Enrollment High As Classes Start Monday

W. A. Gearn
... a labor of love in his vineyard

With enrollment figures expected to climb sharply this week, more than 2,100 students in Hereford Public Schools will occupy seats Monday on opening day of the 1959-60 term.

Public school enrollment Saturday morning totalled 2,111, compared to 2,075 at the end of the formal registration period on the same day last year. On school's opening day last September, 2,450 attended classes.

School superintendent Fred Cunningham said the increase in enrollment has climbed as expected. He added that the enrollment usually hits its peak during a period from the end of September to the middle of October.

Enrollment at St. Anthony's Parochial School, which doesn't come under the Hereford School system, totalled 250, 25 more than last year. St. Joseph's School at the Labor Camp reported 120 enrollments. Classes at these schools will begin Tuesday, Sept. 1.

Elementary schools reported 1,111 students Saturday morning. Hereford High tabulated 473 sophomores, juniors and seniors, and Stanton Junior High enrolled 416 seventh, eighth and ninth graders.

Shirley reported the highest enrollment of the elementary schools, with 331 students, and Aikman followed with 330. Central school tabulated 303, the new Northwest school reported 220 enrollments, and Dawn registered 38 students.

A total of 105 seniors registered at Hereford High. Enrollment of juniors totalled 153, and 215 sophomores had registered by Friday evening.

Northwest Elementary School students will start classes in two temporary locations, Cunningham announced last week. Three primary classes will be at Central Church of Christ while the other classes will start at Central School.

This will be necessary for about two weeks, Cunningham said, until the new school is ready for occupancy. In all cases, the permanent teachers will be assigned to the students scheduled to attend Northwest.

Classes will be held on Labor Day in all public schools in Hereford, school officials have announced. Sister Aloysia, principal at St. Anthony's, said classes would not be held at that school on the holiday.

St. Joseph's School and St. Anthony's completed registration earlier this month. Father Raymond Gillis is director of St. Joseph's this year, and teachers include Sister M. Arcadia.

Students To Labor On Labor Day

Hereford public school students will labor on Labor Day, according to an announcement made this week by Superintendent Fred Cunningham.

Due to the lateness of the holiday this year, students will not be given the day off.

"While we regret this, the board and administration agreed that it would be detrimental to the curriculum," Cunningham said. "Had we started Labor Day, our school year would not have ended until the first week in June, which we feel is too late."

Parochial schools in Hereford will be dismissed on Labor Day.

Pinnell And Eicke Win Farm Awards

E. K. Pinnell and F. L. Eicke were cited as outstanding Deaf Smith County farmers by the Tierra Blanca Soil Conservation District and Hereford Lions Club at the Hereford Farm Tour noon barbecue program in the county Bull Barn Wednesday.

Swim Program Sets Records

Hereford's public swimming instruction program set new records during the past three months. Total enrollment for all classes, from the opening June 22 to the close on Saturday, Aug. 29, was 744. This is a sizeable increase from the 476 who enrolled during 1958.

Volunteer instructors put in a total of 1088 hours this summer, according to Bill Hardwick, chairman of the Deaf Smith County Red Cross water safety instructional program.

Adults were able to take beginner, intermediate, advanced intermediate, senior life saving and water safety instructor courses. There were classes for preschoolers, beginner, intermediate, swimmer and advanced beginner children. A junior life-saving course also was offered.

Those who passed the senior lifesaving course include: Hallie Culpepper, Nickie Dameron, Lorraine Fowlkes, John Gilliland, Joyce Ann Johnson, Wayne Lawrence, Romona Noel, Donna Smith, Oliver Streu, Wendell Wilson and June Caraway. The same group also passed the first part of the water safety instructor's course, except Hallie Culpepper, Joyce Ann Johnson, Wendell Wilson and June Caraway, all of whom are too young for the course.

Pinnell, who farms 50 miles northwest of Hereford, was selected outstanding conservation farmer by the soil conservation district. He was not present to receive the annual award. Charles Hoover, supervisor of the local soil conservation district, announced the award winner.

Eicke, who farms 16 miles north of Hereford on U. S. 385, received a plaque designating him as the Lions' selection of outstanding farmer for 1958-59. The fourth annual award was presented by Jim Wiman of Hereford.

Pinnell has been a cooperator with the soil district since September, 1945, and Eicke has been a farmer in Deaf Smith County only two years, coming from Fisher County in 1957.

Featuring speaker at the post-barbecue dinner program was Virgil P. Lee of Houston, former president of Production Credit Corporation of Texas, who cited that the farmers in this area must "hold down expenses and produce" to be called "successful."

Lee, a former representative of the Point Four Program in Europe, was introduced to the 250 farmers and civic club members attending by Joel Hodges of Hereford, general tour chairman.

The first civic club-sponsored tour of county farms included visits to fields owned by Luther Lesly, Harold Shearhart, Eicke, E. C. Reinauer and C. C. Billingslea.

The tour was sponsored by Lions, Rotary, Kiwanis, Optimist and Jaycee clubs in Hereford. The farm tourists were guests of the clubs at the free barbecue dinner.

About 100 farmers and businessmen in Deaf Smith and surrounding counties participated in the tour, which be-

TOO MUCH DEMAND

Vineyard Hits Jackpot In First Year Harvest

By H. A. TUCK
BRAND NEWS EDITOR
"The supply never did equal the demand," W. A. Gearn said wondrously as he stood in his vineyard and talked about raising grapes commercially.

Around Town

Most enterprises have to struggle for a few years to get going, but Gearn's six acres of grapes near Hereford weren't nearly enough to meet the wants of the buyers who flocked to buy, money in hand.

Thursday, there wasn't a grape to be bought, just two weeks after the first sacks and boxes were sold.

Gearn grinned as he called one skeptic who snorted, "Why, you never will be able to sell that many grapes around here. You'll be lucky to ship them off to market."

As a matter of fact, the demand was so great, Gearn never did get home with any grapes for himself.

A veteran vineyard operator, Gearn is learning about his hobby by all over again in a new locality. Admitting to 70 years, Gearn is a fast-moving man, who works with endurance and enthusiasm.

Gearn came to Hereford about five years ago with his wife. They wanted to be close to their son, Kenny, and their grandsons. The elder Gearn has raised grapes in other places

County Library Opens Monday At New Location

The Deaf Smith County Library will open at 9 a. m. Monday at its new site in the 200 block of Miles Ave. The library was moved from the County Courthouse recently for renovation of the structure.

Beginning Monday, the library will be open from 9 a. m. through noon and from 1 p. m. through 5 p. m. through the week. Throughout the school term, according to Mrs. J. J. Boydston, county librarian, the library will close at noon on Saturdays.

She urged return of all overdue books as soon as possible.

and started experimenting with a one-acre patch behind his son's machine shop on east Highway 60.

Gearn planted more than 100 varieties in carefully numbered rows. He found that his ten years of grape-production in the Ozarks and some small vineyards in California meant little in West Texas.

He read books, research pamphlets and visited with agriculture experts. But almost without exception, he found that the type of grapes most highly recommended for this area were among the weakest producers he had. Working tirelessly, he made his own observations.

Still classing it as a hobby, Gearn leased 20 acres of land about five miles from Hereford on west Highway 60 and planted some vines.

BRIDGE CONSTRUCTION on South Main just east of the city golf course, began this week. While the bridge is closed, through traffic will be detoured west to U. S. 385, according to W. Y. Festival Review Slated Thursday

Hereford's first annual Harvest Festival will be reviewed Thursday, Sept. 3, at a breakfast meeting at 7 a. m. in the Jim Hill Hotel ballroom.

The meeting is being called by Festival chairman Francis Hardwick to critique the activities which were held on July 30, 31 and Aug. 1 and to make plans for the Festival next year. All chairmen and others concerned with the celebration are urged to be present for the meeting.

Start Building New Bridge On Tierra Blanca

Construction of a bridge across Tierra Blanca Creek on South Main and development of FM Road 1062 east of Hereford began this week.

Both projects are expected to be completed in 100 working days, according to William V. York, resident engineer at Hereford.

Projects include the bridge construction of FM Road 1259, 200 feet south of Highway 60, by Ferrier Brothers Company of Seymour, and 6.3 miles of construction on FM Road 1062, from five miles east of U. S. 385 to FM Road 809, by Ivan Dement Inc. of Amarillo. Grading, structures, base and surfacing will be included in construction.

At a recent meeting in Austin, the Texas Highway Department announced that Ferrier Brothers submitted low bid of $74,348 for the bridge project, and that Ivan Dement Inc. submitted low bid of $78,954 for the farm-to-market development.

York is in active charge of the projects while they are under construction.

Too Much...

(Continued from page 1) three years ago. This is the first year they have produced. Gearn says it takes four years to get good production and five years for a real bumper crop. This long-range planning and investment scares off most of the many people who inquired about raising grapes. "It costs about $500 an acre to plant vines and tend them until they are producing," Gearn said. "And you have to wait four years to start making any money." Of the 20 acres Gearn has planted, six acres produced this year. The other 14 acres were planted last spring and won't produce a grape until 1961. Gearn, from his experiments, is growing six varieties of grapes found to withstand the violent West Texas weather extremes. Muscats, Concord hybrids, Thompson seedless and a hybrid that is half-Thompson are his mainstays.

A comment on the changing times, Gearn said, is that more than 90 per cent of his customers preferred to pay a higher price at the roadside stand, rather than pick their own grapes for a cheaper price.

"Of course, we were so busy most of the time that folks usually had to pick their own if they wanted grapes," he added. Irrigated from an underground system, the grapes require about as much water as a maize crop. The vines are planted in rows, with the runners trained along two heavy wires strung between iron pipes.

The pipes rise six feet above the ground and are spaced 24 feet apart. Helping Gearn is Joy Bayer of Hereford, 84-year-old retired Santa Fe agent who works like a youngster of 20. Managers of the roadside stand are one of Gearn's grandsons, Tim, and Ted McWhorter, a pair of hustling 12-year-olds. Gearn reported very little trouble with insects. He said there were a few tobacco and army worms, but they were quickly killed out.

This year Gearn will experiment with some new chemicals developed by Merck Pharmaceutical Company to feed the vines-through their foliage. A similar fertilizer will be used to help set the fruit better, for resistance to extreme weather conditions. A givarric acid also will be tested as a means of developing large grapes.

Although it's legal to make wine for personal consumption, only one person has bought grapes for that purpose this summer, so far as Gearn knows. "Wine is easy to make," he commented. "All you have to do is to follow the directions exactly."

But Gearn isn't concerned so much about that as raising enough grapes in the future so he can take some home to eat.

BENEATH IT ALL... These new foundation garments are designed for waistline control, flat midriff, smooth hips and thighs, to make the new fall clothes look their best.

Waistline Control Is Inside Story

By DOROTHY ROE

Waistlines are back in style for fall, and new underpinnings are important.

In order for new fall clothes to look their best, they should be worn with foundation garments designed to give a smooth taut line through the midriff, with no bulges to mar the dress silhouette.

Sometimes the waist control is built into a high girde, sometimes a long bra. The new styles do not require a tightly cinched-in waistline, but rather a slender, natural line, emphasizing but not strangling the waist. The over-all look has a high, rounded bustline, flat midriff and gently curved hips and thighs.

Foundations on hand to do the required shaping are lightweight but firm, with beige the most popular basic color, and with new feminine touches such as lace, embroidery and applique trimmings. White and black are still in great demand, and the pastel-tones are brighter.

Necklines come in for a great deal of attention by bra designers, who achieve adjustable features through convertible straps and tabs that increase or decrease the cup separation. Other new bra features are fabric zipper closures, cups contoured with polyurethane foam and cups encircled by mesh elastic for more precise fit.

For midriff control, bras extend to different lengths—three-quarter for the short-waisted woman, or to wear with a high-rising girde; waist-length to meet a shorter girde; bralette versions to taper the waist as well as flatten the diaphragm.

Girdles offer many new waistline stylings, such as elastic inserts, front or side dips, boned top sections above the waist or a waistline cinch only partially attached to the girde. Pantie girdles are most popular in long-legged versions, to smooth and slim the thighs, for wear with sheath dresses and skiny pants.

New corselets, including strapless styles cut low in back, stress improved fit in the bra section.

From the Bull Barn, the group went by chartered bus to the Lesly farm, 11 miles north of Hereford on U. S. 385, where they viewed fields of grain sorghum and observed Blackwell switchgrass, one of the grasses native to this area, which was used for grazing purposes.

At the Eicke farm, the tourists inspected fields of various selections of grain sorghum and studied a method of johnson-grass control, whereby fields were cultivated at various intervals. Also, Eicke treated his fields with a hand sprayer about six times this year to kill johnsongrass.

When Eicke first moved to his present farm two years ago, a heavy infestation of johnson-grass was present in the fields. Now, nearly all the grass has been killed out, it was explained. The tourists then observed a cotton field treated with gibberic acid, a growth stimulant. Eicke is experimenting with the chemical for the first time this year.

Also at the Eicke farm, an irrigation method with a unique tailwater return system was studied by the group. The system included an earthen tank fed by a centrifugal pump tied into a concrete line.

Principle of the method is recirculating tailwater for even distribution over the irrigated fields. By gaining better yields and recovering land by absence of tailwater, Eicke estimated that he realized about $4,800 additional income from his farm this year.

Concluding study on the Eicke farm was a method of increasing weight-gaining of hogs by spraying a mist on hogs during the most temperate periods of the day. The group also inspected hog sheds built with cement floors.

After the noon barbecue, the group went to the E. C. Reinauer farm to view a field of carrot seed. County Agent J. W. "Lefty" Thomas explained carrot seed production to the tourists, most of them unfamiliar with the plants.

From there, the tourists went to the C. C. Billingslea farm, operated by Lester English, to view various assortments of hybrid grain sorghum. Most of the experimental field was planted May 29 in pre-watered soil and has been irrigated four times during the crop's growth.

Before leaving the farm, the group was taken to a safflower field planted by English. Charles Corn of International Safflower, Inc., explained that the crop was ready for harvest, but that the soil was too muddy, at the time for cutting operations.

Back on the Reinauer farm, the group witnessed diversified farming possibilities in growing vegetables on an experimental "home garden" patch. Included in the patch were corn, tomatoes, potatoes, watermelons, okra, squash, beans and cabbage. Purpose of the tour was to provide means of exchanging methods, techniques and ideas for people engaged in farming, and to acquaint business and professional groups with the variety and extent of agricultural resources in this area.

Political Essays Show A Burning Freedom Desire

ANATOMY OF A MORAL: The Political Essays of Milovan Djilas. Edited by Abraham Rothberg, with introduction by Paul Willen. Praeger. $2.95.

All these essays but one — the one which gives this earnest book its title — appeared in the Belgrade Communist newspaper Borba six years ago. "Anatomy" itself was printed in a magazine, Nova Misao. They are revolutionary essays, though from the Titoist point of view, counter-revolutionary. Here is the path Djilas followed fatefully to "The New Class," the American bestseller which signalled the author's break with communism, his demission from the vice presidency of Yugoslavia, and the imposition of a 10-year prison sentence for rash political heresy.

Djilas himself refers to these pieces as "anti-bureaucratic" and in one of them he states specifically that "bureaucratism is more dangerous than capitalism." This wasn't just heresy, but treachery, and he worked up to his extreme position by careful shrewd steps, not careful enough to save him from disaster but he did get a long way before his foes caught up with him. Willen explains that many of his associates just assumed that he couldn't mean what he was saying, and that Tito couldn't believe his old friend was betraying him.

After an innocuous general introduction that carried his unsuspecting readers along for a few articles, he began to make himself plain: There are very few bad laws, but rather a mistaken interpretation and enforcement of them. "Every limitation of thought only degrades," he charged. Communists were becoming too much like priests and police. While to be sure without Communism there would have been no Yugoslavia, yet the Communism he sees around him in no way applies itself to the new problems developed under new social conditions.

The climax of his attack on Titoism is his story, highly colored and pretty snappish, of the army general's actress wife who was seduced by old-time Communist wives of old-time Communist leaders — it's Peggy O'Neill Eaton and the Andrew Jackson cabinet and crude Democracy in Washington all over again. But it serves to confirm Djilas' indictment of a society hardening into rigid conservative forms, bearing the most modern revolutionary name yet with the most reactionary substance.

Djilas is not a philosopher, nor a profound revolutionary theorist, as it seems to me. But he is a man with one single burning conviction: Freedom is Peroxide of hydrogen also will whiten the skin. Dilute it and use like a lotion, avoiding the eyebrows and lashes. If this happens to smart a little, dilute it with some rose water. Q. What makeup trick will help me to avoid accentuating my too-short nose? A. Try powdering your nose first with a powder that is a shade or so lighter than the powder you use on the remainder of your face.

all, and he has had the honesty never to cavil in this and the immense courage to carry on regardless of consequences.

These essays are pamphlet-earing, an art of which we were masters in our revolutionary era though as we have lost the knack for writing them, we have lost the habit of reading them. But if these have a nostalgic touch, they are as contemporary as this minute. Out of such a catalog of reasons, and such a cutting play of passion and argument on the eternal subject of politics, our world was made, and a new world is being made around us. It all ought to matter enormously to American readers. W. G. Rogers

Movie Censor's Punch Weakened By Court Rule

By BERNARD GAVZER
Censorship of movies—once an undertaking occupying censor boards in 90 cities and eight states—now is limited to four states and no more than 20 cities. Successive court decisions have steadily hammered at the crumbling structure of official censorship. The latest was a U. S. Supreme Court decision which upset a New York State ban of the movie, "Lady Chatterley's Lover." The court said the ban violated rights protected by the First Amendment. While the high court decision does not doom the New York Censor setup, opponents of censorship say it will have considerable effect in removing "the heavy hand of official censorship of films."

Placing motion pictures under the protection of the Constitution marks a long step for the Supreme Court. The first time it considered the question, in 1915, the court decided movies were purely and simply entertainment and censoring them had nothing to do with Constitutional rights. Basically, censorship is one of the answers man has devised to solve a problem that has long confounded him: how to deal with the obscene, the indecent, the subversive. Those favoring censorship say that without it liberty would overflow into license and the moral fabric of our society would decay. Opponents say there are adequate laws dealing with obscenity and immorality and that in a democracy no man should decide for another what he should be able to see. While censors have been at work since antiquity, it wasn't until the advent of motion pictures that they became strong in numbers and power. The medium reached the greatest mass audience in American history and brought to the hinterlands a view of life that may have been acceptable in the sophisticated confines of Broadway but certainly could not be duplicated in Mendota, Ill. Resisting the impact of these films, censor boards were set up. They were not concerned with the artistic merit of the work but rather with questions of morality, obscenity, sacrilege, violence. Censors viewed movies and had the power to ban them in their entirety, delete certain portions, or limit the film to adult audiences. The pattern for pre-censorship of movies was designed in Chicago in 1907. On Nov. 4 of that year, the police were empowered to deny a permit to any movie which "is immoral or obscene, or portrays depravity, criminality, or lack of virtue of a class of citizens of any race, color, creed, or religion and exposes them to contempt, derision, or obloquy, or tends to produce a breach of the peace or riots, or purports to represent any hanging, lynching, or burning of a human being." Under this code, the censors were able to ban a newsreel which showed police attacking strikers at a South Chicago steel plant in 1935, an old movie based on the life of gangster Al Capone, a portion of a Walt Disney movie showing the birth of a buffalo. It was in Chicago that the five-foot kiss was invented. This was a rule that a movie kiss could not last for more than five feet of film, or approximately three seconds. In the 1920s, faced with a noisy outcry for national censorship, the movie industry decided to tend to its own house and named a czar, William Harrison Hays. The organization, now known as the Motion Picture Assn. of America, was popularly called the Hays Office. It subsequently set up a code of standards. In recent years, the code has been relaxed. Those opposing censorship agree with those favoring it that there must be some kind of control. But they don't want the power in the hands of any official agency. They say that if a film is obscene, let the producer and exhibitor be brought into court and tried by a jury on such a charge. And they say there are many rating groups which can advise people on what sort of movies to see. The most effective and powerful of these rating groups are the Roman Catholic Legion of Decency and the Film Estimate Board of National Organizations, which includes among its participating members the Girl Scouts, P. TA and the Daughters of the American Revolution. These groups do not possess police powers to pre-censor any movie, but their recommendations can effect the profit a movie may make. The closest thing approximating national censorship exists in two government agencies, the Customs and the Post Office. States which still have active censor boards are New York, Kansas, Maryland and Virginia. Topping the list for long life despite many attacks is Chicago, whose movie censors have been busy more than half a century.

Practice Pays Says Young Piano Maestro
 By VIVIAN BROWN
 If relatives and neighbors rebel at your piano practice, don't give up. It happens in the best of circles.
 Our new cultural hero, 25-year-old Van Cliburn attests to that.
 "I wouldn't have been able to practice in New York at all if it weren't for my friends, the Steinways, who let me use the basement of their building. Neighbors in my apartment building in New York complained, to the janitor all the time, even after I had won the Moscow competition."
 Van had to go on a list though, and so much of the time was

By JIMMIE GILLENTE
Hereford was tour minded the past week. The farm tour Wednesday, like the cattle tour Monday, goes down on record as one of the best seen in the area. Dr. Virgil P. Lee, retired Houston banker, turned out to be quite a speaker. Most of the crowd had only one complaint. They thought he quit talking too soon - and that is rare indeed, especially for a banker. The club barbecue luncheon also brought forth many complaints.

A sign which, for some reason, invariably causes me to chuckle when I see it is located at Ford; it reads:
FORD GRAIN CO.
FERTILIZER &
BEAUTY SHOP

Folks who migrated out this way from Motley County will be happy to know that they are now drilling seven test wells for oil - and have five more staked out. Most of the activity seems to be in the Roaring Springs area, which currently boasts 14 producing wells in two fields. Things are really humming down in that part of the country.

INDICATIONS IN OUR CHANGING WORLD. Makers of the tobaccoless Vanguard cigarettes fumed when Department of Agriculture reports called the product "morphologically similar" to corn silk. Panhandlers in St. Louis were reported as listening to small transistor radios while waiting for handouts. New York area grocers estimated shopping cart losses at $12 million. Dr. M. C. Adams was talking about going fishing. What will happen next?

Most people, for some reason, go by and look at the football seat layout several times before they plank down their money. However, I notice that Ralph Hastings is always among the first to get on the dotted line.

County Agent "Lefty" Thomas is an old boy who always has a smile. He also has a reputation for outstanding achievement in the places he has previously been located.

Dave Alexander says he believes there is more hammering in the temporary courthouse quarters than in the courthouse, where the remodeling is supposed to be taking place. Anyway, most of the officials are getting straightened out after the big move - and Dave will probably take your tax money just as if there were no noise at all.

Meanwhile, even the "rock hunting" business is getting tough, according to veteran Dennis Lomas. Anymore, says Dennis, you have to hit for the sandhill county around Earth - and it is fairly good across west into the Portales area. The reason, he figures, is mostly because people are farming more intensely, and fewer of the Indian relics are being uncovered. The infamous "dust bowl" days were rough on the farmer and cattleman, but they provided a bonanza for the Indian relic seeker, known in the business as "rock hunters". Also, says Dennis, they are more hunters than ever before; this, coupled with scarcity of hunting grounds, makes things tough.

Jim Witherspoon and associates recently purchased the old Texaco station property across from the hotel with an eye toward future law offices. No immediate construction is in the mill, according to a firm spokesman, who said: "That's why we bought it, all right, but it may be a year - and it may be 10 years - before we do any building or any moving."

New faces continue to appear in retail firms along Main Street as youngsters who found summer employment make ready to return to classes. Drug stores, department stores and variety stores are among those hardest hit - and breaking in new help is a good way to nullify the benefits of a recent vacation.

A smart woman always asks her husband's opinion - after she has made up her mind.

If you don't think things are competitive in the fertilizer business, just drop in on Orville Edwards. He has installed a pool table and a snooker table for customer use, and some of these "busy farmers" are giving them tables a real workout; fact is, they provide a good barometer: When there's lots of seasonal work, things get mighty slack around the tables.

Charley Holt is back in the grape business in a big way this year. Good varieties and plenty of water seem to be the best combination. Charley is worried about his cherry trees, though. He says they never have produced up to par. Personally, I think it is because he planted them too close to the road.

News that Hereford schools will not observe the usual Labor Day holiday created quite a flurry around town this week. Whether a majority of local firms will follow suit by remaining open was the chief point of discussion. Labor Day, Sept. 7, comes as late this year as it is possible for the holiday to occur - and this seems to have resulted in altered policies and opinions.

The thing that fooled me, was the fact that they didn't settle the steel strike before the scheduled holiday. All in all, it's a pretty rough deal on the strikers to miss a paid holiday.

In Hereford some will close, while others will remain open. Right now, no one knows how many either way. My guess is about 50-50.

A bright-colored food and a crisp one often help to make a menu particularly attractive.

When you are buying snap beans, avoid those with dry-looking pods.

OTTS RETURN FROM TRIP
Mr. and Mrs. Ira Ott of Frio have returned home after an extensive vacation to the Pacific Northwest and British Columbia. They spent five weeks in Portland, Ore. His sister, Mrs. A.L. Burkett, died while they were visiting her. They toured British Columbia and particularly enjoyed seeing Victoria, which is said to be a perfect replica of a typical English town. They also visited friends and relative in Montana near the end of their eight-week trip.

BALTIMORE (AP) - The penniless young woman had fled her husband down South and stopped at the Traveler's Aid Society on her way to New York to live with relatives.

In Mrs. Elizabeth Kraivec's office, she saw a painting of New York on the wall. As she stared at the icy blue pigment, the lonely looking bridge and skyscrapers, tears formed in her eyes.
"I can handle my husband but not that big, cold city," she said and headed back home.

How Can I?

A. About the best insecticide is chlordane. Use it as a two per cent oil or water spray, or as a five per cent powder. For best results, a combination of the two is most effective.

Q. How can I deal with squeaking pedals on my piano?
A. If the friction is occurring between wood, and wood or metal, squirt some powdered graphite between the two parts; if both surfaces are of metal, use a good lubricating oil instead.

Q. How can I freshen bread that has become dry or stale?
A. Wrap the loaf in a damp cloth, and heat it in a slow oven for 15 or 20 minutes.

Q. How can I keep a cedar closet or chest fragrant and mothproof?
A. If you will make a practice of sanding lightly the inside of your cedar closet or chest once a year, this will reopen the pores of the wood, releasing its natural oil which repels moths.

Q. How can I loosen a nut which has become tightly rusted on a bolt?
A. Flush the nut and bolt with some kerosene, and, after giving this a few minutes to work in, remove the nut with a close-fitting wrench.

Miss Gayle Wagoner Becomes Bride Of David Seal Sunday

Miss Gayle Frances Wagoner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe B. Wagoner of the Westway Community, became the bride of David L. Seal, son of D. L. Seal and the late Mrs. Seal of Childress, in a formal ceremony read in the First Methodist Church Sunday Aug. 23, at 3 p.m.

Greenery and palm trees formed the altar background, where floor baskets of white gladioli and seven branched candelabra entwined with fernery formed the immediate setting. Gold vases of white gladioli at either side of the centering gold cross, and a white satin covered kneeling bench completed the setting. Pews along the white-covered bridal aisle were marked by miniature wedding bells tied with white satin ribbon.

The Rev. Robert D. Ford of San Jacinto Methodist Church read the double-ring ceremony. Musicians were Mrs. William J. Stanford, organist, and Don Baugaus, vocalist. Mrs. Stanford played a prelude of wedding selections as the guests were arriving, and the traditional wedding marches as the bridal party entered and left the church. She also accompanied the vocalist, who sang "Loves Dream" (Liszt) "Because" (D'Hardelot) and "The Lord's Prayer" (Molote).

The bride's attendants were gowned in ballerina-length dresses of champagne silk organza over taffeta with bodices of embroidered lace attached to very full skirts by tucked cummerbunds of matching material. They wore pink feather hats with nose-tip veils of french illusion, pink satin shoes and pink lace gloves. They carried cascade bouquets of pink feathery carnations.

Rondell Roy Coltharp of Amarillo, the bride's cousin, carried the rings, and candles were lighted by Joe Bob Wagoner, brother of the bride, and Pamela Sue Coltharp, a cousin, who also wore pink organza made similar to the one worn by the flower girl.

MISLABELED. BELLEVILLE, Ill. (AP) — One of the "wanted" posters in the St. Clair County Courthouse says a man sought for child desertion has a tattoo on his arm. It reads: "Semper Fidelis" — always faithful.

A GOOD FEELING. MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — "I have a feeling deep down that we're going to beat First Landing in the Flamingo," said Canadian-born jockey Chris Rogers on the eve of Hialeah's big race for three year olds. Rogers said his own mount, Troilus, "can turn on the speed anytime." It was a good prediction. Troilus, who Bayard Sharp purchased for $3,000 as a yearling in 1957, won the Flamingo by three lengths while First Landing, the odds-on favorite, was third behind Open View.

Missionary Nurse Adventures In Goose Bay Country

HAPPY VALLEY, Labrador — Kathleen Mary Lutely, affectionately known as "Katie" along Labrador's east coast, is fulfilling a girlhood dream of adventure and helping others.

Miss Lutely, 41, native of Devonshire in England, came to Canada in September of 1957 as a nurse with the International Grenfell Association. She is in charge of the six-bed station in this community near the Hamilton River.

The devoted and energetic nurse is proud of the fact she has delivered some 150 babies without the help of a doctor during her work here and at four other Labrador and Newfoundland Grenfell stations.

"We delivered 77 here last year," she said.

The nursing station is a branch of the main Grenfell Mission Hospital at Northwest River, 40 miles away. Emergency cases brought here are normally transferred to the main hospital or, if necessary, to the RCAF's hospital at Goose Bay, seven miles distant.

"I would have many more grey hairs if it wasn't for the Air Force's assistance," she says.

The Labrador settlements, she admits, are not what Sir Wilfred Grenfell envisioned when he began his work as a medical missionary in this area in 1892.

"Now, it's a mixture... Eskimos, Indians, and more and more Canadians."

The talk was interrupted while she went to an adjoining room to stitch and patch the cut forehead of a six-year-old boy, who

Pedi Meals Take Mind Off Hunger

By ADRIAN PORTER
JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — They probably wouldn't qualify for membership in the Cercle Epicurien Mondial, and they certainly wouldn't hold down jobs as chefs in four-star restaurants. But, in their own inimitable, African way, the Pedi tribe of South Africa rank as gourmets.

In fact, it's a safe bet that when the Africans produce their own "Guide to Good Eating" map the area of the Northern Transvaal where the Pedi live will be pretty well cluttered up with symbolic knives, forks and wine glasses.

Just watch them at a feast. Not for them one huge communal cooking pot with a mushy stew. Their food is prepared with consummate culinary artistry in 62 different utensils made from wood, gourds, grass, rushes, and snail and tortoise shells. And the food is obviously superb. Succulent-looking tidbits are eaten with relish, eyes-closed in ecstasy, and signs of appreciation.

Care to join them? Have a look at the menu first. It probably reads something like this:
Grilled whole caterpillars
Fresh whole weevils
Beetles en casserole (garnished with female flying ants and grasshoppers)
Dried field mice
Wingless locusts

Believe it or not, it's not as bad as it sounds, according to Dr. P. J. Quin. He's just published a book, "Foods and Feeding Habits of the Pedi People," and, like the true researcher he is, he shared a few meals with them.

For anyone who might be interested Quin lists 150 tribal recipes with insects playing a big part in most of the plats du jour. Their beauty, says Quin, is that few of them take more than 20 minutes to prepare. Just the thing, in fact, for harassed housewives.

And the taste? Quin claims black caterpillars compare well with oysters. "They are succulent in texture, having a sweet meaty flavor," he says. "What's more they are more nutritional than oysters." Another kind of caterpillar Quin encountered was "appetizing, meaty - vegetable flavored, and rather like asparagus."

Weevils look a bit drab and black, but can be counted on to cause a sensation at any sophisticated cocktail party. Quin says they "make good snacks with a slaty-nutty taste." For seafood parties he recommends an relish which tastes like soft shelled crab.

Preparation of beetles and caterpillars may take up a little time. You have to remove the hard outer coverings of the beetles to get that fresh, full, flavor and caterpillars are best gutted (just squeeze gently between the fingers). And, of course, no Pedi gourmet worthy of the name would dream of eating locusts with their wings on. It's just not done.

Footnote: Quin confesses—in his book that despite his sincere endeavor to be completely objective in sampling these dishes "almost every test was followed by violent physical doubts over which I had no control."

Thick Pane Gives Cool, Cool View

By GERALD MILLER

CORNING, N. Y. (AP)—Atomic specialists dealing with deadly radioactive material can get a cool view of their work through the thickest window in the world.

The window, nearly nine feet thick, is a radiation shield made for the Atomic Energy Commission by the Corning Glass Works.

It was shipped recently to Idaho Falls, Idaho, for installation in a new flight engine-test facility at the National Reactor Testing Station.

Corning engineers say the window has two purposes: its thickness protects workers looking at radioactive material and also reflects light in a way that provides a larger view of the working area.

An object seen through the seven glass panes and 12 plastic sheets that make up the window will appear greatly enlarged.

Corning has manufactured a number of shielding windows for atomic research, some of them as peepholes into radioactive compartments in the Navy's atomic submarines. But this one is by far the largest.

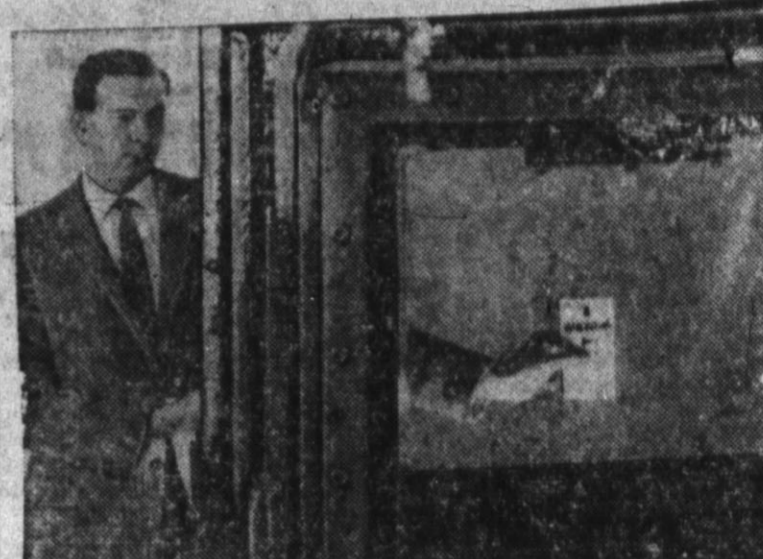

It was assembled at Corning's plant at Harrodsburg, Ky., then trucked to Cleveland for an exhibition before moving on to Idaho.

"We know this is the largest radiation window ever made," says a company spokesman. "And since there's no call for such windows outside the atomic field we consider it the thickest window in the world."

CAN BE CONFUSING

NEWARK, N. J. (AP)—Directions to a street named Lincoln Park can prove utterly confusing to a stranger.

There are four different streets in the area with that name all existing for almost 66 years.

THICK PANE—This shield, through which atomic scientists can watch and work with radioactive material, is said to be the thickest window in the world.

How Can I?

Q. How can I avoid the smoke odor that usually results when I use grease to make pancakes?
A. Rub the griddle with a small cloth bag filled with salt. No grease will then be needed. Or, fold a strip of bacon over two or three times and rub the surface with that to give the griddle a thin coating of grease.

Q. How can I eradicate poison ivy?
A. Mix three pounds of common table salt in one gallon of soapy water, and pour around the plants. Give two treatments.

Q. How can I wash oil paintings?
A. Use tepid suds made of white soap. Rinse with clear water and then dry very thoroughly with a soft lintless cloth.

Q. What kind of spray is best for ridding the house of roaches?

Area Farmers Lead Present Parade; May Set Pattern For Agriculture

"You have to be good to make it out here!"

The above statement was made by Dr. Virgil P. Lee, former president of the Farm Production Credit Corporation, Houston, when he spoke before 250 farmers and members of combined Hereford civic clubs Wednesday.

Dr. Lee developed the statement further by pointing out that high original cost of land, plus pumping equipment and necessary machinery established a situation which leaves little choice other than success to the average farmer in this territory.

The idea is one which few of us have ever stopped to consider, but it is certainly a true statement. Backing up the theory is an item which appeared in The Brand Sunday, August 23, pointing out Hereford has more of its families in the "over $4,000 category" and fewer in the lower income groups than have most communities in the nation. Broken down, the figures showed 65.8 per cent of the local households in the "over $4,000" group, while the national average was 59.2 per cent. This, of course includes the entire population, and we feel sure that the farm income average would run much closer to 100 per cent in the top bracket.

The irrigation farmer in this area, as Dr. Lee pointed out, has an investment which pretty well exceeds that of any merchant in town. His income, as the speaker said, must be good—or he cannot continue to operate.

Going back another step, the high initial cost automatically selects for us an exceptionally high quality class of farmers. He must either inherit his place, or have made a success on his own before he could make the purchase. In addition, buying and operating a farm in the area requires self-confidence, optimism and experience; otherwise, it is just cannot be done. These factors, of necessity, establish a high caliber farmer in the territory.

In addition to being an above average producer, the farmer in this area also must be an average-to-better business man; he must be interested in new developments, have some knowledge of chemistry and be alert enough to recognize a good thing when he sees it.

Put these requirements together, and you have the ideal of good citizenship among the farmers in the United States of America. Dr. Lee did not go quite this far, but national trends to larger tracts, urban concentration of farmers, extensive use of mechanized equipment and general diversification indicate that the future farmers of the nation -- say 10 to 25 years from now -- will be patterned very much along the lines found in our own area today. Without the advantage of irrigation, they may not reach such an extreme high peak -- but the pattern will definitely be followed.

Farmers of our territory, without a doubt, are a good 10 years ahead of the pack. What's more, we have every reason to believe that they will continue to lead the way.

County Budget Seems In Line

The recently adopted county budget, $788,495.60, calls for $83,000 more in annual expenditures than for 1959. More than half of the increase, however, will be used on bond issues voted last spring to cover a new jail, courthouse remodeling and right-of-way purchases on U. S. Highway 60.

This leaves something like a $40,000 increase to cover actual county operating expenses, and a great portion of this amount is consumed in the form of salary raises and road improvements.

Persons who take the time to study the salary schedules carefully will be pretty well bound to agree that none of the raises seem to be out of line. This is especially true when the salaries are compared with those paid for similar services in private business enterprises in the community. Even the commissioners, who took annual raises of $132 per year, draw a total of $236 per month, plus expense account, which compares favorably with other counties around the state.

The $30,900 jump in the Road and Bridge fund accounted for a lion's share of the increase, and includes some $15,000 for new equipment. Most people, on the other hand, demand good roads as a necessity these days—and good roads, like other things, cost money.

For the most part, we would say that the adopted budget appears practical and logical. We are happy, in fact, to see the county keep abreast with development and growth in the area. The $43,000 required on expansion runs six per cent above the 1959 budget and, with no tax increase necessary, the long-needed improvements appear all the more justified at this time.

Park Pavilion Worthy Project

Hereford, thanks to the foresight of civic pioneers, boasts more parks than any small town we know. Our city officials, in addition, are expanding and keeping our park system in excellent condition.

Even more important, thousands upon thousands of people use these parks throughout the year. This, too, is unusual for small towns because the citizens are not hemmed in so narrowly as their city counterparts. Needless to say, an unused park is worse than no park at all.

Since we do have a park system which it would be impossible to create anew at this late date, it naturally becomes a point of civic pride and continued development. Many people have visualized a large, open air auditorium for Dameron Park, the largest, which might easily become the focal point of community activities. General meetings, band concerts, political rallies and weekly or monthly programs would be a few of the things which might be sponsored.

Instead, it seems to us, we are crowding most community activities across the railroad tracks to the Bull Barn, which provides far less in the way of attractive

The POWER of FAITH by Howard Brodie

I thumbed the pages of an entertainment guide in my Tulsa hotel room during a recent U. S. trip, glancing at advertisements for such attractions as man-sized steaks, exotic dancing, and reducing salons. And then I read, "Dial a Prayer, Luther 4-3511." I dialed and heard "Light of my life, teach me to live by the inner illumination of spirit..." I traced the recording to the First Presbyterian Church but learned that the idea had come from California by way of Scarsdale, N. Y., and that it has spread to more and more cities. As many as 3,000 calls for prayers were received by the Scarsdale number in a day, I was informed, and on weekends the circuits rang busy as often as 10,000 times. Calls come from business men about to enter important conferences, from doctors after exhausting operations, from the lonely, distraught, sick and bereaved. All seek strength through faith.

MRS. JIM WILLIAMS REMEMBERS:

Skunk Caused Drama For One Tense Hour

By MRS. R. L. CRISWELL
Mrs. Jim Williams of 615 Union Ave. was 89 years old on Aug. 3. She came to the Staked Plains in 1895 with her husband and family. Mr. Williams came a year earlier to scout the land and buy a place to live.

He fell in love with the country and thought it was next to paradise. He could hardly wait to bring his family to this great land of promise. Mrs. M. C. King, daughter of this pioneer couple, tells this story as she remembers it when she was a very small child:

"Father was to meet us in Amarillo, but for some reason he did not get there until the next day. Although I was very small, I remember what our hotel room was like and that we children slept on the floor. "Water was very scarce and when mother asked for it to clean us up, they brought only a small amount. Mother was was, not very happy with a country that did not have enough water for cleanliness, and when father came for us, she refused to go on to the ranch, saying 'I will not live without enough water to keep my family clean.' Father roared with laughter and told her he would see to it that she had all the water she needed for the family."

"He had brought a hack to take us to the ranch. We got in and drove as far as Umbarger and spent the night there and went on to the ranch the next day. We arrived late in the afternoon.

"The house was a dugout with one room above ground. A cousin was preparing the evening meal and told mother not to let the biscuits burn.

"The cookstove was of the Bachelor type with a drum oven for baking. Mother looked the stove over but could not find the biscuits, much to the amusement of the menfolk.

"The house was cozy and clean, and we were very happy to be there. The next spring father built two more rooms and bought mother a red axminster rug for the parlor. That was a red letter day in her life and how proud she was of that rug."

"In those days the parlor door was kept shut except when we had company. We children were kept out for the simple reason we would have worn it out, and as we were all small, mother could never have kept it clean.

"We loved it and appreciated it; and since we weren't allowed in it except when we had company, we were happy to sit and admire it. The latch key was always out for every one and people were sincerely friendly and interested in the welfare of neighbors.

"Folding beds were in style then, and ours had a shelf at the top and mother kept her prettiest vases and nicknacks on it. One night she had gone out to help father. She would be out only a short while, but we girls decided to put down the bed.

"We did — it overturned with a crash and broke all of mother's pretty things. We felt terrible about it, but mother took it very well.

"The year 1898 had one of the most terrible snowstorms of all time. Mother and we children were in Plainview.

"Wagons were stalled along the road between Dimmitt and Amarillo. People had gone in for supplies and the snow was so deep they had to abandon the wagons with heavy loads. (Continued on page 2)

QUESTION OF THE WEEK

Residents Fifty-Fifty On Even-Odds Voyage

If the odds were even that you would survive, would you be willing to take a trip to outer space? Why?

MRS. L. J. MATTHEWS—Yes, I would be willing to go into outer space because it would be something new and adventurous.

MRS. CECIL MALONE—No, I would not be willing to go into outer space. I would leave that up to someone with a more inquisitive mind. I'd rather just keep my feet on the earth.

ANSEL McDOWELL—No, I don't think I'd like to go into outer space, because I think things are just fine the way they are.

MARY HELEN ASKEW—Yes, I would definitely take a trip into outer space if the odds were even. It would be something new and exciting and adventurous.

MRS. J. C. CLEARMAN—No, I would not be willing to go into outer space because I'm not interested in that kind of traveling.

GASTON BAER—No, I would not be willing to go into outer space. If I had lost something there, I would go to look for it, but I haven't lost anything, so I'm satisfied to be here with my feet on the ground.

We have no quarrel with the present trend which, after all, may be best. However, we feel sure that the dreams of our early park planners, took this phase of development into account — and the idea merits some consideration. To say the least, it is a bit inconsistent for a model town to send all gatherings outside of the city limits when an unusual attraction could be established in our park at so small a cost

STATE LAW PROVIDES SUSPENSION OF LICENSE

The director of the Texas Department of Public Safety cautioned today that a new state law provides for the suspension of the license of any driver convicted of four moving traffic violations within a 12-month period. Col. Homer Garrison Jr. said the new law, passed by the recent session of the Legislature and signed by Governor Price Daniel Aug. 5, for the first time defines the term "habitual violator." The definition is as follows: "The term 'habitual violator' as used herein, shall mean any person with four or more convictions arising out of different transactions within a period of 24 months, such convictions being for moving violations of the traffic laws of the State of Texas or its political subdivisions." Garrison said if a justice of the peace or others designated magistrate finds a driver to be an habitual violator, the Department of Public Safety is authorized to suspend the driver's license for any period up to one year. The law also establishes detailed procedures for appeals of persons who license have been suspended and requires the courts to give priority to the setting of such cases. It designates local prosecuting attorneys to represent the state in such appeals cases.—MULESHOE JOURNAL

COUNTY FARM TOUR TO STRESS WATER INFORMATION

The annual Castro County Farm Tour will be held Thursday, Aug. 27, beginning at the Sunnyside Community Center at 10 a.m. After a series of talks ending at noon, those attending will be guests at a meal furnished by the First State Bank of Dimmitt and prepared and served by women of the Sunnyside Community. The tour is sponsored every year by the Running Water Soil Conservation District, Texas Extension Service, Soil Conservation and The First State Bank of Dimmitt. Following the meal, the people attending will travel over the community to see points of interest on farms in the area. Between 10 and 12 o'clock Thursday there will be two speakers at the Center. They are Dr. Alec Pope, of the Amarillo Experiment Station who will speak on experimental data on fertilizer trials of different varieties of wheat and irrigation of wheat; and Wayne Wyatt, engineer of the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District, who will relate all the district has been able to find out about the underground water situation in Castro County. Wyatt's talk is expected to deal with recharge well work, the decline of the water table in this area; the general underground water picture, facts and figures on conservation and misuse of irrigation water and other fundamental topics. Dr. Pope will deal with virtually every aspect of efficient wheat farming and is a noted expert in this field for the Panhandle area. On the four-part, farmers participating will see soybeans which mature ten days earlier than standard varieties, test plots of cotton sprayed with a growth stimulant, gibberellic acid; production of hybrid sudan; cattle grazing perennial sorgrass; dwarf corn a potential producer for this area; and other items and crops that should be of interest to most farmers.—CASTRO COUNTY NEWS

WEED DISTRICT SPEEDS JOB

In an effort to give the farmers of Floyd County the best possible service in controlling their bindweed and other noxious weeds, a 1929 Chevrolet four-wheel drive pickup was purchased from Oden Chevrolet on July 20, by the Weed Control Board and put into operation on the 27th. The spray tank and a boom have been mounted on the pickup, making it no longer necessary for the farmer to furnish a tractor to pull the sprayer.—THE FLOYD COUNTY HESPERIAN

The BOOTLEG Philosopher

Editor's Note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his bindweed farm comes to the defense of scientists this week, although we doubt if they need defending.

Dear editor:

There is one phase of the outer space program that has begun to interest me, but not for any scientific reason. Every once in a while the space scientists shoot a capsule or nose cone into orbit and then try to bring it down and catch it, so they can check its instruments and gather a lot of scientific information about which I don't know any more than you do.

But the point is, when they get one up and then signal it down; sometimes they can't find it. It just floats down by parachute somewhere over the Pacific ocean and despite the fact they comb the area with airplanes and ships, they can't find it, and this causes some people to criticize them. "What's the matter with those scientists, can't they do better than that?" some people will say.

As a man who frequently can't find something he's looking for, I want to come to the defense of the scientists.

In fact, I lose things all the time around this Johnson grass farm. And I don't understand it, either. Say I'm using my hammer to fix a fence and decide to stop and do something else and agree to come back to the fence later. I carefully lay the hammer down, make a mental note of exactly where it is, couldn't anybody forget that, then go about my business and a week or so later when I need a hammer, I wrack my brain a while, remember the fence, go back and look but it's not there. I think it's the same fence, but to make sure I walk 'em all, up one side and down the other, but I might as well be searching the Pacific ocean for a nose cone.

The same thing is true with my saw, axe, hoe, pliers, wrenches, why, one time I even lost my tractor. It's a fact, I left it at the end of a row, got interested in keeping up with a Presidential campaign, weeds grew up around it, and later on when I needed it, it was days before I could find it.

As far as I'm concerned, if those scientists find one nose cone out of ten, they're doing better than most of us, except for those rare people who know where every tool they own is and never have time to explore outer space or even sit down and do nothing.

Yours faithfully,
J. A.

Forget Bites, Watch The Road

Many people were surprised this week to read that 85 of 215 people who died from poisonous bites over a four-year period were killed by the sting of bee, wasps, hornets and yellowjackets as compared with only 71 deaths from snake bites.

Conclusions from these statistics do not necessarily indicate that the sting of a bee is more dangerous than the bite of a rattlesnake. It does show, on the other hand, that modern methods and educational programs have made inroads on the safeguards against snake bites.

Furthermore, it could indicate a growing constitutional weakness on the part of the American people. Whereas, our forefathers had sufficient stamina to withstand insect bites, our present generations seems to be deteriorating to the point where they are more seriously affected.

It is also well to remember that we have more people these days than ever before and, consequently, more of them are being bitten by insects.

If you stack the entire 215 deaths—average 53 per year—up against the terrific death toll on our highways, it would appear that the American people have very little to worry about in the filed of poisonous bites. Our No. 1 worry today is accidental death from man-made perils, not those of nature, once man's greatest enemy.

Meanwhile, until someone shows up with better proof, we'd still rather take our chances on a bee sting than a rattlesnake bite.

Skunk...

They stood there for several weeks, but nothing was touched, and when they were able to bring them in, not an item was missing. wonder if that would happen today?

"When we came to Hereford, father bought the Jowell house and we lived there until it burned in 1913. Father then bought this house on Ave. F, and mother has lived here continuously since that time.

"We walked to school from the location of Texas Ave. and always walked home for lunch and back to school. There were 30 or 40 school children west of town, and all gathered at our house to play.

"Father had a grape arbor and we played hide-and-go-seek every summer night. They all loved playing in the arbor.

"Most every one had lovely yards with a windmill and well to keep them watered. Cattle were wild, and the ranchers would bring them in on different roads to keep them out of the yards.

"Some of our neighbors were the Bob Mounce family, George Saches, Jeff Thompson, Rat Jowell, L. R. Bradley and C. E. Williams. All the people may have appeared rough and tough, but outwardly they were most interested in seeing Hereford grow into a cultural educational center for their children. They wanted them to have the education their parents had missed.

"Our first church was an interdenominational one, and the whole community went together and built it. Everyone went to Sunday School and different denominational preachers would preach on Sundays.

"I well remember a teacher visiting Hereford. She took pictures of all the different classes of students so she could prove to the people in the north that Texans did not grow horns.

"Father was a rancher and traildriver and has made many trips over the old cattle trails to Denver, Dodge City and Wyoming. Bovina was the main shipping point at that time and Father shipped many cattle to Bovina from New Mexico. My maternal grandfather was also a traildriver, Col. J. J. Meyers.

"I well remember one night while an aunt, (father's sister) from Beeville was visiting us. We had two bedrooms upstairs. Mother heard a scratching and padding around downstairs and on investigation saw a skunk in the house. She hastily shoed us children into one room and locked the door. She and my aunt watched the skunk. He climbed upon the bed and how mother worried about her lovely bedspread as the skunk scratched, sniffed and rolled about on the softness of the bed. He rummaged around and found the stairs to the cellar where we kept all our food stored, but after a tense hour or so, he left as quietly as he had come.

"Mother was fond of fish and she and a neighbor had gone to Running Water draw to get some carp. She loaded the children into the hack and took off.

"On our way home it began to rain, it grew heavier and heavier; she could not see to drive, but the team took us on. The team stopped at the gate, about two miles from home, and father had sent a Negro to open the gate for us. He drove the rest of the way home. Mother was frightened and very glad to give him the reins.

"She fed the fish clabbered milk. One day father noticed that the fish had legs. Upon inspection they turned out to be water dogs, or as we called them, Wahalothes.

"I do not remember what year this happened, but I was a small child and it impressed me very much. We had a severe hailstorm and it broke out every window in our house.

"Father cut our wagon sheets into panels and tacked them over the windows until he was able to go into Amarillo to buy the glass to replace that which was broken. The house was dark and gloomy; perhaps that is why I remember it so well.

"As we grew up our entertainment was Sunday School and church and literary societies. School kids and grownups too would put on skits and dialogues readings, songs, etc. We had play parties and musicals.

"We had many picnics with basket dinners where we played many games and had contests for the fun of it, such as the ugliest man, the prettiest girl, potato sack races and many others.

"Mrs. Ed Connell and Mrs. Russell loved to go fishing and would gather the kids and take them to the creek for an afternoon of fishing. The kids had a wonderful time and would come home tired and happy.

"I don't seem to remember them catching many fish, but perhaps they just loved to go fishing to be outdoors and on the creekbank where it was cool and refreshing. I am sure there are some of those children grown to maturity that could tell more about these expeditions than I.

"Yes, this was a wonderful country to grow up in and it is a more wonderful place than in the good old days. Hereford has indeed grown into a cultured little city and we have wonderful schools and the fact that we must continue building shows the progress we are making," she concluded.

FIGURATIVELY SPEAKING

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Arithmetic projection gives Frank Thomas, the Cincinnati Redlegs new third baseman, a chance of hitting at least 45 home runs this season. He hit 35 last season with Pittsburgh.

The figuring is done this way: Last season Thomas hit three homers in Cincinnati in 11 games; this year he plays 77 games here, so he could hit 21 homers at home. He hit only 9 in Pittsburgh last year in 77 games, so he figures to get one there this year.

Add to these the 23 homers he hit the six remaining National League parks in 1958 and you get a total of 45.

School Board Hires New Coach At Meet Thursday

By MRS. R. L. PINNELL

Final school plans were finished Thursday night when the school board met and hired a new coach. The school board also accepted the resignation G. D. Webb, who will remain with the Adrian Wheat Growers this winter.

The board accepted the resignation of John Horton as a school board member, and appointed Oscar Boninman Sr. to fill Horton's unexpired term through April. John Horton was hired as custodian and bus driver.

Coming to the Adrian school faculty with the most impressive record is Gee Hallie, who holds a Master's degree from Baylor University. He has nine years experience at Three Rivers, Connally, and at Troy, where he was also High School Principal.

Hallie will teach math, sci- and was a member of the foot- with his coaching.

Hallie is a native of Temple and was a member of the foot- ball team, which met and lost to the Amarillo Sandies in the Cotton Bowl for State Championship a few years ago. He lettered in all sports in High school under coach Les Cranfill. He went from high school to Temple Junior College where he participated in track and football.

Hallie is married and has two sons, eight-year-old Russell and three-year-old Randy. They will move into the coaches home this week formerly lived in by the Joe Cullenders who have gone to Canadian.

The following school days and holidays are scheduled: The first faculty meeting will be Friday, Aug. 28, and school begins Aug. 31, with a full days' schedule. Busses will run at regular time and lunch will be served at the lunch room.

The first holiday will be Monday, Sept. 21, because of Oldham County day at the Tri-State Fair.

Nov. 26 and 27 will be holidays for Thanksgiving.

Dec. 23 through Jan. 4 will be a holiday for Christmas.

April 15 through 18 will be a holiday for Easter.

School will not be held Mar. 11 because of a Teacher's meeting in Amarillo; May 18 is the day of graduation and school will not be held on that day.

Burn Your Money, Declares Cow Bayou's Happy Hermit

Orange, Texas, (AP) — Justin Baker, the hermit of Cow Bayou, hates money. He says it all should be burned and the world would be a better place in which to live.

Baker wouldn't trade his heavily jungled kingdom for all the greenbacks that could be piled in his palmetto-thatched leanto. Men, he says, are slaves to customs and gadgets and worry themselves into early graves. Baker prefers the banks of Cow Bayou two miles south of transcontinental U. S. Highway 90. "Most of them die with debts bigger than their assets," he said. "But not me. I don't owe a crying dime. My only expense is a dime a month for fuel for my lantern."

"Most men spend more in a month than I spend in 10 years... maybe even for the rest of my life."

Baker who will be 57 this summer, told Jack Morgan, writing for the Houston Post, that his Lansing, Mich., was his home originally. He worked as a house and sign painter and for the railroad before he started "following the roads." He's now occupying his second shelter in 11 years of life on the bayou. Flood waters drove him out of his first in 1935 and 1958.

His simple way of life is "far better than most people could ever dream. My needs are few, and I don't complicate life by creating false needs."

Cloth sacks on the dirt floor serve as his bed. A fire in the open end of the lean-to serves for both warmth and cooking. He has a skillet and "one" pan, a few spoons, a can to brew coffee (a rare luxury), a jar of sugar, a can of baking powder.

Baker rolls his own cigarettes when he smokes. He carries his drinking water from the closest neighbor's well a quarter of a mile away.

The hermit maintains a barter system with the settlers. When he catches too many catfish, he gives them a few and they share their surpluses with him. Sweet and Irish potatoes come from his small garden.

with which he shares his bayou. "They're like neighbors," he said. "I get a kick out of them." But on rare occasions he accepts a neighbor's invitation to share a meal of coon—"the best wild meat there is."

Baker, a short, wiry bearded man, appears in good health. Mosquitoes, he says, give him fits at times.

He doesn't hunt the game and would not even accept the company of a dog.

"I would rather have a panther around than a dog," he says. "ain't got no earthly use for a dog—they're a nasty nuisance."

Doctor Advises Care For Minor Injuries Fast

By VIVIAN BROWN
NEW YORK (AP) — If you expect to come back from that vacation fit and happy, be sure to attend to minor injuries as soon as they occur. Milder injuries, which patients are likely to minimize, may leave behind permanent handicaps.

"The common ankle sprain, which is really a momentary dislocation of the ankle joint, so very often leaves an ankle which dislocates partially every time a man steps off a curb stone," says Dr. Joseph E. Milgram, director of orthopaedic surgery at the Hospital for Joint Diseases in New York.

Early recognition of its severity, he emphasizes, followed by sufficient local treatment for a long enough period (most often strapping for five to six weeks; occasionally even plaster casts) results in a normal joint.

"Too many young athletes and swimmers have dislocated a shoulder joint and had it reduced or had a friend pop it back disregarding an orthopaedist's insistence to keep the arm strapped to the body for a minimum of three weeks and probably longer," Milgram says.

"These patients too seldom understand," he continues, "that the strong ligamentous attachments, which hold the head of the arm bone in place, have torn free from the neck of the scapular or wing blade and have failed to re-attach themselves, because of too early use of the arm."

Far too often, operations must be performed later for frequently recurring dislocations which might have been prevented had correct attention been obtained at once, he says.

The same is true, says Milgram, of a sudden dislocation of the knee cap which pops back when an obliging friend pulls the leg. The patient limps a few days and seems well, for a while, when repeated rediso-locations begin, eventually ending in the operating room.

Serious back troubles may develop because a relatively mild "sprain" was not adequately treated by a period of uninterrupted bed rest. A torn ligament anywhere in the body takes three weeks before it begins to heal securely, says the doctor.

Bone injuries, too, should not be overlooked. The boat shaped bone in the wrist called the scaphoid may crack in a fall on the outstretched hand. "It seems to be a sprain to the patient, but it is not diagnosed (and it takes a good x-ray to show the crack) the bone falls apart into two pieces and the consequences are unhappy, prolonged and usually surgical."

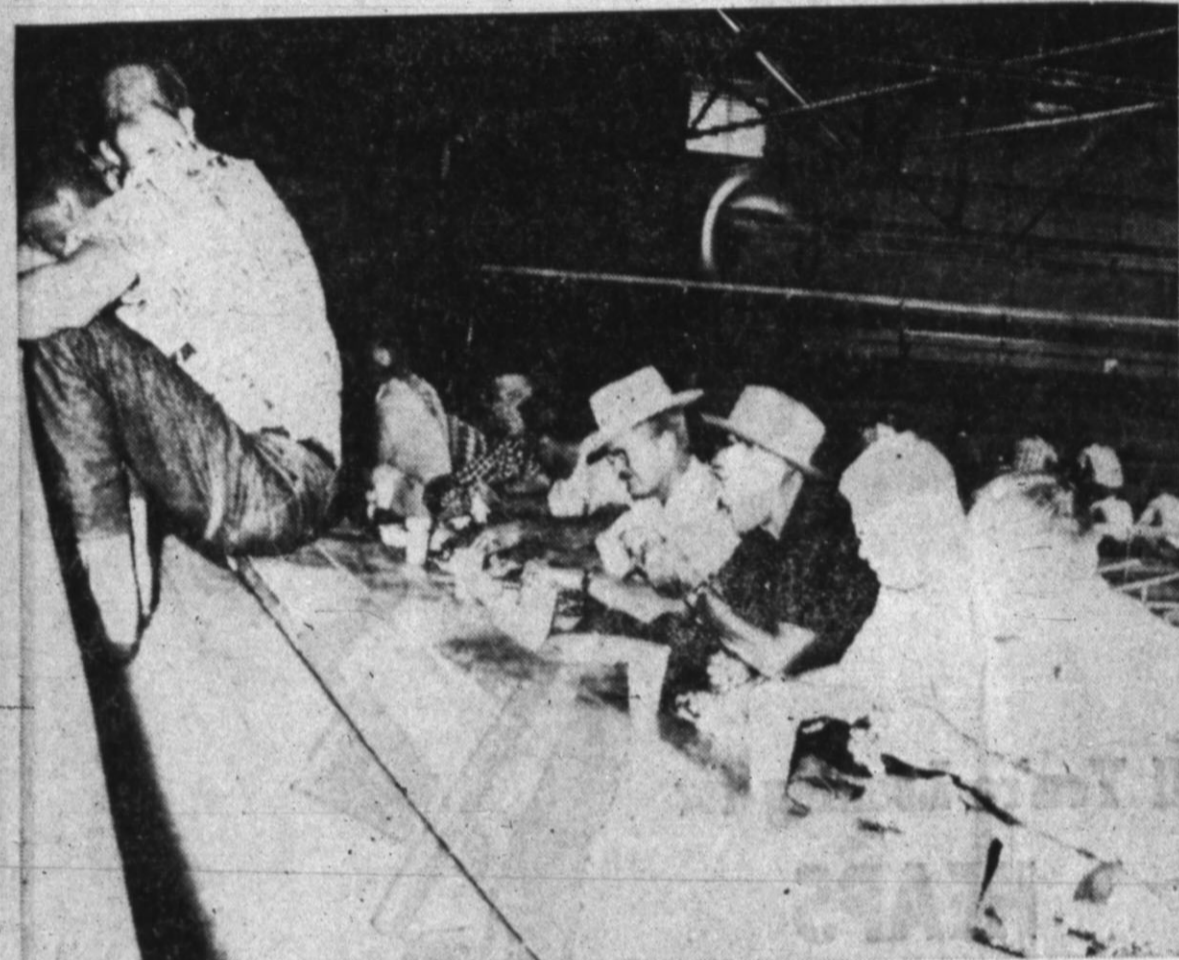

Milgram advises that if a wrist "sprain" lasts more than 36 hours, it should be x-rayed.

A major enemy in the summer is often a tight vacation schedule, says Milgram, and we should learn to take it easy. He explains:

"There is no more glaring need for health supervision than in the group of amateur athletes who flood our beaches, play-grounds, links and mountains each summer."

Don't use baking soda to clean an aluminum coffee maker because it discolors the metal.

There are usually about 10 fishsticks in an eight-ounce frozen package.

A HUGE BARBECUE was a highlight of the first civic club-sponsored Hereford Farm Tour held Wednesday. REMEMBER WHEN?

By Charlie Seeds

This was the first time a local war ever turned out to be a dress rehearsal for a major war to come. The conflict created a dictator who still reigns. Generalissimo Francisco Franco, leader of the rebel forces in the Spanish Civil War.

It was in July when Franco's forces invaded Spain from North Africa, beginning one of the most tragic wars in modern history in which brother fought against brother with fierce violence. But soon the war was more than the fight of Spaniard against Spaniard. First Germany and Italy threw support to Franco, supplying him with modern weapons, planes and ammunition. Then Russia adopted the Loyalist cause, providing arms and supplies.

For the Loyalists, help was too little and too late. German and Italian aid enabled the Franco forces to gain a strong foothold... and eventually to win. Remember when the Spanish war began?

Remember the year? Here at home, we had our own private fight... against the Depression. We were winning, too... and more Americans could think of buying the new things they needed... like that brand new car. The year was 1936.

If you've been putting off getting the new car you want now, don't wait! We're offering top deals right now on the new 1959 Ford. Don't put off the proud day when you can get behind the wheel of a new Ford from CHARLIE SEEDS MOTOR CO., INC. 146 E. Second, Phone EM 4-2727.
