sam Riggins of Crosby, the other ambulance attendant, said they admired Muchow's strength and courage.

"The man was in good spirits considering the circumstances, because the man lying beside him was dead," Riggins said. "You know that's got to be pretty tough."

Muchow told Lay "he lost his radio in the crash so he was unable to call for help."

The conductor lay at the scene for an undetermined length of time before the wreck was discovered by railroad workers sent to move the parked boxcars.

The ambulance attendants said they were upset that they were not informed about leaking jet fuel at the scene, adding they learned about the leak from television news reports. Authorities said at the time that the leak posed no danger.

"We could have been killed," said Lay. "We brought in tools and equipment that could have made a spark. We were really lucky that everything turned out OK, but in fact it could have resulted in even more tragedy."

Riggins said the pair had questioned a railroad official "when we heard a sloshing-around noise," but the official told them "we had nothing to worry about because it was only bulk oil."

Residents of a nearby subdivision told the Sun a train comes through the area at 5:30 a.m. every morning.

"The train comes through here like clockwork every morning. I heard on the news that the area is used for assembling cars for cross-country transport, but I haven't seen any cars parked on the tracks for some time," said Mrs. Gary Robinson.

The accident was the second fatal train wreck in Texas in eight days

Motels' lead says music just illusion

By YARDENA ARAM
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — On stage and on recordings, the tall, statuesque Motels lead Martha Davis is the epitome of the pop music femme fatale.

But after 11 years in the business, Miss Davis is the first to admit that the rock 'n' roll life is pretty much an illusion.

"It's basically an hour and 30 minutes on stage — and all the preparation and anything it takes to go on there and do that — but that's pretty much what it is. And when you're up there, it's somebody else," she said.

The Motels are not called Martha Davis and the Motels because, she says, "I wanted to be recognized mostly for what I was doing in terms of the art form rather than just as a girl."

The image Miss Davis seems more comfortable with is that of working mother. A teen-age Air Force bride who is now in her mid-30s, she has two teen-age daughters. When she's not on the road or in the studio, a family evening around the barbecue or swimming pool brings her "back to earth," she says.

The Motels began putting out albums about four years ago, but success only came last year with producer Val Garay and LP No. 3, "All Four One," which produced the hit tunes, "Only the Lonely" and "Take the L (Out of Lover)."

The recently released follow-up album, "Little Robbers," promises to match, if not exceed, that success. A single, "Suddenly Last Summer," has already reached Billboard's Top 10.

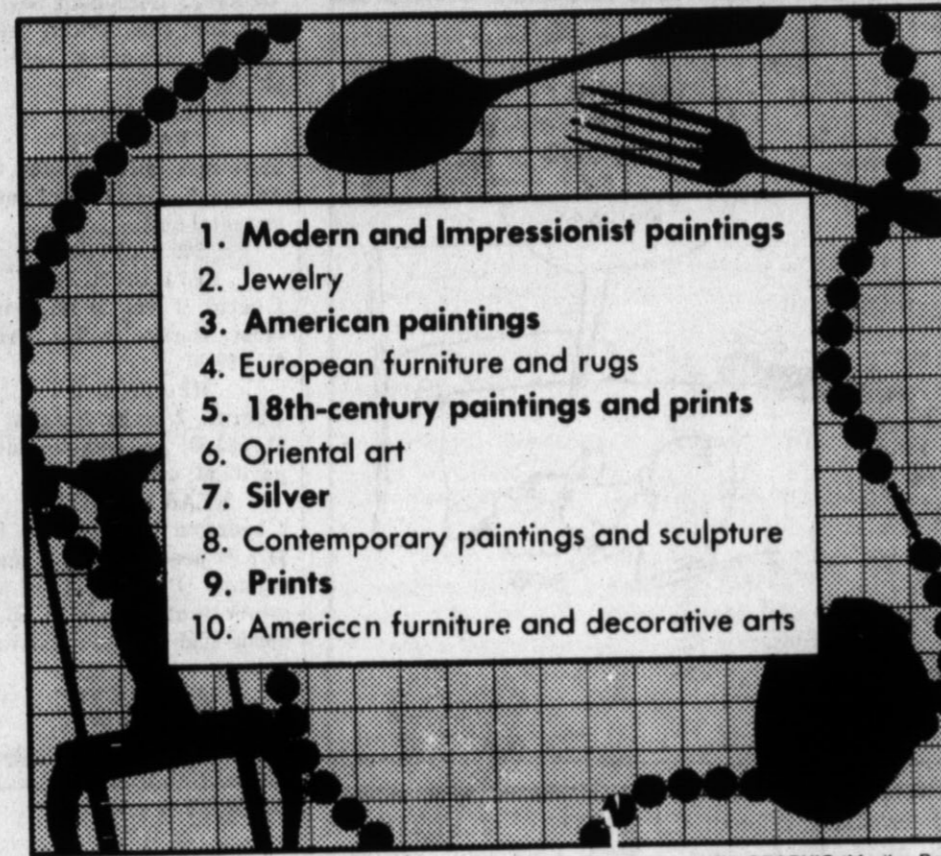

The Motels was a five-piece band when the first album was released, and now it has seven members.

But while band members Scott Thurston and Michael Goodroe co-wrote songs on "Little Robbers" — as did arranger Steve Goldstein and onetime Elton John partner Bernie Taupin — Miss Davis remains the creative mainspring.

"I've always been a very solitary writer," she said. "Just getting a song to the band is the hardest thing. I sweat over these babies. I throw away 10 to every one I bring in. They're like kids — you don't want 'em rejected."

Pole performs requiem

By MARY CAMPBELL AP
Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — To celebrate his 50th birthday, composer Krzysztof Penderecki conducted excerpts from his "Requiem," a work in progress.

"I know it's unusual to do a requiem for a 50th birthday," Penderecki says. "I laughed. But I'm working on this piece, since a long time. The first movement, 'Lacrimosa,' I wrote for Solidarity — for the dedication of the Gdansk monument for the killed workers three years ago."

"The second part, the 'Agnus Dei,' I wrote after the death of a very good friend, Cardinal Vishensky. He played an important political role in Poland. The requiem is connected with events in the last 40 years in Poland."

Penderecki (pronounced Pender-Etsky) was 50 on Nov. 23. The world-renowned cellist, Mstislav Rostropovich, gave him a party and played the American premiere of Penderecki's "Concerto No. 2 for Cello and Orchestra."

The composer conducted the National Symphony in Washington and was to have repeat concerts on Nov. 25-27. "This 50th birthday is only a calendar day for me," Penderecki says. "I have more plans than I ever had before."

He's started to conduct, which has caused a dilemma: Conducting consumes composing time.

"I think the best publicity I can get for my music is to conduct it," Penderecki says. "The audience is more interested in seeing a composer still alive conducting his own music."

Penderecki, who was born in Poland and lives there now, is his country's best-known composer. In 1959, he entered three pieces in a young composers' contest in Warsaw and won the three top prizes.

His "Anaklasis" was noticed in 1960, and his "Threnody to the Victims of Hiroshima" was acclaimed the next year and is frequently played. He has written two operas, "The Devils of Loudon," done in Hamburg and Santa Fe, and "Paradise Lost," done in Chicago and Milan.

He prefers composing big pieces. "I'm not a minimalist, not at all," he says. "I feel much better, safer even, having a large piece."

He usually composes in the early morning, when he says he has "a fresh mind to concentrate."

For six weeks, he does nothing but compose. "It is really a matter of concentration," he says. "Before, sometimes when traveling, even in hotel rooms, I composed. I don't think I can do it any more."

Ghost doubling as TV glamour queen

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ann Jillian was alone, carrying on an animated conversation all by herself.

She was on a stage that was completely barren except for a blue backdrop. Across the sound stage at NBC, John P. Navin Jr., her co-star in the new comedy series, "Jennifer Slept Here," carried on the other half of the conversation in the middle of a kitchen set.

On the television monitor, Miss Jillian — wearing a baseball shirt, red tights, leg warmers and a baseball cap perched sideways on her platinum hair — appeared to be in the kitchen with Navin. But she had the ability to "walk" through the walls or right through Navin.

It's all done by a video device called chromokey.

Miss Jillian plays a ghost in this new comedy series. She's the ghost of a glamorous movie queen who has returned to haunt her former mansion. Navin's family has just moved into her former home and he's the only one who can see her.

Besides her new series, Miss Jillian also stars in the movie, "Girls of the White Orchid," which NBC will telecast Monday. She plays a young woman who is brought to Japan with the promise she will be an entertainer. Instead, she is forced into prostitution.

Although she's only 33, Miss Jillian is an experienced trouper. She was born in Cambridge, Mass., to parents who had fled the Soviet occupation of Lithuania. She made her show business bow at the age of four in a local civic event. She moved with her family to Los Angeles and she made her movie debut at the age of 10 in Walt Disney's "Babes in Toyland." Then she was in "Gypsy" and became a semi-regular in the TV series, "Hazel."

She worked steadily until she became too tall to play teen-agers and too young to play leading ladies. After working in a department store, she returned to show business in 1971. While on tour in Chicago, she met and married Andy Murcia, a policeman who became her manager.

Only 4-foot-11

Dickens packet of power

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — He's still streaking onto stage like a thunderbolt, nearly swallowed by a huge cowboy hat and obscured by a giant guitar.

Little Jimmy Dickens is a 4-foot-11 package of power, flashing by in a $3,000 rhinestone suit, pumped up to 10 feet tall since reaching the ultimate goal in his profession — the Country Music Hall of Fame.

He's been sparking like his costume in the glow of his hard-earned achievement some 45 years after crowing like a rooster to help launch his career as a performer.

Despite changes in music spearheaded by Elvis Presley, the Beatles, protest singers, disco swingers and New Wave rockers, he's been as loyal to his style of music as his favorite guitar.

Dickens was chosen for induction during the nationally televised Country Music Association awards show in October. He tearfully walked to the stage of the Grand Ole Opry House and received a standing ovation.

"I still can't get over it," the exuberant 62-year-old singer-guitarist said in an interview. "I get torn up just thinking about it. I wasn't really expecting it."

Dickens had the show videotaped and he and his wife returned home from the ceremony and stayed up all night to watch.

"I get that same feeling every time I see it," Dickens said. "We watch it about every other day."

Dickens still makes about 130 appearances on the road every year and performing on the Opry an average of twice a month.

Dickens was born in Bolt, W.Va. Nicknamed "Tater" by Hank Williams, he began his entertainment career in radio and joined the Opry in 1948.

One of his first jobs was crowing like a rooster on a radio station in Beckley, W.Va., to begin the station's broadcast day.

"I wouldn't try it now," he said, laughing.

"I don't know if you would call it a job or not. I was not paid for it. I was just hanging around and they let me do that. I did it for a year or so, then eventually I worked my way to doing a song."

During his career, he recorded such hits as "May the Bird of Paradise Fly Up Your Nose," "A-Sleepin' at the Foot of the Bed," "Out Behind the Barn," "Country Boy" and "I'm Little But I'm Loud."

These were breezy novelty songs that made Dickens famous, especially "May the Bird of Paradise Fly Up Your Nose," which was a hit on the pop charts as well as the country charts.

The Newspaper BIBLE

A WHOLE CITY TURNED OUT... AND TURNED ON!

"Brothers! Listen! In this man Jesus, there is forgiveness for your sins! Everyone who trusts in Him is freed from all guilt and declared righteous - something the Jewish law could never do.

"Oh, be careful! Don't let the prophets' words apply to you! For they said, 'Look and perish, you despisers of the truth, for I am doing something in your day -- something that you won't believe when you hear it announced.'"

As the people left the synagogue that day, they asked Paul to return and speak to them again the next week. And many Jews and godly Gentiles who worshipped at the synagogue followed Paul and Barnabas down the street as the two men urged them to accept the mercies God was offering.

The following week almost the entire city turned out to hear them preach the Word of God. But when the Jewish leaders saw the crowds, they were jealous, and cursed and argued against whatever Paul said.

Then Paul and Barnabas spoke out boldly and declared, "It is necessary that this Good News from God should be given first to you Jews. But since you have rejected it, and shown yourselves unworthy of eternal life -- well, we will offer it to the Gentiles. For this is as the Lord commanded when He said, 'I have made you a light to the Gentiles, to lead them from the farthest corners of the earth to My Salvation.'"

When the Gentiles heard this, they were very glad and rejoiced in Paul's message; for as many as were ordained to eternal life, believed. So God's message spread all through that region.

POLLY'S POINTERS

Polly Fisher

Prints wash off plastic

DEAR POLLY - How should I remove fingermarks and other smudges from a Lucite cookbook holder? - MRS. K.W.A.

DEAR MRS. K.W.A. - The fingermarks and almost any grease or dirt should wash off easily with warm water and a mild detergent such as dishwashing liquid. If the marks prove more stubborn than that, try rubbing with a soft cloth dipped in rubbing alcohol. Don't use strong solvents. They could remove the shine from the plastic. - POLLY

DEAR POLLY - To keep jelly and jams from foaming while cooking, I put one-fourth teaspoon butter into the pot of jam or jelly while it's cooking. This eliminates the foam. - MARCELLA AND MARIE

DEAR POLLY - For a delicious sandwich filling, grind sausage meat such as Thuringer, summer sausage or bologna, then mix it with mayonnaise or salad dressing, a little ground onion and pickle relish. This can also be done with roast pork, beef, turkey or chicken. - MRS. N.G.

DEAR POLLY - Much has been said about that miracle worker baking soda. I would like to add my favorite uses. A damp cloth dipped in baking soda is perfect for cleaning such things as gold-plated jewelry, silver, India brass vases and white coffee mugs with brown stains. After cleaning with the soda, rinse and polish with a soft cloth. - RUDI

DEAR POLLY - If you have ceiling or porch light fixtures that are about to be discarded, save the globes to use as flower planters. These must be the bowl-type shade with a flat bottom. If the globes have a rounded or pointed bottom, they may be used as hanging planters in macrame holders. They can be painted to match any decor. - C.A.L.

Making fruitcake for the holidays? Looking for an elegant after-dinner treat? HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Regroton side effects

DEAR DR. LAMB - I read your column about the lady with frequent loose stools and wanted to tell you about my case. It may help others. I was under the care of a gastroenterologist for three years, going from bad to worse. He spoke of a need for surgery.

All tests were negative just as the other lady stated. Something told me to talk with my pharmacist to find out if there were any side effects from my blood pressure medication.

He called me shortly to tell me Reserpine, which is in the Regroton medicine I was taking, can cause diarrhea. I called my doctor and told him. He said he didn't know I was on that medication. But when he checked my chart he saw he had made a note of it on my first visit.

Anyway, I was put on a different blood pressure medicine, threw away all antacids and tranquilizers, gradually went back to a regular diet and in a month my bowels were regular and normal.

DEAR READER - Thank you for your story. It is true that Reserpine or serpassil can cause diarrhea. It doesn't in most patients but it can in some and you happened to be in the latter category. That is not the only medicine that can cause diarrhea. Surprisingly some patients who have chronic diarrhea are actually taking a laxative. It is always wise to review the medicines one is taking, including those the patient may be taking on his own, without a prescription.

There are, of course, many other causes for diarrhea as well. If a person has a basic cause or tendency for diarrhea, some medicines make it worse. I'm sending you The Health Letter 13-8, What You Need To Know About Diarrhea, for your future information. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB: What is considered a normal CBC red corpuscle count for a person 62 years of age? Mine was 48.6 and my doctor informs me that I have to give a pint of blood a month to get it down to 42, which he claims is normal.

I talked to another doctor and a lab technician and they informed me that 44 is normal and at my age 48.6 is OK. Also, can I donate blood to a blood bank? My son tells me to go to another doctor and get another opinion.

DEAR READER: You are probably asking about the hematocrit. That is the percentage of your blood volume that is red blood cells. In women, the normal range is said to be between 37 and 48. For men it is 45 to 52.

And it is not a very precise measurement. It can be affected even by how the blood sample is drawn, whether the needle is in the main stream of the blood flow or against the vessel wall.

While I would consider your value normal, if there were no other findings and if there were any doubt, the first step should be to repeat the test.

I see you are from Colorado and live at a higher altitude. Altitudes will increase your hematocrit; if that is the cause, the level should not be lowered.

Since your value is normal, you could give blood like any one else, but there is no requirement for it.
