As Sadat's Chosen Heir

Mubarak Assumes Control in Egypt

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) - Vice President Hosni Mubarak, a military hero who was President Anwar Sadat's political heir, took control of the Egyptian government after Sadat fell to assassins' bullets.

Mubarak declared a one-year state of emergency seven hours after Sadat was mortally wounded Tuesday by a squad of soldiers who sprayed gunfire and hurled grenades at a stand where Sadat, Mubarak and other leaders were reviewing a military parade commemorating the 1973 Arab-Israeli war.

"We will continue in the name of the spirit and soul of our leader and our constitution ... We will abide by all treaties and commitments made," Mubarak said in a broadcast to the shocked nation.

His statement signaled adherence to Sadat's peace treaty with Israel and his alliance with the United States.

Mubarak, 63, was unhurt in the attack that reportedly killed seven Egyptian officials and security men in addition to the 62-year-old president and wounded 27 men, including four Americans.

Army sources said the six assassins who leaped from a truck in the military parade were Egyptian artillerymen, a lieutenant and five enlisted men, with Moslem fundamentalist leanings. The semi-official newspaper Al Ahram reported police and troops killed one of the assassins and arrested four others, leaving one unaccounted for, but other papers published pictures of the bodies of two dead "traitors."

Leaders of Sadat's National Democratic Party met in emergency session and nominated Mubarak for a presidential election to be held within 60 days. He is expected to win by a landslide. Meanwhile, Parliament speaker Sufi Abu Taleb became acting president, but it was apparent that Mubarak had taken over the government.

A state funeral was scheduled Saturday. Former President Jimmy Carter, who helped forge the Camp David peace bond, said he would attend the funeral of his "dear friend." It was not immediately known which other leaders would be there. Cairo streets emptied after Mubarak announced the president's death. Armored cars with machine guns mounted them and police cars were stationed at major intersections, but there was no repetition of the massive outpouring of grief that followed the death of Sadat's predecessor, Gamal Abdel Nasser, who succumbed to a heart attack in 1970.

A Soviet-trained bomber pilot, Mubarak as the air force commander led the successful first strike on Israeli forces in the occupied Sinai Desert at the state of the 1973 war.

To almost everyone's surprise including his own, he was chosen by Sadat as vice president in April 1975. He was the president's right-hand man, diplomatic troubleshooter and political heir, visiting the United States only last weekend to convey to the Reagan administration Sadat's fears that a Libyan invasion of Sudan, his only major Arab ally, was impending.

Sadat had been under attack by dissidents at home and Moslem hardliners throughout the Arab world for his peace offensive toward Israel that led to the U.S.-sponsored Camp David agreement and the 1979 Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty.

Housing Panel To Visit Hereford

WASHINGTON (AP) - Members of a housing subcommittee visit three Texas migrant camps this week in their effort to learn more about the living conditions of farm workers.

The congressmen will visit Hereford and Dimmitt on the Texas High Plains, southwest of Amarillo, Thursday before going to San Antonio on Friday.

"Migrant farmworkers are the worst-housed people in America," said the subcommittee chairman, Rep. Henry Gonzalez, D-Texas, who participated in a visit last month to migrant quarters along the Maryland-Delaware-Virginia peninsula.

"We saw people living in housing that was worse than pitiful. It was like something you would expect to find in the developing countries of the Third World," Gonzalez said.

Despite the need, less than half the money available to develop farmworker housing is actually used, Gonzalez said.

"I want to find out why and how the federal government can improve housing programs for all rural Americans," he added. The visits are part of a nationwide investigation of housing conditions, the San Antonio Democrat said.

After touring migrant worker housing areas in San Antonio Friday morning, Gonzalez will convene an afternoon hearing on migrant housing development programs administered by the Farmers Home Administration.

The 2 p.m. hearing by the Housing and Community Development Subcommittee will be at the county commissioners' courtroom in the Bexar County Courthouse.

Gonzalez will hold a hearing Saturday morning on the condition of the housing industry in general. That hearing will be at the San Antonio Board of Realtors auditorium in San Antonio.

He will call on builders, suppliers, subcontractors, realtors and frustrated home buyers during the all-day Saturday session, Gonzalez said.

"We have unprecedented demand for new homes, and plenty of people who would be able to buy homes, if they could get loans at affordable rates," he added.

Home builders, building materials suppliers and realtors are all facing unprecedented problems despite the great demand in housing, Gonzalez said.

Housing starts this year are the lowest since 1946, he said.

Reagan's AWACS Appeal A Success

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan's personal appeal today to Senate Republicans to support his proposed sale of AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia appeared to be meeting with at least partial success.

Reagan summoned all 53 Senate Republicans to the White House to hear him out. Emerging from the meeting, majority whip Ted Stevens of Alaska, said several senators previously opposed to the $8.5 billion arms sale stood up "and said they would support the president."

Sen. Alan Simpson of Wyoming, said he would support the sale because he had been convinced it was "in the best interests of the United States and the best interests of Israel."

Simpson said Reagan did not mention the assassination Tuesday of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat. "The president is not using that in any form," Simpson told reporters.

But Stevens said Sadat's death and the bearing it might have on the AWACS sale was, indeed, a prime topic of discussion.

"Asked if he thought Reagan might be able to persuade a majority of the Senate to support him on the sale, Stevens said: 'I really don't know. I'm totally undecided' (See AWACS, Page 2)

The Rabbit Didn't Die

Mrs. Sheena Lynch of Alamogordo, N.M. had her journey to Forrestville, Conn. interrupted Tuesday afternoon when the trailer she was pulling overturned on Highway 60 just east of Dawn. One of three horses in the trailer had to be destroyed following the accident. Ms.

Lynch also had her two children, three dogs, three cats, and a rabbit with her on the trip, none of which were injured, although one of the cats could not be found when the debris was cleaned up. (Brand Photo by Bob Nigh).

For 'Friend of Peace'

Texans Express Sorrow

By The Associated Press
Texas politicians and religious leaders expressed shock and sorrow over the assassination of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, whom they described as a "friend of peace" and one of the "towering world figures of this generation." Texas Gov. Bill Clements said in El Paso that Sadat's death should be "worrisome to the whole world."

"I had a great, great respect for him. I thought he was one of the truly great statesmen of our time," said Clements. "He made an enormous contribution to that area (the Middle East) in trying to solve some of the historic problems there."

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, said he was "shocked and saddened" by the assassination and he called the slain Egyptian leader "one of the towering world figures of this generation."

"His courage, imagination and vision revitalized the peace process in the troubled Middle East. The world will miss the dynamic leadership of this magnificent statesman," Tower said. "President Sadat was a sincere friend of the United States and the American people."

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said Sadat was "one of two or three foreign leaders I most admired." "He was a friend of peace and of this country. His death is a tragedy for his family, for his country and for the civilized world," Bentsen said.

Houst Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, called Sadat "a man of singular vision and boldness."

"He had rare intellectual, moral and personal courage - physical courage as well," said Wright.

"I felt upset - terribly upset and deeply saddened. He's a warm and gracious person, a great and moving figure in the world," he added. Tower said Sadat's assassination makes initiatives toward peace in the Middle East even more critical.

Texas religious leaders said they grieved for the man who initiated the Egyptian-Israeli peace agreement.

"When a man of peace is removed by violence, everyone who loves peace is in pain. I am in pain," said Rabbi Gerald Klein of temple Emanue-el in Dallas. "What (See TEXAS, Page 2)

World Reactions Mixed After Sadat Assassination

By MICHAEL WEST
Associated Press Writer

Hardline Arab states rejoiced over the assassination of Egypt's President Anwar Sadat, while Western leaders mourned him as a peacemaker and warned the world "is a more dangerous place without him."

Initial reaction from most Soviet bloc countries contained no expression of regret. Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu, whose country has taken an independent stance on foreign policy, denounced the death of his "close friend" as a "criminal act."

The United States announced its rapid deployment force and warships in the Mediterranean and Middle East have been placed on alert.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin said he hoped the Israeli-Egyptian peace initiated by Sadat's historic visit to Jerusalem in 1977 would continue, "as President Sadat would have wanted with all his heart."

"I have lost not only a partner in the peace process, but a friend," Begin said.

At the United Nations, Israeli Ambassador Yehuda Z. Blum said he was encouraged by the pledge from Sadat's political heir, Vice President Hosni Mubarak, to honor the U.S.-sponsored peace treaty with Israel.

President Reagan called Sadat's assassination "cowardly infamy" and said: "America has lost a close friend, the world has lost a great statesman and mankind has lost a champion of peace."

Former President Jimmy Carter, who presided over the March 1979 signing of the Camp David accords, said:

"I don't know of anyone who has contributed more toward peace on earth in my lifetime, and perhaps this century, than has Anwar Sadat."

Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger predicted "a very difficult period" in the Middle East. British authorities agreed. "The world is a more dangerous place without him," a Foreign Office spokesman in London said.

Soviet television reported Sadat's assassination without comment. But Moscow Radio's international service quoted unidentified analysts as saying the shooting was a result of Egyptian discontent with Sadat's policies, "especially the peace treaty with the Israeli aggressor and military cooperation with the United States."

The Hereford Bull survived the Boston traffic. The National Newspaper Association convention and trade show was held in historic Boston this past week and we attended as a representative of the Texas Press Association.

Most gift shops in Boston display tee shirts with the imprint "I Survived Boston Traffic," and a tire tread mark is emblazoned under the printing. We quickly learned why the shirts are on sale. Bostonians seem to take a pride in their helter-skelter driving habits.

Boston is a great place to visit, but I sure wouldn't want to live there. That's a trite expression, but we've added Boston to the list. We hasten to add, however, that it is one of the more interesting and informative trips we've taken.

Theme of the convention was "Where it all Began"—an appropriate title since so much of our country's history can be traced to Boston.

We took two bus tours of Boston and the area, and the history of the place is overwhelming. We received a refresher course on the American Revolution as we toured Boston, Cambridge, Lexington, Concord, and the old North Bridge, where the shot was fired that was heard around the world. And, we learned that the battle of Bunker Hill actually took place on Breed's Hill.

In nearby Charlestown, we visited the USS Constitution, better known as Old Ironsides, then we went to Boston Harbor and joined other tourists in tossing a case of tea overboard as we relived the Boston Tea Party.

Light Shower Covers County

A light, steady shower dropped .35 of an inch of rain in Hereford during the afternoon and night Tuesday, bringing the October total to .95 of an inch. Yesterday's rainfall followed .59 of an inch, which fell in the area Saturday according to KPAN radio, the official weather reporting station for the city.

Other reports in the area showed comparable accumulations, with John Frank Martin near Walcott reporting .50 of an inch, and the H.L. Hersheys northeast of town reporting .40 of an inch.

Meanwhile, a flash flood watch continued in effect today for much of South Texas as heavy rains and thunderstorms continued in the area, delivering record precipitation and pushing streams over their banks.

More rainfall is expected today across North and West Texas according to the National Weather Service.

In San Antonio, four to seven inches of rain fell in a six-hour period Tuesday.

High temperatures across the state were expected to reach only the 60s and 70s, except for a few readings in the 80s in the far south and Big Bend region. The passage of a cold front from the Panhandle to coastal areas today lowered morning temperatures to the 50s and 60s in most areas.

Framing Admitted In Cocaine Charge

TYLER, Texas (AP) - A state judge has granted Kenneth Bora a new trial on deadly assault charges after a former narcotics officer who Bora allegedly shot admitted that he and his partner framed the former nightclub owner on a cocaine delivery charge.

Benjamin Creig Matthews and his wife and former partner Kimberly Ramsey Matthews pleaded guilty Tuesday to charges that they conspired to violate Bora's constitutional rights when they submitted false reports and gave false testimony to prosecute Bora on a drug charge.

U.S. District Judge William Steger, who heard the couple's plea, deferred sentencing pending a continuing investigation.

State District Judge Donald Carroll immediately granted Bora's request for a new trial and voided a conviction for deadly assault on Matthews. Bora had requested the new trial in August and was released from prison on his own recognizance after serving a year of a 20-year sentence.

Prosecutors are re-examining the cases against 97 defendants arrested in raids resulting from investigations by the two former Tyler police officers.

The couple has agreed to cooperate with federal authorities looking into possible federal criminal violations in the 1978-79 drug investigation.

U.S. Attorney Bob Wortham filed information charging that the pair submitted a police report on March 31, 1979 that falsely accused Bora of delivering cocaine.

Bora was arrested, indicted and tried twice on false testimony from the two agents, the information said. Both ended mistrials.

The pair testified before a federal grand jury investigating the matter after entering their pleas. Wortham said he expected more indictments to be issued.

Millionaires Likely To Oppose In Race

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - George Strake's entry into the lieutenant governor's race increases the possibility that the man Texans elect to the No. 2 spot next year will be a Houston millionaire.

Strake, an oil millionaire, on Tuesday said he had quit as secretary of state in order to seek the GOP nomination for lieutenant governor. If nominated - he probably will be unopposed - Strake would face incumbent Bill Hobby, millionaire president of the Houston Post.

"I'm going to mount a campaign unlike anyone has mounted for lieutenant governor. I don't need a poll to tell me I'm behind," Strake said, admitting his "name recognition" among voters might be low.

It will cost about $3 million to make the race, he said.

The former secretary of state quickly put Hobby on the defensive side Tuesday. Strake attacked Hobby's leadership qualities and said Hobby has been in office too long.

Hobby has been lieutenant governor since 1973. "I believe that is long enough for anyone to stay in the second most important political office in this government," according to Strake.

Weather, Engine Blamed In Crash

CLYDE, Texas (AP) - Officials say bad weather and engine problems may have contributed to the crash of a Cessna 210L that killed three men near this Northwest Texas town.

Callahan County Sheriff Bill Skinner said the three bodies were burned beyond recognition in the fiery crash. Skinner said cloudy skies and rain may have contributed to the crash. He said witnesses' reports also indicate the plane may have experienced engine problems.

Department of Public Safety spokesman Kelly Smith identified the dead as Jeff Alder, Forrest Cooper and Don T. Anderson, 47, all of Wenden, Ariz.

Smith said Anderson apparently was the pilot. The plane was en route from Stephenville to Arizona when it crashed about 10:15 a.m. in a field about 2 1/2 miles southeast of Clyde.

Smith said the three men were at a farming seminar Monday at the Texas A&M research center in Stephenville.

Witnesses told officials that the plane attempted to land on a flat grass field but pulled up, came around for a second time and crashed.

Egypt Quickly Sets Referendum Next Week

By STEVEN K. HINDY
Associated Press Writer

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) - Egypt moved quickly today to assure political continuity after President Anwar Sadat's assassination by scheduling the referendum on his successor for next week. Sources, meanwhile, blamed the murder on Moslem extremists.

Members of Egypt's Parliament met in emergency session, eulogizing Sadat and preparing to formalize the nomination of Vice President Hosni Mubarak to succeed him. The nomination, a foregone conclusion, meant Mubarak will be the only candidate in the referendum Tuesday.

Under the constitution the election to succeed Sadat was to be held within 60 days, and observers noted that the timing of the referendum falls within that period.

Meanwhile, police and military intelligence sources said Sadat's assassins were extremist Moslems, that they pumped 15 bullets into him, and that 22 Moslem fundamentalists were arrested after Sadat was murdered by men in army fatigues during a military parade Tuesday.

Officials said Sadat's body remained at Maadi military hospital and will not leave the hospital until the funeral Saturday in Nasr City, a northeast section of Cairo where Sadat was slain.

Although Parliament

Speaker Sufi Abu Taleb became acting president on Sadat's death, it was apparent that Mubarak already was in charge of the government.

Sadat's National Democratic Party nominated Mubarak as its candidate within hours of the assassination, and the parliament session was the next constitutional step in the election procedure.

Defense Minister Abdel-Halim Abu Ghazala, who was seated on Sadat's left at the military parade when Sadat was shot, was grim-faced and forcibly restrained himself as he spoke to Parliament in the televised session.

A parliamentary committee proposed giving two residences and a special pension to Sadat's family. The measure was expected to pass.

Mubarak declared a one-year state of emergency seven hours after Sadat was mortally wounded by a squad of soldiers who sprayed gunfire and hurled grenades at a stand where Sadat, Mubarak and other leaders reviewed the parade marking the 1973 war with Israel.

"We will continue in the name of the spirit and soul of our leader and our constitution. We will abide by all treaties and commitments made," Mubarak said in a broadcast to the nation.

His statement signaled adherence to Sadat's peace treaty with Israel and his alliance with the United States.

Mubarak, 53, was unhurt in the attack that reportedly killed five other Egyptians in addition to the 62-year-old president and wounded at least 29 men, including the chief of staff, four Americans, Belgian Ambassador Claude Ruelle, Japanese Ambassador Toshio Yamazaki and Irish Defense Minister James Tuohy.

There were unconfirmed reports that 10 other men on the reviewing stand were wounded.

Cameraman Feared Death In Shooting

NEW YORK (AP) - The ABC cameraman who shot graphic footage of the attack on Egyptian President Anwar Sadat says he feared for his life and hid from one of the assassins.

"I made eye contact with one of them and I was afraid he was going to shoot me," Fabrice Moussos, the Cairo-based cameraman, said today on ABC's "Good Morning America."

Moussos said he and his soundman ducked behind a wall and "I thought he would come around and shoot us."

When the shooting stopped, Moussos moved from his hiding place and began searching for Sadat at the reviewing stand. "The few seconds we hid behind the wall, security had taken Sadat away," he said.

Moussos took some fast footage of the bloody scene and left quickly before "security would confiscate the tape." ABC, CBS and NBC all showed Moussos' film Tuesday afternoon.

Moussos' first reaction to the shooting was that it was part of the parade. When he realized what was happening, he ran to the reviewing stand and saw the attackers holding weapons above their heads because of the height of the stand.

Moussos said he saw no resistance from Sadat's security.

Police Check Disturbance

Hereford police checked out a disturbance in the 100 block of Avenue E Tuesday night, however, no action was taken as neither party involved wanted to press charges.

Police say that the complaining party said, a group of friends in a van were stopped in the road by some other men in a truck. The parties in the truck got out and cut the van tires and shot the windows out. About $250 in damage was reported.

Police also checked out a disturbance at The Office Club, where a man was upset over some teasing and accusations by another man. The incident was settled without police action.

Don Brewer, 130 Avenue G, reported tires worth $150 were taken from the side of his house.

Police issued six citations.

Reactions

radio took a similar line.

Cuba, Moscow's Caribbean ally, condemned Sadat as a traitor to the "Arabian people and the Palestinian Liberation Organization." Havana Radio accused Sadat of aggression against such radical Arab states as Libya, which engaged in a border war with Egypt in 1977.

In the Libyan capital, Tripoli, crowds sang in the streets and waved flags and pictures of Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy, Sadat's loudest Arab foe.

U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig said the Libyan government may have known of the assassination plot although there was no clear evidence of foreign involvement. He said Radio Tripoli broadcast a "very intense and very voluminous" propaganda barrage within minutes of the attack urging the Egyptians to revolt.

Khadafy congratulated the assassins.

Initial newspaper reports of Sadat's death in the West questioned the future of the peace agreement with Israel.

At the center of concern was whether Sadat's replacement would continue the peace process or back off, choosing to strengthen Arab unity. Most papers predicted the latter course.

The Financial Times of London declared that the credibility of the Camp David framework was now "more than ever in doubt." Le Figaro of Paris predicted "immense risks for peace in the world."

South African Prime Minister P.W. Botha warned publicly that Sadat's death could upset "the delicate and fragile balance of power" in the Middle East.

The Irish Times, Ireland's most respected daily, called for "cool brains and steady nerves" by Western leaders to prevent an "uncontrollable" crisis.

The Algerian government was silent, but the newspaper El Moudjahid said "the probability is strong that we will see the Camp David accords definitively buried and Egypt joining the rest of the Arab countries committed to a just and global peace in the Middle East."

In Moslem West Beirut, Palestinian and Lebanese Moslem militiamen fired shots in the air and exploded sticks of dynamite to celebrate the assassination. A spokesman for the Palestine Liberation Organization offered to "shake the hand of him who pulled the trigger."

Syrians danced in the streets of Damascus, chanting, "The traitor is dead." PLO leader Yasser Arafat told a rally in the Syrian capital the assassination "proved that the Palestinian cause lives in the soul of this people who could not forgive the one who gave up Jerusalem."

Moderate Arab governments were restrained and voiced concern about Middle East stability.

"I am a Moslem. He is a Moslem," Tunisian Foreign Minister Beji Caid Essebi said at United Nations headquarters in New York. "Even if we do not have the same appreciation of the problem, we pray for him."

Morocco's U.N. Ambassador Mehdi Mrani Zentar said: "We must find a way of stopping it (terrorism)."

The Sudanese government, Sadat's only major Arab ally, ordered 40 days of mourning.

In Melbourne, Australia, the 42 heads of government attending the Commonwealth conference stood in silent tribute to Sadat. In a joint statement they expressed "horror at such acts of outrage" and called for "a determined effort on all sides to preserve peace and resolve problems in the Middle East."

Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser of Australia said the assassination was a "serious blow to the continuance of Middle East peace prospects." Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Britain said Sadat "made an unsurpassed contribution to world peace." She described Mubarak as "very able and experienced."

The U.N. General Assembly paid homage to Sadat by standing in silence for one minute. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim called Sadat "a leader of vision and boldness." But the ceremony was boycotted by Iraq, Iran, Lebanon, Algeria, the United Arab Emirates, Mauritania, the PLO, the Arab League and the Islamic Conference.

Pope John Paul II issued a special prayer for Sadat in a telegram to Cairo condemning the assassination as "this vile, violent act."

"I pray to omnipotent God that He will want to give peace to this man of peace and carry to completion his noble vision of reconciliation among peoples," the pope said.

Sadat was on a crowded reviewing stand taking the salutes of the cream of Egypt's armed forces when the assassins struck shortly after 1 p.m. The soldiers began firing at the stand as their open truck, towing an artillery piece, rolled by it.

Mubarak

Sadat's death is likely to spur a new period of turmoil in the Middle East. It could embolden Col. Moammar Khadafy, Libya's mercurial ruler and arch foe of Sadat, who reportedly has financed a host of leftist terrorist movements and sent his army into Chad.

The Libyan leader, who campaigned for Sadat's ouster, congratulated the soldiers who fired the fatal shots and called on Egypt's armed forces to take power and reverse Sadat's foreign policy, Libya's official JANA news agency said.

Syrians danced in the streets of Damascus, chanting, "The traitor is dead." In Moslem West Beirut, Palestinian and Lebanese Moslem militiamen fired shots in the air and exploded sticks of dynamite to express their joy. But the Sudanese government, Sadat's only major ally in the Arab world, declared 40 days of mourning.

In Jerusalem, Prime Minister Menachem Begin, who shared the 1979 Nobel Peace Prize with Sadat, mourned the loss of a "peace partner" and "a friend." He said he hoped the peace process would continue "as President Sadat would have wanted with all his heart."

In keeping with the historic nature of the convention site, the press association's program turned to the foundations of the American press and the qualities that have sustained it. The opening session focused on standards of editorial excellence with Hodding Carter, former State Department spokesman, as speaker.

Other programs included topics on the future of the communications industry, training and supervising newspaper staffs, how to handle stress in the midst of deadlines, and the selling of retail advertising. The trade show displayed much of the modern equipment being used by newspapers.

The Rev. W.A. Criswell, pastor of Dallas' huge First Baptist Church, called the assassination "one of the greatest tragedies of our modern generation."

"Only the evil mind and heart of Russia and her terrible allies could delight in the assassination of Sadat," said Criswell. "He certainly will be remembered in our prayers," said Rabbi Samuel E. Karff of Temple Beth Israel in Houston. "We could not ignore this reality or fail to express our deepest regret, our sincere grief and our hope," Karff said.

He called Sadat "a remarkable man whose place in history is secure." Sadat visited Texas in 1975, traveling to Houston to ask businessmen to invest in Egypt.

He was honored at a Texas Welcome Party that included a mock Old West-style shootout.

Secret service agents advised against staging the mock shootout, but Sadat, who reportedly was fond of western movies, said he wanted to see it.

myself."

An administration spokesman said Tuesday the assassination "increases the urgency" of the sale.

The first Capitol Hill test of the president's proposal, meanwhile, was virtually certain to end in rejection later today by the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

The panel, with 24 of 37 members co-sponsoring a resolution to veto the $8.5 billion Saudi arms package, put off its vote for one day Tuesday at President Reagan's request because of Sadat's assassination.

Reagan, meanwhile, switched one Senate vote but failed to sway two others and called all 53 Senate Republicans to the White House today to hear his personal appeal for the sale of five Airborne Warning and Control System planes and enhanced weaponry for 62 Saudi F-15 jet fighters.

Senate Republican leader Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee and Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia called Tuesday for a slowdown on congressional action on the sale to avoid a misstep in the Middle East while the impact of Sadat's assassination is assessed.

But that idea was quickly dismissed by chief White House spokesman David Gergen.

"In the president's view, this tragedy in no way lessens the urgency of the sale," Gergen said. "It increases the urgency."

Gergen refused to explain that reasoning, saying, "We do not believe that today, a ment that intelligence officials report suspected criminal violations by their employees to the Justice Department.

The requirements for scrutiny by outside officials were designed to prevent recurrence of past abuses of powers by U.S. intelligence agencies, which were uncovered by a Senate committee in the mid-1970s. The requirements were imposed in an order by President Carter in January 1978.

The draft order is the Reagan administration's third effort to produce a replacement for the Carter order. The administration sought congressional comment, but Reagan can put the order in effect on his own.

Some sources expressed concern over how much information the president would receive about planned covert actions under the Reagan proposal.

Covert action is the CIA day of tragedy, is the proper occasion to enter into a full-scale debate about the implication of that deal for the sale.

"The president plans to go forward with the sale," he said.

The full House is expected to veto the sale Oct. 13, but the Senate vote later this month is considered too close to call. A veto would require rejection by both houses by Oct. 31.

Byrd said before Sadat's assassination that Congress is in danger of unsettling Middle East stability either way it votes on AWACS. After Sadat was killed Tuesday, Byrd urged the Senate to "take a step back...until we see how things fall into place."

Baker said he doubts the assassination will affect the sale but agreed with Byrd that "we should place a moratorium on worrying about it" until the effect of the Sadat slaying on Middle East stability becomes clearer.

Reagan, however, put no moratorium on his drive to pick up Senate votes.

The president called in Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, Tuesday morning, and Hatch announced after the meeting: "If ever there was a time to support the president, that time is now. So I'm going to reverse my vote on AWACS...We have to have the safeguards this deployment makes."

That made him the first of 50 co-sponsors of a Senate veto resolution to switch in favor of the sale.

JULIA N. HELMS

Julia N. Helms believes her reward for teaching is watching students become successful in their careers. "As a vocational instructor, I believe that students should be prepared to enter the working world," she says. "They should be able to cope with the day to day problems of a working situation more easily than if they had not had specialized training. We must endeavor to emphasize the importance of how to communicate, work and get along with others."

Mrs. Helms, a coordinated vocational academic education teacher has been practicing that philosophy for three years at Hereford High. She also sponsors the school's Vocational Office Careers Club.

She received her B.S.O.E. degree from Wayland Baptist College in 1981 and her vocational certification from WBC and North Texas State. She attended high school in Paducah, Ky.

Blouses Are Vital To Any Wardrobe

By Florence De Santis

NEW YORK (NEA) — A quality jacket and skirt costume can take a chunk of the wardrobe budget this fall. But blouses turn those basics into an all-occasion wardrobe, at lower prices.

Start with a white tailored shirt. This fall it has full, cuffed sleeves and such detailing as an ascot, front tucking or a satin ribbon bow tie. It's a business look, but you can also get a colored silk shirt with some discreet ruffling, such as the Princess Diana neckline, for office days when you're going out afterward.

Ship 'n Shore's fall blouse collection includes such romantic looks as embroidered and peasant-style blouses to dress up a skirt. Perfect for softly-tailored pants, there is a Western blouse in green and beige plaid soft cotton, with ruffled bib yoke and self string tie at the club collar.

For elegant party occasions LeVino Verna provides a whole group of cream-color or poly georgette blouses in lavishly tucked, ruffled and lace-trimmed Victorian styles.

Leather Looks for Fall

Go Sporty or Dressy

By Florence De Santis

NEW YORK (NEA) — Leather designers like Samuel Robert specialize in the material because it takes expert knowledge to work leather.

In the fashion picture, leather is no longer relegated to sportswear.

In the Robert fall collection, a snakeskin cardigan and cummerbund, pearlized and painted in pastel hues, goes with a soft satin skirt and petal-necked blouse.

Only slightly less dressy is the snakeskin jacket in dusty rose tinting with a Coffee PREVENTS Cancer?

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Several months ago there were Page one stories and a lot of chatter on the evening news to the effect coffee caused cancer of the pancreas. The study was made at Harvard, no less. Although the results were inconclusive, a lot of people were scared off coffee. The same study went on to say the decaffeinated variety was even more dangerous.

After that story appeared, you wrote a column saying it was a lot of baloney—the same kind of foolishness that frightened people off saccharin and cranberries. You also blasted the misleading experiments that gave the impression hair dye could cause cancer.

Apparently you were right on, Ann. Now hear this: Researchers at the University of Minnesota Medical School recently announced experiments that proved heavy use of the coffee bean actually PREVENTS the growth of tumors in animals.

At a meeting of the American Chemical Society in New York, Dr. Luke K.L. Lam said it was too early to tell whether coffee prevents the growth of tumors in humans, but the rats that were fed large amounts of green coffee beans developed fewer than half as many tumors as the rats that WEREN'T fed coffee beans after both groups were injected with a potent carcinogen. So—first we are told coffee causes cancer and now we read it prevents cancer!

Why aren't all studies kept out of the media until there is conclusive evidence? Cancer is the most frightening word in the English language.

When it is linked with a product, people become emotional and, for no good reason, a whole industry can be ruined.

Thanks for helping us sort things out. Your column is more than advice to the lovelorn. It's the best source of legitimate information for millions of people.—Long-Time Reader In Washington, D.C.

DEAR D.C.: You can count on me to keep my ear to the ground and my fingers on the keyboard of the typewriter. I serve on no commercial boards and have no axes to grind. My sole obligation is to my readers.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Twenty-four years ago, when we were very young, our married life together was going badly! (My fault.) My wife became pregnant and gave birth to our second son. On the basis of absolutely undeniable fact, I knew the child was not mine.

Perhaps out of a sense of guilt, or my deep love for her, I never brought the matter up. The boy is now tall and handsome and has filled our lives with joy. He does not in any way resemble his brothers or sisters.

Recently, on the way home from a party, my wife (who had had an extra glass of wine) said too much. Suddenly the terrible hurt I had all but forgotten came back.

She is unaware of her "slip" and now, after all these years of happiness, I am tempted to discuss the matter with her openly for the first time.

I'm not thinking of divorce or recrimination. I love my wife more than ever, but I wonder if this one "lie" between us should now be confessed and forgiven, or would it tear us apart?—Hurt And Holding

DEAR H&H: Wait for a quiet moment. Ask your wife if there is something about the past she'd like to discuss. If she volunteers the information—fine. Otherwise, leave it alone. If it ain't broke, don't fix it.

Inflation
If you think U.S. inflation is bad, consider Germany in 1923. Early that summer, a hotel room cost 375,000 marks a day and a ride on the street car 5,000 marks. Three weeks later, the same room cost 18 million marks and the street car ride 60,000 marks. Store prices were determined day by day by multiplying the basic price by a constantly rising index.

Attendance Declining At Presidential Archives

BOSTON (AP) — After a summer of worried headcounting, the 2-year-old John F. Kennedy Library will welcome visitor No. 1 million through the turnstile this month. The reason for concern was a steep decline in attendance.

Officials at the prestigious archives claim the decrease was inevitable after the excitement of the first 12 months, starting Oct. 21, 1979. But the dip was sharp — and part of a trend at all six presidential libraries, which house official memos and correspondence and serve as museums of political memorabilia.

The federal government, which manages the facilities, is well aware of the attendance problem — even amid fanfare for the opening of Gerald Ford's non-library museum in Grand Rapids, Mich., last month and even as Richard Nixon lobbies hard to win a home for his personal papers at Duke University.

"We're not in the business of promoting presidential libraries. We just make them available. But our concern comes from loss of revenue," says John Fawcett, supervisory archivist of the General Services Administration's office of presidential libraries in Washington.

The presidential libraries have all sprouted in just the past 40 years. The archives are available for research and are not connected with such popular tourist attractions as the Lincoln Memorial or Washington Monument. But visitors are attracted to the displays of presidential keepsakes.

They pay admission fees of 50 cents to 75 cents. But a substantial decline in attendance costs the federal government money and raises questions about a general lack of interest in presidential memorabilia.

Attendance hit a peak for the nation's Bicentennial. Since then, Fawcett notes that declines have been based on "changing vacation patterns."

A newspaper story last spring about attendance slipping at the JFK Library upset officials there. Library director Dan Fenn said a 20 percent decrease from the opening year to the second was expected. "Then," he said, "you climb back."

The library and museum attracted almost 600,000 visitors in 1979-80. But 1980-81 attendance may be just 400,000 despite a summer rush, according to Frank Rigg, director of visitor services.

Elsewhere, the free-admission Lyndon Johnson library on state college property in Austin, Texas, had an attendance decline from 802,115 to 446,062 from 1978 to 1980, according to the GSA.

In the same two years, attendance at the Herbert Hoover library in West Branch, Iowa, went from 95,418 to 65,606; at the Franklin Roosevelt library in Hyde Park, N.Y., from 276,865 to 241,459; at the Harry S. Truman library in Independence, Mo., from 264,714 to 201,639; and at the Dwight Eisenhower library in Abilene, Kan., from 170,172 to 143,910.

The 1981 figures — possibly affected by stable gasoline prices encouraging vacation travel — are not yet available.

Presidential libraries and museums are a 20th century development. Until FDR, Fawcett says, presidential papers "went to private sources or members of the family."

"They were sold for autograph purposes, and valuable documents were continually destroyed by accident," Fawcett says. "Some papers were kept in Washington, but preservation was uneven. Papers weren't generally available to the public until years after an administration left office."

The Roosevelt Library was established in 1939 — making it the oldest — but it wasn't open to the public until 1946. The Hoover library didn't open until 1962.

Initiated by family and friends of each president, and built with private donations, the buildings are turned over to the GSA for management. The $12 million for the Kennedy archives building was raised from contributions made mainly in the three years after his assassination.

Perched on a quiet ledge overlooking Boston Harbor, the library-museum is a haven for researchers and nostalgia seekers.

The late president's sailboat rests on a bed of Cape Cod dune grass outside. Inside, political memorabilia fill display cases.

To lure visitors off the nearby expressway and keep turnstiles spinning, the museum offers a variety of educational and cultural programs.

Fenn says the library-museum "seeks to give people a sense of (Kennedy's) times." He predicts a gradual revival of interest in other presidential libraries, especially the papers of Hoover, whose conservative banner is now carried by Ronald Reagan.

Johnson And Reagan Have Sampled Fare

Albany Cowboy Cooks For Presidents

By Bill Thompson

ALBANY, Texas (NEA) — Cliff Teinert is a man skilled with horses and ropes and longhorn cattle.

He knows his way around the oil business, too. But it is his skill as a genuine cowboy cook that took him to Camp David earlier this year to prepare some of his famous fare for the presidents of two countries — Ronald Reagan of the United States and Jose Lopez Portillo of Mexico.

The tall, easy-going Teinert, 40, has lived most of his adult life in and around Albany, a small ranch town about 35 miles northeast of Abilene.

He and his wife, Sunona, raise longhorn cattle on their ranch. In addition, he and partner Don Koch operate an oil lease business.

A thoroughly modern man, Teinert is steeped in the mystique of the old-time cowboy — not necessarily the cowboy of movies and books but the real thing, like the men who worked and lived on the nearby Pitchfork and 6666 ranches.

Teinert, who is well-known in his part of Texas as a fine cowboy cook, was surprised when he received a call from the White House asking if he would cook for Reagan and Lopez Portillo.

"I had cooked for Lyndon Johnson when he visited friends up here and then went down to his ranch twice after he died to cook at fund-raising events hosted by his widow," Teinert said.

"Well, you can't turn people down," he grinned, "and when your president needs you to cook for him, you go."

So, he bought 75 pounds of prime beef in Abilene, packed up his cast iron Dutch ovens and other utensils and air freighted several hundred pounds of mesquite wood to Camp David. Then he and Sunona took off for Washington and the June 8 dinner.

"I was cooking for 70 people," recalled Teinert. "Camp David isn't exactly the barbecue capital of the country, so I had to improvise a little to fix up a pit barbecue operation. I was a little nervous."

"I served them 15-ounce sirloin strips. The White House staff did the rest of the cooking, and I guess everyone must have liked it because some of them came back for more, especially Vice President George Bush, who has lived in Texas and knows our food.

"Both presidents were very gracious and seemed to be enjoying themselves. I spoke to them both and then saw them riding horseback and they seemed to be very relaxed."

What is the secret of Teinert's success?

"I pay attention to detail and do it the old-timey way," he said as he fixed sourdough biscuits.

The Teinerts and their 17-year-old son live in an old rambling white house in the middle of Albany.

Out behind are horse pens, a neat garden and lots of old trees and green grass.

They have converted a large old shack that once housed a wooden tower with a water tank on top into a cookhouse and party room.

"We just left the old tower inside and roofed it over, and then I built all this stuff," Teinert said, showing off a big walled pit in which he burns mesquite wood down to blazing coals, an old-time meat chopping block and his precious cast iron Dutch ovens and skillets.

A big stack of mesquite is piled inside the three-sided building, which faces the yard. Rough-hewn tables and chairs and a stereo system with lots of country-music tapes complete the party room.

The family was getting ready for the first night's performance of the famed Albany Fandangle, an annual outdoor pageant, but Teinert thought he could take off a little time to "fix something."

What he fixed were sourdough biscuits, lovingly prepared and baked in a Dutch oven nestled in a bed of mesquite coals with more glowing embers heaped on top of the lid, and some fine German sausage that he dropped on the grill.

"One time back when my wife and I were in the catering business, we cooked at a big festival in San Antonio," Teinert said. "There were so many people that we started taking the little bits and pieces of barbecue left over, chopped it up and then put that and a sourdough biscuit and some hot pinto beans into a big cup and just sold it as a cowboy special."

He learned to make sourdough breads and biscuits from an old cowboy cook who ran the chuckwagon on the Pitchfork Ranch.

He and Sunona kind of drifted into the catering business.

"Folks used to come out to the ranch and we cooked for them," he said. "Then people asked us to cater parties and we worked at it full time for several years."

Later that night, as friends and neighbors sat around the dying embers of the mesquite fire and ate the remnants of biscuits, barbecued beef and watermelon, Teinert was asked the all-important question: "Do you cook beans in your chili?"

The party room became deathly quiet. Teinert straightened and replied: "Of course not. I might put a few in after I cook the chili, but I would never cook chili with beans."

Book Reveals Nosy Tidbits

Is This Really Anybody's Business?

By David Handler

NEW YORK — Hans Christian Andersen died a virgin... Eva Peron once had an affair with Aristotle Onassis... Milton Berle with Aimee Semple McPherson... Philosopher Friedrich Nietzsche had sex with his sister, Albert Einstein with a cousin... Mahatma Gandhi foreswore sex altogether but tested his resolve by sleeping with naked young girls...

Getting interested? These rather personal disclosures are just a few of the several hundred nosy tidbits that make up "The Intimate Sex Lives of Famous People," the newest pop reference tome by the Wallace clan — Irving, Sylvia and their children Amy Wallace and David Wallechinsky.

One of this summer's can't miss bestsellers, "The Intimate Sex Lives of Famous People" may even top the Wallaces' previous boffo fact books: "The People's Almanac" (volumes one and two) and "The Book of Lists" (volumes one and two).

In all, 207 of history's most famous folks are given the keyhole profile treatment, and if a more prodigious volume of naughty cocktail party chatter has ever been produced, you've got yourself a scoop.

Fans of sleazy Hollywood memoirs may already be familiar with the bedroom exploits of some of those included here, such as Joan Crawford, Errol Flynn and Charlie Chaplin. But what makes "The Intimate Sex Lives of Famous People" unusual is that it tackles the sex lives of people who, well, you never thought of before as having sex lives — from Bertrand Russell to Louis Pasteur, from Henry Ward Beecher to Benito

Mussolini. "We definitely made an attempt to go for people you never connected with sex before," says David Wallechinsky, 32. "We were curious ourselves, and we wanted to make human beings out of these historic characters we've studied in school and heard so much about. To understand Picasso's paintings, for example, it helps to understand his life."

Yeah, but is this really anybody's business? In jumps sister Amy, 26: "In school so many of these figures are just cardboard characters. But none of us are cardboard."

David says the source material was a lot more available than you'd think. "Conventional biographers have simply avoided much of this material," he says. "It's a taboo subject and, frequently, academic biographers have a pet person who means so much to them — they tend to get protective of that person. It's not just sex that is left out. Very often politics is omitted, too. For instance, Helen Keller was an active socialist, but not many people know that because it doesn't fit her image."

Not that it was a breeze to dig up the dirt on, say, Tolstol or Brahm or Louis XV. The Wallaces were out a full-time staff of 15 researchers. Once the research was completed a platoon of free-lance writers then penned the profiles. The Wallaces edited, re-wrote and narrowed the total down from more than 300. Not that they heaved the extras in the trash — David fully expects they will be putting together a second volume in the near future.

Some basic patterns emerged from profession to profession. "Actors and actresses have more active sex lives than most people," says David, "because they have more opportunities, and because it is expected of them. Artists tend to have fiery, explosive love lives. Scientists are strictly work first, sex second. Politicians are a lot like actors, but they have to do it away from public scrutiny. When Harding was running for president he used campaign funds to send his mistress on a trip around the world."

Yeah, but is this really anybody's business?

"Sex is universal," replies Amy. "As far as we're concerned there's nothing unhealthy about the subject. In fact, we think the more it is talked about the healthier it is."

"People feel a kinship with celebrities," says David of America's consuming passion for gossip about the famous. "I don't think it's so terrible."

The book is very explicit. Just in case it might fall into young or delicate hands the Wallaces decided to clearly label it "Sex Lives."

"Those who will be offended by its content are forewarned," explains David.

"My Favorite Memory" is the title of Merle Haggard's debut single effort for Epic Records. The self-written song precedes Merle's October album release Big City, which was co-produced by Merle and friend Lewis Talley. Merle's wife, Leona, as well as his band, The Strangers, are featured throughout the album.

Merle Haggard

The September issue of Esquire magazine features a "Personality Profile" on Merle. The December issue of Penthouse will be featuring excerpts from Merle's forthcoming book, Send Me Back Home, published by Times Book Company.

Merle has been hospitalized recently in Bakersfield, California, undergoing tests, and reportedly suffering from exhaustion.

If you remember the pilot of "Nashville Palace" some months ago, you might be pleased to know that it will become a six program series. The show has begun taping at The Roy Acuff Theatre at Opryland, and the first show will air October 24 on NBC.

Janie Fricke's latest album cut single, "I Need Someone to Hold Me When I Cry," is proving that pure country still sells. Columbia Records is readying for the release of Janie's fifth album for the label, and her first for 1981, Sleeping With Your Memory, set for release within the next few weeks.

Her new album includes guest appearances by Larry and Steve Gartin who join Janie on Larry's

"The Heart," and Ricky Skaggs, who not only provides background vocals on such selections as Barry and Robin Gibb's "Love Me," Paul Simon's "Homeward Bound" and "Don't Worry About Me Baby," but also lends his fiddle, mandolin and banjo talents to most of the tracks.

Janie's first time collaboration with Jim Ed Norman for her fourth album, I Need Someone to Hold Me When I Cry, broke Janie from top 20 single successes into the top five country ranks. Among Janie's recent TV tapings are "Dance Fever" and "The Merv Griffin Show."

Did you know that Loretta Lynn and Dolly Parton are among the 72 nominees for Good Housekeeping magazine's "Most Admired Women" award?

Terri Gibbs

The finalists in this year's Country Music Association's "Female Vocalist of the Year" are Terri Gibbs, Emmylou Harris, Loretta Lynn, Barbara Mandrell and Anne Murray. The winner will be announced during the live Kraft Foods sponsored broadcast from the Grand Ole Opry House on October 12.

Loretta has long been an established country act, hanging with the more traditional country sound, while Anne Murray, Emmylou Harris and Barbara Mandrell are appealing to both the pop and country music segments. Terri Gibbs is the newest member of the magic circle of nominees.

Dairies Want Compromise, Not Price Freeze

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some dairy interests, fearing the House may vote to effectively freeze dairy price supports for years to come, are pushing a compromise they say will solve the problems plaguing the dairy program now.

"I recognize the necessity to send a signal to our dairy farmers throughout the country that we do indeed have to slow down the rate of growth in production of milk and milk products in this country," says Rep. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, chairman of the House Agriculture subcommittee on dairy.

The battle over dairy price supports is expected to be one of the hottest disputes when the House takes up the new four-year package of commodity supports Wednesday. It was Harkin's subcommittee that last spring successfully defied the Reagan administration's call for major cuts in dairy supports and convinced the full Agriculture Committee to maintain supports at 75 percent of parity, where they have been most of the last three decades. That is three-fourths of the price that would give farmers the same spending power they had in 1910-14.

The committee decision, pushing the 1982 cost of dairy supports more than $500 million over the budget allocation, came amid repeated indications that support levels of the past four years — set at 80 percent of parity — were still encouraging excessive milk production while consumption has been decreasing.

The result was soaring government expenditures and substantial accumulation of milk productions to maintain dairy prices, making the program a prime budget-cutting target for President Reagan. As of Aug. 1, the government-owned dairy inventory totaled 14 billion pounds with price-support costs expected to run around $2 billion this year.

When the situation failed to change even after dairy producers were denied a support increase in April, the Senate finally voted for the price-support program Reagan wanted. That program would freeze supports at the October 1980 level of $13.10 per hundred pounds until the cost of the program drops below $750 million a year, probably not before 1984. There has been an increasing likelihood that the House would follow suit.

To head off adoption of what Harkin called "the first step in the total abolition of the total dairy price-support program in this country," Rep. Berkley Bedell, D-Iowa, has come up with the compromise plan. It would bring program costs within an acceptable range of about $1.1 billion.

The proposal freezes the milk support at the old $13.10 level for the next year just as the Senate bill does. But while the Senate plan keeps supports at that level as long as the government cost is $750 million or more, the Bedell proposal requires an increase next Oct. 1, probably of 2 percent to 3 percent, no matter what the dairy outlook is. In subsequent years the support level can be lowered if government milk stocks exceed 3.5 billion pounds.

"That is the most reasonable way out of the predicament we find ourselves in today," Harkin said. "It will be a reasonable solution to this problem, not the gutting action that was taken by the Senate."

Harkin and others tried to win support for the compromise last week by dropping their opposition to a bill rolling back a 3 percent increase in milk prices that is temporarily in effect until the new farm bill is approved.

The emergency legislation passed the House easily but stalled in the Senate.

Bedell's compromise will automatically become part of the farm bill when the House takes it up, but attacks on it are expected, some cutting supports more severely than the Senate plan.

Water Source Alternatives Being Studied By High Plains Farmers

LUBBOCK — Energy costs involved in pumping water as well as the depletion of the Ogallala Aquifer may have High Plains farmers looking for alternatives to irrigated agriculture.

A three-year research project, headed by a Texas Tech University range and wildlife doctoral candidate, Kay Marietta of Crockett, could provide farmers with that alternative.

"Irrigated agriculture on the High Plains is becoming very expensive," Marietta said. "We want to provide an economic alternative land use to dryland farming by establishing permanent pastures."

On three experimental plots at Brownfield, Lubbock and the Montgomery Ranch at Post, Marietta has seeded even species of grass on three different sandy soils to determine which species is most viable on the High Plains.

"What we hope to do is suggest which species work best, when to plant and how to manage them for livestock production," she said.

Of the grasses, five are induced species. The native grasses, sideoats grama and switchgrass, are improved selections which are commercially available.

The introduced grasses Marietta is working with includes four bluestems from Asia and Russia and one weeping lovegrass variety, a species native to South Africa.

Each plot was seeded in May. Grasses at Brownfield and Lubbock are in excellent condition because of the amount of moisture those areas received this year, she said.

"This has been an excellent year for establishing good stands of grass. They could be ready for grazing next year," Marietta said.

The grasses, in general, are being tested for the length of time it takes them to grow for grazing purposes, protein yield levels, manageability and, eventually, what type of grazing scheme might work best.

When completed, Marietta hopes to suggest the grass which takes a limited amount of care and will be able to produce well just on rainfall.

Preliminary reports on Marietta's research should be completed by December.

"Since this year has been so wet it could make a difference in those results," she said. Similar plots will be seeded during the spring of 1982 to test the 12-month weather effects on the grasses.

Dr. Carlton Britton, major professor for Marietta's doctorate degree, said the pasture research will give Texas Tech the answers it needs when High Plains farmers start looking for alternatives to irrigated crops.

"We'll be able to suggest grasses when the farmers are unable to afford gas and water and want to know what they can put on their land," Britton said.

Permanent pasture grasses can help stabilize the soil and provide a perennial forage for livestock grazing.

"We want to be ahead of the event when a large portion of the southern High Plains may not be irrigated," he said. In addition to Marietta's work, Bob Masters, range and wildlife graduate student from El Paso, is pursuing water use efficiency of bluestem and weeping lovegrass varieties.

COLLEGE STATION — A new sugar substitute — aspartame — is expected to be on the market in about six months.

Aspartame, to be marketed under the tradename "Equal" by G.D. Searle Co., was approved recently by the Food and Drug Administration.

The new product is made up mainly of two amino acids, phenylalanine and aspartic acid, points out Al Wagner, food technologist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. These, along with other amino acids, are the normal building blocks of protein in foods consumed as part of any healthy diet.

Phenylalanine and aspartic acid combined in a certain manner produce an intensely sweet-tasting substance called aspartame that is about 180 times sweeter than sucrose (sugar), says Wagner.

According to Wagner, aspartame has FDA approval for use as a sweetener in the following foods:

- Dry, free-flowing sugar substitute for table use in package units not to exceed the sweetening equivalent of 2 teaspoonfuls of sugar.
- Sugar substitute for sweetening hot beverages, including coffee and tea.
- Cold breakfast cereals.

Commercial rainmakers do around $5 million worth of business a year. In the last five years, the area of the United States worked by rainmakers has tripled to about 260,000 square miles, 7 percent of the country.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ Ag Dept. Wants Weed Ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department wants to triple the number of foreign weeds banned from free entry into the United States.

"These weeds could severely damage agriculture, wildlife or water resources or injure the public health if they were to become established in the United States," said Paul Sand of the department's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service.

The proposed regulation would expand the existing list of noxious foreign weeds to include five species of aquatic weeds, all of the parasitic weeds known as dodder and 43 species of terrestrial weeds, including 25 of mesquite.

Under the regulations, importers of those weeds would need Agriculture Department permits certifying that the weeds are being transported under conditions that preclude infestation.

Comments on the proposed regulation must be submitted before Dec. 2 to the Plant Protection and Quarantine Division of the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service in Hyattsville, Md.

Sugar Substitute, 'Aspartame', To Be On Market Shelves Soon

- Chewing gum.
- Dry bases for beverages; instant coffee and tea; gelatins, puddings and fillings; and dairy products and toppings.

FDA approval is based on four additional conditions regarding final product labeling and Searle's record keeping.

--Any food containing aspartame must display a warning statement for phenylketonurics (persons sensitive to phenylalanine, much like diabetics are to sugar) that the product contains phenylalanine.

-A statement not to use aspartame in cooking and baking must appear on the label. Aspartame breaks down when exposed to prolonged heat, with a consequent loss in sweetness.

-If a food containing aspartame is represented to be for special dietary use as might be expected of a low-calorie product, the food must be labeled in compliance with FDA's special dietary foods regulation.

-Searle Co. is to monitor actual use levels of aspartame for the FDA.

Advantages that aspartame is supposed to have over other non-nutritive sweeteners are that it is virtually indistinguishable from sugar in taste, has no bitter or metallic aftertaste, and seems to act like a flavor enhancer for some fruits, such as MSG (monosodium glutamate) does for high-protein foods.

A major disadvantage is that it is not stable to heat for prolonged periods.

Consumers sensitive to the somewhat bitter aftertaste often associated with saccharin sweeteners will be delighted with this new product as will others who use non-nutritive sweeteners, believes Wagner.

Record Prize Money Announced For Show

FORT WORTH — A record $400,000 in prizes and purse money was announced this week for the 1982 Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock Show and Rodeo with the mailing of over 6,000 premium lists for the Jan. 27 through Feb. 7 exhibition.

President-manager W.R. Watt Jr. said the 86th anniversary year of the Stock Show will be one of the best ever presented. He urged potential exhibitors to read the premium list carefully before mailing entries.

"Rules may have changed from last year," Watt said, "and a number of the exhibition times are different due to added classes in many departments." He said exhibitors who do not receive the book may request one at the Stock Show office P.O. Box 150, Fort Worth, Texas 76101 or pick up one at the office, 3400 Crestline.

Entry deadlines for cattle sheep swine horses donkeys and mules are Dec. 10 and for poultry rabbits and pigeons are Jan. 15.

Junior division premiums jumped more than $4,000 to $55,926. Two prestigious breeding cattle shows, the Register of Merit Hereford Show and the Standard of Perfection Polled Hereford Show, are scheduled along with 14 other cattle breeds.

Among the quality auctions planned are commercial Hereford females, Angus, Shorthorn, Polled Hereford, Brahman, Maine Anjou, Simmental and Limousin. Sales are also scheduled for Paint and Quarter Horses and donkeys and mules.

A variety of breeds and types of horses will show with an expected entry of over 2,000 head. The Quarter Horse division will be an approved point show for amateurs.

Long Term Reserve Available To Grain Farmers

By BOB FICK Associated Press Writer
 WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's grain farmers, harvesting a record corn crop amid depressed market prices, are being given additional marketing help by the Agriculture Department. Agriculture Secretary John R. Block says they will be eligible to put their corn, sorghum and barley crops in the long-term grain reserve program as soon as they get them out of the field. That program, called the farmer-owned reserve, gives farmers an economical way of withholding their grain from the market while prices are depressed and still obtaining some cash to keep their operations afloat. Block said that if the projected 300 million to 600 million bushels of 1981 corn is placed in the reserve, it should eventually boost market prices by 20 cents a bushel. The five-day national average price for corn now is $2.45. "It is apparent this year's harvest will reach record levels," Block said Tuesday in announcing his decision on the corn reserve. "This makes it essential that we take action to relieve the pressure on the already depressed market prices. "By opening this reserve, I believe we are offering farmers another option as they begin to make their marketing decisions," he said. He has been under some pressure from Farm Belt congressmen to open the reserve to the 1981 corn crop. Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., said

Block's action "may well prevent a massive forfeiture of grain under (short-term) government loan and an equally large cost to the Treasury." The next estimate on the corn harvest is due Friday. Government analysts predicted last month that the 1981 crop will be almost 7.94 billion bushels, slightly more than the 1979 record. The corn crop last week was rated in good to excellent condition in most areas. Block also said his decision on the corn reserve applies to 1980 corn that is under short-term government loans. That move, originally opposed by the White House Office of Management and Budget, is expected to siphon another 70 million bushels from the open market.

But the agriculture secretary refused to predict whether he would impose production restrictions on next year's corn crop in light of this year's record output. Failure to abide by any restrictions would make farmers ineligible for government price supports. Because of the record wheat crop, Block announced his intention several weeks ago to require wheat farmers to cut production 15 percent next year to remain eligible for federal programs. Under the reserve program, farmers can put their corn under three-year government loans at $2.40 a bushel and receive a yearly payment of 26.5 cents a bushel to cover storage costs.

Senator Lloyd Bentsen Watching Washington

Skyrocketing interest rates are the number one issue in America today, and I'm determined to do something about it.

One of my colleagues on the Senate Floor recently pointed out—correctly—that it is easier to criticize the Federal Reserve Board for the current crisis than to propose concrete policy suggestions.

I have proposed a concrete policy suggestion for the Fed. Recently I introduced a resolution in the Senate proposing that the Federal Reserve Board discourage loans for big business mergers.

Anyone who surveys the economic landscape today can see that our achievements of recent months and the whole process of economic recovery are in dire jeopardy from high interest rates.

As the Fed raises interest rates higher and higher, the people are beginning to ask some hard questions. They want to know how it is, with capital in such short supply, a chemical company can arrange a $7 billion line of credit to buy an oil company.

How many new jobs are created by this kind of transaction? How does it improve productivity in our economy? Does it represent a rational or efficient use of a scarce resource?

The American people are asking why they can't qualify for a mortgage, but large corporations can tie up more than $50 billion in lines of credit to affect mergers or to fend them off.

I believe the Fed should be "jaw-boning" member banks on their lending policies. And I believe the purpose of this campaign should be to make less credit available to these huge corporations for mergers.

This is not a new or radical idea. In 1966, in 1974 and again in 1980—when Paul Volcker was Chairman—the Federal Reserve Board "jaw-boned" member banks and other lending institutions in an attempt to persuade them to alter their lending policies.

I don't pretend that "jaw-boning" by the Fed, all by itself, is going to solve the high interest crisis. But it can provide some relief. It can bring interest rates down a notch while Congress and the Administration work on further spending reductions necessary to bring the budget into balance and keep it there.

For too long our homebuilders, our farmers and our small businesses have been asked to be the inevitable first victims in the periodic high interest crusades against the fortress of inflation. That policy just isn't fair and the American people will not stand for it much longer.

I'm not suggesting a return to the policies of inflation. I'm not suggesting that there are easy or painless remedies to the present crisis.

But I do maintain that the Federal Reserve—as it has three times in the past—should be doing everything possible to help those who are most vulnerable to cope with punishing and protracted high interest rates.

I believe the Federal Reserve Board has an obligation to help us create a climate in which we can treat the root causes of our problems without destroying our economy in the process.

Court Decides Against Cameras in Courtroom

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court decided today against allowing television coverage of trials in Texas courtrooms.

The decision also ruled out still photography and tape recording of trials.

In his brief memorandum announcing the decision, Chief Justice Joe Greenhill cited the overwhelming vote of the state's judges last week against cameras in the courtroom.

"It is the practice of the court to consult with the judiciary of Texas before making major changes in the Code of Judicial Conduct," Greenhill said.

The balloting at the annual meeting of the judicial section of the State Bar of Texas in Corpus Christi showed 182 judges opposed television coverage of trials while only 36 said they favored it or were not opposed.

The matter came before the high court in a petition filed in June 1980 by the Texas Associated Press Broadcasters.

A committee of judges, lawyers and news people was appointed by the State Bar of Texas to study the problem and recommended guidelines allowing camera coverage of trials, but only with the approval of the judge. No appeal would have been permitted from a judge's decision to allow such coverage or prohibit it.

State District Judge Tom Cave of Fort Worth was chairman of the State Bar committee and spoke to the judges at their Corpus Christi meeting.

Judges from Alabama and Florida said their states' experience with televised coverage of trials had been favorable. But prominent defense lawyer Roy Minton of Austin spoke against allowing such coverage.

Greenhill's memorandum to the news media said the court's Canon 3A(7) will remain in effect. The canon says judges should prohibit broadcasting, televising, recording or taking photographs in courtrooms and the adjacent areas during sessions of court or recesses between sessions.

Oral arguments before appellate courts may be recorded with consent of the courts.

Americans Among Injured In Sadat Assassination

By The Associated Press
The father of an Air Force captain injured slightly in the assassination of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat says he hadn't even known that his son was in Egypt.

"If he was in Cairo, it probably was on official business," Edward Ryan, who lives near Blue Ridge Summit, Pa., said of his son, Capt. Christopher Ryan, 34, an aide-de-camp since June to Gen. William Smith, deputy commander in chief of the U.S. European Command.

The younger Ryan was injured in the foot and "as far as we know, he's still in Cairo," Ryan said. "They'll probably air evacuate him today or tomorrow."

Also injured in the hail of gunfire Tuesday during the military parade was Maj. Gerald Agenbrood, 36, of Bruneau, Idaho, a Marine and an aide to Army Lt. Gen. Robert Kingston, commander of the U.S. Rapid Deployment Force, and Lt. Col. Charles Loney, 42, of the Air Force.

Ryan said his son is based in Stuttgart, West Germany, and has a wife and two children there.

"My wife heard about the attack but we had no reason to connect it to our son. We didn't know he was in Cairo," Ryan said.

Mary's College in Emmitsburg, Md. Agenbrood "was struck in the leg, and it broke both bones in the lower leg," said Lt. Cmdr. Milt Baker, a spokesman for the deployment force. "I'm not sure which leg it was."

Baker said Kingston and Agenbrood were in Egypt because the United States is building facilities there for the deployment force.

Kingston and Agenbrood were to return to the United States this week, Baker said. He said he does not know when Agenbrood will be brought home. Agenbrood's wife and daughter lives in Tampa, Fla., near MacDill Air Force Base.

Loney "did speak with me and he is fine," said his wife, Lillian, of Arlington, Va. "We are real proud of him right now. He is coming out of the country as soon as possible."

Loney is from Austin, Texas. He and his wife and two daughters were in Iran during the fall from power of the late shah and "were caught in a crush as the airport when they were leaving Iran," said Loney's cousin, Donna White of Austin.

Beets discolored pot

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — What can I use to remove the discoloration from an aluminum pot caused by cooking beets in the pot? — BENEDICT

DEAR BENEDICT — There's really no danger in using your aluminum pot while it is discolored, but I agree that it doesn't look attractive or appetizing. You can brighten aluminum by cooking acid foods in it; tomato sauce, apples or rhubarb would all be good. If you don't want to cook any of these things at the moment, try scrubbing the kettle with lemon juice, vinegar or tomato juice. You could also boil a mixture of half vinegar and half water in the kettle. I'm sure that by using one of these, you'll have that pot bright and shiny in no time. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — Can you use one more idea for greeting cards? I cut off the front of the cards and tape them onto the tops of plain wrapped presents. This decorates the package instead of a bow. They're especially pretty at Christmas. — CINDY

DEAR POLLY — A pet peeve of mine is that so many writers talk as though everyone works a daytime shift. For example, an advice writer might write, "Dress up before your husband comes home for dinner." Many people work second and third shifts. — MRS. D.J.K.

DEAR MRS. D.J.K. — Your peeve is well taken. I know I'm probably guilty of this one as well. I'm going to try to be more careful in the future about assuming that everyone works the same kind of schedule as I do. Thanks for your letter. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — When tying up garbage and trash bags, put a moth ball inside. This will eliminate bad odors. To keep dogs from tearing open garbage and trash bags, sprinkle a few drops of ammonia inside the bag. Dogs will not touch the bags. — MRS. E.L.H.

Riding Along on a Modern Cattle Drive

By Dave Pettinari

ALAMOSA, Colo. (NEA) — Most folks don't view a wild ride on horseback through a willow thicket with the hazards of getting scratched and poked by branches — as a pleasurable way to spend a weekend.

It is a regular event, however, for the Ed Oliver family — and they enjoy it immensely.

These ranchers must make frequent cattle drives to comply with the national forest permit that enables them to keep part of their herd in the Colorado high country each year from early summer through mid-autumn.

They frequently have to make headlong dashes into the dense forest — with cries of "Ho, hyah, c'mon heifer!" — to ferret out wayward cows and calves who don't know what it means to stay on a trail as they are driven to higher pasture.

All of this is hard work for the Olivers. Their days average about 14 hours and can get longer. They split their work week down the middle, staying in the high country for three or four days and returning to their headquarters ranch in the San Luis Valley for about the same length of time.

The herd consists of 600 mother cows and 500 yearlings. They sell the yearlings to feedlots where they are fattened for slaughter.

They take about 300 head of cattle to the high country each year because the nutritious short grass in the mountains fattens them up and good grazing land is hard to come by in the valley. The animals forage for themselves all summer and are trucked out in October before the snow begins to fly.

The Olivers' base camp is a 26-foot travel trailer that sleeps four. From there, at 9,800 feet, they work cattle in seven parks, up to 11,500 feet in a range that follows the Rio Grande for 11 miles.

One of their weekly cattle drives begins on a Saturday morning with a good breakfast of eggs, bacon, cereal and black coffee.

While Martha Oliver, 53, fixes the meal, husband Ed, 54, shoes an uncooperative horse and carries mounts for them and their sons, 25-year-old Roy and 13-year-old Hardy. The younger Olivers feed oats to the horses and round up animals, blankets, saddles and bridles.

After breakfast, the family takes "a little ride," moving 114 head of cattle three miles up the mountain to another pasture. The forest service requires that cattle be rotated every two or three weeks to prevent them from stripping the lush grasslands bare.

On some moving days, Oliver says, the cattle line up when he hollers at them and go where they're supposed to with very little prodding. But sometimes he has to fight them all day long, especially when they want to stay in the cool of the willows and dense trees.

"When they're hard to move and you don't have enough cowboys, you run out of cuss words," he says. "Some days, we just as well would have gone fishing because them cattle will be scattered from hell to breakfast!"

On their way up the mountain, the Olivers pause occasionally if they see a sick cow that needs doctoring. They rope the animal, tie it to a tree and inject it with penicillin. If they think it needs treatment for pink eye, pneumonia or foot rot, the animal is force fed several huge pills.

Brisket disease is the main scourge of the herd, claiming about 5 percent of the cows annually. This high-altitude heart ailment primarily attacks the young stock. If it is detected early, the animals can be trucked down to the valley; as many as 50 percent may recover.

Occasionally, an animal is lost over a cliff, gets a snootful of porcupine quills or contracts larkspur poisoning. Lightning strikes two or three animals a year, so the Olivers carry lightning insurance. They seldom lose an animal to a predator.

Often, a mother and calf are separated during a cattle drive. When this occurs, they both go back to the place where the calf last nursed and find one another. Then the Olivers send them back up the mountain.

The Olivers have a technique for pairing an orphaned calf with a cow that has lost her calf. The tail and some hide are cut from the dead calf and sewn into a jacket that is tied onto the living calf. The dead calf's mother, thinking she smells her baby, then adopts the orphan.

Oliver says he doesn't mind being somewhat out of touch with civilization when he is in the high country.

"I don't care to listen to the TV, hear the phone or read the junk mail," he says. "I'm glad to be rid of it."

Besides, with all the backpackers, jeepers and tourists moving through the area, it's not so lonely. This life has meant sacrifices for the family. They never owned a home of their own until the past year.

"A lot of people think we're rich running as many ranches as we do," says Oliver. "But we never have had that kind of money. There's many a hired man takes home about as much as we do." He said that the average income for farmers and ranchers in the state is about $9,000.

The staggering economics of running a ranch sometimes get him down. His greatest expenses are fuel, equipment and interest on borrowed money.

Most of his assets are in his land and equipment. He has $150,000 tied up in his semi, bulldozer, tractors, hay-cutting machine and baling wagons.

Because pickups are not allowed off-road in wilderness areas, a high-country cowboy needs a sure-footed horse. The Olivers have 15 working horses, each of which is worth from $700 to $900.

"You have to have courage and not worry about taking on debt," says Oliver. "You've got to have a whole lot of optimism."

Oliver sometimes feels the consumer who buys his beef doesn't appreciate him and his family. "The housewife, she don't care if we're making enough money as long as she has beef to put on the table... The high price of feed compared to the cheap price of beef doesn't balance the books."

"But the American cattleman has always been against subsidies where we're guaranteed a price for our cattle. We take it all, the ups and the downs."

While financial worries are many, the rewards are just as great. The Olivers will tell you how satisfying it is to be outdoors all day, come back to a good meal and know that their cattle are fed, watered and healthy.

Then there are those beautiful, quiet moments that Mrs. Oliver enjoys alone in a field of wildflowers and the closeness between father and son as they fish in a mountain trout stream.

"Every day is different," says Oliver. "We work with the land, livestock and nature. We see the new life in the spring, whether it's new grass or calves. We enjoy our way of life."

Governor's Two-Day Conference Concludes

By STEVE BREWER
Associated Press Writer

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Mexican and U.S. governors searching for common ground along the international border they share ended a two day conference still divided over their response to President Reagan's proposed immigration reforms.

The chief executives from Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, California and six Mexican states considered immigration the key issue of the Border Governors Conference.

They argued for more than an hour during a private session Tuesday but failed to break the impasse that drew attention away from other border problems including crime, drug trafficking and water resources.

Instead the the governors' task force was directed to take the Reagan proposal and another forwarded by Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt and draft a response that could be endorsed by all 10 governors.

"Ultimately and finally, the 10 border governors will take a position," said Texas Gov. Bill Clements. "Washington wants our recommendations. I heard exactly the same thing from the Mexican federal government."

Clements had pressed for a unified position on the Reagan plan, which would grant amnesty to illegal aliens, allow some Mexicans to hold temporary jobs in the United States and require a 90 percent reduction in the estimated 500,000 undocumented workers a year who enter the country from Mexico.

But Clements ran into a stone wall in Babbitt, who underscored his opposition to the Reagan plan with a proposal of his own.

Babbitt advocated granting amnesty on a case-by-case basis, expanding government services for aliens and strengthening the U.S. Border Patrol.

The Arizona governor said New Mexico Gov. Bruce King acted as a peacemaker between Clements and Babbitt as they presented their opposing views during the private session.

"We all understood that the problem is so complex that it would be impossible for even the American governors to reach an agreement," Babbitt said.

The issue was further complicated because the Mexican governors could not take a stand on the matter without prior approval by Mexican President Jose Lopez-Portillo, Clements said.

The governors, who argued about immigration for almost all of the nearly two hours allotted for private discussion of sensitive border problems, were forced to extend the session to talk briefly about drug trafficking, crime along the border and water resources.

King said those problems also will be discussed in task forces and among the governors in coming months.

The governors scheduled next year's conference in Tijuana, Mexico, and ended the conference by signing resolutions praising Reagan and Lopez-Portillo for working for better relations between the two countries.

They also approved six committee reports on various border issues, including industrial development, pollution control, agriculture, energy and tourism. Those reports recommended permanent committees to monitor the different areas and coordinate activities by the 10 border states.

The reports will be sent to federal officials in both countries, officials said.

The Mexican governors at the conference were Alfonso Martinez Dominguez of Nuevo Leon, Oscar Ornelas of Chihuahua, Samuel Ocana Garcia of Sonora, Emilio Martinez Manautou of Tamaulipas, Roberto de la Madrid of Baja California and interim Gov. Francisco Madero of Coahuila.

Spikers Shut Door On Westerners With Win

Dink And Score

Peggy Miller (16) and Sandy Cagle (30) provide the Herd with a point in the third game of the district matchup last night at the high school gym. Miller, Cagle and the rest of the Herd spikers used a strong third game to win the match, 15-4, 10-15, 15-4. (Brand photo by Jeri Curtis)

"Don't give up this way," was the only warning volleyball coach Sharma Smith gave her team Tuesday night going into the third game against Lubbock High, according to several senior players.

The Herd swept the first game 15-4, but lost their momentum in the second game and fell 15-10 to the Westerners. Smith's admonition must have worked. The team took the third game with ditto marks, 15-4.

In the first game, Hereford's first serve rendered only one point, followed by three more in the first round of serves. Lisa Cortez served her second time to gain six points (one for an illegal substitution) to set the score at 10-0.

Strong getting any points until their eighth serve when Dunnatte Hightower served for three points. Hereford's Jolynn O'Leary and Suzanne Ramirez had blank serves which allowed Lubbock to serve for a final fourth point. Peggy Miller iced the cake with five in a row to win the game. The Herd held Lubbock's serving to 13 for the four points.

Lubbock took advantage of a defensive slack in the second game and was ahead 7-0, before the Herd could get an offensive game rolling. Sandy Cagle chalked up the first four points for the Herd, followed by Beatrice Moreno with two points. Lubbock finished serving the round first to make the score 10-6. The Herd pushed for four more, but the Westerners pushed harder for the win.

In the third game the Herd had six points from serves by Cortez and Norma Gavina before the Westerners got a point. Becky Griego served for five, followed by three more by Moreno. Cortez served the winning point to duplicate the first game score of 15-4.

The Herd kept Lubbock down to 11 serves. The team captains believe team work accounted for the win.

"We all have to be in the same mood to win," said O'Leary. "Once we start making mistakes everything else falls apart," said Peggy Miller. "Last night we didn't make that many mistakes."

The team goes to Monterey Thursday night for another district game.

"We can beat them," O'Leary said. "We know how they play."

The Herd played Monterey in tournaments earlier in the season. "They bumped a lot," Miller explained, "and once we spiked it, then they wouldn't spike it."

"We'll have to fake them out," O'Leary added, "because they block a lot."

Preventative Treatment Used By Pro Football

An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. That is never more true than it is in the National Football League.

An ounce — more like 25 pounds — of prevention in the NFL is also very costly — but worthwhile.

Your favorite player on your favorite NFL team may feature a three-piece business suit, or a smart plaid sport jacket and plain-colored slacks, or the latest in blue jeans when he arrives at the stadium each weekend. But he sure takes on a different look when he leaves the locker room to prepare for the kickoff.

He also will weigh about 25 pounds more as he steps on the playing field.

years. With a 45-man regular-season roster, that means about $45,000.

But that does not account for replacement costs for worn-out equipment or the requirements for training camp, where there are more than 100 players in uniform.

"Over the course of the year, the figure is $135,000," says Jim Borden, Eagles business manager. "135,000 to $150,000 — that's a fair figure."

The wall of the Eagles' equipment room is testimony to the fact that Sweeney does his own alterations. Hanging over a work bench are 13 screwdrivers, nine pairs of pliers, six wrenches, two hammers, three electric drills, a saw and seven other tools.

"Anything that breaks out there you can fix, you fix," says Sweeney, who has been making such repairs since he was a high-school senior at Freeport, Texas, 18 years ago.

"You've got to tighten screws on helmets," he says. "They do come loose."

He installs the face masks so they fit the player better.

The normal life span of a helmet is three years. Everything else, if used regularly, will wear out in a season or faster, according to Sweeney. The Eagles go through 100 dozen pairs of sweat socks a season and 40 dozen to 50 dozen T-shirts, he said.

A player's relationship with his equipment is strange. There is not much room for individuality. The NFL not only requires that all uniforms be... well, uniform, but that everyone wear the same padding.

Eagles place-kicker Tony Franklin, who does not wear a shoe on his kicking foot, has no other variation in equipment — although there was a time when many kickers did not wear shoulder pads.

Golfers Travel To Plainview

Saturday, the Whiteface linksters will get the chance to improve their fall record as they travel to Plainview to take on Berger and Amarillo High in a three way match.

Because of UIL rules, a golf match in the fall can not consist of more than three teams. Therefore Hereford will be going up against those two teams. The host Bulldogs will be playing Pampa and Palo Duro.

At this time coach James Salinas has Frankie Garcia as his number one golfer, with David Dudding, Scott Skinner, and Paul Jorde all playing on the varsity. The final spot on the team for Saturday's match will be taken by either Brett Barrick, Bob Foster, Alan Fairweather, or Steve Fairweather.

"We haven't been real consistent with our scores in practice," Salinas said. "One day we will shoot real good and the next, well it hasn't been as good as I would hope it would be."

Hereford lost their number one player earlier in the year when Tony Flores moved to Kansas City when his father was transferred with Armour.

Great Runners of NFL Include Franco

You hear their names all the time when the topic is great NFL runners. Jim Brown... Gale Sayers... O.J. Simpson... Earl Campbell... Walter Payton. Then, Hugh McElhenny... Steve Van Buren... Leroy Kelly... Jim Taylor.

Maybe just maybe, someone will remember to mention a fellow who was one of the key ingredients of the most successful Super Bowl team of all — the Pittsburgh Steelers of the 1970s, who won four NFL titles in four Super Bowl appearances. The player is Franco Harris.

Harris is in his 10th NFL season. Before the 1981 season closes, the chances are very good that the former Penn State star will have his name in the NFL record manual as the busiest runner in the 62-year history of the league.

Harris had carried the football 2,220 times between his first game in 1972 and the '81 season opener. Only Jim Brown (2,404) and O.J. Simpson (2,359) have lugged it more often. Harris needs 185 rushing attempts this season to take over the No. 1 spot.

In addition, Franco needs 648 rushing yards to reach the 10,000-yard mark. Again, only Brown (12,312 yards) and Simpson (11,236) have reached that plateau.

Here are a few other NFL players and the milestones they are approaching:

— Walter Payton of Chicago began the season just 614 yards short of 9,000. Payton, 27, is the NFL's fifth leading career rusher and needs to average only 82 yards a game (15 below his current average) in the next three seasons to move ahead of Jim Brown as the No. 1 rusher.

— Rick Upchurch of Denver, who already owns the NFL record for punt-return yardage (2,651), needed 39 more punt returns to erase Ermlen Tunnell's career record of 258.

— Kickers Jan Stenerud of Green Bay (sixth at the start of the season with 1,243 points) and Garo Yepremian of Tampa Bay (ninth with 1,062) could jump over Gino Cappelletti (seventh with 1,130) and finish 1981 in the seventh and eighth places. Stenerud also had 282 field goals as the 1981 season began and needed only 18 more to join George Blanda (335) and Jim Turner (304) as the only 300-FG makers. — Harold Jackson of New England is aiming to become the NFL's third 10,000-yard pass receiver. Entering '81, Jackson had 9,577 yards on pass receptions. Only Don Maynard (11,834 yards) and Lance Alworth (10,266) have more than Jackson.

NFL IRONMEN — You will find many of their names in post-game stories. But more than a few likely will be found only in the team media guides, gaining mention as players who rarely miss a game.

The Ironman distinction speaks more of an inner fortitude — a will to endure — than an exterior of impenetrable armor. The Ironmen often are held together by nothing more than some bandages and a few strips of tape.

Success and recognition ultimately accompany such players into retirement. That was the case of Minnesota Vikings legend Jim Marshall, who played in an NFL-record 282 consecutive games. At the time of his retirement in 1979, Marshall explained his quest for a perfect playing record:

"All the time you're playing, you're trying to refine what you do on the field, trying to fit it into the overall picture," said Marshall, who was then 41 years old.

"If you do that, you can put your energy where it's needed when it's needed, as opposed to putting your foot to the floor and burning yourself out."

Several NFL players rode consecutive-game streaks of 160 games or more into the 1981 season.

An offensive lineman wears the thickest and heaviest gear that NFL clubs have to offer, and the price tag — for his football helmet ($65), cloth jersey ($35), polyester pants ($45), sweatshirt ($12), shoes ($35 and up), socks ($5), shoulder pads ($75), hip pads ($10 and up), elbow pads ($8), thigh pads ($5 and up), knee pads ($5 and up), heavy-bag boxing gloves ($80), T-shirt ($4) and athletic supporter ($2) — is more than $380.

Add to that the form-fitted, custom-made laminated plastic mouth inserts (up to $50) to protect the teeth, and the price tag goes over $400.

On chilly days, tack on a set of thermal underwear ($30), a windbreaker ($75) and whatever else the player uses to stay warm. That brings his wardrobe bill above the $500 level. Just for that game.

Not included in that figure, of course, are his spare game shirts, practice uniforms and the $50 clothes bag he uses to carry it all. "It probably costs $1,000 a year to outfit a player," says Rusty Sweeney, Philadelphia Eagles equipment manager for the past 12

Manager Change Game Always On The Move

Old baseball managers never die. They don't even fade away. They just wait for the music to stop, then leap into the closest vacant chair.

Weep no more for Joe Torre, Gene Michael, Jim Fregosi, Johnny Goryl, Maury Wills, Jim Frey and Dick Williams, who form the "Aged Class of '81."

You'll see them again soon, if not in different uniforms in their own again. That's the way the game is played.

It's a grim game of "musical chairs." Strike up a tune. Scramble for the empty seats. Stop the music. The lucky ones are still sitting. The unlucky ones are left with their tongues hanging out.

Tough, but not suicidal. They just wait until the next go-around. In the end, everybody winds up somewhere.

Take Torre, the latest casualty, sacked in the eighth inning of Sunday's final game by the New York Mets. They're queuing up for his shaky inner office — George Bamberger, ready to try again after he gave up the Milwaukee job last year because of open heart surgery; Jim Frey, bounced by the Royals; Dick Williams, dumped by Montreal, and possibly even Michael, the last to feel George Steinbrenner's wrath at the Yankees.

But speculation making the rounds is that Steinbrenner is keen on Williams, whom he vainly sought after Williams had broken with Charles O. Finley of the A's and before he joined the Expos. Williams lives in Tampa, Fla., headquarters of George's ship-building empire. So the scenario is for Steinbrenner again to ax kindly, old Bob Lemon, who succeeded Michael, and install Williams, starting in '82. That's the flak.

Meanwhile, when that music plays again, Torre, a classy, low-key guy, may just fall into the Philadelphia spot which Dallas Green never liked anyhow, preferring his front office duties.

Too bad Finley is not around any more. While operating the A's, he orchestrated a regular managerial assembly line. He made 19-field boss changes over a period of 20 years, hiring Hank Bauer, Al Dark and Jack McKeon twice each, and frequently changing skippers in mid-year.

It's nothing for a manager to hold jobs with three, four and more clubs during a career, sometimes serving extra tenures. Gene Mauch is the current dean of the hopscotchers — 10 years with the Philadelphia Phillies before moving on to Montreal, Minnesota and now the California Angels.

The all-time gold-plated excursion pass belonged to the late Bucky Harris, who managed five clubs over a period of 29 years, eight clubs counting the three times at Washington and two at Detroit.

The stay-at-home spoilsport was Walter Alton, the former Dartmouth, Ohio schoolteacher who managed the Dodgers (Brooklyn and LA) for 23 years, always on a year-to-year contract.

With 2 Run Homer To Give Astros Win

Ashby's 'Walter Mitty' Dream Comes True

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
HOUSTON, Texas (AP) - Alan Ashby called it his own Walter Mitty story.

Here he was - a line-drive hitter with only four home runs all year - getting the game-winning homer with two out in the ninth, off a team he used to sneak into the ball park to see.

Catcher Ashby's story-book two-run homer in the bottom of the ninth Tuesday night carried the Houston Astros to a 3-1 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers in the first game of their National League Western Division playoff series. The second game in the best-of-five series began at noon today with Houston's knuckleballing Joe Niekro (9-9) facing the Dodgers' Jerry Reuss (10-4).

"I'm elated beyond words," said Ashby after a left-handed shot over the rightfield stands off reliever Dave Stewart. "I knew it was a homer when I saw it in the air...and it's not like I'm a home run hitter, either. It's a Walter Mitty dream."

Ashby's decisive blow settled a pitching duel between Nolan Ryan, who twirled a two-hitter, and Fernando Valenzuela, who battled hard before leaving after eight innings with the score tied 1-1.

Houston's only run off the 20-year-old rookie sensation came in the sixth inning on a two-out single by Terry Puhl, a walk to Phil Garner and Tom Scott's bloop single to right just off the glove of second baseman Dave Lopes.

The Dodgers tied it 1-1 in the seventh on Steve Garvey's 400-foot homer that hit the yellow home run line in left centerfield.

Then came Ashby with two-out in the ninth after pinchhitter Fred Reynolds had singled.

"I remembered when I was a kid in San Pedro and I used to try to sneak into Dodger Stadium and get caught a lot because I was so slow," said Ashby. "I used to idolize Sandy Koufax and Don Drysdale...It sounds silly I guess but those are special memories."

The first pitch was a fast fastball down the middle.

"It was a lucky swing quite frankly," Ashby said, candidly. "I'm no home run hitter." Stewart said "It wasn't a bad pitch...I thought it was a good fastball...shoot, I didn't think he'd jack the ball out of the park. I didn't even know who he was."

He added "I can't see us losing a game like this...they're not a home run hitting team. Every team has some luck."

Ryan, who no-hit the Dodgers the last time he pitched against them, mowed down 16 batters in a row during one stretch.

"I thought Nolan's stuff was better than when he pitched the no-hitter," said Astros Manager Bill Virdon. "This was a big win for us...it's important that we win at home."

After today's game, the scene switches to Los Angeles for the windup.

"The pressure is still on them (The Astros)," said Garvey, "because I know the effect we've had on them in LA."

Garvey said "Two hits is not going to win a ball game. Ryan threw hard but his breaking pitch wasn't as controlled as it was on his no-hitter."

"I knew I hit the pitch good enough to get out of most parks in the seventh, but here you can never be sure."

But it took Ashby's first career homer off the Dodgers to settle the issue. Dodger Manager Tommy Lasorda said he went to reliever Stewart because "we felt Fernando (who gave six hits) had pitched long enough. We wanted to try to get some runs. I believe in our bullpen."

Ashby concluded "This was a typical game for us...this is our style going down to the late innings.

"We played four extra inning games in a row with Philadelphia last year in the National League championship series."

Almost in tears, Ashby said "It was a thrill to catch Nolan's no-hitter but I've got to take this one for myself...It's very special to me."

Concepcion Signs First Assured Pact By Reds

By JOE KAY
AP Sports Writer
CINCINNATI (AP) - The Cincinnati Reds' signing of shortstop Dave Concepcion set a club precedent that could figure in attempts to sign two other starters.

The Reds gave Concepcion an estimated $4.5 million, five-year guaranteed contract Tuesday, the largest contract ever awarded by the club.

It also broke ground as the first time Cincinnati had guaranteed a contract, by which a player is assured of pay even if he is hurt while playing and cannot perform.

Reds President Dick Wagner said he would meet with outfielders Ken Griffey and Dave Collins and their counsel this week to discuss contracts. Both are unsigned for 1982 and eligible to become free agents.

Asked whether Concepcion's agreement opened the door for guaranteed contracts with other players, Wagner said, "I think that answers itself."

Both Griffey and Collins have said they want guarantees in their next contracts.

Guarantees were one of the stumbling blocks when Concepcion and agent Jerry Kapstein rejected a $4.5 million, guaranteed offer from Wagner last month. Wagner said at the time that Concepcion wanted either an additional $630,000 or what Wagner described as unusual guarantees.

Kapstein said Tuesday that the difficulties were resolved through compromise.

"I believe it's the largest compensation package paid to a shortstop in major league baseball," Wagner said in announcing the signing.

The five-time Gold Glove-winning shortstop had one of his best years offensively in 1981, coming off surgery on his right elbow. He batted .306, finished fifth in the National League with 67 runs batted in and tied for the league lead with 14 game-winning RBIs.

Wagner described the 33-year-old Venezuelan as "the premier shortstop in the game of baseball today."

Concepcion said Tuesday

he had wanted to sign to remain with the Reds, the only major league club he has played for.

"I'm happy here. I wanted to stay in Cincinnati," Concepcion said.

Reds Manager John

McNamara said he wasn't encouraged about the Reds' chances of signing Concepcion when the regular season ended Sunday.

"I just can't express how pleased I am," McNamara said of the signing.

Football Powers Back A Division IV In NCAA

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Are you confused by all the numerology currently rampant in the NCAA? Do you have trouble differentiating between Division I-A, I-AA, II and III?

Well, then, how would you feel about a Division IV?

One of the legislative proposals when the NCAA holds its special convention on reorganization in December provides for a new division that would include the 61 members of the College Football Association, plus the Big Ten and Pacific-10 Conferences. Those 81 institutions, now part of the 137 in Division I-A, would be known as Division IV.

CFA Executive Director Chuck Neinas calls the proposal "a clearcut alternative" to other NCAA reorganization plans. He says it would address two criticisms the Big Ten and Pac-10 have had about the CFA - that it involves only football and that it operates outside the NCAA structure.

Because the CFA is not a voting member of the NCAA, it cannot sponsor legislation. Instead, a number of CFA schools - among them Notre Dame, Penn State and Georgia - are backing the proposal.

"The proposed legislation uses CFA membership criteria as basic criteria for Division IV membership," Neinas says. "It would allow the new division to develop its own rules and regulations governing all sports, including establishing its own eligibility rules. And it would become effective immediately. There would be no waiting period.

"It doesn't require anyone moving from Division I-A to I-AA, nor does it disturb Division I-AA. It merely transplants a group of major institutions to a new legislative division. In essence, it would allow Division IV to consider by themselves matters that affect them, including a football television plan."

Neinas says the proposal also suggests the policy-making NCAA Council be chosen by elections, with five members, at least one of whom must be a woman, coming from each division - I, II, III and IV.

"Under the NCAA's nominating committee process, they bring in a slate and that's it," Neinas says.

Ainge--No Baseball To Coach at BYU Instead

PROVO, Utah (AP) - Danny Ainge, frustrated in his attempt to leave the Toronto Blue Jays for the Boston Celtics, has accepted a part-time basketball coaching position at Brigham Young University.

Ainge, 22, an All-America player last season at BYU after averaging 24.4 points per game, decided to accept the job this week, basketball Coach Frank Arnold said Tuesday.

Arnold wouldn't disclose how much Ainge would be paid. Arnold said he told Ainge a year ago that he could have the position upon graduation.

Ainge, a third baseman with the American League's Blue Jays this past season, sought to get out of his baseball contract and sign with the Celtics of the National Basketball Association.

But a U.S. District Court in New York ruled last week that the Blue Jays didn't verbally rescind Ainge's contract in discussions with the player June 10-11.

Ainge has said he plans to retire from baseball rather than return to the Blue Jays next season. He is under contract to Toronto until 1983.

Celtic President Red Auerbach said Monday that the team would attempt to schedule meetings with the Blue Jays to talk about Ainge.

Cowboys Annual Slump Comes Early

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) - The Dallas Cowboys' annual sinking spell has come earlier than Coach Tom Landry would like.

"We'll find out pretty quick where we stand with the schedule we have facing us," Landry said Tuesday. "We don't usually dip this early... normally we dip in the middle part of the season before we roll."

The Cowboys were ambushed 20-17 by the St. Louis Cardinals last Sunday, tumbling to second place in the National Conference Eastern Division behind Philadelphia, which is 5-0 after beating Atlanta Monday night.

Philadelphia looks unbeatable but things can change fast in this business," said Landry. "We just hope we are in the chase in the last part of the season."

Landry admitted the Cowboys haven't performed well since they defeated New England in a stellar Monday night performance three weeks ago.

"We looked good and the fans think you will do that every week," he said. "Sometimes you can get over-praised, and that's not the best thing for an athlete. We're all human and when you start believing you are good then you are in trouble."

Landry said "when you have beaten a team seven times in a row it's hard to get up for them and eventually they will beat you."

"The St. Louis people were really excited and you can't blame them for their enthusiasm. I didn't like it very much."

Landry said he was not concerned over a jammed wrist suffered by quarterback Danny White on the final play of the game.

"White says it's OK but you never know... he seems confident the wrist will be OK," Landry said.

The Cowboys travel to San Francisco to meet the fast-improving 49ers on Sunday. Landry, who watched the Eagles beat Atlanta Monday night on television, said "Philadelphia is almost a shoe-in for the playoffs. Their defense is in the groove. They have become a very experienced and competitive defensive team...very difficult to beat."

He said the Cowboys need to start playing consistently. "We have to streak now... win a lot of games in a row so we can get to the playoffs," said Landry.

He added "I didn't get up-tight watching the Eagles win. I have no control over that... I just have control over the Cowboys - for good or bad."

MOVING?

LIGHTEN YOUR LOAD WITH CLASSIFIED. Save on moving charges and make yours a smooth move. With Classified, sell many of those items you're not quite sure you need. The system that works best is to try to walk about two miles in the morning and two miles in the evening. That will use about 240 calories a day. Then cut your calorie intake only about 300 calories a day. You will decrease your calorie balance over 500 calories a day that way or a good 3,500 calories a week. That equals the calories in one pound of fat. Stick to it every day - rain or shine, hot or cold, and expect to stay on it for 20 weeks to lose 20 pounds of fat. Don't get excited when the scales say you lose a lot the first week. That is mostly water and will come back. Just stick to the program. It will be a new lifestyle for you. After you have lost your excess fat you might want to continue the daily exercise and enable yourself to eat a little, but not much, more on occasion. It is not a hard program to follow. You just have to be consistent and patient. DEAR DR. LAMB - I am a man, 40 years old. Whenever I press anything against my body for a few minutes, when I am working

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

HEALTH

DEAR DR. LAMB - I'd like your Health Letter on losing weight. I need to lose 20 to 30 pounds and need to exercise to get back in shape. My weight has gradually crept from 133 to 150 pounds since the birth of my second child six years ago. My attempts so far have failed. I'm 5 feet 3 and have wrinkles and bulges of fat around my middle which I just can't stand. Before my two sons were born I weighed from 115 to 125 pounds. I'll soon be 31 and think the longer the excess weight stays on the harder it will be to lose. Don't you agree?
DEAR READER - You can lose weight at any age but it is smart to lose it when you are still young and avoid getting fat again. That is better for your health, and your skin is more likely to be elastic and contract, avoiding some of the problem of excess skin that occurs after a person has lost lots of weight. The reason it gets harder to lose weight is because a person gets more and more used to being overweight and following a lifestyle that promotes it. I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-7, Weight Losing Diet, that you requested. The diet will work if you stay with it. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. You should understand right now that it will be a long process if you do it wisely and safely. I would suggest that you plan on losing about a pound a week. Do it by increasing your physical activity while decreasing your calories. The system that works best is to try to walk about two miles in the morning and two miles in the evening. That will use about 240 calories a day. Then cut your calorie intake only about 300 calories a day. You will decrease your calorie balance over 500 calories a day that way or a good 3,500 calories a week. That equals the calories in one pound of fat. Stick to it every day - rain or shine, hot or cold, and expect to stay on it for 20 weeks to lose 20 pounds of fat. Don't get excited when the scales say you lose a lot the first week. That is mostly water and will come back. Just stick to the program. It will be a new lifestyle for you. After you have lost your excess fat you might want to continue the daily exercise and enable yourself to eat a little, but not much, more on occasion. It is not a hard program to follow. You just have to be consistent and patient. DEAR DR. LAMB - I am a man, 40 years old. Whenever I press anything against my body for a few minutes, when I am working

DEAR DR. LAMB - I need another opinion about having a hysterectomy. Will a hysterectomy cause a woman to lose her mind or cause any mental conditions? I've heard it would all my life. I'm 73 years old and need an operation.
DEAR READER - There is no way anyone can promise you that you will not have any complications, including mental ones, after an operation. I can tell you that a small number of people do have some emotional problems after major surgery. We never know which patients will. And it is not only a hysterectomy but any major operation including open heart surgery. Usually such reactions, if they do occur, are temporary.

People are becoming more aware of the health aspects of these beverages as they read about caffeine and lumps in the breast, about warning labels on coffee for pregnant women and there is a recent report of the association of coffee with cancer of the pancreas (New England Journal of Medicine, March 12, 1981). It certainly does increase the level of anxiety in tense people.

It is a good idea to taper off these beverages if you are going to have to stop them for any reason, as you have suggested. It is also a good idea to avoid them before stressful procedures, such as dental work.

Hand-raising as a formal greeting originated among cavemen to prove they carried no weapons. In feudal times, an armored knight raised his right arm to lift his helmet visor and to show his friendship by keeping his sword hand away from weapons. The gesture developed into the military salute. Before the 19th century, British soldiers saluted by tipping their hats.

Senate Approves Deregulating Phone Industry

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is endorsing legislation that would remove much of almost a half-century of regulation on the telephone industry and encourage competition for American Telephone & Telephone Co.

For consumers, the bill could mean less expensive telephone equipment and lower long-distance charges but higher local service rates. The measure, sent to the House on a 90-4 vote Wednesday, also would let AT&T expand for the first time into unregulated fields such as data processing and information services.

That could lead to dismissal of a government antitrust suit which seeks to break up the Bell System, action the Reagan administration said would be unnecessary if a law provides adequate guidelines for AT&T to compete in new areas.

Senate approval was hailed by administration officials and Republican leaders in the House as a "major first step" toward modernizing the law that has governed telephone regulation since 1934.

The House is not expected to write its version of a telephone deregulation bill until early next year.

The Senate vote also represented a major victory for the newspaper industry because AT&T would be barred from the field of electronic publishing. Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., who sponsored the bill, called that amendment and the newspaper industry's support the "key to breaking the logjam."

The bill would:

- Direct the Federal Communications Commission to rely on competition instead of regulation wherever possible.
- Allow AT&T to enter new fields like data processing, as long as it established a separate subsidiary with its own books, employees and facilities. The new subsidiary could not enter the electronic publishing, cable TV or burglar and fire alarm businesses.

- Allow AT&T to create another subsidiary to provide facilities for home delivery of electronic news and advertising. The subsidiary would be prohibited from originating or controlling the content of such services in competition with newspapers, although it could provide simple directory listings.
- Continue to regulate AT&T's basic local and long-

Egyptian Parliament Fully Endorses Mubarak As Presidential Candidate

By LISETTE BALOUNY
Associated Press Writer
CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Egypt's Parliament gave a 5-to-1 endorsement to Vice President Hosni Mubarak as the sole candidate to succeed slain President Anwar Sadat in a nationwide election next Tuesday.

Meeting in emergency session Wednesday, 330 members of Parliament — 69 more than the needed two-thirds — seconded the nomination of Mubarak by Sadat's National Democratic Party. Officials said there were 55 abstentions, four absentees and three disqualified votes.

Mubarak, the air force commander groomed by Sadat to be his successor, accepted the nomination in a televised late-night meeting with a parliamentary delegation.

At an impromptu news conference afterward, he told reporters Sadat was killed Tuesday by four men — not six as previously reported — "led by a Moslem fanatic." He said the assassination was "a criminal act undertaken by individuals and was by no means a coup attempt."

"There is a long story behind all this, but I prefer to wait till the interrogation is completed," Mubarak said.

Defense Minister Abdel Halim Abu Ghazala said the killers were not members of any political organization and had no links to any foreign government, the newspaper Al Akhbar reported.

A Western diplomat who asked that his name not be used said the attack was "directed primarily at the president. There certainly is no evidence of a massive threat of dissension in the army."

Foreign Minister Kamal

Hassan Aly said an official report account of the government's investigation would be released today or Friday.

The vice president was at Sadat's right on the reviewing stand when the assassins struck during a parade celebrating the 1973 Arab-Israeli War. He escaped with a wound on his left wrist. Five men in addition to Sadat were reported killed and at least 28 were wounded.

"I sensed the president stand," Mubarak said. "I stood, too, and to my utter horror and disbelief, I saw a man throw a grenade at the stand, and then gunfire broke out."

"I was hurled to the ground and so was the president but I could not believe what my eyes had seen. The president was taken away in a helicopter."

One of the assassins was an officer, another a retired officer and the other two were civilians masquerading as soldiers, said Abu Ghazala, who was also slightly wounded.

The killers jumped from a truck in the parade, threw hand grenades, then ran to the reviewing stand and sprayed its occupants with automatic rifle-fire.

Earlier reports said there were six men in the assassination squad and two were killed by security forces. The discrepancy between this and the later account was not explained, but Western military attaches who were looking down on the reviewing stand from behind insisted at least seven men were involved in the attack.

Col. Peter Rosser, the British military attaché, said six men riding in the back of the truck and possibly one more from the cab jumped from the vehicle and ran toward Sadat with their rifles blazing. He said the attackers included two officers and he believed both were killed.

Sadat had numerous enemies at home and abroad. His foes attacked the president for his historic peace treaty with Israel, which left Sadat a virtual pariah in the Arab world; his authoritarian government, and his roundup last month of 1,500 opponents, including Moslem fundamentalists, Coptic Christian leaders and politicians.

At least three Egyptian exile groups with headquarters in Beirut, Lebanon claimed responsibility for the assassination. One of them,

Drivers Cautioned During School Bus Safety Week

By BOB NIGH
MANAGING EDITOR

Hereford Independent School District Assistant Superintendent Larry Wartes has issued a caution to local drivers to be alert and watch out for school buses, emphasizing the safety of local students during National School Bus Safety Week, which runs through Saturday.

The Texas Motor Vehicle Uniform Act requires motorists to stop when overtaking or meeting a school bus which has stopped for the purpose of receiving or discharging school children.

Motorists are reminded that this law is mandatory when a school bus is displaying two alternating flashing red lights. "Motorists shall stop, and remain stopped, until the visual signals are no longer actuated, the bus resumes motion, or the bus driver signals other vehicles to proceed ahead," according to the act.

"In the fifteen years I've been here we've had no serious accidents involving school buses," Wartes said. "Of course, we've had a few fender benders, but nothing serious."

According to city judge Joe Cupell the penalty for a motorist passing a school bus which has its lights flashing is a $25 fine. Of course, any further violations or action resulting in damage to the bus or injury to a person in the bus may result in action in the county court, he said.

As for students riding in the school buses, Wartes presents this list of tips for safe school bus riding:

1. Leave home early enough to arrive at your bus stop on time.
2. Wait for your bus in a safe place - well off the roadway.

3. Enter your bus in an orderly manner, and take your seat.

4. Follow the instructions of your school bus driver or bus patrol.

5. Remain in your seat while your bus is in motion.

6. Keep your head and arms inside the bus at all times.

7. Keep aisles clear at all times.

8. Remain quiet and orderly.

9. Be courteous to your school bus driver and fellow passengers.

10. Be alert to traffic when leaving the bus.

Former Presidents To Attend Funeral

WASHINGTON (AP) — All three living former American presidents are making an extraordinary journey to Cairo to mourn the death of slain Egyptian leader Anwar Sadat, the "gigantic personality" who befriended the United States and made peace with Israel.

Only rarely in U.S. history have there been three surviving former presidents at the same time and joint appearances by such select groups have been even more unusual.

But at President Reagan's request, Jimmy Carter, Gerald R. Ford and Richard M. Nixon agreed to participate in the official U.S. delegation which will attend Sadat's funeral Saturday. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. will lead the group.

Reagan himself, acting on the advice of U.S. security agencies, decided "with great regret" to stay home, said White House communications director David Gergen.

Sadat's shift away from the Soviet Union and toward the United States occurred during Nixon's presidency. One of Nixon's final trips abroad as president was to Egypt a few weeks before he resigned in August 1974. Unswerving support for Sadat has been a mainstay of American foreign policy since then.

Haig was the White House chief of staff at the time of Nixon's trip.

On Wednesday, it was Haig who offered the administration's first major policy statement on the Middle East following Sadat's death.

He called Sadat "a gigantic personality" and said the United States must take from his death "a fresh determination to complete his work."

Haig pledged full support for Hosni Mubarak, Sadat's hand-picked successor, adding that the United States "is pledged to work with Egypt and our other friends in the region to build a structure of relationships which will protect and advance our mutual interests in the Middle East."

Health Officials Discount Food Poisoning Rumors

By JERI CURTIS
Staff Writer

None of the intestinal infection cases reported in Hereford during the past month have been traced to a single source, nor has any fast food restaurant been closed, according to local doctors and the district health department head.

The unusual outbreaks of shigella and a salmonella is "something we should not see much of in the twentieth century," says Dr. Gerald Payne, county health officer, "because normally the indoor plumbing would take care of its spread."

The most common transmission of the bacteria is through persons not washing their hands after going to the bathroom and before eating.

Shigella is a bacteria which causes violent diarrhea and stomach cramps for three or four days. Salmonella has similar symptoms, however it is not as severe. Both are carried through fecal material, but can be picked up differently.

Doris Morgan, assistant director of nursing at Deaf Smith General Hospital, said about 20 cases of shigella have been treated in the past month. Dr. Henry C. Moritz, district health department director, said a little over a dozen cases of salmonella were reported to his office during September and about four since Oct. 1.

Dr. Payne said he knew of no cases of food poisoning or botulism in the city. He said food poisoning was a self-contained illness caused by a toxin produced by food left out in room temperature too long. Salmonella and shigella are bacteria which grow and spread.

Both doctors said that as far as they knew, no fast food restaurant had been closed or reprimanded in regard to the outbreak.

"We have shaken down all the food services and they were all clean," said Moritz. "Some were not what we really like to see, but the fast food places were not implicated in the outbreak."

Payne said that there may have been several cases in which a person may have eaten at a specific fast food place within the incubation period of the infection, but that did not mean the illness was particularly contracted at the restaurant.

Taco Villa has been the restaurant most popularly assaulted by rumors that the state health department ordered them closed for several days.

Freddie Torres, manager, said all his employees were tested about three weeks ago when the outbreak began and none found to be carriers of anything.

"Everything proved good here," he said, adding that a health department doctor told him that three persons who had eaten at Taco Villa before they became sick, had three different kinds of intestinal infections.

"Kids come in here every single day to eat," he explained. "Sometimes there are as many as 250 who come for lunch. If this had been where it started, everybody would have been sick. Plus, all my workers eat here, and I eat here, and none of us have been sick."

He said the only days he has been closed have been Christmas, New Year's and Thanksgiving.

Moritz said that theoretically, the outbreak could have started at the feed yards. With cattle being fed grain laced with antibiotics the bacteria could build up a resistance to the antibiotics, and be harder to treat in humans. He said one or two of the cases were from persons who worked at the feed yards, but those were not enough to isolate a common source.

The only common point was that all but one case reported was from persons living north of U.S. 60.

Moritz said it is "the season" for an outbreak, noting that a similar surge in cases occurred in Hereford last year at this time. He said in the summertime and warm weather people get careless with food preparation and often foods aren't properly kept.

With children back in school and the various fairs going on, the chances of spreading the diseases are increased.

Both doctors and Ms. Morgan said the best way to prevent the infection is to practice better sanitation and personal hygiene.

Hearts Hinder

Twin Separation

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Tests Wednesday evening on the Siamese twins born recently in a set of triplet girls show the two have congenital heart defects that make them inseparable, Sierra Medical Center spokesman Lynne Freeman said.

The twins, joined at the chest and upper abdomen, had been in stable condition in Sierra's intensive care nursery since their birth Sept. 24. Their conditions worsened Wednesday, and Dr. Stanley Wagner and Dr. David Gough performed tests to see if heart problems caused the decline.

The test involved injecting a dye into heart blood vessels to see how the heart is pumping and if the blood supply to the heart is blocked.

Late Wednesday, the twins were in critical but stable condition.

The babies' pediatrician, Dr. Jose Alva, had been optimistic about the chance of separating the infants.

But Wednesday evening Mrs. Freeman said the doctor said that because of the heart defects, the twins "are inseparable at this time."

The names of the babies and their family has not been released.

Gunshot Wound

Kills Officer

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — A Los Fresnos police officer has died after being critically wounded last week, shot by a gunman that authorities believe had killed a Texas Department of Public Safety trooper only moments before.

Enrique Carrisalez, 25, was shot once in the chest Sept. 22, when he stopped a car for a routine traffic violation. DPS officer David Irvine Tucker was killed near Los Fresnos just minutes before by a bullet that struck him in the head.

Carrisalez, who died Wednesday, had been on the critical list at Valley Baptist Medical Center in Harlingen since Sept. 22. At only one time was he able to talk with his wife, hospital officials said.

Leonel Torres Herrera, 34, has been accused of shooting both Rucker and Carrisalez and is being held in Cameron County Jail on a capital murder charge.

A Cameron County grand jury meets next Wednesday to decide whether to indict Herrera for murder.

Carrisalez had been on the police force of Los Fresnos, a Lower Rio Grande Valley town near Harlingen, for less than a year.

Three Railways May Close Nine Stations

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway Co. has asked the Texas Railroad Commission for permission to close at least nine agency stations in West Texas and move operations to regional freight offices in two cities.

Railway officials said Wednesday that service would not be abandoned, but centralized at San Angelo and Brownwood. Lawrence Simmons, Santa Fe spokesman in Dallas, said the proposed move would provide more efficient operations.

"The only difference in service would be that instead of dialing the number of the local agent, the shipper would dial a toll-free number and use the regional office," Simmons said.

San Angelo will absorb the work load of Ballinger, Barnhart, Big Lake, Alpine, Rankin and Fort Stockton. Brownwood will absorb Coleman, Dublin and Comanche agency stations.

Paper To Appeal Supreme Court Ruling

LUFKIN, Texas (AP) — Attorneys for The Lufkin News are determining whether to appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court a judge's ruling barring the public from pre-trial hearings in a bank stockholders suit, the newspaper's publisher says.

The Texas Supreme Court refused last month to hear the newspaper's appeal, which sought to make transcripts available from previous hearings and to bar a local judge from closing any future proceedings in a Texas National Bank stockholders suit.

In the bank suit, several stockholders and a former bank president allege that directors of the bank violated federal banking regulations and usurped the bank board's authority.

Judge Orders TDC To Pay Extra Expenses

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A federal judge has ordered the Texas Department of Corrections to pay an extra $36,467 in expenses of a special master appointed to oversee reforms in the state's prison system.

In addition, U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice has agreed to add consultants to advise Special Master Vincent M. Nathan of TDC's compliance with his mandate to ease overcrowding in prisons.

The expense payment, which is due Oct. 14, brings to $230,000 the amount paid for salaries and expenses of Nathan and his staff since April.

Texas Attorney General Mark White, who has appealed Justice's sweeping order to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, said Wednesday the creation of the post "is costing more than it should."

Nathan, a 43-year-old Ohio attorney, is paid $95 per hour, plus expenses.

Weather

West Texas: Some drizzle, fog this morning. Otherwise, mostly cloudy today with scattered thunderstorms south this afternoon. Partly cloudy northwest. Cloudy south tonight and Friday. Scattered showers, thunderstorms, more numerous south. A few heavy thunderstorms possible southwestern mountains tonight. Warmer north today. Highs mostly 60s except mid 70 to low 80s southwest. Lows mostly 50s except upper 60s lowlands of the Big Bend.

Storms Hit South Texas

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Forecasters predicted some relief today from the thunderstorms whipped by vigorous winds that dumped heavy rains in South Texas, sent streams cascading over their banks and chased some residents to higher ground.

The National Weather Service said there was only a 30 percent chance of additional rain today in San Antonio and the surrounding Hill Country.

Parts of South Texas were deluged by more than 10 inches of rain Wednesday. The downpour swamped roadways and swept one San Antonio man more than 3 miles down churning Olmos Creek.

Rick Anthony Patterson, 20, who fought the swirling waters for 90 minutes after falling into the creek, was found grasping an underpass pillar in 20 feet of water. Firemen threw him a lifeline and pulled him to safety. He was treated for exposure at Brooke Army Medical Center.

Dozens of San Antonio motorists stranded in low-water crossings were rescued early Wednesday, but no injuries or mass evacuations were reported.

A violent storm that some residents insisted was a tornado damaged patios and roofs and uprooted trees in two Southwest Bexar County subdivisions in San Antonio.

Mary Guerra said she awoke to find the stone patio that had been set in concrete behind her home lying in the front yard.

"It was like somebody took a big hand and ripped it out," she said. "It made an awful noise. I wanted to cry. We just had it built about three months ago. We saved so hard to get it done."

Other area residents reported small buildings tossed as far as 50 feet and trees uprooted. A weather service spokesman said the early morning storm could have been a tornado, or a "gust-burst" — a violent wind associated with a thunderstorm.

Heaviest rains were reported southwest of San Antonio at Derby in Frio County, with 10.6 inches, and at Devine, in neighboring Medina County, which recorded 10 inches. The thundershowers began Tuesday.

At Dilley, about 100 miles southwest of here, swollen Cibola Creek rose over a bridge and forced the closing of IH-35, the main highway to Laredo.

San Antonio utility officials reported numerous power outages blamed on lightning from the thunderstorms, attributed to the cold front and an upper air disturbance over Northern Mexico which spread through the Southwestern United States.

Rising water that accumulated early Wednesday morning forced some Hill Country residents to move to higher ground and one motorist was trapped on the hood of his car at a low-water crossing.

Three-fourths Approve Sex Ed

NEW YORK (AP) — Three of four Americans approve of schools giving courses in sex education, the latest Associated Press-NBC News poll says.

The national telephone poll of 1,601 adults contacted in a scientific random sampling also said that a strong majority believes sex education gives students a healthy view of sex and does not encourage sexual behavior.

Seventy-five percent of the respondents said they approve of schools offering sex education courses, while 19 percent disapproved and 6 percent were unsure.

Only six states and the District of Columbia require sex education classes in public schools, according to Planned Parenthood, the family planning organization which supports sex education.

Planned Parenthood also says sex education classes are offered in most other states, though "hundreds of localities" forbid or restrict sex education.

Where parental consent is required before a child may take sex education, Planned Parenthood reports, only 3 percent of the parents refuse to allow their children to attend the classes.

In the latest AP-NBC News poll, 67 percent said sex education classes give students a healthy view of sex, while 19 percent said they do not give a healthy view of sex and 14 percent were not sure.

Sex education has been criticized by conservative groups such as the Moral Majority and lawmakers such as Republican Sens. Jeremiah Denton of Alabama and Orrin Hatch of Utah. Denton and Hatch support legislation to redirect sex education toward a "pro-family" message instead of toward family planning such as contraception and abortion.

Federal studies say one in five teen-agers has sexual intercourse by age 13 or 14, and that more than half the nation's illegitimate births last year were to teen-agers.

Another critic, Scott Thomsen, executive director of the 35,000-member National Association of Secondary School Principals, recently said sex education "borders on educational fraud" because it does little to discourage teen-age sex.

Twelve percent said they think sex education classes encourage students to engage in sexual behavior, while 82 percent said students would engage in sexual behavior regardless of sex education classes and 6 percent were unsure.

In the latest AP-NBC News poll, parents with children 17 or younger were slightly more likely than respondents with no minor children to support sex education and say sex education fosters healthy attitudes toward sex and does not encourage student sexual behavior.

Along religious lines, people who described themselves as born-again Christians were slightly less likely than other respondents to favor sex education and say it promotes a healthy view of sex. And Roman Catholics were slightly more likely than Protestants to endorse sex education and say it promotes a healthy view of sex.

As with all sample surveys, the results of AP-NBC News polls can vary from the opinions of all Americans because of chance variations in the sample.

As he spoke, the Defense Department continued its order, issued shortly after Sadat's death, calling for increased readiness of some elements of the U.S. Rapid Deployment Force and American warships in the Mediterranean.

Haig and the three former presidents will be joined by Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger, former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick, congressional leaders and other dignitaries. Among the former first ladies, only Rosalyn Carter will attend.

Prohibit regulation of data processing and information services, even though they use telephone lines.

Completely deregulate the telephone equipment market. Within four years of enactment, local phone companies would offer only service; consumers would have to purchase or lease equipment from AT&T's new subsidiary or from competing manufacturers.

The expectation is that such competition will lower the cost of phone equipment. Local service rates, however, could rise at first as telephone equipment is removed from AT&T's rate base.

The main issue before the Senate was whether sufficient limits had been clamped on AT&T to prevent it from subsidizing its unregulated operations. Critics contended such requirements as separate books and employees were inadequate to prevent a firm the size of AT&T — the world's largest — from dominating any area it chose to enter.

Rep. Timothy E. Wirth, D-Colo., chairman of the subcommittee that will develop the House bill, reiterated those concerns Wednesday. He said the Senate bill assumed there was already more competition than there really is and predicted the House version will "be more responsible to the needs of large users and residential consumers."

Communications Director David Gergen said all three living former American presidents — Jimmy Carter, Gerald R. Ford and Richard M. Haig Jr. and will also include former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger.

Those long-distance carriers and firms operating satellite and microwave radio facilities would be freed from virtually all regulation.

But the vice president again pledged to carry out his mentor's policies. He also warned Egypt's Libyan enemy, Col. Moammar Khadafy, not to try to take advantage of the upheaval, saying, "I hope no country will try to harm its neighbors."

The government said Sadat would be buried after the state funeral Saturday in a mausoleum on the spot where he was killed. His body remained at the Maadi military hospital where he was pronounced dead and officials said there were no plans for it to lie in state. The president's family remained in seclusion.

Officials said security considerations mandated far more subdued funeral arrangements than were made for Sadat's predecessor, Gamal Abdel Nasser, who died of a heart attack in 1970.

It's Hard Getting Old Alone

It's hard getting old, at best; it's hell getting old alone.

Hattie keeps herself prisoner in her West Side Chicago apartment; the door, locked, dead-bolted and peepholed—but she thought the man who knocked was a neighbor in trouble.

He raped her. Hattie is seventy. "He threatened to kill me. He pulled the phone off the wall. He threatened to harm my great-grandchildren. He took my money. He threw me on the couch. Then he bothered my body."

Endquote. It's open season on anybody who dares to get old. On public transportation their purses are snatched. On the street they are mugged, beaten, killed.

From nursing homes, retirement homes, housing projects—they are disappearing five a day.

Some run away from depression, frustration, loneliness. Some are kidnapped.

And many of the one-in-ten Americans past 65 now huddle behind the barricaded doors and barred windows of their own homes, apartments or rented rooms—prisoners—while outside the streets and parks their taxes paid for are taken over by trash-people.

A congressional panel on aging has been hearing horror stories from anonymous elderly afraid even to testify in public: "I'm afraid all the time; afraid those men who killed my neighbor will come back...."

To leave their solitary confinement for necessary banking, shopping or doctor visits is to run a gutter gauntlet of punks on drugs who prey first on the most feeble.

If there is a more enlightened time ahead for civilization, it will have to reflect on our time with shame and incredulity...

Convicts made comfortable; grandparents left vulnerable.

This is the Dark Ages with a new wrinkle.

The barbarians who vandalized Rome were less callous than these who chain-whip old women.

Harriet Gunningham of Chester, Pennsylvania, 77, went downtown to sign some tax papers, was mugged.

"The only thing I remember is opening my eyes and seeing my left hand lying on the curb. I knew it was my hand only because the rings were mine. I didn't remember anything else until nearly two weeks later."

Her shoulder was so badly injured it had to be replaced with metal. Her arm is useless. The pain is ceaseless.

Americans take pompous pride in celebration-day speeches enumerating equal rights, equality of opportunity, liberty, justice and freedom...

When are our elderly meritorius to be emancipated? When can they hope to be set free?

At Wits End

BY ERMA BOMBECK

Traveling is fun. I know it is. I've seen the posters in the travel offices of Barbie and Ken playing in the surf. I've seen the cruise brochures of a couple celebrating their 50th anniversary on the Love Boat with the streamers falling in their champagne glasses. But I've never seen a couple on a poster like the one I saw having coffee in the Los Angeles airport last week. The man belonged to a veterans' group and had a hat with a lot of patches on it. The woman was wearing a muumuu with a lei that had died around her neck. Their eyes looked like four cigarette holes in an Army blanket. They had just arrived from Honolulu to face a four-hour layover and were trying desperately to hang onto the magic of Bali Hai. "What time do you have now?" she asked. He looked at his watch. "It's 3 a.m. Honolulu time." "You want me to hold the coconuts for awhile?" "No, it's OK. What did you tell the inspector?" "I told him I didn't see how a medfly would hitch a ride on a dead coconut with Indian faces and feathers painted on it. Hawaii isn't that much of a foreign country." "I told you before, Martha, it's not a foreign country. They're one of us." "Then how come they don't print their streets in English?" "You're gonna freeze to death when we get home," he said. "You should've kept your coat out." "Don't start with me Roy. Where do you think our luggage is now?" "The man said either San Francisco or Guam." "Another foreign country." "They're one of us," he said tiredly. "Then how come you don't see them in the Miss America Pageant?" "Maybe you can sleep on the plane going home," he said. "My eyes won't close. I've tried." "It's called jet lag. In a year or two when we get our sleep out, we'll look back and remember the good times in Hawaii." She began to cry. "We didn't even see Don Ho." I left them as an announcement came that their flight was delayed for another hour. Only the film in their camera would remember what a good time they had.

In 1945, President Harry Truman announced that the United States would share its atomic secrets only with Britain and Canada.

In 1961, Prince Souvanna Phouma was chosen premier of the new provisional coalition government in Laos.

Ann Landers

Several 'Gray Mares'

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Thank you so much for including the letter from "The Old Gray Mare" in your column.

My husband and I are in our 70s and about five years ago, with a smile and a sigh of relief, we gave up sex. Since then nothing we have read has given us the feeling that there are others our age who have done the same. We were convinced that we were the only people in America who had decided it was too much trouble. Then along came the letter from "Old Gray Mare." We cheered in unison, "Hooray! We are not alone!" I've never written before, Ann, but I felt a note of appreciation was in order. My husband and I love your column. Not only are you wonderfully amusing, but you have helped us raise two fine, well-adjusted children.—An Older And Grayer Mare given up sex. Plenty of others have too, but they don't advertise it. Actually, it's nobody's business. Thanks for being so open.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: After reading your column today I felt compelled to add another dimension to the problem of the divorced mother with a four-year-old son. While some still can nourish and enrich their grandchildren before or after a son or daughter is divorced, not all are qualified to do so.

I married a man who had custody of his son from his previous marriage. His parents helped care for the boy during the first two and one-half years of his life. He is now four. When we were married, he was spitting, kicking, biting and swearing like a sailor. He had every toy on the market, which he promptly broke. The only discipline he knew was from his father after working hours, which wasn't sufficient. It took me 11 months to undo the damage the child's grandparents had done.

Please publish this letter for grandparents who may be trying to win a child's love by being permissive and overly generous. They mean well, but it never works.—Been There In Jacksonville DEAR JACK: The situation you described is not the special property of grandparents—sometimes parents make this mistake.

Giving children too many things and too much freedom to do as they please results in boredom, confusion, insecurity and lack of respect for authority. These unfortunate kids grow up to be a problem to themselves, their families, teachers, society and sometimes the police.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I would like your frank opinion of a man who takes up a woman's time for 13 years, tells her he is madly in love with her, but he can't get married while his mother is still alive because it would break her heart if he married out of his religious faith.

Then his mother dies. And he says he can't marry her because it would be an insult to his mother's memory.

Three months after he put his mother in the ground he runs off and marries a barmaid he has known for six weeks—and SHE was not a member of his religious faith.—Wondering In Steubenville

DEAR W.: Never mind about HIM. What's wrong with a woman who would let a man string her along for 13 years? That's the question that needs answering.

Republicans Of Committee Disagree With Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans on the Senate Appropriations Committee, in a direct rebuff to President Reagan, say they won't go along with the administration's plan for a 12 percent, across-the-board cut in domestic programs.

Instead, there is growing support for much sharper cuts in defense spending than Reagan wants, and some members are urging postponement of next July's personal tax cut installment.

Despite their differences with Reagan, the GOP group favors the president's plan to trim $16 billion from the deficit for the 1982 fiscal year.

Reporting on two days of private meetings among GOP members of the committee, Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., said Wednesday that it would be "impossible to take 12 percent across the board in all accounts." The feelings of the committee Republicans are important because the panel drafts spending legislation for floor action.

Reagan's proposal was "not politically realistic, nor was it equitable," said Hatfield, the committee chairman, speaking with reporters on a day when all 53 Senate Republicans caucused privately to review Reagan's latest economic proposals.

Hatfield also reported that "strong support ... is emerging to double the president's request" for a $2 billion cut in planned military spending in the 1982 fiscal year, which began Oct. 1.

The Oregon Republican spoke with reporters shortly after a spokesman for the White House hinted broadly that Reagan would veto an $87.4 billion House-passed appropriations bill for the departments of Labor, Education and Health and Human Services. The measure still must go to the Senate.

"This appears to be the kind of bill he was talking about" when the president vowed last week to veto budget-busting legislation, spokesman Larry Speakes said, although he later added that he wasn't definitely saying Reagan would veto the measure.

Even though the bill was approved by voice vote House Speaker Thomas O'Neill, D-Mass., conceded the House probably would uphold a veto.

In the Senate, Hatfield said Republicans on the Appropriations Committee decided to seek cuts of $1 billion combined in defense and domestic programs. The compares with a total of $10 billion that Reagan called for in those areas.

Twelve of the 39 U.S. vice presidents have become presidents.

Old Cop-Show Theme Has New Twist

NEW YORK (AP) — Buddy-buddy cops, a persistent television theme, gets a new wrinkle tonight when two women, Loretta Swit and Tyne Daly, have the chance to pal around, bicker and be superhuman crime-solvers in CBS' television movie "Cagney and Lacey."

On the level of two characters breaking barriers and moving into another restricted TV area, "Cagney and Lacey" is refreshing and a real breakthrough in the male-dominated TV world, which generally still views women in safe, stereotypical roles.

"Cagney and Lacey," in the works for six years, was originally intended for Raquel Welch and Ann Margaret, but they weren't affordable.

In the past, when women were depicted in security roles, they were women first and professionals second.

"Charlie's Angels" was really a fashion-and-flaunt show. "Police Woman" was a vehicle for Angie Dickinson. You never lost sight of the fact she was a woman, who just happened to be a cop. Whenever pretty Pepper got into danger, Earl Holliman would come to the rescue with guns blazing.

Even if women have played honorary law-and-order roles before, they certainly never have been partners and pals in crime or crime-solving, like ABC's "Starsky and Hutch," or Robert Redford and Paul Newman in "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid."

Ms. Swit, the hard-boiled Hot Lips on "M-A-S-H," is well-cast as the impatient, single woman of the team. In a nice role reversal, she's the one who leaves a strange bed and dresses for work. "I'll call you," she says, heading for the door.

Ms. Daly is harder to take as the by-the-book member of the team, attempting to balance a demanding job and a failing marriage.

The script is by Barbara Avedon, based on a story she co-wrote with Barbara Corday. They capture well the relationships between women but fall into the stereotype trap when drawing male characters and their resistance to women cops. The only fellow policeman sympathetic to Cagney and Lacey is black.

Lacey's disintegrating relationship with her woe-begone, out-of-work husband has possibilities, but it comes across too one-dimensionally.

DOUBLE GUNN BROS. STAMPS TUESDAY

Coverage of Convention Hurt Chances

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Chief Justice Joe Greenhill of the state Supreme Court says television coverage of a judges' convention in Corpus Christi did not help the cause of getting cameras into Texas courtrooms.

Greenhill notified the news media Wednesday that the court, which makes the rules for Texas judges, had decided against allowing televised trials.

The court's decision, which Greenhill indicated was 9-0, abided by the results of a poll that showed judges at the recent Corpus Christi convention opposed televised trials, 182-36.

"Television coverage of the convention was not helpful," Greenhill said at a news conference Wednesday afternoon. "Some of the judges said the media covered only one side and asked, 'Is that how they are going to cover our trials?'"

He said television crews used a lot of lights and set up their cameras "without regard to whose lap they sat in, including mine." He said television cameras, tripods and cameramen blocked his view of the speakers.

Greenhill suggested some other possible reasons why judges voted so heavily against televised trials:

— Although guidelines recommended by a State Bar of Texas committee gave each judge total discretion, many didn't want to decide whether to allow TV coverage.

"You all can put a great deal of pressure on people, whether you realize it or not. A judge telling you all to get out takes a good deal of courage, whether you all realize it or not," Greenhill told reporters.

— Many judges feared television cameras would affect the behavior of witnesses, as suggested by prominent Austin defense lawyer Roy Minton.

Minton said he thought that was the big reason for the judges' decision.

The issue of cameras in the courtroom came to the court in a petition filed last year by the Texas Associated Press Broadcasters.

The executive director of the Texas Association of Broadcasters, a statewide trade association of television and radio stations, said his organization would keep fighting for televised trials.

"We're totally disappointed, but we don't intend to stop trying to get into the courthouse. I don't know what our options are, but a lawyer is checking. We're not going to quit," said Bonner McLane of Austin, who served on the State Bar committee.

Greenhill, however, counseled against trying in the near future to run the issue by the judges once more.

"It would not be helpful to bring it up again real soon," Greenhill said, but added, "Nothing is forever."

Wayne Fisher of Houston, president of the State Bar, agreed with Greenhill that in view of the "overwhelming" vote of the judges there was little hope of bringing televised trials to Texas in the near future.

"If it was a real close vote, I would say bring it up next year for reconsideration. But it wasn't," said Fisher, who added he favored televising trials under the guidelines recommended by the State Bar committee.

The guidelines said each judge should have total authority to allow cameras in his or her courtroom or to keep them out and to designate camera positions.

Not more than two television cameras or still cameras could be in the courtroom at one time. Crews could not move about, and cameras could not have lights or noisy motors.

Glen Moyer of WOAI in San Antonio, the AP Broadcasters' president for radio, called the decision "a shame."

"I think this is a vote against progress in the state of Texas. ... I thought surely that with the success of televised trials in Florida, that Texas would see the light," Moyer said.

Minton said he was "delighted" and said the decision would prevent "a circus" in the courtroom. Before the court's prohibited televised trials in 1965, a circuslike atmosphere prevailed, he said.

Moyer said modern technology had done away with the noise and bright lights that used to accompany television cameras into the courtroom.

"I don't buy the old adage that the presence of the media turns the courtroom into a circus," Moyer said.

Cats Come First For Couple

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — When it comes down to paying the rent or feeding the cats in the Schuler household, the cats get fed.

That's because Gene and Rusti Schuler wouldn't want their cats — three lions — running around the house hungry.

"And if it comes down to a can of beer or feeding the cats, the cats come first," Schuler adds.

The Schulers spend more than $200 a month for the 17 pounds of raw meat consumed each day by Stanley, Sheba and Sandi.

"I couldn't imagine life without these animals," Mrs. Schuler said. "They're like our kids."

The lions are so tame, they at times seem no more threatening than big, shaggy dogs. But the Schulers don't take the relationship for granted.

"If you lose your fear, your respect, you're in trouble," said Schuler, a former circus animal trainer who now earns a living by making cypress clocks.

"You must realize that if they wanted to get you, there's nothing you could do to stop them. They're a cat first of all — strictly independent."

Schuler said he's been bitten only once, by Stanley, since the lions joined the family four years ago. That was during a University of Florida homecoming performance, and Schuler finished the show wearing a shoe filled with blood.

A lover of lions, he acquired his trio to save them from probable extermination, he said.

Sheba, a 350-pounder, was raised at a pet by a man in Ormond Beach, but was disturbing the neighbors with her roars at night.

Sandi, also 350 pounds, was acquired from a circus trainer who was concerned about her worsening temper, particularly after she bit off a monkey's arm.

Stanley, meanwhile, was suffering from rickets as a result of malnutrition when Schuler took him from the Alachua County Humane Society. Now, at age 4, Stanley is a healthy 250 pounds and still growing, although his back remains bent from the bout with rickets.

Whitefaces To Face Winless Tascosa Rebels

Stuffed

Robert Gonzalez (78) eliminates the throw of Amarillo quarterback Monte Slatton in last week's game. Gonzalez, along with Bruce Clarke (30) and Aubrey Richburg (50) provided tr tremendous pursuit of the Sandies as well as the rest of the defense. The defense will again be tested as the Whitefaces go up against a speedy Tascosa backfield this week.

By BOB NIGH
MANAGING EDITOR
Hereford Whiteface head coach Don Cumpton finds himself in a quandry this week as his unbeaten Herd (5-0) prepares to meet a Tascosa Rebel bunch which has failed to notch a win this year (0-5), and which will be just aching for the chance to upset the highly-touted Whitefaces at Amarillo's Dick Bivins Stadium tomorrow night.

While you might expect Cumpton to be basking in the light of his super-nova Whitefaces, who have yet to be seriously challenged enroute to an unblemished mark, he isn't making any appearances on the rubber chicken circuit.

In the early afternoons you'll find him fidgeting around the HHS fieldhouse as he waits for the gridders to show up for practice.

"The main thing we've got to do this week is to get our mind right and be mentally prepared," Cumpton said Wednesday afternoon. "We've got to worry about one game at a time, and not about the team coming up or the one we played last week."

confidence. "We're not over confident...that's not a problem we have to worry about," the coach said. "We've just got to be careful about looking ahead to Plainview; not just the players, but the whole town as well."

And, while the Rebels look like a prime contender for District 3-5A doormat laurels, Cumpton says they'll be much better this week than they have shown yet this year. "They've had 10 starters out this year," he revealed. "But, they've held them out and gotten them all well, and we look for them to be at full strength."

Quarterback Jay Cleveland (6-2, 175, Sr.) leads the Tascosa offense, and is what Cumpton termed "a major college prospect." Help in the backfield comes from fullback James Guerrero (5-11, 195, Sr.) who is the Amarillo loop's third-leading rusher with 281 yards on 54 carries this season.

Cleveland, who has thrown for 317 yards in a 22-62 performance, also has seen eight of his aeriels picked off by opponents.

Cleveland's favorite target is tight end Mark Carder, who leads his district in receiving with 15 catches for 241 yards and a pair of touchdowns.

The Rebels throw "a lot of stuff" at opponents offensively Cumpton said. "They run a Slot-I, Tandem-I, Straight-T and Wing-T," he said. "They are real balanced, and Cleveland likes to throw the ball."

Defensively, the Rebels employ a 5-3 or Split-6 defensive front, and their secondary uses a straight man-to-man lineup.

"What it comes down to is whether or not your receivers are better than their defensive backs," Cumpton said. "They like to line up and make you throw the ball."

That's understandable since the Rebels own the worst defense in District 3-5A against the run with 1,070 yards given up. Against the pass Tascosa ranks second in their loop with 408 yards allowed.

The Rebels offer the Herd one final chance to make any corrections they might need before the district shootout begins next week at Plainview.

"We've got to work on our mental mistakes," Cumpton said. "We're still missing too many blocking assignments."

"We've also got to get everybody healthy," Cumpton said, revealing that a pair of standout players have been slowed this week.

"Ken Cospser and Aubrey Richburg were both injured in the Amarillo High game last week," the coach said. "Ken has a bad ankle injury, and he is very, very questionable for this week. Aubrey had a slightly twisted knee last week, but he is still a probable starter."

Cumpton said a final decision about both Cospser and Richburg will be made just prior to game time tomorrow night, much as was done last week with running back Wayne High, who was slowed by an ankle injury against the Sandies.

Cospser regularly handles the deep snap chores for the Herd in addition to his middle linebacking duties. If he is unable to play this week, senior Kevin Hamby will make the snaps.

One player who will be raring to go is Herd punter Don Delozier, who had an outstanding game against the Sandies last Friday night. The district's leading punter of a year ago really put things together against Amarillo High, carding a 43.5 average on five kicks, including punts of 70 and 61 yards.

"Don had an excellent game last week," Cumpton said. "He always starts out kinda slow each year, and comes around."

Cumpton, and Herd fans as well, are hoping that the Whitefaces as a whole are following that trend. The rodeo gets down to the final four go-rounds beginning next week, and the "Faces will be looking to be wearing all-around buckles when the dust settles on Nov. 5.

Fanning's Expos Win Game 1 Against Phillies

By BOB GREENE AP Sports Writer

It was the first major league postseason managerial appearance for Montreal's Jim Fanning and Milwaukee's Buck Rogers. Fanning was a winner, while Rogers was a loser. However, they spoke about the same basic theme.

"It's only one of what could be five," Fanning said after his Expos defeated the Philadelphia Phillies 3-1 Wednesday to take a 1-0 lead in the National League East best-of-five divisional playoff.

"Losing tonight was not a catastrophe, although every game certainly is big in a short series," Rogers said after the New York Yankees trimmed his Brewers 5-3 for a 1-0 lead in their American League East series. "But it makes tomorrow a bigger game for us."

The Yankees and Brewers were to meet at 3:10 p.m., EDT, today in Milwaukee, while the Phillies and the Expos clash in their second game at 8:15 p.m., EDT, at Montreal.

Meanwhile, the Oakland A's head home with a 2-0 lead over the Kansas City Royals, while the Houston Astros take a 2-0 advantage to Los Angeles to play the Dodgers. Both series will resume on Friday.

Oakland edged Kansas City 2-1 in the AL West Wednesday and Houston nipped Los Angeles 1-0 in 11 innings in the NL West.

"There's no doubt that the team which wins the first game of a series has a better statistical chance to win it," said Montreal pitcher Steve Rogers after he combined with Jeff Reardon to stop Philadelphia. "But if you think we're going to sit back and take it easy, no thank you."

"We've seen too many teams lose three straight after winning the first game," Rogers added.

Fanning, who took over as Expos manager on Sept. 8 when Dick Williams was fired, said he told his batters to lay off the low-breaking pitches of Philadelphia's ace Steve Carlton.

"Our players have hit against Carlton many times, and they all remember his stuff," Fanning said. "If they did anything to help themselves, it was laying off those pitches on which he gets so many strikeouts."

Carlton worked six innings, gave up seven hits and struck out six. He walked five, unusually high for the left-hander, who has won three Cy Young Awards.

"He (Carlton) doesn't often get beat," said Phillies Manager Dallas Green. "He wasn't the same Steve Carlton, but he pitched a good baseball game."

Montreal jumped out front in the first when Jerry White reached on a fielder's choice, stole second and scored on Gary Carter's two-out double.

After Keith Morelapd knotted the score with a second-inning homer, the Expos took a 2-1 lead in the bottom of the inning on a double by Tim Wallach and a single by Chris Speier.

Montreal's final run came in the fourth when Speier walked, was sacrificed to second and scored on a double by Warren Cromartie.

Yankees 5, Brewers 3
Rick Cerone's two-run double capped a four-run inning and the Yankees used brilliant relief pitching by Ron Davis and Rich Gossage to beat Milwaukee.

"I had a pretty good fastball, and when I got ahead I tried to pitch to spots," Davis said after earning the victory with 22-3 innings of no-hit, four-strikeout relief. "I threw the ball probably faster than I have since the strike."

A's 2, Royals 1

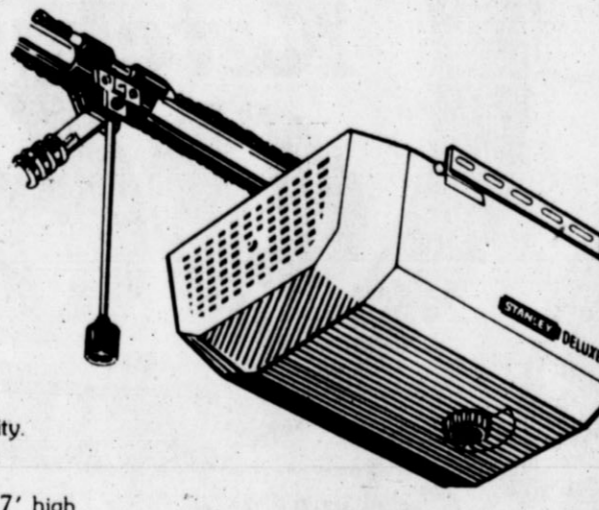

Oakland's Tony Armas, who pulled a muscle in the sixth inning, rapped his fourth hit of the game in the eighth—a double through the legs of Kansas City third baser an George Brett — chasing home Dwayne Murphy with the winning run.

Armas said he felt the pain in the right side of the groin area when he darted back to second base after a fly ball out in the sixth.

Steve McCatty struck out three, walked four and gave up only six hits to the Royals in going the distance for the win.

Bobby Unser's Title Appeal Overturned

By STEVE HERMAN AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A special U.S. Auto Club appeal panel on Thursday overturned a one-lap penalty against Bobby Unser and restored him as winner over Mario Andretti in last May's disputed Indianapolis 500-mile race.

A written decision by a special USAC panel was in the mail Wednesday.

For the first time in the long history of the Indy 500, the apparent winner, Unser, was demoted to second place because of a one-lap penalty imposed a day after the race.

"We've got to see how it's written," King said of the decision by the panel composed of chairman Edwin Render, a law professor at the University of Louisville, and former USAC presidents Reynold MacDonald and Charlie Brockman. "I think it's going to be rather lengthy, from what I understand."

Unser, however, said Wednesday he was sure he had lost the appeal.

"We knew some time ago which way it would go," Unser said in Phoenix, Ariz., where he was promoting an Indy-car race scheduled for Oct. 31. "They were already talking about what the court costs would be, so that should tell you something."

Unser planned to be in northern New Mexico with his brother, Al, on an annual elk hunting trip today. He was expected to check with Penske by telephone.

The appeal panel based its findings on testimony given by all the parties involved during two sessions of hearings at USAC headquarters in June and July. Attorneys for Unser and USAC, which was acting on behalf of Andretti, submitted briefs to Render in August.

Roger Penske, Unser's car owner, said Render told him by telephone on Wednesday that the decision was in the mail. He said Render offered no indication of which way the decision went.

A Penske spokesman said Unser, if necessary, would consider continuing the battle with a further appeal to the Automobile Competition Committee for the United States, the domestic arm of the Federation Internationale de L'Automobile, which is the international governing body for auto racing.

Unser previously said he would take the matter to civil court if his appeals within the racing fraternity were rejected.

Unser beat Andretti across the finish line by eight seconds in the May 24 race, but Andretti protested to USAC that Unser had illegally passed a line of cars as he left the pits during a caution period on the 150th lap.

When the official standings were posted the next morning, Unser had been penalized one lap and dropped to second place behind Andretti. The difference in prize money between first and second was about $94,000.

Unser contended in his appeal to the USAC panel that there was no written rule on passing cars while coming out of the pits.

Key Hitting Gives Astros Win Over Dodgers

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's Denny Walling, typecast as the steady pinch hitter deluxe, admits he sometimes takes his frustrations out on a speed bag.

Walling took a 10-minute speed bag session Tuesday night in a move that may establish a norm for pinch hitters everywhere.

Walling turned from a punch hitter to pinch hitter Wednesday with a two-out 11th inning single to lift the Astros to a 1-0 victory over Los Angeles and a 2-0 lead in their best of five National League playoff series.

"The speed bag is my way of releasing my frustrations," said Walling, who struggled through the regular season with a .234 average. "I don't like to take my problems home with me and the speed bag helps me leave them in the clubhouse."

Walling noted from the dugout that Dodger outfielders were playing shallow and when he came to bat in the 11th inning with the bases loaded and two out he drove a fastball from reliever Tom Niedenfuer over right fielder Derrel Thomas' head.

"I'm not going to try to coach their team," Walling said. "They had been moving people around throughout the game, doing a good job of it. A lot of teams play us shallow in this ballpark and sooner or later they get burned."

The Astros now travel to Los Angeles in the familiar position of needing to win only one of the next three games to repeat as Western Division champions.

Houston faced an identical situation in 1980 when the Astros led the Dodgers by three games with three games to play in the regular season. Houston lost all three games but won the title in a one-game playoff.

"It seems almost like just last week we were going out there with the same odds," Astros' Manager Bill Virdon said. "I know that was last year and some how I hope we can win one of them this time."

Walling said the 1980 playoff drama helped make the Astros a better team. "That playoff game last year made us winners," Walling said. "We've been through it all now and we know what it takes." The Dodgers left 13 runners stranded including Rick Monday at third base with two out in the sixth and Davey Lopes reached third with one out in the seventh.

up Walling's game winner. That's all it took to send the Dodgers packing for home with their backs against the wall.

"I've been playing 11 years now and we've always bounced back," Dodger first baseman Steve Garvey said. "This is the first time we've lost two playoff games in a row and that should be enough incentive to come back and use our home field advantage. You talk about must games, Friday is a must game."

Houston starter Joe Niekro and Los Angeles' Jerry Reuss carried the scoreless duel through most of the game. Reuss went nine innings and scattered five hits, while Niekro set down the Dodgers eight innings on seven hits.

"I'm looking forward to going back to Los Angeles because we are a better team than we were a year ago," Niekro said. "Tony Scott and Phil Garner have strengthened this team and we are playing much more relaxed now. We've been through everything that can be thrown at us. We just want to go out now and win it Friday."

ANB's 10K Classic Set For Oct. 17

Weekend joggers and serious runners alike can enjoy the challenge of one of the area's most popular races — Amarillo National Bank's 10K Classic.

The 10K Classic and Two-Mile Fun Run will take place Saturday, October 17. Over 500 runners are expected for the third anniversary of the event.

According to Chip Gilmour, Amarillo National's vice president of marketing, the popularity of the race has increased each year. "More people are finding out how much fun it is," he said. Festivities in addition to the racing action will include music by the Tri-State Bluegrass Express, fly-overs by the Amarillo National Bank balloon (weather permitting), and free hot dogs and liquid refreshments for entrants. Every participant will receive a 10K T-shirt, and numerous awards will be given.

Gilmour commented that the race would be good for runners who have not competed previously. He explained, "A lot of people jog regularly. They know the good feeling that they get from exercising, from the fresh air. Running in a race adds a whole new dimension to that experience. There's a feeling of real accomplishment, something to be proud of." Gilmour added that the two-mile Fun Run or the 6.2 mile 10K Classic let runners choose the distance that suits them.

Entry forms for the October 17 race are available at sporting good stores, the Amarillo YWCO or YMCA, or at Amarillo National Bank. Entry fees are $7.00 advance for the 10K ($8.00 on race-day) and $5.00 advance for the Two-Mile Fun Run ($6.00 on race-day).

WHO AM I?

I never made the pros. In the 1930s, I was the "other" end on the college team that featured Don Hutson. Why? I was just a blocker. Much later, I could have signed for big money with the Redskins. I'm glad I didn't, though.

ANSWER: Bear Bryant, the 1954 All-Time All-American player who is now coach of the Crimson Tide.

LEGAL NOTICE

Deaf Smith Electric Cooperative, Inc., P.O. Box 753, Hereford, Texas, 79045, is making an application for a loan from the Rural Electrification Administration. The loan will provide funding for the needed construction as determined in a recent two-year work plan. This construction includes a new substation of approximately 10,000 KVA capacity along with the necessary transmission lines to serve it. This substation will be located in Castro County, with exact location to be determined by load growth demand. This new construction further includes distribution lines of 146.8 miles of overhead line and 22.3 miles of underground line, which will provide service for 1044 new consumers which the Cooperative anticipates serving in 1982 and 1983. New distribution tie-lines will be constructed to improve voltage-levels, increase capacity, and improve system operating economics. Most of this construction will be located in Parmer and Castro Counties.

These facilities will make it possible for the Cooperative to meet the increasing demands for electric power. If there are comments on the environmental aspects of the proposed construction, it should be submitted to the Cooperative before November 1, 1981. Additional information may be obtained at the Cooperative at the above address.

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Common mental changes

DEAR DR. LAMB - My husband is 74. His doctor says he has poor circulation in his head. He takes Cyclospasmol. He often becomes confused, insists on driving but occasionally loses his sense of direction, changes lanes without looking and has gone through a red light.

not been able to draw his doctor out on it and I don't know how to cope.

He has no weight problem, never drank except a little brandy now and then, does not smoke, drinks neither coffee nor tea.

Please help us with any comment you can. How serious is this? What can we expect? Is this a sign of anything like a stroke? I have

DEAR READER - You are describing a difficult but frequent problem. Your husband has mental changes often seen in older people.

About one in five of these are caused by a medical problem that we can recognize. And sometimes this is because of poor circulation. However, there is a general tendency, even among doctors, to think that all mental changes in older people are related to poor circulation. There are many other causes.

If your husband does have poor circulation to the brain, it is important to know what and where the circulation problem is. Some of these can be helped, with a bypass operation around an obstructed artery or by other modern surgical techniques. Not all of them can be helped but it is important to identify those who can.

Whenever a person has a medical problem that limits his performance ability as in driving, he should not drive as a matter of safety to himself and others. Mental confusion is just as dangerous as visual problems that prevent a person from seeing properly. Your husband's doctor should establish your husband's ability and be sure your husband understands his limitations if he has any.

DEAR DR. LAMB - My grandmother is having surgery. She is having her womb and liver taken out. What I want to know is can you live without your liver. People tell her she can't live without her liver. The doctor wants to take her liver because she has yellow blood and they say her liver is damaged. I'm scared. She is 70. What is your advice?

DEAR READER - I'm certain your grandmother would be pleased to know you are so concerned about her. I doubt that the doctors are going to remove all of her liver. People have had liver transplants and lived. And, surprisingly, up to 80 percent of the liver can be removed and the remaining portion will function adequately. It will also regenerate from the portion that is left. The liver is one of the organs that has the greatest capacity for regeneration.

The yellow blood you mention probably means your grandmother has jaundice. There are many reasons for this and I am sure your grandmother is quite ill. I hope she does well.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I would like to know the difference between syphilis by birth and that by intercourse. I am a birth contact. I was 7 when the disease was found. My eyes were affected by it. I have given birth to fine healthy children. I have made it a point to tell any doctor who sees me about it. Is there a chance that I will have a recurrence? If so, what would the symptoms of congenital syphilis be? I am 42.

DEAR READER - You undoubtedly have been cured of any infectious organism as a result of your treatments. And tests that would have been done since then have surely confirmed this. The main difference between congenital syphilis and sexually transmitted syphilis in adults is that the infection can affect the developing body. One manifestation was the damage to your eyes. It can also affect the shape of the skull, the teeth and even the nose.

If you have had no skeletal or other changes during childhood you need not expect any new changes now. And you cannot transmit the disease because there are no infectious organisms in your body to transmit. Women who are sexually active need to know they can catch syphilis during pregnancy and the infection may be hard to detect even though it is affecting the baby.

Honest, No Thrills Sports Journalism

By HAL BOCK AP Sports Writer

Journalism. More and more, sports television is moving away from the show business approach and edging boldly toward critical interpretation of the games it covers. That's called journalism and it can only augur well for the industry.

ABC's Al Michaels, while broadcasting the opening game of the American League West Division playoffs this week, called this fragmented baseball season, the nightmarish strike and the resulting split schedule

"an aberration."

On the same network the next night, Keith Jackson, working the other half of the American League miniplayoffs, made the point that two of the teams with the best records in baseball were at home then, victims of this scatterbrained second season concept.

On NBC, where the National League divisional playoffs are being shown, Joe Garagiola and Tony Kubek minced no words in criticizing the added tier of playoffs. Analyst Bryant Gumbel has taken the same position on the air.

All of this comes under the category of honesty in broadcasting and it's a refreshing change from the shill...and sometimes shrill...approach taken by many hometown commentators.

Chuck Howard, ABC Sports' vice president in charge of program production and the producer of the network's coverage of the World Series and the AL East Division playoffs, welcomes the development.

"To do anything else is wrong," said Howard. "Viewers today are so sophisticated, you can't pull the wool over their eyes. I think they appreciate honesty."

So, honesty is what they get. And, as part of that commitment, Howard takes a very straight-forward, honest approach to his production. There is no razzmatazz. Just simple, complete coverage. Howard will not, for example, parade each and every replay he has available on any given controversial play past his audience. That would be show business, not journalism.

"Our philosophy is to pick the best replay and show that one or maybe two angles slowly," Howard said. "What's the sense of showing a half-dozen other views that might be blocked by a player's leg or arm. That's just showing off electronic hardware and it doesn't add anything to the telecast."

ABC is refining its baseball coverage. It moved into the sport in 1976, and Howard admits that the collision that year with the Montreal Olympics hurt the network's early efforts in baseball.

"The emphasis that year was the Olympic Games and baseball suffered because of that," Howard said. "We never really got into it that year. So I consider 1977 our first year for baseball. By the end of that year, our coverage was vastly improved from the standpoint of documentation of the game."

HHS Rodeo Club

The Hereford High school Rodeo Club participated in a rodeo in McLean last weekend where Rita Ward, seen here, placed third in the break-away roping and sixth in the pole bending event. Steve McConnell placed fourth in steer wrestling. Also participating were Mike Butcher, Chad Mason, Jenness Self, Kirk Sparkman, Shawn McConnell, Joel Smith, Chet Burrows, Clifton McElhane, Brett Baldwin, Brian Lady, Kim Lovvorn, Scott Wilcox, Robert Esqueda and Cary Van Lanningham. Their next rodeo will be at Canadian on Oct. 17 and 18.

Cox Reported Fired by Braves

ATLANTA (AP) — Bobby Cox reportedly says he's longer the manager of the Atlanta Braves, but he's hoping to hear from more than one major league club seeking his talents.

Cox said Braves' owner Ted Turner told him he was fired Wednesday because "a change was needed," the Atlanta Constitution reported today.

Braves officials made no comment on Cox' status, but scheduled a news conference today in which, Turner said, "We will tell everything."

Earlier this week, Turner had refused to say that Cox would be managing the team next year.

In the past week, however, executives of three other major league baseball clubs have been quoted in published reports as saying Braves officials had told them Cox would be fired.
