National Cowgirl HOF Building Dedicated

A crowd of some 200 persons witnessed the formal dedication of the former Pitman residence as the national Cowgirl Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center during ceremonies Saturday afternoon. HOF President Margaret Formby "christened" the building recently donated to the hall by the Marsh Pitman family, formerly of Hereford. Texas Tech University President Dr. Lauro Cavazos, who was born on the historic King Ranch, delivered the dedicatory address at the ceremony, which also featured the Hereford Chamber Singers. The HHS band, and a color guard made up of members of the HHS Rodeo Team and the Hereford Rider's Club. Located at 515 Ave. B, the HOF building and the surrounding 16-acre grounds are valued at over $1 million. The site was donated by Pitman, who is now a resident of Chicago, Ill. The Hall of Fame honors cowgirls of rodeo fame, while the Western Heritage Center honors those women of pioneer spirit who contributed to the taming of the West and have made significant contributions since.

Evidence of future plans for the HOF and the surrounding grounds are on display in the Hall itself, with full-color illustrations describing different attractions the board plans to put on the grounds.

An open house followed the dedication ceremony, and the Annual Rhinestone Roundup was held Saturday evening. A silent auction was included as part of the evening's entertainment.

Six Western Heritage Center inductees were recognized Saturday, including Margaret Coe of Cody, Wyo., Eve Ball of Ruidosa, N.M., Louise Massey of Roswell, N.M., and three women honored posthumously, including Sallie Reynolds Matthews, Lilla Day Monroe, and Henrietta Chamberlain King, of the famed King Ranch.

Additional inductees into the Cowgirl Hall of Fame will be honored during the Annual Hereford Town & Country Jubilee during August.

Board president Garth Thomas, in remarks to the crowd before introducing Dr. Cavazos, said "This is just the beginning. We never plan to have it (the Hall) complete."

Dr. Cavazos, son of a King Ranch employee, touched on the contributions made by each of the six honorees during his address, adding that "history, and the pioneer spirit are still alive and well in Hereford, Texas."

City Told Special Events Center 'Is Needed'

Before its regular meeting Monday night, the Hereford City Commission met with the Texas Tech University committee researching the feasibility of a special events center and were told that Hereford does have a need for such a complex. The researchers asked the commission to throw out ideas and ask questions about the study before the report is completed within the next several weeks. The committee has already met with the school district and with the county to get their ideas.

According to a public survey conducted by the committee, an indoor swimming pool had top priority as a community need. The committee told the commissioners that Hereford had a "pretty high rating" also for a sports center, banquet and meeting hall.

The committee hinted that a campus type complex would best fit the needs of the area. Suggestion for the type of center and location will be disclosed in the formal report.

The commission bought trucks during its regular meeting at 7:30.

Hereford Ford-Lincoln won a bid for five pickups at $7,296.03 each. The total bid was $36,480.15. Stagner-Orsborn bid $37,115.00 for the five and $37,222.95 was bid by Stevens Chevrolet.

Stevens won the bids on purchase of one five-speed and one four-speed. The four-speed truck for the trash department will be bought for $14,670.49 and the five-speed for the street department for $15,852.21.

Other bids for the five-speed were $16,443.00 from Hereford Ford-Lincoln and $15,869.82 from Stagner-Orsborn. Bids on the four-speed were $14,957.37 from Hereford Ford-Lincoln and $14,774.25 from Stagner-Orsborn.

Bids for aerial application of insecticides were authorized. City manager Dudley Bayne told the commission that he had sent a letter to the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation requesting installation of flashing school zone lights for U.S. 385 and Moreman and at West Park and Knight Street. Sgt. Ted Langgood had written a letter in behalf of the police department and concerned citizens. All commissioners were present for the meeting.

Two weeks after a devastating tornado ripped across Paris, the wound was still very evident. It left eight dead and destroyed more than 100 homes, but the people are building back. Many of the homes were frame structures, located in a predominantly black populated area of the city.

We were in Paris Friday and Saturday to attend a North and East Texas Press Association meeting and saw some of destruction left by the tornado, which hit Paris on April 2.

One man, whose house was a block away from the tornado's path, was quoted in the Paris News' extra edition: "It's a wonder there weren't a thousand people killed. We could hear the sirens and I knew what they meant, but I think most people around here were confused and thought they were just ambulances."

The city's emergency coordinator thought the recovery and rescue operations following the storm "fell into place a lot better than I expected. We have never had this type situation before. We didn't know how people would react."

Paris got help from other cities almost immediately. Red Cross units arrived hours after the tornado from Tyler and Dallas and set up shop in school cafeterias. Within two hours, Dallas sent a full paramedic team, and ambulances and fire trucks were dispatched from nearby towns.

Most streets were open this past weekend, and cleanup crews were still busy hauling away the debris. Paris will recover, but the scar will be there for a long time.

Field In Question

ASCS Director John Fuston (kneeling) inspects a crop of wheat on a 52.1-acre tract near Bootleg Corner as other interested officials look on. The field, farmed by Eldred Brown, is a matter of controversy after the Federal Crop Insurance Corp. was appraised at having good prospects for production. Brown contends that the crop is worthless, and wants FCIC assessment procedures amended. (Brand Photo by Bob Nigh).

Farmers Show Displeasure With Crop Insurance Plan

By BOB NIGH
MANAGING EDITOR

A group of area farmers, obviously dissatisfied with the appraisal process being used by the Federal Crop Insurance Corp., met with FCIC officials on a burned-out wheat field near Bootleg Corner Monday afternoon to voice their displeasure.

The meeting, called by

Eldred Brown, who had 52.1 acres of wheat on the half-section located about one mile south of Bootleg Corner, concerned the appraisal of the prospects of the crop, which was obviously suffering from drought-like conditions.

Jakie Harris of Plainview, the FCIC appraiser, had determined last Thursday that the crop would produce 14.2 bushels of wheat per acre. But, the estimate had shrunk to 8.4 bushels Monday, mainly due to the imposition of a "drought factor" by FCIC Regional Director Ted Crouch of Austin.

Crouch, who directs FCIC operations in Texas, Oklahoma, and New Mexico, attended the meeting, which also drew Bob Davis, representing U.S. Rep. Jack Hightower.

The main focus of the meeting was the creditability of the FCIC program, which was established mainly to take the place of the recently-killed federal disaster program.

Brown, who said that the crop was virtually worthless, wants policy changes within FCIC so that the $4.85 per acre premium on wheat will pay its way. "We need to have some changes made," Brown told the crowd of about 30 people who attended the meeting. "The program is not workable as it stands now."

Crouch offered to return to

Pair Arrested For Rustling

One Hereford man posted a $5,000 bond and another is still being held on a $50,000 bond after the pair were arrested Sunday morning and charged with cattle rustling.

Isidro Reyes, 48, and Juan Rivera, 23, were arraigned before Justice of the Peace O.K. Neal, and charged with theft of livestock. They were arrested Sunday near Deaf Smith County Feedyard with seven head of cattle in their possession.

Later, at Rivera's residence, officers found 12 cattle that allegedly were taken from the feedlot over the past six months, and another six animals that allegedly belonged to an area cattleman.

Deaf Smith County Deputy Sheriff Dean Butcher and Texas and Southwest Cattle Raisers Association inspectors Kenneth Chambers and Kelly Rushing made the arrests after following up on a tip the inspectors received that someone might try to rustle some cattle out of the feedlot Saturday night.

"The inspectors knew something was going on at Deaf Smith Feedyard for the past six or seven months," Butcher said. "And, they decided to stake out the lot Saturday when they got the tip."

According to Butcher a pickup truck pulling a livestock trailer parked near the feedlot at 9:15 p.m. Saturday. Over the next three hours, officers said, the rustlers found the cattle they wanted, cut ear tags off them, and loaded them into the trailer.

The men then tried to drive away, but a flat tire hampered their escape, and the arrests were made.

In the trailer were four steers and three heifers, each

U.S. Moves To Bar Most Travel To Cuba

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, citing Cuban sponsorship of "armed violence against our friends and allies," is moving to bar most business and tourist travel to the Caribbean island nation.

"Cuba will not be allowed to earn hard currency from business and tourist travel at a time when they are sponsoring armed violence against our friends and allies," John Walker, assistant treasury secretary for enforcement and operations, said Monday.

Instead of seeking directly to ban travel to Cuba, the administration aims to accomplish the same goal by banning financial transactions necessary for most business or tourist travel.

Such transactions include credit card purchases, cash payments for transportation, and living expenses while in Cuba.

Limiting or banning such transactions is authorized by the Trading With the Enemy Act, which first was applied to trade with Cuba at the time of the Cuban missile crisis in 1962, Treasury officials said.

Penalties for violations could range up to 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine, Walker said.

Foundation Awards $12 Million To Improve Health Of Young People

NEW YORK (AP) — Death rates among teenagers and young adults are climbing, and a New Jersey foundation has donated $12 million to try and stop that trend.

The Princeton-based Robert Wood Foundation announced Monday that it had awarded the money to 20 institutions in areas with a high incidence of venereal disease, drug abuse, homicides, suicides and mental illness.

Federal government statistics show that there are 50,000 deaths a year among Americans 15 to 24 years old, foundation officials said. The death rate for that group has climbed 9 percent since 1960, making it the only age group to show an increase in death rates during that period, they said.

Foundation President Dr. David Rogers said the funds will be used to establish clinics in high schools and other community centers to battle such health problems.

Most clinics intended to help young people deal only with a single problem, Rogers said, such as venereal disease or drug abuse.

"Many people face multiple problems, but few are able to successfully maneuver through this scattered system," he said in a prepared statement released Monday. "The result is that they fail to seek care until conditions are acute or lead to behaviour resulting in serious injury or death."

Weather

House Douse

Two downstairs rooms and the attic of a house at 121 Avenue F were gutted Monday afternoon by a fire believed to have started from a cigarette left burning on a sofa. Hereford firemen were called to the vacant house at 2:59 p.m. They were called again to the scene at 7:30 p.m. when someone spotted the sofa, which was in the yard, smoldering. Firemen also tended a grass fire on West U.S. 60 at 4:30 p.m. (Brand Photo by Jeri Curtis)

What Are Airline Stewardesses Like -- Really

What are airline stewardesses like—really?

For one thing they don't like to be called "stewardesses," anymore. They prefer "flight attendants."

The only other common denominator is their uncommonness. They are naughty and nice, more efficient and less, and range pretty to pretty unpretty.

But all stewardesses—flight attendants—are going to be characterized in an upcoming television program in a manner which most will resent.

Hollywood writer Ben Stein is neither cruel nor cynical, but he recognizes that some of the worst fact makes the best fiction.

Two years ago, on a flight between Los Angeles and New York he listened attentively to a beautiful "stew" and her tale of woe about how stewardesses come from poor families, turn to flying to meet rich men and learn crafty ways to pick them up. How the rich men and the stewardesses go off to a hotel, have a torrid evening, after which she gets to go to Tiffanys or Nieman-Marcus and pick out whatever she wants.

Her story of girls, confused and lonely, often on drugs, always tired—sometimes getting mixed up with mean men, most always left alone at an airport motel while the Jack goes back to his wife in Scarsdale—her story inspired Ben to write a powerful TV special, perhaps a series, about the crazy way these women live.

But when he'd drafted the story, a trusted TV executive rejected it—adamantly. "The very idea, a story about stewardesses who are man crazy, jewelry crazy, drugged."

He knew a stewardess who lived right next door who was none of those things.

The television executive said he was going to air, instead, a story by a woman writer about a crashed airliner and the selfless bravery of the flight crew.

But that storyline proved limp, vapid, and was never used.

Now Ben hears that the same studio executive is preparing to air his original story—

But with emphasis on the women's lib angle—a lot about how the "stews" are oppressed by the men in their lives.

In Hollywood, the more they try to film real life the more they distort it.

If generalities are ever fair, a larger than heretofore number of American girls are going from puberty to adultery, underdeveloped only intellectually.

And face it, airlines are no longer allowed employment prerogatives which used to skim the cream.

Today's cabin crews are likely to be no better than the rest of us and that is a shame.

FCIC

the field May 1 and re-evaluate the crop. "We have to deal with what's out here on the day we make our assessment," Crouch said. "We can go with what the conditions are that day."

The farmers were uniform in their opinion, however, that even a 2-inch rain today would not save the crop. Deaf Smith County Pct. 3 Commissioner Bruce Coleman, whose home is adjacent to the field in question, said "if we got a two-inch rain here today, he (Brown) would be extremely lucky to get two bushels per acre."

Harris offered another solution, asking Brown to "leave a representative area of the wheat crop," nursing it through to harvest. "We can apply the potential of the area harvested to the remainder of the field," Harris said.

Again, Brown and the rest of the concerned farmers virtually laughed that proposal off, insisting that the crop would produce nothing.

Dr. Kenneth Porter of the TAES experimental station at Bushland, agreed that the crop didn't have much of a chance. "It's essentially a disaster already," he said.

As to the criteria of assessment used by the FCIC adjuster, Crouch said that the techniques were developed when the now obsolete federal disaster program was begun in 1974.

Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) manager John Fuston, whose office handled the old disaster program, was also at the meeting. He was asked to make an assessment of the crop potential.

While declining to place a figure on the crop Fuston essentially agreed that the crop was a failure. "Our procedure talks about involving judgment," he said. "I would have a hard time making an assessment on this crop. It looks like it won't get tall enough to get into the combine."

Fuston asked Harris if the FCIC evaluation process included judgment. Harris responded that the FCIC procedure "says nothing about judgment. I have no authority to deviate from established methods."

weighing about 700 pounds. Butcher said both Reyes and Rivera were employed by the feedyard.

"The plan apparently was to take young heifers and steers and fatten them to 900-1,000 pounds, and then sell them back to the slaughterhouses," Butcher said.

Rivera was released from custody after posting his bond, while Reyes is still being held in the county jail in lieu of his $50,000 bond.

tact the chamber, Carr announced. He also urged members to bring newcomers to the breakfast to introduce them to the community.

Doug Manning and Lynton Allred will again be co-emcees for the event and will have a fast-moving and lively program planned for the breakfast function.

Brown asked Davis if it is possible for the farmers to get a hearing before the Congressional Agriculture Committee to discuss what they feel are the shortcomings of the FCIC program.

Davis said that he would check into the possibility.

Crouch said he was scheduled to attend a meeting of FCIC heads in Kansas City next week, and that he would make a full report of the problem there.

"This affects everyone, not just the farmer," Brown said.

Vandals' Damage Reach $2,000

Damage estimates from vandalism to a house at 301 Whitaker have been set at $2,000, according to Hereford police.

The report was filed by Hamby Real Estate. The damage included broken windows, heavy damage to sheet rock walls, wiring torn out and writing painted on the walls.

Police are also investigating the theft of about 100 to 125 gallons of diesel fuel from trucks at Arrowhead Mills. The theft occurred sometime Saturday or Sunday.

Speakers valued at about $100 were reported stolen from a vehicle.

During the weekend three persons were arrested for public intoxication and one arrested for driving while intoxicated faces pending assault charges. The suspect allegedly ran into a car at a stop light, backed up and ran into it again.

Jesus Tena and Sarah Martinez were treated at Deaf Smith General Hospital for "The American farmer is getting to the point where he cannot subsidize everyone else. I think the farm people are realizing that this program just isn't working; that they're wasting their money. We've got to have some changes made."

Perhaps the mood of the meeting was set when one of the group asked the farmers if any of them were planning to buy the insurance for their 1983 crops.

None of the men raised their hands.

bruises and cuts they suffered from a wreck at the U.S. 385 underpass. Apparently Tena lost control of the car and it ran into the concrete divider.

Police checked a minor accident at Third and Lee. Both cars were extensively damaged, however no one was injured.

Police received a report of a bike theft, some doorknobs knocked off and several harassing phone calls.

Since Saturday police have issued 25 citations.

One Killed, Three Hurt In Rampage

CARPENTERSVILLE, Ill. (AP) — Steve Schwartz was supposed to be at the courthouse where his wife was filing divorce papers, but instead he walked into a restaurant that had employed his wife and shot the manager to death in view of 30 people, police said.

Schwartz, the father of two children, was found Monday outside the hamburger restaurant, critically wounded by a shotgun blast, and authorities said he told them he had shot himself by accident.

Authorities allege that before he went to the hamburger restaurant, Schwartz, a 26-year-old former firefighter, shot a dog to death and set his own house afire Monday. Two firefighters were injured trying to put out the blaze.

Kane County officials said they planned to seek indictments today against Schwartz, according to Joseph P. Donohoe, a police detective in this town of 25,000 people 45 miles northwest of Chicago.

At the time of the shooting, Schwartz's estranged wife, Cathy, "was in the Kane County Courthouse with her attorney, filing divorce papers," said Carpentersville Police Chief John Skillman. "Steve was supposed to be there."

Detective Sgt. Robert Emerick said Schwartz apparently disconnected the kitchen stove from the wall in the couple's Carpentersville home, opened the gas valve, soaked some clothes in a nearby room with lighter fluid and lit them before leaving for the restaurant managed by Raul Tio, 29.

Firefighters from Schwartz's former crew responding to an alarm opened the front door of the house, Skillman said, and the oxygen rushing in touched off an explosion. Two firefighters who received minor injuries were reported in good condition Monday night at Sherman Hospital in Elgin.

Skillman said Schwartz arrived at the restaurant several minutes after the fire was reported and blasted at Tio across the counter with a shotgun while Tio was standing in an open grill in view of more than 30 lunchtime customers and restaurant employees.

"It was wide open, everybody could see him," Skillman said.

Witnesses said Schwartz then stepped around the counter and shot Tio a second time before walking out of the restaurant.

"He went in there looking for Raul," the police chief said. "We're assuming he felt Tio had something to do with his divorce."

Coach Enjoys First Year In Hereford

By LINDA CAUDLE
Family News Editor
Keeping active and physically fit isn't hard for Sharma Smith, coach and physical education teacher at Hereford High School. "Each season I have at least one, and sometimes, two, after school workouts," notes Sharma.

Coaching girls volleyball, junior varsity basketball, and the sprinters in track, in addition to teaching three regular coed P.E. classes, keeps Sharma busy during the week, and then on weekends she drives the bus to track meets and games.

"We go to a meet almost every Saturday during track," says Sharma, "and go to games twice a week during volleyball, and once or twice a week in basketball."

Just two weeks ago the girls track team won the District 4-5A track title with 200 points. "We will go to Lubbock for the regional meet with 13 girls on Friday," says Sharma proudly.

"I love to run, although I don't actually get to run too much with talking and watching and the other coaching duties," comments Sharma.

"I was very lucky to have a good team in high school and we went to state. I guess I want these kids to have as much fun with it as I did."

A native of Paducah, Sharma moved to Hereford in August, after graduating from West Texas State University in May. She majored in physical education and minored in health. At WTSU, Sharma ran track for a year and a half, participated in intramurals, and was involved in Delta Xi Kappa, a girls P.E. fraternity which does charity work.

"I didn't know very many people when I first came to Hereford," says Sharma, "but had heard that the school system was very good."

Near the completion of her first year of teaching, Sharma feel that she has established a good rapport with the students, and adds that she is really enjoying her experience here.

"I get along great with the kids and love getting to know them as individuals--each person and each team is different," states Sharma.

After doing her student teaching at Austin Junior High School in Amarillo, and working with younger children one summer at the YWCA in Amarillo, Sharma notes that the high school students are a lot different and says that she prefers working with the older and more excellent athlete.

"Living in Hereford is a change too," says Sharma. "It seems like a big place to me, after growing up in a town of 2,000." While in high school at Paducah, Sharma participate in all types of sports, including basketball, track, and softball, and was head cheerleader.

She has an older sister, who goes to school at WTSU, and a younger sister, who attends Texas Tech University. Both are business majors. Her dad is a farmer. "I am real close to my family," comments Sharma, "and enjoy going back to visit whenever I can."

Two of Sharma's favorite hobbies are flying kites and hiking. "We did quite a bit of both in Palo Duro Canyon while at school at WTSU," says Sharma. She plans to work on her master's degree there this summer.

"I also would like to play softball with a Hereford team this summer," adds Sharma, "and something I'm working on now is a volleyball clinic for ninth graders to interest those who will be entering high school in the fall in our volleyball program."

The world of 4-H encompasses many different kids. Kids of all ages, colors, shapes, sizes, interests, ideas, goals and dreams.

Sometimes, it is hard for us who work with these kids to take their differences in account. I find myself expecting the same things from some that I expected of others - and this is wrong (but easy to do). It seems we all need a little waking up every once-in-awhile to the fact that we sometimes treat all kids the same.

I am including a poem that came to me in one of my 4-H newsletters from my 4-H & Youth Specialist. It seemed to say a lot to me and I hope it does to you.

HERE'S TO KIDS

Here's to the kids who are different;

The kids who don't always get A's

The kids who have ears

Twice the size of their peers

Or have noses that go on for days.

Here's to the kids who are different

The kids who are just out of step

The kids they all tease,

Who have cuts on their knees,

And whose sneakers are constantly wet.

Here's to the kids who are different.

The kids with a mischievous streak,

For when they have grown,

As history has shown,

It's their difference that makes them unique!

Herd Hopes To Heat Bats Against Coronado Mustangs

The Hereford Whitefaces hope to get their bats hot today despite cold temperatures as the Herd hosts the Coronado Mustangs in the final first-half District 4-5A baseball twinbill.

The Whitefaces are 10-10 on the year after dropping a pair of loop games to the Monterey Plainsmen Saturday. Monterey took the measure of the Herd by 10-3 and 10-0 counts, raising their district mark to 8-0 and their overall record to 20-2. The Herd fell to 1-5 and 10-10 respectively.

Coronado, meanwhile, was raking Lubbock High 6-0 and 10-1 Saturday, and stands at 4-2, 16-6 respectively.

Hereford led Monterey 3-1 after two-and-a-half innings in the opener Saturday at Lowery Field in Lubbock, but the Plainsmen rallied for three runs and a 4-3 lead in their half of the inning, and scored three runs in each of the fifth and sixth frames to register the win.

In the nightcap MHS hurler Wayne Supak (7-0) limited the Whitefaces to two hits in the 10-0 shutout. Rick Dillman (12-0) notched the win for MHS in the opener.

Mark Gillham went five-for-eight in leading the Ponies over Lubbock High Saturday. Gillham had two triple, two singles, and a double, and scored four runs in boosting the CHS attack.

Contamination of College Basketball

Ego, Greed, Money the Villains

By WILL GRIMSLEY AP Special Correspondent

Ego, greed, money pressures plus the social structure all are villains in the contamination of college basketball, says Hall of Fame star Bob Cousy, who acknowledges he doesn't have a remedy.

"It's a dirty business," the former Holy Cross All America and a 13-year star for the pro Boston Celtics said Monday in commenting on recruiting abuses in the college game.

"It isn't new. It's just that the prices have escalated. When I was coaching at Boston College in the 1960s I tried to sound an alarm on recruiting practices. It did no good. Nobody wanted to listen."

Cousy was in New York Monday to help promote a fund-raising campaign for the $7.5 million expansion of the Basketball Hall of Fame in Springfield, Mass. — a project of which he is chairman.

It was only natural that, as one of the game's all-time great personalities, he should be drawn into a discussion of charges by Notre Dame's Coach Richard "Digger" Phelps that $10,000 was the going under-the-table price for prime collegiate prospects.

"Digger is guilty of declaring the obvious," Cousy said. "These infractions have been going on for 25 years or more. Now with the multi-million-dollar TV packages, the enlarged athletic budgets and the pressure to have winning teams, the figures are just more startling."

"I was amazed to learn that of two leading players who quit the campus recently to go pro, one had been offered $50,000, the other $100,000 to remain in college. I don't want to name names."

Cousy said extent of the lures for college athletes varied according to the size of the universities and the extent of the athletic budget, which he said could run up to $20 to $30 million.

"If the NCAA has 700 colleges playing basketball, you can bet 700 are in the gray area," he added.

In other words, one can't be "just a little pregnant." You are or you aren't.

"I came out of a Manhattan East Side ghetto" Cousy said. "I went to a very strict Jesuit college, Holy Cross. I had no money of my own. Once when my father became ill in New York, I went to my Jesuit chaplain to explain my predicament."

"He advised me to call a friend of the university. The friend lent me a car for the trip. That was a violation, not a serious violation, but a violation nevertheless."

Cousy said that such subtle evasion of the letter of the law was a reflection of society in general and weakened the moral fiber of the young, impressionable athletes whose characters schools are supposed to be strengthening.

Cousy said that even if the coach, athletic director and school president are scupulously honest, it is difficult to avoid abuses by alumni and friends of the team.

Cooney's Trainer Excited About Holmes Challenge

By ED SCHUYLER JR. AP Sports Writer

"Young fighters don't need as much training as older fighters," said trainer Victor

Valle of 25-year-old Gerry Cooney, who is scheduled to challenge 32-year-old Larry Holmes for the World Boxing Council heavyweight championship June 11.

However much training a young fighter needs, it's good to see Cooney back hitting sparring partners, something he should do as much as possible before he meets Holmes fight because he hasn't spent much time hitting opponents in actual fights.

Cooney, trained by Victor Valle and managed by Mike Jones and Dennis Rappaport, will fight for the first time June 11 since he knocked out Ken Norton in 54 seconds May 11, 1981. He will enter the ring against Holmes with less than six full rounds in 30 months.

That would have been 27 months, but Cooney tore muscle fibers in left shoulder while sparring Jan. 12. He tried to resume training in early February but couldn't.

The fight was postponed, with Holmes hollering that's when the Cooney camp wanted the match to be held in the first place.

"I feel much better. It's exciting to be boxing again," Cooney said after a recent training session in which he decked Walter Santemore in the first round of a three-round sparring session. It was Santemore who was in the ring with Cooney when the top contender injured his shoulder.

"It's a little bit sore, but my shoulder is sore," said Cooney. "Now I have to get my boxing in."

Cooney, who resumed sparring April 7, said he wasn't punching full force yet. Whew! He not only got off several hard hooks, he twice shook Santemore with the right, the hand many critics says Cooney doesn't possess.

He possesses it, but it seems that unless he makes a conscious effort to throw it, it comes off as a pushing punch, sort of an afterthought.

And Cooney sometimes seems like an afterthought in his own camp.

Co-manager Dennis Rappaport will talk at the drop of a hat, and get in a short speech before he hits the floor. Mike Jones, the other manager, is a little less hard sell than his partner, but he not shy.

Then there is Valle, the 64-year-old trainer, who is downright enthusiastic and obviously enjoying his participation in a big fight. At least a foot shorter than the 6-foot-5 Cooney, Valle likes to get in the ring and throw rapid-fire punches at his huge charge while wearing what looks to be catcher's mitts.

And when Cooney hits the speed bag, Valle shouts, "Go! Go! Go! Go!"

It cannot be doubted that the managers and trainer have the good of the fighter at heart. They have maneuvered him to a couple of million dollars and an unbeaten record in 25 fights and to the threshold of the heavyweight championship, the chance for mind-boggling purses. Cooney could get $10 million for fighting Holmes. Win, and the sky is the limit.

Lemons May Stay Assistant

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Abe Lemons, who admits time has gone "kind of slow" since he was fired as basketball coach at the University of Texas, is the Men's Athletics Council choice to become an assistant athletic director at the school.

Athletics director DeLoss Dodds said Monday it was "almost a foregone conclusion" that university regents would accept the council's recommendation to keep Lemons on the staff.

Lemons, 59, was fired March 10, and Dodds said at the time, "we need new leadership." Lemons had two years to go on his $52,000-a-year contract.

It was said at the time that the university would honor the contract but Lemons apparently needed only a year or so of employment to be eligible for state retirement benefits. How much time Lemons needs is being checked, Dodds said Monday.

He said Lemons had no specific duties yet but would handle special projects.

After Winning Boston Race Salazar Eyeing Olympics

By HOWARD ULMAN AP Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP) — He has the speed for 10,000 meters and the endurance for the marathon. Now Alberto Salazar knows he can prepare for both the same way.

He won the Boston Marathon Monday in 2 hours, 8 minutes, 51 seconds, the fourth fastest marathon in history. Nine days earlier, he was second in a 10,000-meter race in Eugene, Ore. His 27:30 clocking was the fifth swiftest at that distance.

At the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles, the races are expected to be run four days apart, and America's 23-year-old distance king is eyeing both. No Boston Marathon winner has ever won the 26-mile, 385-yard race in the Olympics.

"I'll see" about running both, he said. "It depends on what my chances are."

His chances were excellent Monday in one of the weaker Boston Marathon fields in recent years. But Dick Beardsley of Rush City, Minn., turned it into a dogfight, finishing just two seconds behind.

Salazar said his victory "shows me that I can run a very fast 10,000 and a very fast marathon off similar training. I thought it would require much different training, but it didn't."

"It tells me I can run these two distances well so close together."

But the lesson had its price. Running under sunny skies with temperatures in the 60s and low humidity, Salazar became severely dehydrated. Ten minutes after he finished, his body temperature had plummeted to 88 degrees, more than 10 below normal.

Intravenous solutions were hooked up to both arms and, within 43 minutes, his temperature was up to 97.

"I was sure I was going to be all right," Salazar said. "My temperature was going up gradually. It was just a matter of time. But I wished it had happened sooner because of the pain."

Pain sabotaged the chances of Norway's Grete Waitz, the women's favorite. She was well ahead of all the other women when leg pains forced her to quit with about three miles left.

"My legs, they said, 'No,'" Waitz said from the emergency room of Beth Israel Hospital where she was treated and released.

Charlotte Teske, of Darmstadt, West Germany, captured the women's competition in 2:29:33. Jacqueline Gareau of Canada, the 1980 Boston winner, was second in 2:36:09. Eileen Clausgus of Sacramento, Calif., was third in 2:38:48.

Teske's time was the seventh fastest women's marathon, but far from the world record of 2:25:28 set by Allison Roe of New Zealand at the New York City Marathon last October.

"I was very surprised" to win, Teske said.

Salazar, victorious in the other two marathons he has run, was a bit closer to his world record of 2:08:13, also set in New York last October. He eclipsed the course record of 2:09:26 set by Japan's Toshihiko Seko last year.

Beardsley, who led much of the race, gave Salazar a battle. The two-second margin equalled the previous closest marathon in 1978 when Bill Rodgers beat Jeff Wells.

With about six or seven miles to go, Salazar and Beardsley left the pack behind. With about a half-mile left, Salazar made his move.

He opened a gap of about 15 yards and beat back a late charge that brought Beardsley to within a couple of strides.

Beardsley said he tried to surge on the downhill parts of the course, hoping to open a lead that could withstand Salazar's vaunted sprinting ability.

Severe Leg Cramps Force Waitz To Drop from Race

BOSTON (AP) — West German runner Charlotte Teske predicted she would finish second to Grete Waitz of Norway among women in the 1982 Boston Marathon, and for more than 20 miles it looked as if she was right.

But severe leg cramps forced Waitz out of the race only a few miles from the finish line Monday, and Teske held on to lead all women runners in the 86th edition of the world's most famous road race.

"I felt sorry when I heard about Grete. I didn't see her when she dropped out," said Teske, who ran the grueling 26.2-mile course under bright sunshine in 2 hours, 29 minutes, 33 seconds. The 32-year-old nurse from Darmstadt said she didn't know she had won the race until a policeman gave her the good news at the finish line.

Jacqueline Gareau of Montreal, the women's winner in the 1980 Boston Marathon, finished second at 2:36:09. Eileen Clausgus of Sacramento, Calif., was third at 2:38:45.

Waitz said she was cruising to an easy victory when, "My legs, they said 'No.'"

"I'm not very happy," she said, "But when your legs,

"I just fell short by a couple of steps, I guess," said the 26-year-old Beardsley, who ran the fifth quickest marathon and his fastest. "I knew we were running a fast time, but I didn't think those times were possible on a day like this that's so warm."

"I finished second in a lot of races and this time I thought it might happen again. But I just had to get it out," said Salazar, who came to Wayland, Mass., from his native Cuba when he was two years old and now lives in Eugene.

"Thanks to Dick Beardsley for pulling me to such a fast time because I could never have run that fast if I had been leading."

It was only Salazar's third marathon and his first in Boston. He also won the past two New York City Marathons.

John Lodwick of Eugene finished fourth here last year and moved up one place Monday with a time of 2:12:01. Fourth place went to Bill Rodgers, a four-time Boston winner, in 2:12:38.

"It was my fastest marathon of the year," said Rodgers, of nearby Sherborn. "I wanted a little bit faster but I died in the end."

"There was no cloud cover. It was the kind of day where you had to take water."

Salazar did that, but it intensified a pain in his side. But a lack of water can lead to dehydration. "I was in a dilemma," he said.

"I'd say it's probably the hardest effort I've ever put in."

In the late stages, Beardsley was brushed by a bus, had to swing wide of a police motorcycle and put up with a tightened hamstring that relaxed when he stepped in a pothole.

But he didn't blame his second-place finish on that. Kjell-erik Stahl was fifth, followed by Dennis Rinde, Terry Baker, Rick Callison, Robert Wallace and Ben Morturi.

The race began in Hopkinton, west of Boston, and ended at the Prudential Insurance Co. tower in the city.

they stop, it's nothing you can do."

Teske said she was pleased with her time, even though it was about three minutes off the Boston record set last year by New Zealander Allison Roe. Roe is hospitalized and could not defend her title.

"Yes, I'm very happy. It's too hot to make a big effort. I'm not a heat runner," said Teske, who finished tied for 148th overall in the 7,700-runner field with temperatures in the 60s.

She said she had conceded first place in the Boston race to Waitz, whose record included three straight victories in the New York Marathon in 1978-80. Teske said she was hoping for second.

Worldwide, the number of known suicides is at least 1,000 a day.

Padres' Bats Learn To Sing Favorite Tune to Williams

By BRUCE LOWITT AP Sports Writer

Remember when National League pitchers would routinely hum the ball past San Diego's batters? These days, the Padres' hitters are tapping out music that's oh, so sweet to Manager Dick Williams' ears.

"Our bats have been singing for about a week," Williams said Monday night after they beat a tattoo to the tune of a club-record 24 hits in a 13-6 pounding of the San Francisco Giants.

In two other National League games, Houston defeated Los Angeles 6-4 and Philadelphia beat Montreal

2-0.

"We've been getting a lot of two-out base hits, but you've got to take what you can get when you get it," added Williams.

Without the Padres' hot bats, the NL West race might already be a mini-runaway, thanks to the unbeaten Atlanta Braves' record-tying 11-game winning streak. They go for No. 12 tonight at home against Cincinnati. The Braves own a four-game lead over the Padres, who have won six in a row.

Despite the awesome 24-hit offense (which still fell seven hits shy of the major league record set by the 1901 New York Giants), Juan Eichelberger still had to struggle all the way. He gave up 11 hits before becoming the first San Diego pitcher to go the distance this season.

"Hey, I'll take the win," he said with a smile, "but I'd like not to give up four home runs in a ballgame (by the Giants' Darrell Evans, Chili Davis, Jeff Leonard and Dave Bergman)... We've got some offense without a doubt. All year long we're going to score four, five, six runs a game. If I can hold them to three runs, I can win."

Terry Kennedy, who spent three games on the bench last week because Williams didn't think he was aggressive enough at the plate, led the San Diego assault with four hits, three of them doubles, and four runs batted in.

Astros 6, Dodgers 4

Art Howe drove in three runs, two with a tie-breaking single in a four-run sixth inning, as Houston sent the Dodgers down their sixth consecutive loss.

Singles by Phil Garner and Jose Cruz chased Los Angeles Burt Hooton. Alan Ashby singled and Ray Knight doubled off Terry Forster, each driving in a run, then Howe greeted Alejandro Pena with his game-winning hit.

Phillies 2, Expos 0

Larry Christenson and Ed Farmer teamed for a three-hitter against Montreal as the Phillies snapped their three-game losing streak.

Philadelphia did all its scoring in the first inning against Scott Sanderson. Pete Rose tripled on the game's first pitch and scored on a one-out single by Gary Matthews, who stole second and scored on a single by Bo Diaz.

Pinch on Braves To Set Record

ATLANTA (AP) — Frank Pastore, who'll pitch tonight for the Cincinnati Reds, says it's just another game.

It's anything but that for the Atlanta Braves, however. If the Braves beat the Reds tonight, they'll win their 12th straight game at the start of the season, a major league baseball record. Atlanta tied the record of 11 in a row, set last year by the Oakland A's, with a 6-5 victory Sunday over Houston.

"It's just another game," said Pastore, 1-0. "If there's any pressure, it would be on the Braves. They're the ones going for the record."

Pastore's pitching opponent, Tommy Boggs, 1-0, says the Braves are trying to play them one game at a time.

"It's just a day-to-day thing," Boggs said. "That's the way everybody is taking it. We just want to see what happens."

Atlanta fans want to see what happens, also, but the weatherman is not cooperating. Meteorologist John Zimmerman of the National Weather Service says there is a 40 to 50-percent chance of rain by game time.

"We're looking at a slow-moving cold front," Zimmerman said. "We're riding the fence as far as meteorology is concerned. There's just as much chance it won't rain."

The Braves had hoped for a crowd of about 40,000, but the weather and the fact that schools are still in session may hold attendance down.

"To have a sellout would be like something out of 'Damn Yankees,'" said Braves ticket manager Andre DeLorenzo. "On a normal night we'd expect about 7,000."

But DeLorenzo found that the winning streak does have a bright side, ticketwise. "This has been a great thing for us. People aren't just asking for tickets to this game. They want season tickets. They wanted a winner and we've given them one."

"Sure, we'd like to see a big crowd," Boggs said. "You play better in front of a big crowd. We'll be happy with the crowd."

The Braves have been winning with a combination of good pitching, hitting and defense.

Gibson's Return Boosts Tigers

By BRUCE LOWITT AP Sports Writer

The only thing Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson liked more than the sight of the ball going over the wall was the sight of it going over the plate.

Kirk Gibson broke out of a 1-for-30 batting slump with a vengeance Monday night by pounding a two-run homer into the upper deck in right field, catapulting the Tigers to a 3-2 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

But as pleased as Anderson was over that blast, and Glenn Wilson's first major league homer in the seventh inning, he was even happier at the showing of pitcher Larry Pashnick.

In his first major league start, the right-hander scattered eight hits over seven innings, including Jerry Martin's third-inning homer and sixth-inning RBI-single. Anderson said he was rewarding Pashnick with the No. 5 starting spot in the Tigers' pitching rotation.

In three other American League games on the abbreviated schedule, Toronto edged Boston 5-4, Minnesota stunned Oakland 5-2 and California beat Seattle 3-1.

Gibson's game-winner, following an Enos Cabell single, came on a full-count pitch from Royals relief ace Dan Quisenberry.

Blue Jays 5, Red Sox 4

Boston reliever Mark Clear put a pitch right in Barry Bonnell's wheelhouse and the Toronto outfielder planted in the screen above the Green Monster left-field wall to break a 4-4 eighth-inning tie.

Two of the Blue Jays' other runs came on homers by Ernie Whitt and Lloyd Moseby.

Twins 5, A's 2

For eight innings, Oakland pitcher Rick Langford was virtually untouchable. Then he lost his touch — and the game.

"He's a good pitcher, a great pitcher. But it was our turn and we put almost all our hits together instead of spacing them out for nine innings," said Kent Hrbek, whose two-out, three-run double gave the Twins the game. Butch Wynegar, with a leadoff double in the third inning, had been Minnesota's only runner before John Castino singled to open the ninth.

Then Jim Eisenreich walked, Mickey Hatcher singled and Hrbek brought them all home with a hit that just eluded diving right fielder Tony Armas. Gary Gaetti's single sent Hrbek to third, Randy Johnson singled him home and Wynegar's single scored Gaetti.

Angels 3, Mariners 1

Mike Witt and relievers Luis Sanchez and Don Aase muffed the Mariners on seven hits while Bobby Grich doubled twice and scored two runs for California.

They broke a 1-1 tie in the fourth when shortstop Todd Cruz bobbled Tim Foli's two-out, bases-loaded grounder. Grich and Doug DeCinces doubled for a run in the second inning and in the eighth, Grich doubled and Foli singled him home.

Moe Says Defense Crucial To Most Scored Upon Team

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD AP Sports Writer

Denver Coach Doug Moe, although the Nuggets were the most scored upon team in the National Basketball Association, says his club's success begins with defense.

"Our whole concept starts with defense," Moe said before the Nuggets opened their best-of-3 Western Conference playoff series against the Phoenix Suns tonight in Denver. "We can't open up and get our running game going without playing good defense. Defense is crucial for us. I can't think of a single game we've won this year when we've played bad defense."

The Nuggets finished the season with a scoring average of 126.5, the highest in NBA history and 12 points per game better than the No. 2 scoring team, Los Angeles. Denver also became the first team to score more than 100 points in every game on its schedule.

At the same time, however, the Nuggets allowed 10,328 points, an average of 126 per game. The next-most porous defense belonged to the Utah Jazz, which allowed 9,558 points, an average of 116.6.

Besides Utah, only San Diego, with 9,502 points allowed, came within 1,000 of Denver's defensive total.

Nevertheless, Denver center Dan Issel says, "The key for us is to play aggressive defense. If we do that, we can play with anybody. If we don't, we're one of the worst teams in the league."

The Nuggets, who are in the playoffs for the first time in three years, finished the season with a 46-36 record, the same as the Suns, their first-round opponent.

Phoenix, a perennial playoff participant, has moved 7-footer Rich Kelley into the starting lineup at center in an effort to match up better physically with other NBA teams. Moe feels the move makes the Suns "a more formidable opponent, at least a much bigger opponent."

Besides playing good defense, we must hit the boards," Moe said. "We're not a good rebounding team, but we must rebound well in this series. We must be able to control the boards well enough to get our running game going."

In their first-round playoff matchups, Washington is at New Jersey tonight, while Atlanta is at Philadelphia and Houston at Seattle Wednesday night.

Washington, which finished the season 43-39, made the playoffs although most preseason predictions said it would have one of the worst teams in the league.

"This team has been absolutely remarkable," said Coach Gene Shue. "We won although we were in a rebuilding type of situation, with few proven players."

Call me fiery. I'm a tough competitor. Losing is something I really hate. To win, you need to be determined. Once I used to walk miles to school just to strengthen my legs. That helped to build my fast-paced, razzle-dazzle style.

WTSU Alumni to Honor Former Hereford Men

Two former Hereford men will be receiving awards Saturday night from the West Texas State University Alumni Association.

Named as award recipients at the 19th annual Phoenix Club Banquet at WTSU are Leo Forrest, former longtime manager of Deaf Smith REC, and Pat Sullivan, a former Hereford High School teacher.

Forrest will be the recipient of the 1981 Distinguished Alumni Award, the top award presented at the annual dinner. Dr. Sullivan is to receive the Faculty Excellence Award.

A 1929 graduate of WTSU, Forrest taught school for 11 years. He then began another career as a farmer southeast of Hereford, and in 1945, became manager of Deaf Smith REC. He held this job for almost 25 years and during this time served as president of the Texas Electric Cooperatives and was on the national legislative board.

The National REC sent Forrest and Louis Strong of Oklahoma to Columbia to develop pilot projects on rural electrification. In 1966, Forrest went to Chile to teach management courses and act as an advisor for 18 Chilean cooperatives. He finished his work in 1970, just a few months after his retirement from Deaf Smith REC.

The Forrests now reside at Lake Tanglewood, where he has just completed his third term as mayor of the village. He continues to work for WTSU and various civic projects.

Sullivan has taught at WTSU since 1959 and is active in the English education teacher training program. He earned bachelor's and master's degrees from Texas Tech University and the PhD from the University of Texas. He teaches literature, grammar and linguistics in addition to directing student teachers who are being certified to teach English.

Sullivan is continually in demand as a clinic teacher, consultant, speaker and leader of in-service programs. The award designed for "professionals who have brought exemplary recognition to WTSU by outstanding accomplishments beyond the expectations of their positions," according to Kirby Sunderman, executive director of the Alumni Association.

Man To Be Questioned In CBS Slayings

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — A 46-year-old man who was stopped while driving a van along a highway was being held here so investigators can question him about the murders of three CBS technicians and a federal grand jury witness in New York City.

In New York, the Daily News quoted unidentified sources today as saying the van may be the same one that sped off carrying the body of the witness after the three CBS employees were slain.

New York City police said they had been seeking to question Donald Bowers of Keansburg, N.J., ever since they discovered that he had rented a space for his van in the rooftop parking lot in Manhattan where the CBS employees were slain April 12 as they came to the aid of the federal witness.

New York City police detectives and the FBI were expected to arrive in Kentucky today to question Bowers. New York officials said Bowers doesn't fit the description of the gunman sought in the slayings.

Bowers was arrested Monday by Kentucky State Police as he drove a black van on Interstate 64.

There were conflicting reports on the reason he was arrested.

Budget Negotiators Getting Into Trenches

WASHINGTON (AP) — Budget negotiators from the White House and Congress are "getting into the trenches" as they move from broad understandings to hammering out specifics agreeable to President Reagan and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr.

The private discussions on Reagan's proposed budget for fiscal year 1983 are resuming this afternoon.

Presidential counselor Edwin Meese said Monday night that today's negotiating session would be critical. In the next 48 hours, Meese said, "We'll have a general feeling if anything's going to happen or not. This is a critical week."

Prior to the resumption of the talks, Republican leaders from the House and Senate were meeting with Reagan at the White House.

Sources have said the negotiators are working toward a compromise package that would reduce deficits steadily to $93 billion in 1983 and to $45 billion in 1985.

House Budget Committee Chairman James R. Jones, D-Okla., a participant in the talks, said Monday in an interview that the negotiators so far have only "broad understandings."

"There are no agreements, that's for sure," he said. "We're getting to the point right now where you've got to get down to more specifics — to programs and actions — and that's slower going."

Jones said the results of the talks this week would determine whether a bipartisan alternative to the president's red-ink budget can be found.

"Now we're getting into the trenches... It's going to be a tough week," he said.

Sources said the negotiators have been discussing a 4 percent surtax on upper-income taxpayers and some form of a tax on energy products, a three-year reduction and delay in Social Security cost-of-living increases and a cut in Reagan's planned military buildup.

They also said the negotiators have discussed a three-year spending freeze on hundreds of domestic programs. The administration and House Republicans would like to see additional cuts in some of those programs while Democrats generally oppose further reductions.

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee and another of the negotiators, said Monday the chances for the success of a compromise are "still 50-50: 50 percent Reagan and 50 percent O'Neill."

The president and the speaker have been "holding out too long; the season's almost over," Dole complained.

House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois, another of the negotiators, said he hoped that today's budget meeting would be the last before a proposed agreement is submitted to Reagan and O'Neill, D-Mass.

But Jones said he doubts the negotiators can reach an agreement so quickly. "I don't expect tomorrow (today) to solve the problem," he said.

Other Democratic sources, who asked not to be quoted by name, also cautioned against expecting an agreement today, if at all.

Woman, Black Slated For Space

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The astronaut who will become America's first woman in space greeted the news breathlessly, while the first black spaceman to get a mission closeted himself with a stack of paperwork to control his enthusiasm.

Dr. Sally K. Ride, 30, and Air Force Lt. Col. Guion S. Bluford Jr., 39, were assigned Tuesday as mission specialists on the seventh and eighth flights of the space shuttle Challenger, the nation's second reusable spacecraft.

Miss Ride, who parlayed a career in astrophysics into the chance to pioneer a new era in space exploration, will fly with three male, military officers on the seventh mission.

Her voyage is scheduled to begin April 20, 1983, nearly two decades after Russian cosmonaut Valentina Tereshkova circled the globe for four days to become the first and only woman ever to venture into outer space.

The publicity is nothing new for Miss Ride, the Encino, Calif., native who was one of six women originally tapped by NASA.

She served as the first female capsule communicator during the spaceship Columbia's second and third flights, relaying orders from Mission Control to astronauts unfolding and testing the spaceship's robot arm.

But the cool, calm and reserved voice of the first woman cap-com cracked with excitement when she told her mother she had been selected to ride aboard the 38th American space flight.

"Sally is normally very cool, very low-key but when she called to tell me the news she was bordering on breathlessness," said Mrs. Dale Ride, the astronaut's mother.

Bluford, who was assigned to the Challenger's third voyage now set for July 4, 1983, said he returned to his office and a stack of paperwork.

"The four of us assigned to the STS-8 were called in together and told the news. But they told us that we couldn't tell anyone until it was officially announced. So I went back to my office and finished some paperwork," said Bluford, who is married and the father of two teen-age boys.

Both Miss Ride and Bluford were among 35 handpicked in 1978 when after nearly eight years NASA opened the door to its elite astronaut corps.

Miss Ride, a Stanford graduate, said she applied as a lark.

"Being an astronaut was never a life-long dream," Miss Ride, recalled recently.

"There was an advertisement in the Stanford newspaper that NASA was accepting applications. I thought, 'Why not.'"

For Philadelphia-born Bluford, one of four blacks in the corps, becoming an astronaut was "more of an evolutionary thing."

"It was something that evolved through my interest in aviation. That interest has become the ultimate chance of a lifetime," said the Penn State graduate who later flew 144 combat missions over Vietnam.

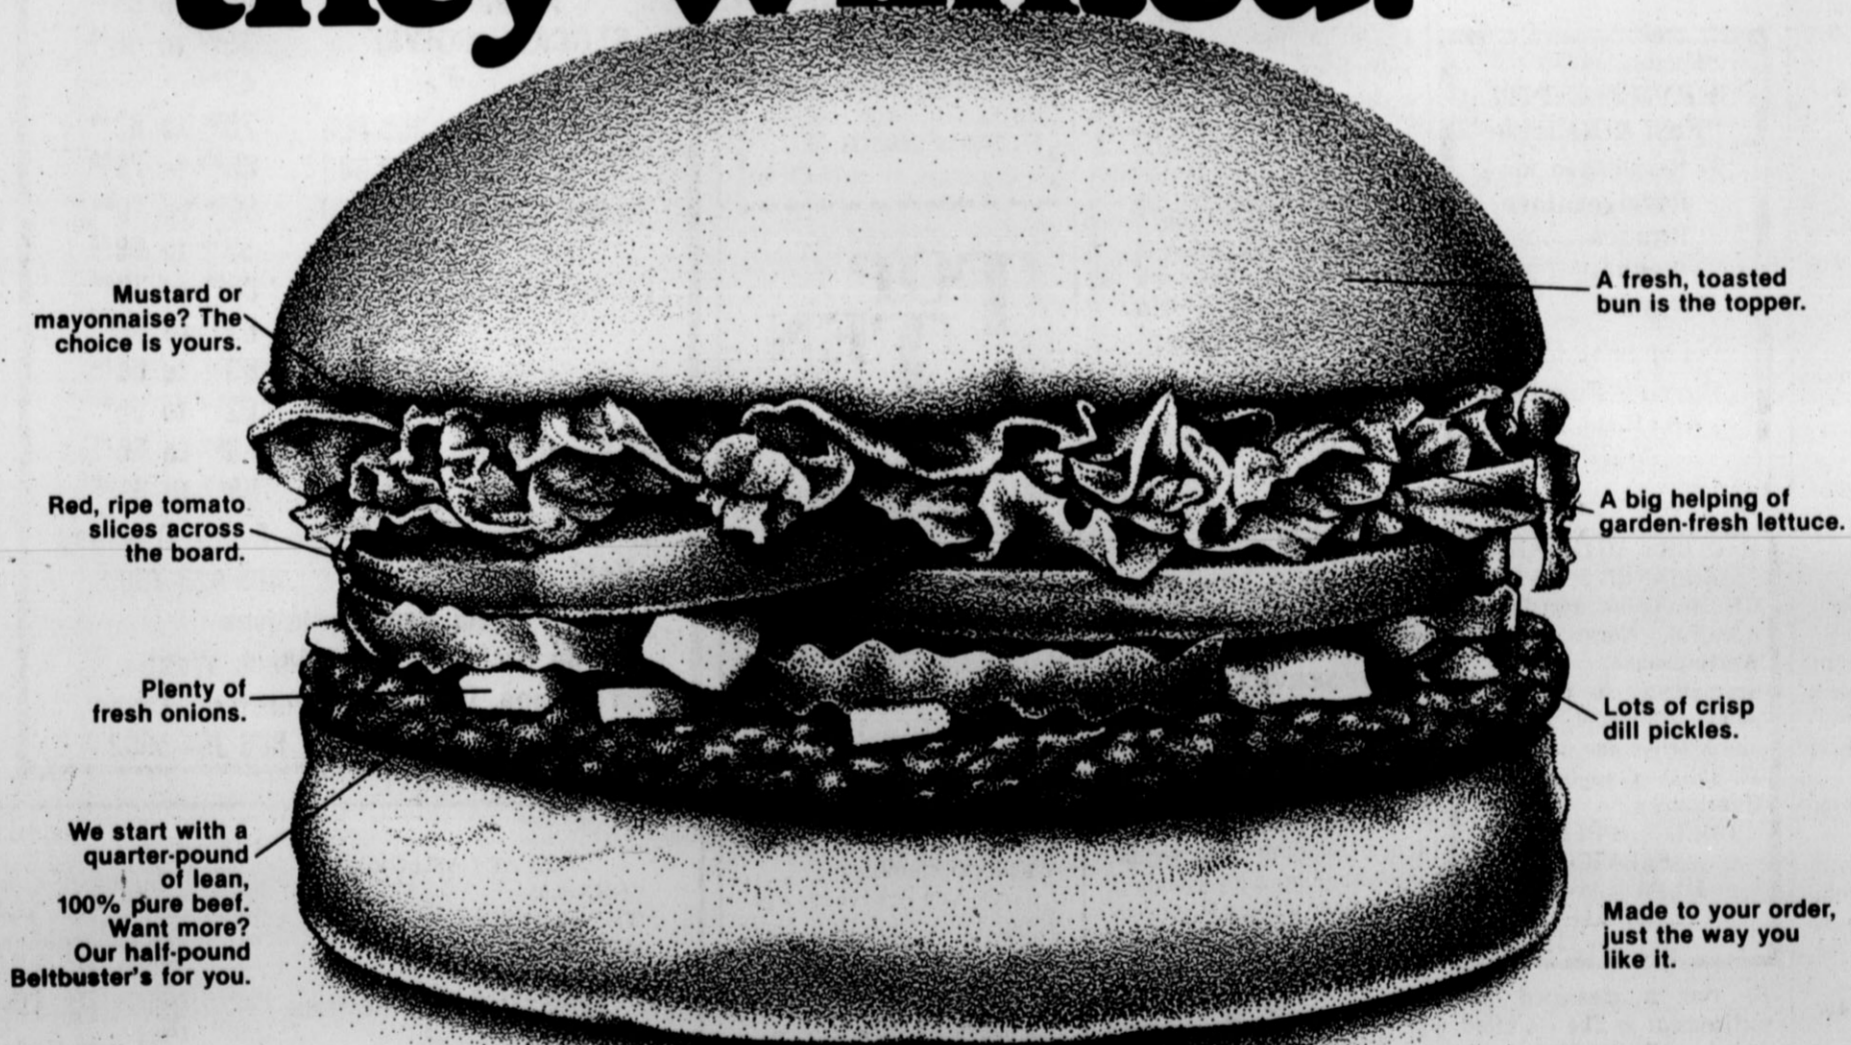

Shortly after he was selected, Bluford said it might be better to be the second or third black in space "because then you can enjoy the experience a little more."

Now, he said, "I've been in the limelight once before and I can handle it."
