

'King Cotton' tough on its subjects lately

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) - Cotton is still king in parts of the Texas Plains, but life for its subjects is far from courtly.

Worldwide overproduction and weak demand keep cotton farmers in the Texas Panhandle losing money with every trailer load sent to the gins.

"On the average, we're looking at a good many producers losing money this year," said Donald Johnson, executive vice president of Plains Cotton Growers, Inc. of Lubbock. "Cotton will bring around the loan price, 45 to 47 cents, and very few will show a profit at these prices."

More than 1.18 million Panhandle area acres were planted to cotton last year, producing 401 million pounds and generating $220 million in cotton sales, according to 1984 statistics from the Texas Department of Agriculture.

The loan price is set by government as a levy to be paid on cotton put into the program and sold by government. Johnson told the Amarillo Globe-News that figures vary depending on the area, but farmers spend from 80 to 90 cents to produce a pound of cotton, including costs of living.

Averaging only 47 cents on a pound, he said "they're not getting enough to make a return on the enterprise."

"Even with a good crop, we're going to be in a negative situation as far as profits go," Johnson said. "Within the next two months, we'll see a good many producers make the decision one way or another. We're going to have some that are not going to be able to stay in the business."

Cotton producers are sparse the further north one travels into the Texas Panhandle, but in the southern portion, cotton is a livelihood not only for the producer and his family, but for businesses and entire communities.

Statistics from the Texas Agricultural Extension Service shows 18 Texas Panhandle counties producing cotton in 1984. They averaged 338 pounds per acre, some harvesting as little as 107 pounds per acre to as much as 586 pounds per acre.

Figures are not available for 1986 production, as harvest is still going in some areas. But county extension agents estimated the number of acres would be lower as producers looked for money-making alternatives.

District I, comprised of the northern top 20 counties in the Panhandle, represents 1.1 percent of the state production of cotton, or 1.9 percent of total acreage planted to the crop, according to statistics provided in the 1984 Crops Statistics Report provided by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The statistics show Deaf Smith, Armstrong, Donley, Collingsworth, Wheeler and Gray are the only cotton producing counties in that area, with approximately 70,000 acres of cotton in those counties in 1984.

Cotton is king for Donley and Collingsworth counties, ranking second in economic production only to cattle. Around half of each county's harvested acres is planted to cotton,

16 killed in simultaneous airport attacks

ROME (AP) — Terrorists threw hand grenades and fired submachine guns at holiday travelers in simultaneous attacks on Israel's airline El Al at Rome and Vienna airports today, killing 16 people and wounding up to 100, authorities said.

Although El Al was a target in both instances, witnesses at Rome's Leonardo da Vinci Airport said the terrorists, jumping and screaming, fired indiscriminately at passengers checking in TWA, Pan American and El Al.

In all, eight terrorists were known to be involved at Rome and at Vienna's Schwechat airport, and all were reported killed or captured.

Among those killed at Leonardo da Vinci was an American girl, Natasha Simpson, the 11-year-old daughter of Victor Simpson, The Associated Press news editor in Rome. Also killed were Gen. Donato Miranda, the Mexican military attache in Rome, and his secretary, Genoveva Jaime.

Simpson and his son, Michael, were hospitalized with injuries.

An Italian Interior Ministry spokesman said five terrorists were involved in the Rome attack and that 13 people were killed and about 60 injured. Italian news agencies said the number of injured might reach 77.

Three terrorists were involved in the attack at Austria, police there said, and all fled in a commandeered car, but one was shot dead and the two others were captured. The casualty count in Vienna was three dead, up to 40 wounded.

A spokesman for the Israeli foreign minister said in Jerusalem that "the early indication we have points an accusing finger to the PLO," but both the Palestine Liberation Organization office in Rome and a PLO spokesman in Vienna condemned the attacks.

Pope John Paul called the Rome incident a "vicious attack" and said "I express my strongest condemnation for this act of blood."

In Washington, the Reagan administration condemned the attack and expressed hope the perpetrators would be caught and punished.

"We deplore it and hope the criminals are apprehended and punished," White House spokesman Larry Speakes told reporters.

Man questioned after Amarillo robbery

The Deaf Smith County Sheriff's office reported that an individual allegedly stole several video cassette recorders from Sears in Amarillo, drove to Hereford and was arrested while in the Deaf Smith County Courthouse trying to re-register his car. He was released after he told sheriff's deputies that he was not in Amarillo at the time of the robbery. No charges have been filed.

My wife is a great proofreader and usually catches all the errors. The only problem is—she hasn't worked at the newspaper office in several years and she spots them after they're published.

For instance, in the Christmas edition, she noticed that we had Ben Childers' name spelled "Childress" in the McCaslin Lumber advertisement. Ben has been around long enough that nobody probably noticed the spelling. The Anthony ad urged everyone to watch for the After-Christmas Sale on Dec. 25th—and, of course, should have been Dec. 26th.

We also goofed on the Project Christmas Card page. The project has been sponsored for years by the Hospital Medical & Dental Auxiliary, but this year the project was taken over by L'Allegra Study Club. Our apologies to the study club for having the wrong sponsorship on the page!

Theft at museum may be inside job

Valuable artifacts gone

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A top police official was quoted as saying that the ease with which thieves entered the National Museum of Anthropology and History and stole 144 of its priceless Indian artifacts indicated the theft may have been an inside job.

Police today checked travelers leaving the country in hopes of preventing the thieves from smuggling out the centuries-old gold, jade and stone relics from the Aztec, Mayan and other Indian civilizations.

They apparently were taken on Christmas Eve. The theft was discovered early Christmas Day during a shift change of the guards, museum officials said.

Officials said a complete list of the stolen objects would be released today. There was no immediate estimate of the objects' value.

Col. Rafael Rocha Cordero, deputy director of the Federal Judiciary Police was quoted by the newspaper Excelsior as saying investigators were "baffled" at the ease with which the thieves worked.

In less than three hours, "between two and four" thieves selectively plundered seven showcases in three exhibition rooms, Excelsior quoted Rocha Cordero as saying.

"They knew perfectly well how the place functioned. They had enough time to go through half the museum, which places suspicion on the guards, who were obliged to do the rounds every two hours," the newspaper quoted Rocha Cordero as saying.

Eight guards who were on duty at the museum during the Christmas Eve theft were being questioned but were not charged. The Attorney General's Office said Thursday that they were not considered suspects.

Authorities originally said about 140 artifacts had been taken in what was one of the world's biggest museum thefts on record. But local media later quoted Enrique Florescano, director of the Institute of Anthropology and History that supervises museums and historical sites, as putting the number at 144.

The museum, a squat two-story stone structure, had no electronic detection devices and relied on guards to protect its treasures, Florescano said.

"They were systematic in what they wanted, choosing the best known pieces, as if they had a list in hand," said museum director Marcia Castro Leon.

Excelsior quoted Rocha Cordero as saying the thieves scaled a seven-foot steel fence to enter the museum grounds, then crawled through a broken air-conditioning tunnel to the basement. No locks were picked, no glass was broken, and no door was forced open, officials said.

Maite Gardner, who was allowed inside the museum Thursday morning to take photographs for The Associated Press, said, "The glass from the (wall) display cases was taken out. The clasps that they have underneath were taken off completely and the glass doors put a little off to the side."

The seven showcases in the Maya, Mexico and Oaxaca exhibition rooms were methodically plundered of almost all the artifacts on display from the sacred reservoir at the Mayan city of Chichen-Itza in the Yucatan Peninsula.

Y-T-D tax total ahead of 1984

The City of Hereford last week received a check for $37,662, representing its share of the local sales tax for October.

The state comptroller's office sent checks totaling $56.9 million to the 1,010 cities that levy the one-percent tax. A total tax of 5.125 is levied and the state returns the one percent to cities that levy the local sales tax.

Hereford's October check was slightly below the total for the same month a year ago. However, the year-to-date total of $556,000 is 8.15 percent ahead of last year's figure.

Houston's check for $9.2 million

CSF exceeds $8,000 mark

It was a brighter Christmas for many Hereford families, thanks to the Christmas Stocking Fund and the generous, caring spirit of many local citizens.

Total contributions for the CSF topped $8,000 Friday, surpassing all years but one since the program started five years ago. The project got off to a slow start this year and officials feared it would be an "off" year on donations.

However, the giving picked up the last week and contributions not total $8,001.25. The non-profit group still welcomes contributions to the fund, as there are families still in need.

A group of men started the Christmas Stocking Fund in 1980. The best year for donations was 1982 when the total reached $8,417. Last year's total was $7,336. This year's figure is just $416 away from the record amount.

Mayor's illness could delay vote

ALVIN, Texas (AP) — City officials are trying to decide whether to go ahead with a recall vote for Mayor Ted Hermann, who has been in a coma for 11 days.

Hermann was listed in critical but stable condition Thursday, but has not regained consciousness since a Dec. 16 operation to bypass five blocked arteries leading to his heart, a St. Luke's Hospital spokeswoman said.

Meanwhile, city officials in this Brazoria County community, 20 miles south of Houston, are trying to decide what to do about a petition to recall Hermann.

Margaret Jourdan, owner of an Alvin mobile home park, launched a petition drive — calling for the ouster of Hermann and four City Council members. Ms. Jourdan contends the city officials have lost the "confidence and respect" of the majority of city residents.

A second petition calling for the recall of the entire council has since been withdrawn.

The City Council recently approved the five recall petitions, including one proposing the recall of Russell Donham, 41, who has temporarily taken over Hermann's duties.

Hermann, 47, will be on the ballot if he remains in a coma past the point when the ballots are printed, city officials said. But officials said they will hold off on printing the ballots as long as possible to see what the mayor wants to do once he regains consciousness.

LUBBOCK — Popeye may not care how spinach gives him energy, but chemists at Texas Tech University do. They are grinding hundreds of pounds of the green leaves to study how plants trap light and soil nutrients to generate energy.

"We're focusing on two areas in our research with spinach," said chemistry Professor David B. Knaff. "First, we're looking at how plants convert light energy into chemical energy and, second, we're interested in how plants take soil nitrogen and turn it into compounds useful to them."

After the spinach is ground, chloroplasts and their enzymes are isolated. Chloroplasts are microscopic particles in which the light-dependent reactions of photosynthesis occur. Enzymes speed up nitrogen conversion.

"Plants trap light energy, the source of all energy on the planet, and convert it to chemical energy," Dr. Knaff said. "Explanations of how plants trap energy and convert it change as science grows. Now we know the very early processes in photosynthesis are reactions involving the separation of electrical charges."

Chlorophyll, the molecule that makes plants green, normally has the same number of positive and negative charges before it is exposed to light. After light hits it, one of the negative charges, called an electron, separates and the chlorophyll becomes positively charged.

"The electrical voltage created by this charge separation process drives all the other photosynthetic reactions. Light doesn't direct the whole process as we once thought," he said. "Little electric currents flow in the leaf through a series of proteins that act as biological electricity carriers."

Chemists are trying to determine the makeup of the proteins, where they are located in the chloroplast, how many there are and in what sequence they function.

"We are also wondering if the chemical reactions that occur in spinach are the same as those in people, mice, monkeys and other living things," Knaff said. "This type of research attempts to trace the development of life forms."

Photosynthetic bacteria are being cultured in the lab so their electrical current flows can be compared to those in spinach.

"Spinach is a highly complex plant and these bacteria are much simpler, but many of the electrical current flows in the two are virtually identical. These proteins that transfer electrical currents and carry the energy of light to the rest of the plant appear to be a very ancient biological development," he said.

Plants require light, but also need nitrogen in the soil for making proteins. Unlike light energy, soil nitrogen is a depletable resource. Soil which supports crops year after year becomes low in nitrogen and limits plant growth. Knaff said soil nitrogen depletion is the single most limiting factor on world agricultural productivity.

Chemical fertilizers, which add nitrogen to the soil, at one time were fairly inexpensive. However, making them requires energy and their cost has spiraled along with the cost of natural gas.

Nitrogen fertilizer is broken down into nitrate by soil bacteria, explained Knaff. Plants take in the nitrate and chemically convert it to ammonia which is a basic ingredient of protein. The chemical conversion is sped up by proteins called enzymes.

"The conversion of nitrate to ammonia would be painfully slow if it weren't for these enzymes which speed up the reaction. Plant enzymes work a lot like ones in humans which break down food and speed up digestion," Knaff said. "Understanding how these enzymes catalyze the process is important because they determine how much nitrogen is needed from the soil."

The nitrogen metabolism research is funded for the next three years with a $180,000 grant from the United States Department of Agriculture. The National Science Foundation has donated $65,000 for the electrical current research.

Lawmen call in the dogs

THACKERVILLE, Okla. (AP) — Tracking dogs are assisting authorities in their search on both the Texas and Oklahoma sides of the Red River for a man who held a local marshal at gunpoint and then apparently shot himself when he crashed a roadblock with the marshal's car.

Marshall Gary Reed said Thursday that his patrol car was found at the dead end of U.S. 77 near the Red River along with the man's chrome-plated revolver.

The chase began when man, who was described as in his early 20s but not otherwise identified, grabbed a woman's purse in a discount store parking lot in Gainesville, Texas, about 4 p.m. and headed northward on a motorcycle, Cooke County, Texas, sheriff's deputy C.K. Grundel said.

Grundel said a citizen pursued the man as he ran from the store.

Reed said the man knocked on the door of his home about 3:45 p.m. Thursday and asked for gasoline for his motorcycle to continue a trip to Muskogee.

Reed said after he drove the man to where he had left the motorcycle, he decided to run a check on the license tag, and the man pulled a gun.

Reagan heads West to ring in New Year

WASHINGTON (AP) — After a quiet Christmas at the White House, President and Mrs. Reagan are leaving for California today to wind up 1985 with old friends and continue their tradition of celebrating New Year's Eve in Palm Springs.

The president will end his vacation Jan. 3 when he flies to Mexico, a Mexican border town in Baja, Calif., for a meeting with President Miguel de la Madrid before returning to Washington later the same day.

As they have done each year since coming to Washington in 1981, the Reagans were going first to Los Angeles for two nights in the 8,000-square-foot presidential suite of the Century Plaza Hotel.

The couple has no public appearances scheduled, although they usually see some old friends from their many years of living in the Los Angeles area.

Mrs. Reagan has done some quiet house-hunting there in recent months in anticipation of her husband's retirement in January 1989, but her press secretary, Elaine Crispin, said there are no plans to look at real estate on this trip.

The Reagans sold their home in Pacific Palisades, an affluent suburb of Los Angeles, after moving to Washington. And they regard the adobe ranch house they own in the Santa Ynez mountains outside Santa Barbara, Calif., as too small for use as a full-time residence.

Deadly tapeworm disease spreading

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hispanic immigrants in Southwestern states may become ill or die more often than previously thought from a rare disease in which tapeworms attack the brain and other body tissues, researchers say.

"If (doctors in) the rest of the Southwest started looking for cysticercosis, they probably would find a lot more cases than are being reported," said Frank J. Sorvillo, an epidemiologist and co-author of a study published today in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Records of 497 inpatients treated for cysticercosis at four hospitals in Los Angeles County from 1973 through 1983 were studied by researchers from the national Centers for Disease Control and Sorvillo, of Los Angeles County's Department of Health Services.

"We speculate that cysticercosis is an important disease in other U.S.-Mexico border zones in California, New Mexico, Arizona and Texas, and in cities where large immigrant populations reside," they wrote in the journal.

Cysticercosis is caused by ingesting pork tapeworm eggs or through fecal-oral contact — either by consuming sewage-contaminated food or water or by person-to-person contact, such as when infected cooks fail to wash their hands after using the restroom and then contaminate food.

The eggs enter the bloodstream through the intestines, then invade the brain, heart, muscle, eyes, bone or skin and develop into larvae, the adolescent stage between egg and adult. Infestation of the brain is potentially fatal and can cause epilepsy, abnormal behavior and brain deterioration and inflammation. Eye infestation can cause blindness.

Syrian missiles redeployed

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Prime Minister Shimon Peres said Syria has sent mobile anti-aircraft missiles back into eastern Lebanon, but that Israel was dealing with the matter quietly to avoid an escalation in their five-week-old war of nerves.

Speaking to Israeli newspaper editors Thursday, Peres confirmed previously unofficial reports that Syria had sent the low-altitude SAM-6 and SAM-8 missiles back into Lebanon's Bekaa Valley, where it has stationed an estimated 25,000 soldiers.

Israel said Dec. 15 that Syria had moved the missiles into the Bekaa Valley, but that they were removed after Israel called for the intervention of U.S. diplomats.

Government officials who spoke on condition they not be identified, said Israel again was dealing with the missile crisis through diplomatic channels, apparently through the United States.

AIRPORT

Italian Prime Minister Bettino Craxi said that "according to a first evaluation they (the attackers) probably belong to the extreme Arab-Palestinian fringe, either acting on their own or as a crazy splinter group."

Anna Girometta, who runs a gift shop in the departure lounge at Rome, said, "As soon as the shooting started, people were falling all over the place." The shooting "seemed to go on forever," she said.

Flights accepting passengers' baggage at the time of the attack were TWA 841 to New York, Pan Am 111 to New York and El Al 386 to Tel Aviv.

Some witnesses said the shooting, involving airport security forces, lasted two or three minutes or more.

The attack coincided with one against El Al in Vienna, Austria. The attacks came after Dutch police reported an Interpol warning that a civilian airport might be a terrorist target during the Christmas holidays.

one had claimed responsibility for the attack.

Sica said the arrested terrorists refused to answer questions and their nationalities were not determined.

Another witness, a 48-year-old Italian who insisted on anonymity, told the AP a man in front of him pulled out a Kalashnikov sub-machine gun and started shooting "at everything in sight" and "they were screaming something as they were shooting."

He said the gunman, who looked to be in his teens, was killed by security agents.

"People were falling screaming. It was terrible," he said. Hand grenades, some unexploded, were strewn over the area.

The Rev. Franco Serfustini, the airport chaplain, said he saw police capture one terrorist. He said they "had to defend him because there were those who would have lynched him."

LEROY JOHNSON SR.
Leroy Johnson Sr., 58, died today at 8:32 a.m. at Deaf Smith General Hospital.

Services are pending with Rix Funeral Home.

Johnson was born Dec. 16, 1927, in McLain, Tx. He was a farmer and rancher. Johnson was a member of the Baptist Church.

Johnson is survived by his wife, Doris, of the home; three sons, Leroy Jr. and Jerry, both of Hereford; and Ronnie of Dawn; one brother; three sisters; and two grandsons.

Italy's Interior Ministry spokesman, who refused to be identified, said he was unaware of any Interpol warning. Airport security already been stepped up following a July 1 bombing at Leonardo da Vinci that injured 12 people.

The spokesman said among the dead at Rome were three presumed terrorists who he said "were Middle East types," nine civilians and another man who "we presume is an Israeli security agent."

The ministry spokesman said two terrorists were under arrest in hospitals, both of them wounded and one in serious condition.

Witnesses said one terrorist was seized as he tried to crawl away on a floor covered with blood, shattered glass and bullet-riddled luggage.

The ministry spokesman and witnesses said the terrorists in Rome first threw hand grenades at the check-in area in the crowded airport around 9:10 a.m. and then fired sub-machine guns.

Witnesses said the terrorists had masks partially covering their faces and were dressed in blue jeans and jackets.

Anna Lisa del Grand, a 22-year-old Italian, told AP that she saw three men open fire as she was checking in on a TWA flight to New York.

"They were jumping up and down and they were shooting in sort of a semicircle," she said.

She said she fell to the ground and saw a wounded terrorist flashing a victory signal with his fingers as he died.

Judge Domenico Sica, a top anti-terrorist investigator, told reporters that investigators were convinced the target was El Al, which was right next to TWA and Pan Am. He said no with 53,300 acres in Collingsworth, producing almost $5.3 million in 1984; and 25,900 in Donley, generating around $2.25 million, TDA statistics show.

The top counties in District II and District III, including Bailey, Briscoe, Castro, Childress, Cottle, Floyd, Gray, Hale, Hall, Lamb, Motley, Parmer and Swisher counties of the Texas Panhandle, concentrate more in cotton. Last year Hale County was the state's top producing cotton county with 197,600 acres planted, according to TDA statistics.

Hale County alone produced 113.6 million pounds of cotton for $56.8 million. These counties and the communities that lie within them depend on cotton to keep the economic wheels turning.

But economists say record supplies of cotton worldwide with a weak demand can mean only one thing to the farmer, low prices.

Carryover from the 1985 crop is projected at a record $2 million bales, almost double the annual world carryover for the past four years, said Dr. Carl Anderson, economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

With 1985 U.S. production estimated at about 13.9 million bales and export demands weak, stocks in this country may more than double to some 9 million bales by next summer, Anderson said.

"World cotton production is increasing faster than consumption, and therein lies the problem," he said.

Boa gets stuck in swivel rocker

MACON, Ga. (AP) — Most people have to assemble Christmas presents, but Andre Jones was faced with the opposite problem.

Jones, 20, was forced to disassemble his new swivel rocking chair to extricate his 5-foot-long boa constrictor, Fred, after the snake coiled around the springs seeking a warm spot when the temperature dropped to 12 degrees.

Fred apparently crawled inside the chair through an opening left by a missing upholstery staple, and if anyone swiveled the chair at the wrong time, it could have meant instant death for the snake.

From now on, Fred will stay in his 30-gallon tank in the guest bedroom.

Do's, don'ts for visiting sick

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The enclosed list of do's and don'ts for visiting the sick by Elinor Klein appeared in Parade Magazine. My husband was ill for a long time. Had I seen this list I would have sent copies to friends and relatives.

I don't wish to appear ungrateful, but people need to be educated on this subject. Although you dealt with it several months ago, I hope you consider the enclosed good enough to print.—SOUTH SUBURB READER

DEAR S.S.R.: I do and I shall. Thanks for sending it on.

HOW TO BE A GOOD SICKROOM VISITOR

1. Call the patient first. Your interest and concern are what count, not always your presence. Never pop in unexpectedly.

2. Don't ask what you can bring, but do bring something. It need not be costly. A balloon can give a patient a lift, or a single flower, a pretty stone, a kid's drawing, a funny card, some penny candy, Tokens of affection brighten the spirit and the surroundings. (Remember a long-term convalescent is often on the lookout for that magical good luck charm.)

3. If patients want to talk about their illness, they will. If not, don't ask personal questions.

4. No matter how dreadful the patient looks, try not to appear distressed. The last thing a patient should do is spend time comforting you.

5. Arrive with topics for conversation. The patient should not feel the pressure of having to entertain you.

6. Don't regale patients with horror stories about others who had "the same thing". Always remember: No patient ever felt better hearing that another patient was in worse shape.

7. If you're a good friend and the conversation flows easily, stay a maximum of two hours. If you're an acquaintance or a distant relative, leave in less than one hour.

I would like to add one more suggestion to this excellent list. Do touch the patient. Greet him (or her) with a warm handshake, a pat or kiss on the cheek, some sign that you are not afraid of catching what he (or she) has—especially if it is cancer. Cancer is not contagious. Too often visitors have an irrational fear of this disease and it is sensed by the patient. It can be depressing.

When you say goodbye, do so in a cheerful manner even if you suspect it might be the final farewell. Don't linger. Say, "I'll see you again," then leave.

P.S. An excellent book that will delight and brighten any sickroom is "Simon Says—The Best of Roger Simon," published by Contemporary. It sells for $14.95 and will provide many hours of pleasure.

Dear Ann Landers; I read in your column that a woman wishes her husband were alive so he could leave the toilet set up. Years ago another woman wrote the same thing about her husband who snored. That letter made me change my tune. I now thank God every time I pick up my husband's dirty socks or scrape toothpaste off the bathroom mirror. Thanks for helping people appreciate what they have before it's too late.—A. IN VANCOUVER

DEAR VANCOUVER: You're welcome, but I'm sure a lot of younger women don't see it that way. (And some older ones, as well.)

Ann Landers' booklet, "Sex and the Teenager," explains every aspect of sexual behavior—where to draw the line, how to say no, the various methods of contraception, the dangers of VD, the symptoms and where to get help. For a copy, send $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (39 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Eating disorders epidemic seen among college women

It is estimated that a fourth of today's college women suffer from eating disorders.

"The epidemic of bingeing and starving is becoming a cultural phenomenon," said Carol Bowman, assistant professor of nutrition and dietetics at Texas Christian University.

"On the other hand, Americans say 'You can't be too thin or too rich.' On the other hand, you are bombarded all the time with the marketing of the food industry," she said. "To balance the pressures, women—particularly on college campuses—are going to binge and starve or binge and purge, commonly known as anorexia nervosa or bulimia.

The disorders occur about 90 percent in women and 10 percent in men. Bowman said this is because there is more pressure on women to look good. Consequently, they become obsessed with dieting.

Physically they appear emaciated. Overtly they appear energetic and try to consume as many calories or use as much energy as they can. "You ask them to go to the store, and they will either jog or ride their bike, rather than get in their car and ride," said Bowman.

It is very difficult to treat without family intervention, she pointed out. Studies show that if the family and social structures are not changed, the likelihood of changing their eating patterns is very poor.

"While there are people in their 20s and 30s with the disorder, it is primarily a disease of adolescent girls who do not want to grow up," she said. It is also most often seen in the upper middle class socioeconomic group.

Members & Visitors Welcome!

Retirement!

RETIREMENT noun the act or condition of retiring; withdraw or remove.

George Washington once said, "Retirement is as necessary to me as it will be welcome."

When you think of retirement; images of sleeping late, going fishing, or unlimited travel probably come to mind.

At First National Bank, we want you to be able to enjoy your retirement. That's why we suggest an I.R.A., or Individual Retirement Account. With an I.R.A., the money you deposit is free of federal income taxes, along with the interest, until you retire. It's an excellent way to supplement your social security.

Herd loses to Tucumcari

By SHAWN COCKRUM
Staff Writer

CLOVIS-It took a first quarter explosion and a fourth quarter stall to insure a 60-57 victory for the Tucumcari Rattlers over the Hereford Whitefaces Thursday afternoon in the first round of the Clovis Holiday Tournament.

Tucumcari must have had a warmer dressing room than the Herd because the Rattlers came out hot. Before the Herd could know what hit them, they were facing a 17-10 deficit. Tucumcari used an excellent passing attack to counteract Hereford's rebounding to get the ball in the middle for the easy bucket.

In the second quarter both teams slowed down a bit, but Tucumcari still used their full court zone press to try to wear the bigger Hereford team down. Hereford outscored the Rattlers 14-13 in the second quarter.

"We shot real good, but we just did not play well," said Hereford head coach Mike Fields, whose team is to play the Clovis-Muleshoe loser today at 2:30 p.m. (CDT).

The second half saw Tucumcari slow down the tempo as they went into a stall. The Rattlers used the entire second half to kill the clock as each time they made it across the mid-court line, they began to spread out the offense waiting for Hereford to either foul or give up the easy basket. Both teams scored only 10 points in the third quarter as Tucumcari held on to their six point lead.

The fourth quarter saw Hereford outscore their New Mexico opponents 23-20, thanks to three steals by Hereford senior Rodney Torres.

Hereford cut the Tucumcari lead from nine points to three with 17 seconds left on the clock. Tucumcari hit the front end of a one and one, but missed the second. Sophomore Rodney McCracken pulled down the rebound and began to push the ball up court. Tucumcari still applied their full court press. Hereford's Jerry Brown hit a 15-footer to narrow the margin to two points, 57-59.

Hereford, out of time outs, was forced to foul on the inbound play. Tucumcari hit the first of two free throws putting the game out of reach with only one second left on the clock. The final buzzer saw the score 60-57.

Torres led Hereford with 24 points, with Bobby Baker contributing eight. Both McCracken and Doug Watts scored seven points, but pulled down 16 rebounds between the two. Jerry Brown also added seven.

Hereford Varsity: Rodney Torres 16-19 4-8 24; Bobby Baker 7-8 3-6 7; Rodney McCracken 5-7 1-4 7; Jerry Brown 3-4 1-4 7; Doug Watts 3-3 1-2 7.

FOOTBALL

NEW YORK (AP) — Running back Joe Morris of the New York Giants was named NFC Offensive Player of the Month and end Dexter Manley of the Washington Redskins the conference's Defensive Player of the Month by the National Football League.

Morris rushed 104 times for 542 yards and 10 touchdowns in the final four games of the season to finish with a club-record 1,336 yards and league-high 21 touchdowns.

Manley had 20 tackles, including three sacks, and four other tackles behind the line. He finished the season with a club-record 15 sacks.

BASKETBALL

NEW YORK (AP) — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of the Los Angeles Lakers continued to hold a commanding lead over all other centers in balloting to determine Western Conference starters for the National Basketball Association All-Star Game.

Abdul-Jabbar, who has appeared in a record 14 All-Star contests, had 200,519 votes. Earvin "Magic" Johnson of the Lakers was the top vote-getter in the latest compilation with 318,075 votes. Second-highest among guards was Lafayette Lever of Denver with 128,923.

Denver forwards Alex English, 178,687, and Calvin Natt, 145,266, led the voting at that position.

Not many teams repeat championship

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Call it The Year-After Syndrome. It's a plague that has attacked Super Bowl champions since 1980. No team since the Pittsburgh Steelers has been able to overcome it and win consecutive Super Bowls.

The Raiders have fallen victim to it twice, once when based in Oakland, the other in Los Angeles. The Washington Redskins and San Francisco 49ers also have succumbed once, and the 49ers will be looking to avoid a second fall on Sunday against the New York Giants in the National Football Conference wild-card game at Giants Stadium.

"I think there is a phenomena you go through following a championship," 49ers Coach Bill Walsh said. "You extend yourself emotionally and physically winning the championship and you can't recoup it all by the next season. Whether you realize or not, you are just flat."

The 49ers were certainly flat the first seven games of the season. They posted a 3-4 record, losing to Minnesota, New Orleans, Chicago and Detroit and were in danger of not making the playoffs.

"It happens in all sports," Walsh said. "Fortunately, we have been able to catch up and overcome it lately. We caught ourselves in midseason and the last eight or nine games we have played very good football."

San Francisco won seven of nine games over that stretch, but still needed a 31-16 victory over Dallas in its regular-season finale to make the playoffs.

"It's not easy being a Super Bowl team," 49ers safety Dwight Hicks said. "Everybody's shooting for you. We showed a lot of character coming back against the Cowboys. Still, I honestly can't say we're as good a team as we were last year unless we go to the Super Bowl."

The Giants, for that matter, thought the 49ers shouldn't have gone to the National Football League title game in 1984. They are haunted by the memory of a 21-10 loss to San Francisco in the second round of the playoffs. It was a game the Giants could have won, but they didn't make the big plays after falling behind early.

"We definitely owe them something," Giants defensive end Casey Merrill said. "I don't know if it's a payback. They definitely have an edge over us in games won and it's time we evened the score."

The Giants actually lead the overall series 9-7, but the 49ers have won the last five — including another playoff victory over them in 1981.

"We want this game pretty bad," said All-Pro defensive end Leonard Marshall.

In All-Pro team selection

AP names top newcomers

NEW YORK (AP) — Linebacker Andre Tippett of the New England Patriots, defensive end Richard Dent of the Chicago Bears, and safety Wes Hopkins of the Philadelphia Eagles, three of the National Football League's rising stars, are among 17 newcomers on The Associated Press All-Pro team.

The team, announced Thursday, is headed by five members of the Chicago Bears, whose 15-1 regular-season record was the best in the NFL. Also on the team are four members of the Los Angeles Raiders, who finished 12-4.

Miami, Seattle, Philadelphia, the Los Angeles Rams and New England each placed two players on the squad, chosen in balloting by three writers or broadcasters who covered each of the NFL's 28 teams.

The most telling characteristic of the team was transition, with players like Tippett, Dent and Hopkins making the team for the first time. Only 10 players — including linebacker Lawrence Taylor of the New York Giants, making it for the fifth time in his five professional seasons — were repeaters from last year's 27-member squad.

In addition to Taylor, the repeaters included running back Walter Payton and linebacker Mike Singletary, both of the Bears; guard Russ Grimm of Washington; center Dwight Stephenson and quarterback Dan Marino, both of Miami; defensive end Howie Long and cornerback Mike Haynes, both of the Raiders; defensive tackle Randy White of Dallas; and safety Kenny Easley of Seattle.

The other members of this year's squad include wide receivers Steve Largent of Seattle and Mike Quick of Philadelphia; tight end Todd Christensen of the Raiders; tackles Jimbo Covert of the Bears and Anthony Munoz of Cincinnati; guard John Hannah of New England; running back Marcus Allen of the Raiders; defensive tackle Steve McMichael of the Bears; nose tackle Joe Klecko of the New York Jets; inside linebacker Karl Mecklenburg of Denver; cornerback Eric Wright of San Francisco; placekicker Nick Lowery of Kansas City, and punter Dale Hatcher and kick returner Ron Brown, both of the Rams.

The second team offense includes wide receivers Louis Lipps of Pittsburgh and Art Monk of Washington, tight end Ozzie Newsome of Pittsburgh, tackles Chris Hinton of Indianapolis and Brian Holloway of New England, guards Mike Munchak of Houston and Kent Hill of the Rams, center Joe Fields of the Jets,

Ditka is 'Coach of the Year'

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Ditka, who coached the Chicago Bears to the National Football League's best regular-season record and created a phenomenon that helped improve the NFL's sagging television ratings, was named today the league's Coach of the Year by The Associated Press.

For the 46-year-old Ditka, who spent his coaching apprenticeship in Dallas under the reserved Tom Landry, it was a year in which his flamboyance may have been as important as the Bears' 15-1 record.

Almost fired a year ago after his old-style, tough-guy image clashed with team president Mike McCaskey's Ivy League background, Ditka was not only the NFL's most successful coach but also its most innovative.

Long after his team is forgotten, Ditka may be known as the coach who inserted 300-pound rookie defensive lineman William "The Refrigerator" Perry as a running back in goal-line situations. Perry ran for two touchdowns, caught a pass for another and changed the NFL's stodgy image.

Ditka was an overwhelming winner in voting by three sportswriters and broadcasters covering each of the NFL's 28 teams. He received 66 votes, with five going to runnerup Raymond Berry of New England and three to Landry.

Tom Flores of the Los Angeles

Raiders, John Robinson of the Los Angeles Rams, Joe Gibbs of the Washington Redskins, Don Shula of the Miami Dolphins and Joe Walton of the New York Jets each received scattered support.

"There are a lot of great coaches in football and I'm very privileged," Ditka said. "But I'm realistic. Coaches are voted on their record. I'm fortunate to have a good football team and good assistant coaches so I don't get too caught up in that individual glory."

"The award is shared by the football team as well as the assistant coaches. And I'm not just saying that to be idealistic or flattering to anybody."

Being idealistic and flattering has never been the style of a man who once listed his heroes as John Wayne, Vince Lombardi and Ronald Reagan.

A collegiate star at Pittsburgh, Ditka was the prototype NFL tight end in the 1960s with the Bears, Philadelphia Eagles and Dallas Cowboys. He played in five Pro Bowls with the Bears, setting a team record by catching passes in 49 straight games. His 75 receptions in 1964 established a league record for tight ends that stood until broken in 1983 by San Diego's Kellen Winslow.

Ditka was an assistant under Landry at Dallas from 1973 until 1981, when he was named head coach of the Bears by the late George Halas, the man for whom he had played in Chicago.

DR. GOTT Brain research offers new hope

Some common neurological diseases, notably Alzheimer's and Parkinson's, appear to result from degeneration of specific nerve fibers. Scientists are unsure whether the degenerating nerves precede (or follow) malfunction of substances or actual loss of chemicals in portions of the brain. Nevertheless, investigators agree that symptoms can be helped if certain chemicals can be replaced. For instance, patients with Parkinson's disease can often be aided by taking a prescribed drug called L-dopa.

Brain chemicals' effectiveness is significantly enhanced when the compounds are administered directly to the nervous system, rather than being swallowed in pill form. For technical reasons, in the average patient, the direct delivery of brain chemicals would be too dangerous and cumbersome for ordinary use; it is more appropriate for the experimental laboratory.

In Sweden, however, scientists seem to have hit on a system that accomplishes this goal. This intriguing method may be the first step toward treating common brain disorders with surgery. The technique is called "brain grafting."

The basis of brain grafting depends on the similarity of certain normal tissues. For example, each of us is blessed with adrenal glands, the small hormone factories that are perched on top of our kidneys. The adrenals make adrenalin — officially termed "epinephrine," a member of the catecholamine family. The cells that manufacture epinephrine are known as chromaffin cells. In function and structure, chromaffin cells resemble nerve cells. What's more, these cells produce dopamine (a cousin of L-dopa), which is an intermediate substance before the final product, epinephrine, is created.

The Swedish doctors were aware of this similarity and, using experimental animals, they grafted rodent adrenal glands into rodent brains. An extraordinary transformation took place: The grafted chromaffin cells began to behave like nerve cells. In addition to producing dopamine, the adrenal tissue commenced to send out nerverlike fibers to adjacent structures. They began to look like nerve cells.

In the early 1980s, the doctors received permission from the ethics committees of the Karolinska Institute and Lund University to try the procedure in humans. Two patients with advanced untreatable Parkinson's disease were chosen. The first subject, a 63-year-old man, had some of his own adrenal tissue transplanted into his brain; he experienced improvement that lasted a month. The second patient was a 46-year-old woman. After receiving (from herself) three times as much grafted tissue as the man did, she showed notable lessening of symptoms for six months.

Neither patient was harmed by the transplant, and the Swedish scientists are making plans to perform 10 more procedures. They propose to transplant adrenal cells into other parts of the brain, because continuing animal studies have pinpointed more effective areas for grafting. The doctors were recently honored with awards from Duke University. Their meticulous procedure has been fully published, and unquestionably will provide step-by-step methodology for surgeons in other countries.

When you think about it, this is an amazing accomplishment: transplanting a patient's own adrenal tissue to his brain in order to treat nerve disease by utilizing a person's store of healthy cells. The surgeons use a stereotaxic technique that seems safe. No artificial organs or donors are required. It's simply a question of putting some of our natural cells to better use.

One member of the Swedish team has been able to transplant animal fetal nerve cells into adult-animal brains, where they appear to grow and function. The implications of these processes are staggering. For the first time in human history, we have the capability to implant cells into brains for the purpose of correcting the dysfunction of aging nerves. Huntington's disease, Parkinson's disease and Alzheimer's disease are only a sampling of the conditions that could be treated this way.

Some day, dementia and profound mental alterations may be cured by brain grafting. Severed spinal cords may be made whole through the use of "bridging neurons." Paraplegia may become a medical rarity. Memory and learning capacities may be enhanced. As knowledge about brain function and biochemistry increases, hundreds of types of brain dysfunction could be treated by using grafts.

DEAR DR. GOTT — How can I find out what vitamins and minerals are found in what foods?

DEAR READER — There are many available publications that list the nutritional makeup of foods. In addition to the ever-present supply of paperback references in most bookstores, your library will have sourcebooks about nutritional values. The dietitian employed by your local hospital also can give you specific advice about various foods. Finally, you will find that many manufacturers list major ingredients, nutritional information and vitamin-mineral contents on their food packages.

DEAR DR. GOTT — What can you tell me about Sjogren's syndrome? I have been diagnosed as having it. I was treated for lupus for many years; then, after my tests, I was told it was Sjogren's. I also have a bad cough and lung trouble. Are they related?

DEAR READER — Sjogren's syndrome is an uncommon disease thought to be due to person's reaction to certain body tissues. It is characterized by dryness of the mouth and eyes. It can be associated with a rash or form of inflammatory arthritis. I am not aware that Sjogren's syndrome, by itself, affects the lungs, but if you have lupus (another form of immune dysfunction), you may be experiencing a generalized reaction for which treatment by a qualified physician may be necessary.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I have an inactive thyroid and am taking one Synthroid a day. My hair is thinning a lot on top. A friend of mine (also female) has the same problem. Could it be caused by the Synthroid? Could I take some other pill?

DEAR READER — I doubt that the medicine is causing thinning of your hair. Patients with underactive thyroid glands often experience hair loss; therefore, I suspect that one Synthroid a day may be inadequate for your needs. Check with your doctor to see if you are undertreated. In the unlikely event that the Synthroid is causing your hair problems, there are other equally effective medicines that you could use.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Years ago, I discovered small lumps at the inside edge of each breast, at the breastplate. The doctor said it was extra cartilage. During two pregnancies, the lumps swelled up and were sore, then subsided. They seem to change with my period. Should a mammogram be taken?

DEAR READER — Ordinarily, cartilage will not significantly enlarge in relation to changes in female hormones. I wonder if your lumps may not be breast cysts. Rather than exposing yourself to the radiation of a mammogram, you might be able to obtain a diagnosis by having an ultrasound exam. If you are over 45, a baseline mammogram is appropriate, but if the lumps are indeed cartilage, they will probably not show up on the X-ray examination.

Dream of hall of fame runs into problems

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Samuel Evans has a dream, to honor America's slaves and other black heroes, but it is threatened by politics, lack of money and concerns over proper use of public land.

For him the controversy centers on race.

"It is a racial issue, and the whites are making it that," he said, answering critics, including the city's two daily newspapers, who object to using 40 acres of Philadelphia Fairmount Park land for his

African American Hall of Fame. It would have 5,000 statues, including one of every black elected mayor.

"White people use that public land," he said. "Why can't black people use the land, too? White people are sitting out there all over the park. Everything out there was put out there by white people, and I want to change that."

At 83 he realizes he doesn't have much longer to see his dream come true and will move it somewhere else in the United States "if Philadelphia doesn't want it."

He said he would consider New York, Atlanta, Baltimore, New Orleans, Jacksonville and Los Angeles, among other places, if turned down here.

"No little group is going to stop this," Evans said, referring to some on the 15-member park commission who have reservations about converting prime land in America's largest urban park into a $23 million garden.

Evans said the garden would include some 25 fountains, thousands of statues, and a huge pyramid as "the tomb to the 10 million unknown African slaves who died in this country."

(The Afro-American Encyclopedia says the slave population of the United States was 4,000,000 at the beginning of the Civil War.)

"It will draw more people than anything we have in Philadelphia except Independence Hall," he said. "This project will be carried forward no matter who protests. We will test every person on where they stand on black people's contribution to this country."

Among those who object is park commissioner James Lloyd, a former Pennsylvania state senator who three years ago lost a bid for lieutenant governor.

Echoing the concerns of the Inquirer and the Daily News, Lloyd said, "To use public land to honor or glorify current political figures is a completely inappropriate course of action. Let Evans use private land.

"The second flaw is that there is no visible source of funding, private or public, for this project. It has the look of something that will be a financial burden to the taxpayers."

The third flaw is that it calls for a 99-year lease of park land. A lease like that is really a gift. Even the zoo, which has been in the park for over a century, only has a 25-year lease.

Evans said he'll raise the money, and plans a drive that would collect a minimum of $10 each from 10 million people across the nation.

Evans is chairman of the Family of Leaders which he claims represents 180 major black organizations in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware, including fraternal and religious groups.

"I have endorsements from governors of 40 states," Evans said. "I have letters from 20 mayors. This is a national thing. The taxpayers won't foot the bill."

Mayor W. Wilson Goode, the city's first black mayor, has endorsed the idea as "a very positive symbol" but doesn't think his statue should be included until he leaves office.

Goode said the project could be a major tourist attraction when Philadelphia celebrates the bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution in 1987.

Mother of four to donate kidney to brother

COHASSET, Mass. (AP) — The mother of four children expects to be in Texas next month to deliver a most important holiday gift to her brother — her own healthy kidney.

"Somehow it makes me feel good to give a gift of life to one brother when there was nothing I could do for the other," Susan McNamara, 41, said in an interview published Thursday.

She said a younger brother died years ago around Christmas.

Her brother, Dan Bearden, 48, of Dallas, has had kidney failure for three years. He has undergone dialysis treatments three days a week for the past 18 months to cleanse his blood.

Bearden's two other brothers and another sister were rejected as kidney donors, as were his two adopted children.

"So it comes down to me," Mrs. McNamara told The Patriot Ledger of Quincy. "If I don't do it, he doesn't have a living related donor. Still, it's scary to give up a part of yourself."

Mrs. McNamara said she will fly to Dallas Jan. 5 for final tests and surgery. She said doctors have warned her that recovery from the operation will be lengthy, with the actual surgery similar to having a gall bladder out.

Physical preparations for the transplant began last spring. Initial tissue-matching tests showed that on a suitability scale of zero to four, Mrs. McNamara was a two.

he'd never tolerate my kidney."

She has also been taking iron to build up her blood.

She said her family supports her decision, although her husband, Jack, was reluctant at first.

"He said, 'Why does it have to be you?'" she said. "But Jack knows that if it was his own brother, he'd do it, no questions asked, and he's become very supportive."

One daughter, Mary Beth, 15, immediately volunteered to give blood when doctors said Mrs. McNamara might need blood after the surgery.

"She was so disappointed that she was not eligible because of her age," Mrs. McNamara said. "She wanted so desperately to be involved."

Mary Beth praised her mother's actions in an essay.

"I am very proud of my mother, and it brings tears to my eyes when I think of what a beautiful, noble and unselfish thing she is doing," the teen-ager wrote in part.

"God bless you, Mom. You have reached the summit of the Christmas spirit. I just hope that someday I will be brave enough to do such a thing as you are."

"It's only just good enough," she said. "But because I'm related, I'm still a better donor than a cadaver scoring four."

Mrs. McNamara has also had blood taken four times to ship to Dallas for transfusions for her brother.

"They give it to him during dialysis," she said. "If he couldn't tolerate my blood,
