Budget priorities may cause 3-way clash

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House, the Senate and the White House are heading for a three-way clash over budget priorities that could delay enactment of a spending bill needed by Wednesday to keep the government in operation.

Lawmakers are already discussing passage of a short-term bill to avert a government shutdown after the 1987 fiscal year begins on Wednesday. And Congress' hopes of adjourning as scheduled next Friday are fading fast.

The Senate Appropriations Committee on Friday by voice vote approved a $56 billion bill that Chairman Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., said would put Congress "on the road" to something acceptable to President Reagan.

Like the $562 billion House bill, which passed by just a single vote Thursday night, the Senate measure covers virtually every government department and agency activity for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

But the Senate bill, which could be brought up for full Senate debate beginning Monday, authorizes more spending for the military and less for domestic programs. It is more in keeping with administration priorities.

White House budget director James C. Miller III, in a letter to the committee Friday, called it "a marked improvement of the resolution that passed the House."

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said arms-control language in the House bill would tie Reagan's hands "at a very critical juncture in U.S.-Soviet relations."

The House would restrict the president's options a five major defense issues: the SALT II treaty, nuclear testing, the Strategic Defense Initiative, anti-satellite tests and chemical weapons.

The Senate bill did not contain those same restrictions as reported out of committee, but senators said dozens of amendments were expected on the Senate floor, including some that could face White House objections.

Many elements of the Senate package were already opposed by the White House.

Reagan's advisers have said that eight of the 13 appropriations bills being wrapped into the so-called "continuing resolution" were unacceptable, and would be vetoed if approved separately.

All but a few crucial government operations would be legally required to close down next Wednesday without legislation authorizing them to spend money.

Reagan has said he was ready to send federal workers home rather than sign an unacceptable bill. In a similar situation in 1981, he vetoed a continuing resolution and ordered the government shut down.

As a result, House and Senate leaders have already been discussing passage of a non-controversial, short-term continuing resolution next week to avoid a government crisis while the major package is worked out.

House Democratic leaders were also discussing a continuing resolution to carry the government into January, according to congressional sources. That strategy would give Democrats more power over the final version if their party took control of the Senate in the November elections.

Reagan faces uphill fight to sustain veto

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is offering to impose some new sanctions against the white-minority government of South Africa as he wages an uphill battle for support to kill harsher measures approved by Congress.

Reagan, announcing his veto Friday of the congressional package, said that "declaring economic warfare against the people of South Africa would be destructive not only of their efforts to peacefully end apartheid, but also of the opportunity replace it with a free society."

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., usually an ally of the president, immediately called on the Senate to override the veto, saying that a vote to sustain the president "would be seen as support for the South African government's policies."

And in that case, Lugar, who chairs the Foreign Relations Committee, said: "The United States would be seen as an apologist for apartheid" — the system of racial segregation under which South Africa's 24 million blacks are denied any voice in national affairs and the 5 million whites control the government and economy.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said, "It is sad that the president persists in locking himself into a failed and lonely policy that has put America on the side of racism in South Africa."

The Democratic-ruled House is considered sure to override the veto, probably early next week. That would put the fate of the legislation in the hands of the Republican-controlled Senate.

The administration conceded Reagan does not have enough votes now to be sustained but insisted there is still a chance he will win.

Plant workers receive burns during leak

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Three people remained in critical condition after an ammonia leak turned to gas and spread toxic fumes through an oil processing plant, sending 11 people for medical treatment, officials said.

Authorities said the victims received respiratory burns during the 11 a.m. leak at Bunge Edible Oil Corp Friday. The injured were taken to four Fort Worth hospitals.

"I work in the office on the third floor," Debra Waldrop, 32, said.

"There were some construction workers from outside the company working. They hit and broke a valve ... and ammonia came out and we got the heck out of there."

An employee was working on a 1-inch ammonia line with a pipe wrench when an attached half-inch line suddenly snapped sending fumes to a nearby break room, said District Fire Chief David Carr.

About 160 people work at the plant, which produces baking shortening, frying fats and margarine. The plant was evacuated, but most who were overcome by fumes, "were trapped before they knew it," Carr said.

The ammonia odor spread several blocks from the plant and winds blew fumes over much of the Fort Worth Stockyards.

New rules effective this week

Two recently adopted city ordinances will be going into effect Wednesday.

They are the ordinance calling for those holding garage sales to purchase a permit, and fees to be assessed to out-of-town residents and businesses using the city landfill.

The garage sale ordinance, which was passed in August, will call for a $5 fee for those wishing to hold a garage sale in the city limits.

The garage sale ordinance was passed because, according to commissioners, continual garage sales were causing a nuisance to citizens in residential areas in the city. According to the ordinance, the sales were causing congestion to streets in residential areas.

To have a garage sale, residents now must go to the city inspection office and fill out an application for a permit. The permit costs $5. Applicants must be able to provide ample identification.

Applicants will then be given a permit that must be displayed so it can be seen from the street.

The landfill ordinance, which will also be going into effect this Wednesday, calls for a fee to out-of-town residents using the landfill. Business located either in Hereford or outside of the town also will be charged. The fee will be $5 per pick-up load, and 50 cents per foot for trucks larger than a standard pick up if the garbage is uncompressed. If the load is compressed, it will cost $1 per cubic yard.

LSC calls for defunding of migrant legal program

Legal Services Corporation has called for a defunding of the Migrant Legal Action Program due to misuse of the entity's $3 million in grant money received from 1980 through 1985.

A spokesman from Rep. Larry Combest's office said Friday that LSC has mailed a letter to David Hall, the chairman of the board of the MLAP. Hall also is director of the Texas Rural Legal Aid.

LSC said in the letter that the MLAP had failed to meet stewardship standards of the grant.

Examples of that failure included diverting "tens of thousands of dollars in grant funds to pay expenses incurred by its former director — expenses which were personal, not adequately documented or otherwise improper charges to the LSC grant."

Those included cash payments to the former executive director, Steven Nagler, and other "financial abuse" involving seven other employees, one of which remains employed by the MLAP.

Nagler agreed to a settlement over the expenses, but the amount was a "mere fraction of what had been misappropriated."

MLAP will be allowed a hearing within 30 days.

Targets cocaine pipeline to U.S. cut by authorities

MIAMI (AP) — The nation's largest cocaine-trafficking pipeline has been cut with the indictment of 23 airline employees, but a federal official said he doubts the arrests would have much impact on stopping the flow of drugs.

Up to $1 billion in Colombian cocaine is believed to have moved through Miami International Airport during the past four years with the help of 22 Eastern Airlines employees and one Mexicana Airlines worker, U.S. Attorney Leon Kellner said.

The 23 were indicted Friday on 45 counts. All were indicted on conspiracy to import, and possession with intent to distribute cocaine. The five alleged ringleaders also were indicted on charges of operating a continuing criminal enterprise, which carries a maximum life prison sentence.

Eleven of the suspects were arrested Friday, and two already were in custody, Kellner said. A hearing was set for Monday before a federal magistrate in Miami. The other suspects are being sought.

Kellner said he didn't think the arrests would have any impact on the flow of drugs into this country.

"Drug traffickers are becoming very versatile," he said. "It's a very lucrative, illegal enterprise. That makes it that much more difficult to eradicate."

Baggage handlers in Colombia put cocaine-filled suitcases in bags on jetliners bound for Miami and the luggage was unloaded after passenger bags were removed, authorities said.

"There are millionaires on that ramp who make $25,000 a year," said Billy Yout, a spokesman for the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration in Miami.

The amount of cocaine allegedly handled by those indicted represents more than 25 percent of all the cocaine believed smuggled into this country during the period it operated, according to federal statistics.

"We're putting a conservative figure of 60,000 pounds going back a year and a half, which makes it the largest domestic route in our history for supplying cocaine," said Yout.

The shipments occurred from about June 1982 until Aug. 24, 1985, when authorities seized an 828-pound shipment, Kellner said. Cocaine smuggling is known to have taken place on at least 19 flights and involved about 150 people here and abroad, he said.

Kellner did not account for the time between August 1985 and Friday.

Details of the operation were gathered by undercover DEA agents, he said.

A spokesman for Miami-based

Eastern said those indicted would be terminated and that 50 other ramp and airport service workers at Miami airport would be fired because of infractions of company rules on drugs.

The spokesman asked not to be identified because of "personal security concerns."

The cocaine was shipped through Miami on flights from Cali, Bogota and Barranquilla as often as twice a day, Yout said.

"Everything they did was a common occurrence," Yout said. "That's what made it work so well."

The passengers and regular luggage would be unloaded at the international concourse. Then the plane would be towed to the domestic concourse where baggage handlers were waiting to take off the bags as supervisors kept watch, authorities said.

Word of the investigation was leaked Feb. 11 when DEA Administrator John C. Lawn told reporters in San Jose, Calif., that dozens of employees of "a major airline" faced indictment in connection with cocaine trafficking from Colombia.

Yout said the leak did not hurt the investigation.

The five people named as organizers of the ring were identified as Ruy Martinez, Angel Borrero-Padilla, Gary Dukes, Alberto Perez, all current or former Eastern workers, and Francisco Basquez, the Mexicana employee.

Split looms in Lutheran church

NEW YORK (AP) — Even as three conventions representing 5.3 million Lutherans were meeting to forge a new church, a splinter group was laying plans to go its separate way.

A group of conservative pastors and laity, unhappy with aspects of the proposed Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, said if the merger goes through they will set up a rival denomination.

No one knows how many congregations will affiliate with the splinter group, to be known as the Association of American Lutheran Churches. But even the suggestion of a schism caused pain for Lutheran leaders.

"I think it will be tragic if it happens," said Bishop David W. Preus of the American Lutheran Church. "It is a pattern that has occurred in the past, and it does not need to be repeated."

In fact, the history of American's Lutherans has been a centuries-long series of combinations and breakups. Most recently, the Association of Evangelical Lutheran Churches broke off from the conservative Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod 10 years ago in a dispute over church teachings.

The AELC, from the start, had as its chief aim a merger with larger, centrist Lutheran bodies. Their argument was simple: there were little or no doctrinal differences among the churches, and by uniting they could present a single force for evangelism and other efforts.

After years of negotiations, that union appears to be certain; the AELC, the ALC and the Lutheran Church in America held simultaneous conventions last month, where they approved the merger by near-unanimous margins.

But at the same time, ALC pastors and laity from California, Illinois, Iowa, Oklahoma, Minnesota and North and South Dakota met quietly in St. Paul, Minn., to discuss their options. A merger with the Missouri Synod was considered, but in the end they decided to form their own alter-

Than ancient rules in cotton fields

High-tech farming system sharper

WASHINGTON (AP) — A sophisticated, high-tech farming system being tested in Southern cotton fields could wipe away ancient but inaccurate rules of thumb followed by growers.

Solar and battery-powered weather stations in farmers' fields are linked by telephone to computers that answer questions ranging from how much nitrogen to add to the soil to when to harvest the crop.

The system made a believer of cotton farmer Frank M. Mitchener of Sumner, Miss., in 1984 when it told him to spray the cotton plants he grows on several thousand acres on Sept. 1 and start the harvest soon thereafter.

Mitchener was a scoffer. He held to the longstanding adage that the spraying and harvest should begin when the farmer counts 60 percent of the bolls, the fruit containing the seeds and lint, to have cracked open.

Scientists say a cotton crop is ready for harvest two to three weeks before 60 percent of the bolls crack open.

But most farmers hold to the old rule, and Mitchener was looking forward to a vacation in the first two weeks of September.

He started spraying on Sept. 21 and began to bring in the crop 10 days later.

But fall rains began to lash his fields on Oct. 6 with only 675 acres harvested.

"Twenty inches of rain fell in October with little cotton harvested again until November," Mitchener is quoted as saying in the current issue of the government magazine Agricultural Research. "Had I listened to the computer and started on Sept. 1, I could have begun harvesting on Sept. 13 and been finished before Oct. 6."

"Normally, I harvested 1,100 pounds an acre of good quality cotton. As it turned out, I lost about 200 pounds an acre and probably 12 cents a pound in quality."

The system contains a computerized model of cotton plant life called Gossym, a combination of the words "simulation" and "Gossypium," the genus of which cotton is a member.

Gossym's understanding of cotton plants comes from data collected since 1974 by containers wired to computers in research buildings. The model was constructed by a research team of seven scientists and three engineers working in cooperation with Clemson and Mississippi State Universities as well as Hebrew University in Israel.

Confined to two farmers when the test began in 1984 — Mitchener and South Carolina cotton grower Sam McCoy — the experiment has been expanded to take in 20 farms. Its developers believe that in the future many more farmers may use such computers, sometimes sharing one located at a nearby cotton gin.

Recently, one of the researchers, Hal E. Lemmon, has developed a program that can take the place of scientists in operating Gossym and interpreting the barrage of numbers it spews out.

The program is called Comax, short for Cotton Management Expert.

While the program was written on a $120,000 Symbolics 3670 computer, it can be stored on a diskette and used in a personal computer.

And as for Mitchener, the computer told him last year that unless he added nitrogen in July his plants would go into nitrogen stress in August.

He added the nitrogen but cut the amount from the 30 pounds per acre recommended to the computer to 20 pounds per acre.

In a test plot, he added 30 pounds per acre to eight rows and left eight other rows unfertilized. The fertilized rows yielded $60 more in cotton per acre than those without nitrogen.

And yet, while the computer may well have been right that the best amount of nitrogen to apply was 30 pounds per acre, observers of the experiment believe that the added cost may not have justified the additional 10 pounds.

Medical fund established

A medical fund for Richard Waters, a former Hereford resident, has been established at First National Bank, Hereford State Bank and Security Federal Savings & Loan. The fund will help the family defer medical costs for treatment of a rare form of cancer.

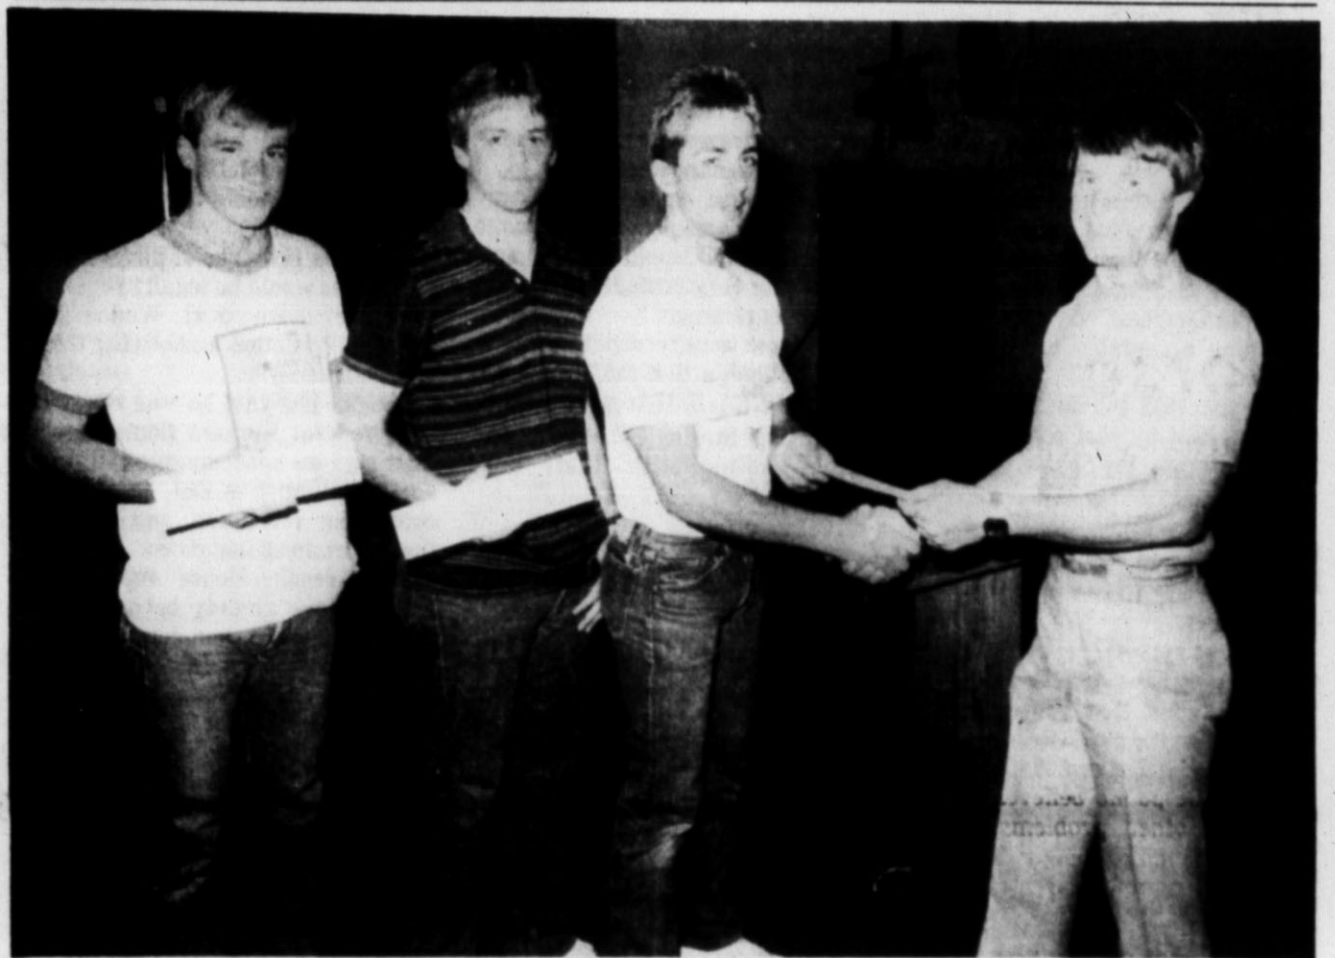

Waters, a 1978 Hereford High graduate, will be going to Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., at the end of October for treatment.

Waters is currently a trooper with the Texas Department of Public Safety in Amarillo.

Chemical People to meet

The Chemical People will meet at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the lounge of the Hereford Community Center to discuss the county health fair and make plans for a drug prevention program. Any person interested in the local drug problem is urged to attend, said spokesman Lupe Chavez.

By community service founder

Military families helped

FORT BLISS, Texas (AP) — An Army "mother" who never had children has watched her growing "baby" help millions of military families throughout the world.

Marie Baird, a retired lieutenant colonel at Fort Bliss, is known throughout the Army as "the mother of Army Community Service," a program she developed to help Army families deal with the special problems and challenges of military life.

Taking care of children, teaching a young family how to manage money, advising on how to cope when a soldier is away, or just lending some pots and pans until a new family on post can get its own: These are just a few of the things community service does, Ms. Baird said.

Ms. Baird, a Kansas native who calls San Antonio her real home, was a pioneer woman in a male-dominated Army that finally saw her family-oriented ideas embraced by top Pentagon brass.

Today, Army Community Service organizations — a name she coined during two years of developing the concept from 1963 to 1965 — are on every U.S. Army post in the world, she said.

At Fort Bliss, she's treasurer of the Army Community Service Volunteer Association.

In 1963, she was assigned to the deputy chief of staff for personnel at the Pentagon, where she developed the family-service program for the Army.

"The idea wasn't new," she said, "but nothing formal had been done."

Her military career began with helping fellow soldiers when she was a young lieutenant assigned to Army Emergency Relief in New York City during World War II.

She had brought with her an education far above that of the typical lieutenant of her day, either male or female.

After graduating from Loyola University in New Orleans and earning a master's degree in sociology from the University of Virginia, she wanted to serve her country in some way.

"I believe in all that business about duty, honor, country. That's my cup of tea," she said.

Ms. Baird's job was to see that the overseas soldiers' families got the money and assistance they needed.

"We'd also track down the soldiers overseas when their families hadn't heard from them in months. And we had maternity assistance, legal affairs, even layettes for the young mothers."

The real needs of young families under stress taught her a lot, she said. "I thought I was so sophisticated, but I found out I was a naive child when I encountered problems like illegitimate births."

But the war ended and she left the Army. In 1946 she married the man she called "the best friend I ever had. He liked whatever I did. He said the Army women were the greatest."

Uncle Sam wasn't through with her after the war, however. She was called back to active duty for the Korean War in 1951, despite being married. She stayed in the Army 17 more years.

Despite her Army career and her husband's traveling business status, which kept the couple from seeing each other much, their relationship thrived.

"It was a beautiful marriage," she said. "We managed to live together for a few years before he died." His death came just two weeks after her retirement.

The marriage helped her understand the problems military families can face.

But she had the satisfaction of founding the system that now helps Army families around the world.

Children's problems worse than in past

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly three out of four adult Americans think problems affecting children are worse than when they themselves were growing up, according to a Louis Harris survey released this week.

The first national survey of public attitudes toward the problems of children found that drug abuse is perceived as the most serious. At the same time, it showed the vast majority of the public believes a wide range of other problems facing children, including hunger, kidnapping, sexual assault, parental abuse, suicide and prostitution, have increased in recent years.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., said the survey demonstrates that "The United States in the 1980s may be the first society in history in which children are distinctly worse off than adults."

The Harris survey, commissioned by the Westinghouse Broadcasting Co., found that less than half of the public believes that most American children are basically happy (48 percent), or get a good education (40 percent), or live in a safe neighborhood (36 percent).

The body of former Italian Premier Aldo Moro was found May 9, 1978, in a car parked in Rome — 54 days after his abduction by Red Brigades terrorists.

Ann Landers Daughter is spoiled

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Several years ago our daughter went away to college. We have not seen her since. Every time we sent "Louise" plane fare she kept the money but never came home. When we asked her why she didn't acknowledge our gifts, she said, "They weren't worth acknowledging." Finally she sent us a letter listing 20 childhood grievances in which she accused us of being responsible for all of her problems and declared herself "free and independent of us for all time."

We thought if we let her alone and gave her the "space" she requested, she would come home on her own volition. Instead, she continued to ignore us and moved in with her boyfriend.

Although we received no further communications, when she graduated from college we scraped together $5,000 and paid off her college loan. Again she did not say, "Thank you."

Recently, out of the blue, we received a cold formal letter saying she was getting married and that she would understand if we could not attend the wedding. We immediately responded saying we would be delighted to come. She then sent a second letter saying she thought we should know there would be several people in attendance who disliked us intensely. We replied that we would come anyway, but would feel more comfortable if we could meet the groom before the wedding. (The only thing we know about him is his first name and his occupation.) Her third letter stated that she and her fiance simply couldn't find time to see us.

My husband says it is obvious that Louise did not expect us to accept the wedding invitation and that we would be crazy to go where we aren't wanted. I think we should swallow our pride, go, and try to make the best of it. What do you think? The wedding is scheduled for January. Please, no city, no state. Sign me-Despondent

DEAR D.: I believe you and your husband would be setting yourselves up for a great deal of heartache if you attended the wedding. It is obvious that your daughter is spoiled, angry and behaving like a spoiled brat. You have perpetuated her abusive behavior by allowing her to step all over you.

Write and say you have decided not to attend the wedding. Send a modest gift. Meanwhile, make no further attempts to contact her. Pray the girl comes to her senses and offers her hand in friendship.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My wife and I have had a long-standing disagreement. When our theater seats are in the middle of an otherwise full row, how should we proceed? Is it proper to face the people we are passing or should we proceed with our backs to those in the same row?

My wife says we should face the people because it would be impolite to butt them with our rear ends. I say that it is more genteel to pass facing the stage or screen. What is the correct procedure?—Anatomically Aware in Mexico City

DEAR AWARE: It is better to pass facing the stage or screen than to stare eyeball to eyeball and possibly bump front-wise into the standing patrons. Always apologize for the inconvenience and try for a minimum of body contact.

What kind of wedding goes with today's new life styles? Does anything go? Ann Landers' "New Brid's Guide" tells what's right for today's weddings. For a copy, send $2.00, plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (39 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

The United Way

The Deaf Smith County United Way is in the middle of its annual campaign, shooting for a $110,000 goal this year to help fund 10 worthwhile community agencies.

Enthusiastic and concerned citizens have vowed to go over the goal this year—something that has not been accomplished in many years. For some unexplained reason, citizens seem to be over-generous in other charitable drives while not giving full support to a broad range of programs and services here in their own community.

To those of us in the community who are called on, year after year, to help solicit pledges for worthwhile projects, the United Way makes a lot of sense. For one thing, we can make one call for what could be 10 different drives. Too, United Way ranks among the most efficient of all charitable drives because of volunteers. If each of the 10 agencies supported by United Way were to raise money entirely on its own, the fund-raising costs would be significantly higher.

So, our plea to citizens of the community is to help us keep the flexible system of United Way. Remember, please, that the volunteer who calls on you is giving of his or her time to help solve community problems. They are not paid workers; their time is valuable, too.

Help the volunteer get his job done. If the firm is a large one with many cards to work, let the worker know when the packet is ready. Please don't make him return week after week. If you don't want to give, let him know. Treat him as you'd be expected to be treated if you were doing the job.

This is the year to turn the United Way campaign into a successful community program. Thanks to YOU, it can work for all of us!

Churches need tax exemption

The American Atheists organization is preaching that the pulpits are ripe for the picking as a means of solving the state's budget woes.

The group espouses that churches statewide have had a tax-exempt ride for far too long and claims that by imposing some taxes on religious organizations and their property holdings, nearly $2 billion could be pushed into the Texas treasury.

Specifically, the atheist group has proposed the Texas Legislature tax churches by dropping exemptions on land holdings; taxing income from bingo games; drop tax funding for all religious institutions; and tax all stock and bond portfolios of religious entities.

Church and state long have been separated in our country by design and reason. We are guaranteed freedom of religion, meaning we can practice the faith of our choice or none at all if that is what we choose to do.

By putting lawmakers in the position of demanding money from churches, the state indirectly begins to wield some measure of control on our individual religious choice.

And that is where we draw the line.

Trading away little pieces of ourselves

By ARNOLD ROSENFELD

Austin American-Statesman

AUSTIN (AP) — Our next-door neighbor, Gene Shier, put up a For Sale sign in front of his house a couple of months ago, and we were sorry to see it. The house was getting a bit big for Gene. We didn't want to wish him any bad luck, but we didn't feel all that awful when we heard, as the weeks passed, that Gene hadn't gotten any heavy-duty bites on the house. We thought it might change his mind. We hated to lose Gene from the neighborhood. Good neighbors are very precious things.

Then, just all of a sudden, Gene told us the house had been sold, and he'd be moving out on us. Time, as a matter of fact, was short. Gene won't be moving from Austin, which is good for all of us. The new neighbors move in tomorrow. So, quicker than you could bat an eye, it's farewell and hail.

All of this change and loss was reduced to a big garage sale next door at Gene's house last weekend. Gene, his family and his friends put a lot of stuff out on Friday night in the garage and on the driveway. Every now and then you could see Gene walking around, wondering where he'd gotten quite all this much stuff in the first place. He was practically giving things away by late Sunday afternoon.

They all wore themselves out over the weekend until Sunday night when it was over, and we crossed the lawn to help put the scraps out for the garbage truck Monday morning. We carried a couple of bulky trash bags back over to our driveway so it wouldn't look like too much of a load from any one house. I think the garbage people caught on, anyhow.

We got a preview before crowds of garage sale addicts hit Gene's driveway early Saturday morning. We bought a kitchen table and four chairs, a set of really nice dishes and some straw placemats and matching napkins. You should have been there. Gene made some excellent deals. We carried a dog house and a brass bedstead over on Saturday, but they didn't sell. We hauled them back Sunday night. The current Mrs. Rosenfeld has never understood that garage sales are mostly about socializing and getting rid of and getting things, not making money.

Our dog, George, had a wonderful weekend, too, barking at just about everyone who visited the garage sale at Gene's. George was feeling poorly a couple of months ago, and we thought we were going to lose him. He's a lot better now, thank you, and it is a pleasure to hear him misbehaving again. He thinks he owns the street, that dog.

I think we had caught a bit of garage sale fever by Sunday afternoon. Not satisfied with guiltily plundering Gene's home, we looked in the newspaper to see what other garage sales had been advertised in our neighborhood, then set off in the car. We went to three. The first two had been fairly well picked over by

The Penultimate Word

LET'S HEAR IT FOR THE SHY FOLKS

This world is especially hard on people who happen to be shy. They will hear "What's the matter, cat got your tongue?" until they want to die. Everything seems to go to the loud. The only successful people are the extroverts of the world. Pity the quiet. They have no chance at all. They are often misjudged as snobs because they do not talk. They are made to feel like second class citizens. They will be under pressure all the days of their lives because of this horrible flaw.

The result of all of this pressure is a whole generation of shy folks who feel inferior to the rest of the world. We cannot know how many problems are caused by this feeling of inferiority. I have a friend with a drinking problem. He does not drink because he likes the stuff. He does not drink because he is addicted. He drinks because he is convinced he has no personality unless he has a few drinks under his belt. He has always been a fairly nonverbal person. He does not make small talk very well. He has never felt comfortable about his inability to do so. The result is a dependence on alcohol to provide a personality. That may be worse dependence than physical addiction.

I read an account of a young girl who maintained high marks in school while living with a deep addiction to drugs. When she was discovered she related her story. She began to drink and then take drugs because she was shy and could not be bold in company. When she was high she could talk as well as the other kids. At least she thought she could do so. Of course the pressure was on her to talk. No one can be shy and still be popular in our society.

Somehow we have the idea that all shy people are losers. If we are to succeed we must be loud or learn to act loud, so we go around putting on a loud front. We are the life of the party, no matter the cost. That is not hard for some folks who were born talking and never grew up. It is very hard for those who by their very nature are quiet. Maybe it is time for someone to say "Hooray" for the quiet folks of this world. Without them the world would never think. Without them we would never get beyond the party stage of life. Without them no one would ever listen.

The loud may be fine at a party, but if I have a problem give me a quiet person. They will listen. The loud may be more popular in school, but ten years down the road they will be wearing out shoe leather on the road selling while the quiet person will be in the office running the company. The loud folks have the attention but it is the quiet ones who make the most difference in this world. How many great poets have been loud? How many of the great scientists have been extroverts? The only thing loud is better at is politics and, boy, I wish we could find some quiet politicians.

So my friend, if you are shy, if you are not the best at small talk, if you feel completely out of place at a party, if you had rather be shot between the eyes with a dull bullet than to have to get up in front of people and make a talk, don't get drunk. Get proud. The world needs more just like you.

Warm Fuzzies,
Doug Manning

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnsongrass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek looks at government secrets this week, without revealing any.

Dear editor:
According to a newspaper article I read the other day while waiting for the TV evening news to be over, there are at least a million government workers who have access to secret, sensitive information. This puts a new light on the problem of keeping foreign spies from finding out what we're up to. A million? Why in most towns if just two people know a secret it won't be more than half a day before the whole town knows it. Makes no difference if the secret is true or not.

Keeping a million people from telling what they know would require the restructuring of human nature. It'd be as hard a job as keeping some busy-bodies from telling what they think they know. Wit is not the spice of life, gossip is.
Keeping secret an important secret for any length of time is a near-impossible undertaking. For example, we tried to keep the secret of the atom bomb from falling into the hands of other countries, but nowadays a bright college student failing football but passing chemistry and physics can tell you how to make one. Keeping the process secret is like trying to hide the secret of the bicycle.
Now there are some secrets, like communication codes beamed to submarines at sea, that certainly need protecting, and anybody who'd reveal them ought to be shot at sunrise, if you need to wait that long.

But in a nuclear war, the targets are going to be the cities, and everybody knows where they are. Oh, there may be one of two nobody has ever heard of because they don't have an active chamber of commerce, but most likely they aren't bomb-worthy anyway.
The big secret in the world today is not where the nuclear bombs are going to fall. The secret is how to keep them from being fired in the first place. Anybody who knows is free to let that cat out of the bag.
Yours faithfully,
J.A.

Homework prohibited

Recently Angel, my wife, and I attended a charity affair—I will purposely be vague about where, to keep the place from being raided—

We attended a charity function, one feature of which was a gift shop. The gifts included handmade Christmas decorations, homemade knitwear, handmade jewelry...

These were things which volunteers had made and donated, the profits from their sale to go to the sponsoring charity.

Legally, they can't do that! The Fair Labor Standards Act strictly prohibits "homework"!

For Americans to work at home is a tradition as old as our country. Every President since Madison has worked at home.

But labor unions, starting in 1938, sought and got laws prohibiting the manufacture of "homemade" things—and it is still against the law for you to manufacture for sale women's apparel, jewelry, gloves and mittens, buttons and buckles, handkerchiefs and embroidery.

The law specifies "women's" apparel. Technically, a family of knitters in Vermont can hand-loom cardigans that button from left to right—but they may not knit cardigans that button from right to left.

Labor Secretary William Brock is trying to change the absurd law but he needs your help.

Before recommending his rules change to the Congress, he is allowing 60 days for you to react and respond.

Here is what Secretary Brock proposes: Employers in the industries I've listed could work out of their homes. First, however, they would have to register with the Department of Labor, thus to insure that any employees would be properly paid.

Presumably that means anybody working in your home would have to receive the minimum wage and any appropriate overtime.

This question affects the lives and livelihoods of tens of thousands of American families.

You may recall having heard that the antiquated laws relating to homework were abolished years ago. That is so.

The Labor Department lifted restrictions on homework in 1961. But since then, the Garmen Workers Union sued to overturn that rule and got a court order to do so in May of 1964.

Now the Department of Labor will try again to lift homework restrictions. Your support will be required. Your response should be addressed to:

... "THE UNSUNG HEROES"

The Pilot Club of Hereford and the Community of Hereford Give Special Tribute to all Hereford Law Enforcement Officers For The Many Thankless Tasks You Perform Each Day!

THE BACKGROUND OF THIS SUPPORT

As part of Pilot Club International's designation of September as Safety Month, the Hereford Pilot Club enlisted the support of local merchants and individuals through an "Adopt A Cop" Campaign. Eventhough the campaign represented a first-year effort, it nevertheless was still considered to have been a big success by the Hereford Pilot Club. The merchants and individuals showing support of this year's "Adopt A Cop Program" are listed at right with the officers they have adopted.

Third time in four games keeping opponents scoreless

Whitefaces score 35-0 win over Frenship

By GARY CHRISTENSEN
Sports Editor

For the third time in four games this season, the Hereford Whiteface varsity football team recorded a shutout; on Friday night it was Hereford 35, Frenship 0.

Three fumbles lost by Frenship in the first half, and also two roughing the kicker penalties against Frenship in that half, were the major factors in Hereford building up a 28-0 halftime lead.

The Herd has won all three of its games at Whiteface Stadium by shutout, but Frenship blew at least two golden opportunities to score.

As a result of the shutout victory, Hereford is 2-0 in District 1-4A games, while Frenship drops to 0-2.

Hereford had the ball first, received the opening kickoff and putting together a 53-yard scoring drive.

Marcus Brown returned the kickoff 37 yards. The Whitefaces needed nine plays to move into the end zone, with Vincent Brown carrying the last seven yards with 7:39 left in the first quarter.

Mark Artho, who kicked extra points after all five Hereford touchdowns Friday, gained 25 yards in three carries in that first touchdown drive. Marcus Brown carried three times for 13 yards.

Frenship began its first possession at its own 29. A big 53-yard pass reception, in a second and 14 play, gave the Tigers a first down at the HHS 23-yard line.

Four plays later, quarterback

Tuan Lee rushed eight yards for a touchdown, but it was nullified by an illegal procedure penalty.

After an incomplete pass in the next play, Lee made a bad pitchout to tailback Mario Gomez, who fumbles the ball. Derrell Page of Hereford recovered the ball at the 17-yard line with 4:38 left in the first quarter.

Hereford failed to get a first down in three plays, and was forced to punt. But the possession continued because of the first of the two roughing the kicker penalties against Frenship in the half.

The penalty gave Hereford a first down at its own 37. Todd Shire completed a 38-yard pass to Bobby Baker to help boost the Herd on its way to its second touchdown.

Casey Daniel, a Whiteface tight end, caught a 13-yard pass from Shire for the touchdown with 1:59 left in the first period.

The Tigers had the ball for six plays in its next possession before they had to punt.

The Frenship defense, for the second time in a row, forced Hereford to punt. And the same thing happened as the last time in the punting play—the Tigers were called for roughing Baker, the HHS punter.

Baker's punt, which will not go into his season statistics since the Whitefaces obviously accepted such a penalty, was a 68-yarder—from the Hereford 30 to the Frenship two-yard line.

This roughing the kicker penalty gave the Whitefaces a first down at their own 45. Hereford, however, failed to get a first down, and still had to punt.

Frenship's Gomez lost another fumble in the next play of the game, and Ricky Ruiz of Hereford recovered it at the Frenship 42.

Hereford capitalized on the turnover, scoring with 4:56 left in the first half when Vincent Brown carried for a one-yard touchdown run.

Three big plays took place in this scoring march—a 31-yard pass from Shire to Chris Johnson, a 17-yard pass from Shire to Baker, and a 27-yard run by Artho.

Frenship was faced with a fourth down and less than a yard to go for a first down, at its own 37-yard line. The Tigers decided to go for the first down.

Tailback Gomez fumbled and lost the ball for the third time in the game. This time the ball was fumbled into the air, and Richard Castillo of Hereford returned the ball 12 yards to the Frenship 26-yard line.

Artho gained 22 yards in two carries, and then Bobby Medina carried four yards for a touchdown, with 2:47 left in the first half.

Herd defensive player Jimmie Hazzard thwarted Frenship of any possible first half scoring when he intercepted a pass at the Hereford 15 and returned it eight yards with 37 seconds left in the half.

Hereford had 204 yards total offense in the first half compared to 127 for Frenship. Hereford had 14 first downs and Frenship had five. The Tigers had four third down conversions in six attempts in the first half.

The contest became a defensive battle in the third quarter. Frenship, which received the second half kickoff, was faced with a third down and four in its first possession.

A quarterback keeper was called by Frenship. Herd linebacker Michael Phibbs stopped Lee for no gain.

Hereford was also forced to punt in its first possession of the second half.

Frenship moved from the 23-yard line to the 41 in its own territory. The Tigers then had a third down and five play. Bobby Medina of Hereford sacked the Frenship quarterback for a seven-yard loss with 4:50 left in the third quarter.

Frenship punted, but Hereford was called for roughing the kicker. The Tigers then drove to the Hereford 35-yard line, where Gomez was stopped for no gain in a third down play and a pass fell incomplete in the fourth down play.

The Whitefaces needed six plays to score. Vincent Brown rushed 22 yards for the touchdown, right after Medina had rushed for an 11-yard gain.

The touchdown and extra-point kick gave Hereford its final margin of 35-0. It was Brown's third touchdown of the game, giving him eight for the season.

The Herd defense continued to thwart the efforts of Tiger quarterback Tuan Lee. In a third and six play for the Tigers at their own 24, Richard Castillo tackled Lee before a pitchout could be made.

Another roughing the kicker penalty against Hereford gave Frenship new life. In six plays, the Tigers moved to the Hereford 39-yard line, where they were faced with a third down and three.

Frenship gained only two yards in that third down play. Then in the fourth and one play, Gomez broke loose before the Herd's Chris Bullard (See WHITEFACES, page 9A)

Touchdown!!!!!!

Casey Daniel (84), a tight end of the Hereford Whiteface varsity football team, catches a 13-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Todd Shire with 1:59 left in the first quarter Friday night. Daniel's touchdown was the second for the Herd in a 35-0 District 1-4A victory over the Frenship Tigers. Hereford is now 2-0 in the district and 4-0 for the season. (Brand photo by Shawn Cockrum)

Trying To Block The Punt

Kyle Streun (11) of the Hereford Whitefaces tries to block a punt by Derrick Dykes (80) of the Frenship Tigers Friday. There were four roughing the kicker penalties called in the game, two on each team. One of them, called on Hereford, was in a punting attempt in which Dykes would have had a punt for minus one yard, had there been no penalty. (Brand photo by Shawn Cockrum)

Redskins, Seahawks: battle of unbeatens

By DICK BRINSTER
 AP Sports Writer

Even if things go wrong for the Washington Redskins' offense, Sunday's meeting with the Seattle Seahawks could be a whole lot more interesting than 1-2-3 punt.

"We got a headache watching their special teams on film this week," Washington Coach Joe Gibbs said while preparing his 3-0 Redskins for the matchup of unbeaten NFL teams at RFK Stadium.

The headache must have been a dandy because the Seahawks converted two blocked punts into touchdowns in a 38-31 victory last week that knocked New England from the ranks of the unbeaten. And it was no fluke considering the record of Seattle's special teams.

Since 1984, they have blocked six field goals and nine punts leading to 10 touchdowns and two field goals.

But there's more to the Seahawks that fourth-down defensive efficiency.

"They're a much more balanced team than San Diego," said Gibbs, whose Redskins beat the Chargers 30-27 last week. "They run the football very well and they're one of the best defensive teams we'll play this year."

Just having a good defense isn't enough, however, Seattle Coach Chuck Knox insists.

"They've got a quarterback with a strong arm (Jay Schroeder), a power runner (George Rogers) and great speed at wide receiver (Art Monk, Gary Clark)," Knox explained. "I just hope we're in the right defense at the right time."

Four other 3-0 teams — the Chicago Bears, Denver Broncos, Atlanta Falcons and Los Angeles Rams — will try to retain that status in Week 4 of the NFL season. The defending Super Bowl champion Bears visit Cincinnati, the Broncos play host to New England, the Falcons travel to Tampa Bay and the Rams are at Philadelphia.

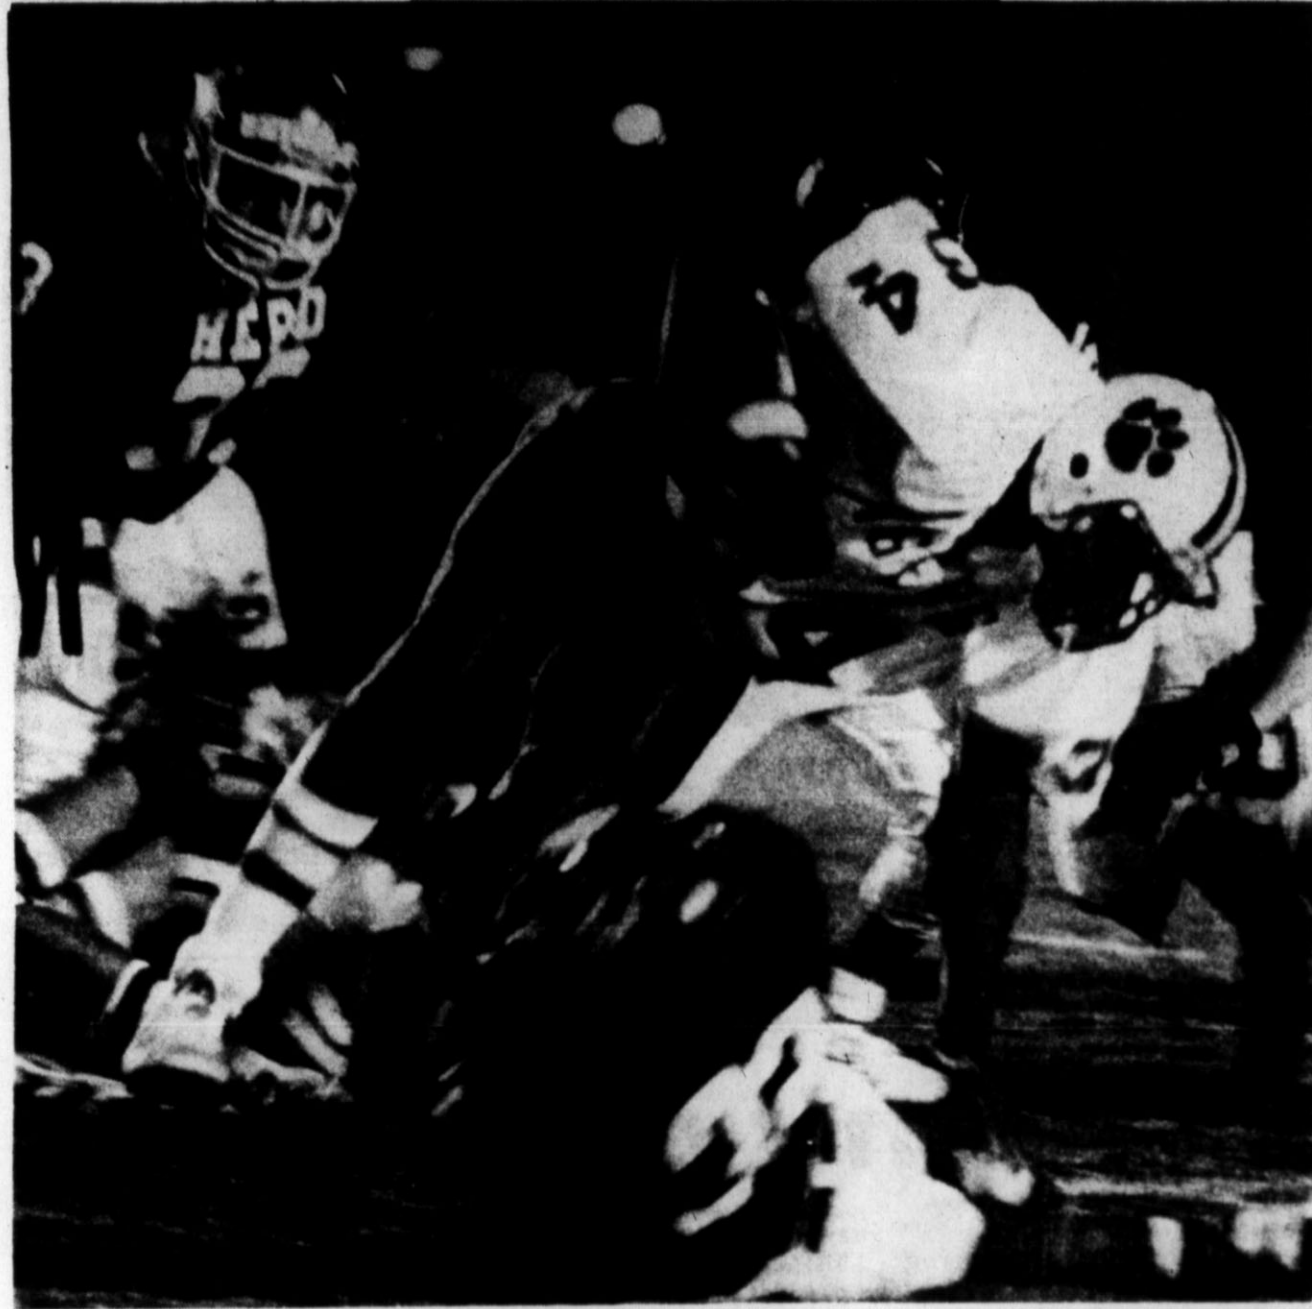

In other games Sunday, it will be Kansas City at Buffalo, the New York Jets at Indianapolis, Pittsburgh at Houston, San Diego at the Los Angeles Raiders, Green Bay at Minnesota, New Orleans at the New York Giants, Detroit at Cleveland and San Francisco at Miami. On Monday night, Dallas visits St. Louis.

Eagles are still looking for their first victory ever under new Coach Buddy Ryan.

Surprising Atlanta, off to its best start since 1981, needs to beat the 1-2 Bucs to remain tied with the Rams for the lead in the NFC West. The Falcons, with quarterback David Archer improving each week, are coming off a 37-35 upset of Dallas.

In addition to Philadelphia; Indianapolis, Pittsburgh and Green Bay, the Raiders and St. Louis also are looking to win for the first time.

THE "LONG TEAM"

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Coach Don Nelson of the Milwaukee Bucks has a unique description for the front line of the NBA champion Boston Celtics.

"They're a long team," Nelson said. He was referring to the four tallest men on the team and didn't even mention superstar Larry Bird, who is 6-8. Nelson was referring to Robert Parish, who is 7 feet; Greg Kite, 6-11; Bill Walton, 6-11; and Kevin McHale, 6-10.

"If Manute Bol of Washington is a 10, the Celtics have a bunch of 9's," Nelson concluded.

BALD HEAD HELPS

BOSTON (AP) — Attention, if you swim a shaved head will enable you to go faster.

That's the word from Gillette Razor Co., which insists that competitive swimmers who shave their heads cut fractions of seconds off their times.

A triple gold medalist for the United States in swimming in the 1976 Olympics, Jim Montgomery, agrees. "Shaving your head before a race gives swimmers a psychological boost and makes them feel 20 pounds lighter."

Dolphins' defense said to be 'high schoolish'

By JOEY HOLLEMAN
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — The adjective "high schoolish" was thrown out by a coach and a player in describing the once proud Miami Dolphins defense.

Another member of that shell-shocked corps was kinder, comparing the way he and his cohorts are playing to his earlier stint with a first-year professional expansion team.

The Dolphins have given up 111 points and 444.7 yards per game in their first three games. In 1973, by contrast, the Dolphins gave up only 150 points the entire season.

With a 50-28 loss to San Diego and a 51-45 overtime loss to the New York Jets, Miami is the first team to give up 50 points in more than one game in a season since the 1967 Denver Broncos. The Dolphins now have 13 games to establish a league record of three 30-point debacles.

The 1-2 start — Miami beat the Indianapolis Colts 30-10 between the two losses — is the worst since Don Shula took over as coach in 1970.

Amid the desolation, there is hope. "This will be a great, great story when we bounce back and do a great job from here on out," fifth-year cornerback William Judson said. "And I think it will happen."

"We lost our composure against the Jets and against San Diego," Judson said.

"When you do all that you can do, you're going to get beat some time."

But when you make a mental error and let a guy go down the field on you, you feel stupid. That's high schoolish."

He said the Dolphins need to concentrate on the positive, and look at films of past games when they have played well.

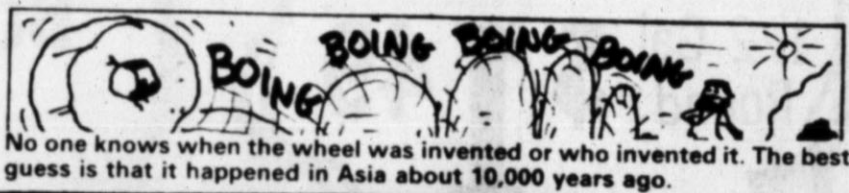

Veteran safety Lyle Blackwood also is preaching the power of positive thinking. But he admits it's hard to be positive after giving up 1,081 yards in two games.

"The only situation similar to this for me was at Seattle when it was an expansion team," said Blackwood, a 14-year veteran playing with his fourth NFL team.

The Dolphins were a defensive powerhouse as recently as 1982, when they were ranked No. 1 in the league. But defensive coordinator Bill Arnsparger and linebacker A.J. Duhe, the brains and heart behind that defense, aren't around anymore, and neither are several other key players.

The defensive backfield should improve when veteran Glenn Blackwood and speedy newcomer Donovan Rose come off the injured reserve list next month, but the linebacking corps was devastated last Sunday when Hugh Green suffered a broken kneecap.

"Everybody is so down defensively," Shula said. "We need a spark, we need a lift. Losing Green just compounds what has to get done."

No one knows when the wheel was invented or who invented it. The best guess is that it happened in Asia about 10,000 years ago.

PERSONAL SHOPPERS

NEW YORK (AP) — Today's working woman often has little time to shop for a wardrobe, so many top department stores are providing "personal shoppers" to take over the chore.

The personal shopper, says Family Circle magazine, is becoming an important merchandising tool and a time-saver for the woman on the run.

In-store personal shoppers will show you the latest styles, and the best way to accessorize and update the clothes you already own. This service is generally free. Some stores have a computerized system that records your sizes, best colors and other information pertinent to your style.

After your first in-person consultation, you can phone in for clothes and accessories.

Local boy's death caused by cocaine

The August death of a 9-year-old Hereford boy was caused by a reaction to cocaine, according to a pathology report received by the county on Friday.

Although the amount of cocaine found in the body of Manuel Saucedo was not enough to kill him, the pathology report said the child had a "hypersensitivity response" to the drug, Justice of the Peace Johnny Turrentine said.

Saucedo was taken to Deaf Smith General Hospital just past midnight on Aug. 17 after being found unconscious in his home by an older brother. Police said there were no apparent bruises or markings on the boy and the child had appeared to be in good health.

Dr. Ralph Erdmann, who performed the autopsy, said in his report that the death was caused by "poisonous effect of drugs." Toxicology lab studies found the cocaine in the child's system.

Turrentine said the victim had been exposed to the drug at least one other time in order to have created the hypersensitivity. The drug caused reflex ventricular fibrillation, a condition in which the heart muscle moves so rapidly that blood cannot be pumped, and cardiac standstill.

Resident's son exchanges vows Saturday in Stanton

Wedding vows were exchanged by Brenda Ringener of Stanton and former Hereford resident, Kyle Kendall, also of Stanton, Saturday afternoon in the Church of Christ in that city.

Performing the ceremony was Deral McWhorter, church minister.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W.A. Ringener of Stanton and the bridegroom is the son of Mrs. E.R. Kendall of 240 Elm and the late E.R. Kendall.

The church altar was decorated by a rainbow candelabrum trimmed with greenery and baby's breath, and two large basket arrangements of burgundy gladioli and pink carnations.

Providing musical selections was a quartet from the Golf Course Road Church of Christ in Midland.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown styled of white silk organza trimmed in chantilly lace. The neckline featured a high lace collar trimmed with seed pearls and the sheer bodice of organza was outlined with rows of lace and a row of lace made a cap effect over the sleeves.

The empire waistline was bordered with chantilly lace and the back of the dress featured pearl buttons extending from the neckline to below the waist. The full sleeves were of organza and were caught at the wrists with a wide band of chantilly lace with one medallion of the lace forming a point over her hands.

The full skirt was fashioned with two side ruffles of organza at the bottom and just above the two ruffles, a wide row of the lace swept around the front and up the sides to a point in the back. A cascade of nine ruffles extended from a point about midway of the back of the skirt and ended in a full-chapel train.

Her fingertip veil of illusion was gathered to a cap covered in chantilly lace to match her dress. The cap was enhanced by embroidered seed pearls. A second tier of illusion was shoulder-length and both it and the fingertip veil were bordered in chantilly lace. A circlet of pearls extended from the back of the cap.

She carried a colonial bouquet of white silk roses and carnations entwined by baby's breath.

Reba-Long-of-Austin served her sister as matron of honor and bride's matron was another sister, Faye Groves of Stanton.

The bride's niece, Amy Groves of Stanton, was flower girl and ring bearers were the bride's niece, Patty Groves of Stanton, and the groom's son, Kenneth Kendall of Stanton.

David Kendall of Oklahoma served his brother as best man and the groom's cousin, Nelson Kendall of Hereford, was groomsmen.

Guests were escorted by the bride's nephew, Ronnie Long of Austin, and the groom's cousin, Nick Kendall of Hereford.

The reception was held in the church fellowship hall.

The traditional three-tier, colonial wedding cake was decorated with icing roses and ribbons in the bride's colors of pink and burgundy. Gothic pillars separated the three tiers and a satin ornament of bells and roses topped the cake. The table was draped with a white lace cloth and was decorated with an arrangement of burgundy candles with greenery.

The bride graduated from Stanton

High School and is employed by William B. Smith, Attorney, in Midland.

The groom, a graduate of Hereford High School, graduated from Southwestern State College in Okla. He is owner and pharmacist of Stanton Drug in Stanton.

Following a wedding trip to New York City, N.Y., the couple will make their home at 500 W. Sixth St. in Stanton.

Noted speaker to be featured at banquet

Noted orator Sir Lionel Luckhoo will be the guest speaker at the Leadership Appreciation Banquet scheduled at 7 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 18, in the banquet room of the Hereford Community Center.

Local government officials and authorities will be honored guests at the event. Those to be recognized include the Hereford Volunteer Fire Department, Deaf Smith County Sheriff's Department, Hereford Police Department, members of the Hereford Independent School Board and principals of all local schools.

Each of the honored guests have been mailed personal invitations. If they respond by Oct. 1, a complimentary ticket will be provided.

The public is also invited to attend the banquet which is being sponsored by the Full Gospel Business Men's Fellowship. Tickets are priced at $8 for the dinner will be catered by Savage's Hickory Pit.

According to Richard Schlabs, FGBMF president, tickets are limited. Advance tickets may be obtained by calling Schlabs at 364-1281.

Sir Luckhoo is listed in the Guinness Book of World Records as "The World's Most Successful Advocate," "The Winningest Lawyer in the World", defending 245 murderers and receiving 245 acquittals.

Honored four times by the Queen of England and twice knighted, Sir Lionel is the only person to hold the rank of ambassador for two countries simultaneously.

He served his homeland of Guyana as high commissioner to London, Paris, Bonn and the Hague. He also served as Justice to the Supreme Court and mayor of Georgetown for four terms of office.

WOMEN AND BUSINESS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women own almost 25 percent of American businesses, excluding large corporations, according to the U.S. Census Bureau.

This is up from 5 percent a decade ago, and projections show women will own 50 percent by the year 2000.

Eligible girls invited to join local Concerteers

Young women who are junior and senior students in high school are invited to join Concerteers, an organization designed to act as the official hostesses at the Community Concert Association events held in Hereford.

The girls eligible for participation in this group are members of the association because their families hold group memberships. Among their duties is the distribution of the programs at each of the concerts as well as acting as aides to the performers themselves, helping in any capacity requested by the visiting artists.

During the concert season, the girls are invited to various social events in their honor. Another highlight is their presentation by their fathers at one of the concert functions. They choose a formal gown to be worn at each concert to identify them to the audience.

Any young woman whose family belongs to the concert association is urged to contact Mrs. Josef Grotegut at 258-7564 or Mrs. Donald Meyer at 578-4486 for further information.

Concerts scheduled at the Hereford High School auditorium this season include the following: The Tennessee River Boys, Oct. 27; Phil Coulter's Pops Orchestra of Ireland, Feb. 1; The Alexandria Quintet, Feb. 26; and Arthur Woodley, bass-baritone, March 31. All performances will begin at 8 p.m. on these dates.

AMERICA'S GREAT BARRIER REEF

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Not many Americans have a chance to see the wildlife of Australia's Great Barrier Reef in person.

However, a new attraction at the San Antonio Zoo now makes it easier to do so.

Visitors to the zoo can board a boat and travel a canal which features a replica of the barrier reef. In the five aquariums of the canal, which contains more than 85,000 gallons of artificial sea water, passengers will come across five-foot-long lemon sharks, sea anemones, angelfish, triggerfish and moray eels.

Such exotic animals as wallabies, ibises and galahs live in the simulated Australian habitat along the canal.

Fall Family Fun Fair scheduled at WTSU

West Texas State University's College of Fine Arts and Humanities has planned eight hour worth of food, fun, fantasy, frolicking, and foot-stomping (not to mention fundraising) at the first Fall Family Fun Fair on Saturday, Oct. 4, from 2-10 p.m.

"We've never tried this before, but on paper it looks good," said Dr. David Jorns, dean of the college.

A 3200-square-foot circus tent, a number of smaller canopies, the Northern Hall atrium, a midway, and the outdoor Greek Theatre on the west side of Northern Hall will accommodate fair patrons who come and go throughout the day.

The nonstop entertainment will include an ongoing melodrama, complete with cheers, boos, sighs, and the chance to throw popcorn at the villain. For more "refined" folks, string players at any level of proficiency can live out a fantasy and perform as guest artists with the Harrington String Quartet.

Performer's from WTSU's musical "Company" will present excerpts from that show. Students from Nard's Gymnastics and the Amarillo School of Gymnastics will display their skills. A band ensemble, WTSU's Chamber Singers, and a number of soloists will provide music for the occasion.

Other performing groups include Stage Weights (clowns), the Williams-Cost School of Dance, Cooper's Twirlers, WT Flag Corps, Dee's Dance Studio, WT Twirlers, WT Dance Ensemble, Pierce's Twirlers and the Panhandle Square Dance Association.

Meanwhile, starving artists and hobbyists from around the area have been invited to exhibit and sell their arts and crafts along the midway. And there will be amusement booths for both children and adults.

For the kids: a cardboard city they can tear up and rebuild, building blocks, fishing, dart throw, bottle toss, basketball toss, and special programs with stories, clowns, and puppets. Adult amusements will include a remote TV broadcast, a dunking booth, a kissing booth, a fortune telling booth, a pie throw, and a car wash.

And if all that isn't enough, there will be strolling entertainment along the midway: a barbershop quartet, a fight scene, "Gypsy" violinists, uglier, barkers, and clowns.

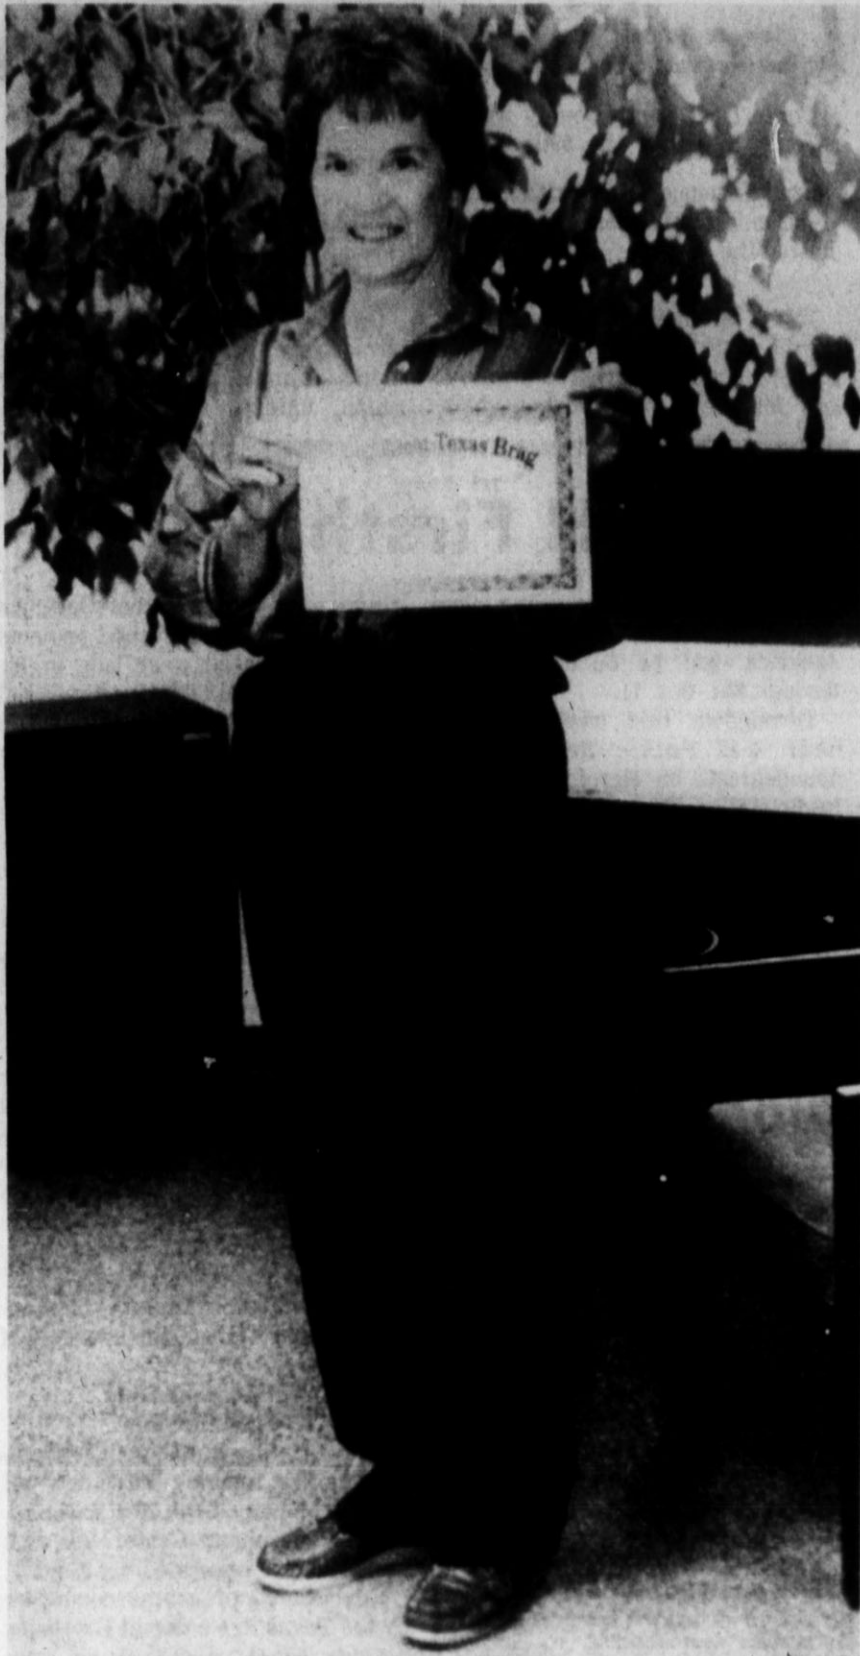

To finish the day right, the WTSU Jazz Band will play for an outdoor public dance beginning at 8:30 p.m.

Admission to the Fall Family Fun Fair will be $1. All proceeds from the fair will go to the scholarship fund of WTSU's College of Fine Arts and Humanities.

"You can't see it all because it changes constantly," Jorns said. "There'll be new acts all the time, with two or three things going on at once. For a buck, that's pretty good."

Fair-goers also will be able to purchase inexpensive food tickets entitling them to samples from Belmar Bakery, Bennigan's, Bozo's Tortilla Factory (Cooper's), Bresler's, Mr. Burger, Domino's Pizza, Furr's, Luby's Cafeteria, Malcolm's Ice Cream, McDonalds, Railroad Crossings, Ribber, Snow White Bakery, Steak and Ale, Sutphen's, Taco John's, Taylor and Sons, Village Inn, Wienerschtzel, Windmill Bakery, and Zack's Frozen Yogurt.

Persons interested in renting a booth to exhibit or sell arts and crafts should call Dawn at 655-9809. Any other questions concerning FFFF should be directed to Pat Wiles, 656-2451 or 565-3861.

Library Receives Award

Deaf Smith County Library recently received the Texas Brag Award at The Texas Panhandle Library System meeting. Shown with the award is Lurline Cawthon, local inter-library loan reference librarian.

INTER-LIBRARY LOAN

The Texas Brag Award was presented to the Deaf Smith County Library at the Texas Panhandle Library System meeting on Sept. 23. From March 1985 to July 1986, we loaned 876 materials from our local library to other area libraries. The total ILL requests for the Panhandle were 2,520 during this time.

Lurline Cawthon, our local inter-library loan reference librarian, works extensively with Terri Jolly, ILL-Librarian in Amarillo and Michael Raillard, ILL assistant.

As a patron of the Deaf Smith County Library, you may request materials that we do not have from other locations through Inter-Library loan. We take your requests and send them to APL through our computer terminal. The information we need for books is title, author, and publisher if you know it. If not, we will search Books In Print for complete information. Subject requests do not have to be specific. Periodical requests must have accurate information. To verify periodical requests, we research in Reader's Guide to Periodical Literature.

When you make a request the only expense the patron has is the postage that it requires to get the materials to the library. We send the requests by terminal to Amarillo Public Library, which searches it on the OCLC terminal for its possible location at other Panhandle libraries. If it is not at any of the area libraries, then ILL searches for it at other Texas libraries. If the materials are not located in any Texas library, then the request is made to other states. Many of our ILL materials come from other areas such as Arkansas, Louisiana, Massachusetts and California.

If you have any questions concerning ILL, please contact Lurline Cawthon at the Deaf Smith County Library, 364-1206.

The Deaf Smith County Library staff is always willing and available to serve you. Thank you very much for the time and support each of our patrons give to your local library.

Debbie Black and Ed Davis were wed Friday evening in a small family ceremony at the Hereford Church of the Nazarene with Rev. Bob Hufaker officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hoover of Hereford and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Davis of Lubbock.

Connie Sublett of Canyon, sister of the bride, was the matron of honor. Other attendants were Shauna Davis, daughter of the groom, and Erin Black, daughter of the bride.

The groom's best man was Steve Wright of Hereford, with Adam Davis, the groom's son, and Eric Black, the bride's son, as attendants.

Jacob Sublett and David Sublett, nephews of the bride, and Kendra Wright, niece of the groom, served as candle lighters. Jill Sublett, niece of the bride, served at the registry.

Jim Haile and Susie Merrick provided vocal music for the ceremony with selections including "To Me," and "Household of Faith."

After a wedding trip to Jamaica, the couple will reside in Hereford where the bride is a speech therapist at Bluebonnet Intermediate School. The groom is employed by Procter and Gamble.

PERSONAL REFERENCES
KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — "Personal References," an exhibition of works by three artists, is on view at the Kansas City Art Institute through Oct. 5.

The exhibition focuses on painters Raymond Saunders and Phyllis Bramson and sculptor Martin Puryear. "Personal References," says the institute, "refers to those things that make an artist's perspective unique. Each of the three artists have different points of reference from which they tell us about their world and themselves."

Quakers find political voice

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — They sit in a small circle because they are a small group.

In the comfortably furnished, but worn, living room of one of their members, all is quiet except the hum of I-37 traffic heard through an open window. Occasionally, one will speak, softly, then thoughtful silence will follow.

They are the Coastal Bend's chapter of the Society of Friends, more commonly known as Quakers, and they have met in the home of their local founder, Lorena Jeanne Tinker, since 1979.

It was during their trials for obstructing the law in 1650 that the Friends were first called Quakers because they said they quaked in the sight of God, but not before their judges.

As did their 17th-century predecessors, contemporary Quakers believe they are led by what they call the Inner Light. Their meetings begin with a period of meditation interrupted only when someone feels guided to speak.

"It's a leading of the Light to whatever you feel guided to bring out," Ms. Tinker said, adding that comments about what has been said are not allowed until after the meditation in a general meeting.

There are no altars, baptisms or communions. In fact, there are no ceremonies or sacraments at all.

"We believe that all of life is blessed, so there is no need for physical sacraments," Ms. Tinker said.

"It has been said that Quaker communion is the pot-luck supper that follows every meeting," she said, and recalled the time she took her newborn grandson to a Quaker meeting. An elderly member came up to them and placed a hand on the baby's forehead and said, "Oh God, bless this little baby."

"To me, that was Lenny's baptism," Ms. Tinker said. "That was a very blessed experience."

With no baptism, one of the newest Friends, 35-year-old wife and college student Paulette Armentrout, wondered what she had to do to become a Quaker. After asking around and being told it was all up to her, she wrote down the reasons why she wanted to join, read them to the group "and that was my formal entry," she said.

But there's more to being a Quaker than just peaceful meetings, said Ms. Tinker. There is also a fervent commitment to nonviolence, social justice and the wiping out of oppression, she said.

After living in Iowa for years, Ms. Tinker moved back to Corpus Christi where she had spent most of her childhood. "I had culture shock with the high militarism and materialism." She said she missed the simple traditions of the Quakers she had been involved with in Iowa, so she decided to form a Society of Friends group here.

Since then, she and her members have been very vocal — this in distinct contrast to their meetings — about injustice and violence in the world.

They pass out bumper stickers declaring "Corpus Christi — nuclear target," and are active in peace advocate groups such as Pax Christi, Ground Zero and the Peace and Justice Coalition.

While those groups are led primarily by Catholics and Protestants, "we don't believe in setting up barriers between different faiths," Ms. Tinker said.

Ms. Tinker, who has been to El Salvador twice in the last two years, has offered her home as a shelter to refugees.

"To be spiritual means you are political," she said. "The people that say they aren't going to get involved and just pray, simply show support for the government."

POLLY'S POINTERS

Toothpaste is ring remover

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — Use toothpaste to get white rings off wood furniture left by damp glasses or coffee cups. It takes the white ring off and won't hurt the finish on the wood. — ROXIE

DEAR POLLY — Toothpaste is the best thing to remove crayon marks from painted walls, furniture or just about any surface in the house. Just smear it on the offending mark, let soak one-half minute, then rub off with a dry washcloth. For heavy or stubborn cases, scrub with a toothbrush. I always keep an old toothbrush and an almost-used tube of toothpaste in my cleaning basket so they are available when I do my routine cleaning. — ROYCE

DEAR POLLY — This winter wake up in the morning, the temperature is below freezing and the storm door is frozen shut, use your hairdryer. Set it on hot and blow hot air around the door seams and on the lock to unthaw the door. Set hairdryer on low or medium to defrost windows. — MRS. D.R.

DEAR POLLY — I add a few drops of leftover cologne or bath oil to the water I use to clean the bathroom fixtures. Presto, I have a lovely-scented bathroom! — EVELYN

Most want simple signs of affection

NEW YORK — Children of the 80's may be asking for computers, skateboards and designer jeans, but moms are still dishing out lots of old-fashioned hugs and kisses to show their children they care.

"Each mother's way of showing love is unique and individual," commented noted parent educator, Bernice Weissbourd, founder of the Family Focus and Resource Coalition, a national network of family resource programs based in Chicago.

"Despite changing social environments, ways of caring really don't change from one generation to another. Mothers are always showing love when they respond sensitively to a child," Weissbourd said.

A recent study—conducted by the Roper Organization—learned that mothers' methods for showing love included baking or cooking special foods for their children, and discipline, both cited by four percent of respondents.

"Years ago, a well-disciplined and obedient child would have been more important. At the turn of the century, parents felt it their duty to break the will of the child," says Weissbourd. "Since those days, we have swung full circle. We strove for happy children in the '50's. In the '80s, we are intent on raising smart, successful children."

Despite high parental expectations, the mothers surveyed wanted very simple signs of affection in return from their children. When asked how they want their children to show them love, 42 percent of the mothers want hugs and kisses; 16 percent want good behavior; 11 percent feel helping without being asked is a sign of love, and another 6 percent feel open communications expressed a child's love best.

How mothers show love, and to be shown love, is one of a series of lifestyles examined to learn how today's mothers enrich the family environment.

Club's history to be buried Oct. 2

Calliopean Club met Thursday night in the home of Sheri Kerr.

During the business meeting, it was decided to have the 50-year history of the club buried Oct. 2 by the sesquicentennial committee.

Audine Dettman presented an interesting review of the book "Adobe Walls Bride" by John McCarty, which is a story of Billy and Olive Dixon. It is a complete book about their romance, their marriage, and their building of a home.

They spent their wedding night near the site of one of the most barbarous battles in plains history where bullets and blood marked to fame the site of Adobe Walls. Four children were born at Adobe Walls, signalling the advancing tide of civilization in the big wonderful country that is the Texas Panhandle. The story told is typical of the pioneer woman and family and it covers an interesting and vital era of Panhandle history.

After her husband's death, Olive raised their large family and made a career of Panhandle history and the lives of its pioneers. At the age of 82 in 1955, she went to her office in the Amarillo News and Globe-Times each morning.

Members present were Irene Conway, Audine Dettman, Marye Fraser, Jan Furr, Virginia Holmes, Faye Holt, Mary Sue Hull, Sue James, Sheri Kerr, Claudia McBrayer, Cherry McWhorter, Marjorie Mims, Kathlee Palmer, Vera Threewit, Jan Walser, Meredith Wilcox and Kathryn Ruga.

Amish making Lone Star State their home away from time

GONZALES, Texas (AP) — It may be only a couple of miles to the Sonic and the Shamrock. But John Yoder's home on the banks of the San Marcos River here is in many ways a hundred years from town.

At least, that's the goal in Yoder's home and business — a repair and sales shop for horse-drawn buggies.

Like the other 14 or 15 Amish families in the Gonzales-Lockhart area, Yoder's is struggling to maintain the traditional values that provide for a simple life devoid of such 20th century claptrap as radio and television, air conditioning and automobiles.

It's a life in which Yoder's wife and daughters keep their hair covered with prayer caps. His 16-year-old daughter presses her clothes in the afternoon on the porch outside the Yoder home using a gas-heated iron. His four sons speak Pennsylvania Dutch as they work on the surreys and fold-downs and other buggies that find their way to the Yoder home for repair or sale. And the youngest of Yoder's 17 children — a 13-year-old boy and a 10-year-old girl — are taught at home instead of in the Gonzales public schools.

At the same time, Yoder, 55, occasionally may find himself using a little electricity these days in his booming buggy-repair and sales shop. The rent house in which the Yoders live also is equipped with a telephone, a device the family has found useful for keeping in touch with the other Amish families scattered around the area.

"The (Amish) shops back in Indiana don't use electricity. But they do have air (driven) equipment. If I owned my own place, if I was in my own shop, I would prefer to go to air," Yoder said.

"But we're just renting here, and when you're renting, they require you have electricity. We just go along," said Yoder. "We aim to be considerate."

The Yoders represent one of this state's newest ethnic groups, a sampling of families from the Amish communities in the Midwest who moved to Texas to improve their financial situations. Many stay here just long enough to earn enough money to buy land back home. Others have indicated they might settle here permanently.

The Texas Amish communities now include 35 to 40 families, or about 200 people, and are concentrated primarily in the Gonzales-Lockhart area and the Stephenville-Dublin area northwest of Waco, according to William P. Kuvlesky, a Texas A&M University sociologist who has studied the communities.

The Amish families, who began to settle in Texas in 1980, are providing a new source of farm labor here. They are replacing illegal migrants from Mexico, Kuvlesky said.

"The farmers prefer the Amish families, even if it costs them more. They're much more mature and stable. And they come from their own agricultural enterprises and have good management skills. They have a work ethic that goes beyond almost anything that exists in this world. To them work is life," said Kuvlesky, who has studied the Amish communities in Texas.

Yoder, who came to Texas from northern Missouri, moved his family to the Gonzales area in May 1982. "We have an offer for a job on a turkey farm where we could make more than on the (Missouri) farm. But we were sort of sorry, because the man who owned the turkey farm went broke in about eight months," he said.

After another job in which the family cared for 100,000 chickens on a farm near Gonzales, Yoder and his sons decided to go into the carpentry business with a little buggy work on the side.

That buggy sideline grew into his main business after Yoder was featured in an article in "Texas Highways" magazine. "I got more work in my shop than I knew what to do with," he said. "I've had inquiries from as far away as Australia."

Most of the work comes from Texans. Some comes from individuals who sell buggy rides for tourists in cities such as San Antonio. And some comes from individuals who simply want a buggy for joy riding or "to have it to ride to church," Yoder said.

None of it comes from other Amish families, who rely primarily on buggies for transportation. "I've got more business from outside people. That's where my business is. The other (Amish) families send up north for their buggies. They say I'm too high-priced," he said.

Yoder and his sons do most of their buggy work beneath their home, which sits up off the ground on posts. The house was built originally as a lodge for deer hunters, and it rests near a river bank among pecan trees that climb 150 feet in the air.

With the men and boys in suspenders and the women in bonnets, with the big black buggies attached to seemingly ever-patient horses, with cows grazing in a nearby pasture and ponies romping in the adjacent field, the Yoder family home is a compelling and serene invitation to step back into the past.

And Yoder and his family do like their home, although they long for "a little more breeze" in the summer. And they also miss living in a community of what Yoder terms "our people." But, for the most part, the Gonzales community has been friendly and receptive to the Amish families.

"People here didn't know much of our people," Yoder said. "The ice had to be broken. But they finally found out we were human just like they were."

While business is good and people are nice, Yoder prefers to keep his children at home for their education. Although some other Amish parents in the area send their children to public schools, Yoder is concerned about what he considers a lack of discipline.

"Twenty-five years ago 95 percent of (Amish children) were in public schools. I got all my education in public schools. The trend has changed, and I suspect that 90 percent are now in home schools or parochial schools. That's over the United States," he said.

"Discipline is mostly the reason. And we thought they were pushing phys-ed (physical education) a little too hard. We go along with phys-ed, but the competition from one school to the other was kind of a reason for us withdrawing," he said.

Amish children are required to complete the eighth grade. The two youngest children in Yoder's family take course work provided through the mail by the Christian Liberty Academy in Illinois. Their teacher is their mother, who sends her children's work to the academy to be graded.

"They are bound to be under school on regular hours, from 9 to 12 and then from 1 to 3 or 3:30. We aim to be strict on this," Yoder said.

"We talk Pennsylvania Dutch among ourselves, but during the school hours, my wife speaks English to them," he said. "We want them to be fluent in English."

Although Yoder sometimes hires someone to drive him and his sons to carpentry jobs if the work is more than about 15 miles from their home, the family relies on the horse and buggy to visit friends or shop.

"We've gone as much as 30 miles for church service," Yoder said. "That takes about 2½ hours. And it takes a tough horse to do that, one that's been worked."

Church services for the Amish families are held every other Sunday in their homes, with families taking turns playing host. Services usually are closer than the 30-mile trip.

Say religious leaders

'Landmarking' of churches outrageous

NEW YORK (AP) — If an old church catches the fancy of architectural buffs, it's liable to find itself forced to put most of its funds into maintaining its aged walls rather than into its working ministry.

It's seen by church officials as a blatant infringement on religious rights.

"The 'landmarking' of churches by a governmental agency is one of the most outrageous violations of religious liberty in the United States in the 1980s," says the Rev. Dean Kelley, church-state expert for the National Council of Churches.

"It is becoming a national problem," he says, citing litigation in six states, and disputes in numerous others involving Roman Catholic, Protestant and Jewish structures.

He predicts "more and more of these cases" until the U.S. Supreme Court applies recognized principles in "safeguarding religious liberty from this particular kind of governmental interference."

A legal challenge to it was appealed to the high court for the first time in September by Manhattan's United Methodist Church of St. Paul and St. Andrew, a deteriorating 1897 terracotta edifice of oddly mixed style.

Landmarking it has placed "an unfair burden upon us, forcing us to siphon off funds in essence to maintain a museum," says the church's pastor, the Rev. Edward C. Horne, rather than serving current needs and ministry.

The city's 1965 law setting up a Landmarks Preservation Commission — similar to provisions enacted widely elsewhere — requires that a building designated a landmark must be kept in its original form and materials.

"Under landmarking, open season has been declared on religious ministry," says the Rev. N.J. L'Hereaux Jr., executive director of the Queens Federation of Churches and chairman of the New York State Interfaith Commission on Landmarking of Religious Property.

He adds: "Anti-religious bigots, racists who object to the church's work among the poor and overzealous idolaters called preservationists have combined forces with government in an unconstitutional effort to deprive religious congregations of the ability to use their major assets — their buildings — for their ministry."

Horne points out that his congregation of 220 no longer needs the church's 1,400-seat sanctuary, and that its cumbersome, inefficient design "hinders our programs of outreach to the community."

These include one of the city's largest emergency food programs and senior citizens feeding programs, plus housing various other social service activities.

Noting that estimates place costs of repairing the building to meet landmark commission requirements at up to $2 million, he said it threatens the congregation's survival.

Not until the congregation planned in 1979 to demolish the old structure and build a smaller church more suited to the congregation's size and ministry, along with a 20-story apartment building, did a community group protest.

Not wanting its Hudson River view obscured, it asked that the church be designated a landmark.

More Money for Uniforms

Leroy McDonald of Hereford Janitor Supply presents a $400 check to Virginia Jackson, right, vice-president of Hereford Band Boosters Club. McDonald said that if all the Herd mats are sold it will total $1,000 to help purchase new band uniforms. The Herd mats can also make nice Christmas presents during the upcoming months.

Pope to visit cities next fall

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Roman Catholic officials are working out plans for a visit by Pope John Paul II to Southern and Western cities next fall.

Details are yet to be approved by the Vatican, but the pope is expected to visit Miami, Columbia, S.C., New Orleans, San Antonio, Texas, Phoenix, Ariz., Los Angeles, Monterey, Calif., and San Francisco between Sept. 10 and 18.

The Rev. Robert Lynch, associate general secretary of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops who is coordinator for the visit, says in the planning for the Vatican, "We have to come up with minute-by-minute specifics — and be prepared for some or all of them to be changed."

The pope in 1979 toured New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Des Moines, Iowa, Chicago and Washington.

Drug forum Monday

The death of 9-year-old Manuel Saucedo, who died in August from an allergic reaction to cocaine, has prompted the organization of a Drug Information Forum on Monday night to make Hereford parents and youth more aware of local drug use and abuse.

At 7:30 p.m. in the Hereford High School Cafeteria seven panelists with experience in drug abuse, drug prevention programs and an drug rehabilitation will give short talks and be available for questions from the audience.

The forum is under joint sponsorship of concerned citizens affiliated with The Chemical People, Deaf Smith County Sheriff's Department, Hereford Police and Hereford Ministerial Alliance. Sponsors organized the forum to make Hereford residents more aware of the problem in Deaf Smith County.

Panelists for the forum will be:

Lt. David Wagner, Hereford Police Department's narcotics officer. Wagner will exhibit samples of controlled substances and drug paraphernalia to show parents what to look for if they suspect a child is using drugs.

Colleen Duffy, the Deaf Smith County Juvenile Probation Officer, will discuss her experiences with youth drug offenders which she has encountered during nine years in juvenile work. She will discuss legal ramifications and review prevention tips for parents.

Dennis Latham, associate pastor at the Hereford Church of the Nazarene, and a former drug user, will tell of his experience as a substance abuser and how he came clean.

Gary Longanecker, director of Hereford Family Services, will represent The Chemical People on the panel.

Kay Kropff, director of the Drug and Alcohol Abuse Care Center in Canyon, will have information on rehabilitation.

Peggy Boehning, director of nursing at the Drug and Alcohol Abuse Care Center in Canyon, will provide information on the psychological and medical effects of drug abuse.

Stan Kropff, director of the Panhandle Regional Crime Prevention Program in Amarillo, will have a film on controlled substances.

Years of research attest to what sharp cattlemen already know...a good, common sense feeding program makes cows recycle faster. However, a group of Oklahoma State University animal scientists have learned not all cattle breeders are making the most of their cows. Part of the reason is the high price of protein and energy supplements to replenish mother cow. Another reason is the old myth that thinner first-calf heifers calve easier. "What really happens," says animal reproductive physiologist Bob Wettemann, "is the calf pulls needed nutrients from the mother and birth weights remain unchanged." The studies show when nutrients are limited, the calf weight drops and...chances for the cow to rebreed are greatly reduced," he says. The major criteria for well-producing cows is a body condition (BCS) score of five. BCS of four are so thin they do well just to maintain their own weight after calving and milk production is reduced. BCSs of six don't need supplemental feeding because of body reserves that will begin the recycling. Wettemann says BCS scoring is easy to learn and brochures are available through Extension agents. DISSOLVING TOOTH DECAY

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Instead of grinding away tooth decay, some dentists are "dissolving" it.

Better Homes and Gardens says the Caridex Caries Removal System uses a solution that the dentist applies to the tooth. The softened decay is then brushed away.

"Some drilling will be necessary between 50 and 75 percent of the time," according to Dr. Bruce Bloom, dental consultant to National Patent Dental Products Inc., which markets Caridex. "But it's done in the enamel part of the tooth, which has no nerve sensation." Almost 90 percent of Caridex patients need no anesthesia.

The system isn't for use on hard-to-reach cavities or for some patients on sodium-restricted diets. Only dentists who have taken a seminar are eligible to use the system. So far, 4,200 dentists nationwide have qualified.

Information needed

The Hereford High School graduating class of 1937 has scheduled its 50th reunion in May of 1987.

All former students have been located with the exception of C.V. McCord, Rowena O'Dell and Sybil Weckesser.

Anyone having any information on the graduates are asked to contact Gladys Willoughby at 364-3769 or write to her at 146 Hickory.

DRYING UP

NEW YORK (AP) — New York's Bowery area brings to mind images of downtrodden men and cheap bars.

Today, however, there are only two bars and one liquor store in the skid row area, where there used to be scores. The number of flophouses, shelters and homeless people also has declined over the years.

Sociologists attribute the change in the Bowery to the dispersal of the city's homeless throughout its five boroughs. "This area is being swept up in a number of changes, and I doubt there will be any remnants of 'The Bowery' in another 10 years," said one New York University economics and planning professor.

STRIPPER WELLS

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Some 450,000 stripper wells in the United States account for 15 percent of the nation's oil production or 1.3 million barrels a day.

Stripper wells are marginal producing wells with high production costs, resulting in slim profit margins.

Once production is stopped at these wells they are unlikely ever to be put back on line, according to Phillips Petroleum.

Sigle, Miller serve as hostesses

Members of the Pioneer Study Club met for a luncheon Tuesday at the Caison House. Fern Sigle and Gladys Miller served as hostesses.

Miller presented the invocation and after the Pledge of Allegiance and salute to the Texas Flag was given by Bea Hutson and Bessie Hill, Sigle presented the yearbook.

Mabel Heard presented the program "A Century and a Half of Ethnic Change in Texas, 1836-1986." She said, "those who would understand Texas, now as well as 150 years ago, must once and for all discard the myth and accept the concept of a multi-ethnic society; culturally, it is a balkanized zone entrapped in an artificial administrative framework."

The Southern Anglo majority was absolute in the 1850's making up 53 percent of the Texas population. From 1865-1880, the Yankee states of New York, New Jersey, Michigan, Ohio and Nebraska added to the Southern Anglo group 5 percent more professional artisans. These were doctors, lawyers, and teachers who were better educated than the Southern Anglo group, she explained, "this period, the Anglo culture changed from southern to western in Texas. Loosing the Civil War did not rest easy on the shoulders of independent Texans. They let the Virginians, Alabamans, and Georgians keep alive the Civil War while a Western self-image of Anglo Texan developed. We began to think cattle, Stetson hats, boots and blue jeans. This cultural change opened the way for the entry of the Europeans into Texas.

"The Germans came in first and formed a farming belt across Central Texas," Heard said. "Austin, Comal, Dewitt, Fayette, Gillispie, Guadalupe, Kendall, Median and Washington counties were settled by them. Switzerland, Alsace, and Russia sent many settlers. The Hessians settled in lower Texas in 1830. After these the Slavic migration began involving Czechs, Poles, Wends led by the Catholic Church.

"In 1946-1947, Hispanic groups crossed our borders in great numbers and they surpassed in numbers the black population for the first time during these years," she continued.

According to the 1980 census, Texas now has the following:

Old Southern and Northern Anglo-Americans, 45 percent; Mexicans, 22 percent; Blacks (Africans), 12 percent; Louisiana French, 3 percent; Europeans, 12 percent; Orientals, 1 percent; American Indians, 1 percent; Others or unknown 4 percent.

Theme and course of study was given by Mary Panciera, "Pioneer Club Women and United in Service," She handed out materials for this year to the chairman.

The treasury report was given by Fern Ford. The group welcomed three new members, Lucy Cocanougher, Hazel Ford and Bobby Purcell.

Members present were Helen Bishop, Leatrus Clark, Lucy Cocanougher, Fern Ford, Hazel Ford, Mabel Heard, Bessie Hill, Bea Hutson, Billie Johnson, Gladys Miller, Mary Panciera, Eunice Peterson, Bobbie Purcell, Fern Sigle, Elizabeth Wilson.

Wanda Clark of Austin was a visitor.

Jack Dempsey ruled the boxing world as heavyweight champion from 1919 until 1926.

Bridal Shower Held

A bridal shower was held Wednesday evening for Denise Acker, Oct. 18 bride-elect of Gerald Marnell. Greeting guests with the honoree were, from left, her mother, Angela Acker, and the prospective bridegroom's mother, Blanche Marnell.

Acker honored with bridal shower

Denise Acker of Nazareth was honored with a bridal shower Wednesday evening at the Energas Flame Room. The bride-elect and Gerald Marnell plan to exchange wedding vows Oct. 18 in Holy Family Catholic Church of Nazareth.

Receiving guests with the honoree were her mother, Angela Acker of Nazareth, and the prospective groom's mother, Blanche Marnell of Hereford.

Joyce Schlabs registered guests for her sister and Collette Acker, also a sister, registered gifts.

Regina Spinhirne and Melinda Acker, sister-in-law of the honoree, served refreshments of cookies, watermelon, fruit basket and punch. The table was covered with a white lace cloth over a turquoise overlay and was centered with an ivy plant entwined with turquoise butterflies.

The plant was arranged in a brass planter. Also, accenting the table were brass candleholders and a crystal punch bowl.

Serving as hostesses were Loraine Anthony, Jerline Bartels, Janice Betzen, Mildred Betzen, Melody Betzen, Oleta Diller, Carolyn Evers, Lynda Herrin, Elizabeth Jesko, JoAnn Jesko, Genevieve Kuper, Mary Metcalf, Juanita Newsom, Alice Rahifs, Reta Reinart, Charla Schlabs, Mary Schlabs, Lorine Schwertner, Loretta Urbanczyk, and Mary Ann Walterscheid.

Accent on Health

Emergency medical service (EMS) personnel are expected to be able to effectively treat a broad variety of injuries on critically short notice.

According to Gene Weatherall, chief of the Texas Department of Health (TDH) Bureau of Emergency Management, Texas' more than 2,000 EMS units respond to an estimated one million calls annually.

"Of course, not all of the responses involve life-saving techniques or treatment for traumatic injuries, but any call can demand the most sophisticated knowledge and skills at the EMS team's disposal," Weatherall said. "Whereas one call may entail a simple transfer of a patient from one hospital to another, the next call could require resuscitating a drowning victim who has multiple injuries."

Weatherall explained that exact totals for each type of EMS response are currently not available from any single source, but that plans for a statewide "trauma registry" are under consideration. The registry will collect detailed statistics about Texas' incidence of injuries, types of response and treatment, locations of highest incidence, and information about the victims, both at the time of injury and after treatment.

"Such information will be invaluable in defining which services are needed most and where," Weatherall explained. "But perhaps more importantly, more accurate data should signal where we need more stress on injury prevention. EMS is one profession that would like not to be needed."

Weatherall said that until the trauma registry is complete, EMS relies on a variety of information sources to indicate the proportionate frequency of certain types of injuries. "The number of recorded deaths caused by different kinds of unintentional injuries shows us the types of serious injuries that occur more often," he said.

In 1985, there were 7,095 deaths caused by unintentional injuries in Texas. Of those, five types of causes accounted for 77.12 percent of all such deaths. These five leading causes were related to: motor vehicles (3,682), falls (641), drowning (463), poisoning (347), and fires (342.)

COUPON CLIPPERS

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Many Americans clip coupons, and more than 180 billion coupons are expected to be offered to consumers this year by packaged-good companies.

One company, R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., says it expects to redeem millions of coupons, using a highly sophisticated computer system to process the coupons.

Activists to begin promo

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jane Fonda, Michael J. Fox, Whoopi Goldberg and other Hollywood activists will tour the state to promote California's clean water initiative.

"We didn't want to do another concert, but we wanted something rooted in Americana," said Neil Meron, who with fellow Tri Star producer Craig Zadan conceived the Hollywood Clean Water Caravan to support Proposition 65.

The three-day tour, which will take more than 40 celebrities to nine cities, was to begin today.

Sinatra cheers

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Halfway through his first concert in Spain, Frank Sinatra lifted a glass and shouted "Viva Espana" to the cheers of 40,000 fans.

"I've been looking forward to this for a long time," he went on in English, apparently brushing over the times he vowed never to return to Spain after his troubles with the press and photographers during filming of "The Pride and the Passion."

After a standing ovation for "Strangers in the Night," Sinatra closed the show in a soccer stadium with an upbeat rendition of "My Way."

Other celebrities joining all or part of the tour are Rosanna Arquette, Ed Begley Jr., Shari Belafonte-Harper, Cher, Morgan Fairchild, Linda Gray, Sally Kellerman, Margot Kidder and Victoria Principal.

"They want to meet people and rally them to vote yes on 65," said Zadan. "Can you imagine being registered to vote by Chevy Chase?"

Proposition 65 would impose stringent standards to control the discharge of toxic chemicals that could contaminate drinking water.

PHOTO SHOW

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Twenty-one recent photographs by American photographer Aaron Siskind will be on view at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art Sept. 25-Nov. 16.

Now in his 80s, Siskind has traveled to such places as Mexico, South America and Morocco for much of his recent work.

Heart Treasure Chests Presented

Wilma Bryant of the American Heart Association checks Marc Williamson's heart beat with a stethoscope provided in the Heart Treasure Chest. Kindergarteners at Tierra Blanca, Bluebonnet, and North West elementary schools will receive the chests and learn about heart health care for participating in the state-wide balloon launch this week.

1986 Golden Poet Award presented

George Malouf, local businessman, published poet and author, was recently presented the 1986 Golden Poet Award in recognition for his contributions to poetry.

Malouf was given the coveted award during the Second Annual Poetry Convention held at the Marriott's Orlando World Center in Orlando, Fla.

He was presented the award by John Campbell, editor and publisher of the World of Poetry Press of Sacramento, Calif. The award is the highest honor that the World of Poetry can bestow on a poet.

During the event which featured a live orchestra, several celebrities were in attendance. They included actor, Vincent Price; musician poet and performer, Maya Angelou; general director of the University Players Berkeley, Arion Alston; and celebrated playwright, Larry Meraviglia. Also, present were 4,000 poets and World Television.

World of Poetry, who boasts a membership of 689,000 poets worldwide, was represented during the convention by poets from every state, every province of Canada and 27 countries.

Malouf, who is presently working on the completion of his third book, "The Pebbles of Time", also received an award of merit certificate for his recently published poem, "The Untiring Poet."

Domingo Sarmiento, president of Argentina from 1868 to 1874, imported 64 American schoolteachers to help him found his nation's public-school system, says National Geographic.

AVOID THE PERFECT PARENT TRAP

There's no such thing as a "perfect" parent, and trying to fit unrealistic expectation may mean you no longer enjoy what can be a fulfilling role.

Here are some ideas for avoiding the perfect parent trap:

-Honestly assess your goals. Do you expect too much of yourself? No one is perfect at everything—including parenting.

-Be willing to accept children's help. Even young children can put away toys, help set the table or make their beds. It may not be done to your standards, but remember there are steps to learning all tasks. Encouragement will motivate the child to improve.

-Recognize that you are not instantly equipped with parenting skills. Most jobs require a training period. Parenting is no exception, but the training usually is done on the job. Just about the time you learn a skill, the children grow and change, requiring you to learn new skills.

-Develop a sense of humor. Perfectionists tend to take themselves and their children too seriously. Recognize that children are messy, active, become tired and sometimes make mistakes.

-Learn to accept what can't be changed. Each day has 24 hours and only so much can be accomplished in that time. Parents may try so hard to get everything done that they don't feel good about what they are doing.

-Learn to relax and find some time away from the children. It's important for parents to sometimes make changes to cope with the daily demands of parenthood. Relaxation will allow you to tackle your parental responsibilities with renewed enthusiasm.

-Enjoy your children. Their growth and development can be one of your greatest pleasures.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages, regardless of socio-economic levels, race, color, sex, religion, handicap, or national origin.

ADVANTAGES OF USING A REALTOR

Surveys indicate that sellers are able to sell their property faster and for a better price when listed exclusively with a realtor. When you try to sell your property yourself, you face a long period of inconvenience, expense, tedious work & frustration. Your chances of finding a buyer are not only limited, but diminish with the length of time the property remains unsold. And it's much more difficult to "talk price" directly with a potential buyer than it is for us to negotiate, using our years of experience. Then, if you recontact a prospect, you will be appearing anxious to sell, while we can make the same contact without yielding ground. If you are considering placing your property on the market, Jones Realtors can provide service second to none. We are the meeting place for buyer & seller. Let us assist you.
