Serrano seeks new Arena

By ANDREA LAMB Staff Writer

The field is smaller and the players on the field are fewer, but Lou Serrano, the man vying for a slot on one of six arena football teams today, is by no means a pencil neck compared to the big boys in the NFL.

The 6-foot, 2-inch former West Texas State University offensive guard, the son-in-law of Deaf Smith county Sheriff, tips the scales at 250 pounds. Serrano is afraid that may not be enough to make the cut in Denver, Colo., where he and 149 other players will try out for positions in the Arena Football League.

Arena football has its similarities to 11-man football, but differs in that the field measures 50 yards by 29½ yards as compared to a regular playing field of 120 yards by 53 yards.

Too, arena football utilizes only eight players on the field, and Serrano said this pares his chances of winning a spot as offensive guard on any of the arena football teams.

"I'm going to just one of 12 camps the league has stationed across the U.S., and out of that 12, only 78 guys will be picked to attend the final training camp," said Serrano. "That doesn't look very good for me because there are about 200 guys at each camp, but I'm gonna give it a shot

Filing for the city and school elections will end Wednesday, and very few persons have filed for any positions-only two have filed for the city election and one has filed for the school election.

Four incumbents up for re-election this year on the city commission have filed to run again: Emory Brownlow (Place 2), Bud Eades (Place 4), Jerry Walsh (Place 5), and Paul Hamilton (Place 6), according to City Secretary Bonnie Duke.

National Ag Week underway

Today-the first day of spring, is National Agriculture Day. This week is National Agriculture

Agriculture Day is set aside each year to salute the role of agriculture in the national economy.

"Agriculture's contribution to American life, both through the jobs it provides and through production of the highest quality and most abundant food supply in history, makes it the cornerstone of the nation," said Secretary of Agriculture Richard Lyng, who will serve as national honorary chairman.

Throughout the country, including many urban and nonfarm areas, groups including the Agriculture Council of America Education Foundation, farm, commodity and agribusiness organizations, will concentrate on education efforts to make Americans realize the importance of agriculture.

The education process begins with making people aware of the fact that agriculture is the No. 1 industry, employing 21 million men and women from supermarket workers to farmers, ranchers, fertilizer salesmen and feedlot cowboys. The food and fiber industry is responsible for 17 percent of the gross national product and $28 billion worth of exports in 1987. Locally, farmers and ranchers will be invited to an annual hamurger supper on Saturday, where beef certificates will be given away by the Hereford CattleWomen and new vehicles will be displayed by Hereford's car

Nationally, events range from an agri-science fair in Iowa to educational exhibits in California shopping malls.

Coming this week: Japan-bashing, new plans, changing ways on the farm.

How The Food Dollar Is Divided

When all dollars spent on food, athome and away-from-home, are considered, the farmer gets about 25 cents. Others in on the split include transportation, three cents; wholesaling, eight cents; processing, 22.5 cents, and food service--retailing, 41.5 cents.

Farm industry keeps changing

The agriculture industry has gone through drastic changes in the past 20 years due to American consumers discovering new products and becoming more "health conscious" and search for convenience.

In percentage usage, gainers include frozen potatoes, frozen corn, chicken, turkey and lettuce. Losers include fresh potatoes, lamb, eggs and whole milk.

Agriculture and the food industry have worked hard to respond to changing needs. From days of getting a steer or hog as fat as possible, those industries have made tremendous inroads in producing a meaty steer or hog with as little fat as possible.

Other changes have come in the types of vegetables grown as produce like cauliflower, broccoli, various types of squash and others have gained popularity.

Industries have made more efforts to explain their nutrition factor to consumers.

The meat industry has launched a massive effort, using everything from point-ofpurchase materials to placemats Garner explaining how beef is "real food for real people.

Everything is planned—No free-lancing allowed

EDITOR'S NOTE: Wherever he goes, a small army goes with him. Virtually everything he does in public is planned, scripted and rehearsed. Even a visit to a club two blocks from the White House follows an elaborate scenario. That's the insulating apparatus of the presidency today. It wasn't always that way

By W. DALE NELSON Associated Press Writer

Harry Truman liked to take a walk every morning, a habit he didn't abandon even after Franklin D. Roosevelt died.

Promptly at 7 a.m., the president, a fedora on his head and usually a cane in his hand, would set off from the White House at a brisk 120 paces a minute.

The route varied, sometimes across Lafayette Square and up Connecticut Avenue, sometimes on a circuit of the Washington Monument and Lincoln Memorial.

Taxi drivers would shout their hellos. Sometimes the president paused to sign an autograph for a tourist. Often a reporter or two showed up, joining the president and his brace of Secret Service men.

A few weeks ago, President Reagan went two blocks along one of Truman's walking routes to dedicate the newly rebuilt Army and Navy Club. Here is what happened

When the motorcade of nine cars and an ambulance, escorted by District of Columbia police cars and motorcycles, pulled up at the club at 10:30 a.m., the president's limousine pulled into an unadorned side entrance leading to a loading dock.

Club officials had wanted Reagan to come in the elegant front door, but a White House advance team had vetoed the idea two weeks earlier. Too dangerous.

Stepping from his limo, the resident walked to a freight elevator, carpeted for the occasion, through a loading dock area cleared of clutter.

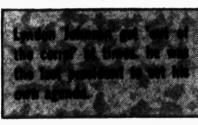

In a routine that had been rehearsed for days, Brig. Gen. James D. Hittle, the retired Marine officer who is the club president, was supposed to open a door to guide Reagan into the main ballroom.

As they reached the door, Gray Terry, deputy director of the Office of Presidential Advance, whispered to Hittle, "Not in here! The door's locked!" Hittle opened another door into the ballroom, a few yards down the hall. Then the president was taken down a circular staircase to pass through a receiving line of club officials and their wives, and to cut a ribbon.

Hittle then escorted the president into the dining room.

It had all been rehearsed, with Terry playing the part of Reagan. The second of the two steps that led up to the dais had been marked with adhesive tape as a precaution against stumbling. The white drapes in the windows, normally drawn back, were lowered. The window at the end, where the president would speak, was protected by a bullet-proof glass

Army and Navy Club often invited their neighbor, the president, to all their parties," Reagan said in his remarks. "I've also heard that Benjamin Harrison and Grover Cleveland waled over for a toddy or two. Oh, for the good old days."

Those days are gone forever.

This simple presidential visit, planned for months, had required the initial meeting with 16 White House people two weeks earlier, at least two walk-throughs, a number of rehearsals, several more meetings on the site and constant telephone calls. For more than a week beforehand, the White House had been working on communications for the president, and his staff. A holding room was needed for the president, where he could receive or make a telephone call if needed.

Club officers proposed an office just off the lobby, but the lobby was too crowded. Finally, they chose a modest security room near the loading dock. Half an hour before the president arrived, traffic on surrounding streets and access to the building were sealed dent of the United States.

Some presidents have chafed at this structured life. It seems to fit Reagan like a glove.

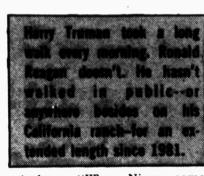

The trappings help fend off possible danger. They keep the president in constant touch with Washington and other world capitals. They make his public appearances come off smoothly.

They also insulate the leader of the world's premier democracy from the people he leads.

"Every one of thse guys becomes a little more isloated," says Bill Gulley, former director of the White House military of-airplane. "When Nixon came along, everything was orderly,' says Gulley.

Nixon experimented with having smartly uniformed trumpeters, their horns draped with banners, signal the arrival of the president at social occasions. Jimmy Carter cut out the traditional playing of "Hale to the Chief" altogether. Reagan, the performer with a flare for the theatrical, brought it back.

The president, with his background as an actor with a reputation for taking direction well, still takes direction well.

He has said of his Sacramento period, "For eight years, somebody handed me a piece of paper every night that told me what I was going to be doing the next day." He has made similar statements about his White House existence.

At his annual summertime party for the press in Santa Barbara, he goes by the book, entering the grounds and walking to a specified spot, then taking a specified route through the crowd and going at a specified time to a bandstand to make off-the-record remarks.

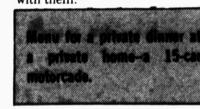

"His time is scheduled very precisely, much more precisely than I would have ever thought," says James C. McKinney, who came to the White House last year as director of the military office. "There was a book printed for the Gorbachev visit, and that ran only 2½ days. The book was approximately an inch thick, a minuteby-minute rundown of who goe where, when, who accomagnies the president, who rides in which elevator. It's the kind of a book that we get if we even go to make a speech in Jacksonville, Fla., to a bunch of high school kids."

When the American president travels, the White House goes with him. It's set up in the Biltmore Hotel in Santa Barbara, or in Tokyo or Venice.

"You can get two helicopters on and get the ground crews for them on a C-5A," says Gulley. "You also take a car, a backup and a follow-up for Secret Service. And in my time it took about 20 communicators and 6,000 pounds of communications equipment for each stop. That would be whether he goes for 15 minutes or whether he goes overnight."

Even if the president goes to a private dinner at the home of friends, it takes a 15-car motorcade with a cluster of military and security aides, a doctor and other staff.

"It's usually no problem and people expect it," says Gary Foster, chief of press advance for the White House. "Once in a while it's an inconvenience. It's just that so many people come with him that sometimes they have a hard time knowing what to do with them."

Man arrested in cattle thefts

A Hereford man was arrested Tuesday on charges of stealing 22 head of cattle worth $8,492 from Frio Feeders on March 12, said Deaf Smith County Sheriff Joe Brown.

Gregorio Salazar Martinez, 29, of 811 S. Schley Ave., confessed to stealing the 22 head of cattle in addition to stealing 12 head of cattle from an individual on Feb. 17.

Martinez, along with Valentine Guevara who was arrested March 13, allegedly loaded the 22 head of cattle into a trailer and transported them to livestock pens where authorities matched Guevara's shoe print to one found at the scene of the crime.

County officials had issued an arrest warrant for Martinez who was at large at the time of Guevara's ar-

To better his chances, Serrano has been running, lifting weights and jumping rope for three months to attain that quickness needed on offense.

"If I can play in arena football, hopefully I can have a shot in the NFL," Serrano said. "That's always been my dream. Maybe this will be the one thing to get it out of my system."

Serrano, who was an all-league performer in the Missouri Valley Conference, said that if he makes the cut at Denver, he'll be training at a camp in Orlando, Fla., which begins April 8 and lasts the week. Then the 15-game season starts April 29 and won't wind down until July 30.

Arena football also incorporates a playoff season just as the NFL does, and each player, whose average salary will be $25,000, will receive extra pay, said Serrano.

Serrano said he considers the short, three-month playing season a blessing since he is still an undergraduate at WTSU.

If Serrano makes the cut, his courses aren't the only thing he'll be putting on the back burner.

North retiring from Marines

WASHINGTON (AP) - Lt. Col. Oliver North says he's retiring from the Marine Corps because he may have to subpoena "the highest ranking officials in our government" to defend himself against charges in the Iran-Contra affair.

North, making a brief appearance Friday at the office of attorney Brendan Sullivan, said Sullivan had informed him "that the defense against these charges may require him to issue subpoenas for the testimony and records of the highest ranking officials in our government."

"That strikes me as a course of action incompatible with my continued service as a Marine officer," North said. "Accordingly, with great sadness, I have tendered my request to retire from the Marine Corps.'

North, who wore a civilian business suit in place of his usual ribbon-bedecked Marine uniform, refused to answer questions after reading the statement.

But Pentagon sources said North, 44, had submitted his request Thursday, asking that he be allowed to retire effective May 1 when he will have completed 20 years of active military service.

The request already has been approved by Gen. Alfred M. Gray, the commandant of the Marine Corps, and is expected to receive "routine" approval Monday from the office of the Navy secretary, the sources add-

Twenty years is the minimum amount of service required to retire from the military with a pension. With 20 years of service, North is entitled to a pension totaling 50 percent of his base monthly pay, or slightly over $22,000 a year.

The Pentagon sources said North also had requested approval to begin terminal leave, meaning he wants to use accumulated leave benefits to stop working at his military post now instead of waiting until May 1.

"That also should be approved routinely," said one source.

North was reassigned to Marine Corps headquarters on the planning staff in November 1986 after President Reagan fired him as an aide to the National Security Council.

North will become the second major figure in the Iran-Contra scandal to retire from active military duty.

Today is National Agriculture Day, and the beginning of National Agriculture Week.

This is a week designed to make people across the country aware of what agriculture means to the entire nation. Sometimes I wonder if we realize, right here in the No. 2 ag county in the nation, what agriculture means to us?

And, of course, there are many misconceptions about farmers. It is not true there would be no need for the U.S. Postal Service if they would just stop all of the federal farm programs.

I have never farmed, and never had any desire to farm. I don't want to experience changing water at midnight, then waking up at 1:30 when the well got shot by some delinquent out "having fun." I don't want to change water at noon, much less midnight.

I don't want the experience of sitting on a tractor from dawn to dusk all spring and summer, then watching a hailstorm beat the life out of your investment of countless hours and more money than you can ever hope to have in return.

I don't want to experience running a combine from before dawn to after midnight, then sitting in a truck for eight hours at the elevator so you can dump that load and start again. I don't have the knowledge it takes to plow thousands of straight rows in a field, making sure the moisture is right, planting the right seeds in the right places, and nurturing those tiny seeds into millions of kernels of corn and wheat and milo, or millions of leaves of lettuce or cabbage, or sugar beets or potatoes or whatever that crop may be. I don't have the knowledge it takes to raise a tiny calf or weaner pig into a big, meaty

But I envy every person that can do that. Hats off to every one of you.

COLLEGE STATION - Like traditional weddings, home-sewn wedding gowns are back in style.

The Sewing Fashion Council reports that since 1984 the number of bridal fashion patterns has increased 100 percent. About 40 percent of the wedding fashions are sewn at home by the bride, a family member or a professional dressmaker.

Dr. Ann Beard, a clothing and textiles specialist, says that homesewing a wedding gown has always been a way to hold down expenses, but that isn't the only motivation.

"The home-sewn wedding dress has grown in appeal because it offers the opportunity to have something unique and to create a family heirloom," she adds.

But if you're not an experienced home-sewer, or if your skills are rusty, she advises using the services of a professional dressmaker.

Beard, a home economist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service, offers the following suggestions to home-sewers who take on the task:

-Allow plenty of time, typically 4-6 months, so that you are finished at least a week before the wedding. -Keep pattern pieces, lace and the dress-in-progress in plastic wraps to avoid dust, dirt and spills. -Baste or pin major pieces and fit them to the bride before sewing any finished seams.

-Use clean, sharp scissors or a rotary-wheel cutter for fabrics.

-Pin fine fabrics with silk dressmaker pins to avoid making holes. Also check your sewing machine needle and replace it with a new one in the appropriate size for the fabric.

-Be sure the fineness of the thread is compatible with the fabric. Use extra fine thread for light weight fabrics. -To assure sewing smooth seams in silky fabrics, prevent puckering by holding the fabric firmly in front of and behind the needle while sewing. Adjust the stitch length to the weight of the fabric.

-Keep your hands clean and use hand cream if they are rough to avoid pulls on fine fabrics. Since creams can stain, allow plenty of time for it to be absorbed into your skin.

-Test everything, including the stitch length, thread compatibility and tension on a scrap of fabric to make sure it will work perfectly.

To preserve your family heirloom, the specialist suggests that it be cleaned immediately after the wedding and stored using one of two methods.

Hang the dress on a padded hanger, with waist loops running from the inside waist seam to the hanger to take stress off the shoulder seams. Also stuff the sleeves with tissue paper. Then wrap the gown in freshly washed cotton fabric, such as an all-cotton sheet.

"The only time some men will be satisfied with their lot is when they are buried in it."

Oil Prices' Downward Drift Bad News For U.S.

Almost unnoticed, oil prices are sliding toward $15 a barrel. And there s reason to believe they may go far lower. The surplus is considerable. As spring nears, heating demands will diminish. The results will be slowly sliding prices and rapidly slipping drilling in the U.S. This spells trouble, to wit, a growing dependency on foreign oil, especially from the Persian Gulf, where the Iran-Iraq war is heating up.

No one believes that there are sufficient supplies in the U.S. to make the nation energy independent. But there is every reason to want to maximize domestic oil production and to fully use domestic gas reserves. That will require deregulating natural gas to free the market to deliver the massive available supplies where they will be needed the most: the Northeast. ...

Oil and gas are the economic lifeblood of the nation, and the nation continues down the path of increasing dependency on foreign oil. The problem cannot wait for a new president. President Reagan should place energy at the top of his domestic agenda for the remainder of his term.

Exercise Caution in Trading With Soviets

Of all the Cabinet departments, the Department of Commerce is probably the least conspicuous to the average American, but Commerce Secretary C. William Verity wants to increase trade with the Soviet Union. Selling Levis, Fords and Coca-Colas to 250 million Soviets is tempting, but caution should be exercised.

The Soviets won't allow their market to be bought for a pittance. They want high-tech products more than blue jeans and cola. The Pentagon opposes any trade in sensitive military gear. It should.

Getting a corner on Soviet markets is enticing, but these are the same people who trample the civil rights of their citizens, who use slave labor to manufacture some of their goods, and who, in parts of the world, look down rifle barrels at U.S. troops.

In summary, it's OK to boost trade in some areas, but don't give away the store.

Kudos To Hometown Candidate

If the next president of the United States calls Houston home, Houstonians will remember Tuesday night as the time George Bush was really off and soaring in his quest.

That all remains to be seen. But little remains to be seen of the havoc Vice President Bush wreaked on the Republican presidential competition on Super Tuesday.

It was an overwhelming victory. Congratulations to the hometown candidate.

The Texas Railroad Commission's decision to become aggressive about its affirmative action campaign is welcome, whether the decision comes from criticism during the last two elections or out of genuine concern that not enough was being done. #### U.S. May Interfere Too Much

Few would deny that Panama's de facto leader, Gen. Manuel Noriega, isn't a democratic leader....

From the U.S. view, the man isn't fit to rule his country. But the view is much different in Panama and most of Central America. As long as there is general prosperity in Panama, the people won't likely revolt against Noriega. ...

But now because of U.S. moves, prosperity may be going dry. ... When Panama was denied an estimated $50 million of its U.S. dollars in U.S. banks because of charges against Noriega, it started hurting people in their pocketbooks. The question is, should the United States again be interfering in another country's business, even a country where it has long-time ties? Will it be another case of U.S. interference developing a backlash?

Noriega may be a despot, but he is not a communist. ... Economic pressure from the United States could lead Noriega in that direction.

Some worry about the Panama Canal ... and its importance to the free world. But that canal is Panama's treasury. It is unlikely Noriega would want to do anything to ruin its economic gold mine. Most disturbing are reports that the canal is being neglected. In the long run, that is what the United States should be looking at, instead of dabbling in Panamanian politics.

On Their Knees

The great white fathers of South Africa perceived it as an ominous threat.

A procession led by Bishop Desmond Tutu was on its way to Parliament. Riot police blocked the path. The clergymen, wearing robes and holding Bibles, knelt on the spot and proceeded to recite Tutu and other clergy were then arrested for violating an order that prohibits political activity by anti-apartheid groups. Their supporters were sprayed with firehoses as they prayed and sang hymns.

So much for those who seek peaceful means of filing their grievances against the South African government. Tutu was trying to deliver a petition to protest the new policy. The government wouldn't be bothered.

Such is the state of tension in South Africa. The government decries violence, but won't allow non-violent means of airing grievances.

The idea of banning political activity is not only oppressive, it is stupid. Giving people a chance to air their views peacefully is a possible vent for pent-up hostilities. All South Africa is doing with its latest policy is giving fuel to those who believe the only way to end apartheid is through bloodshed.

Schools Don't Need Six-Day Week

The superintendent of the Houston Independent School District said recently that the district's school week should be increased to

"I look forward to the day, and hopefully in the near future," Joan Raymond said, "that we have school available, at least on half a day on Saturday, for all children. ... Children have got to be in school more. There's too much more for them to learn.'

Wrong, Mrs. Raymond.

The problem with some schools in Houston - and the rest of the nation - is not that the school week isn't long enough. The real problem is that students are not always being taught effectively when they are in some classrooms. Simply adding Saturday to the school week with no change in the curriculum or focus of education will not solve the problems facing many schools. It will not put an end to the high school graduates who read at a grade-school level, have no idea in what century the American Revolution occurred and couldn't find Brazil on a world map if you offered them $500.

Without question, the world is getting more complicated, and some fundamental changes might be needed in schools of the future. But before jumping to a six-day week - which would be highly unpopular with many students, teachers and parents — schools should at least consider lengthening the existing school days. ...

THE CORNERS OF THE FIELDS

The only welfare program I ever knew that worked was the one instituted by the early Jewish nation. Every farmer left the corners of the fields for the poor. Any poor person could harvest what they needed to survive. There was no governmental agency overseeing. There was no red tape lying in layers over the program. There was no office full of bureaucrats and computers filling out forms and telling the poor to come back next month. It was simple, the farmer left the corners of the fields and the poor harvested what they needed.

Jesus Christ added to this program by instituting the church and entrusting them with the care of the widows and orphans. Somehow the church forgot and the state had to take over. The result has been near bankruptcy for the state and starvation for the poor. I do not think we can holler at the government about the cost of welfare until we come up with some kind of corners of the

I found one last week. I met with the folks in charge of the Ronald McDonald houses. These houses are built in 110 cities in the United States and are now being built in several foreign countries. The houses are built to give a place for families of critically ill children to live during treatment. I cannot think of a more needed service.

The exciting thing to me is this is a corner of the field sort of an idea. McDonalds will help a community start a Ronald McDonald house and contribute $25,000.00 to the cause. The community raises the money and the long term support. McDonalds then gives added support by sponsoring training seminars to support the staff and the volunteers, but the program belongs to the community.

Of course McDonalds get name recognition for their efforts. I am not sure this sells enough hamburgers to justify the cost. One thing they get plenty of is a sense of pride and accomplishment. They have caused a great thing to happen and it is still happening as new facilities are being built.

I take my hat off to a great idea. I salute one of the times when someone thought up a corner of the field idea and did not ask the government for a grant.

Deja vu all over again

By Richard L. Lesher, President

WASHINGTON -- The recent ominous rise in oil imports calls to mind the famous quote from Yogi

Berra, "It's deja vu all over again." The oil shocks of the 1970s underscored the folly of our country's excessive dependence on foreign oil supplies. Soaring energy prices forced us to reduce energy consumption. We put more insulation in our houses, turned thermostats vehicles and accelerated exploration and production of domestic oil sup-

Our efforts paid off. Energy consumption decreased, domestic production rose and oil imports fell. The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries eventually got it's comeuppance when oil prices crashed and their economies went into

Unfortunately, while the fall of oil prices did wonders for our economy, old, wasteful ways. Indeed, declining oil prices in 1936 helped conceal a major increase in volume of oil imports which rose by a fourth, even as the monetary value of those imports actually declined. Now oil prices appear to be headed down again, and we are drifting back down that slippery slope to excessive dependency. This is a worriesome trend that is at least partially responsible for our oversized trade deficit down, build more energy-efficient in the first nine months of this year and our dependence on foreign oil is expected to get even worse.

There are a couple of simple measures our government can pursue to help reverse this increasing dependency upon foreign oil supplies. The first is to repeal the illogical "windfall profits tax" on domestic oil that deters statewide oil production. If there was ever a time that the windfall profits tax made sense, it is long past. Of course, at current price levels there is no wind-it also enticed many of us back to our fall tax, yet it remains a deterrent to future production.

Also, Uncle Sam should act apace to permit exploration and development of promising oil fields, such as along the California coast and in the upper regions of Alaska, Objections raised by environmental groups are exaggerated and irrational. Our oil industry has proven time and again its ability to extract our country's precious energy resources without destroying our equally precious ecosystems and wildlife.

It is imperative that we move quickly on these matters. Otherwise we may look up one day soon to discover we are once again caught in the suffocating embrace of OPEC.

Letters to the Editor

Recently, I watched a local newscast and saw people respond to the question regarding Reagan's decision to send troops to Honduras. Very few were in support of that decision. Only one voiced the cruxwhich is that we must stop communist expansion.

In recent years, my voice would have been among those in opposition. I had "buried my head in the sand" and gone merrily along with the excuse that politics, economics and war were beyond my understanding or interest.

It is time that we in America realize that this great nation may not always be great. This country has been incredibly blessed and, in a few hundred years, has risen to become the greatest nation on earth. Why? Because our forefathers fought for freedom and founded this country on a belief in God and His word. We have forgotten that our laws were based on the laws of His book.

We only have to go back to the last great war in which this country fought as an example of the courage and determination exhibited by the people of this great land. Thank God they stood with their leaders who said that we will fight ungodly injustices in the world. I was born during World War II, but I can remember what I learned growing up during the war and post-war years. Our people stood together and proudly sent our men to fight. There was no shame or apology. We pulled together, and our men new that those at home were in full support of them. We only have to look at Vietnam to see how the lack of that support demoralized our men.

Let us not be deceived again as we were by Fidel Castro's takeover of Cuba. Let us learn from the past. As I have opened myself to hear what those who have lived in Central America are saying and have educated myself on the methods of communist leaders, my eyes have been opened to the deception of our enemies. It is plain to see that Cuba and Russia are orchestrating the war in Central America. Their aim is to take all those countries, and we must see that it is at our back door. Are we going to wait until they are at our borders before we say it's okay to stand for freedom?

This letter is not written to criticize or condemn you if you were as I was, but I hope to encourage you to learn for yourself the truth. We have been deceived by our apathy and ignorance to the ways of our enemy. "God's word says, "My people perish for lack of knowledge."

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnsongrass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek claims he has discovered something about Washington that few people knew about.

Dear editor:

According to a report from Washington, there are 90 million potholes in the city streets of America.

Some people didn't know Washington had established a Department of Potholes and naturally are wondering how the figure of 90 million was arrived at.

It wasn't easy. The survey's start was delayed several months because the newly-appointed chairman couldn't decide what color rug should be put down in his office.

Then it took considerable time to assemble a staff. The chairman said he wasn't about to send people out who're inexperienced in counting potholes. He required a six-months training period, plus a background character investigation by the FBI.

By then the survey was further delayed while the department chairman sought additional money from Congress to cover unexpected startup costs. "Neither Rome nor potholes were built in a day," he said. This made sense to many Congressmen.

Four tight-fisted Congressmen objected to appropriating more money. "It's up to cities to count their own potholes," they said. "It's none of the Federal government's business. Let the cities fill them up or teach its citizens how to dodge them."

The additional money was appropriated, attached as a rider to a bill to leave Social Security alone. The four tight-fisted Congressmen voted for it.

When asked what plans he has for filling up the 90 million potholes, the chairman said his assigned task was to count potholes, not fill them up. He suggested his department be expanded to come up with a pothole-filler plan. The idea is under considera-

By GARY L. CHRISTENSEN Envy or Admiration?

"Envy is the cause of those dislikes sometimes felt when one doesn't know why he hates another; those small, indefinable, petty hates which, without self-examination, he is unable to account for.

"Close introspection soon discovers this fact. It causes that sudden pang of jealousy its possessor feels when listening to words of commendation for another.

"Envy engenders hate, which is the deadliest, most destructive, most blightening of all the passions, and hate has no source upon which it can draw for unlimited supply except envy. It promotes discontent as nothing else can; it fosters jealousy and begets bigotry; it is productive of sneers and disdainful mannerisms; it suggest the commission of contemptible little deeds - meanness." -Dallas Morning News, Dec. 10,

TODAY'S INSIGHT: These statements, one from a newspaper editorial and the other spoken at a college graduation exercise, clearly illustrate the opposite forces in envy and admiration. The way we look upon the success or good of another person falls into one of these classifications.

This can be determined in selfanalysis by asking ourselves, "Am I bitter toward that person because I don't like to see him succeed? Am I making myself miserable because of my jealousy toward him?" A sincere, honest self-analysis can help us to admire and appreciate the good of others, letting that admiration motivate us to improve ourselves to compete against our past ac-complishments, instead of hating somebody else because he has ex perienced some success we have pot

Making friends one of benefits

NEW YORK (AP) — The best way to enjoy a trip is to make a friend on the road, says Letitia Baldrige, unofficial arbiter of American manners and frequent traveler, in the premiere issue of Lear's.

"Unfortunately, it's very tough to meet strangers, much less to get to know them, when you don't speak their language and you're just passing through their country," notes Baldrige, who offers tips on putting more "bon" in bon voyage:

— If you are a woman alone, enlist the help of the headwaiter of your hotel dining room to seat you at a good table and introduce you to dining room regulars.

— Ask the concierge of your hotel to give you the name of one or two neighborhood bistros, friendly restaurants that American tourists rarely find.

If someone invites you to join his or her table for dinner, pay your own way.

— Keep a list of names, addresses and telephone numbers. When you get back home, send each new friend a card saying how much you enjoyed meeting him or her. If you follow this up with annual Christmas cards, the friendships will grow and the people will welcome you back when you return to their country.

NEW YORK (AP) — About 24 million Americans have some form of osteoporosis, or weakening of the bone mass, says the National Osteoporosis Foundation.

A calcium-deficient diet is thought to be partly responsible for this debilitating disease.

Adequate calcium intake is vital to the development and maintenance of healthy bones, especially prior to the age of 35, notes nutritionist Barbara Beck of Dannon Yogurt. To improve rhythm of golf swing

Dallas man invents 'wet noodle' wand

Denison Herald

SHERMAN, Texas (AP) - You think you are swinging a wet noodle instead of a golf club. But to Dr. John that "wet noodle" has changed his game from a 22 handicap to a 2 handicap and has him dreaming of joining the senior PGA tour.

Club in Sherman recently to demonstrate his new approach to really learning the game of golf.

"I decided a little over three years ago to take up the game of golf. I asked around the various clubs in Dallas and was told that the finest professional to help me develop a sound game was Jack Mann, the teaching pro at Bent Tree Country Club,' Melvin said.

Less than two years later, Melvin was playing to a 22 handicap, but still was unsatisfied. To improve the rhythm of his swing, Mann suggested that Melvin swing a rope in the manner of swinging a golf club.

"I tied a rag to the end of the rope and started swinging it. However, there wasn't a lot of romance in that kind of action. I would tire of it quickly. So I bored a hole in a ball and tied the ball to the rope," Melvin said.

"The problem with this was that the rope would wrap around my neck," he said. "If I wasn't careful, I would get hit in the head with the ball. I spent more time ducking than swinging."

Since he was looking for a whip action, he decided on something like a limber fishing rod. He found out where he could buy some blanks and experimented with them, using the head off a driver.

"It took a lot of adjusting to get the weight balanced, but I finally hit paydirt. Now I had a golf club that I could swing in practice and actually hit a ball with it. What's more, the extra whip action of the flexible shaft gave me 15 to 20 more yards per drive," Melvin said.

The rod is so flexible that by putting the handle in one hand and the clubhead in the other, you can bend it into a u-shape without damaging the shaft.

"You can't rush your backswing. It (using the device) slows down your entire game. I can hit a bucket of balls with this club and then go out on the course and go around in par or better," Melvin said.

"Too, it forces or trains you to put more emphasis on your left side in your swing, and you have better control over each shot you hit," Melvin

The club is not legal for use on the course itself, but Melvin is convinced of its value as a training tool and for

While Melvin has taken out the club occasionally to begin a round, it is more to entertain his foursome than to score, he said. "You can't make a mental error with a shaft of this kind. If you do and the shaft gets an extra whip in it before it reaches your ball, you'll miss the ball entirely," he said. Everywhere Melvin shows up with his "wet noodle wand," he draws a crowd. Woodlawn was no exception. Everyone on the driving range wanted to take a crack at swinging it.

Larry Barber, son of touring senior tour star Miller Barber, found it exciting. After a few false starts, including a whiff, Barber found the groove. He emptied a bucket of balls and went after another.

"I had watched you hit, earlier, and you were rushing through your swing," Melvin told Barber. "Already, you have slowed it down, and I think it will improve your game."

Woodlwawn pro Charlie Menton also hit several balls and laced them out 250 or more yards.

Melvin said touring pro Davis Love had swung the noodle and liked what it did to his swing. Love is considered th longest hitter on the PGA tour. The Dallas physician said he has put the shaft into production in a firm he has created called "Tempo Industries." He plans to market the driver, a 5-iron, a wedge and a put-

"Those are the clubs that cause golfers the most trouble," he said.

The clubs will be marketed through country clubs and direct mail, he said, with the driver priced about $87 and the irons about $20 less.

Melvin said he doesn't think the clubs will put any teaching golf pros out of a job. But he does think many of them will add the wet noodle wand to their training arsenal.

Astros' Scott feels 1987 was good season for him in major league history to strikeout By MICHAEL A. LUTZ

AP Sports Writer KISSIMMEE, Fla. (AP) -Houston pitcher Mike Scott kept hearing during the winter that he'd had a bad season in 1987.

That confused Scott since he recalled having a decent year. So he decided to look back.

"I normally don't look back at last season but after finding out from the 'experts' that I had such a lousy year, I decided to look at my numbers," Scott said.

"It was actually pretty good." The problem with Scott's 1987 season was that it had to be compared with his Cy Young Award performance in 1986.

Scott was one of the most dominating pitchers in baseball in 1986, leading the major leagues with 306 strikeouts, 275 1-3 innings pitched and a 2.22 earned run average.

Scott threw a no-hitter on Sept. 25, against San Francisco to clinch the National League Western Division title.He became only the 11th pitcher of my career."

300 or more batters in one season.

That's why his 233 strikeouts, 16 victories and 3.23 ERA paled by comparison although Scott was named the starting pitcher in the All-Star

"I don't know if that's being objective or not to compare last year to 1986," Scott said. "Either you had a good season or a bad season. It doesn't matter what you did two years ago or five years ago.

"I think last year was a pretty good season. Some people didn't. But I just go by what I think."

Scott's ERA last was the seventh best in the NL, his strikeout total was second and his 16 victories ranked

"The numbers weren't as good as 1986, but they were better than 1985 or 1984 or any other year I've had,"

"I'd like to have my 1986 numbers every year but I wouldn't mind having a year like last year for the rest

Last season was Scott's third straight outstanding performance since his career reached a low ebb with a 5-11 record in 1984. Scott learned to throw the splitfingered fast ball that off season and has posted records of 18-8, 18-10 and 16-13 the last three seasons. Scott's success has been accompanied by complaints that he illegally scuffs the ball. His most ardent critic is San Francisco Manager Roger Craig.

Scott anticipates another season of being checked.

"It still doesn't bother me, they've never found anything wrong," Scott said. "They've been checking me for three years and I've had the three best years of my career so let them keep checking.'

Planning Annual Fund-Raiser

Hereford CattleWomen met Tuesday at the Hereford Country Club for a luncheon and business session. The women planned their annual fund-raiser, a casserole sale beginning at 9 a.m. March 26, in Sugarland Mall, to be held in conjunction with Ag

Information packets to be distributed

The American Cancer Society has a strong and longstanding commitment to educating the public about ways of preventing or reducing the risk of developing cancer. As in the past, volunteers with the Deaf Smith County Unit of the ACS will be distributing information packets to local residents during the annual Cancer Crusade set April 24-31.

In conjunction with the crusade, volunteers will be walking door-todoor from 2-5 p.m. Sunday, April 24,to give citizens the opportunity to contribute to the ACS. Also, a benefit spaghetti supper is planned from 5-7 p.m. Friday, April 22, in which proceeds will be donated to the ACS.

Because each year thousands of lives could be saved through cancer prevention, risk reduction and early detection practices, the Society's public education programs are designed to inform people about cancer, tell them what they can do to protect themselves and demonstrate related health habits and lifestyles.

The Society places its major educational focus in two areas: primary cancer prevention which includes smoking control and the relationship between diet, nutrition and cancer; and the importance and value of periodic, cancer-related checkups and specific cancer tests. Prompt action in the event that one.

of the cancer's seven warning signals occurs, is also encouraged.

Six cancer sites offer the greatest opportunity for the prevention or cure of cancer: colon and rectum, lung, breast, uterus, oral cavity and skin. These sites account for the majority of cancer cases and about half of all cancer deaths. The Society's public education planning strategy places emphasis on these six sites where prevention, risk reduction and early detection practices realize the greatest return in terms of lives sav-

In 1986-87, American Cancer Society Public Education Programs, carried out at local levels, reached a total of 50 million people.

An applicant for a Social Security number must provide evidence of his or her date of birth, identity, and United States citizenship or lawful admission status, Jim Talbot, Social Security manager in Amarillo, Tx. said recently.

People should remember that they will need to show a Social Security number for any dependent age 5 or older they plan to claim on their 1987 Federal income tax return.

Anyone 18 or older who has never had a Social Security number must apply for one in person, Jim Said. A citizen of another country must also apply in person. A parent or legal guardian who applies for a Social Security number for a child must provide evidence of his or her identity in addition to evidence of the child's age, identity, and citizenship. An individual who was born in the United States may submit any one of a variety of documents as evidence of age and citizenship, Jim notes. These include, public birth certificates and religious or hospital records of birth. Another document

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) - Comedian George Burns may be 92, but it's not slowing him down - he's doing stand-up routines at casinos, has just finished a movie and is working on a new book.

"There isn't anything I can't do now that I couldn't do when I was 18 - which shows you how pathetic I was at 18," he said during a recent one-hour performance at Cesars Palace on the Strip.

Burns is a regular at the Palace and other Caesars properties in Lake Tahoe, Nev., and Atlantic City, N.J. His new movie, "18 Again," opens April 9.

Burns' newest book is about the one true love of his life, Gracie Allen, his stage partner and wife of 38 years until her death in 1964.

"I've written six books. That's pretty good for a guy who only read two," he told the audience at Caesars.

Opportunities abound for Miss Hereford

By GAYE B. REILY Staff Writer

Relinquishing her title as Miss Hereford will not be a sad event for Delight Thames; rather, it will be a thrilling occasion.

meone else share the wonderful experience of being Miss Hereford," said the bubbly titleholder. "It will be a joy to crown my successor."

Memories of her reign are very much on Thames' mind right now as down the runway at the 1988 Miss Hereford Scholarship Pageant set for April 30 in the Hereford High School Auditorium. She will perform a ballet number during the evening and will end the pageant with the crowning of the new winner.

"I've enjoyed being the 1987 Miss Hereford, but I realized that a big responsibility comes with the title,' said the petite blue-eyed redhead. "The titleholder should provide a positive role model for area girls as well as representing Hereford with pride and dignity." According to pageant steering committee chairman Donna West, Thames has been successful in this goal.

"Delight has been one of the most involved Miss Herefords in recent history because of the direction the steering committee took by involving her in more events," said West. "The committee realized that the talents of previous Miss Herefords had not been utilized to the fullest extent, so we implemented efforts in getting the titleholder more involved with community activities."

As a result, Thames appeared during the Christmas Carousel, a Chamber of Commerce Fun Breakfast, and participated in the Town 'N' Country Jubilee Parade. She engaged in advertising efforts for The Pants Cage and Korner Kloset as well as appearing on area television commercials for Whiteface Ford-Lincoln-Mercury. Her entry in the Miss Wheatheart Pageant in Perryton saw her selected third runner-up in a contest where the winner will compete in the upcoming Miss Texas pageant.

"Delight represented Hereford well at the Miss Wheatheart Pageant," noted West. "I have worked with her through the pageants and I have found her to be a very charming, kind, gracious person of whom all of Hereford can be proud."

Such praise is not given lightly as Thames has been active throughout her 20 years. Born in Snyder in 1967, she, her parents, John and Sheila Thames, and her sister, Laura, moved to Hereford while she was still an infant. The granddaughter of Delight Williams and the late H.C. Williams, and Marie Thames and the late R.W. Thames, she graduated from Hereford High School in 1986 after being active as a twirler, band member, National Honor Society inductee, and recipient of the Outstanding Senior Award. It was during her senior year that she began to enter

Hereford Scholarship Pageant, Saturday, April 30, must signup

The pageant, sponsored by the C of C Women's Division, will be divided into three divisions: interview (to be conducted the morning of the pageant), talent, and evening gown. Pageant activities include an entire week of rehearsals beginning April 25.

Each contestant will have the opportunity to be awarded

"Down Under" will be the theme of the annual event in honor of the Australian Bicentennial and the Hereford Chamber named first runner-up in both contests," said Thames. She then went on to win the 1987 Miss Hereford Pageant and recalls such experiences fondly.

"Participating in the Miss Hereford Scholarship Pageant has enabled me to make friends and be more accepting of others," said the 5'3" collegian who wears a size three dress. "I believe the pageant is a worthwhile event in which the contestant gets out of it as much as she puts into it." Thames was even selected Miss Congeniality by the other contestants during last year's pageant, then faced stiff competition on her way to the title.

"There was an evening gown competition, talent phase, and fiveminute interview with the judges," Thames remembered. "They asked controversial questions on world events." Sponsored by the Lemon Tree, her winnings included a choice among three scholarship alternatives, a $600 wardrobe from Gastons, Betty's Shoes, Little's, EtCetera, Pants Cage, J.C. Penneys, The Vogue, and Anthony's, perfume from Scents by Ben and Debbie Lewis' Oil of Mink Skincare; a tanning and makeover session by A Touch of Class; an engraved gold picture frame courtesy of the Women's Division; and a session with Diane Dick Modeling Agency in Amarillo.

"We strive to make the Miss Hereford Scholarship Pageant a well-rounded event that depends on scholarship and talent as well as beauty," said West. "We don't want it to be merely a display of pretty faces; we want to give valuable awards that any girl would be proud

When asked what advice she would give a pageant contestant, Thames said, "Enter for the fun and experience of it-don't let winning be your sole purpose. Be yourself; there can be only one winner chosen but in God's eyes everyone is a winner." Such an attitude is reflected in Thames' assessment of the pageant: "The only area I would change would be the judges' five-minute interview. I think it should be longer and that they should spend more time with contestants in an effort to see their inner beauty."

It is apparent to a listener that the Miss Hereford title is not the most important thing in her life. Thames is attending West Texas State University as an elementary education major, classified as a junior. She entered the Lions Club Miss enjoys fishing, dancing, twirling, snow skiing, and cooking and admits that she loves to perform before an audience. Thames has been working part-time since last fall at the Barbara Tucek School of Dance in Canyon where she teaches dance techniques to teenagers. She eventually hopes to marry, raise a family, and teach elementary school. Her deep love of children and selfless desire to help others is best illustrated in her efforts to help a youngster. A mission trip to Haiti, sponsored by the Church of the Nazarene, saw Thames and 30 other teens visit the island three summers ago. They stayed a week, working with the local interdenominational pastor, and built a church out of cement blocks, erected a windmill and laid a cement floor while interacting with the villagers. "Some of them helped us, and we played with the children during our break time." It was then that Thames's heart went out to Wilky, a four-year-old boy who had a physical deformity.

"He had a herniated naval evident in his nakedness. Other children made fun of him, so he seldom spoke, he was so shy." Yet Thames had him talking and even smiling by the end of the week. Thames and the youth group returned to the States and raised money for an operation removing Wilky's herniated navel. Due to political unrest, Thames skipped a summer before returning to Haiti last summer. "My family and seven others returned and found a happy Wilky in school," Thames said gleefully. "We also helped put a roof on the church and visited the pastor, who told us of the village's continuing progress. I hope to go back to Haiti someday, but the political climate is once again unsettled."

Hereford residents are proud of Thames' past accomplishments and will continue to monitor her predicted success in future

DEAR HELOISE:

I find this idea useful, and if it helps someone else I'd be very happy.

When I make out checks for a mail order, I write down the address of the company when I record the check in the check register. This way if for any reason I need to contact the company, the address is handy. — Marion Adams, Shelton, Conn.

NYLON NET

Dear Heloise: Here's another use for that wonderful nylon net. I save my bars of soap that get smaller than I like and place two or three in a square of net, fold it and stitch the sides. The net helps clean dirty hands better. -Nancy Doll Newton, Little Rock, Ark. COLOR-CODED

Dear Heloise: My mother has six children, and sometimes it is hard for her to keep track of us when we go places. She bought six T-shirts of the same color in our sizes. Whenever we go to a crowded place, we wear these shirts, and so far, Mom has not lost a kid. Alice Yeagley, Albany, Ohio

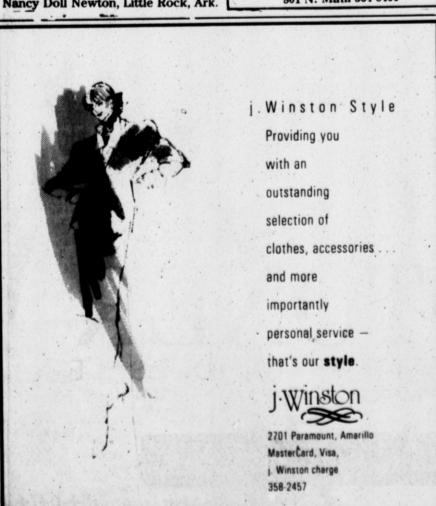

MICROWAVE ASPARAGUS Dear Heloise: When I only have a few spears of asparagus, I wash and trim them and place them upright in an eight-ounce microwave-safe glass filled halfway with water. I cover the

A CORNEAL DEFECT

Astigmatism is a defect of the cornea that does not permit light rays passing through it to meet in a single focal point. When this happens, the images we see tend to blur. Headaches, squinting and fatigue may also

Most people have at least a small degree of astigmatism because few corneas are as perfectly round (spherical) as nature intended them to be. The more imperfect the cornea sphere, the more one sees blurred images.

Astigmatism may exist as an eye defect by itself. Generally, astigmatism coexists with nearsightedness or farsightedness. A proper prescription that corrects astigmatism is incorporated into the correction for any other eye condition you may have, and enables you to see clearly. Sometimes it takes a short period of time to adjust to the correction for astigmatism.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am writing about the young woman who is "Struggling in California." She was much maligned by her motherin-law, and her husband refused to intervene. "Don't put me in the mid-

DEAR VERMONT: "Struggling" certainly hit a hot button. I was inundated with letters and they contained a lot of good advice. Read on.

From Columbus, Ga.: I lived with my mother-in-law when we were first married, and then she lived with us for 34 years, until she died. She had red hair and the disposition that usually goes with it. But I got along with this old battle-ax beautifully. My secret: I never responded to anything she said, no matter how hateful. She'd try her darndest to get a rise out of me, but no way would I let her win by getting into a fight. Finally, she'd blow herself out like a summer storm, then go out and buy me a present. "Struggling" should try this with her mother-in-law. I'll bet it works.

From Louisville: About that woman whose mother-in-law was a miserable witch: I had one of those, too, and I was glad you didn't tell the wife to insist that her husband tell "Mom" off. He would if he could, but he can't. The poor fellow is "motherhung." I know because I am married to the same kind. These men would need years of therapy and darned, few would get it.

From Tacoma, Wash.: My motherin-law has the meanest mouth in the Western world. Thank God she lives in another state. (We moved). When I sent her pictures of our children she called me up and said, "The youngest isn't very good-looking. She looks just like you." I did not respond. There was a long silence. She then asked, "What did you say?" I replied. "Nothing." She got the

EASY, INEXPENSIVE FIX-UPS

So your transfer has come through and you need to sell yur home right away. Or maybe you want your home to look good for your relatives' visit or just for your own self-satisfaction.

Remodeling is out of the question, and you don't have a lot of money to spend on any home improvements. What can you do? Here are some suggestions for the least-expensive and most cost-effective home fix-

Start with old-fashioned "elbowgrease." It's free. A sparkling clean house looks fresh. Wash everything you can-washable interior walls and woodwork, windows and the house siding. If siding is mildewed, use a solution containing bleach to remove Cleaning out closets, the garage and extra furniture from rooms will create a feeling of spaciousness. Hold a garage sale for things you no longer need. You can invest the profits in some inexpensive fix-ups.

Light also makes a home seem more spacious. A few dollars invested in light bulbs and an extra lamp can help. Clean all the light fixtures and have working light bulbs in each. Consider increasing the wattage for more light in dark areas. Also, leave the draperies open when possible to let in natural light. For a small investment you can give bathrooms an updated look. Remove the clutter from all counters to create space. Consider buying new outlet cover plates, towel racks and other fixtures in brass or wood for the bathroom. New towels, shower curtains and rugs in a contemporary color that coordinates will also add you can make. The average 15 by 15 foot room can be covered with two gallons of a neutral colored latex flat paint for less than $20. And that paint will cover dirt, fingerprints, faded or dingy-looking colors.

Painting the entire home exterior may take more money than you have to spend. But, painting just the trim will cost relatively little and can make a real difference in appearance. If you can match paint, or painted areas are separated by brick, you may be able to paint just those areas that look faded or worn.

When you have very few dollars to spruce up the outside of the house, concentrate on the entry way. If the door is weatherworn, paint it and add a wreath or door decoration. Painting the door the same color as the house will make the house look

Add some accent plants or colorful flowers in pots or beds around the entryway. And, of course, trim the shrubbery and make sure the yard is well-kept.

Fixing your home up-to sell or just to enjoy-doesn't require a lot of money, but it will take some time, imagination and effort.

Our best friends don't always give us the best treatment. Typically, they invite us into their homes, read us like a book, take what they need from us, and put us aside to use again at their convenience.

It's a tough existence, but we don't mind. In fact, we like it. The news, editorials, and advertising coupons clipped from our pages provide our readers with knowledge, enlightenment, even an occasional 30¢ off on breakfast cereal. We're kind of flattered that people enjoy hanging onto bits and pieces of us - sometimes for years. That's something no other local advertising medium can offer. So, although our friends keep cutting us to pieces, we'll keep showing up at their homes. Our only request: sharp scissors and a steady hand.

Wheat export subsidy rises

WASHINGTON (AP) — Subsidized sales are expected to account for more than 60 percent of all U.S. wheat exports this year, according to projections by the Agriculture Department.

Total wheat exports are forecast at a six-year high of 1.55 billion bushels in the marketing year that runs through May 31, up 54 percent from 1986-87.

Sales of subsidized wheat under the Export Enhancement Program, or EEP, have climbed rapidly this year, particularly since last October, says the department's Economic Research Service.

Big sales have been made to the Soviet Union and China, the two largest wheat importers, as well as to Poland, Algeria, Egypt, Morocco and Iraq, the agency said in a new outlook report.

The program was started three years ago in selected overseas markets to counter subsidized exports by U.S. competiors, notably the European Economic Community. Under EEP, exporters get free government-owned surplus commodities as bonuses, or subsidies, so they can sell wheat - or other eligible products — to designated foreign countries.

Since June 1, 1985, according to the report, the United States has announced "initiatives" or offers to sell wheat to 30 countries for a total of 43.1 million metric tons. Through Feb. 11, the actual sales totaled 31.4 million tons, most of it since last fall.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 36.7 bushels of wheat. The projected export total this marketing year of 1.55 billion bushels would be about 42 million tons, of which more than 25 million tons is expected to be shipped under EEP.

The brisk sales have boosted U.S. wheat export prices, the report said. The average price at Gulf ports loaded aboard ship for hard red winter wheat of ordinary protein rose to about $130 per ton in January from $116 in November and $110 in January 1987.

Rising prices also meant that the EEP subsidies increased. Those averaged about $34 per ton during the 1986-87 marketing year but rose in November and December before easing off in January, the report said. For example, the subsidy for the Soviet Union rose to more than $40 per ton but later dropped to less than $30.

"The total value of wheat bonuses awarded from the first wheat offer through January 1988 is approximately $1.1 billion," the report said. "Nearly 40 percent of the total has been awarded since Oct. 1, 1987."

Meanwhile, the EEP subsidies and the rise in U.S. wheat exports has had an impact on world trade, the report showed.

In the current 1987-88 marketing year, the United States produced about 11 percent of the world output of wheat, the same as in 1986-87.

But the boom in exports - to 1.55 billion bushels from 1 billion bushels the previous year - is giving the United States an estimated 41 percent of the world's wheat exports, compared with only 30 percent in 1986-87.

According to agency records, that puts the U.S. export share at its highest level since 1982-83 when it was 42 percent.

The value of Latin America's foreign trade, which reached a high of $200 billion in 1981, dropped to less than $150 billion in 1986, as imports continued to be held in check to compensate for smaller export earnings and high external debt payments, according to the Inter-American Development Bank. Latin American imports have remained roughly the same over the past three years, at about 40 percent below the 1981 level.

Potato prices squeezed

WASHINGTON (AP) - A larger 1987 harvest and a bigger inventory have put pressure on potato prices this season, says the Agriculture

Total output last year rebounded almost 7 percent to an estimated 385.7 million hundredweight, although still 3 percent shy of the 1985 record, the department's Economic Research Service said. Stocks of fresh potatoes on Jan. 1 were up 8 percent from a year

Idaho russets sold for $13.50 to $14 per hundredweight at the end of January, compared with $17.50 to $19 the year before. Maine round whites, at $5.80 to $6 per hundredweight, were down from $8.10 to $8.50 a year earlier, the agency reported.

Overall, the U.S. average grower price of potatoes in January was $3.60 per hundredweight, down 25 percent from a year earlier.

Trade-and-aid is ready to go

WASHINGTON (AP) - The government's new trade-and-aid program to help American farmers by sending emissaries to foreign countries is almost ready for launching. Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng announced Monday that the first trip will be this spring to Indonesia and the Philippines. The exact dates have to be negotiated with the countries.

The mission will include representatives from the departments of Agriculture and State, and the U.S. Agency for International Development. Three to six representatives of the private sector also will be selected for the trips.

WHITEFACE AVIATION CORP.

Trees may be sprouting up all over. The nation's conservation program is being expanded to encourage planting of more trees on erodible cropland and to reduce erosion into bodies of water. The new program is twofold in that it was designed to add additional southeastern cropland in the reserve and also to improve available water quality. To prevent runoff of soil into bodies of water, farmers are now able to enroll cropland next to water even if the land is not classified as highly erodible. Farmers will be paid to plant a permanent cover, measuring from 66 to 99 feet wide, on land next to water. Land that qualifies as having twice rather than three times normal soil loss qualifies for enrollment of tree planting. If trees are planted, only one-third of a field must be classified as erodible. Officials believe these new programs will make it cost effecient for producers to bring more acres into the conservation reserve program.

"During my recent trip to Asia, I discussed possible missions with the leaders and key agricultural officials of both countries," Lyng said. "We agreed that these missions would not only address the food needs of these countries, but would help develop customers for U.S. agricultural exports as well." The trips are required by the Agricultural Aid and Trade Missions Act, passed by Congress late last year. It specified that 16 missions be conducted in 1988, with eight completed by June.

By offering specially designed packages of U.S. trade and food assistance, the goal of the program is to help the designated countries develop and to become larger markets for American farmers.

"Private sector involvement will ensure more effective identification of trade and investment opportunities for U.S. exporters," Lyng said. "The recipient countries will benefit from the technology and managerial expertise that can best be transferred by the private

Lyng added: "This exchange helps foster development in the recipient countries, which in turn expands the long-term demand for U.S. agricultural exports."

Orville L. Freeman, a former secretary of agriculture and now head of the Agriculture Council of America, is an enthusiastic supporter of the trade-and-aid law, calling it "the most promising agricultural legislation since the passage of Public Law 480 in 1954," the Food for Peace program.

"The bottom line is to use all existing resources to lay the groundwork for expanded business with developing countries which have the potential for explosive market growth," Freeman said recently.

As described by USDA's Foreign Agricultural Service, each mission

-Meet with appropriate foreign and U.S. officials in each country to help in planning the extent to which U.S. trade and aid can be used to meet the food and economic needs in that country.

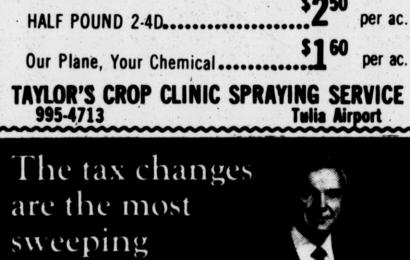

-Provide technical help and information on U.S. agricultural commodities and the trade and aid pro-

-Help obtain firm commitments for food aid programs and commodi-

Within 60 days after completion of a mission, the representatives must report to the president and the Congress on their findings and recommendations," the agency said.

Further, beginning in December 1989, the USDA and AID must submit quarterly reports to Congress about the progress made on each mission's recommendations.

Tax reform rules change deduction The Tax Reform Act of 1986 made some changes in how farmers and ranchers deduct expenses for installing conservation measures.

Producers who want to claim a deduction for the cost of a conservation practice on their 1987 income tax returns need to make certain that the practice is listed in the county plan or that they have a site specific plan. They will also need to complete Internal Revenue Service form 8645 "Soil and Water Conservation Plan Certification" to file with their

Bob Perry, district conservationist for the USDA Soil Conservation Service at Hereford, said management practices such as fencing, brush management, range seeding, and field windbreaks are listed in the county plan. For such practices, a dated site specific plan is not

"However, practices that require technical design and layout need to be in a site specific plan," Perry said. "These include terraces, waterways, and grade stabilization dams."

Perry said he has copies of the county plan as well as a few forms 8645. Producers who use the form certify that soil and water conservation expenses paid or incurred after December 31, 1986, were made according to a plan approved by SCS.

"If anyone needs a site specific plan, we will be glad to try to schedule a date to work out one," Perry said. "However, we will not be permitted to back-date a plan just to help someone claim a deduction."

The deductible amount is limited to 25 percent of the gross income from the agricultural activity during the tax year.

For more information, producers should talk to their tax consultant.

Reynolds says hooray for Hollywood

Reynolds was recalling when he first arrived in Hollywood almost 30 years

"I went to see a friend of a friend of a friend who was supposed to be in the movie business. It turned out he was in the insurance business and he wrote policies for a studio. He lived in the Valley, and I rented a car to follow him.

"Now, I'm from Florida. When I went through Laurel Canyon, I never seen anything like that. I had the top down and was looking everywhere. I thought, 'This is about as close to heaven as I'll ever get. This is where I'll live."

Reynolds was in a rare reflective mood during a visit to help publicize the new Tri-Star movie "Switching Channels." He came here from his Jupiter, Fla., base to talk about the movie, which is "The Front Page" switched to television. But he also

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Burt thought I was in Switzerland. I had seemed to enjoy reminiscing about his early Hollywood days.

"When I went under contract to Universal," he recalled, "it was like a campus. You could walk across the lot and see all these people who were much prettier than you. Gorge ous guys - they all had names like Race Gentry."

All contract players attended classes to learn drama, dance, singing, horseback riding and fencing. Reynolds recalled a boxing class in which he was pitted against a smaller actor and knocked him down: "It was Audie Murphy, and he went to get a gun. As it turned out, we became good friends. But I learned never to knock down a Congressional Medal of Honor winner."

The first big break for Reynolds, who was once married to actress and comedian Judy Carne, came when Universal cast him in "Riverboat," the first TV series in color. Co-

Hollywood for an interview with director John Boorman about a role in "Deliverance."

Boorman had seen him as a talkshow host. "I saw you in command of four people; that's what you have to do in this movie," Reynolds recalled Boorman as saying.

Twenty-odd movies later, Burt Reynolds, 52, remains as ambitious as when he was a contract player at Universal.

"I was a late comer to the film," Reynolds said of "Switching Channels." "I had the good fortune to live across the street from the producer, Martin Ransohoff. When Michael Caine got stuck in the mouth of 'Jaws IV' and wasn't available, Ransohoff was running around looking for a replacement. Richard Dreyfuss wasn't available. A lot of guys weren't available.

"I was across the street eating an apple. Ransohoff came over and said, 'Read this script.' Twenty-four hours later I was in the lap of Kathleen Turner," he said.
