

Clements, White pledge peaceful transition

By GARTH JONES AP Political Writer.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas' present and future governors have agreed there will be a businesslike exchange of administrations next January.

"We will leave our state in good hands and with good grace," said Republican Gov. Bill Clements, who suffered a surprise defeat Tuesday at the hands of Democrat Mark White, the state's attorney general.

Clements said his top aide, Hilary Doran, would work for an orderly transition. White named his first assistant,

John Fainter, to be his chief transition man.

However, the two did not agree, in separate Wednesday news conferences, on the cause of the transition.

"I think if we do our job well, we may be able to see at least 100 years of uninterrupted Democratic service to the people of Texas," White said.

"We ticket-splitters took a licking," conceded Clements, "but when you take a shellacking, which we did, you lick your wounds and come back for another day. The Republican Party of Texas will rebound."

Clements, however, said he would never run again for public office.

"I told all of you before, that this would be my last campaign," he said. "I was not running for any other office and I have no political ambition whatsoever."

White 42, was the winner in an avalanche that swept every Democratic statewide candidate to decisive victories, despite the largest and best-financed slate of Republican candidates ever fielded in Texas.

Reports from the National Election Service Wednesday showed an unusually large turnout for non-presidential year elections of more than 3 million voters, compared to the 2.3 million when Clements sprang his political surprise in 1978.

The NES' latest figures showed White with 1,683,608 or 54 percent of reported vote, compared to 1,455,020 or 46 percent for White.

A happy White called his win "the biggest political victory in the history of Texas."

He credited his win mostly to the big turnout and to the "broad-based candidacy" of all statewide Democratic candidates, particularly Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who at times campaigned with White. He also gave thanks to his political mentor, former Gov. Dolph Briscoe of Uvalde.

Briscoe said Tuesday night that "The Republican Party of Texas is now relegated to where it was 10 to 15 years ago," when Texas was considered a one-party state.

But Clements disputed Briscoe's conclusion.

"Surely, we are disappointed," he said. "I thought we not only got beat at the line of scrimmage, but we probably needed another quarterback in the sense that maybe I called the wrong plays."

Illinois governor clings to slim lead

CHICAGO (AP) — Republican Gov. James R. Thompson clung to a 171-vote lead today over Democratic challenger Adlai E. Stevenson after a nearly complete tally of the returns from Chicago Democratic strongholds.

As Thompson's lead narrowed in a cliff-hanger reminiscent of the 1960 presidential election in Illinois, officials said returns were still not in from more than 100 suburban precincts where the governor was expected to do well. There was no indication of how many votes were involved in those precincts.

The votes counted early today included ballots from 11 unsealed ballot boxes found in Chicago. Michael Lavelle, the city elections chairman, said Tuesday's election might have to be settled in court.

With nearly 99 percent of the state precincts reporting — 11,519 of the state's 11,642 polling places — unofficial results gave Thompson 1,786,632 votes to Stevenson's 1,786,461 — a margin of just 171 votes out of about 3.5 million votes cast.

With the race so close, a conclusive result might not be known until the State Board of Elections certifies the vote Nov. 22.

Stevenson, who was carrying the city by a 73-27 percent margin, gained steadily on Thompson through the early morning but failed to pull ahead when election officials finally announced the nearly complete city figures shortly before 9 a.m.

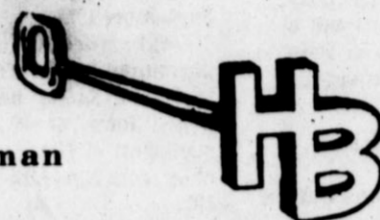

It appeared the election would be decided on the narrowest of margins, perhaps the closest statewide race since 1960 when John F. Kennedy defeated Richard Nixon by fewer than 10,000 votes in Illinois presidential balloting.

Dow Jones surge boosts stock market to new high

NEW YORK (AP) — A record one-day surge in the Dow Jones average helped boost the stock market to its highest level in history, and analysts said Wall Street had heaved a "huge sigh of relief" that midterm elections produced no shocking surprises.

Bouyed by expectations of lower interest rates, the New York Stock Exchange closed Wednesday with the Dow Jones industrial average showing a record 43.41 point gain to a new high of 1,065.49.

Market analysts expected another wild day today as a three-month rally continued.

Ever since the Dow industrialists started to rally in August from a two-year low of 776.92, hopes had been mounting that the market could challenge the record reached almost a decade ago on Jan. 11, 1973, when it closed at 1,051.70.

But few had believed it would happen so quickly.

"It was an incredibly impressive performance," said Edward Yardeni, economist at the firm of Prudential-Bache Securities. "It just tore through that previous high."

Donald Regan, secretary of the Treasury and a former chairman of Merrill Lynch & Co., borrowed from the firm's advertising slogan to declare, "The stock market is bullish on America."

"Since August we have seen a steady rise in market confidence that inflation is under control and interest rates are coming down," Regan said in a statement. "Today's historic high shows that the seeds of economic recovery planted last year are now bearing fruit."

Amid the euphoria, some observers pointed out that a Dow Jones industrial average

Anthony Tabell of the firm Delafield, Harvey, Tabell in Princeton, N.J., calculated recently that if the average were adjusted for inflation since 1966, it would be about 362, not over 1,000.

But the bulls of Wall Street weren't letting any calculations spoil their party.

The upsurge came one day after the midterm elections.

Student holiday Friday

Parents are reminded that HSD students will get the day off from classwork Friday due to a regularly-scheduled teacher-in-service day.

According to Mal Manchee of the administration office, many of the local teachers will be completing in-service requirements at meetings in Amarillo Friday.

Manchee said that some teachers have already completed their required in-service obligations.

Classes will resume as usual on Monday, Nov. 8.

Reagan repeat battle 'uphill'

NEW YORK (AP) — If President Reagan seeks re-election in 1984 and if the mood of American voters remains the same, he faces an uphill campaign, according to The Associated Press-NBC News poll.

The survey of about 12,000 voters, taken Tuesday after they cast ballots at 400 precincts around the country, indicated that only 35 percent of the electorate wants to see Reagan re-elected.

Fifty percent of those responding said they don't want him back for a second term, and 15 percent are unsure.

On the other hand, voters aren't very clear about who else they want in the White House.

Asked whom they favored for the Democratic presidential nomination from a list of three of the most likely contenders, 23 percent said Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts, Sen. John Glenn of Ohio and former Vice President Walter Mondale each got 15 percent.

But nearly half — 47 percent — either said they weren't sure or didn't want to see any of those three Democrats receive the nomination in 1984.

Of those saying Tuesday that they voted for Reagan in 1980, three in five — 60 percent — said they want him re-elected. Twenty percent said they don't want him back and the other 20 percent said they are not sure.

Significant defections also turned up in other groups of voters.

Blue-collar workers, normally Democratic, were an important element in the president's 1980 landslide, splitting their votes just about evenly between Reagan and former President Carter. But those who identified themselves Tuesday as blue-collar were against Reagan's re-election by a margin of 58 percent to 28 percent.

And while both men and women opposed Reagan's re-election, there was a striking difference of degree. Where men said "no" to Reagan by a margin of 46 percent to 39 percent, among women that margin was 54 percent to 29 percent.

The basic reason for the dislike of Reagan was his economic policy.

Blue-collar workers, asked if they thought the president's

Lot of Nuts

The curving driveway to the Bob Veigel home north of Hereford gives a picturesque view of his pecan grove that took 20 years to produce.

Rare in West Texas due to altitude and aridity, Veigel's trees have grown up tough surviving shorter growing seasons, frigid winters and hailstorms. Last year the trees produced about 6,000 pound of pecans, with harvest shooting to 12,000 pounds this season. (Brand Photo)

Plenty of patience pays off with Panhandle pecan crop

By JERI CURTIS Staff Writer

Compared to their kin downstate, pecan trees in the Panhandle seem like the family sissy who needs excessive nursing and mollycoddling to survive.

In southern Texas where the trees flourish, folks probably think nothing of scooping up a handful of the nuts and cracking them open for a pie or afternoon nibble. Here we don't crack shells, we rip cellophane.

The trees can be grown in the high, arid climate of the caprock, but maybe everybody doesn't want to wait 20 years for the crop to come in — like Bob Veigel had to do.

He has petted and pampered the 25-acre grove since his family planted it 10 miles north of Hereford and watched it get pushed around by dry summers and harsh winters.

Until this year there were just enough nuts to pass around for the family's munching and baking and perhaps to sell to a few friends. This was the year. The adolescents matured and 12,000 pounds of pecans fell.

"It was quite a surprise, we were about ready to decide we weren't ever going to have a big crop," said Mrs. Robert Veigel, Bob's mother and pecan praline fan.

Ironically, the U.S. Department of Agriculture reported recently that the country's, and world's, pecan production is down from last year. The 1982 harvest for the U.S. was put at 95,530 metric tons, down from 153,810 last year.

The decline has been blamed on drought conditions in Oklahoma and Texas and in extreme fluctuations in alternate-year bearing characteristics of pecans.

Though the national crop is down, it's hard to tell whether the law of supply and demand is going to work for the Veigel's marketing of Prairie-Lite Pecans.

After being shelled one-at-a-time in Lubbock — it took two weeks to finish the two truckloads — the Western Schley nuts were packaged with nitrogen as a preservative at Arrowhead Mills in Hereford and are now stored at -8 degrees in an Amarillo warehouse.

Four stores in Hereford and a few in Dimmitt sell the pound packages. A daughter in Colorado made contacts so the family delicacy could be sold in that mountain state — pecans are scarce there. And the local country club uses local pecans.

"We've just kind of peddle them out," says Mrs. Veigel. "He's (Bob) learned a lot

Voters oppose bilingual education, poll shows

NEW YORK (AP) — A majority of the Texas voters polled in an Associated Press-NBC News election day poll oppose bilingual education.

Fifty-two percent of the 2,905 people polled after casting their ballots at 100 precincts across the state said they oppose the use of both English and Spanish in schools. Thirty-nine percent said they favor the use of both languages in schools, and the rest were undecided.

Although the state is criss-crossed with military bases and defense-related industries, Texans — who cited economic problems as a major issue this election year — did not appear eager to increase the nation's military spending.

Thirty-three percent of the poll participants said they thought more money should be spent on national defense, but 25 percent wanted less money spent and 35 percent said the levels should remain the same.

The national preference for a freeze on nuclear weapons production by the United States and the Soviet Union was echoed in Texas, where 52 percent of the voters polled favored a freeze by both countries. Thirty-three percent said they opposed a freeze.

However, the majority of Texans questioned — 62 percent — said it is unlikely the Soviet Union would agree to reduce nuclear weapons.

President Reagan's statement that the nuclear freeze movement was "being manipulated by people who want to weaken America" was not as clearly disputed in Texas as in other states where majorities and solid pluralities disagreed with the president. The AP-NBC News poll found that 39 percent of the participants agreed with Reagan, 37 disagreed and 24 percent said they were not sure.

Texans who participated in the poll were evenly divided on whether the president should seek re-election in 1984. A clear winner of "none of the above" was chosen when the respondents were asked whom they would like to see receive the Democratic presidential nomination in 1984.

Massachusetts Sen. Edward Kennedy was the choice of 19 percent of the voters polled, followed by Ohio Sen. John Glenn, 16 percent, and former Vice President Walter Mondale, 14 percent. "None of the above" received 37 percent of the tally and 14 percent said they were not sure.

The Democratic Party was most closely affiliated with by most of the voters in the AP-NBC News poll, but "strictly independent" rated almost as high. Forty-five percent of those same voters described themselves as politically conservative, 29 percent said they were moderates and 15 percent chose liberal as the best description of their ideology.

As with all sample surveys, (See POLL, Page 2A)

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says all an argument usually proves is that there are two people present.

Nowadays the man who holds the car door open for his wife either has a new car or a new wife.

Texas Democrats must have been singing "Happy Days Are Here Again" after Tuesday's election results. Local voters went along with the statewide trend, except in the governors' race. Clements carried Deaf Smith County by a mere 305 votes.

Most folks we visited with Tuesday were happy the election was over — especially television viewers. Many of them were tired of seeing the negative campaign gimmicks on the tv commercials.

Too many of the campaign promises — from all sides — raised false hopes, dangling out a carrot that you'll never sink your teeth into! For instance, Mark White made a big issue of doing away with the fuel adjustment charge on utility bills. Even if he does eliminate the adjustment, don't hold your breath until utility bills go down.

We're not picking on White — it seems Clements made some promises that last time around that didn't come to pass. We hope White makes us a good governor. Regardless of the individual voting, he is OUR governor for the next term and we need to work together for a better Texas.

While checking the totals of the voting boxes, which appeared in Wednesday's Brand, we discovered a discrepancy in the total number of votes cast. The county clerk's office reported a voter turnout of 4,577 but the total votes cast in the U.S. Senator race add up to 4,722.

Since election judges list the total number of votes cast at each voting precinct, there is apparently an error in the senator's race. It's nothing earth-shattering, but will probably change the totals by a couple of hundred votes in that race. Commissioners will canvass the vote Monday and report the official figures.

Marines ready to join force

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Italian and French peacekeepers fanned out across east Beirut today to help the Lebanese army secure control of the capital's predominantly Christian sector. U.S. Marines were to join the operation this afternoon after an unexplained 24-hour delay.

President Amin Gemayel asked the tri-national peacekeeping force to help his newly regrouped army flex its muscle in east Beirut.

Rightist Christian militias, dominated by the Phalange Party's private army, have controlled east Beirut since the 1975-76 civil war in which the Christians fought an alliance of Moslem leftists and Palestinians guerrillas, who held mainly Moslem west Beirut.

The army, backed by the foreign peacekeepers, took over the western sector in September and October following the evacuation of the bulk of Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas.

Phalangists offered no resistance as the army began moving into east Beirut on Wednesday. Phalangist leaders ordered their men to remain in their barracks and stay off the streets to facilitate the army deployment in seven residential neighborhoods.

The army has threatened to arrest Christian militiamen who refuse to lay down their arms. Phalange militia spokesman Fadi Hayek said Wednesday his men would cooperate, but he would not say if they would give up their weapons.

"This is a decision to be taken by the president of the republic," Hayek said, referring to Gemayel, a Maronite Christian with close ties to the militias. His slain brother, Bashir, was their commander.

Houstonian acquitted of police assault

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston man stopped as a suspected traffic violator, has been acquitted of assaulting a police officer after the officer testified she routinely drew her pistol when stopping motorists.

James Coville, 28, testified the officers stopped his van, pointed their pistols at him, wrestled with him and beat him repeatedly while he was on the ground.

Coville said his only contact with Officer Pamela S. Deluke was to grab her arms to prevent her from striking him further. Two bystanders who witnessed the incident testified in Coville's behalf.

Officer Deluke testified she and her partner, Officer James S. Krol, routinely drew their guns during traffic stops. Asked by Assistant District Attorney Don Clemmer if the officer had their guns drawn, Deluke replied "We pull it on all traffic stops."

She said such action was at the discretion of officers and depended on the situation.

The officer testified that while she pointed the pistol at Coville's back, he twisted around and struck her in the eye.

Officer Deluke said she and her partner had stopped another motorist when the Coville's van sped by, weaving across the road and with a passenger leaning out of the window shouting obscenities.

Toddler dies from hot water burns

EL PASO Texas (AP) — A 3-year-old Las Cruces girl has died at an El Paso, Texas, hospital from burns she suffered in an accident at her home, police reported.

The victim, Sofia Suter, died at 3:20 a.m. Wednesday at Providence Memorial Hospital from second and third degree burns, according to a hospital spokesman.

The spokesman said the child was admitted to another El Paso hospital on Oct. 27, after she was burned by hot water from a shower at the family's Las Cruces residence.

Authorities said the girl's father, Kevin Suter, reported he was preparing to take a shower and briefly left the bathroom. While he was gone, the child apparently wandered into the bathroom and fell into the shower, the hospital spokesman said.

The girl, with second and third degree burns over much of her body, was at first taken to the burn unit at the Sun Towers Hospital in El Paso. She was transferred to Providence Memorial Hospital Tuesday.

Former police chief surrenders after escape

HOUSTON (AP) — Former Webster police chief Thomas Lee Deal, who told his mother he escaped from prison because he could not get proper medical care, has surrendered to federal authorities and remains in the Harris County jail.

Deal, 36, turned himself in to the U.S. Marshal's office Tuesday and was being held here Wednesday until he can be returned to the Federal Correctional Institution in Texarkana where he will face escape charges.

The inmate's mother, Bessie Deal, 67, of Lufkin, said her son told her by telephone after his escape that he needed medical treatment for a hernia and prostate problems. She said prison officials had refused to give Deal the requested treatment.

"He has been very despondent lately because he's sick," Mrs. Deal said. "He didn't have any money to get the treatment he needs so I guess it didn't accomplish much."

Prison officials would not comment on Mrs. Deal's charge that her son was refused medical treatment.

John Laetsch of the U.S. marshal's office, said Deal was accompanied by a friend when he surrendered.

Prison officials said Deal apparently walked away from an unenclosed minimum-security area of the prison on Sunday and his absence was discovered during a bed check.

Deal and three other law enforcement officers were convicted of robbing more than $15,000 from the Caddo Mills National Bank near Dallas in September 1975.

Deal worked as a highway patrolman for the Texas Department of Public Safety before joining the police force at Webster, 20 miles southwest of Houston. He was police chief from November 1973 to January 1975.

He was employed by a sporting goods store in the Clear Lake City area when the bank robbery occurred.

Economic slavery

Historically, anybody who did not pay his bills was put in debtor's prison. Debtor's prisons were phased out a hundred years ago.

Never — despite some ancient Oriental customs — have children been legally responsible for the debts of their parents.

Until now. American children are now obligated by law, and under potential penalty of imprisonment, for $11,000 in inherited debt.

America's elderly are demanding their "rights."

America's workers are demanding their "rights."

Even the freeloaders — even illegal immigrants — are demanding their "rights."

It's high time high school age citizens do.

Butch Oxendine, a student in Lake City, Fla., who is "too young to vote" resents a trillion dollar and growing national debt which he did not assume but which he must pay.

For 49 of the past 55 years — and consistently every year for the last 21 — politicians have been buying re-election with money borrowed from the next generation.

A baby born today is born into "economic slavery"; he inherits and will be required to pay this monstrous debt.

If students are to lead us out of economic slavery they must be prepared to lead.

That means self-sacrifice, self-reliance.

It means no more student loans; no more unemployment benefits misused as summertime vacation pay, no more "free lunch."

Butch Oxendine believes school-agers are ready thus to lead by example.

It was student involvement which brought an end to the absurdity of old men drafting young men to fight no-win wars.

Again, it's they who have the most to lose.

Now, with a President committed to help, perhaps a chorus of young voices supporting a balanced budget amendment can stop this continuing hemorrhage, can wean the parasites and can re-insure their own fiscal future.

Agri-business

seminar this month

AMARILLO — The Texas Commissioner of Agriculture, a USDA Marketing Service Administrator, a meteorologist with E.F. Hutton, and a vice president from the Federal Reserve Bank will be the speakers in the 7th annual Amarillo Chamber of Commerce Agri-Business Seminar to be held this month.

Reagan V. Brown, Texas Commissioner of Agriculture, will present a speech entitled "Katy, Bar the Door!" at the seminar which will run 8:30 a.m. - 4:15 p.m., November 19, at the Villa Inn.

"Let's Get Serious About Marketing," will be the topic of Vern Highley. He is the administrator of agricultural marketing service for the United States Department of Agriculture.

"The Global Crop Report," will be discussed by Gail Martell, who is a meteorologist with E.F. Hutton.

Winding up the seminar will be "A Perspective on Current Economic Problems," drawn by Joe Burns, senior vice president of the Federal Reserve Bank at Dallas.

The luncheon will feature "A Taste of Texas" and is sponsored by the Texas Department of Agriculture. All foods prepared for the luncheon will be grown in the state.

For the first time the Agri-Business Seminar will feature a mini-trade show, featuring goods and services that support the ag-industry on the High Plains, according to Burks.

Reservations made before Nov. 10 through the Agri-Business office of the Chamber of Commerce will be $15.00. After the 10th the fee will increase to $17.50. Persons wishing to attend the seminar should contact Miss Kirie Smith, agri-business manager of the Chamber of Commerce at the associations' offices, 1000 S. Polk.

Absentee ballots overturn Congressional race

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer

Democrat Tom Vandergriff exulted in the cheers of supporters when absentee votes from Tarrant County came in, turning apparent defeat into a 434-vote edge in his bid for the new 26th Congressional District seat.

Final, but unofficial, totals Wednesday from the four counties in the district gave the former Arlington mayor 69,797 votes to 69,363 for Republican Jim Bradshaw, a former mayor pro-tem of Fort Worth who was falling short in a congressional race for the second time in as many years.

Bradshaw gave signs he would ask today for a recount.

"There are some discrepancies that may exist in the balloting, and we want to check those out before we make any kind of statement. With a 434-vote margin, a recount is definitely a possibility, but the decision has not been made," said Jerry Bettis, a Bradshaw campaign aid.

The race in the mainly conservative district received national attention because it was widely seen as a referendum on Reagan administration policies.

Bradshaw, who hitched his wagon to the president's uncertain star and drove hard for Washington as a self-professed Reagan "hand," led by a breath in late returns, but the Tarrant County absentee votes sent Vandergriff back on top.

"I was saying that I would be satisfied with 50.1 percent, and that's exactly what we got," Vandergriff said to cheers from supporters who were still on hand after the last of 11,000 absentee ballots in Tarrant County had been tallied Wednesday afternoon.

"Many people have said that it might have been an upset that I win this election. I don't feel like that, but I definitely feel like I've been through a presidential election," Vandergriff said.

Republicans had counted on Bradshaw, 42, co-owner of an auto parts store, to defeat Vandergriff, 55, a car dealer, in the heavily Republican district, one of three new U.S. House seats Texas got in reapportionment last year.

GOP heavy weights — including Vice President George Bush — came to Texas for Bradshaw, whose campaign slogan was, "Let's give President Reagan more than a chance. Let's give him a hand."

Vandergriff called the mid-cities district a conservative area that had many Reagan supporters.

"I hoping they can be comfortable with the fact that they could support the president and also vote for Tom Vandergriff," he added.

Election night passed slowly for both candidates. Bradshaw claimed victory early in the evening, but had to back off when Vandergriff went ahead.

Party leaders urging Vandergriff to run told him that he might be the only Democrat who could beat Bradshaw, veteran of a rough-and-tumble 1980 race against House Majority Leader Jim Wright of Fort Worth, in adjacent District 12.

Wright easily won reelection this time around.

Vandergriff concentrated on his accomplishments as mayor, when Arlington grew from a village to the third largest city in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

"Send a voice from home to Washington," Vandergriff urged.

Texas Democrats in other races held on to all 19 seats in the current delegation, and won easily in the two other new districts — District 25 in the Houston area and 27 in South Texas.

GOP candidates again won the five seats they currently occupy. Republicans had hoped to get four new seats by knocking off an incumbent, replacing a retiring Democrat, and grabbing two of the new seats.

in which the Democrats gained about two dozen seats in the House while the Republicans held on to their majority in the Senate.

But analysts said there seemed to be no direct link between the two events. "It's not so much that the market liked the elections, but rather that it liked the fact that the elections are over," Yardeni said.

Some of the figures that went into the record books Wednesday:

more than 1,500 stocks, which rose 2.93 to 82.05.

—Volume on the NYSE of 137.01 million shares, the fifth-largest total in history and not far short of the record total of 147.07 million on Oct. 7.

economic program had helped or hurt the country, said "hurt" by a margin of 46 percent to 36 percent. In rating his overall economic program, 42 percent said poor, 24 percent said fair and 31 percent said good or excellent.

Those polled Tuesday also disagreed with Reagan's opposition to a freeze on production of nuclear weapons by the United States and the Soviet Union. Voters interviewed were overwhelmingly in favor of the idea, 58 percent to 28 percent.

And by a margin of 44 percent to 33 percent, they said they disagreed with Reagan's statement that the freeze movement is being manipulated by people who want to weaken America.

As with all sample surveys, the results of the AP-NBC News poll can vary from the opinions of all Americans because of chance variations in the sample.

about them this year, that he didn't know last year, especially about marketing."

She said the pecans are bagged in halves and in chips, but most people like halves, probably for pretty pecan pies.

Robert Veigel, Bob's father, says the trees need about two weeks more in the growing season. Downstate the trees get about five or six weeks more than here. "This is kind of on the verge of being too short," he said.

Veigel was the instigator of the unusual crop, but hands all the glory over to his son. He said he decided to plant them "just to have some trees, I guess."

The grove wasn't too hard to get started, but two severe hailstorms in their fifth and sixth year beat the bark off one side and broke a lot of limbs. Frigid West Texas winters didn't do them much good either. But out of the 1,750 saplings, only about a half dozen bit the dust.

"You've got to work them just like a garden," says the father.

Weeds and grass cannot be allowed in to sap precious moisture — though the trees do not use as much irrigation as a field crop — and about twice a year the grove is sprayed to prevent rosette, a leaf-curling disease.

"They've had a bad time in this life," laughed Mrs. Veigel.

Canada requiring inspection

WASHINGTON (AP) — Canada is requiring veterinary inspections of all horses from the United States at western ports of entry, including those which will be in the country only a brief time.

The Agriculture Department said Monday that the inspections will remain in effect only until Nov. 1. The action is due to a recent U.S. outbreak of vesicular stomatitis — a disease of horses and other livestock which is transmitted by insect bites.

Officials say the disease is ordinarily short-lived and not fatal.

The virus also can affect humans through close contact with diseased animals, producing influenza-like symptoms, including fever.

John K. Atwell of the departments Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service said the tighter regulations will affect only horses entering Canada between Emerson, N.D., and the West Coast.

"The increased inspections should pose no problems for horses that are in good health and have the required documents," Atwell said.

"Besides, the insect season is drawing to an end, eliminating the immediate threat of the disease."

Veterinarians say that vesicular stomatitis "cannot clinically be distinguished" from foot-and-mouth disease, a dreaded foreign livestock disease which does not now exist in the United States.

out of four jeeps, had been slated to move into east Beirut Wednesday afternoon, but at nightfall they remained at the international airport in west Beirut. The Marines' expanded role was ordered Monday by President Reagan at Gemayel's request.

Marine spokesman Lt. Col. Jon Abel said "no execute order was received" because "there were decisions to be made at higher levels." He would not elaborate, but the decisions were believed to concern what area the Marines would cover in their patrols.

In Washington, Pentagon officials said there were no policy hitches or any major problems connected with the delay. They said the decision on deployment was being made by the Marine command in Beirut.

The Pentagon officials also said Gemayel has approved the first stage of a U.S. plan to strengthen the Lebanese army, bringing 16 Lebanese battalions to full strength in the next several months. The army, which disintegrated during the civil war, has been regrouped into a 28,000-man force. Gemayel has said he wants that number raised to 60,000.

The Phalangist Voice of Lebanon radio station reported, meanwhile, that the death toll has risen to 23 in the Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor:
This letter is to make public the dismay and absolute disbelief of the handling of the accident involving one of our well-known citizens.

How is it possible that the body of one of our life-long residents, or any one for that matter, could lay dead, in broad daylight at the intersection of Highway 60 and Progressive Road on Saturday evening in front of his family, friends and loved ones for TWO HOURS.

It is impossible for us to believe that our city is so progressive that it is contemplating spending $10 million on a Special Activity Center, but could be so negligent and irresponsible in an area concerning the death of one of us.

I am sure if money is the problem, the tax-paying property owners would be much more interested in supporting funds for whatever is needed to correct this deplorable situation than to pay for another swimming pool.

We extend our thanks to John Gilliland and Charles Watson for their concern and taking this matter into their hands.

Sincerely,
Friends of Melvin Burgess

More violence feared in Ulster prisons

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Protestants and Roman Catholics fear a new outbreak of violence in Northern Ireland's prisons where convicted guerrillas from both sides carry on their sectarian feuding behind bars.

The crisis in the heavily guarded prisons, long a battleground in Northern Ireland's 13-year-old conflict, mirrors the mounting sectarian tension in the streets. Twenty-one people have been killed in the last two months.

The prison feuds, with convicted Protestant and Catholic gunmen demanding segregation from each other, erupted last month into cellblock clashes in Belfast's Maze prison, Magilligan prison near Londonderry and a women's institution at Armagh.

Tommy Lyttle, a leader of the militant Protestant Ulster Defense Association, said that the cellblocks are "a powderkeg" and warned "people are going to get killed" if the situation worsens.

Security authorities say the trouble could spread to the streets.

At least 12 inmates in Magilligan were hospitalized after a riot Oct. 20 between convicted Protestants and guards of the mainly Protestant prison service. The outbreak occurred the same day as violence-marred elections for a new provincial assembly.

In a three-day rampage, 120 Protestant loyalists wrecked cellblocks in the Maze, where last year 10 jailed Catholic nationalists starved themselves to death in a seven-month hunger strike demanding political prisoner status.

And the weekly Republican News, an IRA publication, said three Catholic women in Armagh were beaten by Protestants while a movie was being shown in the prison chapel.

Under Britain's controversial "criminalization" policy of treating convicted guerrillas as criminals rather than political prisoners — the root of the IRA hunger strike — Protestants and Catholics are mixed regardless of politics or religion.

The British believe that segregation will bestow a form of political prisoner status on the guerrilla groups and permit them to establish tight command structures that would turn the cellblocks into virtual training camps, as happened in the "special category" compounds before 1976.

Cellblock segregation was one of the demands made by the hunger-strikers, all members of the outlawed Provisional Irish Republican Army or its Marxist splinter faction, the Irish National Liberation Army.

But while the British allowed them to wear their own clothes and associate among themselves, they did not completely segregate the Catholic nationalists from their Protestant rivals.

IRA inmates in the Maze stepped up their campaign for segregation Tuesday when 145 men who have refused to do any prison work called off a protest launched during the hunger strike.

By doing so, they will return to prison workshops, kitchens and recreation areas where they will mix with Protestants, stirring new tension and putting pressure on the authorities to segregate the feuding factions.

The government's Northern Ireland Office said in a statement that "The disturbances are a consequence of a coordinated campaign by convicted prisoners, both Loyalist (Protestant) and Republican (Catholic), to dictate conditions under which they are being held. This is unacceptable."

The predominantly Catholic IRA is fighting to drive the British out of Northern Ireland. It seeks to unite the Protestant-dominated province with the Catholic-majority Irish Republic to end 60 years of partition.

The Protestant loyalists belong to the Ulster Defense Association, the outlawed Ulster Volunteer Force and the banned Red Hand Commando.

These avowedly pro-British extremists violently oppose reunification, fearing domination by the Ireland's 4 million Catholics.

Lyttle charged that the Catholics have ganged up on the Protestants, who are outnumbered 2-1 in the prisons by jailed IRA and INLA activists.

That's the reverse of the population ratio in the province, where the million-strong Protestant majority outnumbers the 500,000 Catholics. There are about 800 convicted IRA and INLA members in prison and about 300 loyalists.

Said Lyttle: "One man had his throat cut and others were slashed. We've demanded segregation for years. But no one's paid any notice. Things are coming to a head now. The authorities are going to have to do something soon."

The Republican News also cited claims by IRA men in the Maze's H-shaped blocks that Protestant trustees who prepare prison meals lace food served to Catholic prisoners with kitchen scouring powder.

POLLY'S POINTERS Polly Fisher

How to make 'Herman'

DEAR POLLY — Do you know how to make a sweet sourdough starter to be used in coffee cakes? A friend gave me a recipe for coffee cake made with this starter, but we haven't been able to find a recipe for the starter itself anywhere. I'm sure the starter has sugar in it and most starters I've seen in cookbooks aren't sweetened. — LOLA

DEAR LOLA — I bet you're referring to "Herman," a starter with a fanciful name that's apparently been passed from cook to cook all around the country. I've finally come across a recipe for starting your own Herman and I'm happy to share it with you. Mix two cups flour, three tablespoons sugar, one teaspoon salt and one package of active dry yeast in a large bowl. Gradually stir in two cups of warm water (105 to 115 degrees), cover with a towel and place in a warm place for three days until it is bubbly and smells yeasty. During this time, stir the starter two or three times every day. Herman is now ready to use or cover loosely and refrigerate where it will keep without replenishing for 14 days. "Feed" Herman only after using some by mixing into the remaining starter one cup flour, one cup milk and one-half cup sugar. To keep Herman longer than 14 days before using, store in the freezer.

To make Herman coffee cake, stir together one cup flour, one-half cup sugar, one teaspoon baking powder, one-fourth teaspoon baking soda, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one cup Herman starter, one-third cup oil, one egg, one-half cup raisins, and one-fourth cup chopped nuts. Mix well, but don't beat. Spread in a greased and floured eight-inch square pan. Sprinkle with a mixture of one-half cup brown sugar and two tablespoons butter and a few chopped nuts if you like. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes or until nicely browned. A straw or toothpick inserted in the center will come out clean when the cake is done. Enjoy! — POLLY

NUCLEAR NUMBERS Comparing Superpower Weapons Systems

The balance of American and Soviet strategic nuclear capabilities is a combination of several categories of weapons. The Soviets have more land-based missiles with greater throw weight and larger warheads. But smaller U.S. weapons are technologically more advanced and more accurate. The U.S. leads in both submarine-launched and airborne weapons, giving it a considerable overall advantage on the basis of statistics compiled by the non-government Center for Defense Information from official but non-classified sources.

Prosecution witness says memory of events improved

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — A key witness for the prosecution in the trial of an inmate accused of killing two prison officials says he remembers the events more clearly now than the day they happened, when he made statements that contradict much of his testimony.

Levi Duson, 40, was the only prosecution eyewitness to the shooting of prison farm manager Billy Max Moore and a scuffle that preceded the drowning of Ellis Unit Warden Wallace M. Pack on April 4, 1981.

He was interviewed by authorities twice that day. Eroy Brown, 31, is being retried on a charge of capital murder in Pack's death and also has been charged with murdering Moore. Brown contends he killed the men in self-defense.

The Waco man's first trial in Pack's death ended with a mistrial March 4 with the jury deadlocked at 10-2 for acquittal.

Duson acknowledged Wednesday that there were discrepancies in the tape-recorded statements he gave the day of the deaths and a written statement he gave to investigators four days later. Duson also said he changed his April 8 written statement after conferring Dec. 1, 1981, with Mike Hinton, then a special prosecutor in the case.

"After Mr. Hinton took the case, that's when we talked about it and things became a little clearer," said Duson, who has since been paroled and now lives in Midland.

Duson testified Friday that he was working in a prison agricultural shop at the Ellis Unit near Huntsville when he saw Pack and Moore put Brown into the back seat of Pack's car.

Duson said he saw Brown grab Moore by the shoulder, force him to his knees and shoot him in the head. Pack and Brown then went out of sight down a nearby creek bank, where Pack's body later was found, Duson said.

Under questioning from defense attorney Craig Washington, Duson acknowledged he earlier said he had heard "two or three" shots in quick succession as Pack was closing his car's trunk and Brown was approaching the rear of the car.

In his written statement, Duson said he heard only one shot as the trunk was closed and heard the other shots a short time later.

Also, in the first statement he had said he heard no shots after Pack and Brown disappeared from his sight down a creek bank. In court Wednesday, he said "might have heard" another shot after the two men disappeared.

Duson's accounts of where the three men were in relation to the warden's car and a prison truck at the time of the struggle also differ. On Wednesday, Duson estimated the distance from which he witnessed the events at about 50 feet.

About 10,000 expected for Roloff funeral

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — About 10,000 mourners from across the nation are expected to file into Memorial Coliseum here Friday to pay their last respects to fiery evangelist Lester Roloff, according to a spokesman for the People's Baptist Church.

Roloff, 68, whose courtroom battles with state officials over licensing of his child-care facilities resulted in several stretches behind bars, died Tuesday in a plane crash near the East Texas community of Normangee.

Four women associates also were killed in the crash.

The Rev. Mike Rios, an assistant pastor, said funeral services would be held Friday at 2 p.m. at the bayfront coliseum in order to handle the 10,000 mourners expected to attend.

Rios said the church offices were swamped with telephone calls "in the thousands, I would say, which have been coming in ever since the crash yesterday."

Four operators have been answering the calls of condolences which "have been coming from all over the world," Rios said.

Rios also said Wednesday that no decision had been reached on a replacement for Roloff, who also hosted a radio program heard on about 180 stations.

"It will be up to the directors of the church," Rios said. "I'm sure it will be someone from the internal workings."

Church leaders vowed to continue Roloff's controversial work and announced the church's weekly prayer meeting would go on as scheduled today.

Roloff operated a 600-acre complex for wayward youth and young adults near Corpus Christi and a nursing home in the Rio Grande Valley. He recently bought land in Arizona to establish a rehabilitation home for Indians, church officials said.

"We're still in pretty much of a shock," church spokeswoman Rebecca McGuire said Wednesday.

"But we have the Lord to handle it. We must go on." The 700 residents of Roloff's five homes usually attend the Thursday services along with 800 church members for two hours of singing, testimonies and the evangelist's preaching, Ms. McGuire said.

Investigators searched a mile-wide stretch of wooded pastureland Wednesday looking for pieces of the wreckage, theorizing that the storm sheared a wing off the plane in mid-flight.

The wing and fuselage, with the five bodies strapped inside, were found a mile apart, Leon County Sheriff Royce Wilson said.

Roloff's body was taken to Houston for a routine autopsy ordered by the Federal Aviation Administration, spokesman George Burlage said at FAA's Fort Worth headquarters.

Also killed in the crash were Elaine Wingert, 30, Susan Lynn Smith, 28; Cheryl Palmer, 24, and Enola Slade, 25. Wingert was a staff member. The other three are residents of Roloff's Jubilee Home for Girls.

Church board president Wiley Cameron substituted for Roloff on his radio program Tuesday and would have preached at the Thursday night service, anyway, since Roloff was not expected back until Monday, Ms. McGuire said.

Cameron gave an informal eulogy for Roloff on the 5 p.m. "Family Altar Hour" broadcast, quoting from the evangelist's favorite Bible passages.

Roloff, a pilot for 25 years, had taken off from a private airstrip Tuesday morning to fly to Kansas City, where he was to have preached that night at the Calvary Baptist Church in Roosterville, Mo.

The plane made it as far as Normangee.

Investigators "found one of the wings approximately a mile from the main wreckage," Wilson said. "My opinion is that the plane hit some turbulence and one of the wings came off and hit the tail and he just flew a straight line into the ground."

National Transportation Safety Board investigator Frank Roth was on the scene Wednesday and could not be reached for comment.

Headed to Nationals

Members of the Hereford School of Karate will be competing in a national championship meet this weekend in Oklahoma City. The team recently won the Texas Tech University Championships in Lubbock. Members who'll make the trip to Oklahoma City include: Front row, from left; Tino Malouf and Victor Diaz.

By striking players

USFL jump possible

NEW YORK AP - Striking National Football League players are talking about jumping en masse to the United States Football League.

And Chet Simmons, commissioner of the USFL, is beginning to wonder if the NFL is thinking about jumping on the fledgling league.

The NFL Management Council is proposing, in the negotiations to end 45-day-old players' strike, a series of provisions which would, in effect, penalize the new league and any players who might head its way.

A number of player representatives at the negotiation site visited Simmons' midtown office a few blocks away, and said if they became free agents through voided contracts, large chunks of NFL rosters could jump to the NSFL, which opens its first season next March.

Don Hasselback, player rep for the New England Patriots, also mentioned that the union will give to the USFL a list of 352 names of NFL players due to become free agents on Feb. 1. And Ed Garvey, executive director of the union, said NFL players could legally sign "futures" contracts with USFL teams, as Larry Csonka and Paul Warfield did in 1970 with the now-defunct World Football League.

Moving the NFL college draft from late April to Feb.

1, about the same time the USFL plans to conduct its draft.

-Adding mid-round draft choices for the poorer teams in each year's draft a bottom-of-the-ladder team might get an extra selection in the sixth or seventh rounds, for example, reducing the available pool of talent.

-A year's severance-pay penalty for any player who leaves the NFL for another league and then returns in a subsequent year. A five-year player, for example, who joins another league, comes back to the NFL a few years later and retires one year after that would not get severance-pay credit for that sixth NFL year.

-Additional draft selections for expansion teams, likewise reducing players who might opt for the USFL.

The severance part of the package now on the bargaining table is new to the thinking of the NFL ownership. There is no severance pay now. The owners are offering severance tied to their proposed minimum-salary schedule, to begin with vested players, those in the league after three games of their fourth season.

But under the Management Council proposal the severance would be paid "immediately following the third game of the NFL regular season next - following the player's leaving the NFL or any other professional football league, whichever occurs later." In other words, a player cut during the 1983 season wouldn't get his check until the third game of the 1984 season - or until he retired from the USFL, CFL or any other league. The union is asking that severance begin with a player's rookie year $15,000 for each year of service and that it be paid immediately.

Strike creates tv boxing boom

NEW YORK AP - The National Football League players' strike has caused a boom in televised boxing, and it appears the sport may have found a permanent spot in weekend programming.

Although boxing has drawn only about a third of the typical audience of an NFL game telecast, it has attracted a significant number of viewers to convince network executives that people will watch it on a regular basis.

Last Sunday was a high point when the CBS telecast of the Leon Spinks-Jesse Burnett bout attracted a 14.1 share in the overnight Nielsen rating share. A rating is the percentage of the total numbers during the same time slot.

"I think the people have spoken," said Mort Sharnik, the CBS boxing consultant. "Our ratings were never better than last weekend."

CBS turned to boxing in the third week of the players' strike as part of its "Sports Sunday" anthology program after showing a Super Bowl XVI replay and a Division III college football in alternative programs.

Boxing scored a hit the first weekend it was showcased with motorcycle racing and gymnastics on Oct. 10. The CBS program pulled an 8.1 share to a 2.4 on NVC's coverage of a CBS Football League game.

NBC showed significant gains the next two Sundays after it included boxing in its "Sportsworld" with 5.2 and 4.2 shares. During the same period CBS had 6.2 and 5.6 audience ratings, respectively.

Terry O'Neill, executive producer of Sports Sunday, prefers to consider boxing as part of the total sports package. "Boxing is only a factor in the ratings," he said. "We think the reason is because we've got a live video sport-space. Boxing will continue as an element, a distinct, meaningful part of Sports Sunday."

Boxing has been a staple on ABC's "Wide World of Sports" since the 1960s and ESPN, the all-sports cable network, carries two weekly programs - "Top Rank Boxing" on Thursdays and "Saturday Night at the Fights."

The television executives agree that there is enough good boxing to satisfy everyone's needs.

Dr. Ferdie Pacheco, NVC's boxing consultant, said his network was prepared to offer bouts soon after it appeared that there would be prolonged players' strike.

SMU owns longest win streak

BY LES GILES
Sports Editor

SMU's current 12-game win streak is the longest in the NCAA Division I. It's also the Mustangs' second-longest consecutive game win streak ever. The longest was 14 games, in 1934-35.

Perhaps even more impressive is the fact the Ponies are 21-2 in games that quarterback Lance McIlhenny has started.

McIlhenny has a chance to set an NCAA record this season. Through the first eight games, McIlhenny has been intercepted only once in 81 attempts. The NCAA record for lowest percentage of passes intercepted in a season is 0.9 by Claude Arnold of Oklahoma in 1950 (1 of 114). McIlhenny must throw at least 34 more passes without an interception to break the record.

With the collegiate football season heading into its final few weeks, it's kinda fun to start thinking about possible bowl matchups.

Based on the records, prior to this week's games, how about these possible matchups for the major bowl games.

ROSE BOWL - How about Arizona State vs. Michigan. The Sun Devils currently are 8-0, but still must defeat Washington and Arizona to earn the trip to Pasadena. Michigan, a two-time loser thus far this season, is unbeaten in the Big 10. The Wolverines play Illinois this week and Ohio State Nov. 20. Wins in two of the three games will earn them a ticket west.

COTTON BOWL - How about SMU (Southwest Conference champion, provided the Mustangs can beat Arkansas Nov. 20) vs. Penn State.

SUGAR BOWL - This could be a classic. How about Georgia vs. Pittsburgh for the national championship. Both could be unbeaten, and ranked 1-2 in the wire service polls by then, provided the upset bug doesn't intervene.

ORANGE BOWL - Nebraska, if it can defeat OU, could be on its way to Miami. The opponent might be Arkansas, if the Razorbacks don't win the Southwest Conference.

FIESTA BOWL (another New Year's Day spectacular) - How about Alabama vs. UCLA. Could be a great matchup, but both might be headed elsewhere.

The bowl games begin Dec. 11 at Shreveport, La. with the Independence Bowl.

How about this for a trivia? How many Heisman Trophy winners have played on a national championship team the same year they won the coveted award?

Answer: There have been seven such individuals. Davey O'Brien, TCU, 1938; Bruce Smith, Minnesota, 1941; Angelo Bertelli, Notre Dame, 1943; Doc Blanchard, Army, 1945; John Lujack, Notre Dame, 1947; Leon Hart, Notre Dame, 1949 and Tony Dorsett, Pittsburgh, 1976.

If this year's Heisman Trophy had been given before last week's games, Stanford QB John Elway would have won, according to a poll conducted by the Palm Beach (Fla.) Post.

Polled were representatives from 102 newspapers, 17 from each of the geographical sections involved in the Heisman balloting.

Elway received 216 points. Georgia running back Herschel Walker, who had an early-season injury, was second with 195 points.

And, that was before Elway had a superb game last Saturday against Washington, engineering a 42-31 upset of then No. 1-ranked team in America.

Will the National Football League season ever start again this year?

Buffalo Bills quarterback Joe Ferguson doesn't think so.

In a story which appeared in USA Today, Ferguson, who has lost an estimated $150,000 in pay from the first six games not played because of the strike, said:

"I don't think he (players' union negotiator Ed Garvey) should have that kind of power, and no matter what either side says the season will not resume."

The former Arkansas star loses $25,000 for every game not played.

That must be rough!

Family News Editor

A chocolate-lovers dream come true—500 pounds of chocolate in all colors of the rainbow.

That's exactly what Martha Schueler ended up with one day about four years ago when she began ordering her own chocolate to make molded chocolate candies.

She had been making candy for a number of years during the holiday season to give as Christmas gifts, purchasing chocolate, molds, and other items from a woman in Amarillo.

One day the woman suggested that she order directly from the supplier and she decided to try it.

"What she neglected to tell me was that I'd have to order a minimum of 500 pounds at a time," laughs Martha.

"Well, I finally decided to go ahead and order it, and when all that chocolate arrived we really had to get busy and sell a lot of chocolate to others who were interested in making their own candy," continues Martha.

In order to interest others in candymaking, Martha began giving demonstrations in friends' homes and has given several demonstrations for area clubs.

At first, she made large quantities of candy creations, selling the finished products, but now she mostly makes candy for her family and to use as gifts, selling the raw materials which she purchases in bulk—chocolate, molds, colorings, flavorings, etc.

"It takes time to do, but I really enjoy it," notes Martha, who is known as "The Candy Lady" by many who live near her family in the Rhea Community, 18 miles northwest of Friona.

Her husband, Walter, even purchased signs for the sides of her car which read "Martha's Candy" and have her phone number and other information on them.

Since Walter is a farmer, Martha says she likes to work at home so that she can be there to help him on the farm. Besides making candy, she is active in ladies work at Immanuel Lutheran Church at Rhea and is a Lutheran Braille Worker, travelling to Lariat once a month with a group of area women to make Braille books.

She also enjoys sewing for her four grandchildren and even drives a truck for her husband during the harvest season.

She and her husband have lived in Rhea since 1951, moving there from Clovis, N.M. The couple has raised three children, Wayne, who is now a minister in Albany; Vicki Kube, who resides in College Station; and Gary, who lives at Rhea.

Martha's sister-in-law, Lorna Schueler, also of Rhea, often goes with her and assists at the candymaking demonstrations. She also enjoys making candy and often gets together with several family members (she has four children) to make a day of it. Her husband, Raymond, is also a farmer.

The bulk orders of chocolate, called summer coating, come in either wafers or blocks. Martha says that she prefers the wafers because she feels they are easier to work with. The wafers are packaged in one-pound bags and come in all colors for decorating special occasion molds such as Santas and snowmen.

Martha uses an electric skillet to melt the chocolate, filling it with about two inches of water and using the lowest temperature setting. She puts the various colors of chocolate wafers in glass jars and places them in the skillet, stirring the chocolate occasionally until the candy melts.

After it is melted, it can be colored with paste or powdered food coloring or flavored with oil-based flavoring.

She recommends that the microwave not be used to melt the chocolate, as the heat is too high. A double boiler may be used in lieu of an electric skillet, however.

Martha uses a variety of candy molds for her chocolates, including many seasonal holiday designs as well as traditional chocolate shapes. The molds are clear plastic, and coated so the chocolate will not stick after it hardens in the mold.

For plain chocolate pieces, the mold is simply filled with melted candy, tapped lightly on the counter top to expel any air bubbles, and placed in the freezer for a few minutes until the chocolate is hardened. After removing from the freezer, let it set for a few minutes, then invert over waxed paper and flex gently.

To make a candy shell, for items like chocolate covered cherries or peanut butter cups, drop the melted candy into the bottom of the mold cavity, and with a small spoon or brush, coat the sides of the mold with chocolate, making sure there are no spots left uncoated.

Then place the mold in the freezer until the shell is hardened. Add the filling and cover with more melted chocolate, making sure all edges are well sealed. Replace the mold in the freezer until set and invert onto waxed paper as before.

The various fillings which Martha uses can be made using fondant or cream filling as a base. A quick fondant recipe is printed below.

Martha uses several colors of chocolate on some of her designs, painting the colors of chocolate directly onto the inside surface of the mold cavity with small brushes. When two colors will touch, the mold must be placed in the freezer until one color has set up.

After all the desired colors are painted in and set in the freezer, the remainder of the mold cavity should be filled with the desired color and placed in the freezer until the candy is hardened.

When a session of candymaking is completed and there is candy left in the jars, Martha simply allows the chocolate to cool, uncovered. When it is cool, it can be covered with foil and kept in a cool, dark place along with unmelted chocolate and finished candies. The chocolate will keep indefinitely, says Martha, and does not need to be refrigerated.

Martha makes many types of specialty items, including colorful chocolate Christmas tree ornaments, inserting string or cord loops into the chocolate before putting it in the freezer to harden; or placing a sucker stick into the mold to make chocolate suckers for children.

She adds all sorts of ingredients, such as chopped nuts, coconut, rice krispies, or colored sprinkles for variety and also buys caramel in five-pound blocks to use as filling for her candies.

Many of her recipes can be made and dropped in clusters on waxed paper rather than into molds, if desired.

Finished candies should be stored with tissue paper between layers, to prevent the candy from getting dull and scratched.

Martha's recipe for quick fondant follows, with two recipes for candies which use the fondant, a peanut butter filling, and a recipe for Texas Millionaires, which Martha says is her favorite:

QUICK FONDANT
one-third c. soft butter or margarine
one third c. white corn syrup
1/4 tsp. salt
1 tsp. vanilla
4 1/2 c. sifted confectioners sugar

In a large mixing bowl blend butter, corn syrup, salt and vanilla. Add sifted sugar all at once. Mix together first with a spoon, then with your hands, kneading until smooth.

By adding food coloring, flavoring, or nuts, many varieties may be made.

COCONUT CREAMS
2 c. cream mix (fondant)
1/2 c. coconut

coconut flavoring to taste
Mix together. Make candy shell in bon bon or other mold. Fill with cream mixture. Cover and seal with chocolate and freeze.

NUT CENTERS

Wrap a small portion of fondant mixture around a nut meat and place in candy shell. Cover and seal with chocolate and freeze.

PEANUT BUTTER CUPS

1 1/2 c. peanut butter
1 stick butter or margarine
1 tsp. vanilla
3/4 box powdered sugar

Mix all ingredients and stir or knead into a smooth ball. This can be used for peanut butter cups or bon bons. Break off a piece of the peanut butter mixture, place in a candy shell, cover and seal with chocolate and freeze.

TEXAS MILLIONAIRES

1 pkg. caramel candy or 1 lb. caramel
2 Tbsp. butter
2 Tbsp. water

Combine and cook over medium heat in a double boiler until melted. Mix in 2 cups pecan halves.

Drop by tablespoons on buttered cookie sheet. When cool, dip caramel patties in melted chocolate to coat and place on buttered cookie sheet.

Candymaking Session

Martha Schueler, right, sometimes called "The Candy Lady" because she makes large quantities of chocolate candy and enjoys teaching others candy molding techniques, gives a demonstration for a group of ladies at a recent club meeting. She is assisted by Lorna Schueler, her sister-in-law. Both women are from the Rhea Community, northwest of Friona.

Conklin to receive Degree of Chivalry

During the Hereford Rebekah Lodge No. 228 meeting Tuesday evening, a letter from the Department of Patriarch Militants was read announcing that the Degree of Chivalry would honor Anna Conklin.

She will receive this honor at the Grand Lodge session in Abilene March 20, 1983. Members congratulate Ms.

Conklin. Vice-grand, Lavita Fitzgerald, presided at the business meeting, attended by 24 members. Fifty-four visits to the sick and 22 cheer cards were reported.

Lodge members will travel to Dimmitt this evening, where the funeral team will take a part in a joint school of instructions to be conducted by Distict No. 5 Deputy President Gail Nelson. Lodge deputy Ursalee Jacobsen presented certificates of perfection to Lydia Hopson, Roberta Combs, and Verna Sowell.

A school of instructions was presented by Ms. Jacobsen concerning duties of officers and the proper procedure when visiting a lodge in another jurisdiction. Members were selected to demonstrate this procedure.

Roberta Combs reported for the committee in charge of the chili supper to be held Saturday, Nov. 13 at the Odd Fellow Hall.

Eugenia and Roberta Combs were co-hostesses for the evening.

Others present were Karroll Rettman, Faye Brownlow, Susie Curtsinger, Helen Bishop, Ms. Conklin, Beth Hall, Velma Sowell, Leona Sowell, Nellie Beauford, Ruth Rogers. And, Peggy Lemons, Kee Ruland, Irene Merritt, Edna

Holiday Bazaar scheduled Nov. 12

The third annual holiday bazaar of First United Methodist Church will be staged Nov. 12 in the church fellowship hall. Its theme, "Up, Up and Away!" will be emphasized with decorations of gaily-colored balloons.

Open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., booths will offer a variety of handmade articles, most of them suitable for gifts. A lunch featuring barbecued beef brisket will be served from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., and at other hours of the day coffee with homemade breaks, cake and cookies will be available. Since the church is located in the downtown area, employees of business houses and offices there are especially invited for lunch and coffee breaks.

Judy Williams is general chairman of the bazaar, with Nell Hodges and Kathy Moore as co-chairman. Beverly Bryant heads the lunch committee and Elizabeth McDowell the coffee committee.

Booths include those for sale of arts-crafts, candy, food, needlework, plants, Christmas items, mens' crafts and children's clothing and toys.

Ann Landers

Always signals to suicide

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The 17-year-old son of our dearest friends committed suicide. We are in a state of shock. This boy was one of the brightest, sweetest, best-looking, most popular lads in school. He was an achiever, admired, respected and loved. He excelled in sports, did not smoke nor drink, so far as we know, he never messed around with drugs. His parents are inconsolable. They feel that it is their fault for not recognizing signs that their son was deeply troubled. Why would a seemingly happy, well-adjusted, attractive boy with his whole life ahead do such a thing? He left no notes, not a clue. He picked a time when he was alone at home. When his parents returned from an evening out, they found him dead, with a bullet through his head.

Can anything be done to prevent such tragedies?—Searching For Answers

DEAR SEARCHING: Suicide is second only to accidents as the cause of death among teenagers. The indiscriminate use of drugs is one of the major reasons, but you say this young man was not a user.

Something was wrong in the boy's life. Outward appearances of cheerfulness can be deceiving. Unhappy, frustrated and depressed people often learn to mask their feelings well. The boy you write about was one who did.

There always are signals. Parents, teachers and close friends should be alert to them. Any mention of suicide or verbalized doubts as to whether life is worth living should not be ignored. An attempt to "put things in order" is another flag. Signs of depression in normally cheerful people are another indication of trouble.

Experts on suicide disagree on whether it is preventable. Some wise heads say certain people are programmed at an early age to self-destruct and nothing can stop them—no amount of love, emotional support or caring. I never fail to point this out to parents who view the suicide of their child as a personal failure. Their guilt must be unbearable and it helps to know it wasn't their fault.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: When I first read about transvestites in your column (10 years ago) I thought those guys had to be crazy. I was also sure I'd be able to spot one a mile away.

A few months ago I went to work for an ambulance service. Since that time I have pulled two very macho guys out of wrecked cars. Both were wearing ladies' underwear. Another surprise—a prominent lawyer had a heart attack. When we arrived he was trying to get out of his satin and lace nightie. It's like you said, Ann, you never know.—Pop-Eyed In Jacksonville

DEAR POP: Thanks for the validation.

DEAR ANN: Please print something I read in my All-Anon book tonight. I think it's beautiful.—Positive Thinker In Lancaster

DEAR LAN: So do I. Here it is: Today is mine. It is unique. Nobody in the world has one exactly like it. It holds the sum of all my past experiences and all my future potential. I can fill it with joyous memories or ruin it with fruitless worry. If painful recollections of the past come into my mind, or frightening thoughts of the future, I can put them away. They cannot spoil today for me. It is mine.

At Wits End

BY ERMA BOMBECK

There's a lot of talk about a baby boom and I think I know why.

The Ewing mothers on "Dallas"; Pam and Sue Ellen. If I had seen motherhood depicted on this show when I was younger, I'd probably have had a dozen or so kids. Both of these characters are about as maternal as an unmarried teenage cobra.

All either of them do is to come in, pick up the baby, say hello to it and give it to a nurse to do something with. I can do that. It's all the stuff in between that made me look like an 85-year-old avocado by the time I was 25.

I don't know how they do it. How come their babies never spit up on their Ultrasuede? For the first two years of life, that's all babies ever do is leak from every opening in their body.

How come they can place them lovingly in their beds on their backs and the next scene shows the baby smiling and gurgling. Every time I put one of my kids down anywhere they made "Poltergeist" look like a day at the beach. The crib rattled, lights swung back and forth, toys and bottles flew through the air and there was a cry that made your ears ring for about three days.

Television babies seem to sleep a lot. What a boon this must be for the Ewing women who have such active sex lives. As my friends and I have discussed many times, you just try planning an affair with tired blood, raggy underwear and a hyper kid who naps with his eyes open.

It's possible motherhood has undergone some changes in the last 20 years, but I'm willing to bet that a steady siter like "Miss Ellie" is an endangered species. My mother had an unlisted phone number 20 years ago and would never sit with more than one of them at a time.

On a recent episode, I saw Sue Ellen rush into the Ewing kitchen where Miss Ellie was feeding her son who was "snatched" by his father the night before. "Why don't you leave him here for awhile?" said Miss Ellie.

"Okay," said Sue Ellen and with that took off to visit with an old lover without so much as a "Wanta give Mama a sticky, Sugar?"

Maybe when the kid starts voting his own stock options things will be different.

Jones assists with TCU homecoming

Gary Jones of 332 Douglas, is among a group of Texas Christian University students heading committees for TCU Homecoming this weekend. He is the representative for the sophomore class.

Activities include golf and tennis tournaments for alumni; Frog Follies skit night on Friday; and on Saturday: a morning reception in TCU's new J.M. Moudy Building for Visual Arts and Communication, a barbecue luncheon, the 2 p.m. football game with Texas Tech, and a homecoming dance at the Hyatt Regency.

Homecoming 1982 honors Dan Jenkins, 1953 TCU graduate who is now a best-selling novelist and longtime writer for Sports Illustrated.

Autumn tour takes area residents through Ozarks

Five Hereford residents have returned from a recent Trailways Tour to the "flaming" Ozarks of Arkansas and Missouri. Leona Glenn, Thelma McMinn, and Elizabeth Willis joined a group from the Amarillo area, with Robert and Alice Thompson as escorts.

Also on the tour were six residents of Dimmitt: Mr. and Mrs. Homer Nisbett, Oleta Gollehon, Irene Carpenter, Louise Mears, and Mary Hendrix.

The route of travel began from Amarillo to Oklahoma City, where the group visited the National Cowboy Hall of Fame, and then to Fountainhead Lodge on the shores of Lake Eufala for the night.

The next night was spent at the Fayetteville Hilton, after a scenic drive from Tahleah, Okla., to Mena, Ark., with a stop in Van Buren, Ark., during the afternoon.

The following day's travel took the group through the campus of the University of Arkansas, before departing for a visit to the Pea Ridge Battlefield, a stop at Eureka Springs, and then on to Branson, Mo., for two nights.

While at Branson, the travelers visited the Shepherd of the Hills Farm and Silver Dollar City, as well as enjoying two evenings of musical entertainment, Opryland U.S.A. on the Road and the Bob O'Link's program of country music.

Leaving the Branson area, they continued through the spectacular flaming Ozarks into Claremore, Okla., and a visit to the Will Rogers Shrine. From there they made their way to Western Hills Lodge on Lake Gibson where they held a farewell banquet before returning to Amarillo.

Christmas program scheduled

"It's Beginning to Taste A Lot Like Christmas" will be presented by Joy Gibson, Consumer Information Specialist, Energas, on Monday, Nov. 8 at 2 p.m. and 7 p.m. at the Flame Room, Energas, 301 West Third.

Ms. Gibson will discuss cake cookery as well as demonstrating handmade craft ideas for Christmastime. The program is free of charge and both presentations are the same. Invite a friend and come

Lincoln's dream

Early in April 1865, President Lincoln told his wife and a friend that he had dreamed he was awakened by sobbing and followed the sound to the East Room of the White House, where mourners surrounded a catafalque and an honor guard told him: "The president... killed by an assassin." Within two weeks the slain president lay in the room.

Fraser named to honor society

Michael B. Fraser

Michael B. Fraser, South Plains College drafting technology major from Hereford, has been named to SPC's chapter of Phi Theta Kappa, national honor society for students in two-year colleges.

Fraser, a 1982 graduate of Hereford High School and son of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Smith of 710 Lee, is a member of Circle K and Student Government at SPC. He maintains a 3.6 grade point average while carrying 14 semester hours.

Aglow Fellowship to meet tomorrow evening

Women's Aglow Fellowship will meet at 7:30 p.m. Friday in the Hereford School cafeteria.

Guest speaker for the evening will be Jo Fisher. Special music will be provided by Kathy Burns.

Mrs. Fisher and her husband, Harry, make up the Harry Fisher of Men Evangelistic Association, Inc., which operates from a home base in Wichita Falls.

They travel across the country, ministering in many different churches, denominational and interdenominational, as well as at home meetings, prisons, and Full Gospel Businessmen's Fellowship and Women's Aglow meetings.

Mrs. Fisher will also be speaking at 7:30 p.m. Saturday and during the Sunday services at the Christian Assembly.

Effects of literature discussed at meeting

Phyllis Neill gave a program on literature and its effects on people's daily lives at the Tuesday night meeting of Xi Epsilon Alpha in the Reddy Room.

Ways and means projects were discussed and it was announced that rituals will be held Nov. 16 at the Community Center. The annual Christmas party will be Dec. 14 in the home of Lynda Brown.

Thank you notes were read from Ronna Howell, Jody Blackwell, Brenda Thomas, and Ms. Brown.

Others present were Illajeon Brinkman, Oleta Tisdale, Randy Hamilton, Debbie Walker, Jimmie Middleton, Margie Waddell, Opal Glen, and Rose Marie Robinson.

After the meeting, several members went to visit their adopted sister at Westgate.

Today In History

Today is Thursday, Nov. 4, the 306th day of 1982. There are 57 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Nov. 4, 1979, Iranian militants seized the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, leading to 444 days of captivity for 52 American hostages.

On this date: In 1921, Japan's Premier Takashi Hara was assassinated.

In 1922, the entrance to King Tut's tomb was discovered.

In 1931, the League of Nations accused Japan of aggression in Manchuria.

In 1956, Soviet forces attacked Budapest, Hungary.

Ten years ago: President Richard Nixon said he was confident the U.S. would negotiate a Vietnam peace settlement on the basis of "honor" and not "surrender."

Thought for today: "I always prefer to believe the best of everybody — it saves so much trouble." — Rudyard Kipling, English writer (1863-1936).

Chagra questioned, FBI tapes played

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — El Paso attorney Joseph Chagra has told a jury he still believes more than one person took part in the assassination of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. three years ago.

Chagra, 35, has pleaded guilty to murder conspiracy and become a key government witness in the trial of three people charged in connection with the judge's slaying.

He testified under cross-examination Wednesday that he believes more than one person was involved in the May 29, 1979, shooting of Wood at the exclusive DiJon Townhomes here.

"It's just my personal opinion from what little I know of the death of Judge Wood," Chagra told defense attorney Tom Sharpe Jr., who represents convicted hitman Charles V. Harrelson.

Sharpe told jurors in his opening statement he would reveal Wood's "real killer."

Harrelson is charged with firing the shot that killed Wood, known as "Maximum John" because of the stiff drug sentences he handed out.

Chagra's brother, Jimmy, is charged with murder for allegedly paying Harrelson $250,000 to shoot the judge. Jimmy Chagra, who will be tried separately later, had been scheduled to be tried by Wood at the time of the judge's death.

Sharpe today continues cross-examining Joseph Chagra — who took the stand and told jurors his older brother and Harrelson both admitted to him their parts in the killing.

Sharpe questioned Joseph Chagra at length Wednesday about George Edward "Pete" Kay, a lifelong friend of Harrelson's who testified under immunity earlier. Kay said he had known Jimmy Chagra since the mid 1960s.

Sharpe also hammered at the plea bargain agreement entered into by Joseph Chagra, who said he will receive a prison sentence of no more than 10 years and immunity from prosecution in state or federal courts.

During Chagra's lengthy testimony, the government has played seven hours of secret FBI tape recordings for the jury trying Harrelson, his wife Jo Ann, 41, and Jimmy Chagra's wife, Elizabeth, 28.

Mrs. Harrelson is charged with obstructing justice and perjury. Mrs. Chagra is charged with conspiracy to murder and to obstruct justice.

Mrs. Chagra broke into sobs Wednesday while the jury listened to an FBI tape made during a January 1981 visiting room conversation between the husband and wife at the Leavenworth, Kan., Federal Penitentiary.

When the couple's young daughter, Jackie, was heard interrupting her parents' conversation and saying, "I love you, Daddy. I love you guys," Mrs. Chagra began weeping profusely.

On the tape, Jimmy Chagra told his wife he suspected the room was bugged, and then forced her to admit she had advised him in spring 1979 to have Wood killed.

"And you said, 'I'll leave it up to you,'" Mrs. Chagra said.

"And what'd you suggest?" Jimmy Chagra said.

"And I said, 'Yeah, do it,'" Mrs. Chagra replied.

Chagra then laughed and told his wife: "Hey, as it's standing... you killed Wood."

Other tapes of Leavenworth conversations between the two Chagra brothers disclosed they had doubts that Harrelson himself had killed Wood, and thought one of his associates may have fired the shot.

Mrs. Harrelson has been convicted for using a fictitious name to buy a deer rifle, which prosecutors contend is the murder weapon. The rifle was purchased 12 days before the judge's murder.

Joseph Chagra said Harrelson told him his wife was along when Harrelson threw the gun in a Dallas area creekbed.

Harrelson thought it was amusing his wife used the phony name Fay King — "faking" — to buy the weapon, Joseph Chagra said.

The brothers' conversations became more frenetic as the FBI became, what one of them described on the tape, "hot and heavy on our tracks."

"I don't know how they found out, but they know everything," Joseph Chagra told his brother in one conversation last year.

"That Harrelson's a scary guy," Joseph Chagra said at one point.

"We gotta get the gun," Jimmy Chagra said.

"Uh, huh," his attorney-brother said. "If Jo Ann flipped, she could take them right to it."

Two young boys found the stock of a Weatherby deer rifle near Dallas last year, but the barrel and firing mechanism never have been found.

Authorities tally damage from Port Isabel storm

PORT ISABEL, Texas (AP) — Authorities are tallying the damage caused by a "freak" storm that tore through this coastal community, injuring almost 20 people, leaving some people homeless and sending others fleeing inland.

The losses could reach into the millions of dollars, and the damages in Port Isabel alone should total more than $1 million, Mayor Quirino Martinez estimated.

The hurricane-force storm, caused by powerful downdrafts that darted to the ground from high storm clouds, caught coastal residents off guard when it blew through town shortly after 1 a.m. Wednesday.

"We were totally unprepared because no one issued a warning," said South Padre Island Mayor Minnie Solomonson. "It was just a freak."

"I thought the building was just going to come crashing down," said Sheila S. Kilgore, who was in a nearby South Padre Island hotel room on a business trip from St. Louis, Mo.

She said she was awakened in the middle of the night by what "sounded like a woman's scream," but actually was the wind wailing through her balcony door. Then the hotel began to shake and the lights went out, she said.

Ms. Kilgore said she selected an island hotel because "everybody told me Padre Island was such a nice place." But after the storm, she moved to a hotel in Harlingen about 40 miles inland.

The downbursts, some estimated at near 100 mph at Padre Island, sent five people to the hospital and injured at least a dozen others.

Dozens of mobile homes toppled into a canal, trees were uprooted and portions of the two communities were swamped. At least 18 airplanes were damaged at area airports and the Confederate Air Force in Harlingen.

The buffeting winds also almost razed one Port Isabel apartment complex, destroyed some homes and damaged resort hotels on the island, according to Ms. Solomonson and Martinez.

About two dozen families from the two communities were homeless, while others from a severely damaged camper park nearby also sought shelter, according to Nita Flewelling of the Red Cross' Brownsville Chapter.

Port Isabel schools were closed Wednesday because of the "commotion" that carried over into morning cleanup efforts, said Ruth Gower of the Red Cross.

"Some people say they took a pretty good shaking from the wind," she said.

Three women and two men remained hospitalized today with back, shoulder and rib injuries, and twelve people were treated and released at area hospitals.

U.S. Coast Guard Chief Bill Barts, in charge of the Port Isabel station, said the storm also surprised the Coast Guard.

The National Weather Service in Brownsville said the storm was triggered by an unusually strong early season cold front that collided with the warm, unstable tropical air in South Texas.

Barts said the National Weather Service forecast the Coast Guard received Tuesday called for southeast winds at 17 to 23 mph shifting to northerly 23 to 34 mph as a weather front came through.

"That's a piece of cake down here," he said. "But we we didn't know it was going to be as bad as it was."

Jupiter's moons

The planet Jupiter has 16 known satellites — 14 of them were discovered from earth-based observation. Four of Jupiter's moons are large and bright, rivaling our own moon in diameter, and may be seen through field glasses.

Suspect in extortion jailed

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — A fourth man has surrendered to authorities and is being held today in connection with an attempt to extort $50,000 by strapping a fake bomb to a Beaumont banker, authorities say.

Henry Harness, 25, walked into the federal courthouse Wednesday with his lawyer, police said.

Justice of the Peace Harold Engstrom ordered Harness jailed in lieu of $250,000 bond on an aggravated robbery charge. Three other men, including Harness' twin brother, already were in custody on the same charge and bail.

Lonnie Weir, president of Lamar State Bank, said two armed men bound his wife and 13-year-old daughter in their home last Thursday, and strapped what they said was a bomb to him.

Weir said the gunmen told they would activate the device unless he got $50,000 from the bank and gave it to them.

The money never was delivered because of a mix-up, and Weir returned home to find his wife and daughter already had untied themselves and called police. The device strapped to him turned out to be a back vibrator.

Weir told police his daughter was leaving for school about 7:40 a.m. Oct. 28 when she found armed two men standing at the door. The men forced their way in the house.

Weir went to the bank, as told, and got the $50,000. He was supposed to pick up a note at a certain location, he said, but couldn't find it. Police said Weir might have gotten to the site before the gunmen had a chance to leave the note.

DR. LAMB
Try physical therapy

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have suffered from osteoarthritis since my late 30s and I'm now 77. The doctor who first treated me told me I would always suffer pain but would never become a cripple. His prediction has been true so far.

For the past six years I have suffered excruciating pain in my right leg, which I feel is not arthritic. The arthritis is being controlled with medicine. The pain centers mostly in the side of the calf area but also emanates from the hip area and down the entire leg.

I find it eases the pain to bend slightly forward while walking. Of course, I limp and now find it increasingly difficult to straighten up as I walk. As a result I walk like a doddering old woman.

The physician I now visit regularly claims it to be from the sciatic nerve. I would greatly appreciate any advice you can offer.

DEAR READER — Considering the many years of arthritis you have experienced you have really done rather well.

The pain as you describe it may be caused by your osteoarthritis. The degeneration and regrowth of bone tissue may cause bone spurs that impinge upon nerve fibers that go to your thigh and down to your foot. This is the sciatic nerve and that is why it is called sciatica. Changes in the lower spine, sacroiliac joint (sacrum and iliac part of pelvis) from arthritis are the most common cause of sciatic nerve involvement. Degeneration of the joints in the lower spine may also cause nerve pressure and symptoms.

I'd like you to see a specialist in physical medicine and get some physical therapy. You want to avoid permanent bending forward at your hip area. Heat and stretching may also help make you feel more comfortable. Talk to your doctor about it and see if you can arrange for some help to maintain your flexibility and full degree of motion.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband and I would like to start a family. However, he had a vasectomy prior to our meeting. We would like to know if a vasectomy can be reversed. If not, can physicians extract sperm from where it is produced and artificially inseminate a woman?

DEAR READER — Anyone having a vasectomy should consider it a permanent means of birth control. However, depending on the type of vasectomy performed, some vasectomies can be reversed. This involves reconnecting the two ends of the very small tube (vas deferens) that were cut.

It is difficult to do such minute surgery and some skilled with the use of microscopic surgery claim to have better results than surgery without the microscope.

Even if the tubes are successfully reunited, that is no guarantee the man will produce enough healthy sperm to induce pregnancy. But it does happen.

Your chances of success with reuniting the tubes is far better than attempting to obtain sperm. The sperm cells are a microscopic part of the ejaculate and are not withdrawn as if taking a blood sample.

State to manage Matagorda Islands

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Despite protests from environmental groups that it will overdevelop environmentally sensitive Matagorda Island, the state has agreed to manage the area, which is jointly owned by Texas and the federal government.

After months of negotiations, the Parks & Wildlife Commission voted Wednesday to enter into an agreement that gives the state control — but also puts the affected 43,000-acre portion of the barrier island under the National Wildlife Refuge System.

That means state officials will be constrained by federal guidelines in development and maintenance of the wildlife area, of which 24,000 acres belongs to the state and 19,000 acres to the federal government.

Another 17,500 acres of wetlands is managed by the state land office and is not included in the agreement.

The state has been trying to get control of the island since 1976 when the Air Force decided it no longer needed the base it had on the island. In a series of public hearings on management of Matagorda, environmental groups spoke out against state management of the island, fearing the area would be opened up to development.

Ned Fritz of Dallas, chairman of the Texas Committee on Natural Resources, said environmental groups would push for congressional review of the agreement in hopes it can be revoked.

If that fails, Fritz said, environmentalists probably would take the state to court.

Parks & Wildlife spokesman Jim Cox said the agreement will not go into effect for at least a month.

"We feel that we're running a grave risk if we let Parks & Wildlife get management of Matagorda Island," Fritz said. "We have a perfectly good manager handling it now in the federal Fish and Wildlife Service. We think it would be foolish to change that good administration for an organization that for some years now has had a much worse record in handling our public lands for the benefit of the long-range future."

The agreement, which could be changed somewhat before it is finalized, establishes an approximately 6,500-acre Matagorda Island State Park and Wildlife Conservation area, with the remainder of the island designated a wildlife management area.

Included in the park area are two miles of beach front, the abandoned Air Force base, and several thousand acres of buffer between the park and the wildlife management area.

"Access to the island will remain virtually the same as in the past," said a statement issued by Parks & Wildlife officials. "With private boats and charter aircraft being the only available mode of transportation. No bridge or causeway will be built, and boat docks already there will be renovated, but not expanded."

Weather big factor in markets

NEW YORK (AP) — With the elections out of the way, speculation will return to more permanent considerations, such as the economy, stocks and bonds, the money supply, Federal Reserve policy and the weather.

Paine Webber Mitchell Hutchins Inc., which normally worries about stocks and related investments, already has been caught up in weather worries and has announced the possibility of a severely cold "double-dip" winter and spring.

What that has to do with investments might not be immediately obvious until you realize that most brokers these days handle commodities trading also, and it pays to know which way the wind will be blowing over the wheat fields.

Of more immediate concern is which way the Federal Reserve will bend. A feeling exists in credit markets that the Fed wants to lower the discount rate just before the elections but feared being accused of aiding the Republicans. That fear was real, since earlier decreases in the discount rate — the rate the central bank charges on overnight loans to commercial bank members — would give a further boost to stocks and bonds. And it is well known, of course, that when securities prices rise, so does a sense of well being among millions.

Nobody is certain that is why the Fed declined to drop the rate, but now a large segment of the marketplace believes a one-half point reduction to 9 percent is about to be announced, if not tomorrow, then certainly next week.

Pleasant expectations these days, however, almost always are accompanied by foreboding. The Fed, everyone knows, is supposed to be above partisan politics, but nobody is certain of this. What if, instead, it clamps down on the economy?

To Perform

"The Living Water Gospel Band" from Pampa will be part of the entertainment featured during the "Wesley's Fall Festival of Arts and Crafts" slated from 9 a.m. until 6 p.m. Nov. 13 at the Community Center. The group is scheduled to perform from 3-4 p.m. that day. The public is invited to attend and there will be no admission cost for the entertainment portion of the bazaar.

37 years after, 115 to fly over Himalayas again

PEKING (AP) — David Orth is a big, hearty farmer from Modesto, Calif., but his eyes fill with tears and his voice falters when he speaks of the perilous days 37 years ago when he "flew the Hump."

"Sometimes our men would pray for bad weather so the Japanese couldn't find us," the 60-year-old former crew chief said Wednesday. "We didn't know which was worse, the weather or the Japanese shooting at us, but they both were pretty darn bad."

Orth is one of 115 former pilots and crewmen who have returned to China to relive their World War II flights over the treacherous Hump — the stormy, 700-mile route over the Himalayas between China and India.

They and their families will fly it again Sunday when they take a one-hour commemorative commercial flight from Canton to Calcutta. But that flight will be in a modern jetliner high above the tallest peaks, not in the underpowered, overloaded C-47s that sometimes were dashed into the jagged mountains by the winds or downed by Japanese Zeros.

"When we flew from Shanghai to Kunming the other day," said Orth with a quaver in his voice, "I recognized the terrain immediately and it was as if 37 years had never happened."

"When you can bring back yesterday as this trip has, it is all worthwhile."

The Hump pilots flew supplies for Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalists to use against the Japanese. The returning Americans were soon reminded that their Chinese hosts' enemies now are not the Japanese but those same Nationalists, who moved to Taiwan after they lost the civil war to the Communists in 1949.

The Americans returned with caps displaying their wartime insignia, a shield surmounted by the crossed American and Nationalist flags. Some wore their old flight jackets with the emblem of the old alliance on them. Their Chinese tour guides asked them to remove the badges, saying they were an insult and an indication of support for the government on Taiwan. Waiters in Kunming wouldn't serve them until they put the caps out of sight.

"This emblem means a lot to these men," said Orth. "After all, it's the symbol they fought under and their friends died under. You can't forget those kinds of things easily."

"We were fighting for the Chinese people, one people, and one day Taiwan will come back," said Peyton Walmsley of Seal Beach, Calif.

From 1942 to 1945, the U.S. Air Force flew the Hump in C-47, C-46 and C-54 transports and C-109 tankers, a four-to-five-hour ordeal, to supply the Chinese forces.

Flying the Hump became a legend, treasured by more than 4,000 members of the Hump Flyers Association in the United States. Many never saw the mountains that gave the route its name because they were blanketed in clouds.

MARRIED WOMEN In the U.S. Labor Force

SOURCE: Census Bureau
NEA/Moffitt Cecil
Not only are women increasing in the American work force, but more married women are steadily entering the job market. The 1980 census showed a rise to just over half of all married women from 41 percent 10 years before. And the percentage had more than doubled since 1950. A large share of the growth was among women with children under 6 years of age, with 45 percent reported working.

Italy to buy aircraft if U.S. lifts sanctions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Italy will buy more than a billion dollars' worth of American aircraft if the United States lifts sanctions against Italian firms for their part in the Soviet natural gas pipeline, Italian Prime Minister Giovanni Spadolini said Wednesday.

Spadolini also said the Reagan administration had readied a new proposal for ending the trans-Atlantic dispute over Western participation in the pipeline. "A solution is very near," he said.

"I announced to President

Reagan the Italian decision ... to acquire, once the commercial situation is normalized between the two countries, 33 McDonnell-Douglas DC 9-80s," the prime minister told reporters in Italian as he left the White House.

When the translator made it "three DC-9s," Spadolini carefully corrected her.

The planes would go to Alitalia, the government-owned airline. McDonnell-Douglas Corp. announced in Long Beach, Calif. that Alitalia has bought an option for the airliners, which the company said would be worth more than $1 billion. The company said a sale depends on approval by the Italian government and by the U.S. government's Export-Import Bank, which finances many aircraft exports.

At a news conference later, Spadolini was asked what Italy's conditions were for the deal.

Deaf Smith County Commissioners Court

OPINION POLL

Deaf Smith County Commissioners Court will respond to the voters and taxpayers of our county concerning our portion of the proposed SPECIAL EVENTS CENTER. Our portion would be the auditorium-banquet hall at an estimated cost of $4 to $5 million.

We neither support nor oppose the project and the bond issue it would require.

We are asking registered voters to indicate "Yes" or "No" on whether they want us to pursue this issue.

We should point out that operating and maintenance costs would require taxation in addition to bond debt requirements.

PLEASE INDICATE YOUR OPINION IN THIS UNOFFICIAL POLL. MAIL OR RETURN THIS FORM TO: DEAF SMITH COUNTY COURTHOUSE, COUNTY JUDGE'S OFFICE, HEREFORD, TX., 79045.

YES
I want the county to pursue this project and call a bond election.

NO
I do not want the county to pursue this project and call a bond election.
