

Texas House says no to state income tax

AUSTIN (AP) — House members have decided what taxes they do not like. Now they must decide which taxes, if any, they can palate.

In a 101-31 vote Tuesday, the House approved a proposed constitutional amendment that would ban state corporate or personal income taxes. If approved by the Senate, the measure would go to voters in November 1987.

Sponsor Rep. Stan Schlueter, D-Killeen, said income taxes are unfair.

"You get the poor that don't pay taxes because they don't have any money, who we always exempt. You've got the rich that get the loopholes and you've got the middle class that pays all the bills. I'm a little tired of that," he said.

The proposal got one more vote than needed for approval. The House action came after Schlueter, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, postponed a scheduled hearing on a bill that would raise taxes to help battle the projected $2.8 billion state deficit.

Schlueter said the hearing would be held after House-Senate conferences approved a spending cut bill. The committee wrapped up its work on a $510 million package of cuts later Tuesday, but did not take a final vote.

Gov. Mark White, who is pushing a temporary sales tax increase as part of the solution, said he was pleased that conference committee members had worked out their differences.

"That leads me to believe there's been a great deal of progress on solving the problem I called them in session for," White said.

Schlueter has filed a tax bill he calls a "vehicle" for the final bill. House members are a long way from approving any tax increase, he said.

"We're still trying to figure out what it takes to get 76 votes on the floor. And we still don't have 76 votes on the floor," Schlueter said of the majority needed to pass a tax bill.

Senate approves 65 mph for rural interstates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Proponents of raising the maximum speed limit to 65 mph, fresh from scoring a limited success in the Senate, now must try to sell the plan to a less sympathetic House.

"It's an example of Easterners foisting a solution on the West that makes no sense in the West," Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., declared Tuesday as the Senate approved 56-36 a move to lift the speed limit — but only on rural interstate highways.

The measure, pushed by senators who say 55 mph amounts to a slow crawl in the vast spaces of the West, would enable state legislatures to raise the limit by 10 mph on rural portions of the interstate system. The Senate attached the measure, sponsored by Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, to a $52.3 billion, four-year highway authorization bill.

Prospects that such a plan could be sent to the president's desk this year, however, remained uncertain. The House on Aug. 8 rejected 218-198 a proposal to establish a five-year test for a 65 mph limit on rural interstates.

That is only one of the substantial differences between the House and Senate over the bill that remain to be resolved in the dwindling time before the Oct. 3 target date for congressional adjournment.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., a critic of the higher speed limit, said during debate that raising the limit would be "signing the death warrants of 500 men, women and children a year and, in effect, we will be accessories to the maiming of thousands of others."

Sen. John C. Danforth, R-Mo., warned faster speeds would mean an upturn in paralyzing spinal injuries, while Sen. Robert Stafford, R-Vt., cited a finding from the New England Mutual Life Insurance Co. that attributed an increase in U.S. life expectancy in part to the 55 mph limit that was imposed in 1974 mainly to conserve gasoline.

Western senators, however, refused to be placated by such arguments, saying 55 mph was simply too slow.

"If you set out in Texas and drive west at 55 mph you're going to get discouraged before you get there," Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said.

In other action on the highway bill, the Senate approved on a voice vote a move by Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii, to exempt proposed Hawaiian highway H3 from environmental restrictions blocking construction.

The restrictions bar roadbuilding if it means tearing up parks and wildlife refuges.

Stafford said the plan would threaten a park and a unique archaeological dig and added that motorists with heart pacemakers could be menaced by signals from the Coast Guard's Omega Station, which broadcasts to Pacific Fleet submarines.

The planned 10.2-mile highway would run from the Honolulu area to Oahu's Windward Side through largely undeveloped areas.

Inouye said it was needed to alleviate commuter traffic jams.

Cotton paper donated for time capsule data

Paper made of 100 percent cotton has been donated by Dale Hensen for Deaf Smith County residents to use in typing data for a time capsule to be buried on the courthouse grounds Oct. 3. Residents may pick up the paper at the Deaf Smith County Museum or the Chamber of Commerce office.

Data should be turned in to the museum by Monday.

The time capsule is to be opened on the same date in 2090.

The Sesquicentennial Celebration Committee selected Oct. 3 because it is the day in 1890 on which Deaf Smith County became an entity.

Interment of the capsule will be at 4 p.m. Oct. 3, at the Sesquicentennial memorial site on the west lawn of the courthouse. Ernest Brown will serve as master of ceremonies. County Judge Glen Nelson and Mayor Wes Fisher will bury the capsule with a wish by Garth Thomas, co-chairman of the Sesquicentennial committee.

The Knights of Columbus will serve as flag bearers for Texas' six flags, the Indian flag, the Sesquicentennial flag, and the flag of Australia. The Chamber singers will perform and a memorial address will be made by Jim Conkright.

Concise material describing residents, organizations, or economy or any aspect of current life is to be typed on both sides of the paper. Also, brochures, identified photos, and cassette tapes may be included.

Should submissions exceed the capacity of the capsule, the Deaf Smith County Historical Society will evaluate and ask for reduction of items.

Democrats open debate on farm policy proposals

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional Democrats have opened a policy debate that they hope will at least nourish the seeds of political discontent in farm states, even if it falls short of plowing under Reagan administration agriculture policy.

Using campaign-style rhetoric, a dozen House and Senate Democrats Tuesday unveiled their solution to America's slumping farm economy: a sudden and sharp curtailment of agricultural production designed to wipe out surpluses and force commodity prices upward.

The effect would be to shift the costs of supporting U.S. farmers from the government, which will spend $30 billion on subsidies this year, to consumers, who would see their grocery bills rise by 3 percent to 5 percent, said Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa.

"It's become clear, one year after its misguided conception, that the 1985 farm bill is not working," Harkin said at a news conference.

Actually, the new law has been in effect for less than nine months, and economists warned that it would take several years to restore the health of U.S. farm exports through its strategy of lowering prices to make American-grown commodities more competitive.

But Democrats are betting that the patience of farmers has already been exhausted. They cited a litany of what they said were the law's failures: the continued slump in U.S. farm exports, the law's expected $30 billion cost this year and a continued farm economic depression.

"Reaganomics and the Reagan farm program have been a disaster for farmers and a disaster for America," said Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., a possible presidential contender for 1988 who made his public debut in farm policy at the news conference.

"Today, Democrats are launching a counterattack against Ronald Reagan's policies of neglect."

The lawmakers argued that farmers are united as never before in favor of such a supply-control approach, citing a list of farm organizations that have backed the bill. The list includes, for the most part, traditionally liberal organizations like the American Agriculture Movement and the National Farmers Union.

Other groups, like the American Farm Bureau Federation, oppose the idea, which was defeated several times last year during congressional consideration of the new farm law. There is little chance that Congress, with its crowded and election-shortened schedule, will have time to address any massive rewrite of farm law this year.

But Democrats are hoping that problems with the farm economy, and the unevenness of the nation's economic recovery during the Reagan era, will turn into a potent issue between now and the Nov. 4 elections, enhancing anticipated

Democratic gains. "It is important that we get this out before the elections, so voters can ask their candidates where they stand," said Rep. David Obey, D-Wis.

Senate Republicans, meanwhile, are taking a different tack in pursuit of rural votes. Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., has proposed boosting subsidies to wheat, corn and soybean farmers to enable them to sell their commodities overseas at lower prices.

The proposal would cost some $5.5 billion on top of already record farm-program spending this year, however, and Dole has said he is

Flood alert out for West Texas

Much of West Texas was under a flash flood watch today after a trough of low pressure combined with the remnants of Pacific Hurricane Newton to produce showers and thunderstorms.

The flash flood watch covers the Permian Basin, South Plains and the entire Texas Panhandle.

Forecasters said the ground remained saturated from earlier rainfall and heavy rains today would cause flash flooding.

Scattered showers were reported along middle and upper sections of the Texas coast at dawn today, but most were offshore in the Gulf of Mexico.

Forecasters called for partly cloudy to mostly cloudy skies through Thursday with a chance of scattered showers and thunderstorms over the entire state. The showers and thunderstorms will be more numerous with locally heavy rainfall possible over West Texas east of the mountains.

POW Camp topic of club program Monday

The Valed Study Club met on Monday in the home of Ruth Fish. Members were introduced to Joe D. Rogers who proceeded to give a program on the Italian POW Camp in Hereford during World War II. Rogers is using this as the theme for his masters thesis which he is currently working on. He told how the camp was originally built to house Japanese Americans. This plan was never carried out and the Hereford facility housed only Italian prisoners. The program proved to be very interesting as well as informative.

A short business meeting was conducted after the program presided over by Susanne Stevens in the absence of President Marjorie Lasiter.

Roll call was answered with each member's experience with a restoration project. The minutes were read and approved and old business consisted of revision of Article IV, Section 11 in the by-laws. There was no new business.

The next meeting is to be Oct. 13 in the home of Audrey Martin with the program presented by Juanita Brown. Tea, coffee and cheesecake were served by the hostess.

Members present included Audrey Martin, Norma Walden, Suzanne Stevens, Joyce Ritter, Ruth Fish, Marcella Bradley, Juanita Brown, Donna Lindeman, Margaret Zinser, and Betty Gilbert.

Juanita Phillips was recognized as a guest.

HHS volleyball teams lose at Estacado

The Hereford High School varsity volleyball team dropped to 1-2 in District 1-4A matches after losing at Lubbock Estacado Tuesday night.

Hereford lost game one of the match, 15-8, and had a tough time in game two, losing 15-1.

Estacado also won the junior varsity match. On Saturday, only a junior varsity match is scheduled at Canyon. It will be played at 2 p.m.

The next match for the HHS varsity spikers will be on Tuesday night versus Levelland, following the junior varsity match. The junior varsity match is scheduled for 6:30 p.m.

After that, Hereford High School will play three matches away—at Pampa on Oct. 4, at Borger on Oct. 7, and at Dumas on Oct. 11. Hereford plays at home on Tuesday, Oct. 14 against Lubbock Dunbar, the team Hereford defeated to open the district season.

The United States won its first Olympic medal in hockey in 1960 at Squaw Valley, Calif.

Longtime heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali won the Olympic gold medal in the light-heavyweight class as Cassius Clay in 1960 in Rome.

Southpaw Larry French, who won 197 major-league games, went out in style. He tossed a one-hit shutout in his final game in 1942.

In volleyball match versus Marshall

La Plata 9th grade girls win

La Plata's ninth grade volleyball team defeated Marshall of Clovis, N.M., in two games Tuesday in Hereford, 15-10, 15-13.

Marshall won the eighth grade match, 15-8, 15-1. There was no seventh grade match on Tuesday.

All three of La Plata's teams will play Stanton next Monday at the La Plata gym. The seventh grade match starts at 4:30 p.m., with the eighth and ninth grade matches afterward.

Nikki Self served three aces in four serves to help the La Plata ninth grade team move out to a 4-0 lead in the first game against Marshall.

Two service aces by Poppy Richardson gave La Plata a 6-2 lead. La Plata then led 7-2 before Marshall tied the game at 7-7.

Self served two aces to give La

Plata a 10-7 lead. The Mavericks then led 12-7 on a spike by Krystal Sims, and Sims had a service ace later to give La Plata a 13-8 lead enroute to the 15-10 win.

Game two began in a similar way as game one did, with Self recording three service aces for a 3-0 lead. La Plata built the lead up to 7-0, with the seventh point coming on a service ace by Veronica Briceno.

Marshall closed the gap to 7-5 before its coach was called for unsportsmanlike conduct. That gave La Plata a point, and moments later, a service ace by Briceno made La Plata's lead 10-5.

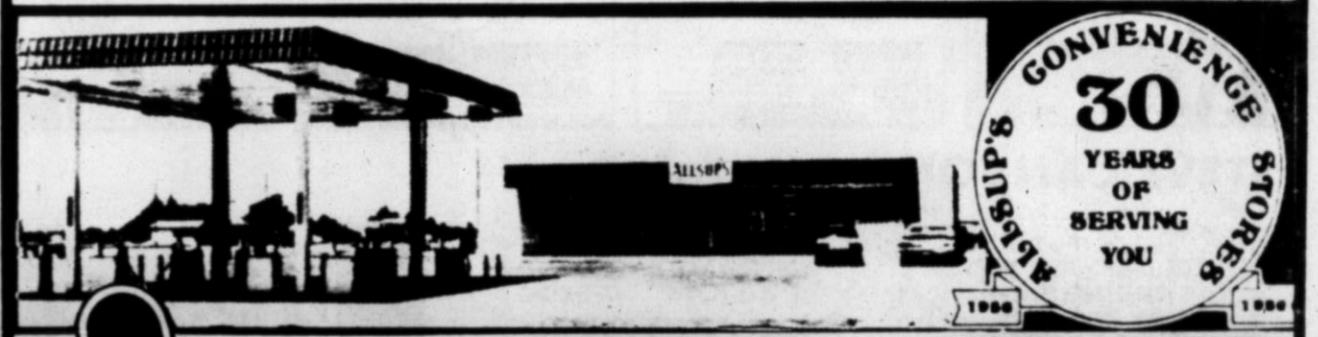

La Plata then led 12-7 before Marshall moved into the lead at 13-12. Libby Kosub of La Plata dinked the ball over for a crucial side out, and La Plata scored three straight points to win the game, and the match, 15-13.
