Senate adopts budget, with minimal increases

By KATHRYN BAKER
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) — With its sponsor apologizing that $30.8 billion did not go far enough, the Senate adopted a two-year state budget that leaves most agencies and public schoolteachers with minimal increases over the money they received from the last Legislature.

The House-Senate compromise budget was approved 23-8 and needs a final OK from the House before going to Gov. Mark White.

"There are a lot of good things we'd like to do, but when we have 'X' amount of dollars, there are a lot of good things we can't do," Senate Finance Committee Chairman Grant Jones, D-Abilene, told the Senate. "I'm sorry we don't have more money."

Sen. Hugh Farmer, D-Fort Worth, complained to Jones that the bill gives teachers only the average 4 percent per year raise they would get under state law anyway.

Farmer also pointed out the $5 increase in monthly welfare payments and funding for only one 1,000-bed unit for the Texas Department of Corrections before telling Jones the measure is "woefully inadequate in addressing critical state needs."

"I won't argue that point with you at all," said Jones.

Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Hereford, also complained about the lack of teacher pay raises, noting Gov. Mark White had called for a 24 percent, two-year raise, the Texas Education Agency recommended a 21 percent raise, and the Legislative Budget Board suggested a 19 percent increase.

"When are we going to start setting priorities?" Sarpalius asked. "We definitely need to do something to encourage more good teachers to go into the profession."

"Half of this budget goes to education. I'd call that a pretty good priority," Jones said. "If we give each teacher $1 dollar a month, it carries a price tag of $2 million."

Sen. Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville, predicted White will call a special session to fund additional teacher raises, but told his colleagues a vote against the appropriations bill was not a vote against teachers.

Dressed in tennis shoes

Sarpalius' filibuster futile

By KATHRYN BAKER
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) — Sen. Bill Sarpalius filibustered for almost nine hours against an agricultural workers' compensation bill he said would ruin farmers in his Panhandle district before giving up early today and letting Senators tentatively pass the measure.

Sarpalius, D-Hereford, began his filibuster at 4:14 p.m. Friday.

At 12:55 a.m., Sarpalius told his colleagues who had returned to the floor that he was giving up but would again speak in opposition to the measure when it came up for final passage.

"I'm certainly willing to talk a whole lot longer, but I don't think that's fair to you, and I don't think that's fair to the state of Texas," Sarpalius said.

The Senate voted 16-11 for the bill.

Sarpalius, dressed in a blue suit and tennis shoes, had lectured to an almost empty chamber all evening, except when one of two other Senators would pay a visit to the floor and help take up the time by asking him to yield for questions.

The 35-year-old senator had told his colleagues he would talk "throughout the night or however long the good Lord will let my legs stand."

Sarpalius maintained the bill would cost economically depressed farmers too much money.

"I'm going to go get you some cough drops because you sound like you need them," Sarpalius was told five hours into his filibuster by Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur. Parker had returned to the floor to help Sarpalius by taking over the speaking.

"I got paid a hundred dollars to come liven up your filibuster. I heard it was dull," Parker joked.

Leftists take blame for adviser's death

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist guerrillas officially took responsibility for killing a high-ranking U.S. military adviser and warned that President Reagan's policies will bring a "harvest" of dead American soldiers.

Radio Farabundo Marti, voice of the Popular Liberation Forces, said Friday that an urban commando squad from the rebel group shot Navy Lt. Cmdr. Albert A. Schaufelberger to death. The radio called the Wednesday assassination a "patriotic operation."

The Popular Liberation Forces is the largest and most radical of the five guerrilla groups fighting the U.S.-backed government in the 3 1/2-year-old civil war.

Schaufelberger is the first American military man killed since the Reagan administration sent noncombat advisers two years ago to help the Salvadoran armed forces crush the insurgents.

The 33-year-old Navy officer from San Diego, Calif., was deputy commander of the 52 American military advisers in El Salvador. He was in charge of security for the group.

Gunmen pumped three bullets into his head as he sat in his car waiting for a woman friend at Central American University on the west side of the capital. His body was flown to the United States Friday after a memorial service.

Worker's productivity on rise

NEW YORK (AP) — Productivity among American workers is on the rise, a development that economists say could help businesses rebuild profits without rekindling double-digit inflation.

The Labor Department said this past week that productivity, as measured by output for each hour worked in non-farm businesses, rose at an annual rate of 4.7 percent in the first three months of the year. That's compared with 0.4 percent growth in the final quarter of 1982, and no growth at all for all of last year.

Among factory workers, productivity rose 8.3 percent in the first quarter against 1 percent the previous three months.

Rapid growth in productivity is typical in the early stages of an economic recovery, and strong improvements are also expected in the current quarter, said Burton Zwick, a vice president and economist at Prudential Insurance Co. of America.

With factories running well below capacity as a result of two recessions since 1980, employers can step up production without recalling laid off workers, thereby increasing output without raising labor costs.

The Labor Department also reported this past week that consumer prices rose 0.6 percent in April, the sharpest monthly rise in nine months. Much of the increase reflected a 4 percent jump in gasoline prices as a nickel-a-gallon increase in federal gasoline taxes took effect.

And, these other developments: —The Labor Department said average weekly earnings rose an inflation-adjusted 0.7 percent in April, the fifth increase in the past six months.

Israel, Syria on 'maximum alert'

By NICOLAS B. TATRO
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli and Syrian armies were reported on "maximum alert" in east Lebanon today, and Christian and Druse militias battled anew with long-range artillery and rocket launchers on the outskirts of Beirut.

Lebanon's state radio said Israel and Syria were sending more troops and tanks to their frontlines in east Lebanon's Bekaa Valley and in the central highlands for a third straight day.

In Kuwait, Khalil al-Wazir, deputy commander of the Palestine Liberation Organization forces, told the al-Watan newspaper that PLO guerrillas in Lebanon also have been put on "maximum alert" with reinforcements joining them from Syria. The PLO troops are deployed behind Syrian forces.

The privately-owned "Voice of Lebanon" radio station said a Syrian tank battalion took up positions near the ancient Bekaa town of Baalbek. There was no official confirmation of the report.

The radio stations said an uneasy calm prevailed in the hills overlooking Beirut at mid-morning, following midnight-to-dawn exchanges between Christian and Druse militiamen.

Despite Syrian and Israeli government assertions that their buildups were defensive, Lebanon's nervousness was reflected by its radio stations which sometimes neared the point of hysteria in covering buildups.

"The situation is on the brink of collapse," the state radio said in Beirut.

Special meeting set to approve McCarley

Superintendent of Schools Harrell L. Holder has announced that he will recommend Bill McCarley, Stanton Junior High School principal, as the new principal of Hereford High School. This recommendation will be made in a special board meeting scheduled for Thursday, June 2.

McCarley started his teaching career in the Hart Schools in 1959. After three years in that system, he moved to Hereford in 1962. Since that time he has served as a teacher at Stanton Junior High School and assistant principal at Stanton. He has also served as principal at Central Elementary, West Central Elementary, and at Stanton.

McCarley graduated from West Texas State University with a B.A. in 1959. In 1967 he was conferred a master of education degree from the same institution.

"Bill has served the Hereford Schools faithfully and commendably," commented Holder. "I'm proud to be associated with personnel of his caliber. I know he will make us a fine high school principal."

Eighth to Graduate

When Diana De La Cruz donned her cap and gown Thursday night for Hereford High School commencement exercises, she became the eighth in her family to graduate from high school, something which her father, who is no longer living, had wanted all of them to attain.

Standing from right are Lucy, HHS class of '68; Carmen, '71; Lydia, '71; Jose, '73; Gloria, '75; Mary, '76; and Becky, '82. Seated with Diana is their mother, Tomasa Cortez, who is proud to see this dream fulfilled.

Businesses closed on holiday

Due to the Memorial Day holiday Monday, several businesses and government offices will be closed. Most will reopen Tuesday morning at normal hours.

Those offices that will be closed are all banks, utilities, the Post Office and most merchants in the downtown area. The Hereford Brand will also be closed.

A father's dream comes true

By LINDA CAUDLE

His dream was for all of his children to finish high school. Thursday night that dream was fulfilled when Diana De La Cruz, the youngest of eight marched across the stage to receive her diploma from Hereford High School.

"I only wish our father was still alive to see this happen," says Gloria Escamilla, one of Diana's older sisters. Their father, Jose De La Cruz, died five years ago.

But their mother, Tomasa Cortez, who has since remarried, is proud as ever of her seven daughters and one son. She has also taken classes and studied along with her children.

She and the kids worked in the field along with her late husband before they migrated to Hereford in 1960. Both parents were originally from Mexico.

"Dad was always a labor contractor," notes Gloria, "and he only had a first grade education. But he wanted something better for us. His dream was for all of us to get an education, so we wouldn't have to work in the fields all of our lives."

"The reason he decided to stay in Hereford was because of our schooling—so that we could get settled in one place."

"There were times when some of us wanted to drop out and forget it, but we all stuck it out and now we're glad of the accomplishment," adds Gloria.

Lucy Pena, the oldest daughter, graduated from Hereford High School in 1968, after which she attended Wayland Baptist University and Texas Tech, and received her bachelor's degree from the University of Texas at Arlington. She is presently

Lewis pleads no contest to failure to file

AUSTIN (AP) — House Speaker Gib Lewis, who two months ago said he had violated no law, has pleaded "no contest" to a charge a prosecutor says he was not ready to file.

Lewis on Friday entered the plea to a Class B misdemeanor charge of "failure to file financial statements" — a charge stemming from his failure to include 49 business interests on his required financial disclosure statement.

"I chose to take this action on my own volition without regard to outside pressure of any kind," Lewis said in a written statement. "I have been wrong in not taking the financial reporting requirements of public officials seriously enough."

State District Judge Mace Thurman accepted Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle's recommendation of an $800 fine, although Lewis volunteered to pay the $1,000 maximum. The charge also carried a possible 180-day jail term.

Among the people apparently not offering "outside pressure" was Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle, who said there has been no formal investigation. Lewis admitted early in the legislative session that his disclosure form was incomplete.

Earle said Lewis' lawyers contacted him this week about a possible plea, although there was no charge pending.

The prosecutor told reporters there had been no investigation because, "When this first began it was at the beginning of the Legislature. My feeling was that we should not begin any kind of investigation, we should allow the Legislature to finish its business. That was my idea of comity."

The legislative session ends Monday night.

In March, shortly after admitting to what he called "inadvertent" omissions on the form, Lewis said in a Mount Pleasant speech, "I did not violate any law. I didn't do anything illegal or immoral."

Earle, who recommended the lighter fine because Lewis came in "of his own volition," agreed that Lewis' offense was not a "crime."

"To call something like this a crime sort of stretches the definition of crime. It was more negligent and careless than it was culpable," said Earle, who earlier this year pleaded guilty to a similar charge.

Lewis appeared in court with his lawyer, Rep. Charles Evans, D-Hurst. The appearance lasted only about 10 minutes, and the first-term speaker from Fort Worth would not answer reporters' questions after his plea.

Nurse pleads innocent in child's death

JUNCTION, Texas (AP) — A defense attorney for a nurse charged with using a powerful drug to murder a toddler and injure six other young patients plans to challenge the validity of toxicology tests that resulted in the woman's indictment.

Genevieve Jones, 32, pleaded innocent Friday to the eight-count indictment, which charges her with the injuries and the Sept. 17, 1982, death of 15-month-old Chelsea Ann McClellan of Kerrville.

The children were under the care of Dr. Kathleen Holland, a Kerrville pediatrician who employed Ms. Jones.

A grand jury is investigating a series of suspicious infant deaths at a San Antonio hospital where Ms. Jones previously worked, and authorities have said they are taking a "close look" at Ms. Jones in connection with those deaths.

Chelsea's mother, Petti McClellan, attended the arraignment before state District Judge V. Murray Jordan on Friday afternoon and wept when District Attorney Ronald Sutton read the murder indictment.

Jordan set a $50,000 bond on the murder indictment and a $25,000 bond on each of the six other injury counts. He denied a bond reduction request by Ms. Jones' court-appointed lawyer, William Chenault.

The murder indictment alleges that Ms. Jones "intentionally and knowingly" killed Chelsea by injecting her with the drug succinyl choline, a muscle relaxant that can cause respiratory arrest.

After the arraignment, Ms. Jones was transferred to the Kerr County Jail in Kerrville. The trial is scheduled to begin Aug. 1 in Kerrville.

Medic Alert emblem saves many lives everyday

Twenty-six year old Keith Tilton had blacked out before, but the episode he experienced on March 12th in Culpeper, Virginia was more than merely frightening. Keith Tilton has diabetes. He was shopping with his mother in a downtown department store when he began to feel the first signs of an insulin reaction. "I told my Mom I was going to get a soda. I found a machine and then tried to find her, but I couldn't because my vision was blurred."

had seen and read my Medic Alert necklace, and knew what he needed to do to bring me back around."

Keith Tilton has been a member of Medic Alert Foundation International since 1975. "I wear my Medic Alert emblem wherever I go, but that was the first time that it saved my life."

Keith is one of more than 220,000 Americans who has diabetes and who wear the Medic Alert emblem, a life-saving symbol that tells emergency personnel they are dealing with a special medical condition that needs immediate consideration.

Medic Alert is a nonprofit, tax-exempt and charitable Foundation. For 27 years, it has been dedicated to providing a life-protecting system of emergency medical identification for people who suffer from diabetes, allergies to medications, heart conditions, and other "hidden" medical conditions.

Another person who credits Medic Alert with saving her life is Denise Lingard of Sibley, Missouri.

Last August, Denise, who suffers from diabetes insipidus administered her own injection of pitressin tannate which she had used for 1 1/2 years to control her condition. Within 20 minutes she was unconscious. Her body had developed a reaction to the medication, and she fell into anaphylactic shock.

Her eight year-old son succeeded in contacting her father and the paramedics who arrived within moments. "As I drifted in and out of consciousness, I heard the paramedics call my Medic Alert number into Trident Hospital. There wasn't enough time to transfer me to a hospital, and all the emergency room physician had to go by was my Medic Alert information."

The unique Medic Alert system consists of an alerting device (worn as either a bracelet or necklace), a 24-hour emergency answering service, and a wallet card reissued every year to assure emergency medical personnel they are working with an up-to-date medical history.

Filibuster

Sarpalius also got some help from one of the House clerks who routinely interrupt Senate debate to read the Senate lists of bills passed by the House. Sarpalius could sit down while the messenger read the list.

"The Senator who has the floor would like you to read slowly. I'm not sure why," said Sen. Ed Howard, D-Texas, who was presiding.

The clerk complied, carefully enunciating all the bill numbers and descriptions of the legislation until Uribe good-naturedly but literally leaned on him to speed it up.

Shortly after Sarpalius began his filibuster Friday afternoon, Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, a supporter of the bill, pointed out to the acting chairman of the Senate that Sarpalius was leaning on his desk.

"I raise a point of order that the senator has been repeatedly leaning on his desk in violation of Senate rules covering filibusters," Doggett said.

The bill, which has been passed by the House, would require employers of farm and ranch laborers to provide workers' compensation insurance to pay the expenses of on-the-job injuries. Farmworkers are not currently covered by workers' compensation laws.

The measure exempts employers whose yearly payrolls are $50,000 or less or who employ 12 or fewer laborers.

Sarpalius said "farmers cannot afford workers' comp."

"Farmers are losing money," he said. "We haven't passed any bills to help them make money. Here at the last of the session comes House Bill 521. What does it do? It costs them money."

Sarpalius said he believed farmworkers "need some help."

"I have nothing against them personally," he said.

Radio Farabundo Marti said the killing was a "warning .. against the useless sacrifice of the North American people."

Ann Landers 25,000 wives replareply

DEAR READERS: I've been in this work long enough to know there are more cheating husbands than faithful ones, but I was not prepared for the blizzard of letters that hit my desk since I printed the sizzler from The Other Woman who asked if she could use my column to reach her lover's wife.

She wrote: "Dear Wife: Your husband and I have been going together five years. Please let him go so we can build a life together. He is wonderful company, very attractive and he loves me. But I need to hear your side of the story. Do you know about us? Do you really love him? If not, why are you still hanging in there? Is it just for appearance's sake? If so, is that fair? Please reply through Ann Landers' column. (au me—The Other Woman)"

Here are a few samples of the 25,000 replies:

From Manteca, Calif.: Which Other Woman are you? Please send your name, measurements and Social Security number. Lover Boy has been juggling three for the past year. And there were at least five before that. Identify yourself, toots.

From Montreal: So you want to build a life together? It will never happen. He is very content with the life he has built with me. We have a lovely home and four beautiful children. So get with it, Dummy, and check out.

From Tampa, Fla.: Why don't I hand him over to you? The answer is M-O-N-E-Y. He has lots of it and I am not about to lower my standard of living.

From Dubuque, Iowa: I was once the Other Woman. He married me and I wish to God I had never laid eyes on him. He misses his kids and holds me responsible for losing them. He talks about his ex-wife in his sleep, and I'm sure she'd go back to her if she'd have him. Our stolen heaven is a living hell.

From Honolulu: Do I know about you? Of course, I do. I figured it out when he had his day off changed to yours. Why don't I let him go? Why should I? I invested 23 years in this marriage. It's easier to close one eye than to start again.

From Chicago: Why do I hang in there? I'd like to ask YOU that question. After five years of back roads and motels, it's time you got the picture.

From Madison, Wis.: Do I love him? Yes. Will he leave me? Never. Keep the gifts for "services rendered" but don't expect anything more. He's mine.

Syracuse: You and I are both fools—you for letting him use you, and me for the same reason. The guy is a liar, a cheat and an incurable chaser. I'd kick him out, but I'm too old to start over.

Long Island, N.Y.: You think he's attractive, do you? I wish you could see him around the house. What a slob!

Los Angeles, Calif.: So you want my husband? Please come and get him. I can have his bags packed in 20 minutes. I've kicked him out four times and he always comes back, promising to behave—but I know he never will. There were five dollies before you (by actual count), and you are one of the three right now. I have family money and don't need this clown! If you can get him to leave me, I'll give you $5,000 in cash. But, remember, dear, all sales are final.

As the years turn

75 YEARS AGO

The clouds had been overshadowing the evening sky for several days. The newcomers were remarking that if other countries had had such good signs of rain, they would have been drowned out. In just 35 minutes last Saturday afternoon, the streets were flooded and the gutters were raging torrents. The fall was a little less than 1½ inches.

The rain will put the wheat and oats and the other planted crops in fine shape.

50 YEARS AGO

Saturday night's downpour of much needed rain broke the long drouth in Hereford country. While Hereford received only a light shower, surrounding communities reported precipitation registering in place up to two inches.

The Garcia Lake oil test well located on the rim of Garcia Lake about 35 miles northwest of Hereford is now down to the depth of 1430 feet and what is known as the White House sand has been struck.

25 YEARS AGO

Heavy winds and hard hail ripped into crops in the northeast part of Deaf Smith County Tuesday night causing some damage.

Commissioners of Deaf Smith County Monday purchased $37,000 in bonds from Bob Daves, representative of Columbian Securities Corporation of Texas. Funds from the purchase were from the County Road Bond Interest and Sinking Fund.

10 YEARS AGO

A survey of local fertilizer distributors in Hereford shows that Deaf Smith farmers may not have been hit as hard by a shortage of fertilizer as farmers in other parts of the country.

Editor Don Richards did a survey around Hereford concerning the fuel shortage and found no real problems here. However, the widely publicized shortage could be felt by August, according to some sources.

1 YEAR AGO

The House Appropriations Committee, ignoring the $45 million recommendation from the legislative leadership, voted Wednesday to give state prison officials $72.8 million to help relieve overcrowding.

Hereford High will graduate 323 seniors in commencement ceremonies at 8 p.m. at Whiteface Stadium.

Bootleg Philosopher

Expensive ousting

Editor's Note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Deaf Smith County grass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek reports this week on the cost of ex-office holders.

Dear Editor: There's an argument going around that Congressmen should be limited to two terms instead of holding on to their jobs for life, but I've discovered an argument on the other side.

An ex-Congressman sometimes draws more money from the government than he did when he was in office. A former Speaker of the House for example pulls in $85,000 in pensions, $20,000 more than he got when he was on the job, and over $75,000 more than he'd get on Social Security.

Or take the Presidency. From a tax-saving standpoint, it's now cheaper to keep a President in office than it is to turn him out.

According to an article I read the other day, the cost of maintaining the three ex-Presidents we now have on hand is $27,000,000 a year. In addition, practically any ex-President can make at least a million dollars writing a book, which I don't understand as I've never encountered anybody who's ever read one.

When a President is defeated or declines to run again or quits just ahead of an indictment, the government alots him $1,000,000 for moving expenses, which seems like a lot just to get him out of town. Also, I guess maybe to cushion him against another one of those periodic rate increases, he's given $32,000 a year for his telephone bill. The telephone company will have a hard time keeping ahead of that, but it's probably working on it.

Moreover, it costs about $15,000,000 a year to staff and maintain ex-Presidents' libraries scattered around the country, which seems a little one-sided as all the books and papers in any of them is confined to just one subject. Even a small town public library has a wider range of books than that.

So it appears that once we elect somebody to something we're stuck with the bill from then on, whether he's in office or out. The British are ahead of us on this. You don't hear of them swapping their Kings or Queens every few years.

Yours Faithfully,
J.A.

Taxes, and remember 1776

By Richard L. Lesh
WASHINGTON — Thomas Jefferson, author of the Declaration of Independence and our nation's third president stated that "If we can prevent the government from wasting the labors of the people under the pretense of caring for them, they will be happy."

This, in one sentence was the battle cry of the American Revolution. Thomas Jefferson, George Washington and Thomas Paine argued, and finally fought, not for better government, but for less government. Unlike other revolutions which simply exchanged one set of bureaucrats and tax collectors for another, ours was a revolution against government—and for the people. A revolution against higher taxes. Against a bureaucracy growing in numbers and authority. A revolution against the idea that the people exist to serve and finance—the government. And when Britain's King George III responded to the colonists' demands for lower taxes and less government with bullets and bayonets, America declared her independence and July 4th marked our determination to live free of the excessive taxes and centralized government of the old world.

Throughout the years, however, the spiritual heirs of King George III succeeded in expanding the size, power and cost of our federal government. Each new department and agency was created in the name of "compassion," of caring for people. And the Constitution was increasingly invoked not to limit the power of the government but to require its expansion.

These new politicians believed in running other people's lives for them and that included spending their money. And like King George, they found that before you can spend the people's money—always, of course, under the pretense of caring for them—you first have to take it from them. And so new taxes were imposed. And increased. And increased again.

Each well-meaning spending program brought higher taxes to pay for it until Tax Freedom Day—the day when American taxpayers cease to work to pay federal, state and local taxes and begin to work for themselves—moved from February 14 in 1930 to May 7 in 1981—an increase of almost three months. Three more months of each year taken from the people and given to the government.

But as the British found out on the night of the Boston Tea Party, taxpayers have a breaking point and a second American Revolution was begun: A revolution heralded by the overwhelming victory of Proposition 13 in California and confirmed in the election of Ronald Reagan in 1980.

As promised, President Reagan began to pare back the growth of the federal government and income tax rates were cut. And Tax Freedom Day began to come earlier each year. In 1982, Tax Freedom Day moved back to May 3. This year, Tax Freedom Day fell on May 2-five days earlier than in 1981. Five days of each year taken back from the government and given to the people. Five days of freedom.

This second American Revolution is known as the "Reagan Revolution." Like the original American Revolution it is based on the simple belief that the American people can be trusted with their lives, their time and their earnings. (And conversely, that the government cannot.)

It is not, as its critics charge, a radical departure from American tradition but rather a return to the original principles of our nation's founding: a movement to achieve Jefferson's vision outlined in his first inaugural address, of "...a wise and frugal government which shall restrain men from injuring one another, which shall leave them otherwise free to regulate their own pursuits of industry and improvement and shall not take from the mouth of labor the bread it has earned."

Penultimate Word

THESE ARE REMEMBERED

Memorial Day is important. Memorial Day is more important than we realize. We live on after death in two ways: we live on eternally in a life beyond, and we live on in the lives of those we have touched. It is important that folks be remembered. The significance of each life needs to be rethought and given its proper amount of gratitude.

Each year at this time I depart from the usual silliness of this article to hold my own private time of memorial in a very public media. This is dangerous because there are so many to remember and some will be left out who should be remembered. This list is not complete. I just picked some of the funerals I have participated in during the past year. I did so to give you the general idea. Each of us must make our own list and do our own remembering.

There is an old camp meeting song that says, "How beautiful heaven must be." I do not know how beautiful it was, but it became a much better place last year. We sent some choice folks up there to add to the beauty.

Grady Nutt added a great deal to the laughter in the place. Gerald Wilson is no slouch in that department, either. Archie Dwyer probably went to work on the drama department, and Calla Mountz has a group humming while she sings the verses, joining her on the chorus.

We sent some beautiful ladies there to improve the charm and care of the place. If Mrs. Pickens, Mrs. Markam, Mrs. Wortham, and Tina Lee Roberson gathered anywhere the place would have to be better.

We sent some of our characters just to give the place more interest. They got Frank Ball, Floyd Tucker, Ernest Kendall, and a few more of the characters we seem to grow around here.

We even sent some children. One of the toughest little men I have ever know was Stacy Rickman.

These are just some of the ones I want to remember. They have moved up to the big picture. I am glad I knew them and that I remember.

Warm Fuzzies,

IN WASHINGTON

Robert Walters

A chilling scenario

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Behind the Nuclear Regulatory Commission's unprecedented decision to consider shutting down two operating nuclear power plants lies a prospect so terrifying that federal officials are reluctant to discuss it publicly.

When the NRC voted unanimously early this month to order the closing of the nuclear generating stations unless "significant deficiencies" in emergency plans were remedied within 30 days, it cited only the potential danger to the residents of suburban counties north of New York City.

Unstated was the far more serious threat: A major accident could produce an intolerably high number of deaths and injuries — as a result of both radiation exposure and the panic induced by an unmanageable evacuation — inside the nation's largest city and in its suburbs in three states.

The recent NRC decision dealt with Indian Point units 2 and 3, located in Buchanan, N.Y., on the east bank of the Hudson River 35 miles north of midtown Manhattan. Under previously established procedures, however, the NRC considered the efficacy of emergency plans affecting only the area within a 10-mile radius of Indian Point.

Thus, the commission dealt only with the protection of less than 300,000 people living in suburban and exurban Westchester, Rockland, Putnam and Orange counties rather than the entire New York metropolitan area which encompasses more than 16 million residents of New York, New Jersey and Connecticut.

The broader problem was considered, however, during a chilling exchange at a closed meeting four years ago of the President's Commission on the Accident at Three Mile Island.

"Indian Point is only 35 miles from New York City, and New York City is not evacuable," said Paul E. Marks, a vice president of Columbia University and a member of the commission. "There is no plan for evacuation of New York City ... because there could not be.... There (is) no way of developing a plan."

Another commission member, Russell Peterson, president of the Audubon Society, noted that "if they had a catastrophic accident at Indian Point or a major release of nuclear radiation and the wind was blowing toward Manhattan, you would have one hell of an evacuation assignment."

John G. Kemeny, president of Dartmouth College and chairman of the commission, asked his colleagues: "Isn't it possible to consider whether under such circumstances in New York City you order people to stay indoors?"

Responded Marks: "Exactly. Potassium iodide, and you are going to bite the bullet and accept a certain amount of biological effects in this kind of situation."

Potassium iodide protects the thyroid gland — but no other human organ — from the effects of nuclear radiation.

While members of the presidential commission generally agreed that the Indian Point facility posed the most serious danger in terms of its proximity to a major metropolitan area, other nuclear power plants now operating or under construction were cited because of similar siting problems.

That list includes the Pilgrim 1 plant in Plymouth, Mass., only 35 miles southeast of Boston, and Zion units 1 and 2 in Zion, Ill., only 42 miles north of Chicago. In addition, Palo Verde units 1, 2 and 3 are under construction in Wintersburg, Ariz., only 40 miles west of Phoenix.

The worst-case danger posed by those facilities was starkly described by Theodore Taylor, a professor at Princeton University and a member of the presidential commission:

"The inventory of two particularly troublesome radionuclides, cesium 137 and strontium 90 ... inside a typical nuclear power plant that's been operating for several years is equal approximately to the quantity of these two materials that would be released in an explosion of 25 megatons of fission."

"This is larger than the fission yield of any thermonuclear weapon that's ever been exploded."

Americans re-segregating

Americans are tending to re-segregate themselves.

Metropolitan publications are advertising computer dating services for "matching" singles.

With photographs and detailed personal descriptions matchmaking organizations overtly describe themselves as "Beautiful Blacks" or "Jewish Singles" or "Over-weight Singles."

There is one for "Singles With Herpes."

There is one for "Singles Without Herpes."

How does a segregated dating service differ from a real estate agent who selectively populates a neighborhood?

In a legal atmosphere intoxicated by "test cases," anyone is entitled to wonder—and perhaps worry—about whether individual discretion to choose associates might not extend to the workplace, the social club and the school.

It used to be axiomatic that "your rights and where my nose begins."

More recently the legal interpretations of rights and prerogatives have become less easily defined.

All it's going to take is one

ACLU-type group seeking for the sake of precedent—to attack the all-black dating services—and to our shame we could never to separate drinking fountains again.

Raising again the myriad technicalities related to the "right of association."

IF BLACKS MEASURE UP...

Chicago has its first black mayor, Harold Washington.

A black Chicago minister is asking the city's blacks to rally behind the new mayor and "declare war."

He calls for the following: "A war against littering our yards with junk cars and trash..."

"A war against babies having babies..."

"A war against drugs; cure the junkie and put his pusher out of business..."

It's some real Top Sergeant talk which the Rev. Clay Evans is reiterating from his pulpit and in the media and wherever.

"Declare war," he says, "against loud music, obscene language and discourtesy in public places..."

"Against the criminal street gangs who rape our daughters and corrupt our sons..."

"Against vandalizing public walls and neglecting our own homes..."

"Wage war, he says, against decadence in education which graduates children without teaching them..."

"Against self-hatred and laziness..."

"Against hurting our women and neglecting our children..."

"Against uncombed heads and dirty clothes and filthy houses..."

The Rev. Evans says the war can be won; "With faith in God all things are possible."

Well, Chicago, if he's right the same code of conduct might even work if you're white.

Then what a city this would be!

Computer research has limited results

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) - Wanted: A computer that can really communicate with people in their own "natural" language.

Two decades of research in the field of artificial intelligence has produced limited results, according to James F. Allen of the University of Rochester's computer science department. One reason, he says, is that "until recently researchers overlooked the importance of context in human conversation." Allen explains: "If I ask, 'Can you tell me the time?' you probably won't simply answer 'Yes,' because you know what information I really need."

Allen has developed a computer program, ARGOT, which gives a computer some knowledge of a person's needs and expectations, enabling it to answer questions and engage in simple dialogues.

EYE CARE UPDATE

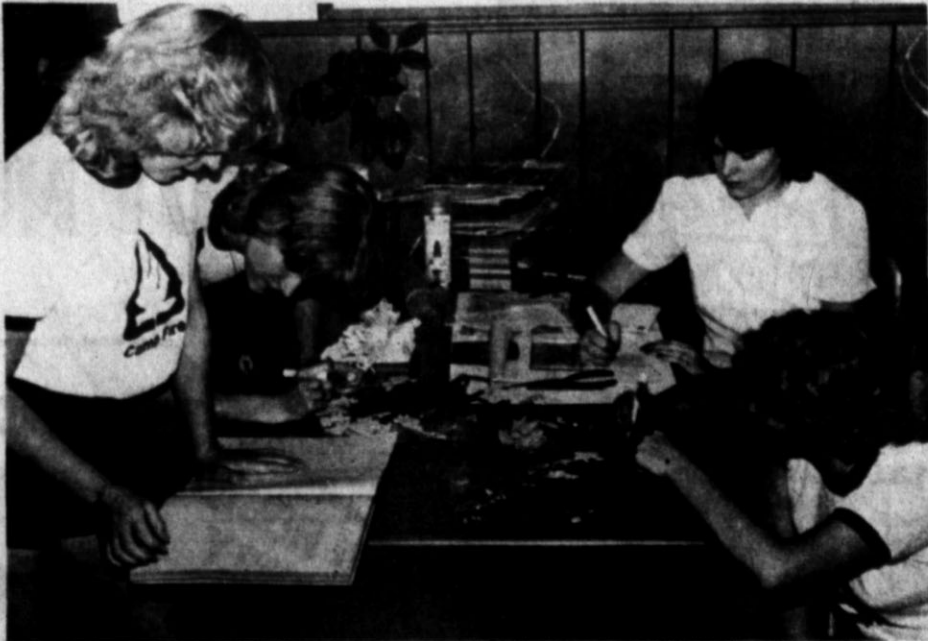

Dr. James Simnacher, O.D. OPTOMETRIST

QUESTION: When I had an eye examination a few years ago, the doctor told me I had 20-20 vision. That's perfect vision, isn't it? So why am I straining my eyes to see sometimes and getting headaches?

ANSWER: You may have had 20-20 vision when your eyes were examined a few years ago, but since then you may have developed a problem of farsightedness. If you're farsighted it takes longer than normal for your eyes to send a clear image to the brain. To compensate for this, you've been using your near-focusing muscles to see things at a distance as well as close up, which is what they're normally used for. Now that you're older, these muscles may not be as effective as they used to be and you may need corrective glasses.

Romance novel index published by Texans

By KRISTIN GAZLAY
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP)—Jennifer Wilde wears a coat and tie. At a recent romance novelists' convention, Ms. Wilde used the men's bathroom. Her real name is Tom Huff.

Three women in San Antonio could have told you that. Or what year a certain Barbara Cartland romance was published. Or how many flowery pseudonyms romance author Ida Pollack uses (answer: seven).

Inscribed on a picture in the modest Second Edition bookstore, which deals in the resale of thousands of romance novels, is this: "To June, with love to a lovely lady — Jennifer Wilde (and Tom, too!)"

June Manning, Kay Garteiser and Mary Hotchkiss spent two years working on "The Romantic Spirit," a compilation of 19,000 romance book titles, 3,700 authors and 750 pseudonyms published in the past 15 years.

"We had people come in with little lists and they didn't know if they had read something or not," Mrs. Hotchkiss said. "An incredible amount of romance novels are put out each month."

With no writing or publishing experience, the three women — "let's just say we're of retirement age" — put up their own money and published the book themselves in January.

The meticulous, cross-indexed lists in their book grew after countless trips to garage sales, prowling around other old bookstores, libraries, private collections and contacts with the authors themselves.

"It was kind of hard to figure out what an author had written," Ms. Manning said. "The publishers of the books don't care if you ever know the pseudonyms. They don't want anyone to know."

Romance readers are a loyal bunch. The average romance reader, Mrs. Manning estimated, reads one novel a night. Some read four a day. And not all are women.

"Sure, we have some men who buy romances," Mrs. Hotchkiss said. "They're just as open about it as anyone. I don't know why there seems to be a stigma about reading romances anyway."

The bookstore is owned by Ms. Manning and Mrs. Hotchkiss, who are sisters and retired civil servants. Ms. Garteiser is a word processor specialist with a national accounting firm.

The first-time authors recently were named the first recipients of the Gaye Tardy Award, in honor of the late editor of Pinnacle Publishing.

It was presented to Ms. Manning and Ms. Garteiser by the queen of the romance novelists — Barbara Cartland — at the Second Annual Romantic Book Lovers Conference in New York.

"She presented it and I gave her one of our books," Ms. Manning said. "She really does fancy herself a queen. She gave me an autograph, but it looked more like Ty Cobb's."

The romance writers were wonderfully responsive to "The Romantic Spirit" and impressed by the amount of work the three women did, Ms. Manning said.

The book will be updated periodically to reflect the flood of romances being published each month and has blanks where readers can do a little updating themselves.

"The romance industry just didn't have a reference book," Ms. Manning said. "Now, they do."

In true romance fashion, the "Romantic Spirit" authors used their first names to coin a pseudonym: Mary June Kay.

"We're going to put ourselves in the next edition of the book, too," Ms. Manning said. "We're authors in the field of romance now."

French immersion popular in Canada

TORONTO (AP) — More and more English Canadian children are going to school in French — immersed in the language all day long — with study in their native tongue put off at least until fourth grade.

To the delight of those who have pioneered and pushed French immersion schooling for more than 15 years, the children who took part in the experiments seem to learn history, mathematics and science just as well as students in traditional programs.

More surprising, their performance in English rates higher than that of children taught in English from the start.

"It's quite clear from the results of the research that you can have what you would normally get out of an English-only education, plus you learn French," says Merrill Swain, head of the Modern Language Center at the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education and co-author of a recent book that surveys Canadian research on immersion schooling.

"A lot of people who would have been afraid to try something as drastic as immersion programs seemed to be 10 years ago are no longer afraid of it," she said in an interview.

There is certainly no fear among the first-graders clustered around teacher Ginette Giroux and an apple-cheeked youngster named Daniel in a French-language version of show-and-tell at Allenby Public School in north Toronto one morning.

Daniel is showing off a toy yellow garbage truck and responds bravely as he is peppered by questions in French from his classmates, who didn't know a word of the language until they started last year in kindergarten.

Upstairs, a fourth-grader, waving his hand to respond to a question, slips and says, "I know, I know," in English, but when called on he answers in fluent French.

French immersion schooling started in the mid 1960s in Montreal, where the English-speaking population is a minority, and spread to Ottawa, where in recent years many civil service jobs have been reserved for bilingual applicants.

But now the immersion classes are booming all over the country, even in areas where there are scarcely any native French speakers. A report by the federal Commissioner of Official Languages counted nearly 70,000 students in French immersion classes this year, including some in each of Canada's 10 provinces.

Of Canada's 24 million people, about 6 million have French as a first language and more than 16 million have English.

Aerosol flu drug developed

HOUSTON — A new flu treatment developed at Baylor College of Medicine that proved effective a year ago against one type of flu virus, has produced similar results against another flu virus.

Dr. Vernon Knight, reported today that inhalation treatment with the antiviral drug ribavirin lowered fever and relieved symptoms within 30 hours in 11 patients with influenza B virus infections.

In November 1981, the same treatment was successful in tests against influenza A virus infections in 14 patients.

Knight published his findings in the current issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association (JAMA).

Knight, professor and chairman of microbiology and immunology at Baylor, said the ribavirin-aerosol treatment is the first to be effective against influenza B virus.

Sale prompts move

Fitch quits Celtic job

BOSTON (AP) — Basketball coaches normally leave their jobs because they lose too many games. Bill Fitch says he left his because of the impending loss of his team's owner.

In his four years as the Boston Celtics' eighth head coach, Fitch led the National Basketball Association team to victories in 74 percent of their regular-season games with a 242-86 record. They won three division titles and one NBA championship.

That success and the promise of more wasn't enough to keep Fitch content after Harry Mangurian announced Tuesday that he would sell the team because of problems with his landlords at Boston Garden.

The expected departure of General Manager Red Auerbach in the next few years contributed to his announcement Friday that he was resigning, Fitch said.

"Harry's become one of my very best friends. I hate to see a guy like that leaving the NBA," Fitch said at a news conference where he dropped his bombshell. "With Red's days numbered I felt it was a good time for me to make" the decision to step down.

The Celtics were 56-26 this season but were eliminated in the second round of the playoffs in four straight games by Milwaukee. That unleashed a spate of "what's wrong with the Celtics?" newspaper stories.

"I didn't have a lot of fun winning 56," said Fitch, who had three years left on his contract. "We won 56 ballgames and that bothers me a little bit because people say it's a disastrous season because you lost four games to Milwaukee."

In only his second season with the Celtics, Fitch led them to their 14th NBA title, a league record. His Boston teams had records of 61-21, 62-20 and 63-19 in the first three seasons.

"Sometimes, being in Boston, too much is expected, and he produced. He produced very well," said Auerbach.

Fitch, 49, said he wouldn't have resigned had Mangurian not decided to sell the club.

Immediately after Fitch stunned a packed news conference with his announcement, the guessing game about a successor began.

Trail title series, 2-0

Angry Lakers return home to meet 76ers

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Is it possible that the National Basketball Association doesn't want the Los Angeles Lakers to repeat as league champions? At least one member of the team feels that way.

"I'm convinced the league just doesn't want us to win it again," said a member of the club, who requested anonymity for obvious reasons, Thursday night after the Lakers dropped a 103-93 decision to the Philadelphia 76ers.

The Lakers were angry about more than just the 2-0 deficit they now face in the best-of-seven NBA championship series. A look at the statistics revealed why they were upset.

Los Angeles set two NBA playoff records in Game 2 — fewest free throws attempted in a game, 5, and fewest free throws made in a game, 3.

The 76ers, meanwhile, were 23 of 32 from the foul line in the game at Philadelphia.

The Lakers, who are attempting to become the first NBA team to win consecutive championships since the Boston Celtics accomplished the feat in 1967-68 and 1968-69, now face an extremely difficult task.

Only five teams in NBA history have ever rebounded from losing the first two games to win a seven-game series.

Horvath stuns Martina in French Open tourney

PARIS (AP) — Seventeen-year-old Kathy Horvath of the United States scored a stunning upset in the French Open Tennis Championships today, beating defending woman's champion Martina Navratilova 6-4, 0-6, 6-3 in a fourth-round match.

The upset — the biggest so far in the clay court tournament — took place before a crowd of 12,000 on the center court of Roland Garros stadium.

Prior to facing the unseeded Horvath, the left-handed Navratilova had not lost a match this year.

The Lakers can only figure that things will get better now that they're home for two games. Game 3 is scheduled Sunday at 3:30 p.m. EDT with the fourth game slated Tuesday night at 9 p.m. EDT.

While the Lakers were upset about the officiating, they gave the 76ers credit for beating them.

"We have to be concerned," said Earvin "Magic" Johnson after Game 2. "We played well tonight and they beat us. I'm shocked and disappointed at the same time."

"It would be easy tonight to talk about the officiating to take the monkey off our back," said Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley. "But the reality is, we just have to go home and win two. We will ... we will."

The 76ers are in their fourth championship series in the last seven years, and looking for their first NBA crown since 1967.

Rookies dot field

Indy 500 set Sunday

By HAL BOCK, AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Rick Mears and Mike Mosley, both painfully familiar with the heartbreak this historic old speedway can deal out, share the front row with rookie Teo Fabi as the fastest field in history awaits Sunday's 67th running of the Indianapolis 500.

Six rookies, including Fabi, the record-busting pole sitter, have forced their way into the lineup that includes some of the traditional stars of the business — four-time winner A.J. Foyt, three-time winner Al Unser, defending champion Gordon Johncock and charismatic Mario Andretti among them.

Ten drivers — almost one-third of the 33-car field — had qualifying times of better than 200 mph, with Fabi's 207.395 earning the Italian Formula One driver the pole spot in his first tour of this historic track.

Although he had his Forsythe Racing Skoal Bandit up to record speeds in qualifying and matched them during a final tuneup three days before the race, Fabi does not plan on blazing his way around the track on Sunday.

Last year Johncock and Mears staged a stirring last-lap, nose-to-tail duel to produce the closest finish in Indy history.

This time Johncock will start on the inside of the fourth row, alongside Andretti, who was taken out of last year's race by a crash at the start, and Howdy Holmes. In front of them will be Unser, who'll be a row behind his 21-year-old son, Al Jr., one of the rookie starters.

Sandwiched between Fabi and Mears in the front row is Mosley. He was leading this race in the 57th lap in 1972 when his right front wheel came off as he was coming out of the fourth turn and he crashed into the outside wall. He also had a frightening crash here in 1971. Every time he passes those spots on the track, he remembers them.

"It's not easy by any means," he said. "You try to look at the positive side of what you do, not the bad things. You understand that's part of the business. If it's what I want to do, I've got to accept that."

Still, the memories remain.

"I've thought about it," he said. "I still do."

And what are the thoughts?

"Not good ones."

The elder Al Unser will be in a Penske PC-11, racing as a teammate of Mears. Last year, Kevin Cogan drove the other Penske car. But after being involved in the controversial crash at the start of the race, he was replaced on the team by Unser. Cogan starts in Row Eight alongside Johnny Parsons and Foyt, who will be racing in a record 28th Indy.

Cogan said the accident which marred the 1982 start was caused by a BROKEN CV joint which robbed him of control of the car and caused a chain reaction collision.

"A piece of metal can break any time," said Cogan. "That's part of the game."

Orioles end 7-game losing streak; Tigers sweep pair from Twins

By KEN RAPPOPORT AP Sports Writer
Joe Altobelli can stop worrying about his Baltimore Orioles ... and Kansas City Manager Dick Howser can start worrying about Larry Gura.

The weight of a long losing streak was finally lifted off Altobelli's shoulders when the Orioles stopped a seven-game spin Friday night with a 7-4 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

In the process, the Orioles handed Gura his sixth straight loss, giving Howser something to concern himself with.

"Let's face it, he's getting behind too many hitters," said Howser of Gura, who had started the season with four straight victories. "He thinks it's something in his mechanics, especially tonight. He's throwing the ball good and he feels good. It's nothing physical."

In other American League action, New York beat Oakland 4-2; Boston blanked Toronto 2-0; Detroit took a doubleheader from Minnesota 7-4 and 2-1; California nipped Cleveland 5-4; Seattle beat Milwaukee 7-5 and Chicago tripped Texas 3-2.

The Orioles won for the first time since May 19 and posted only their second victory in the last 12 games.

"I'm going to forget all about last week," said

Altobelli. "I'm just going to relish this one for a while and then start thinking about tomorrow's lineup. But it is nice to win."

Eddie Murray and Gary Roenicke hit home runs for the Orioles and Storm Davis, 3-1, struck out five and walked two in six innings before giving way to Tippy Martinez, who recorded his fifth save.

"We just got into a rut there for a while," said Roenicke, who's punished the Royals for 11 of his 67 career homers. "This is a big, big win. Maybe we can go on from here."

Yankees 4, A's 2
Graig Nettles brought New York from behind with a three-run homer in the seventh inning and Ron Guidry continued his domination of Oakland as the Yankees beat the A's in a game that saw Yankee slugger Dave Winfield ejected following a bench-clearing beanball brawl.

Red Sox beat the Blue Jays. Tigers 7-2, Twins 4-1.
John Wockenfuss homered and Chet Lemon knocked in three runs as Detroit snapped Minnesota's four-game winning streak in the first game of their two-night doubleheader.

Larry Herndon's bases-loaded single with two outs in the 12th inning lifted the Tigers to victory in the second game. Rick Lysander, 1-3, was tagged with the loss in both games.

"I wouldn't care if I only had one hit a week if it would win a game every time," said Herndon, who went 2-for-9 in the doubleheader, dropping his batting average to .277. "I'm not worried about my batting average. I'm sure the hits will start falling in again."

Angels 5, Indians 4
Bob Boone's single sent home Daryl Sconiers from third with the winning run in the 12th inning to give California its victory over Cleveland, the Indians' fifth straight loss.

Henderson's third double capped a four-run ninth inning and made a winner out of 43-year-old Gaylord Perry, 3-6. The right-hander survived a shaky first inning to earn his 310th career victory and his first triumph against Milwaukee since June 5, 1977.

White Sox 3, Rangers 2
Ron Kittle's two-run homer and a run-scoring single by Harold Baines carried Chicago over Texas behind LaMarr Hoyt's six-hitter.

In 18 innings

Cards outlast Astros, 3-1

By JOHN NELSON AP Sports Writer
Lonnie Smith had a single in the eighth inning and didn't get another hit for 10 innings.

"I came in hitting and wasn't hitting again until we left," Smith said. "At least we finally left."

Smith, the St. Louis left fielder, doubled with one out in the 18th inning Friday night and scored the winning run on a double by Keith Hernandez, rallying the Cardinals to a 3-1 victory over the Houston Astros in a game that lasted four hours and 26 minutes.

The victory kept St. Louis one game ahead of Montreal in the National League East. The Expos won their fifth straight, beating Philadelphia 7-4.

"I was lucky," said reliever Jeff Lahti, who got the win. "I only pitched three innings of this marathon. I feel like we played a doubleheader, but we got only one win."

Hernandez finished off the Cardinals' belated rally by scoring on Willie McGee's single off Bob Knepper, who got the loss despite pitching six innings of four-hit relief.

In the rest of the league, San Francisco defeated Los Angeles 6-3, Cincinnati blanked Pittsburgh 9-0, Chicago defeated Atlanta 8-6 and San Diego beat New York 4-0.

Giants 6, Dodgers 3
Atlee Hamaker, the league's ERA leader, scattered nine hits through 8 2-3 innings, getting last-out relief help from Gary Lavelle to beat the Dodgers. Hamaker's ERA stood at 1.34 after yielding a run in the fourth and two more in the sixth. Lavelle earned his seventh save.

Despite the loss, the Dodgers retained a 2½-game lead over the Braves in the NL West.

Reds 9, Pirates 0
Mario Soto pitched a five-hitter for his second shutout of the season, striking out eight and winning his fourth straight game. The outing also was Soto's fourth straight in which he has gone the distance.

Cubs 8, Braves 6
Jody Davis hit two home runs, the first of which broke a 6-6 sixth-inning tie and boosted Chicago over Atlanta. Davis' other homer, his sixth of the year, came in the eighth inning.

Warren Brusstar, 1-1, picked up the victory with 3 2-3 innings of relief, and Lee Smith finished up for his fifth save.

Chicago scored three runs in the fifth to erase a 6-3 Atlanta lead. Bill Buckner, who had three RBI, started the rally with a run-scoring single. Leon Durham doubled in a run, and Ron Cey had a sacrifice fly.

Padres 4, Mets 0
Eric Show, back in the San Diego rotation after eight days' absence, pitched a two-hitter, and the Padres started a four-run rally in the seventh inning against Tom Seaver to beat the Mets.

Show, 6-2, did not give up a hit until the sixth inning when Seaver singled with one out. Seaver, 3-4, no-hit the Padres until Terry Kennedy singled with two out in the sixth.

Alan Wiggins started San Diego's rally with a bases-loaded single that drove in two runs. Another run scored on an error by third baseman Hubie Brooks, and Kennedy's sacrifice fly capped the San Diego scoring.

Morton gets 1st coaching win

Denver comeback thwarts Birmingham, 21-19

DENVER (AP) — Years of apprenticeship, as assistants in charge of special teams or the defensive line, are normally required of a coach before he attains the title of head coach. A person can't know all there is to know about the game and about handling athletes without that background, it is said.

So much for one of sport's most revered theories.

Craig Morton, who had never coached in any capacity at any level, jumped in as the Denver Gold head coach Friday night, and his team snapped a five-game losing streak with a 21-19 United States Football League victory over the Birmingham Stallions.

Quarterback Fred Mortensen ran for touchdowns of 3 and 5 yards and strong safety David Dumars returned an interception 78 yards for another score as the Gold raised its season record to 5-8. The loss ended Birmingham's five-game winning streak and left the Stallions at 7-6.

"It felt strange out there at the start of the game," said Morton, the former Denver Broncos quarterback who was named head coach of the Gold on Tuesday. "But I became more adjusted to coaching about midway through the first period."

Dumars' interception came six minutes after Mortensen's second TD and helped Denver to a 21-13 advantage late in the third quarter. Dumars stepped in front of a Bob Lane pass and was untouched as he returned the theft for the clinching TD.

Birmingham rallied to make it close. Lane engineered a 75-yard, 14-play drive capped by his 3-yard scoring pass to tight end Darryl Mason. The two-point conversion attempt failed when running back John Skibinski, taking a short pass from Lane, was stopped short of the goal line by cornerback David Martin.

The Stallions threatened once more, but Martin picked off Lane's long pass near the goal line and the Gold ran out the clock.

On Sunday, Philadelphia tries to become the first USFL team to clinch one of the four playoff berths when it visits Boston. New Jersey is at Washington and Los Angeles at Oakland in other Sunday action.

Monday's games are Tampa Bay at Michigan and Arizona at Chicago.

The Philadelphia Stars have won 10 straight games and will get after their 12th victory in 13 contests on national television (ABC). With six games to play, a triumph would give the Stars the Atlantic Division crown. Boston, 7-5, is hoping to keep alive its chances of making the July 9-10 opening round of the playoffs.

Philadelphia has the stingiest defense in the league and its offense is led by Kelvin Bryant, the league's top scorer and No. 2 rusher. The Stars defeated Boston 23-16 in their first meeting.

The New Jersey Generals are 3-9 but have USFL rushing leader Herschel Walker. Washington has lost eight in a row — the Federal are 1-11 overall.

The Express, 6-6, holds a one-game lead over Oakland in the Pacific Division. Los Angeles beat the Invaders 10-7 earlier in the season.

Aided by new driver, putter

Bean grabs Memorial golf lead

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — A new driver and putter have helped lift a surprised Andy Bean into the midway lead of the Memorial Golf Tournament.

His challengers agree he may be hard to catch.

"This course ought to be good for him. He hits the ball so high and soft. He can bring those irons in soft to these greens," said Ben Crenshaw, trailing Bean by two shots going into today's second round of Jack Nicklaus' $400,000 tournament.

Even Bean found it difficult to believe he could one-putt 10 times on Muirfield Village's slick greens, especially with his caddy's putter.

"It's strange that I changed putters and putted so well here. I've had trouble on these greens," Bean said Friday.

Davis breaks meet record

HOUSTON (AP) — Scott Davis of Missouri turned in a 1:46.64 in the 800 meters to break the record for the Meet of Champions track meet by 1.2 seconds and qualify for the NCAA championships next week.

Davis' time on the Rice University track Friday was well below the 1:48.11 required to compete in the National Collegiate Athletic Association's meet, which will be held at the University of Houston.

Ron Delaney of Villanova set the record of 1:47.8 in 1957.

day following his 5-under-par 67. It gave him a 36-hole total of 136, eight strokes below par.

Crenshaw, often erratic, reeled off 15 consecutive pars to finish a round of 71 for 138.

"I'm as consistent as Tom Kite," he cracked. "I usually have a bunch of birdies and bogeys. I don't mind all those pars, though. It's not quite so hard on me."

Lanny Wadkins, the year's leading money-winner who had shared the opening-round lead with Crenshaw, assembled four straight birdies on the back side, rallying for a par-72 for 139.

"I'm still very much in this tournament," said Wadkins, searching for his third victory at the midway point of the 1983 season. He already has won $251,000. Also were former U.S. Open and PGA winner David Graham and Peter Jacobsen. Graham birdied three of the last four holes for 67. Jacobsen had 69.

Tom Watson, the PGA Player of the Year five of the last six seasons, wheeled into contention with a 67. He was four shots behind at 140.

"It's the best position I've been in for some time. I thought around this course to-

FITNESS FEVER

America's athletic activities

SOURCE: Miller Brewing Company

Is America growing soft? Maybe not. Some 71 percent of Americans say they participate at least once a week in sports or physical exercise. Which activity is the favorite? Fitness fans name swimming as what they most like to do — with football a surprising No. 2 choice. The findings were issued by the Miller Lite Report on American Attitudes Toward Sports.

Schlichter accepts problem; ready to turn life around

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Baltimore Colts backup quarterback Art Schlichter, describing himself as "on a path to total self-destruction," says he has accepted his gambling problem and is ready to turn his life around.

Schlichter, in his first public comments since the federal government and the National Football League launched investigations into his gambling activities, also said he has been a compulsive gambler and that his gambling has made him into "a compulsive liar."

The quarterback was recently suspended indefinitely by NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle because of his gambling. Schlichter will not play in the 1983 season and a review of his situation will be made prior to the 1984 season.

Schlichter's comments were published Friday by The (Dayton) Journal-Herald. The newspaper said the former Ohio State star's remarks came in an April 25 discussion with Ritter Collett, Journal-Herald sports editor and author of a book on Schlichter entitled "Straight Arrow."

Publication of Schlichter's comments were withheld until after cases against three Baltimore men were disposed of this week in U.S. District Court in Columbus.

"I have not only been a compulsive gambler for too long now, it made me a compulsive liar," the 23-year-old Bloomingburg, Ohio, native said. "I've been a living lie, with lies compounding lies."

Retains middleweight crown

Hagler KO's Scypion in fourth round

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — He's the best, the undisputed world middleweight boxing champion, but Marvelous Marvin Hagler says he's considering early retirement.

"I think I'm getting better with every fight, but what is there left for me?" Hagler said Friday night after another easy title defense.

Hagler, only 28, shattered the dreams of another young hopeful by knocking out Wilford Scypion at 2:47 of the fourth round before a near-capacity crowd of 13,100 at the Civic Center.

Then, on Home Box Office television, and later at a news conference, he surprised the boxing world by announcing he was considering retirement.

"I was thinking about retiring with this fight here, but I'm going to give it a lot of thought," he said. "I'm going to take some time off and talk it over with my family."

Hagler proved once again that he is the king as he made Scypion his seventh knockout victim in a row since he destroyed Alan Minter in less than three rounds for the championship Sept. 27, 1980, in London.

The champion outclassed Scypion, now 26-4, from the start before putting away the 24-year-old challenger from Port Arthur, Texas, with a series of lefts and rights.

"I don't know exactly what I used, but basically it was a straight right hand and a left hook," Hagler said after his 48th kayo in a 57-2-2 record since turning pro a decade ago.

"I landed some pretty good punches, lefts and rights, and crumpled him," the champion said. "That's the way I wanted him, down at my feet. He's got a big mouth and that's where he deserved to be."

Hagler later was more charitable in talking about Scypion, calling him aggressive and tough. However, the champ figured he was in command from the opening bell.

"I froze right from the start," said Scypion. "I thought I could handle him inside, but then he went outside and surprised me. I didn't think he would be that strong outside. Then, after I got inside on him in the fourth round, he threw a combination and I fell right into it."

"I knew I was down and I think I could have continued, but maybe I was up all the way when the count reached.

But, hey, I got beat by the best, didn't I?"

The title bout originally was to be sanctioned by the World Boxing Council. However, when the WBC and WBA agreed on a 12-round limit, instead of 15, Hagler rejected the two groups.

Landry seeking fulltime punter

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Coach Tom Landry says he hopes to keep a punting specialist this year although the National Football League roster was not extended beyond the 45-man limit.

"We'll work hard to keep one," Landry said Friday. "The Washington game proved what could happen."

What happened was quarterback Danny White, who also doubles as the Cowboys' punter, was knocked out in the first half of the 31-17 National Conference title loss to the Redskins.

"We were lucky we didn't have to punt in the second half," Landry said. "We were either throwing touchdown passes or interceptions."

Placekicker Rafael Septien was the backup punter.

At Deaf Smith County Museum

Pioneer quilting exhibit is featured

Gladys Flood, who resides four and a half miles west of Hereford in the Westway Community, is currently displaying her collection of quilts on the lower floor of the Deaf Smith County Historical Museum. The exhibit was set up last week to coincide with Mid-Plains Pioneer Day and will be up throughout the summer months.

Mrs. Flood started quilting about 11 years ago, after the youngest of her five children left home. Her mother, who quilted while Gladys was growing up, still continues to do beautiful work at age 85.

Many of the close to 50 quilts which Mrs. Flood has made she has given as gifts. Others she has kept for her own collection and for her children and 13 grandchildren.

Quilts usually outgrow their creators and often have a story to tell. Historical events, real and fictitious people, and everyday events are remembered with quilts.

As a child, Gladys remembers being told a story by her paternal grandmother about her mother hiding a quilt in a hollow log to keep the Yankees from getting it during the Civil War.

"My grandmother lived in the house that was used in the mini-series, 'The Blue and the Gray,'" comments Mrs. Flood. "The house we saw in the movie was built in 1867 and is now owned by the state of Arkansas, a state shrine. There have been lots of excavations around the house and many things can be seen in the museum in Prairie Grove, but the quilt was never found."

According to Gladys, when you really like to make quilts, you never get tired of working on them. "I feel the same kind of relaxation as mama does and I have something to show for my idle time," she smiles.

Museum hours:

Tuesday through Saturday 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Sunday 2 to 5 p.m. Closed Mondays

Gladys Flood gives Historical Society members Johnnie Turrentine and Ruth McBride, standing, and museum director, Lois Gilliland, left, a few quilting tips. The Lone Star quilt, on quilting frame and also directly behind the women in the case, is the Texas state quilt.

The one hanging in the back is an heirloom which was quilted at the turn of the century. The new one, which will be donated to the museum, will be set up on the frame while the display is open so that anyone who comes by may quilt on it if they wish.

Mrs. Flood displays several of her colorful quilts. The versatile coverlets may be pieced, appliqued, embroidered, or painted, and Gladys has some of each type on exhibit at the museum.

Mrs. Turrentine and Mrs. McBride find a trunk full of treasured quilts in one of the rooms of the Deaf Smith County Historical Museum. Quilts are both beautiful and practical, and they hold a strong attraction for people of all ages, from the elite to the poor in society.

From left, Mmes. Turrentine, Flood, and McBride discuss the quilting pattern on one of the pieced quilts which Mrs. Flood has brought for display. There are many popular patterns, and intricate designs are often used when quilting (sewing the top, filler, and backing together).

Quilts are a link to the past. Many mothers and grandmothers piece their quilts with scraps from old dresses and other garments which continue to remind them of the person who wore the clothing. Mrs. Turrentine and Mrs. Flood admire a diamond design quilt made from a variety of fabrics.

Residents' son weds in Saturday afternoon ceremony

Lan Tuyet Thi Tran and Lynn Wayne Lauderback, both of Lubbock, spoke their wedding vows Saturday afternoon at Central Church or Christ. Bob Wear, associate minister, officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tinh Nguyen of Lubbock and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Armon Lauderback of 113 Hickory.

A large candle tree decorated with pink gladiolus and spiral mums, fresh greenery and baby's breath adorned the main altar with identical spiral candelabra flanking either side.

Fresh palm greenery graced the lower sides of the altar and a unity candle, placed beneath the candle tree, was lit by the couple.

Mrs. Simone MacLellan served her sister as matron of honor and the bridegroom's father was best man.

The bride's sisters, May and Pascale Tran, and Mary Gibson served as bridesmaids. Groomsmen included the bridegroom's uncle, Travis Tucker; his cousin, Jim Fulcher; and his brother, Donny Lauderback.

Escorting guests were Sang

Tran, the bride's brother, and Carroll Tucker, the bridegroom's uncle.

Amy Fulcher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Fulcher, was flower girl and the bride's nephews, Vinh and Ti Tran, children of Mr. and Mrs. Sang Tran, were ring bearers.

Lighting candles were Tammy Tucker, the bridegroom's cousin, and Donny Lauderback.

An acapela chorus provided music for the ceremony. Members of the chorus were Linda Mincheer, Kim Moore, Charis Young, Diana White, Carole Byers, Sue Hollingsworth, John Sublet, Earl Behrends, Dale Hollingsworth, Allen Cansler and Dale Young.

The group, under the direction of Jo Ella Cansler, sang "Whither Thou Goest," "Wedding March," and "Oh, Perfect Love." Mrs. Cansler sang as a solo, "I Pledge My Love," and "Best Be the Tie" was vocalized as the unity candle was being lit.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white gown made of organza and Venise lace. The illusion neckline was decorated with sequins and the bodice of the gown was accented with Venise lace and pearls gathering the pleated overlay ruffled skirt.

The chapel length train was trimmed with ribbons and the leg-of-mutton sleeves of lace finished the unique gown.

The full-length Juliet veil was embroidered with pearls and was attached to a caplet decorated with seed pearls.

She carried a bouquet of white orchids decorated with stephanotis and laced ribbons. The bride chose to carry orchids for her name means orchid in Vietnamese.

The bridesmaids' gowns were made of rose satin over tulle fashioned with ruffled dropped shoulders and empire waistlines tied with a ribbon.

The full skirts had scalloped hemlines trimmed with bows. They also wore silk flowered crowns and carried bouquets of pink carnations and white daisies with burgundy satin ribbons.

Tammy Tucker presided over the registry table at the reception held in the church Fellowship Hall.

The bridegroom's cousins, Mrs. Lou Fulcher served cake and Desiree Isom poured punch and coffee. Others assisting included the bridesmaids and Mmes. Temple Abney, Fred Sims, Clifford Kerr and Joe Frank Clark.

Guests were served traditional Vietnamese hors d'oeuvres consisting of egg roles, canapes, shrimp on ice, cheeses, fruits and vegetables.

Hors d'oeuvres tables were covered with lace over pink and the bridesmaids bouquets were used as decorations. The bride's table was covered with white satin with lace swayed in front and gathered at the ends with flowers. Silver appointments were also used and the bridal bouquet was the centerpiece.

The bridal cake was decorated with fresh flowers and topped with cherubs.

The bridegroom's chocolate cake was decorated with strawberries, and French cream cookies with silvered almonds.

As the couple left for their wedding trip, guests were given flower petals to throw.

As her going away ensemble, the bride chose to wear a white cotton sundress with eyelet trim. The couple will honeymoon in the Hawaiian Islands and Los Angeles and San Diego, Calif.

They will make their home at 5416 96th St. in Lubbock.

The bride is beginning her junior year at the University of Texas at San Antonio Health Sciences Center Dental School. She graduated from Texas Tech University in 1980 and is a member of ADA Student Association.

The bridegroom, a 1974 graduate of Hereford High School received his degree in 1978 from Texas Tech. He is currently employed as a senior buyer for Texas Instruments in Lubbock.

Out of town guests included Mrs. C.M. Tucker of San Angelo, and Mrs. Carrie Lauderback of Clovis, N.M., both grandmothers of the bridegroom; Daniel MacLellan of Cleveland, Ohio; and May Tran of Los Angeles and Pascale Tran of New York City, N.Y., both sisters of the bride.

The full skirt, edged in pearls and embroidered lace, swept into a cathedral train. Her floor-length veil of bridal illusion fell from a teardrop crown.

She carried a traditional bridal cascade of pearls and satin ribbon. Her jewelry included a pearl pendant in a teardrop gold setting complemented with matching pearl earrings.

Attendants were attired in lilac floor-length dresses fashioned with bouffant sleeves, fitted waists, and self belts. They carried lilac roses, greenery and baby's breath.

Esmerelda Lucero of Amarillo invited guests to register at the reception held at First Baptist Church.

The bride's aunts, Dioncia Rodriguez and Hortencia Bosquez, both of Littlefield, served the three tiered lilac and pink cake, which was arranged atop a fountain and decorated with bride and bridegroom figurines.

Bureau seeks to reach handicapped children

The Bureau of Crippled Children's Services of the Texas Department of Health (TDH) is intensifying its efforts to reach children with potential physical disabilities or who may not be developing normally, by contacting doctors, nurses, social workers, parents and concerned citizens.

The Crippled Children's Services Program, which is 50 years old this year, serves children with neurological disorders, cancer, epilepsy, cystic fibrosis, and other diseases, as well as those with birth defects such as congenital heart defects, cleft palate and spina bifida.

"The Bureau arranges and pays for surgery to correct many congenital anomalies including cleft palate, club feet, curvature of the spine, and stomach and intestinal abnormalities," said Dr. Punam Myer, Chief of the Bureau in Austin.

Dr. Myer said that it also provides for long-term rehabilitation of children suffering from spinal cord injuries, and pays for skin grafts for badly burned children.

"I think one of the unusual medical problems covered by our services is the treatment of children with leukemia and other forms of cancer," Dr. Myer explained. "For example, we have arranged for the surgical removal of tumors and also for bone marrow transplants."

Dr. Myer asks anyone who knows of a child who is not developing normally, or who has a potential handicapping physical problem, to contact the nearest local or TDH Regional Health Department for information. The Bureau can also be contacted in Austin at 512-458-7241.

"There is no need in Texas for a child whose parents are not wealthy to suffer from a disability because of the lack of medical treatment," Dr. Myer said.

She said Crippled Children's Services are available to Texas residents under age 21 who meet certain requirements and whose family cannot finance the needed treatment. There is no age limit for patients with hemophilia, cystic fibrosis or epilepsy.

The program pays for wheelchairs, braces, orthopedic and prosthetic devices, medication, hospitalization and transportation. Patients are referred to hospitals and physicians in their vicinity who have been approved by the Texas Board of Health.

In 1982, the Bureau provided medical assistance to more than 32,000 children and spent about $38,112,000. Only about 3.9 percent was used for administrative costs, and the rest went for services to children.

MORE JOBS

WASHINGTON (AP) - A five-cent-a-gallon federal gasoline tax that went into effect April 1 is expected to generate some 84,000 jobs in transit and related industries, according to a study by the American Public Transit Association.

The tax increase, approved by Congress late last year, will devote one cent of the five-cent levy, or $1.1 billion annually, to public transit, with the remaining four cents going to highway and bridge work.

If fully funded by Congress, transit capital projects would create 35,400 direct jobs and 48,600 indirect or induced jobs, the association reports.

Former HHS student to receive diploma

Michael Lafuente

Michael Anthony Lafuente, son of Mr. and Mrs. Pedro Lafuente Jr. of 600 Avenue F, will participate in commencement exercises of the Lacey Township High School in Forked River, N.J., on June 18.

A former student at Hereford High School, Lafuente transferred to Lacey Township High in November 1982. He is presently living with his uncle and aunt, Enrique and Betty Lafuente, both former students and graduates of Hereford High School.

Since transferring, Lafuente has had the opportunity to accompany his new classmates on several senior class trips. A four day trip to Quebec, Canada, provided him with a view of a culture quite different than what he was used to in the Southwest.

A subsequent trip to New York City allowed him to visit Wall Street, the United Nations Building, and our national shrine, the Statue of Liberty.

Lafuente traveled with his family in New Jersey and to the cities of Philadelphia, Pa., and the nation's capital, Washington, D.C. in retracing a small part of this country's history.

Other events included a trip to Hershey, Pa., "Chocolate Town U.S.A.," and a close view of the crippled Three Mile Island Nuclear Plant which is located approximately 15 miles from Hershey.

Area agency to conduct hearing

The Panhandle Area Agency on Aging has scheduled a public hearing concerning the needs of the elderly at the Amarillo Senior Citizens Center, 1311 South Tyler, from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. Tuesday, May 31.

By holding public hearings, the Panhandle Area Agency on Aging Advisory Council will be able to ascertain the needs of the elderly as perceived by service providers, elected officials, community leaders, family members of senior citizens, the elderly themselves, and other concerned individuals.

With this information in hand, the PAAA can plan for the implementation and coordination of services to meet these needs. Thus, the attendance and testimony of concerned individuals at these hearings are most important. With the interest in the new federalism and the possible reduction in funding, the available resources must be directed toward the priority needs of the elderly.

Written testimony will be accepted from those who cannot attend in person. Mail to: Panhandle Area Agency on Aging, P.O. Box 9257, Amarillo, Tx. 79105.

The 37-square mile island of St. Maarten-St. Martin, which has become the "in" place to visit, actually contains two Caribbean countries. Yet, there are no border customs and the currency is interchangeable. Such is the friendliness that exists between the French and the Dutch sides. The island is sparkling clean and emits a peaceful atmosphere which invites travelers to set their own leisurely pace. There are many secluded spots among the islands 36 beaches. Both sides impart their own distinctive flavor to cuisine, hotels and shops. There is also duty-free shopping, casino gambling and evening entertainment for a more lively pace. The nearby sister islands of Saba and St. Eustatius offer daytrips of secluded delights.

Let our professionals at HEREFORD TRAVEL CENTER help you choose your own place in the sun this summer even if it will mean a trip to a spot much closer to home than the Caribbean Islands. We suggest you stop by our office at 144 W. 2nd, 364-6813, to tell us your likes and dislikes and of course your budget restrictions. The itinerary we will plan for you will be done on an individual basis with you in mind. Open: Mon.-Fri. 8:30-5:30, Sat. 9-12.

Would you like to visit several Caribbean islands without packing and unpacking? Consider a cruise.

Feminine lingerie gives spring lift

Sugar and spice and everything nice...That's what lingerie is made of...

Pardon my plagerism, but sugar and spice is the only way to describe some of the delightful lingerie we'll be seeing in stores this summer. Day or night, dressy or casual, there's a deliciously feminine sleep garment or underwear piece to fit the occasion.

Nightwear is much too pretty to go straight to bed. There are short, bare little sleepers in demure white cotton trimmed with blue satin ribbons. There are long, tucked pinafores in pristine white (one of the prettiest is from Lily of France)ruffled at the shoulder and tied in the back.

If you love the country look, gingham checks and tiny calico prints abound. Plaids in soft, muted colors are touched with crunchy Irish lace ruffles and vibrant brights emphasize the country mood of Pennsylvania Dutch motifs in applique or embroidery.

In a different vein are the embroideries and appliques borrowed from tablecloths and handkerchiefs. These may be from Madeira (expensive) or from mainland China (much less costly) and offer a variety of looks.

Odette Barsa, known for this look, does an elegant peignoir set with a simple calla lily applique, as well as a colorful gown touched with pink rosebuds and pulled thread work. This house has all its work done on the island of Madeira and so, is a bit pricey, yet the work is exquisite and justifies the cost.

During the day, camisoles, tap pants, petticoats and teddies take over. They are lavished with embroidery and lace, cut from eyelet and floral prints. They are ruffled and flounced and frilled.

On play days, pick a big, fluffy petticoat to give your full cotton skirt a boost. Don't let the lingerie makers hear me say this, but flea markets are a great place to look for old petticoats. You'll find some interesting old laces and embroideries there—I even found a petticoat edged with hand-crocheted ruffles at a mall antique show a few weeks ago.

Prices for these old pieces can be reasonable—$15 to $35—or unreasonable $80 and up. If you are looking for a piece of wearing apparel, don't opt for the expensive variety.

Back to modern-day lingerie. Queen Anne's Lace copies the antique look in almost all it does. Using natural fibers—cotton and silk—there are camisoles, petticoats—even pantaloons—for daytime.

The more extravagant pieces are meant for playwear—either day or night. But, there are camisoles and slips, lavished with lace, which can be worn under the severest business suit.

All this only goes to prove that a little luscious lingerie can really give a girl a lift.

There's nothing guaranteed to cast a pall over your life more than a computerized bill that winds-up its demands with "Have a Good Day."

Summer's delightful lingerie is much too pretty to wear straight to bed. White cottons and calico prints abound.

Sexual diseases explained in medical pamphlet

They used to be called venereal diseases but are now known as sexually transmitted diseases.

Medical knowledge in this area has expanded so much in the past decade that about 20 related but different diseases are included in the same basic category.

Accompanying this increase in knowledge has been an increase in the number of cases. In fact, all sexually transmitted diseases are increasing in epidemic proportions.

This warning comes from a pamphlet titled "Love Sick: Sexually Transmitted Diseases," produced by the Texas Medical Association.

Estimates are that someone in the U.S. develops a sexually transmitted disease every 12 seconds. More than half a million people today have one and do not know it.

Because sexually transmitted diseases are so common, everyone who is sexually active with more than one person should have a regular checkup. Most of these diseases can be treated and cured, but not all of them show symptoms. The three most common of the diseases are syphilis, gonorrhea and herpes.

For a copy of the pamphlet, write to the Texas Medical Association, Communication Department, 1801 N. Lamar Blvd., Austin 78701. Or call 512-477-6704.

Freezer on top best

DEAR POLLY — What type of refrigerator — freezer on top, side-by-side or freezer on the bottom — is the most energy efficient? — R.T.
DEAR R.T. — A refrigerator-freezer with the freezer unit on top is generally the most energy efficient. Those with freezers on the bottom are very uncommon these days, and side-by-side models are the least energy efficient. Don't forget when shopping for a new refrigerator that all units in the store are now labeled with an energy-comparison label indicating how energy efficient the model is. Those that are the most efficient usually have excellent insulation and are designed with a number of features to reduce energy consumption. A refrigerator with an ice-maker, water-in-the-door and other special energy consuming features will naturally be less energy efficient, and have a higher price tag as well. — POLLY

Red Cross Update

By BETTY HENSON
Executive Director

Water safety classes will begin Monday, June 13, with registration for those classes to be held Friday, June 10, from 9 to 11 a.m. at the City Pool. Beginners must have finished the first grade. Cost of the two week session will be $3.25. For further information call the Red Cross office at 364-3761.

Congratulations to all of the students completing the advanced lifesaving class. The weather has made it hard to swim in the City Pool and special thanks goes to the Vermillions for the use of their pool to help train these future lifeguards.

A babysitter is needed to sit with the children of the instructors that will be teaching water safety classes. These instructors volunteer their time and skills to teach water safety classes. If you would like to become a water safety instructor, call the office to register for the class and obtain the necessary training.

The CPR instructor class will be held June 18 beginning at 1 p.m. at the Red Cross office. We really need instructors.

Donations for disaster relief are being accepted at the office. The national budget for disaster relief has been spent and over two months still remain in the fiscal year. With tornados still occurring and hurricane season just beginning, all donations are really needed and appreciated.

Send checks to Disaster Relief, P.O. Box 1371, Hereford, or bring them by the office at 101 Avenue E.

The annual membership meeting will be held Tuesday, June 21, at 7:30 p.m. at the Community Center. Everyone interested in Red Cross activities is invited.

Abundant Life

GRACIOUS ACCEPTANCE
By Bob Wear

Many persons are much better off than they realize. They are acceptable people, they are in an acceptable life situation, and they are accepted by other folk. The difficulty is that they do not graciously accept themselves and their situation. Therefore they are miserable, and greatly reduce their chances for any kind of improvement.

Gracious Acceptance is the wise guideline for all of us. We must accept ourselves and the life role which we can fill. We must not pretend to be something we are not, and continue forcing ourselves into personal failures by assuming a role we cannot fill. We will do better, make more substantial progress, have the respect of other people and we will respect ourselves; if we stop playing-acting.

Our personal well-being is dependent upon gracious acceptance, and this is the beginning of whatever self-improvement we can make. If we are successful employees, and have sound reasons to believe that we are not capable of being the manager; we must graciously accept our role as an employee.

It is better, much better, to be a successful worker than to be a miserable, unsuccessful boss. All of us have limitations, and we must accept them graciously.

BARBS

Phil Pastoret

Diplomates: "A veil of secrecy" is another way of saying you're experiencing a strip-tease act.

There are two ways to antagonize the secretaries — stare at 'em or ignore 'em.

How come so many who practice the art of conversation display such a lack of talent after years of working at it?

If we are able to wear ordinary clothing, it is much better for us to graciously accept this fact than it is for us to try to make a show by wearing expensive clothing we cannot afford. Pretending to be smarter than we are, to have more than we have, to be something we are not, and to be doing better than we are becomes a self-made prison from which it is difficult to find release. Gracious acceptance, with sensible plans for improvement and progress, is the basis for successful living.

American Legion Boys State assembles

AUSTIN — Texas high school juniors, including Greg Reinauer and Brian Lady of Hereford, will assemble on The University of Texas Campus in Austin June 4 for the 43rd session of American Legion Boys State and begin registering at 1 p.m. for a full week of activities learning about the functions of our government, State Commander Waggoner Carr of Austin announced.

That evening the new citizens of Boys State will attend their first meeting in their assigned mythical Boys State City to start the week long program. The program is designed to teach responsibilities of citizenship in an actual "Learn By Doing" type workshop.

"Boys State is one of the outstanding youth training programs of the Americanism Commission of The American Legion," Commander Carr stated. "Not only do the youths learn more about the functions of government but they also see the importance of the role played by each good citizen in discharging his basic citizenship responsibilities in voting. They discover that each individual citizen is an integral part of and responsible for, the character and success of his government."

The political caucuses and conventions of Boys State are as exciting as any in real life. The secret ballot of the general election instructs the young citizens in the finer arts of being a gracious winner and a good loser as they learn from their experiences of campaigning.

The 963 boys will be housed in 22 Boys State Cities with each city further divided into two precincts, one for the Federalist and one for the Nationalist political party. They will run for office or work for appointments as they organize city, county, and state governments. Climax of their effort is the election of a Boys State Governor, a Legislature, Supreme Court and other State officers.

Allen B. Clark Jr. of Austin and a member of American Legion Post 83 is chairman of this year's program.

On Friday, June 10, the citizens of Boys State will visit the State Capitol and actually sit in chairs of the office to which they were elected and mythically run the state government for a day.

Boys State enrollment for Texas this year brings the total to 26,666 high school juniors who have attended in the past four decades, since 1940, when Boys State was first inaugurated in Texas.

DR. LAMB

DEAR DR. LAMB — A cardiologist told me my 3-month-old daughter has a heart murmur. He couldn't tell if it was functional or congenital. He suggested we wait until she is 6 months old and do more tests. She seems healthy and is gaining weight. What is your opinion?

DEAR READER — It is not unusual to be unable to determine what causes a murmur in a very young child. The rapid movement of the blood may cause the sound the doctor hears even if there are no structural abnormalities in the heart or blood vessels.

And some congenital defects correct themselves in time. Several years ago it was discovered that the hole in the septum that separates the lower chambers of the heart may actually grow together after birth. In that case nothing needs to be done.

As long as your daughter is healthy and growing, there are a lot of good reasons to wait until she is developed enough to be sure of what — if anything — she has.

Amended 253 times; 15 more changes asked to be considered

By JAMES R. KING
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Since the Texas Constitution was written more than 100 years ago by people who did not trust their government, it has been amended 253 times. Now, lawmakers want citizens to approve at least 15 more changes in the lengthy document.

Sen. Oscar Mauzy, a constitutional scholar, complained that the 106-year-old constitution has become little more than a reservoir of hundreds of specific laws.

The next series of proposed changes, which voters will decide at the polls this November and next, includes whether the state should garnish wages of wayward fathers who are delinquent in their child support payments and whether legislators should get more money to cover their expenses.

Mauzy, D-Dallas, said the Texas Constitution is among the nation's longest and most-amended because when it was drafted in 1876, "the people did not trust state government because of the bitter experience they had during 11 years of Reconstruction." He said they denied the government the powers he said it needs to function, and so, little by little over the years, those powers have had to be written back into the document in the form of amendments.

"We look awful silly having to propose and extend to the people six to 12 constitutional amendments every session," Mauzy said. Lawmakers have proposed amendments every session except one. In 1965, a record 27 amendments were proposed.

Over the years, some of them have been painfully specific. In 1946 voters were asked to decide whether the state should pay $75,000 to a contractor who constructed a building on John Tarleton Agricultural College.

"Those matters ought not to be dealt with in the constitution," Mauzy said.

But two efforts to revise Texas' constitution in 1974 and 1975 failed, and Mauzy said now lawmakers are "burned out" on trying to rewrite the document. He predicted it would be another 10 years before another serious move will be made.

In the meantime, he said, voters will continue to be asked to decide such issues as these, which will be on the Nov. 8, 1983, ballot:

GARNISHMENT OF WAGES — to allow the state to withhold wages from wayward fathers to make court-ordered child support payments; at present the state constitution prohibits any garnishing of wages.

ENEMY ATTACK — to set up emergency procedures for the Legislature to meet during an enemy attack or threat of attack. It would provide for replacement of legislators who might be unavailable for duty during a war. The governor could convene the Legislature wherever he thought safe, and the Legislature could operate with less than a quorum, suspend constitutional rules and substitute emergency rules for up to two years.

HOMESTEADS — to remove the $10,000 limit on the value of a homestead.

Homesteads in cities are protected against creditors up to that amount. The amendment would change the limit to one acre, with the value left unspecified. Backers said the $10,000 limit was too low, and changing it to an amount of land would preclude the need to change it again and again as inflation continues.

SEWER LINES — to permit cities to spend public funds to relocate or replace sanitation sewer lines on private property. The property owner would have five years to pay the city back for the work. At present, the constitution prohibits any government project that would enhance the value of private property. Backers said needed work on deteriorating sewer lines is not being done in cases where owners cannot afford to make lump sum payments for the work.

VETERANS HOUSING ASSISTANCE — to authorize state-backed, low-interest, 40-year loans of up to $20,000 to Texas military veterans for their use in making a downpayment on a home; at present veterans can borrow $20,000 to buy rural land.

CONSTABLES — to relieve sparsely populated counties of the constitutional requirement to have at least four constables and four justices of the peace. More than a third of the state's counties in fact are not living up to this requirement because they are not needed and it would be too expensive, say backers of the amendment.

PAROLE BOARD — to enlarge the size of the Board of Pardons and Paroles from three members to six and to allow paroles to be granted without the governor's approval.

SCHOOL BONDS — to authorize using the permanent school fund to guarantee school bonds. At present the constitution restricts using the credit of the state to guarantee debt.

These amendments have been approved to be put before the voters on Nov. 6, 1984.

JUDICIAL CONDUCT — to make changes in the watchdog panel that handles complaints against judges. It would include masters, magistrates and retired or former judges in the scope of the Judicial Conduct Commission; it would include incompetency as an offense; it would increase size of commission from 11 to 13; and would alter the method of review and removal recommendations.

COLLEGE FUNDS — to provide $100 million annually for equipment, repair and construction at 26 state colleges outside the University of Texas and Texas A&M systems. The proposed fund will guarantee bonds sold by the universities.

MUTUAL INSURANCE — to permit use of public funds for premiums on mutual insurance contracts. Sponsors said in the old days mutual insurance companies used to assess policyholders from time to time. Because of that, the constitution excluded such companies from state contracts. Today, mutual companies no longer assess customers, and the amendment would "allow them to compete equitably" with other insurance companies, backers say.

TREASURERS OFFICE — to abolish the office of treasurer in Collin and Bexar counties, where current treasurers campaigned on a promise to do away with the office and let the county auditor perform the task. A similar move approved by voters last November abolished the treasurer's offices in Bee and Tarrant counties.

PER DIEM — to raise the daily living allowance given legislators while they are in session from $30 to $75 a day. The Internal Revenue Service now allows state legislators to deduct up to $75 a day in living expenses, and the proposed amendment would allow the amount allowed Texas lawmakers to float with the IRS maximum.

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR — to authorize the Texas Senate to elect a new lieutenant governor in case a vacancy should occur. Under current law, the Senate president pro-tem becomes lieutenant governor if the office is vacated.

STATE BANKS — to allow state banks the same rights and privileges that federal banks have, such as issuing preferred stock and acquiring stock in foreign banks.

In iron lung by night, he runs successful business by day

HOUSTON (AP) — Ed Rosenwasser, who spends his nights in an iron lung, uses his days running a successful business — a service to locate financial aid for college students.

Using a rubber-tipped stick which he holds between his teeth, Rosenwasser operates computer keys, makes telephone calls and records messages. He receives about 1,000 calls monthly from high school students across the country.

Rosenwasser has been unable to move his arms or legs since 1950, when he was stricken with polio. During the day, he uses a respirator. At night, he sleeps in an iron lung.

For a $45 fee, Rosenwasser will locate five to 12 funding sources for which the student qualifies. If he cannot identify at least five realistic possibilities from his data bank containing over 250,000 scholarships, Rosenwasser said, he returns the money.

"There is about a half-billion dollars available each year for private scholarships," Rosenwasser said. "A fourth of that — more than $100 million — goes unused. But if students know where to look for scholarship funds, many of them will be successful."

Rosenwasser retains an optimistic outlook despite his disabilities.

"Happiness is not in your left hand or your right leg, it's in your head," he said. "If most of us are persistent enough, we can succeed at something."

Rosenwasser was stricken with polio in 1950 after completing a year at the University of Texas Medical School at Galveston. He was vacationing in Europe when he became violently ill and within a day was paralyzed from the neck down.

"Now I had to figure out what to do with the rest of my life," Rosenwasser recalled. "I had always wanted to be a doctor, but I didn't think it was practical for me to return to med school."

So Rosenwasser embarked on a series of businesses including a magazine subscription service and a trading stamp exchange. He also imported sweaters from Hong Kong and operated a retail clothing store.

Rosenwasser received a masters degree in biostatistics from the UT School of Public Health but was unable to find work in that field because of his handicap, he said. He said he conceived the idea for his present business, Student College Aid, in the early 1970s.

Statistics that shape agriculture, from the Texas Dept. of Agriculture

A "strong" dollar doesn't necessarily mean a strong economy, Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower points out. "When they say the dollar is strong, they're talking about it being strong for the big bankers. It actually weakens the position of the farmers and the small business people."

Piggyback loads increase steadily

WASHINGTON (AP) — The amount of fresh fruits and vegetables shipped on trailers that are then hauled on railroad flat cars has increased steadily — from 2.9 percent of the total produce shipments in 1981 to 4.3 percent last year, says the Agriculture Department. In 1983, the piggyback method could account for 5 percent of the shipments.

Despite the gains, however, trucks "still form the backbone of fresh fruit and vegetable transportation" in the United States, according to a report by the department's Economic Research Service. Overall, trucks are expected to account for 88 percent of the shipments of produce this year, the same share as in 1982. Rail shipments may account for 7 percent, down from 7.7 last year.

"The generally depressed state of the trucking industry suggests that trucks will be readily available for summer fruit and vegetable harvests, and that rates will continue relatively low," the report said.

Further, equipment should be in ample supply this year. Manufacturers delivered 15,081 new refrigerated trailers in 1982, 14 percent more than in 1981. "Although some of these new trailers replace trailers removed from service, the total supply of refrigerated equipment appears to have increased," the report said.

Chilly weather boosted prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cold and rainy weather that swept much of the nation last month helped boost food prices, says the Agriculture Department. Assistant Secretary William Lesher said that a 0.5 percent rise on overall retail food prices — including groceries and restaurant meals — was "largely due to weather disruptions in the fresh vegetable and cattle sectors."

Lesher's comments followed a Labor Department announcement Tuesday that overall consumer prices rose 0.6 percent in April, the biggest increase in nine months. Meat prices, collectively, rose 0.7 percent, including a 2.1 percent gain in beef and veal prices. Pork prices declined 1.1 percent. Fruits and vegetables rose 1 percent from March.

"Wet fields caused delays in planting and interrupted harvest of many fresh vegetables," Lesher said. "This hindered the normal flow of vegetables going to market and resulted in higher prices. Supplies will increase as the summer crops begin to mature." The USDA has projected this year's food price increase at 2 to 4 percent, the smallest annual increase since 1967. Last year's was 4 percent.

Consumption also down

Meat, poultry spending per capita drops

By DON KENDALL AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — American consumers last year continued to cut back on spending for meat and poultry as a share of the family food budget, says the Agriculture Department.

Spending for beef, pork, broilers and turkeys — unadjusted for inflation — was about $334 on a per capita basis, compared to an average of about $329 in 1981, $320 in 1980, $309 in 1979 and $275 in 1978.

But per capita spending as a portion of disposable income during the period decreased, generally, to 3.57 percent in 1982 from 4.16 percent in 1978.

In other words, if a family spent $4.16 per member on meat and poultry in 1978, it spent $3.57 for each in 1982.

The trends, outlined by such figures, are important as indicators to the food industry — and to farmers — of changing consumer patterns in buying habits.

According to the the analysis, which was included in a new livestock and poultry outlook report by USDA's Economic Research Service, average "real" income was relatively flat in recent years as inflation offset much of the dollar gains.

"As the prices of goods and services rise in real terms, consumers often economize by reducing the quantity of meat and other foods they purchase," the report said.

Retail prices for red meats increased about 5 percent in 1982 from 1981 levels, the report said. Poultry and egg prices declined 2 and 3 percent, respectively.

Of the red meats, pork prices gained the most, up 13 percent from their 1981 average. Retail beef prices rose about 1 percent, while other meats averaged about 3 percent higher.

This year, the report said, retail red meat prices are expected to go up an average of 2 to 4 percent, while poultry prices hold steady or decline slightly.

Meanwhile, per capita consumption of red meat and poultry declined in 1982 for the second consecutive year.

Pork dropped nearly six pounds to about 59 pounds, retail weight, from about 65 pounds in 1981. Beef consumption remained about the same at 77.2 pounds, retail.

"Per capita beef consumption in the first half of 1983 will be above year-ago levels but is expected to decline in the second half, so that for the year it should be about even with 1982," the report said.

"Pork consumption in 1983 should decrease only marginally below 1982. First-half per capita pork consumption should be down slightly from 1982 levels but rise above year-ago levels in the second half."

Broiler consumption should remain about the same, although per capita use could increase slightly. Turkey consumption may be up slightly this year, with most of the increase occurring in the second half.

Beet armyworm attack 'not bad,' just starting

LUBBOCK — Beet armyworms, pests that ravaged many cotton and milo fields in 1980, are attacking sugar beets in Castro and Deaf Smith counties on the Texas High Plains.

They also have destroyed some seedling cotton in Gaines and Yoakum counties as well and farmers are worried this may be another one of those years like 1980 when, for no apparent reason, the beet armyworm shows up in devastating hordes.

Dr. James F. Leser, area extension entomologist-pest management at Lubbock, said some beet fields have been hit by cutworms as well as beet armyworms. The beet armyworms potentially are the worst problem by far. Neither insect infestation is critical or general yet but the armyworm problem could escalate.

Extension entomologist Allen Knutson at Dimmit said he thinks cutworms that have been eating on sugar beets in Castro County the past two weeks probably are of the army cutworm variety. He said if that is the case, they soon will be pupating and growers can stop worrying about cutworms this year.

Kenny Roberts, manager of Tri-State Chemical in Hereford, said treatment for beet armyworms is just starting in Deaf Smith County. He added there had been occasional cutworm problems—"not bad."

Dr. Leser said a big factor in armyworm problems coming on earlier than usual probably is dry weather.

"That's the kind of weather that brings armyworms out," he said. "If we continue in this trend the next couple of months, we will be opening ourselves up to the beet armyworm problem—not only in beets but also in cotton. If we start getting normal rainfall, they could ease up."

"They are hard to control...really devastating," Dr. Leser said. Beet armyworms will eat cotton from the seedling stage to the boll stage.

Calvin Jones of Holly Sugar Co. at Hereford said Holly had some fields with a dual armyworm-cutworm problem. He thought the problem was about over because of the break in weather.

Dr. Leser said armyworms come in various colors but are generally green. They do not have any obvious hairs on their bodies but characteristically have a black spot on either side of their bodies behind their heads.

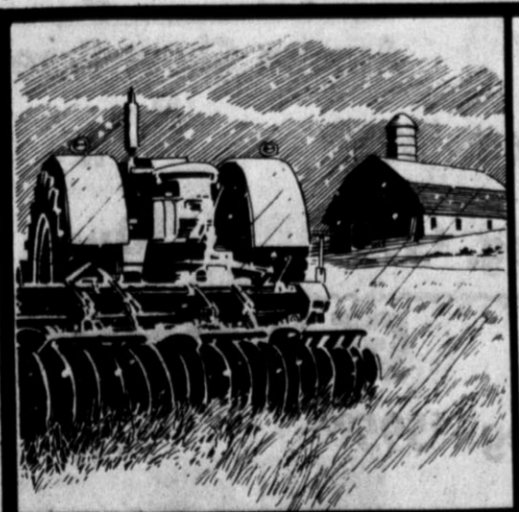

Roberts said beet armyworms are not a big problem yet in Deaf Smith County but added farmers are watching fields closely. "Since they started this early, I would expect an increase," Roberts said. "But you never know about beet armyworms. They will be here one year and next year they won't."

There generally is agreement that beet armyworms are coming on early. Knutson said that in 1980 they were not a problem until mid-July. Then they stayed a problem until September.

FCIC needs significant changes according to accounting office

By DON KENDALL AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — General Accounting Office investigators say that the 45-year-old Federal Crop Insurance Corp. needs to make significant changes soon if it expects to provide subsidized protection to the nation's farmers at reasonable costs.

Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla., says that if something isn't done, the corporation will soon be broke.

Congress overhauled the program in 1980, allowing the Agriculture Department agency to expand coverage rapidly to additional crops and to virtually every county. It also allowed the private sector to handle the sales and servicing of policies.

But the GAO, an investigative agency of Congress, said Thursday that the corporation "did not make all the evaluations needed to assure that it was taking the appropriate action" when it expanded operations after the 1980 act.

"It did not resolve, for example, longstanding questions regarding its actuarial procedures," said Brian P. Crowley of GAO's resources, community and economic development division. "We believe some of the changes FCIC instituted will have a significant impact on the program's future costs."

Therefore, he told a House Government Operations subcommittee, "It will be several years before a cost-effective insurance program can be provided" to farmers. Crowley said in his statement that GAO is still analyzing the insurance program and will be coming up with recommendations for improvements.

But, on the basis of preliminary findings, he said, the corporation should make a number of changes, including adjustments needed to improve actuarial soundness — bringing premiums in line with risks, for example.

Until the 1980 overhaul, the corporation sold crop insurance on specified crops only in certain areas. All the sales and servicing were handled by the agency itself.

Now, the agency has switched its sales and servicing to the private sector while providing premium subsidies to farmers and re-insurance to private companies.

Merritt W. Sprague, manager of the corporation, told the subcommittee that the program provides "the best all-risk protection system available for the nation's farmers." He acknowledged, however, that there is room for improvement and that progress is being made.

"In order to improve the corporation's overall operation," Sprague said, "we must have stability. To open crop insurance up now to unnecessary changes would be disastrous to the American farmer, because it would create additional delays which would only result in further damaging our fragile agricultural system."

Sprague said that the corporation "must have sufficient time" to put its improvements into effect.

"The corporation, as presently structured, will meet the demands of farmers if it is allowed to work unhindered," he said.

When Congress redesigned the insurance program, it allowed for phasing out previous special crop disaster payment program offered by USDA because the expanded insurance would do the job.

English, who is chairman of the panel, said that the corporation "has traveled a rocky road" since 1980 and that he personally believes there should be some kind of separate disaster payments program.

"It is obvious from the information available ... that FCIC is in trouble," English said. "It is running through its capital structure at a fast rate. Unless something is done, the corporation will be bankrupt in a year or two."

Crop insurance premiums paid by farmers are subsidized by the federal government at 30 percent of the premium cost, up to a coverage level of 65 percent of a producer's loss. Premiums are used to cover claims or indemnities, while administrative and other expenses are covered by direct congressional appropriations.

Sprague told the subcommittee that the estimated 1982 loss ratio on the corporation's share of the crop insurance in force was about 1.33. That means that for every $1 paid in premiums, the corporation paid out $1.33. Put another way, the corporation's share of premiums paid by farmers last year was about $318 million.

Texas Tech expands cattle research with feedlot

LUBBOCK — A state with roots deep in ranching and Texas Tech University's location in a cattle-intensive area where factors figuring into a new feedmill-feedlot expansion project for the university.

The $3.2 million project, to be completed in 1984, will move much of the university's beef cattle research from the present Killgore Center near Amarillo to the College of Agricultural Sciences Field Laboratories east of New Deal.

The new $2.5 million feedmill and $650,000 feedlot will benefit producers, students and researchers, says Rodney L. Preston, Thornton professor and a project planner within the university's Department of Animal Science.

He said the new facility will allow researchers to provide producers with more information in giving them an edge in the competitive market.

"Specifically, the new facility will be oriented toward improving the efficiency of grain use in feedlots," Preston said. "Potentially we can increase the use and digestibility of poor quality roughages through treatment, thereby increasing roughage use in feed to decrease production costs."

An expanded feed manufacturing program will train more students for employment in the large cattle feeding industry.

Research will profit from the expanded feedmill-feedlot in productivity and accuracy. The increase in feedlot cattle capacity from 250 to 1,000 will allow good replication of experimental data.

Dean Sam E. Curl of the Texas Tech College of Agricultural Sciences said accessibility is why much of the beef cattle research is being moved from the Killgore Beef Cattle Research Center to the university's field laboratories.

The Killgore Beef Cattle Research Center is a 2½-hour drive from the main campus of the university. The distance to the Killgore Center, built in 1962, has made it considerably less accessible to both students and faculty, Curl said.

The university field laboratories, just 30 minutes from the Lubbock campus, includes 980 acres compared with the Killgore Center's 5,822 acres deeded to the university and 10,000 acres owned by the federal government and operated by the College of Agricultural Sciences under an agricultural use permit.

The new feedmill-feedlot facilities will include a computer-driven feedmill allowing for the feeding of 1,000 head of research cattle in six hours. Operators can program more than 130 different formulas into the computer for dispensing to appropriate pens. The number of ingredients which can be factored into those formulas is limited only by those known to researchers.

The feedlot will also prove more efficient than its predecessor. A covered-belt feed-conveying system will transport formulas from the mill to the lot. Animal waste falling through slotted floors will be pushed by scrapers to receiving pits for use as fertilizer on experimental lands or to generate methane to power the feedmill.

Dr. Preston, the university beef cattle nutritionist who helped on feedlot design, heralded the new facilities as being "the best in the nation in terms of electronics, animal handling, com-puterization, ease of handling animal waste, accuracy of weighing feed, uniformity and accuracy of mixing."

All feeds fed the cattle will be weighed on macro and micro scales to give better experimental control and accuracy.

Computerized data collection and processing will free the scientists from mundane tasks such as adding up daily feed records. The computer system will also guarantee accuracy in everything from control of feeds mixed to the quantity of feeds delivered by belts to pens.

The university's present feedmill primarily produces mixed feeds for swine and horses, Richardson noted.

"There are different antibiotics for beef cattle than for other species," he said. "This facility will keep these specific drugs precisely separated from other mixed feeds."

The new three-story feedmill with 3,000 square feet per floor is complemented by a 6,000 square feet roughage barn and a 6,000 square feet hay storage area.

Feedlot redesign will include 96 eight-head pens and 60 individual pens. Those pens will have partially slotted floors and allow 25 square feet per head. Eight 32-head pens, with 150 square feet allotted each animal, will have dirt surfaces to simulate commercial feedlots in the Southern High Plains.

New feedlot features include an individual chute area for artificial insemination, ear tagging, deworming, dehorning and castration; mist sprayers, to cool the cattle; and electronic cattle weighing scales.

"Knowing how the various segments of the total industry fit together is extremely important," Curl said. "With the vast agricultural industry of the Texas High Plains as our natural laboratory, we are able to offer that quality training in the College of Agricultural Sciences at Texas Tech."

Although much of the beef cattle research is being moved to the university's field laboratories, the Killgore Center will not be deserted, Curl said.

The center will still be used for teaching farm management; the cattle grazing trials of Dr. Arthur G. Matches, Thornton professor of plant and soil sciences, and Preston; and for other areas of research.

Funds for the new feedmill-feedlot teaching and research facilities will come from ad valorem tax reserves and private funding, including monies from the Thornton Estate.

Amarillo man named to board

Lawrence R. Hagy, an Amarillo businessman with interests in oil, gas, banking and cattle operations, was elected to the Board of Directors of the National Cowboy Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center in Oklahoma City.

Hagy came to Amarillo in 1923, with a geology degree from the University of Oklahoma. The young geologist was successful in the Texas Panhandle and Oklahoma oil and gas fields. He became a member of the firm of Hagy, Harrington and Marsh, one of the largest independent natural gas and gasoline producing companies in Texas. When this company consolidated into Panoma Corporation, Hagy moved his offices to the First National Bank Building. He served as a director of the First National Bank of Amarillo for 33 years.

In 1959, he purchased a 38,000 acre ranch southeast of Clarendon which he named Bitter Creek Ranch and still operates today. Hagy raises straightbred Herefords and his calf crop nearly always brings 2-3 cents above the market price.

He is a champion of conservation and is constantly improving the grass lands at Bitter Creek Ranch.

He served as mayor of Amarillo in 1947-49 and has continued to work for civic and charitable good through many organizations. He served as the development chairman for the Texas Panhandle Heritage Foundation, president and director of the Bivens Foundation and helped plan and develop the Amarillo Art Center.

As a director in the Cowboy Hall of Fame, Hagy will be involved in the policy and operation of the western shrine. The board holds four to five meetings a year. Two are in Oklahoma City at the Hall and the others are held at various locations in the West. Other Amarillo directors include Gene Edwards and Dr. Charles K. Hendrick.

Dryden named dean

LUBBOCK — Robert D. Dryden, who earned his doctoral degree in industrial engineering at Texas Tech University in 1973, May 19 was named dean of the Texas Tech College of Engineering.

The announcement was made by Dr. John R. Darling, vice president for academic affairs. Dryden is professor and head of industrial engineering and operations research at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University.

Dryden succeeds John R. Bradford who held the dean's position for almost 26 years. Dr. Bradford left the dean's office in March 1982 to become vice president for development at Texas Tech. Dr. Jimmy H. Smith is interim dean.

Darling said Dryden was recommended unanimously by the College of Engineering Dean Search Committee headed by Dr. J. Knox Jones, vice president for research and graduate studies.

Darling said Dryden's appointment is effective Sept. 1. Dryden holds bachelor's and master's degrees in industrial engineering and management from Oklahoma State University. He earned an associate degree in science at Northern Oklahoma College in 1965. He was an instructor at Texas Tech while he worked toward the doctoral degree, teaching during the 1972-73 academic year. He also has taught at Wichita State University, the University of Texas-Arlington and Northern Oklahoma College.

Dryden has been a consultant to Luther-Hill and Assoc. Inc., LTV Missiles and Space Division, and Young-Hadawi Inc., all of Dallas and to Westinghouse Electric Corp. for a project in Ismailia, Egypt.

He is a national president of Alpha Pi Mu, industrial engineering honorary society. He was for four years national executive director of that organization and was a founder of the UT-Arlington chapter. He also holds membership in other honor societies—Tau Beta Pi, Phi Kappa Phi and Sigma Tau—as well as the scientific research society, Sigma Xi.

He has held a variety of offices in the American Institute of Industrial Engineers. He is director elect of the Management Division and is assistant secretary-treasurer of the Council of Industrial Engineering Academic Department Heads. He also has been active in the Human Factors Society and the American Society for Engineering Education.

Dryden is the author or co-author of numerous publications, technical reports, and conference and seminar presentations.

In addition to numerous research projects he also has engaged in forensic engineering.

During hot weather, be especially careful not to leave children, pets and the elderly in a parked car with the door closed. Family Circle magazines says heat in a car parked in the sun can build up to dangerously high levels.

Arkansas water table too high for rice

By DOROTHY GAST
Associated Press Writer

Low-lying fields in northeast Arkansas are so wet that farmers think they'll have trouble making money this year on a crop that loves water—rice.

Farmers and agricultural officials said last week that some rain would be welcome once the rice has been sown and grows a bit, but it's easier and cheaper to plant the grain in drier ground.

"If it continues like this, it's going to be a problem on a lot of this low-lying land," A.B. "Blue" Clark, a Craighead County farmer, said in a telephone interview. "I don't know if we'll get anything at all on it. Those areas are in pretty drastic shape now."

Clark said Wednesday he had 4 feet of water on some of his land.

Arkansas is the nation's leading rice producer with acreage growing the fastest in the northeast part of the state. Last year, Craighead

County grew 85,000 acres of rice compared to 1.35 million acres statewide.

But much of northeast Arkansas was hit hard during December's floods, and frequent, heavy showers have kept the water table high.

Clark, who farms 3,000 acres, said he planned to sow 950 acres with rice this year. He had 725 acres planted Wednesday, but the sowing was done late and by airplane instead of tractor.

James Peachey, Craighead County extension agent chairman, said farmers can plant rice in wet weather, but they might have problems later.

Peachey said the most desirable long-grain varieties of rice require long seasons, and farmers are having to turn to medium- and short-grain rice because of planting delays.

Francis Williams, resident director of the Rice Research and Extension Center in Stuttgart, said the Grand Prairie wasn't hurt by the rains as northeast Arkansas was.

Gary Walker, 36, of Weiner has farmed 18 years. He said Thursday he's planted 90 acres of rice and wants to sow 50 more. He's switched to medium-grain varieties, he said, and the rest of the seed should be planted in the next week or so.

Walker farms 410 acres. "This year we worked two days in March, two days in April and four days in May," he said. "So we haven't got very much done."

Asked if he's had any success planting his rice crop this year, Quinn Brown, 60, of Datto said, "Are you kidding? It's the poorest prospect for rice in northeast Arkansas that I've ever seen. It's a sad situation."

"We haven't gotten any planted yet, and if doesn't look like we're going to get any planted if it doesn't stop raining on us." He wouldn't say how much land he farms or how much rice he hopes to plant.

Leo Bartholomew, 43, of Weiner said he planted 127 acres in rice this year. He seeded the land with an airplane—about three weeks behind schedule.

His land drains well, so he hasn't had the problems other farmers have. But the harvest will be late, he said, and yields probably will be down.

Clark needs at least two weeks of dry weather on some of his land. "As soon as we can see just a little bit of dust a flyin', we're going to have to jump on it with all four feet," he said.

Hand Irrigation

Amanda Reed conducted some testing of her own at a surge irrigation experiment site on the Dwight Shirley farm northwest of Hereford. Amanda was with her father, David Reed, who is the district conservationist for the Soil Conservation Service. Detailed results of the irrigation experiment, conducted at 12 sites in the High Plains Underground Water District, are expected to be available next week and will be included in a Brand farm news article.

Helms was trying to get attention

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms says he was only trying "to get their attention" at the Treasury Department when he told officials that an unresolved tobacco import dispute could cost him his Senate seat in next year's election.

Helms, R-N.C., one of the Reagan administration's staunchest conservative allies in Congress, wrote Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, on Aug. 9, 1982, that if the scrap tobacco dispute "is not resolved quickly, the momentum will have been established to take me out of the Senate in 1984."

The Senate Agriculture Committee chairman could face stiff opposition next year from Democratic North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt, who became the state's first two-term governor after successfully campaigning to change a law allowing only one term.

Hunt's supporters have been raising money for several months for a possible Senate campaign, although the governor has not announced that he would run. Helms backers also are gathering campaign funds.

Helms has been trying since 1978 to get the Customs Service, part of the Treasury Department, to rule that shredded imported tobacco is being misclassified.

"I never asked Regan to try to influence the decision. All I wanted was a commitment that customs (the U.S.

Customs Service) be allowed to rule," Helms said in an interview Thursday.

He said high grade shredded tobacco, used by cigarette companies as a filler, is being classified as low grade tobacco.

Need for homes increasing

Because modern medicine has lengthened life spans, the need for nursing homes and long-term care facilities is increasing.

The Texas Medical Association offers this list of types of nursing homes: —A residential care facility provides room and board. This facility is suitable for those who do not want household responsibilities, but who do not need continuous medical care. Some of these facilities include exercise, social and recreational programs as part of their service.

—An intermediate care facility provides room and board and some nursing care.

This type is for people who cannot live independently. Some of these facilities have rehabilitation programs and physical, social and recreational activities. The cost of an intermediate care facility may be covered by some federal programs.

—A skilled nursing facility provides around-the-clock care by both doctors and nurses. This facility is for people who require intensive medical care. Some offer occupational therapy, physical therapy and social work services.

History workshop to be held in Amarillo

Preparations are under way for the second annual "Preserving Local History" workshop to be held Saturday, June 11, at Amarillo Central Library, 4th and Buchanan, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Funded by the Texas Committee for the Humanities and sponsored by Amarillo Public Library and Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum, the workshops have addressed various facets and methods for preserving local and area history. This year's workshop will focus on the theme, "Preserving Neighborhoods."

The philosophy for this workshop is based on the theory that history begins at home with people and their neighborhoods, literally in one's own backyard, says Panhandle-Plains Museum curator of ethnology Dr. Bobby Weaver. The day will include a bus tour of some neighborhoods and will include sources for and techniques of gathering history, including oral histories, the economic and social impact of changing neighborhoods; effective ways to work with City government to preserve neighborhoods; and heritage, changing patterns and current, relevant concerns in communities.

Neighborhoods specially targeted for study and examples are Plemons-Eakle, Country Club, San Jacinto and Sixth Street, North Amarillo, and Palo Duro. The subject of what has already been done and what is yet possible for these neighborhoods can serve as models for other neighborhoods and other cities, according to Project Director Anite Pitts of Amarillo Public Library. The workshop should be of interest to anyone interested in local history, especially members of neighborhood associations, area teachers, architects, museum personnel, librarians, archivists, writers, and any persons interested in preserving history.

All activities for the day are free of charge except for a catered lunch. Reservations for the lunch and the bus tour may be made by contacting Amarillo Public Library, 278-3051.

Plumbing and dancing keeps him healthy

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Lewis Jones works with his hands all day, installing or fixing someone's plumbing, but at night he's on his toes performing a pax de deux or tour en l'air.

He's the first to admit that he's something of a novelty. "As far as I know, I'm the only dancing plumber in the country," he says with a grin.

A serious ballet student for five years, his advertisement in the telephone company's yellow pages features a large wrench and the phrase, "The Dancing Plumber."

And while the visions conjured by the two vocations might seem as different as John Wayne and Rudolf Nureyev, Jones sees them as just differing expressions of civilization.

"Doctors keep you well, but plumbing keeps you from dying before your time," he explains. "Doctors and plumbing grew up together as civilization grew. Ballet is about the ultimate expression of real civilization."

Jones, clad in blue jeans and a green shirt with a dirt smudge on one shoulder, talks animatedly about both ballet and plumbing. His two Manx cats, Mark Anthony and Cleopatra, wander through the living room of his home. Air bubbles in tanks containing salt-water fish, and he insists that a visitor accompany him to another room to meet "Fang," his Burmese reticulated python.

Recently separated, he is reticent to talk much about his private life. But the raw energy that sustains him on the stage — and in a ditch installing a sewer line — bubbles through when he talks about ballet.

"It's a demanding vocation, or avocation," Jones says. "It looks easy, just to watch it, but there are hours and hours of hard work that go into just one small movement, to get it just right."

It also has its lighter moments. There was the time, for instance, when he was installing a new water heater for a customer.

"I looked at my watch and said, 'I've got to leave for awhile to go to ballet practice.'"

"Well," says Jones, "he looked at me with a look that as much said, 'Oh, yeah?' We were rehearsing 'The Nutcracker,' and one of the local television stations was there and he saw me on TV, dancing."

"When I went back he said, 'You really weren't kidding.' He thought I had gone out to get drunk or something."

He adds that, still too often, he gets a questioning look when he explains that he is a ballet dancer.

"But I think, more and more, men are beginning to realize that ballet dancing is not what it had the stigma of for so long," he says. "I think a lot of them are finally realizing that it takes a real athlete to be a male ballet dancer."

If ballet dancing is at one end of the scale, the martial arts are at the other. But strange as it may seem, it was the martial arts that got Jones into ballet in the first place.

He was deeply involved in kung fu under master George Ing and was taking part in a demonstration at St. Gregory's College in Shawnee.

"I mentioned to one of the other participants, Donnie Hardin, that I had seen some ballet on TV the night before and how some of the moves looked very much like what we were doing."

"The next thing I knew, he was introducing me as the kung fu practitioner who used to take ballet and that I would now show some of the similarities."

Jones says he did some ballet positions — "Boy, they were really terrible" — and afterward "about 100 people came up to me and said, 'I didn't know you had taken ballet.'"

As he tells it now, just so he wouldn't have to fib, he went to the University of Oklahoma and took one semester of ballet.

That was about 10 years ago, and the tiny seed that was planted at St. Gregory's didn't take firm root until he went to a ballet performance and saw Bojan Spassoff.

"Man, he was really tearing them up," Jones says.

That was enough to make him a dedicated dancer. He spent one year in classes with the Metropolitan Ballet and the last four with Spassoff and his wife, Stephanie Wolf, who are the instructors at the School of Ballet Oklahoma.

"I couldn't have done it without the support," says Jones, 30. "Sometimes I go to practice all covered with dirt and just sort of shake myself a little, get into my dance tights and we're all the same."

He mentions several female dancers, and their families, as being particularly supportive.

"They knew what a hard time I was having, working and taking dance lessons at the same time," he says. "When I was about to fall over, I could feel their hands on my back, holding me up."

The stagehands "are with me 110 percent," he adds. "They work with their hands, too, and they look at me and say, 'Hey, you're a ballet dancer.'"

"And if they're working on some wiring and need some help, they don't hesitate to yell, 'Lewis, come hold this wire a minute.'"

He says much credit for any success he has enjoyed must go to the Spassoffs, who let him take classes at a reduced rate while he was building up his plumbing business.

Jones returns repeatedly to the hard work involved in ballet.

"Anyone can just move around, move their arms and legs," he says. "But to dance well, you must dance with soul. Otherwise, you're nothing but a stick man up there."

Gross nets success

By Peter Meade

Unlike the character he plays on NBC's "Family Ties," Michael Gross says he is more political now than during the days when he was "trying to keep one step ahead of the draft board."

Today, the Yale Drama School graduate admits he belongs to an anti-handgun lobby and the American Civil Liberties Union. He also frequently writes President Reagan "to give him some advice."

On the Wednesday night series, Gross and Meredith Baxter Birney portray a pair of '60s radicals trying to cope with the lifestyles of their three conservative offspring.

However, Gross believes there's more to the show than its role reversal pitting the parents' '60s idealism vs. the kids' '80s pragmatism.

"It shows an American family intact," says Gross. "Where the children do not have to be clones and the minority opinion can be expressed without the kids being sent upstairs with no dinner."

The series has not attempted to remain just a sitcom built on a string of one-liners or vignettes. Attention has been aimed to create a mixture of serious episodes, mixed with ones of frivolity, humor, warmth and satire. Although it has not met with overwhelming success in the ratings, NBC chief Grant Tinker has recently assured the half-hour show a full first-year run of 22 shows.

"We will get bigger ratings by not lining up on opposite sides of each issue each week," says Gross. "But instead of dealing with the domestic problems of the family."

"I knew there was quality in this product and with a good script I can be funny. But I'm not a Robin Williams — he's a creative artist and I'm an interpretive artist. My sense of humor is more eclectic and I didn't know how the show would be accepted. We talk so much about rating shares, I wonder what audience is really out there? It's a world where 'Three's Company' and 'Charlie's Angels' have flourished. There was some doubt we could survive."

"Great quality is not a precondition for success," says Gross. "The world is unfair and this business is more unfair than the world."

British has problems with American policy

LONDON (AP) — Here in Britain, where 16 U.S. cruise missiles are due to arrive in December, the course of American nuclear policy and the future of the NATO alliance are being put to the test in an increasingly nasty national election campaign.

Protesters are mobilizing to block the weapons, the vanguard of 572 missiles to be deployed in Europe by 1988 if U.S.-Soviet negotiations do not produce a treaty, and the country's strategic ties to the United States are under severe strain.

Even a clear victory for Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and her ruling Conservative Party June 9 could bring quiet pressure on President Reagan for further modifications of the U.S. stance in arms control talks with the Soviets.

Unlike America's more vocal partners, such as West Germany, the British have already played a subdued but significant role in persuading Reagan to shelve his "zero option" proposal and seek an agreement sharply reducing European missiles instead of eliminating them all at once.

For the most part, though, Mrs. Thatcher stands squarely for the eventual deployment of 160 cruise missiles on British soil by 1988 and the purchase of $10 billion worth of U.S. Trident D5 submarine-launched missiles over the next decade.

The alliance of Liberals and Social Democrats, which she might have to depend on to run Britain if the Conservatives do not win a majority, would make major revisions in Britain's defense policy.

And Labor, led by Michael Foot, a champion of unilateral disarmament, would stand current policy on its head.

Under the Conservatives, the British would maintain their four Polaris nuclear submarines with 64 A-3 missiles as an independent force — and resist Soviet efforts to count them along with the U.S. cruise and Pershing 2 missiles against the limits a U.S.-Soviet agreement would set.

Even if the Euromissile negotiations are merged with the Strategic Arms Reductions Talks (START), a re-elected Thatcher government would exclude the British Polaris submarines from the negotiations, but possibly reconsider if a substantial reduction of Soviet nuclear weapons were in the offing.

A Thatcher defeat, or even a narrow victory requiring the Conservatives to seek the cooperation of the alliance of Social Democrats and Liberals, could cause problems for the Reagan administration.

Interviewed in his home outside London, where he is fighting for political survival, John Cartwright, a prominent alliance member of parliament, defended Britain's retention of the Polaris submarines as an independent nuclear force.

"That's all we have ranged against strategic Soviet forces," he said. "They are for last-resort use."

But Cartwright, who is his country's co-representative to the North Atlantic Assembly, said the alliance would like to see the two sets of U.S.-Soviet talks merged and Polaris included in the bargaining.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — ABC for the second straight week won the television ratings, but CBS clung to a narrow lead in the May sweeps.

ABC took first place in the network standings in the A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings for the week ended May 22.

The top show of the week was NBC's "Motown: Yesterday, Today and Forever," a tribute to 25 years of music from Detroit.

ABC won with a rating of 15.4. CBS was second with 14.9 and NBC was third with 13.6.

The networks say this means that in an average prime time minute 15.4 percent of the country's TV homes were tuned to ABC.

Despite two victories by ABC and one by NBC, CBS held a narrow lead in the May sweeps in the Nielsen and Arbitron ratings. The sweeps are periods during which more comprehensive ratings are taken to determine the advertising rates for local stations. CBS has maintained a lead because of an advantage it has gained by the midweek start of the sweeps.

CBS' "One Day at a Time," in which Bonnie Franklin's character was married, came in 15th.

The show at the bottom of the ratings was NBC's news magazine "Monitor."

Here are the week's 10 top programs:

1. "Motown: Yesterday, Today and Forever," NBC, a rating of 22.8 representing 18.9 million homes.
2. "Alice," CBS, 21.0 or 17.4 million.
3. "Hollywood'd Private Home Movies," ABC, 20.7 or 17.2 million.
4. "Magnum, P.I.," CBS, 19.2 or 15.99 million.
5. "The Love Boat," ABC, 19.1 or 15.91 million.
6. "The A-Team," NBC, 18.8 or 15.6 million.

7. "60 Minutes," CBS, 18.5 or 15.4 million.

8. "The Jeffersons," CBS, 18.4 or 15.3 million.

9. "Trapper John, M.D.," CBS, 18.2 or 15.1 million.

10. "Hart to Hart," ABC, 17.4 or 14.4 million.

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

What is 'normal'?

DEAR DR. LAMB — What is considered a "normal" cholesterol count? Can a person have a cholesterol that is too low? My cholesterol count has been around 235 for a couple of years. Doctors tell me that is normal. But "friends" tell me it is high. Maybe they think it is higher than what I say because I weigh too much. I know a couple of people who are of normal weight who have much higher cholesterol levels than mine. I rarely eat meat, but I do eat eggs occasionally.

DEAR READER — Normal means different things. Unfortunately, it often means common or usual. I prefer "optimal," meaning the best. To avoid heart attacks and strokes, the best cholesterol level is the lowest level.

Your level is not exceptionally high. And it depends upon the method used by the laboratory that tested your blood. Many methods yield a result 10 to 15 percent higher than the results of methods used in important research studies, such as the Framingham study. Using the research methods (Abell-Kendall) it is usually said a person's cholesterol level should be under 220 (mg percent). People with cholesterol levels lower than this were not prone to fatty-cholesterol deposits.

Others have used a normal value of even 250 because it is usual or normal to find such values in the general population. But heart attacks and strokes are also usual and normal in the general population. Who wants to be normal in that sense?

There is no evidence that you can have a cholesterol level that is too low. Some diseases may cause a low cholesterol as part of their clinical picture but the disease is the bad feature — not the low cholesterol it causes. An example might be tuberculosis with accompanying weight loss and low cholesterol.

I am sending you The Health Letter 15-2, Understanding Your Cholesterol, Triglycerides and Other Blood Fats, for more details. Others can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

While being slightly overweight is often a major factor in causing a high cholesterol, there are thin people who have high levels and fairly obese people who have low levels. So we do blood tests to find out what the level really is.

MYSTERY BARRELS
Five of the barrels above contain cider and one contains vinegar. If two of the barrels containing cider total 33 gallons, and three of the remaining barrels total 66 gallons, which of the six barrels contains vinegar?
Hint: Once you've found the barrels involved in the first amount, finding the barrels involved in the second amount is simply a matter of elimination. Give it a try.

• Sum Fun! Think of a number. Add the next consecutive number. Add nine. Divide by two. Subtract the original number. Add six. Answer is below.
• Riddle-Me-This! How did the farmer transport his cows? In a moo-ving van. What did the grave robbers wear on their feet? Ghoul-ashes.

ON THE NOSE! Which one of four paths takes the ball to the nose of the trained seal above? We'll let you decide.
