Congress slow in starting up Iran-Contra probe hearings won't begin until April at the earliest, later than originally planned, in the Congressional investigation into the secret sale of arms to Iran and alleged diversion of profits to the Contras.

Leaders of the House and Senate investigating committees made the disclosure Friday at a news conference in which they also pledged to coordinate their efforts and said they were pleased with President Reagan's actions to cooperate with

"In every respect we will try to coordinate our activites and to share documents and information," Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., chairman of the House committee said.

Added Sen. Daniel Inouve. D-Hawaii, head of the Senate panel, 'We want very much to coordinate the investigation. We don't wish to present to the public a confused state of affairs.'

Inouye and Hamilton met with reporters shortly after the White House delivered its first load of eight boxes of documents to the Senate panel. It had earlier submitted material to the House committee.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the boxes contained "all kinds of things, memos, notes ... The operating rule is more, not less."

Committee leaders have said their investigation has been slowed by a delay in hiring staff, gaining lawyers on the payroll and by the need to wade through thousands of pages of documents.

Initially, there was hope that hearings could begin in February.

Hamilton said both committees were pleased with cooperation shown thus far by Reagan, who has pledged to make available his personal notes that are relevant to the investigation.

Jacked-up trucks, low-riders on lawmakers' hit lists

AUSTIN (AP) - The budget battle is this year's main event, but the legislative fight card includes bills that would raise low-riders, lower jacked-up pickup trucks, outlaw auto dealers' names on your cars and keep kids from riding in truck beds.

Rep. Greg Luna, D-San Antonio, wants to make vehicle collisions less dangerous by putting all bumpers close to the same level. That puts low-riders - cars lowered to almost ground level - and jacked-up pickup trucks on his hit list.

Some routine accidents become very devastating because of the difference in bumper height. If you

Luna also is carrying the bill that would make it illegal to transport children under 12 in an open truck bed in most situations. "It is a situation that cries for a law. Children are being killed by people who carry children in pickups. It defies explanation why anyone would subject a child to riding unattended in the back," he said.

Rep. Ed Watson, D-Deer Park, has several bills in his customary package of consumer bills. This time around, Watson is after auto dealers who put their names on the cars they sell and businesses that use the phone to solicit business.

Philippine rebels end cease fire, attack convoy

MANILA, Philippines (AP) -Communist rebels in the northern Philippines announced Saturday they had ended their cease-fire with the government one day before the 60-day truce was due to lapse. Hours earlier, they ambushed a military convoy, killing three soldiers.

Chief government negotiator Teofisto Guingona said the administration of President Corazon Aquino, bolstered by overwhelming ratification for her constitution in Monday's plebiscite, would pursue peace talks with rebels in other parts of the country.

The government's Philippine News Agency said three soldiers were killed and a fourth wounded in the ambush, which occurred near the town of Luna in Kalinga Apayao province, 250 miles north of Manila.

The fatalities brought to at least 20 the number of people killed in renewed violence in different parts of the country since the rebels formally broke off peace talks on Jan. 30 after a month of inconclusive negotiations.

In a speech Friday, Armed Forces chief Gen. Fidel V. Ramos said the military will respect any regional cease-fire agreements that the government manages to work out, but will take punitive action against "hard-headed and stubborn" rebels

"If they continue to violate our laws and the cease-fire agreement itself, we are ready to hit them hard," he said.

Constitution celebration trying to catch public interest

By DEBE GRAVES Feature Writer

Celebration plans for the 200th birthday of the U.S. Constitution are moving slowly. Organizers of the bicentennial celebration are having difficulty planning original events which will catch the attention and hearts of Americans as did the recent celebrations of the Bicentennial and Statue of Liberty.

The Constitution has previously been honored in various ways. In October of 1797, the first warship completed by the new nation was christened the USS Constitution.

Later lovingly nicknamed, "Old Ironsides" the ship had a long and distinguished career in service of her country.

Many Americans are familiar with the scene of cherry blossom parades broadcast from the nation's capitol. The broad tree-lined street, which is the scene of the parades, stretches from the capitol to the Potomac River and is named Constitution Avenue. The famous Avenue has also been the scene of the ceremonial funeral processions of Presidents Eisenhower and Kennedy.

When the value of this historic document is considered it becomes apparent that we owe much to this monument to freedom, and yet how many of us can recognize even these few words found in the Preamble.

"We the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union..." Retired Chief Justice Warren

NEW YORK (AP) - Country music stars Crystal Gayle and Gary Morris will introduce a theme song they wrote for NBC's "Another World" daytime series when they appear on the program in early April.

The song "Another World (You Take Me Away To)," will be heard at the opening of each segment of the program, and Miss Gayle will appear in other segments besides the one to introduce the song, NBC said Wednesday.

"This venture is the first time that artists of the caliber of Crystal Gayle and Gary Morris have written a theme song for a daytime drama series, and we are honored," said executive producer John P. Whitesell.

Burger is heading up the presidentially appointed commission to implement programs for celebrating the Year of the Constitution. To familiarize people with the documents Burger plans to print 50 million copies of the document on cereal boxes. A Jan. 5, Wall Street Journal editorial comment suggests that this might be a good idea, "We're all for this," the article states, "since it would increase the chances that some activist judges we know will finally see a copy."

Gara La Marche of the Texas Civil Liberties Union also notes the importance of catching the interest of the American public in becoming more famliar with the Constitution. La Marche stated, "Let's celebrate the persistent strain of individual courage that translates words on a piece of parchment into advances for human liberty."

The primary goal of the commission is to promote education about the Constitution, Burger refers to this aspect of the celebration plans as a history and civics lesson for all Americans. Nearly $3 million will be spent distributing special lesson plans to schools and to support competitions among students to demonstrate understanding of the Constitution.

Daughters of the American Revolution could teach the commission a few lessons about how to celebrate the birth of the Constitution, they have been doing it for years. The Hereford chapter of DAR named Los Ciboleros in honor of the brave buffalo hunters who roamed the Texas plains from 1700 to 1875. Ruth Newsom of the chapter notes that they have observed Constitution Week since they were organized in 1970 with displays at schools and libraries, proclamations in the newspaper and radio interviews.

Local DAR chapter announces essay winners

This year the Los Ciboleros Chapter of DAR continues to celebrate the Constitution in combination with American History Month. A part of that celebration is an essay contest sponsored for area fifth, sixth and seventh grade students. "Annual essay topics the last two years have concerned the Constitution as its 200th birthday is upon us," states Newsom. The topic for the 1986 contest was "Prominent Signers of the Constitution-George Washington, Benjamin Franklin, James Madison and Alexander Hamilton.'

This year's topic is, "A Letter to The Editor, September 1787." Each participating student was asked to assume the role of one of the 39 signers of the Constitution, and as such, to compose a letter to a newspaper editor urging the ratification of the Constitution and explain the reasoning behind such action. Essays were judged by a panel on historical accuracy, adherence to subject, organization of material, originality, interest, neatness, spelling and punctuation.

Bronze medalalists for first place winners are Shambryn Leigh Wilson, a fifth grade student at West Central Elementary; Janice Duncan, a sixth grader at Shirley; and from Dimmitt, Lynn Ray Hand, a sixth grader, and seventh grader Christy Killough. These essays will be entered in a statewide competition to be judged against winners from other DAR chapter areas.

Certificates of award will be presented to second place winners Matt Allen Sims of Dimmitt; Susan Elizabeth Waggoner also of Dimmitt, Melissa Joe Riley and Trey Skiles tied for second place in the fifth grade division. Placing second in the Hereford sixth grade division was Landon H. Collard.

Now place yourself back 200 years in time and, through the talents and hard work of these winning essayists, learn more about the most enduring document of our time. The U.S. Constitution which has stood the test of time with very few amendments and in spite of those who love her and those who despise her.

Nicholas Gilman is a thirty-two year old lawyer, now residing in New Hampshire. He was a member of the national Congress for two terms and was one of the fifty-five fathers of the Constitution.

The Constitution is a plan of government. It is ours to know, use, and rspect. The Constitution can be a fair and effective document if used properly.

Dear editor:

I Nicholas Gilman, encourage all the states of the United States, to ratify the Constitution. All members of the Congress worked hard writing it. It contains laws that protect all United States citizens. The Constitution prevents one person from attaining too much power. It also allows citizens to vote on many issues.

Article One of the Constitution contains many laws concerning government services and officials. These laws can help us in many ways. One law ensures that government officials know and understands the needs of the United States citizens.

Article One ensures that all laws have been carefully thought out. It also says that each state has the same number of Senators so larger states can't have too much power or control.

Article One states that Congress uses the citizen's money to pay debts, insure defense, and provide for general welfare of the United States. Article One also states that money has the same value throughout the United States.

Article One also has established a system of Federal Courts that can be changed as needed to fit the changes in the country and it's people. It ensures that after studying the facts only Congress may declare war. Article One ensures that the armies will ready to protect the nation; a group of citizens, called the National Guard, is ready to be added to the regular army.

Article Two of the Constitution contains laws dealing with the President and representatives. It states that the President is free to do what he thinks is right. It ensures that the people chosen to fill important government jobs are picked carefully. Also, it assures that laws passed by Congress will be enforced.

Article Three provides laws separating innocent people from criminals. It states that all the jurors must agree on guilt before punishment is administered. This Article of the Constitution protects the innocent people and ensures that criminals are punished.

Article Four of the Constitution provides laws about changing or adding to the Constitution. It also ensures that your state will not be changed into a dictatorship. It provides means by which ammendments can be added, and the Constitution can be changed if needed.

Article Four assures that the Constitution can't be changed or added to unless desired or needed by the majority of the people.

Amendments were added to the Constitution because some people didn't think that there were enough laws protecting them. The laws grant freedom of religion, freedom of speech, and personal privacy. The amendments grant people methods of grievance. The amendments are additions to the Constitution that provide freedom to us.

The Constitution is a document that provides laws, protection, and freedom to us, United States citizens. I, Nicholas Gilman, encourage each and every state to ratify the Constitution within the given amount of time.

If established, the Constitution will help all people, As we know, in many countries, the government is not run by all the people. The Constitution will make the government belong to all the people, be run by all the people, and exist for the good of all the

It will protect all citizens and provide a new government. Under the Constitution the powers will be divided between state governments, and the national government. The Constitution calls for a separation of powers with in three branches of government. The judicial branch of government will decide the meaning of the laws, the executive branch of government will carry out the laws and the legislative branch of government will make the laws. The latter two are to be chosen by the people. Laws, enforcements, and punishments will be the same for everyone. To the editor:

I, James Madison, after much study of the proposed Constitution hereby give my ratifying vote.

BY JANICE DUNCAN

In the Preamble the signers of the Constitution set out the guidelines that the Constitution will follow, so that those who will read it will know what is written in it.

To form a more perfect Union, they set up a Congress to represent the people of this country. Because of my strong belief in individual freedom, I believe that all people should have the chance to help run their government. With representatives from each state in the legislative body, people do have the opportunity to express their opinions and concerns, so that changes can be made as needed. Also to help control the government there needs to be a leader. Someone who will have the final vote. But the people should have the right to choose who will lead them. The president will lead the people by making sure the Congress does not misuse their powers.

To establish justice in our country the signers of the Constitution created a court system so that the people will have the right to go to court. So the people will not have to take all their problems to Washington D.C. many courts will be set up in the states. Also a supreme court will be set up to take care of national problems. I support the judicial system because people can be judged fairly and laws and order will be kept. In order to establish domestic tranquility the signers of the Constitution developed a set of agreements between the states, so that no problems will come between the governments of each state. I believe that they did this because like members of a family the states have to get along

To secure blessings of liberty the signers of the Constitution made a way that the laws of the Constitution can be changed. To be able for this to be done two-thirds of both houses must agree that the law should be changed or by two-thirds of several states, shall call a convention for proposing amendments, which in either case shall be valid to all intents and purposes, as part of the Constitution, when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths thereof, as the one or the other made of ratification may be proposed by the Congress.

To secure general welfare the Constitution promises that all debts made by the United States before the adoption of the Constitution will be honored. It explains that national government comes before state government and that all states and Congress will support the Constitution as the supreme law of the land.

The signing of the Constitution is enough to set up the Constitution as law in the states that agreed to ratify

I think if we follow the Constitution and change it as it is needed this country will endure forever. Your support of the Constitution can change the way our government is Sometimes there's not enough money for gas to drive into El Paso with her two daughters, Hortensia, 20, and Sylvia, 18, to look for work.

"I never thought it would be this hard to get a job," said Mrs. Trujillo, who earned up to $7 an hour sewing waistbands to denim jeans at one of three former Blue Bell Inc. plants in El Paso.

Blue Bell was taken over in November by V.F. Corp. of Pennsylvania, and the El Paso plants now are Wrangler facilities. In the reorganization, some workers lost Farah Manufacturing Co. last year laid off 1,000 workers when it closed one of its plants.

Bobby Ortiz, Farah's vice president of administration, said that to retain its 2,100 jobs in El Paso, the company must have 1,800 workers in Mexico border cities, about 1,000 in a partnership operation in Torreon and 600 in Costa Rica.

"The jobs in Mexico are supporting the jobs in El Paso," Ortiz said. "When people say we've lost jobs to the maquilas, they'd be right, but only in very simplistic terms. You've got to talk about cost-averaging."

Minimum wage in the U.S. is $3.25 an hour, compared to 3,050 pesos in Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, across the Rio Grande from El Paso. The latest rate of exchange was 950 pesos to the dollar, but the devaluation continues almost daily, making it even more attractive for U.S. manufacturers to move at least part of their production

Many of the 1,000 Farah garment workers laid off last year have not found new jobs, Ortiz said, and Farah and the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union each contributed $20,000 to an emergency fund to help those workers.

"Most of them are functionally illiterate in English and Spanish," Ortiz said, making it more difficult to retrain them for other jobs.

The $40,000 fund began functioning in November and money still was left in January, he said.

"You don't have a lot to work with, so you do the best with what you have," he said. "It's lasted this long because of people's honesty when they are in dire need."

Tony Sanchez, manager of the joint board of the garment workers union, worked with Ortiz in setting up the fund.

"We're still interviewing people," Sanchez said. "There are several problems we've seen. Most of these people have been in the industry for 20 to 25 years. They're at an age that makes it difficult for them to start all over again.

LUFKIN, Texas (AP) - There are the woman said she saw a number of several sites around Lufkin where Satan worshippers often dance and perform sacrificial rites in the hours before dawn, said a woman who used to take part in the rituals.

She said an increasing number of people from Houston visit this area for satanic rituals because of a secluded lifestyle and the large remote areas in which to practice their religion, said a woman who used to take part in the rituals.

"People don't know what is going on," the woman, who left a Satanic group several months ago, told the Lufkin Daily News. "I just think the people of Lufkin ought to know what is going on right here."

The woman asked not to be identified because she feared reprisals from the Satanists.

different satanic rites, including the sacrificing of animals, usually black

"The animals always had to be black, that was the thing. Usually, we used cats or kittens. One time we used a snake. They would just take the cat while it was still alive and hack at it with knives, hatchets, swords and whatever else they had," she said.

The woman said that as the animal died, cult members would smear the blood on their faces and bodies, with some drinking the blood. Usually as they performed any of the rites, she said, members would chant, "Satan is God. Satan is Lord.""

"The big thing was to get to drink the blood," she said. "Some people would actually beg to be the one who In 20 or 25 meetings she attended, got to drink the blood. I never did that. I have a weak stomach as it is."

Light for the rituals was provided with large, black candles at each corner of a pentagram, she said. At the first meeting, the rites included drawing a pentagram on the ground with members dancing around the circle chanting. They also used a drawing of a gate called "Nanna."

The woman said the nature of the rituals changed after about the fourth meeting she attended. The rites began to include sacrifices and became more violent in nature. The woman said she, too, became more violent both in and away from the

She said for certain rituals one person would be picked to receive the blessing of Satan and would sit in the middle of the pentagram and perform the sacrifice.

It was at one such ceremony that she and some other members decided to leave the cult group and stepped inside the pentagram while someone else was within it, breaking the group's rules.

The woman said as she and the others danced around the pentagram, chanting "Satan is Lord," the person in the pentagram sacrificed a kitten.

"Blood went everywhere and he was rubbing it all over him and saying the Lord's Prayer backwards. That's when we stepped into the pentagram."

The woman said as she stepped into the pentagram, other cult members fell to the floor.

"The guy inside the circle started screaming real bad. Things started flying around the room," she said. ""Nobody was throwing them, but they were flying around. I was just standing there and it felt like spirits were just passing through me over and over. It scared me real bad."

Mary Birdsong, M.D.=

She said her group contained about 15 persons, but said there is an annual meeting at which more than a hundred gather for satanic rites. Rev. Thomas O'Quinn, a counselor at the Central Texas Youth Services Bureau in Killeen, and an expert on occult groups in Central Texas, said the woman's story sounds plausible.

"I've heard many of the same things over and over as I've counseled the young. I had one young man who was a recruiter for a satanic cult say many of the same things."

Museum presents L'Allegra Study Club program

A program on "Indians and Their Daily Lives" was presented Thursday at a regular meeting of L'Allegra Study Club in the home of Barbara Kerr, with Margaret Carnahan acting as co-hostess.

Club member Cathy Guseman and five other people associated with the Deaf Smith County Museum presented the special program. Program members have been trained by the Panhandle Plains Museum in Canyon to present the program to local school children and other interested

While telling about the daily lives of the men, women and children of the Southern Plains Indians, Guseman showed a number of artifacts on loan from the Panhandle Plains Museum. Some of the wide range of objects included infant shoes, children's toys, women's clothing, utensils used for cooking and daily chores, a buffalo head used in ceremonial dances, and an Indian suitcase. Mrs. Guseman also included a thumbnail sketch of the lives of Cynthia Ann Parker and her son, Quannah Parker, in her presentation.

During the brief business meeting led by President Mary Kay Mc-Quigg, Janice Conkwright, vice president and program chairman announced that the club would be traveling to Dimmitt for the Feb. 19 meeting. The program topic will be AUSTIN - From rocky heights in the Davis Mountains to golden sands along the Gulf of Mexico, Texas campers may choose among hundreds of sites for back-to-nature excursions. They're all detailed in a revised, free brochure, "Texas Public Campgrounds, just released by the State Department of Highways and Public Transporta-

Strictly informational (no pictures), the publication is replete with details about where to pitch tents where Indian teepees once stood, park an RV by an 18th Century Spanish mission, or bed down by a dinosaur trail.

The brochure's details include precise directions from the nearest town, facilities available, and recreational activities that may range from hiking and biking to fishing, swimming, boating, golf, or nature study.

It lists 382 campgrounds administered by federal, state, or local government authorities, a "public" directory designed to supplement commercial campground guides.

A free copy of the new "Texas Public Campgrounds" brochure is available at any Texas Tourist Bureau, or by mail from Box 5064, Austin 78763.

Church leaders seek harmony

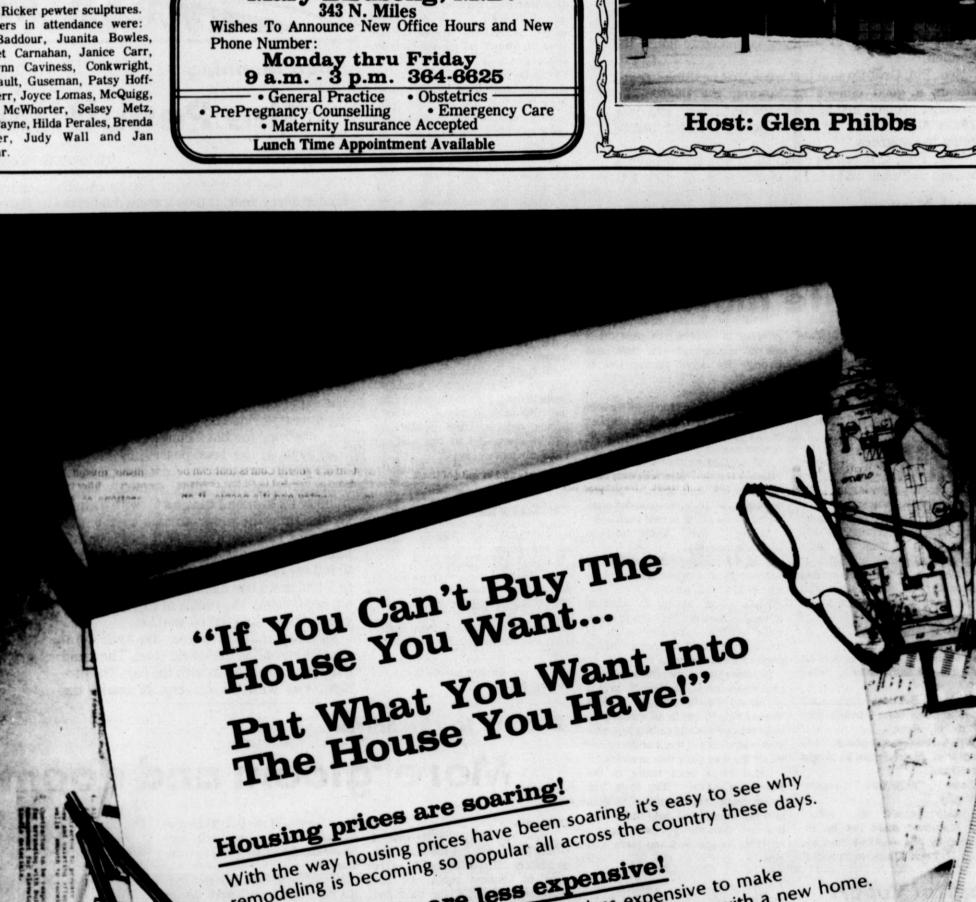

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) - A Roman Catholic bishop and a Jewish leader say a new era of harmony and understanding has opened between Catholics and Jews.

News reports indicate that 45 states already are trying to land the "superconducing supercollider" although the DOE confirmed only Monday that President Reagan has decided to proceed with its development. Procedures for site selection may be announced as early as next week.

We've been hearing a lot of "what ifs" lately on the controversial waste repository issue. I'd like to offer another: What if DOE gave the supercollider to the place that winds up with the nuclear waste repository?

I'm not talking about a straight trade-off. I'm saying let's pick the site most suitable for the repository, then give them the atom smasher, too. Even if Deaf Smith doesn't get the shaft, I'd be happy to gamble away our chance at the supercollider and let the one who gets the shaft also land the atom smasher.

Of course, this idea won't appeal to the other states who have not been selected as a possible site for the repository. But it could sure help DOE if they could offer such a "plum" to whoever is picked to house the "lemon."

Sen. Phil Gramm said last week that he thinks Texas stands a good chance of landing the huge atom smasher project, and he indicated he favors a site near Texas A&M, where he was a faculty member before going to Congress.

Hey, Phil, if it comes down to it, you could have a branch of Texas A&M in Hereford!

Still no way to legislate morality

I don't know how you legislate morality.

For centuries we have piled laws on laws seeking to "clarify" the Basic Ten.

Still, the highest court in our land can't yet agree on a definition of "pornography."

According to a report in U.S.A. Today, half of all American teen-agers are no longer virigns at 17. A million of them become pregnant each year.

And sociologists surrender. They give up. They say we can't expect young people to behave so the only thing to do is to hand out birthcontrol devices in the classroom.

TV and radio-only recently willing to accept ads for Kotex and Tampons-are now beginning to accept ads for condoms.

"Play safe," the ads say.

Sex education classes in schools emphasize the same theme: "Play safe."

Secretary Bennett says such classes are worthless "unless they teach moral values."

Imagine a bureaucrat who dares to suggest that children must be taught self-restraint.

Instead of "play safe," he says, "don't play."

Secretary Bennett says school board members must not be intimidated by the so-called "sex experts"; that sex education in school in order to be effective must teach the difference between right and wrong. He says fornication is "wrong"! He's asking a lot.

Every magazine stand and theater marquee and an increasing number of TV programs flaunt extracurricular sex.

"Moonlighting," "L.A. Law," "Dating Game" "Newlywed Game" and most any soap opera - daytime or night - features bed-hopping. Comics joke about sexual positions. Again, I don't know how to legislate morality. I am not passing judgment on our recent years' giggling about things we used to blush about. What I am asking is whether schools - however they try to teach self-discipline - are any match for the myriad other influences which permeate our culture. Dr. John Green, director of adolescent medicine at Vanderbilt, says it is unrealistic to subject 12 and 13-year-olds to sex in all media plus half-dressed models selling any product and then tell those children not to act the way their role models act. Loyal Meek once wrote in the Phoenix Gazette, "Why is it that government can dictate what goes into the mouth and nose to be sure it's not harmful-yet will permit anything to go into our ears and

Clements resisting new tax hikes

By JOHN SMITHEE

Governor Bill Clements delivered his state of the state address to a joint session of the Texas legislature on Wednesday. Clements quoted Sam Houston, who upon taking office as the President of the Republic of Texas for his second term, said, "By taxing our population as to the amount necessary would be to them

Clements pledged that the estimated $5.8 billion deficit would be solved by "living within our means" instead of raising taxes. Among Clements' suggestions for balancing the state budget include:

-Modification of the teacher's career ladder and teacher competency testing (savings equals $165 tion of state funding for full day kindergarten for non-compensatory students (savings on of the text book cycle issues (revenue equals $250 million) Sale of state lands and other nontax revenue (revenue equals $591

Other items that Clements called -no state personal or corporate in-

-Protecting right-to-work laws -better business climate expanding sales tax base and lowering rate to make reform

"revenue neutral" -creating a budget stabilization

-a federal oil import fee

-repeal subject-matter testing for

-reduce no-pass, no-play suspen-sion to three weeks

-more regional-based low-security

criminal justice reforms
All of Clements' proposals require agislative approval. There is no outh his ideas will be debated and nodified during the session. But the levernor's address, as it should, rovides a starting point.

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnsongrass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek tackles the government deficit again this

Dear editor:

Like Congress and everybody else I don't wake up every morning worrying about the national deficit.

If there's one thing Congress and I have learned it's that, try as hard as you can, you can't worry the deficit away. There it is every day, staring you in the face, unbalancing the budget and adding to the 2 trillion dollar national debt.

Nobody seems to know what to do about it. "All we're doing," a Congressman said again the other day, "is piling up a debt for our grandchildren to pay.'

I don't know about Congressmen's grandchildren, but who's to say most grandchildren won't be smart enough to pass the debt on to their grandchildren? On second thought, Congressmen's grandchildren should be the first to think of passing the debt on to their grandchildren. It's a trait they will have inherited.

After long and hard thought I have come up with an answer to the deficit problem.

Here's the situation: every Monday of every week the U.S. treasury borrows about 7 billion dollars to tide it over till the next Monday. Where does it borrow it from? From the people. They buy Treasury notes, which is nothing more than lending the government money at the going interest rate.

Now if a farmer for example, head over heels in debt, goes into the bank and asks for another loan, most likely the banker has to say "I'm sorry but I can't let you have any more

All right. Suppose that next Monday when the government, head over heels in debt, goes to the people saying "We need to borrow another 7 billion dollars," the people say "We're sorry, but we can't let you have any more money."

The Penultimate Word

THE NEW EDSEL

I have had a lot of cars. I have usually traded every year. It took a great deal of rationalization to justify my doing so.

It was even harder to sell my wife on the need to do so. I took a great deal of harassment because of my new cars. My father used to say I had owned every car made except the Saab. I took the flak and traded away.

Year before last I gave in. I bought an Audi and determined to drive the thing at least three years. When the car was one year old, I went through trade withdrawal. The experience was traumatic. I was entering a new world. The urge to trade almost overwhelmed me, but I hung on.

As soon as the year passed, 60 Minutes had a program about the Audi having a problem. It seems the thing suddenly has a mind of its own and runs away with people. By the time the program was over it was evident I had the Edsel of the 80's on my hands. By the next day, everyone I met had to tell me about the Audi. It is amazing how fast bad news travels. I grimaced and went on, recognizing the resale of my car was in worse shape than the oil market.

To make matters worse, the Audi Company stonewalled the whole issue. They said there was no problem with the car. The problem was with the drivers. It seems the drivers do not know the difference between the brake and the accelerator. When the car surges, the drivers panic and hit the accelerator instead of the brake. They did not explain why this only happens with drivers who own the Audi 5000. The drivers of the other Audi cars seem to be able to tell the difference. Maybe they should give an I.Q. test to everyone who buys an Audi 5000. Maybe only dummies buy the things.

I received a copy of the Audi Magazine the other day. I read the thing immediately in hopes they had some news about the problem. I thought maybe they had found a solution. The only solution, so far, is a gizmo on the gear shift that will not allow the car to be put into gear unless the brake pedal is depressed. The magazine had not one word about the main issue. It had some nice articles about driving through the Amish country of Pennsylvania.

It gave me hope. Maybe I could drive the car to Pennsylvania and sell it to some of those folks. The article showed them driving horse and buggies. They do not have television sets, so they probably have not heard about the Audi. Then the article said these folks do not believe in cars. About now, neither do I.

Letters to the Editor

More 'gloom and doom' forecast

Dear editor:

I, too, am entitled an opinion. I would like to remind the taxpavers and voters of Hereford they have the right to demand equal and fair representation from the paid and elected officials of Hereford on the nuclear waste repository issue. It is not only their right but their responsibility.

Also, I would like to encourage the large number of anti-dump people not to be swayed by the opposition. We do not have to accept what some are calling the inevitable. Contrary to DOE's media propaganda, we are winning this ball game. DOE has ripped its britches several times by violating the Nuclear Waste Policy Act, and in so doing have opened doors for us.

"Site characterization" is a glamorous term used to describe the destruction of Hereford. I believe many citizens are mesmerized with the safe-sounding term. There is in-formation available to you at the Nuclear Waste Task Force office in Dimmitt that will explain why.

DOE can be stopped. There are still some representatives in Washington who will fight for our Washington who will fight for our rights and who recognize that an underground repository, below an aquifer and situated on prime farmland, is not sound judgement. What is hoped by the anti-nuke people is that the Nuclear Waste Policy Act can be reopened, reevaluated and better guidelines be adopted. But it will take time. DOE isn't here yet d we do have time. Don't panic

Here are a few more "what ifs."
What if those hardy pioneers who settied Deaf Smith County and Hereford had accepted the "inevitable" of dryland farming and the elements of West Texas weather? There would have never been this "Vegetable

Bowl" capital of the U.S. What if we all gave the farmers and agribusinesses the support they so richly

What if DOE does win this one? Hereford will no longer be an agricultural community, but an industrial/military/political complex. Also it will mean that DOE is saying to us that Texas doesn't matter, and to the American people that DOE is powerful enough to do anything it wants to do.

Think about it. Is it worth a fight to the finish to stop them?

Naoma Spann 516 Sycamore

"We need the input of citizens" are saying 'what if' ... " For tha. quest we can thank Mr. Doug Manning. It has brought forth some crucial 'what if's from the citizens of this community.

The economic questions of placing a high-level nuclear waste repository in Deaf Smith County are of great concern, but they become less significant if we dare to take a step

What if we as a community fail to What if we as a community fail to be our brother's keeper? What if some of us gain a few or many dollars at the expense of the agriculture and agri-business that have sustained this town for so long? Yes, agriculture is in a severe depression, but wht if we jeopordize any chance of recovery by inviting a temporary project that will permanently devastate agriculture?

What if we make sacrificial lambs of the land owners who have ment of the land owners who have their lives on the land? What if we trade three generations of a family farm for site characterization?

What if we leave a legacy of nuclear waste to our children and tive farmland for a hungry world?

What if we close our eyes to what the Committee for Energy Awareness truly is and what they are really doing in our community?

What if in the name of economic gain or even economic survival, we sell out? I mean, who could blame us, we only wanted a piece of "the pie". What if a few get their "pie", the baker is gone and the rest are left wantingly hungry?

What if our Chamber of Commerce were making trips around the country seeking clean, safe industries, such as food processing or meat packing with the zeal they are trying to get offices for a nuclear waste

Last, but not least, what if in the name of "democracy" elected officials and those in positions of leadership choose not to represent their constituents, but the wants of a elect few or their own interests?

What if in trying to "get the oldmine" we send the message to the Department of Energy we'll take "the shaft?"

What if, this idea of courting Batelle and DOE is but a wonton display of monitary self interest and the rest of us are being sold for "thirty pieces of silver". What if...

Two-year-old who lost hands, legs overcomes handicaps

GORDON, Texas (AP) — His Medical College of Virginia, where a hands are gone, and his legs have been amputated below the knee. But Philip Newberry, age 2½, can drink apple juice from a glass, play football and climb trees.

He lost his hands and legs because of poor circulation in his limbs as a result of meningitis. But he has amazed doctors by recovering and learning to walk - and run without crutches.

"God did it. It was a miracle from God," says his mother, Jan, as she watches her smiling, red-haired toddler run around the spacious front yard of her mother's turn-of-thecentury home in Gordon.

From her porch view, she keeps one eye on a visitor and one on Philip. Strapped to the boy's legs, just below the knee, are artificial legs and feet made at the Scottish Rite Hospital in Dallas.

The stumps of his arms - the right one was amputated at the wrists and the other at the elbow - swing rapidly as he runs past his father, Randy.

"Tackle me! Tackle me!" Philip yells, after he scoops up a football and pretends he is running for a touchdown.

His father, a husky 36-year-old Southern Baptist missionary, grabs his son and the two tumble to the ground together, laughing.

The fact that Philip is alive at all is a miracle, the Newberrys said. The nightmarish events that led to the amputations began last March when Philip's meningitis was diagnosed.

The Newberrys, both missionaries to Brazil, were on furlough and had taken Philip and their other children, Amy, 15 and Joey, 13, to Richmond, Va., for a missionary conference of the Southern Baptist Foreign Mission Board.

While there, Philip became nauseous and developed a slight fever, and he kept falling asleep.

"We thought it was just a stomach virus and that he would be OK in the morning," his mother recalled.

By the next day, however, Philip's condition had worsened. He was taken to the intensive care unit of the doctor told the couple he had meningitis, a sometimes fatal disease.

n.I

The disease caused septic shock syndrome, which cut off circulation to Philip's arms and legs, resulting in gangrene. The doctors gave the Newberrys little hope.

"One of the doctors telephoned a representative of the Foreign Mission Board and told him to come and prepare the parents, because Philip wasn't going to make it through the day," his father said.

"On Easter weekend, he was the worst. His little hands and feet had no blood circulating at all and began to die. His legs began turning black."

The doctor treating Philip told his parents he had never seen anyone survive meningitis whose legs had turned black above the knee.

"Philip's legs were black all over," his father says. But he never accepted as real the possibility that Philip might die. "I told the doctor, 'Philip's going to make it becase there's thousands of people praying for him all over the country and even around the world,'

"he recalls. "He (the doctor) literally laughed when I told him Philip was going to survive because of prayer."

After Philip's condition improved, he was flown to Children's Medical Center in Dallas, where his legs and arms were removed.

One week later, he survived his second life-threatening crisis - his skin began sloughing off after a severe reaction to an antibiotic.

"His body rejected his skin and his respiratory system was affected," Randy Newberry said. "He lost skin over 70 percent of his body. Nerve endings were exposed, and he was in great pain."

Doctors again warned the Newberrys their son might not live.

Two weeks later, though, Philip began recovering, responding to grafts of pigskin that doctors had attached to his body.

Dr. Joe Warshaw, one of the boy's physicians at Children's Medical Center, gives a great deal of the credit for Philip's progress to "a very warm family situation."

Philip was fitted with his artificial legs at Scottish Rite Hospital last July. Before the end of the month, he began walking without crutches.

Doctors had told the Newberrys that few people who have had both legs amputated can walk without crutches, the couple say.

'The first week we taught him to take a few steps using a ring walker that fit under his arms," says Newberry. "He wasn't doing too good, though." But the second week, the doctors at Scottish Rite made new prostheses for him.

"We stood him up, and he started walking," Newberry said.

Dr. William Gaventa, a medical doctor who directs medical services for the Foreign Mission Board, said it was highly unusual for someone fitted with artificial legs to make such rapid progress.

'The ease and agility with which he resumed walking again was very unusual," Gaventa said. "They zapped them on him and he was walking in no time."

Meanwhile, on a recent sunny day, Philip, as active as any 2-year-old, continues his play in the front yard, throwing racks and with his mother's help perching himself in a small tree.

He puts on his Dallas Cowboys football helmet without help and begins running in circles.

As his father holds a football upright on the ground, Philip kicks it. 'Too hard," Philip tells his father. He then picks the ball up, cradles it in both arms, and begins tossing it underhand.

Philip can do many things with his arms, including eat one of his favorite foods.

"He can pick up french fries," his mother declares.

"Hey Philip, where do you want to go eat?" Randy yells across the yard.

"McDonald's," comes the instant

Philip has a spoon that can be attached to one arm to help him eat, and he has a small artificial arm and hand that he can move by flexing a muscle in the crook of his arm.

'Show him your muscle," Randy tells his son; Philip responds by extending his arm and demonstrating the instrument.

In the future, he may be fitted with expensive electronic arms, his parents say.

With Philip lying on his back, his mother straps on the artificial legs and feet. He turns over, pushed himself up from the floor without help, and walks over to his dad.

Doctors said it might take a year for him to get up like that if he fell down," Newberry says.

"Itches," Philip says, pointing to Newberry takes his son gently into his arms and scratches the right leg where the prosthesis is attached.

Philip then sits on the living room couch and begins drinking apple juice while his mother holds the glass.

"Do you want to hold it by yourself?" she asks.

No verbal response is necessary. Philip grabs the glass, balancing it between his arms, and drinks without spilling a drop.

The second secon

factness about his condition remind his mother of one of her lowest times when her son's legs and arms were amputated.

"Even though they were black and lifeless, there was still that little bit of hope," she says. "We knew when we took him into surgery - it was so

Although it was a sad time. Randy said that when he carried his son to the operating room, Philip, who had been crying, suddenly became peaceful.

"It was the strangest experience," he says. "When I picked him up to carry him to surgery, Philip just calmed down as if he knew relief was coming."

Still, he remembers that handing his son over to the nurse at the operating room before the amputations "was the hardest thing I've ever done in my life.'

Philip's progress has been so rapid that the Newberrys, who both grew up in Gordon in Palo Pinto County, have decided to return to Brazil to work in the Sao Paulo area. The mission board, which has paid all medical expenses, will allow Philip and his mother to return to Dallas each year t make sure his prostheses are working properly.

In Brazil, where Philip was born,

Her son's spirit and matter-of- the Newberrys believe their son will be an impressive testimony of the Christian faith.

> "I know God has a plan for Philip, and that that plan is much greater for Philip without hands and feet." says his father. "That's hard for a father and mother to understand. But I know God's in control and that he is going to do things through Philip that we don't even begin to think about."

> But for right now, Philip is content to do the things normal children do.

play with his favorite Sesame Street

He likes being around other children, and when the family goes to the First Baptist Church of Gordon, the Newberrys let him walk on his own once they reach the front door. "He finds his own way to his Sunday school class," his father says.

Making friends is another task Philip seems to find easy. As a visitor leaves, he says, "See you later, alligator."

Whiteface varsity boys beat Dunbar 64-48

By GARY CHRISTENSEN Sports Editor

The Hereford Whiteface varsity boys' basketball team broke open a close game Friday night by outscoring Lubbock Dunbar 15-1 during a five-minute stretch in the second half enroute to a 64-48 victory over Dunbar Hereford, playing at home, trailed the Panthers by one point at the end of each of the first two quarters. Dunbar held a 33-30 lead midway through the third quarter before the Whitefaces thwarted the opponents with a pressure defense.

The victory gives Hereford a 5-8 record in District 1-4A and a 10-17 overall record. Hereford's junior varsity team defeated Dunbar 67-41 to up its season record to 16-8.

Hereford plays its last home games of the season Tuesday night, against Lubbock Estacado. The junior varsity game is set for 6 p.m. and the varsity game is scheduled for 7:30 p.m.

After trailing 33-30, the Whiteface varsity tied the game up with a technical foul free throw made by Bobby Baker and a field goal by David Manchee. Manchee's basket was scored with 3:29 left in the third period.

Vincent Brown and Kevin Hansen scored field goals to give Hereford a 37-33 lead. Dunbar scored a basket with 2:10 left in the third quarter to move back within two points of Hereford, 37-35.

But Dunbar began struggling against the Herd defense, and Hereford increased its lead to 43-35 before the quarter ended. With a few seconds left in the period, Manchee stole the ball from Dunbar under the Hereford basket and scored.

In the first three minutes of the fourth quarter, Dunbar could only get one free throw and no field goals through the hoop. Todd Weaver stole the ball from the Panthers and scored with 5:10 left in the game to give Hereford a 52-36 lead.

The Whitefaces' biggest lead of the game was 20 points, when Brian Townsend hit a pair of free throws with 52 seconds left.

"I thought our players hustled real well. We shot the ball poorly again, but we made up for it with our pressure defense," Hereford Coach Mike Fields said.

"I thought Vincent Brown had an excellent game in the second half. He helped get us going," Fields continues.

"Rodney McCracken, Bobby Baker, and David Manchee all picked up the slack on offense. I think out depth wore Dunbar down in the second half.

"This Tuesday we play Estacado, which is in second place in the district. It should be a real good game for people to watch.

"It will be a fast-paced game. We expect the same tempo type of game we had against them before.

"We really appreciate the fan support, even though we're not in the district race anymore. We probably have the best crowds in the district," Fields adds.

Two Herd players scored in double figures - McCracken with 16 points and Baker with 12 points. Weaver scored nine points, Manchee had eight points, and Marcus Brown added six points.

Rebound stats showed Baker and McCracken each with nine, and Hansen with seven. McCracken led in steals with five, and Baker and Marcus Brown each had four steals. Marcus Brown also had four assists.

The varsity game began with Weaver scoring five points in the first 15 seconds. Weaver scored with eight seconds gone in the game, then stole the ball from Dunbar and scored a three-point play.

Dunbar did not make a shot from the field until there was 4:39 left in the first quarter. Dunbar then held a slim lead of 11-10 at the end of the first period, and a 27-26 lead over Hereford at halftime.

In Friday's junior varsity contest, Hereford ripped the nets for a 24-7 first quarter lead. The Whitefaces held a 41-22 halftime lead in the 67-41 victory over Dunbar.

Fourteen Hereford players scored in the game, led by John Streun with 12 points and Jason Bullard with six points.

Other Hereford scorers included Clint Cotten with seven points, and Raymond Romo, Jerry McDonald, and Ross Torres each with six points.

The game stats indicated a great team effort, with Torres leading in assists with six, and with Stuart Mitts with four assists and Romo with three assists.

Chad Clements led in rebounds with seven, and five other Hereford players each grabbed four rebounds. Torres and Bullard each had five steals.

After Tuesday's home games, the Whiteface varsity and junior varsity boys have an open date on Friday. Hereford plays its final games of the season at Levelland on Tuesday, Feb. 17 and at Borger on Friday, Feb. 20.

Hereford girls' teams both beat Dunbar

By GARY CHRISTENSEN Sports Editor

The second quarter proved to be the biggest difference in the game for the Hereford High School varsity girls' basketball team when it outscored Lubbock Dunbar 17-5 in defeating the Panthers 44-31.

The victory improves Hereford record in District 1-4A games to 4-11. The Whitefaces, who are 9-19 overall, play their season finale Tuesday at home, versus Lubbock Estacado at 6 p.m.

Hereford's junior varsity team made it two home victories Friday by more than doubling up Dunbar, 50-22. The HHS junior varsity has a 6-13 season record.

The Hereford varsity girls went from being in a 6-6 tie with a minute left in the first quarter, to a 16-6 lead over Dunbar with 6:15 left in the second quarter. Six of those points in that scoring spurt for Hereford were scored by Carmen Brockman.

Hereford went on to build up a 25-11 halftime lead. The Whitefaces' biggest lead of the night was 20 points at 35-15 with 1:46 left in the third quarter, when Katie Ramey hit a pair of free throws.

Hereford then went on to record its 44-31 victory. Brockman led the Whitefaces with 16 points, and Amy Coneway scored 12 points.

Coneway grabbed 15 rebounds, and Susie Kalka had 10 rebounds. Ramey had six rebounds.

Brandi Binder led Hereford with five assists and three steals. Kalka had four assists, and Coneway had

The Hereford junior varsity outscored Lubbock Dunbar 27-7 in the first half enroute to its 50-22 win. Susan Gage was high scorer for Hereford with 14 points, and Shea McGinty was also in double figures with 13 points.

Susan Bell scored eight points, and Renee Mercer had six points. Bell and Mercer each had four assists, and McGinty had three assists.

An outstanding night of rebounding saw McGinty grab 10 rebounds, Mercer nine rebounds, Gage eight five rebounds each. Bell and Mercer each had five steals.

HHS basketball players, parents to be honored Tuesday

Hereford High School's varsity basketball players and their parents will be honored Tuesday night by the Hereford Whiteface Booster Club.

Joe Hacker, club president, said the players and parents will be honored at about 7:15 p.m., after the varsity girls' basketbal game is

"We ask the support of all fans and ask the parents to be present," Hacker said.

Tuesday is the night of the final home games of the 1986-87 season for the Hereford Whiteface basketball teams. The varsity girls' game is scheduled at 6 p.m., and the varsity boys' game is scheduled for 7:30 p.m.

Tuesday's game is the last of the season for the varsity girls. The HHS varsity boys play road games on Feb. 17 and 20 - against Levelland and Borger - to close out their

It's great for tax purposes, too.

Mild weather boon to agriculture

COLLEGE STATION, Text as (AP) - Texas weather has been to the liking of farmers and ranchers t he past few weeks. Open, mild weath er has enabled farmers to get into their fields to work land for spring; planting and also has allowed cotton harvesting to resume in the plains, and livestock feeding has been light, noted Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter of the Texas Agricultural Extension Ser-

The springlike weather has been a boon to the agricultural sector, said Carpenter in his weekly report or 1 the state's agriculture. It has kept : supplemental feeding at a minimum, and is allowing soil temperatures to moderate in preparation for spring planting.

While field work has increased, surplus soil moisture is still causing some problems in a few areas. In the South and Rolling Plains, wet fields are still hampering the completion of the cotton harvest, Carpenter said.

Harvesting of sugar cane, citrus and winter vegetables continued active in the Rio Grande Valley. Some: winter vegetables also continued to move to market in the Winter Garden of Southwest Texas.

Farmers in some parts of Texas are planting spring wheat with the improved weather conditions. More spring wheat will be planted than normal this year because extensive wet weather hampered winter wheat planting last fall, Carpenter noted.

Most wheat and oats planted last fall are doing well with the open weather, but many fields need a topdressing of nitrogen to boost growth. Wet fields have delayed nitrogen applications up to now, Carpenter said.

Corn and grain sorghum farmers in the Rio Grande Valley will start planting operations soon. Most have their land ready and are waiting for soil temperatures to moderate. Current daily readings at the 4-inch depth are at the mid-60s. Livestock conditions remain good over the state, Carpenter said, with little stress on animals due to the mild winter weather. Early calving, lambing and kidding are active over southern and western areas. Ranchers in West Central Texas have started shearing Angora goats.

Reports from district Extension directors showed these conditions. PANHANDLE: Wet fields are still hampering field work in most counties. Wheat is beginning to make new growth with the warmer weather and recent moisture. Most livestock are in good shape, with supplemental feeding active. SOUTH PLAINS: Some farmers got into their fields the past week to harvest a little cotton and to start on land preparations for spring planting. Less than 5 percent of the cotton crop remains to be harvested. Wheat is making some progress with the warmer weather. ROLLING PLAINS: Farmers made little progress with cotton harvesting due to continued wet conditions. About 20 percent of the crop still remains in the field, with yields and grades declining. Small grains are making good growth except in areas with excessive soil moisture.

markets generally strong. NORTH CENTRAL: Farmers are busy planting spring wheat as field conditions improve. Also, a little cotton remains to be harvested in a few counties. Leaf rust and greenbugs are increasing in some wheat fields. Cattle look good, with feeding active.

Cattle are in good condition, with

NORTHEAST: Some wheat is in poor shape due to excessive soil moisture. Most wheat needs nitrogen, but wet fields are delaying applications. More open weather is needed for small grains and winter pastures. Cattle feeding continues, with plenty of hay available. Vegetable growers are getting land ready to plant, and some are setting out onion and cabbage plants.

FAR WEST: Field work is increasing as farmers make preparations for the upcoming crop season. Windy conditions have dried the topsoil over the region so that rain would be beneficial. Range and livestock conditions remain good to excellent although bitterweed remains a problem for grazing livestock in some locations.

WEST CENTRAL: Most small grains are doing well with the warmer, open weather. Leaf rust remains light in wheat. Cattle are in good flesh, with supplemental feeding light. Sheep and goats also look good; ranchers have started CENTRAL: Small grains are suffering from nitrogen deficiency; wet fields have delayed nitrogen topdressings. Leaf rust and greenbugs also are problems in some wheat. Most livestock are in good shape; cattle markets are stronger. Predator problems are increasing in livestock in some areas.

EAST: Winter pastures are making excellent growth with the warmer weather and good soil moisture conditions. Livestock look good, with feeding light. Vegetable growers are getting land ready for planting and are setting out some early season plants.

UPPER COAST: Farmers are getting into their fields to prepare land for spring planting following extensive delays due to rains. Wheat and oats are improving but need more open weather. Gardeners are planting early season vegetables. Light livestock feeding continues.

SOUTH CENTRAL: Land preparation for spring planting is making good progress following earlier rain delays. Wheat and oats are responding to warmer, open weather. Livestock conditions are fair to good, with feeding active. Gardeners are planting early season vegetables such as onions and English peas.

SOUTHWEST: Farmers have been taking advantage of the mild weather to plant spring wheat and vegetables and to get land ready for row crops. Windy conditions are causing a rapid depletion of soil moisture. Livestock conditions remain good. COASTAL BEND: Open weather is allowing farmers to make good progress with land preparation, and planting time for corn and grain sorghum is just around the corner. Wheat and oats are doing well but need more sunshine. Livestock look good; winter calving is about 35 percent complete.

SOUTH: Farmers are waiting for fields to dry and for soil temperatures to moderate to start planting corn and grain sorghum. Growers are harvesting sugarcane as field conditions permit. Wet fields have delayed the carrot harvest; prolonged wet conditions may have damaged some carrots. Downy mildew is heavy in cole crops due to the recent wet weather. Citrus harvesting remains active; the Texas citrus mite is in moderate numbers in some groves.

Study reveals soil fertility levels

A study was conducted in the spring and summer of 1986 to determine if low soil fertility levels could be limiting crop yields and water-use efficiency of field crops grown in the area served by the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1. A total of 853 soil samples were collected at one-foot intervals to a depth of four feet on 217 farms located in the Water District's service area. Plant nutrient levels measured included: nitrogen, phosphorus, potassium, calcium, magnesium, zinc, iron. manganese, copper, and sodium. Soil pH and salinity were also measured.

The soil sample analyses revealed that only nitrogen and phosphorus levels were commonly low enough to limit crop production and water-use efficiency of field crops grown in the

Nitrogen Requirements To Support Minimum Acceptable Crop Yields

It requires about 90 pounds of available nitrogen per acre to produce 80 bushels of corn, about 40 pounds per acre to produce 300 pounds of lint cotton, about 40 pounds per acre to produce 1500 pounds of grain sorghum and about 50 pounds per acre to produce 20 bushels of wheat. Three hundred of the 434 soil samples (69 percent) taken from the top two feet of soil were rated as "low or very low" in nitratenitrogen. The average available nitrate-nitrogen content in this group of soil samples was 4.77 parts per million or 19.08 pounds per acre. This would indicate that the average available nitrogen content in the top two feet of soil would be about 38 pounds per acre. Thirty-eight pounds of available nitrogen falls short of being adequate to support minimum acceptable yields for any major crops grown in the area.

Phosphorus Requirements For Minimum Acceptable Crop Yields

It requires about 70 pounds of available phosphorus per acre to produce 80 bushels of corn, about 30 pounds to produce 300 pounds of lint cotton, about 35 pounds to produce 1500 pounds of grain sorghum and about 35 pounds to produce 30 bushels of wheat. Two hundred and twenty-seven of the 434 soil samples (52 percent) taken from the top two feet of soil were rated "very low" in phosphorus. The average available phosphorus content of this group of samples was 2.77 parts per million or 11.08 pounds per acre. This would indicate that the average available phosphorus content in the top two feet of soil would be a little over 22 pounds per acre, which would also be inadequate to support minimum acceptable crop yields for any major crops grown in the area.

Analysis of this group of soil samples indicate that more than half of the fields sampled did not have adequate nitrogen or phosphorus to support minimum acceptable crops yields of any of the major crops grown in the area. In essence, those farmers who did not apply additional nitrogen and/or phosphorus were locked into less than acceptable crop yields regardless of weather conditions or water supply.

The results of this survey should be adequate to alert the farmers in the Water District's service area that they should not assume that their soils contain adequate plant nutrients to support minimum acceptable crop yields. It is recommended that the farmer collect soil samples from each field on each of his farms, have the soil samples analyzed and obtaina recommendation from a competent source as to the kind and amount of fertilizer, if any, he should apply to provide adequate nutrients for the type of crop he wishes to grow to support the level of yield he desires to produce.

Meeting to discuss market

By DENNIS W. NEWTON County Extension Agent

Local vegetable producers interested in marketing through the proposed new farmers' market in Amarillo will benefit from a program to be held in Amarillo Thursday night, reports County Extension Agent Dennis Newton.

The program will be from 6:30 to 9 p.m. at the Texas A&M University Agricultural Research and Extension Center, 6500 Amarillo Blvd.

Dr. Roland Roberts, vegetable specialist with the Texas agricultural Extension Service, Lubbock, will be the speaker. He will discuss adapted varieties which have higher consumer appeal and acceptance, harvesting and handling to maintain high quality, strategies for direct marketing and record keeping. Joe Bryant, Extension communications specialist at Lubbock will discuss publicity for the market.

Newton said all market garden producers in the greater Amarillo area are invited to the program.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socio-economic levels, race, color, sex, religion, handicap, or national origin.

Animal behavior key to safety ding animal behavior is basic for working safely with livestock.

"To handle an animal properly, you must know what will make a particular species 'rebel' and what actions will produce a positive response," points out Dr. Gary Nelson, safety engineer with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Nelson suggests that facilities be designed to encourage easy, balkfree movement of animals. Even seemingly minor things-like a puddle of water in a pathway can startle livestock.

Chutes should have solid sides to screen out visual distractions that might cause balking. Curved chutes are recommended so stock won't see the "bad news" until they are well into the chute.

Mangates are a must to permit quick, easy escape if an animal charges, says the safety specialist.

"Rough handling of animals to get them to do what you want can be both dangerous and expensive," Nelson points out. "It's much better to take advantage of their natural behaviors.

Understand the concept of an animal's "flight distance." When you move inside of this critical zone, an animal will move away. When you move back outside of the zone, the animal will stop again.

Working on the edge of the flight zone is a good way to move anima explains Nelson. If you penetrate the zone too deeply, an animal may turn on you or injure itself trying to Large facilities should have catwalks, so handlers won't have to enter crowded pens.

"Squeeze chutes have produced some really severe accidents," says Nelson. "Such chutes need to be redesigned to make them safer for people."

Sometimes the simple things cause the most injury to both animal and handler, says the engineer.

Fences with sharp edges (constructed from angle or channel iron, for example) can injure both animals and people.

Slippery floors cause many animal tripping hazards, like bars at ground

Proper lighting is a plus when moving stock because animals tend to move from darkness to light. However, the light must not shine directly into their eyes.

Texas cotton growers clutching at straws

By STEVEN H. LEE Dallas Morning News

First it was too dry to plant. What Texas cotton growers in the Southern High Plains region around Lubbock needed in late April 1986 was rain to wet the ground and take the seed. So it rained. And rained.

The dampness coupled with unseasonably cool nights gave way to seedling disease and something called wet-weather blight, which destroyed many plants and delayed additional planting. What the growers needed was warm sunshine.

So the sun came and stayed throughout much of July and the first part of August, giving growers their first true growing season of the year. It lasted until a freeze in mid-October, followed by additional rains that killed much of the crop and rendered a lot of the remainder substandard.

In January, with snow blanketing the Plains rather than the accustomed snowy white of cotton fiber in opened bolls, the growers who made a crop were preparing to close the year's harvest.

Production statewide would be down 36 percent from 1985, and average yield per acre would be down almost 14 percent. The weather that kept delaying harvest had lowered the quality of cotton produced in the Southern High Plains, resulting in an average loss of about $15 to $20 per bale produced.

Most telling is a preliminary Texas A&M University study that estimates about 900 farmers in the Southern High Plains cotton belt went out of business during 1986, plus about another 475 farmers in other areas of the Panhandle. That means cotton farmers would represent about half of an estimated 2,900 farmers statewide who shut down operations, according to the study.

Not all cotton farmers in the region had a bad year. Some pockets of land were spared drastic effects of the weather. Farmers who were able to irrigate last spring fared much better than others. And those who did make a crop are looking for improved conditions this year, based on increasing export and domestic demand.

But the ones who didn't make a crop may never be back.

"Sad, but Mother Nature may have been the last straw for a lot of people," said John Johnson, communications director for the Plains Cotton Cooperative Association in Lubbock. "It knocked out the good managers, the small managers everybody."

With the current cotton harvest expected to close within the next week or so, the Texas Agricultural Statistics Service in Austin projects that total cotton production statewide will total only about 2.5 million bales, compared with just more than 3.9 million bales in 1985. In the Southern High Plains, defined by the statistics service as a 16-county region from Lubbock to Midland and extending west to the

New Mexico state line, production will be cut almost by half to 800,000 bales from 1.5 million bales last year. The region accounts for roughly one-third of the state's cotton production.

Average yield-per-acre statewide is expected to drop 56 pounds to 348 pounds per acre from 404 pounds last year. And while planted acres declined 3 percent to 4.85 million acres from 5 million in 1985, harvested acres dropped 26 percent to 3.45 million acres from 4.65 million meaning that more acreage was plowed over or not harvested this

"For our area out here, it means that a lot of people didn't make a crop," said Cotton Fanning, assistant to the executive vice president of the Plains Cotton Growers Association in Lubbock. "Also, a lot of substandard crops didn't pay the bills. And there's a lot of people who won't be back.

"We had something like 40 fewer cotton gins operating this year. The ripple effects were felt (in the economy), from the barber shop on

Gary Ivey, who farms cotton about 35 miles east of Lubbock in Crosby County, estimated that more than 50 percent of the cotton growers in his county failed to make a crop this year. Ivey was one of the lucky ones. He produced what he called an average crop, although only about two-thirds the size of his production in 1979, a peak year. Ivey produced less than a bale an acre this year, compared with 11/2 bales an acre seven years ago.

During December, when growers typically are busy winding down the year's harvest, activity in Texas was at a "standstill" because of wet conditions, the statistics service reported. Cotton must be dry to be harvested, and the fields must be firm enough to support the heavy machinery required.

By the first week of January, the Texas cotton harvest was only about 70 percent complete, compared with 94 percent the same week last year, the statistics service reported. By the end of the month, the harvest was estimated to be no more than 90 percent complete. With January snows further delaying the harvest, Fanning said, "A lot of cotton may stay out there."

"We have a lot of acres that haven't been harvested, and probably a lot that never will," Supak

Supak estimates that for every week the harvest is delayed, the cotton loses value equal to about $4 a bale. Foreign matter, such as bark from the cotton plant, tends to collect in the fiber, and some cotton ends up on the ground.

Dr. Carl Anderson, an economist at the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in College Station, estimates that reduced quality has cost cotton growers in the Southern High Plains an average of 3 to 4 cents a pound. With about 500 pounds to a bale, that equals a loss per bale of $15 to $20 for a total loss of $12 million to $16 million for the 800,000 bales produc-

Growers who base their loan requests for the next planting season on production this year may find financing hard to come by, Johnson

But for those farmers who produced enough cotton to sell, improvingmarket conditions could signal a gradual turnaround beginning this year, he said.

"For the growers who made a crop (this year), the mood is a little more upbeat than it's been," said Ivey, the Crosby County farmer. "If they didn't make a crop, it all depends on whether they can be refinanced. For the ones with crop insurance, they will probably stay.'

"The good news is that cotton is selling," said Johnson. "Granted we have a short crop. But cotton is selling. Domestic consumption is up, and exports are as well."

Anderson, and other economists, give the 1985 farm bill credit for the improving picture for cotton sales. The legislation was designed to increase competitiveness of U.S. cotton exports while reducing "carryover," or oversupply stocks of cotton. It allowed the price of U.S. cotton to dip to world market levels and compensated growers for the price decline with income supports.

When the provisions went into effect Aug.1, U.S. cotton prices dropped about 40 cents a pound. As a result, Anderson said, exports of U.S. cotton from this year's harvest are expected to rise to nearly 7 million bales from less than 2 million bales

Domestic use of U.S. cotton also is expected to be about 7 million bales, which would bring total usage to about 14 million bales - the thirdlargest figure during the past 25 years, Anderson said.

'The 1985 farm program is certainly no panacea, but if the grower can maintain some form of production, they can hold things together."

The farm program currently is under attack for its high costs, and because overall exports of U.S. farm products declined from 1985. The Reagan administration has proposed reducing subsidies, and key Democrats in Congress are backing supply management provisions that would mandate cutbacks in production to raise prices - a measure which proponents say would improve income, and which Anderson and others maintain would hurt exports.

Either way, Fanning said, many cotton growers in the Southern High Plains are looking ahead to better times. "They're stoic, I'd guess you'd say," he said. "They've seen it all before."

"Definitely, it (reduced production) has taken a toll," said Dan Taylor, both a ginner and a grower who operates a farm on the border of Terry and Lynn counties, southwest of Lubbock.

Compliance reaction results in hearing farmers will have the opportunity to voice their concerns about the conservation compliance provisions at a special U.S. House Agriculture Subcommittee hearing in Big Spring on Friday, Feb. 13, Congressman Larry Combest has announced.

Congressman Ed Jones of Tennessee, Chairman of the Subcommittee on Conservation, Credit and Rural Development, will be joined by Congressmen Charles Stenholm (D-Texas) and Larry Combest (R-Texas) at the hearing. Testimony will begin at 9:30 a.m. in the East Room of the Coliseum at Howard College in Big Spring.

Congressman Combest said the congressional agriculture subcom-

WASHINGTON, D.C. - West Texas mittee is holding the West Texas hearing to receive testimony and first-hand knowledge of the reaction to the conservation compliance requirements.

> "Representative Stenholm and I called for this important hearing to provide area farmers with a forum to express their concerns and views regarding the conservation program," said Combest, who recently was appointed to the Subcommittee on Conservation, Credit and Rural Development. "In addition, I belive the testimony we receive will underscore the seriousness of these provisions to the full House Agriculture Committee."

Congressman Combest said his district has more acres that will be affected by the conservation compliance program than in any other district in the nation. "The farmers in West Texas are justifably concerned about conservation compliance. It has the potential to drastically change our farming situation," noted Combest.

The conservation compliance provisions require producers to implement a soil conservation plan on highly erodible land by January 1, 1990. Failure to fully implement this plan could result in the loss of federal farm program benefits.

We waited for years for rural electricity. Then... Deaf Smith Electric Delivered!

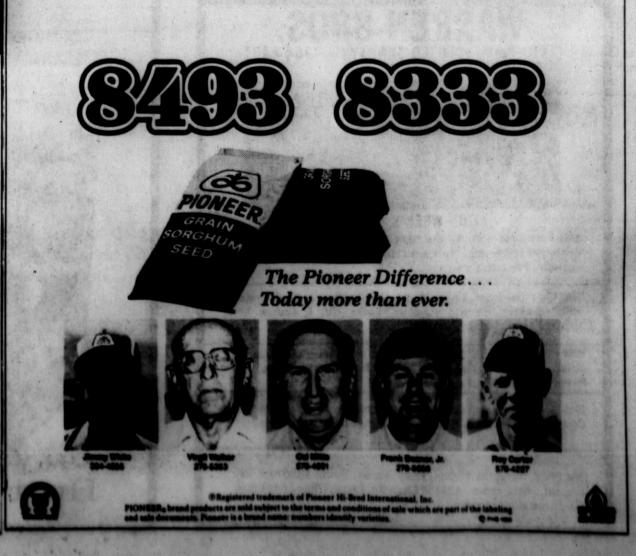

Others had a chance to supply our rural areas but chose not to. Then the member-owned Deaf Smith Electric Cooperative was organized. These rural pioneers brought electric power to anybody, anywhere who didn't have power.

First to serve, Deaf Smith is the first in service as well, with a modern efficient electric system which provides power at its lowest possible cost. We have a stake in our fine electric system and a share in $51/2 million in capital credits.

Mortgage rates create dilemma for homeowners

NEW YORK (AP) - Homeowners are facing an odd dilemma, one produced by good fortune. Their good fortune is the fall in rates on home mortgages.

Their dilemma is whether to hold on to even lower variable rate mortgages in the hope the rates might fall even lower - or to act now, nail down a fixed-rate mortgage and thus secure the future against any upturn in rates. Homeowners are not unique in having a dilemma. Stockholders, for instance, have a problem of their own in deciding whether to take their profits now, or take the chance they can ride the rampaging bull without getting dumped. But stock market people are investors, or even speculators or traders, while homebuyers generally are not. They are common folks with the primary goal of keeping a roof over their heads, and only secondarily of making a bundle.

Making the dilemma especially painful are factors such as these:

 Mortgage rates, having dropped to their lowest levels since 1978, could fall some more. Many housing people think they will, but not by very much, and probably not beyond this spring.

-There is a big difference in monthly payment costs between fixedrate mortgages at about 9 percent and variable rate loans, which might be a full point lower. To transfer would mean immediately higher monthly payments.

-To transfer from a variable to a fixed-rate loan also would mean onetime, up-front processing charges and points. Two points on a $50,000 mortgage costs $1,000, although it often can be included in the total amount financed.

The question to be answered by many families distills to this: Is it better to accept a relatively small amount of financial pain now in order to be safe from the possibility of a great deal of financial pain in years to come?

Those "years to come" put a dimension on the dilemma that many people find difficult to deal with. A difference of just $100 a month can mean $24,000 over the life of a 20-year loan. That is almost a year's pay for the typical family.

But the difference can be much greater if the loan is larger than $50,000 or the spread expands between future variable rates and existing fixed rates. And the betting is that it will.

One critical factor should be remembered - it never will be forgotten by some folks - and it is that variable rates can vary upward. While most have caps, they can rise by several points in a few years.

So, is it wiser to pay $1,000 or more in one-time charges, plus $100 a month extra, to nail down a rate you know you can afford? Or is it better to take the chance that rates will fall, or not rise very much, over months to come?

Some factors that might influence your decision:

-Are you now close to the limit of your ability to pay?

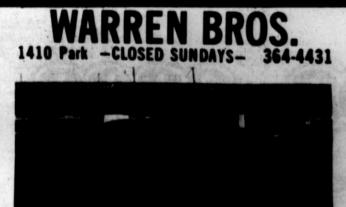

-Do you have a cash reserve? —Is your job secure? Remember, rising rates could accompany big lavoffs. -Do you intend to sell your house in the next few years, or keep it for the rest of your life? While questions pertaining to a person's own future are difficult to answer, they are tame when matched against the big economic one: Are interest rates likely to rise, remain close to where they are, or fall some Immigrants positively impact U.S.

SEGUIN, Texas (AP) - Central Americans put more into the United States economy than they take out, panelists at a symposium on Central American migration said.

The Krost symposium, which continued today at Texas Lutheran College, has attracted immigration officials, attorneys, researchers and church officials who discussed the plight of Central Americans.

Nestor Rodriguez, a sociologist at the University of Houston, said his two-year research on illegal immigrants indicated they have a positive impact on the community.

He said there are about 300,000 native Hispanics in the Houston area along with 100,000 Central single-welt seat cushion, button-tufted pillow back legal aliens from Mexico.

"They are taking up housing that otherwise would have been left vacant. There are signs that say, '$1 move-in, no deposit, free English classes,' "Rodriguez said. "Instead of undocumented workers, maybe they ought to be called undocumented consumers."

James Loucky, who works with Central Americans in Los Angeles, said there are about 350,000 Salvadorans and 120,000 Guatemalans in that area.

He said they add dollars and Stephen Moore, an economic policy analyst with the Heritage Foundation, a Washington D.C.-based think tank, agreed that the United States benefits from illegal immigrants.

"Immigrants don't take jobs. They make jobs when they go to the store and spend money," he said.

Moore said that in 1985 he questioned 50 prominent U.S. economists and that 82 percent said immigrants, including Central Americans, had a favorable impact on the United States and 12 percent said the impact

He said there are between 2 and 5 million illegal aliens in the United States, despite higher estimates.

Most of the Central Americans have blended into communities in Houston, Chicago, Los Angeles, San Francisco, New York and Washington, panelists said.

John Abriel, deputy district director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service office in San Antonio, said debates over legal and illegal immigrants envoke "a lot of emotional rhetoric."

"I fail to see any significant impact, adverse or beneficial, from Central Americans as opposed to any other nationality," he said. "Everyone has similar human

'Cancer often curable, fear of it often fatal'

By SANDY PANKEY Lifestyles Editor

Because Kee Ruland had always been encouraged by her physician to check her breasts on a regular basis, this self-breast examination was routine or so she thought.

"I had found lumps in my breasts before and had had them checked by my doctor," Ruland explained. "But they never amounted to anything. However, even before I consulted my doctor about this one, I knew something was wrong. It was larger than the others I had found. It just felt different.

"Each of us should know our own bodies so that we can be aware of any changes. Although I was concerned about the lump, it wasn't until I spoke to a close friend who is a registered nurse, that I decided to make a doctor's appointment the next day."

Because of her promptness. Ruland is alive today. She lost her breast to cancer, but says that it was a small price to pay in exchange for her life.

"Following my physical examination, my doctor suggested that I check into the hospital to have a biopsy performed. Cancer was still, at that point, not a major concern. After all, I was only 39-years-old and there was absolutely no history of cancer, much less of breast cancer, in my family," she said. "Everyone on my side of the family died of heart attacks."

The night before her biopsy, Ruland's surgeon came to her room to explain the surgical procedure; if there was a malignancy, appropriate measures should be taken. "In other words," she explained, "he was trying to prepare me emotionally that there was a possibility that I would have to have my breast removed." 'Maybe some women go through a traumatic shock the initial moment they discover that they have had a radical mastectomy (the removal of the breast, surrounding muscles and lymp glands) but I didn't."

She continued, "I was still very groggy when my doctor came to me in the recovery room to give me the news. He simply said, 'Kee, I'm sorry. It was malignant.' I don't recall saying anything, but my family said I cried."

During the nine days that Ruland was hospitalized, she didn't linger on the thought that the cancer might occur again or that the surgeon may not have removed all of the growth. "I was kept too busy. I was doing my physical therapy and had so many visits from family and friends I didn't have time to dwell on the negative aspects of the surgery.

"I had many supportive friends. One particular visit was from Calla Mountz. She told me that she had had a breast removed 20 years earlier. That made me feel so good because she was alive to tell me about her success story. You often hear about cancer related deaths but seldom about the people who have survived the disease.

"Let's face it, 10-years ago people didn't discuss breast cancer, but now ' it's not an automatic death sentence. With early detection, it is 90 percent curable.'

Ruland commented that losing a breast didn't bother her because she wanted the cancer out of her body. "It's hard to describe exactly what I felt but I knew that something unhealthy was growing in me and my only thought was taking it out. I've never been a vain person and the thought that I might appear differently to others wasn't a great con-

"Immediately after I was released from the hospital, I headed straight to the beauty shop." You can imagine how wonderful it felt to have my hair shampooed after nine days, sheer heaven," she laughed.

When Ruland arrived home, she did finally examine the surtures and "large indention" in her chest and arm. "It wasn't a pretty sight but I kept saying to myself 'I AM ALIVE.'

"There were only two instances that I actually cried following the surgery. Once was when I woke up in the middle of the night and the reality of it all hit me. Would I live long enough to see my children raised"? When you are confronted with having cancer, you can never just blow it off. That word CANCER is always in the back of your mind. The second time I broke down was when I couldn't move my arm to run the vaccum cleaner. Such a silly thing."

Due to Ruland's positive outlook on life and her family's sense of humor, she experienced a rapid recovery, not only physically but emotionally.

"There were never any secrets about my illness. My family and I talked openly about the surgery. It wasn't a hush-hush thing," she emphasized. "I was told to exercise my arm every day to regain strength. My son would help me "walk the wall" with my hand. He would place a line on the wall, marking it a little higher each day. He would stand there until I scaled it to his satisfac-

"My husband was terrific throughout this time. After awhile of me loafing around, he suggested that he wash the dishes and I dry and put them up in the cabinet. I would tell him it hurt to raise my arm but he kept coaxing me until I did it."

Following two weeks of recuperating, Ruland went back to work as a kindergarten teacher at First Baptist Church: "I had too much to do to sit at home, besides it was driving me crazy having people chauffer me around. It was time to get back into the main stream of a lump in her right breast. "I didn't realize that I was so worried about it until I was told it was benign. It was like a tremendous weight had been lifted off of my shoulders. It's important for those who have had breast cancer not immediately assume that if another lump is found that it is also malignant. It does, however, need to be checked without delay," she

Because of her bout with cancer, Ruland has a better understanding of people who have also had a malignancy and she spends much of her time serving as the public education chairman for the Deaf Smith County Chapter of the American Cancer Society. She is also a certified Reach for Recovery volunteer for the chapter.

"I want to give back as much warmth and undertanding that I received. If I can help women understand that they can learn to cope with the disease, as well as help educate them, then I feel I am contributing something.

"It's vitally important to remember, that with knowledge fear is diminished," she concluded.

As of March 15, 1988, Kee Ruland will be celebrating 10 cancer-free years - a time period in which she will be considered cured of the disease. What could have meant the end of her life has, in reality, meant a new beginning.

Happy anniversary!

Ann Landers

Most impotence stress-related

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I married "Larry" about 18 months ago. He never had a heavy sex drive, even at the beginning of our romance, but we always managed to make it together even though he never peeled the paint off the bedroom walls.

About three months ago he began to be "too tired" for sex. Last week I learned the truth. My husband is impotent. We are both 30 years old, much too young to give up on this part of marriage. I am concerned and don't know what to do. Larry refuses to talk to a doctor. He suggested that I write to you.

Meanwhile, my sister had the same problem with her husband three years ago and found out that he was fooling around with his bookkeeper. I have seen no evidence of unfaithfulness; in fact, I would bet my life that Larry never has been with any woman but me. I might mention he is in a high pressure business (Wall Street) and has been taking tranquilizers for the last few months. Could this affect our sex life? Thanks for your help - Great

DEAR G.N.: You may have diagnosed Larry's problem on your own. Tranquilizers can indeed cause impotence. So can exhaustion and anxiety. Although there is always the chance of an organic problem, most male impotence is stress-related.

I hope you can persuade your husband to see a urologist. If there is no medical reason for his inability to perform sexually, try to persuade him to get short-term counseling.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Can you stand another letter about a veterinarian, who believes he ought to be paid?

I am not sour on the human race but I would like to be reimbursed for two days of intensive care and support therapy administered to a young cat following surgery to remove three intestinal impactions that had been there for at least three weeks before the owners noticed the cat wasn't eating!

Unfortunately by the time they brought the cat in he was emaciated and unable to survive the surgery. (Another instance where the operation was a success but the patient

Can you suggest a way, seven months later, that I might persuade the owner to pay the bill for $185? If you cannot come up with a brilliant idea I will go to court. - Calgary Herald

DEAR CAL .: Sorry, I am fresh out of brilliant ideas on how to get people to pay their bills. If your story is as you presented it, I think you ought to inform the derelict party that you plan to sue. If he (or she) does not settle the matter to your satisfaction, take legal action.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My 17-year-old grandson telephoned a girl in another city to tell her he had a gun and was going to kill himself. She was frantic, didn't know where his parents worked and didn't know who to call. The only contact she had was the boy's cousin in Florida. She telephoned him but her call came too

I would like to advise anyone who might be faced with a similar situation to do the following:

1. Call the suicide hotline in the town where the person lives and give them the telephone number and address of the party in trouble.

2. Call the police and notify them of the situation at once.

How I wish the young girl my grandson phoned had read a letter like this.-G.G.

DEAR G.: Here it is. Too late to help your grandson, but I hope in

If not used correctly, kerosene heaters can be fire hazards, says a Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service housing

Many Texans use kerosene heaters especially in areas of the house not well served by central heating or in unheated workshops, garages or barns, says Dr. Susan Quiring.

Quiring offers these suggestions to lessen the risk of fires or other hazards.

-Use only 1-K grade kerosene. Don't use lower grades because they may contain high levels of sulfur which increase sulfur dioxide emissions from heaters and pose a possible health risk. Different gradesof kerosene can look the same, so ask the dealer for 1-K.

-Never use gasoline. Even small amounts of gasoline mixed with kerosene can increase fire risks.

-Store kerosene in a separate container intended for and clearly marked "kerosene." This helps avoid using contaminated fuel or getting the wrong fuel by mistake. Kerosene containers are blue; gasoline containers are red.

-Don't refuel the heater indoors. Fill the tank outdoors, away from combustible materials.

-Don't refuel the heater when it is hot or in operation.

-Don't fill the fuel tank above the full mark. The space above the full mark allows the fuel to expand

OSTEOARTHRITIS

INCREASES WITH AGE ATLANTA (AP) — Recent studies show that osteorarthritis of the knee continues to increase in prevalence as people grow older, according to the Ar-thritis Foundation.

It says Boston researchers learned that X-ray evidence of osteoarthritis increases with age in both males and females. Up to age 75, it was equally evident in both sexes, but after age 75 women had a higher rate of the disease However, the foundation points out that slight X-ray evidence of the disease does not always mean that pain and deformity will follow.

Osteoarthritis is the most prevalent form of arthritis, affecting about 16 million Americans.

Two million youngsters unsupervised

WASHINGTON (AP) — The end of the school day means an empty house and time left on their own for more than 2 million American youngsters, largely children of white, upper income families, the Census Bureau reports.

Known as latchkey children, these boys and girls have drawn considerable attention in recent years as sociologists and politicians expressed concern about their welfare.

The new Census study of children ages 5 to 13 found that 7.2 percent of them, or 2,065,000, are on their own for at least some time after school—a share ranging from only about 1 percent of those age 5 to nearly 14 percent of the 13-year-olds.

And for those without supervision, the white, upper- and middle-class neighborhood appears the more common scene for their free time than the low-income scene.

Public invited to meeting

The Deaf Smith County Genealogy Society will meet at 7:30 p.m. Feb. 12 in the Heritage Room of Deaf Smith County Library.

The program will explain how to write letters to obtain county records and what information is available in county records. There will be a panel to discuss these subjects and to answer questions.

Anyone interested in genealogy is invited to attend. The society's 1987 membership drive is open. Dues are $5 per person or $8 a couple for one year.

Belgium

Belgium was ruled by foreign leaders for 1,800 years before becoming an independent constitutional monarchy in 1830. Today the nation is divided between the Flemish in the north who speak Dutch and the Walloons in the south who speak French.

"Children whose mothers were better educated or in white collar occupations and children in higher income households were more likely than others to be reported as unsupervised by an adult after school," the study found.

In families in which the mother worked full time, the share of children on their own after school varied from 10 percent for those with incomes of $10,000 or less, to 16.6 percent for incomes over $35,000.

Mothers who did not complete high school left 7.8 percent of the children on their own after school, compared with 14.8 percent for collegegraduate mothers.

And when measured by mother's occupation, the share of children left alone varied from 10.8 percent for service workers to 16 percent for executives and administrators, according to the study.

This may result from some higherincome families having fewer relatives available to care for youngsters, the study suggests. And those families may live in neighborhoods which the family perceives safe for older children to be on their own.

"Self-care may be a product of confidence in the child and the environment for some parents, as much as it is produced by lack of alternatives or their inability to pay for care among others," the study states.

"Self-care was likely to be shortterm," the study also found, with many on their own for less than an hour and only one in 10 for more than three hours.

On racial lines, despite the fact that black women are more likely than whites to work full time, black children were less likely to be left on their own, the Bureau found.

While the share of youngsters supervised by their parents was about the same for both races, blacks were more likely to find some other relative or another adult to watch over their children after school than whites, who more often left their offspring to their own devices.

This may be a result of differing family resources available to blacks, the study commented, or may reflect different parental concerns about the safety of the environment for children to be left alone.

"Whatever its cause, the difference in the proportion of children reported to be unsupervised by an adult is real," the study said, with the percentages in some categories twice as high for whites as blacks.

The new study, the most recent statistics available, is based on a survey of 59,500 households taken in December 1984.

Alone and a stranger in a foreign country, Mary Ashley finds herself involved with two dynamic men: Mike Slade, a tough career diplomat who is her deputy chief of mission; and Louis Desforges, a doctor attached to the French embassy. She comes to believe that one of them it out to kill her.

In Windmills of God," Sheldon has written a gripping tale with compelling characters that remain forever etched in the reader's mind. It is the tale of a woman's heroism against an unknown terror spanning the whole arena of international intrigue. Sheldon is the acclaimed author of "If Tomorrow Comes," "Rage of Angels," and "Master of the Game."

In "New Orleans Legacy," Alexandra Ripley takes us into the colorful world of antebellum New Orleans. She makes this sultry delta city come alive with rich historical detail. 'New Orleans Legacy" is the spellbinding saga of Mary MacAlistair, a determined spirit who, suddenly orphaned on her sixteenth birthday, is given a small wooden box containing a few memories of a bygone era, the only key to her heritage. From a sheltered convent boarding school in teh Allegheny Mountains, Mary sets out on a riverboat that thes her to the spirited bawdy New Orleans of 1851 in search of her family.

Once there, the path to her roots is a long one. Mary is forced to make her own way in an elegant couture establishment. Not since Scarlett O'Hara and Rhett Butler has a novel brought to life a more passionate couple than the dapper, seductive. Valmont Saint-Brevin and the headstrong, indomintable Mary MacAlistair. They are cuaght ina love that is undeniable, yet futile, until Mary discovers the secret of her past and is able to claim her New Orleans legacy.

Other new books available this week are "Mother, I have Something To Tell You' by Jo Brans, 'Amerika" by Braune E. Pouns, and "Marriages" by Alan Ebert.

Proposed legislation falls far short

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) -Legislative proposals that would require midwives to undergo minimal instruction fall short of eliminating the dangers of untrained people delivering babies, a public health of-

The Rio Grande Valley, with one of the nation's highest birth rates and one of the youngest population medians, is one of the country's poorest regions. As a result, officials say, a large number of midwives serves a population of about 500,000 on the U.S. side of the border.

That number could be closer to 1 million considering the number of Mexican women who cross the border just to give birth in the United States, and who also are dependent upon lay midwives, said Dr. Charles Wilson, medical director of the Hidalgo County Health Department. Children born in the U.S. are automatically citizens.

Holly Scholles, executive director of the Association of Texas Midwives, said one-fourth to one-third of the 400 lay midwives in Texas practice in the Rio Grande Valley.

According to Wilson, anyone can practice midwifery now by registering with a county clerk and paying a $25 fee. He said the Texas Legislature appears to be sidestepping the real issue of licensing midwives with bills that address only part of the problem.

Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Canyon, introduced a bill this week that would require lay midwives to attend training courses by the Texas Department of Health.

Ms. Scholles said the course provides introductory information that is insufficient to train lay midwives.

"It's very basic. It's not an obstetrics or midwifery textbook at all," she said.

Joel Brandenberger, an aide to Sarpalius, acknowledged the "bill isn't going to solve the problem all at once" but was a "common sense first

Ms. Scholles said her association instead supports a bill to be introduced by Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville, that would authorize midwives to be certified in cardiopulmonary resuscitation and to perform newborn screening tests.

Local health departments would be required to provide medical and laboratory support services to midwives' patients, Uribe said.

Sports fans

A 1985 poll conducted for Sports IIlustrated magazine showed the 71 percent of Americans claim to be sports fans, with 73 percent particisports fans, with 73 percent participating in sports or fitness programs. The fans are mostly interested in professional football, (60 percent), baseball (59 percent), fishing (43 percent) and college football (42 percent.)

The bill would require midwives identify themselves to the state health department yearly and would allow them to administer staterequired prenatal blood tests and eyedrops to newborns that prevent

"It's fine if they want to allow them to administer eyedrops, but where is the training for them - if they don't know how to it or when to do it," Wilson said. "You can allow someone to fry chicken, but if they don't know how to cook, they'll probably burn it."

Wilson said training and licensing should be required and violators should be prosecuted.

Uribe said Thursday that improving midwifery is a slow process.

We're attempting to improve the health care, the obstetrical care for that individual who cannot afford a physician or a hospital," Uribe said Thursday. "It's a step, it's an evolving process. We're progressing slow-

Wilson said lay midwives in the Rio Grande Valley receive between $250 and $500 for delivering a baby compared with the $3,000 cost of an obstetrician's prenatal care and a hospital delivery.

Risks associated with untrained midwives include fetal brain damage, postpartum hemorrhaging that could threaten the mother's life, infections to the mother or baby, Wilson said.

"Even obstetricians are being sued if they don't deliver a perfect baby. The chances with a (lay) midwife go up by a factor of a million," he said.

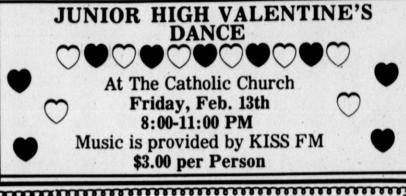

Most midwives in the Rio Grande Valley are women who have no more experience or training than what they receive delivering babies in their homes or in the patient's home, and others are Mexican doctors who can't make a living in Mexico, so practice as midwives in the United States, Wilson said.

In addition to lay midwives, there are also registered nurses who have received additional training in delivering babies.

Wilson said all midwives should be similarly prepared, but finding the money for the classes or to license midwives is a problem as the Legislature grapples with a $5.8 billion deficit.

"No one wants to spend," Wilson said. "I don't know how many millions of dollars it would take to set up these midwife schools.'

There are 19,338,000 people living in the Republic of China on Taiwan.

Accent on Health

Lead poisoning has a history as long as mankind's use of metal. As early as 6,000 years ago, people began to mine, smelt, and use lead in a variety of ways. Early peoples made containers, art, and religious artifacts of lead. The Romans added lead to wine to improve its taste-a practice which may have contributed to mental illness and sterility among the ROman aristocracy.

In the Middle Ages, cities using lead to carry drinking water suffered epidemics of lead poisoning.

Lead plumbing and old paint containing high lead levels were still in use well into this century in the U.S.

Today, lead is still an important and pervasive element in industry. Even the nuclear industry and medicine employ lead as shielding against radiation.

However, strict government controls, such as the 1970 Clean Air Act limiting lead in gasoline, have made lead poisoning less frequent. The average American's blood level of lead has been reduced by about 27 percent in the past two decades.

"As lead poisonings decrease, people may become less cautious, even ignorant that potential danger exists," Dennis Perrotta, director of the Texas Department of Health's Environmental Epidemiology Division, said. "We don't want the public to grow careless out of ignorance. The number of poisonings may be down, but the toxicity of the metal is the same as it always has been."

Perrotta added that children run the highest risk of lead poisoning.

Extension Homemakers News

By BEVERLY HARDER County Extension Agent CONSUMERS WANT LEANER BEEF

Major health and nutrition organizations are recommending that Americans eat lean meat. A national study conducted by Texas A&M University meat scientists in 1986, showed that consumers prefer lean meat with little visible fat, and beef producers have responded to consumer demand with beef that is six percent less fat than that produced in the past.

So what's to prevent consumers from eating lean beef? Evidently nothing except their ability to pick it out in the meat case and to prepare it well. It you're shopping for lean beef, begin by checking the outside fat on the cut of meat. Extra trim cuts should have less than about thirdinch outside fat. The other type of fat in beef - the marbling in the red meat itself - varies according to the cut. In general, the leaner cuts of meat include flank steak, top and bottom sirloin steak, top loin steak, top round steak, beef tenderloin steak, round tip roast and bottom round roast.

Many lean cuts of beef become tough if prepared by dry heat methods, such as broiling or grilling. But you can overcome this by marinating the meat first. Stirfrying with a minimum of oil, or pan broiling which is similar but uses of fat or water, are other good methods for cooking lean beef.

To slice meat thin enough for stirfry dishes, partially freeze the meat and then slice with a sharp, thick butcher's knife. The result? Nice, thin slices of meat just right for the high heat, fast cooking required with stir frying.

Avoid overcooking lean beef. As it cooks, water and fat cook out. If you start with a well-trimmed piece of beef, watch cooking time carefully so that you do not lose the juiciness. To prevent a dry texture, cook to rare or not past medium. Browning the exterior of the meat quickly will help hold in the juices.

With the changes in the meat case, there's little to prevent most people from including lean beef in their

COCAINE ABUSE
CONSTANT IN COLLEGE
WASHINGTON (AP) — The use of cocaine among college students has remained constant since 1980 despite a general decline in the use of illicit drugs, reports Family Practice News.

The reports raining Fractice News.
The report represents the findings of a study for the National Institute on Drug Abuse on trends among Americans aged 19-27 years. It was conducted by the Institute for Social Research at the University of Research at the University of Michigan.

The percentage of college students who reported using marijuana at least once during the previous year declin-ed considerably from 51 percent in 1980 to 42 percent in 1985.

The reported use of all illicit drugs except cocaine was roughly halved during that time. However, the prevalence of cocaine remained constant during that period at about 17 percent.

The prevalence of cocaine seems to rise steadily until at least age 22, then remains fairly constant until at least

Antique clocks come to life

SALADO, Texas (AP) — The antique clocks that come to rest on the walls of Guliver's Clock Shop tell more than time, Dick Buzzard says.

Buzzard, who has repaired clocks for 35 years, translates the quiet language of time pieces into working stories of the past.

An English gallery clock once owned by M.I. Hummel, the 20th century painter of children's scenes, adorns one corner of his shop.

"When I restored the clock, we had no idea of the clock's history," Buzzard says.

"But the clock didn't come with the hands, so I was digging around in the bottom, and I found the hands and a hostility on the clocks they discovered.

"This clock was hit by seven bullets, including one that hit the door," Buzzard said.

The differences among clocks from different countries can be as wide as the differences among the countries themselves, he says.

"This is a Japanese schoolhouse clock from the early 1880s," he said, pointing out a formal wall clock.

"Japanese clocks often told time in hours, minutes, seconds, periods of years and centuries and by generations of families."

"You can tell a Japanese gear movement goes with this," he says as he examines a clock's inner work-

The Japanese made excellent clocks, but look at these gear teeth. They are pretty crude and gross compared to this German clock," he said, pointing to another specimen.

"German clocks were usually finely, delicately made. You could almost identify the person who made the clock by the way it was made. Certainly they are indicative of certain time periods," he said.

A variety of clocks - crudely made and fine, novelty cuckoos and Buzzard said.

The first step in repairing a clock is to unwind the spring, he says.

"It's so important to take the power out of a clock before you start working on it," he said. "There's about 700 pounds of pressure on this spring, and if it's released while you're working on the clock it could tear the teeth loose, and the clock could literally tear itself apart.

He then soaks the clock's working parts in a cleansing solution, and examines them for signs of wear.

"You have to be careful, because you can't just replace a worn bushing, for example. All of the other pieces have been worn to compensate for that bushing and you might have to replace them, too," he said.

There is a mystique and elusive romance to clock repair that attracts

"Before clocks were widely used, we didn't measure time the same way. Everything was centered around the sun. You went to work at sunup and came home at sundown,"

DR. GOTT-——See specialist about swelling

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT - I can hardly eat or swallow because of a swelling under my tongue. What could cause this? Neither my dentist nor my physician seem to know.

DEAR READER - A swelling under the tongue could be a growth, an infection or a cyst that should be treated. Ask for a referral to an oral surgeon or another doctor for an additional opinion

DEAR DR. GOTT - I developed cramps in my toes, calves and above my knees. The pain was unbelievable. The doctor gave my Quinamm, which helps some, but I'd like to treat the cause rather than just mask the symptoms. Could the medicine I took for a kidney infection (Urobiotic) be responsible?

DEAR READER - Quinamm is quinine sulfate. The drug affects muscles by increasing their excitability making them less likely to contract under mild stimulation) and affecting the distribution of calcium within muscle fibers. These effects help to relieve cramps that are caused by arteriosclerosis and poor circulation. Urobiotic, a combination of antibiotics, has not been reported to cause muscle cramps.

When leg cramps result from deficient circulation or poor blood supply, surgery may be necessary to improve circulation.

DEAR DR. GOTT - I take calcium supplements, but am a little confused about the best time to take them. I've heard that they should be taken before meals, after meals and at bedtime. Which of these is correct?

DEAR READER - Calcium is best absorbed into the body when there is food in the stomach. Therefore, calcium supplements will be most beneficial when taken during or right after

DEAR DR. GOTT - My husband has had urethritis for years. He has tried many antibiotics and antibacterials with no improvements. Must we assume that his condition is untreatable?

DEAR READER - Urethritis is an infection of the urethra, the tube that discharges urine from the bladder.

antibiotics. In men, however, the symptoms of urethritis (burning, urinary frequency and a whitish discharge) resemble those caused by prostatitis (infection of the prostate gland). If your husband's symptoms have not responded to antibiotics, he should be examined by a urologist, since prostatitis is a more difficult infection to clear up and may require long-term antibiotic treatment or other therapy. The relationship between substance abuse and family violence also is reflected among CareUnit patients, many of whom have a violent homelife.

feared for the safety of their two Researchers offer many explanation about the role alcohol plays in he abused his wife, but only when abusive families.

Some speculate that excessive drinking and drug use are "disavowal techniques."

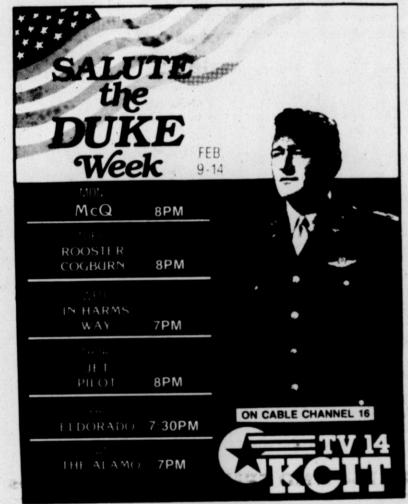

For example, a husband who feels like beating his wife may believe his actions will be excused by his spouse and society as a whole if he's drunk. In other words, he'll be forgiven if he can say he never meant to hurt his wife-the alcohol made him do it.

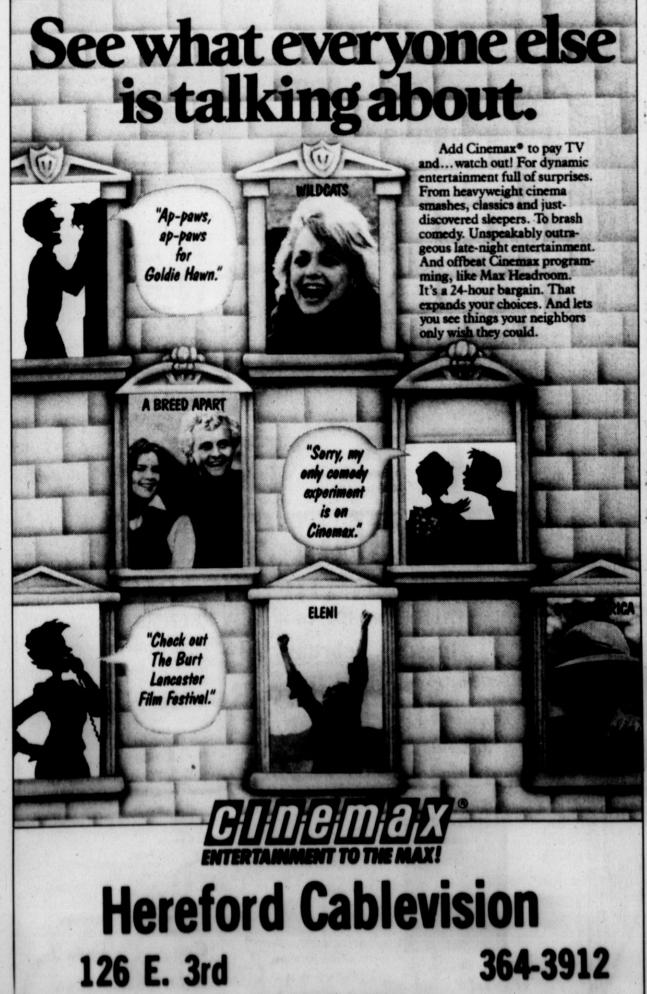

Other research suggests that while alcohol doesn't directly result in violence, it does lower one's tolerance threshhold.

For instance, the mother who normally could contain her rage when her 3-year-old spills poster paint on the new carpet, may lose control and hit the child while drunk.

Another theory about substance abuse and family violence is that many personality characteristics of the abusive parent or spouse-including low self-esteem and low frustration tolerance-parallel those of the chemically dependent person. Thus, one may have inate traits which under certain conditions could result in alcoholism-and physical Preventing violence in a home where chemical dependency is a problem is more than a matter of convincing the substance abuser to stop drinking or using drugs. In all likelihood, the violence will continue unless the entire family learns appropriate ways for coping with anger and frustration.

DUAL POWER

FOR BUSES
SEATTLE (AP) — A transportation system that will utilize an underground downtown tunnel has prompted Seattle to order more than 200 dual-powered buses for the city's transit system, reports American Metal Market.

The publication says that dual-powered vehicles have seldom been seen in the United States since the 1930s and 1940s when a public service operator in New Jersey ran some 500 gas-electric powered vehicles.

Scheduled for delivery between 1988 and 1990, the 60-foot-long buses will need to navigate a 1.5-mile downtown tunnel requiring overhead electric

Once outside the tunnel the buses will be run on suburban routes by diesel power, since stringing overhead electric wires to the suburbs would be prohibitively expensive. The buses are part of an overall $500 million downtown-to-surburban transit system.

Even outside the U.S., few dualpowered systems are in operation. About 60 are in service in Nancy, France, and a few others scattered around other European cities.

University of St. Thomas struggling but determined of St. Thomas doesn't recruit athletes, teach people how to make money or conduct world-class research. All the 40-year-old school offers is an education, and officials there believe that's enough.

"Clearly, we're not for everybody," says St. Thomas admissions counselor Joseph Stibora. "We don't have football teams to cheer for. We want students to be aware that we are an academic school."

Overshadowed in Houston by larger and better-known Rice University and the University of Houston, the small Catholic school has established itself as a place for students who want to learn.

"It's a good little college," said the Rev. Frank Bredeweg, a priest who is the school's president. "It sticks to its principles. We're trying to prepare our graduates for a total life

St. Thomas has long bucked the trends followed by larger schools.

It dropped its only intercollegiate sports program, a basketball team, years ago when administrators decided it wasn't worth the money. And it has refused to follow the current trend of concentrating on marketable skills in its course requirements.

Bredeweg said his college is more interested in teaching students to think, rather than prepare them for careers. All students, regardless of major, must take a core curriculum of English, math, science, social sciences, philosophy and theology. Enrollment at St. Thomas, as at most colleges, dropped after the baby boom wave subsided. It had a peak of 2,000 students in the early 1970s, and now has about 1,600.

But the school continues to require personal interviews with each applicant and turns away students not academically motivated. The school also maintains a ratio of one professor for every 10 students, which allows more room for individual expression, university officials say.

"Rather than being a number, I'll be a person," said Gary Piazza, a 21-year-old transfer student. "This school is really special."

St. Thomas started with 30 students in a yellow-brick mansion in 1947. Enrollment slowly increased over the years, and the school bought nearby land and added buildings.

HOUSTON (AP) - The University Now its campus covers 14 blocks and has a large gymnasium and student center.

Tuition is $140 an hour and about 40 percent of the students receive some sort of financial aid, said public affairs director Faith A. D'Aluisio-Guerrieri.

The St. Thomas endowment fund increased by $1 million in the last year and stands at $6.5 million, but Ms. D'Aluisio-Guerrieri said the university now must use short-term loans to cover cash shortages.

The school has "always kind of struggled along," Bredeweg says.

St. Thomas found itself briefly in the national spotlight after it enrolled an 8-year-old student who had an IQ of 159.

David Huang, now 11, completed requirements for his high school diploma in just four years. His parents looked for an advanced program for the young genius, but could find none. Only St. Thomas would consider him as a student.

School officials agonized whether to accept the youngster, but decided to do so when he passed several tests and a psychologist said he could handle college life.

"We can do that because we are a small school," said Ms. D'Alusio-Guerrieri.

Huang, now a sophomore pre-med major, since has been heavily recruited by larger colleges, such as Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore. But the youth is staying at St. Thomas.

"It is fun here," said the 11-yearold. "If I had stayed in grade school, I think I would be bored.'

He often studies now with his classmates and notes: "I think I fit in pretty good."

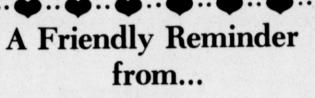

St. Thomas kept the boy's enrollment a secret for a year, but finally permitted a newspaper story. There followed a flurry of publicity, but the school finally banned television cameras as inappropriate to the purpose of St. Thomas.

On Oct. 24, 1901, Anna Edson Taylor became the first person to go over Niagara Falls in a barrel.

NOTICE OF BID REQUEST FOR OFFICE SPACE

The Deaf Smith County Waste Deposit Impact Committee (WDIC) will accept bids for leasing approximately 2000 sq. ft. of office space, centrally located within the City of Hereford. The preferred lease period would be for five years, with a thirty day notice of cancellation. Space is to be subdivided and finished according to WDIC specifications, including 500 sqft public meeting room, 400 sq. ft. reception area, two 144 sqft. offices, two 100 sqft. offices and restroom facilities. Selection will be based on lowest, best and most responsive basis.

Please send written proposal, including location square foot price and finishing costs to: WDIC, P.O. Box 1877, Hereford, Texas. Proposals should be post marked on or before February 20,

153-2c

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS Sealed bids addressed to the City of Hereford, Texas will be received at the City Hall until 10:00 A.M. Feb. 16, 1987 and then publicly opened and read for furnishing all plant, labor, material and equipment, and performing all work required for removing and replacing a steel weir trough on the west clarifier at the City's wastewater treatment plant.

Bids shall be submitted in sealed envelopes upon the blank form of the proposal attached hereto and marked in the upper left hand corner.

All proposals shall be accompanied by a cashier's check or certified check upon a national or state bank in the amount of five (5%) percent of the total maximum bid price payable without recourse to the City or a bid bond in the same amount from a reliable surety company, as a guarantee that bidder will enter into a contract within ten days after notice of award of contract to him. The bid security must be enclosed in the same envelope with the bid. Bids without check or hid bond will not be considered.

The right is reserved to reject any and all bids and to waive any informality in bids received.

Plans, specifications and bidding documents may be obtained at the office of Bill R. McMorries & Associates, Inc. 6300 Canyon Dr., Amarillo, Texas 79109.

CITY OF HEREFORD, TEXAS By: Wesley S. Fisher, Mayor

NOTICE OF BOND ELECTION THE STATE OF TEXAS COUNTY OF DEAF SMITH THE RESIDENT. QUALIFIED ELECTORS OF THE DEAF SMITH COUNTY HOSPITAL DISTRICT:

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that an election will be held in the District on February 28, 1987, pursuant to and in accordance with the Order Calling An Election, adopted by the Board of Directors of the Deaf Smith County Hospital District and attached hereto and made a part hereof for all intents and purposes.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto signed my name officially and affixed hereto the seal of the Deaf Smith County Hospital District this 30 day of January, 1987.

DEAF SMITH COUNTY HOSPITAL DISTRICT By Charles Threewit President

ORDER NO. 101 AN ORDER CALLING A BOND ELECTION TO BE HELD WITHIN THE DEAF SMITH COUNTY HOSPITAL DISTRICT, MAKING PROVISIONS FOR THE CONDUCT OF THE ELEC-TION AND OTHER PROVI-SIONS INCIDENT AND RELATED TO THE PURPOSES AND SUBJECT OF THIS ORDER

WHEREAS, the Deaf Smith County Hospital District (the "District") is authorized by Acts 1971, 62nd Legislature, p. 663, ch. 59 (the "Act") to issue bonds for the purpose of refunding outstanding indebtedness it has issued or assumed and for the purpose of improving and equipping buildings for hospital purposes;

WHEREAS, the District has outstanding indebtedness it wishes to refund; and

WHEREAS, the District desires to acquire certain new equipment to be used by the District for hospital purposes;

WHEREAS, the District is further authorized by article 717k, Section 2(a) Texas. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann. (Vernon Supp. 1987) to issue refunding bonds in combination with new bonds; and

WHEREAS, the Board of Directors considers it in the best interest of the District at this time to refund certain outstanding indebtedness and acquire certain new equipment to be used by the District for hospital purposes; and

WHEREAS, it is provided in the Act that bonds of the District shall not be issued by the District until authorized by a majority of the qualified voters of the District:

BE IT ORDERED BY THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF THE DEAF SMITH COUNTY HOSPITAL DISTRICT:

1. That an election (the "Election") shall be held in and throughout the Deaf Smith County Hospital District, the boundaries of which are coterminous with the boundaries of Deaf Smith County, Texas, on the 28th day of February, 1987, which is a date not less than 15 nor more than 90 days from the date of this Order, at which election the following proposition shall be submitted:

"Shall the Board of Directors of the Deaf Smith County Hospital District be authorized to issue bonds of the District, in one or more series of issues, in the aggregate principal amount of $1,500,000, with the bonds of each series or issue to mature serially or otherwise within not to exceed 40 years from their date of issuance, and to bear interest at a variable rate not in excess of the maximum rate permitted by law, and to be sold at such price or prices as shall be determined within the discretion of the Board of Directors at the time of issuance, for the purpose of refunding certain outstanding indebtedness of the District and for the purpose of improving and equipping buildings to be used by the District for hospital purposes, and to provide for the payment of the principal of and interest on the bonds out of the tax authorized by Article IX, Section 9 of the Texas Constitution, and by Acts 1971, 62nd Legislature, p. 663, chapter 59, by levying and collecting annual taxes upon all taxable property located within the District in an amount sufficient to pay the interest on the bonds when due and to provide a sinking fund sufficient to pay the bonds as they mature?" 2. That the Election shall be held throughout the Deaf Smith County Hospital District in the regular election precinct of the District as heretofore approved and adopted by the Board. The polling place within such precinct shall be the Hereford Community Center, located at 100 Avenue C, Hereford, Texas.
