Deaf Smith County is the top agriculture-producing county in Texas and 12th in the nation, according to 1982 farm census ratings released the past week.

Deaf Smith County and Hidalgo county usually vie for the No. 1 ranking in Texas each year. However, Parmer County was ranked 25th in the nation in this census and Hidalgo was 27th. Another neighboring county, Castro, was ranked 32nd among the top 100 counties in the nation.

The Texas Panhandle is home to 10 of the top 100 ag-producing counties, with Hidalgo the only other Texas county in the top 100.

The big states of American agriculture continue to be California, Iowa, Texas, Illinois and Nebraska, according to the figures. California, the longtime leader in value of commodity sales, had $12.5 billion in ag marketings. Iowa followed with $9.3 billion; Texas had $8.94 billion; Illinois, $7.31 billion; and Nebraska, $6.63 billion.

Deaf Smith ranked No. 1 in Texas with $562.7 million worth of agricultural products. Parmer Coun-

Other Panhandle counties in the top 100 and their ranking: Swisher, 51st; Hansford, 54th; Lamb, 63rd;

Moore, 73rd; Randall, 84th; Sherman, 86th; and Dallam, 95th. Texas County in the Oklahoma Panhandle was ranked 27th.

The 1982 Census of Agriculture was issued last April but the ratings were not computed until this week. Earlier this year, Deaf Smith County was shown to be the "cattle feeding capital of the world" in reports issued by the Texas Cattle Feeders Association and the annual survey made by Southwestern Public Service Co.

Texas ranked first in the nation with slightly more than 5 million fed cattle marketed in 1984, and Deaf Smith accounted for 702,780 head. That was believed to be the highest county total in the nation. Adding in the adjoining counties of Parmer, Castro and Randall, the area had about 2 million of the state's 5 million fed cattle.

In the 1982 census, Deaf Smith's ag marketings ranked below eight counties in California and one each in Pennsylvania, Colorado and Arkansas. County Agent Dennis Newton said the county's success comes from production in a variety of products.

Wheat and corn are the county's largest commodities, but sugar beets, milo and a variety of vegetables also are grown in the county. "We are one of the top ag

Signs Of The Times

Work on the former Fullwood building commenced immediately after City Commissioners voted Monday night to purchase the property. The building will house the fire station while a new station is being built, and may be used as office space later. City Manager Dudley Bayne and Kelly Tyler of Southwestern Public Service Company watched the dismantling of the sign from the roof this morning. SPS loaned the city its "bucket lift" to get the job done.

Museum plans unveiling Sunday

A major addition to the Deaf Smith County Museum will be unveiled to the public here Sunday at 2 p.m. as part of the annual meeting of the Deaf Smith County Historical Society.

The new building is the "Lomas & Hacker Wagon Yard", a name chosen by the society in honor of two early stalwarts in starting the museum. Harry Lomas and Bill Hacker gave a dozen years each in operation and maintenance of the museum before their deaths.

The dedication ceremony will take place shortly after 2 p.m. at the museum. The building will house farm and ranch collections, bringing indoors a number of pieces needing protection from the weather and allowing other pieces to be moved from the museum to the "wagon-yard" building.

Special lighting for the new building was financed by memorials to A.J. "Major" Schroeter. A steadfast friend of the museum, Schroeter was county surveyor from 1956 to his death in 1983. He was active in the historical society.

A windmill, part of the "wagon yard" display, recently blew over during a strong windstorm. The name "Windmill Turner" was affixed to the structure in memory of John Turner, who installed the windmill and maintained it as long as he was able. The society hopes to have the windmill repaired in time for the dedication.

The historical society will hold its annual meeting at 2 p.m. and elect new directors and officers, it was announced by President Johnnie Turrentine. It is expected to be a short meeting, and the dedication ceremony will follow on the grounds at the rear of the museum.

The society welcomes new members. Annual dues are only $5.

Two celebrate 25 years with P.O.

By KIM THOGBARTIN
Staff Writer

A postage stamp cost four cents when Gene Streun started working at the Hereford Post Office. It took five postal routes to cover the city in 1960—now it takes eleven.

Aside from that, things haven't changed much during Streun's career as a U.S. Postal Service worker. They've changed even less for Joe Aguirre, who started out walking and has continued his walking route for past 16 years.

The two are celebrating 25 years of government service this year, most of it at the local post office. Aguirre's tenure at the post office was preceded by nine years in the U.S. Army, while Streun interrupted his job for a three-year stint in the army.

Streun began as a carrier but only delivered for six months before being moved inside to clerk and dispatch. "I liked being outside," he said. "It took a while to get used to being indoors."

Aguirre figures he walks five or six miles a day by the time he finishes crisscrossing the streets on his 14-block route. "I get more exercise than the indoors guys, and I get to meet more people," he claimed.

He recalls suffering three dog bites in 16 years—and especially remembers having his pants torn by a couple of pit bull dogs. He prefers not to use the dog spray carriers are provided with.

"I don't like to spray them because the next day when you come by, they're really going to be mad at you."

Aguirre turned 49 on May 7. The next day, he stepped down on a ladder which wasn't where it was supposed to be and broke his heel. For the first time in his adult life, Aguirre is inactive.

"I can't stand sitting around," he said from his position on a brown velvet couch. He hopes to be rid of the thick cast and back on the job by July.

Streun said he has stayed with the postal service because "it's a good job opportunity, good pay." His only complaint is "lousy hours." He is on the job by 5 a.m. every day.

He really does not mind that the work is basically the same every day. Friendships with co-workers make the days pleasant, he pointed out.

Streun recalls the days of the "Highway Post Office," a big van that traveled each night from Amarillo to Roswell and back, picking up mail at each small town. The mail was sorted as the van made its

Hopper named HHS valedictorian

Robin Hopper was named valedictorian of the Hereford High School graduating class today at the annual spring awards assembly. Connie Zinser was named salutatorian and Don Flood took honors as the highest ranking male student.

Hopper is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dave Hopper. A three year member of the National Honor Society, she finished her senior year with a grade point of 102.726, out of a possible 100. (Extra points may be earned through taking advanced courses.)

For two years Hopper was involved in the advanced student program of "pegasus." She was in honors band for three years and served on the drill team for two years, her last season as co-lieutenant. She was a varsity tennis player for three years.

Hopper was honored as a junior football attendant, a lion's Club Sweetheart and was named to Who's Who.

Zinser, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Zinser, holds a 101.9178 average. She was a member of the National Honor Society and was the local chapter's treasurer during her last year.

Her senior year she was the captain of the varsity tennis team on which she played for three years. She was on the drill team for two years, in honors band for three years and in marching band for one year.

She was voted Most Intellectual and was honored with the News Media Tennis Award her junior years.

Flood earned the highest ranking male student post with a 99.96 average. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Flood.

Also a three year member of the National Honor Society, Flood has been recognized by being named to Who's Who, and as a representative to Boys State in 1984.

Flood has served his senior year in Key Club as president, and was active in that organization since his sophomore year. He also was a student council representative during his senior year.

He also is aiming for a third consecutive year of perfect attendance.

The three, plus honor graduates, will be recognized at commencement next Friday at 7 p.m. at Whiteface Stadium.

Sailor began spying while on submarine

WASHINGTON (AP) — A retired Navy communications specialist began spying for the Soviet Union while serving aboard a U.S. nuclear missile submarine 19 years ago, according to U.S. intelligence sources.

The intelligence community sources, who asked not to be named, disclosed that John Anthony Walker Jr.'s alleged spy career began in 1966, as much as four years earlier than previously acknowledged by the government.

From August 1965 to April 1967, when he allegedly was recruited by the Soviets, Walker was stationed on the U.S.S. Simon Bolivar, a nuclear submarine armed with strategic missiles such as the Polaris and later the Poseidon, targeted on the Soviet Union.

This disclosure came after a top FBI official said Thursday the bureau expects to arrest more Americans in the alleged spy ring. Walker's 22-year-old son, Michael, a seaman on the nuclear aircraft carrier Nimitz, already has been charged with supplying documents for his father to give to the Soviets.

Michener honored by Texas Senate

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Senate has saluted Pulitzer Prize-winning author James Michener as a "man of formidable knowledge and intellect" in connection with his new novel on Texas.

Michener drew laughter when he responded that senators had better read the book first.

A resolution by Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, hailed Michener as "an optimistic patriot who conveys an old-fashioned enthusiasm for this country and our ideals of democracy."

It said publication of Michener's book during Texas' celebration of its 150th anniversary of independence from Mexico "is a truly great honor for this state." Texas will celebrate its sesquicentennial in 1986.

"To offer a writer a resolution like that before you've read his book — I'll tell you what I'm going to do. I'm going to accept that resolution and put it in escrow, and if six months from now you want to take it back, I won't fight it," Michener said.

Michener, who won the Pulitzer in fiction for his "Tales of the South Pacific," has lived in Texas, working on his book for three years. He holds a professorship at the University of Texas at Austin.

Nursing home bill dies in House

AUSTIN (AP) — The state agency that dictates who can build hospitals and nursing homes died in the House Thursday, dragging with it the abortion regulation push.

A bid to salvage the Texas Health Facilities Commission by adding an abortion regulation measure flopped, succeeding only in raising the ire of pro-life legislators.

Cleburne Rep. Bruce Gibson, a commission supporter, tried to lure conservative votes with an amendment to let the commission license abortion clinics.

But the House voted 98-49 against considering the bill that would have kept the three-member commission in operation through 1989. Barring any change before the session ends Monday, the commission disappears Sept. 1.

Commissioner Dora McDonald contended that unregulated health care will be costly, adding that there will be "hospitals like 7-Elevens, on every other street corner."

The abortion issue became tangled with the commission after pro-life lawmakers decided against offering an abortion regulation amendment to a Department of Health bill.

Texan wins big poker game

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A Dallas man who says he began playing poker to avenge the losses of his father, a notoriously poor player, knocked off 139 other gamblers in the four-day World Series of Poker to walk away with a $700,000 first prize.

With $1.4 million in cash and chips on the table, Bill Smith, 51, unveiled his full house Thursday to beat the three 5s held by his last opponent, fellow Texan T.J. Cloutier, also of Dallas.

Cloutier, who lost $350,000 in the hand, settled for $280,000 second prize.

Smith said he began playing poker full-time in New Mexico in 1958, vowing to win more money than his father had lost in his lifetime.

"I've done that and then some," he said.

"I'm not sure there's ever been a bigger hand than this," the former oil company draftsman said after winning the record prize at Binion's Horseshoe Club. "Whoever held a card was going to win it." A crowd 10-deep had watched play at the club's tables.

Not all the money will go to Smith, though.

Like many players in the field, he had to find sponsors to put up the $10,000 he needed to buy in to the game. Typically, sponsors are given a cut of the prize money.

Cloutier, a former professional football player in the Canadian Football League, said he would use his prize money to play more poker.

"I've won some other tournaments but this is the biggest money I've ever won," he said.

Soviets accused of spying

WASHINGTON (AP) — About 200 of the 800 Soviet citizens on the headquarters staff of the United Nations are intelligence agents who operate virtually without challenge by the U.S. government, according to the Senate Intelligence Committee.

"The Soviets are using employment at the United Nations as a front for their spies, and we must do what we can to prevent it," said Sen. William V. Roth, R-Dele., a member of the committee.

Earlier this month, the Senate panel approved legislation by Roth that would bring Soviet employees of the United Nations under the same scrutiny and travel restrictions as regular Soviet diplomats.

At United Nations headquarters in New York, U.N. spokesman Francois Giuliani said, "If the American government has proof that their allegations are verifiable, the secretary-general will look into them."

Noting the frequency of Western allegations of Soviet spying at the United Nations, Giuliani said that "until now, no government has taken up such a complaint with the secretary-general and substantiated them."

Roth released an unclassified summary of a committee report, based on information gathered from the FBI and former U.N. Ambassador Jeanne Kirkpatrick, which said "the Soviet Union is effectively using the U.N. Secretariat in the conduct of its foreign relations, and the West is paying for most of it."

Shiites squeeze Palestinian band

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Shiite Moslem militiamen squeezed a band of Palestinian defenders into a corner of west Beirut's refugee camps. Dozens of bodies littered the streets and rumors of massacres filtered from the besieged camps.

Police said Thursday that at least 201 people had died in the four-day battle for control of the camps, but their count did not include the bodies lying uncollected amid the rubble of the Sabra and Chatilla camps.

The Shiite Amal militia and Shiite soldiers of the Lebanese army encircled the two refugee camps and turned their heavy weapons loose. Most of the Palestinians battled back from an area about 100-yards square, firing through holes knocked in houses and fighting invaders hand-to-hand.

"It's a horrific tragedy," said a Palestinian spokesman. "They're pulverizing the camps, house by house, with heavy artillery and tank cannon. Dozens of bodies are lying on the streets. They won't let the Red Cross in."

A Palestinian spokesman who spoke on condition he not be identified said Shiites slaughtered 18 patients in the Gaza Hospital at the edge of Sabra.

An Amal spokesman denied the charge, saying the militia had allowed relief workers to evacuate all the wounded.

However, militiamen turned back reporters who tried to reach the hospital and neither version could be verified.

producing counties in the nation because we are so diversified," said Newton.

But Newton and some other Panhandle agricultural experts have expressed concern about the county's high ranking if the nation's first high-level nuclear waste repository is placed here. Deaf Smith County has been named as one of the top three choices for such a repository.

"It's such a farce to consider placing a nuclear waste dump here when we're one of the highest ag producing counties in the nation," said Newton.

Paul Gross, district extension director for the Texas A&M

Research and Extension Center in Amarillo, said production levels could continue at the same level if a repository was placed in the county but it could have a negative impact on marketing the county's products.

The California farm machine included 22 of the top 100 counties, according to the report. Almost all Panhandle counties' ag products include a combination of cattle feeding, grain sorghum and wheat.

The six adjoining counties of Deaf Smith, Randall, Parmer, Castro, Swisher and Lamb account for $1.847 billion in ag products, or 18 percent of the Texas total.

way down the road.

That system was phased out, and mail no longer travels by train either. Everything is sorted in the cities, Streun said, and transported by truck.

Streun enjoys gardening as a hobby, and strangely enough he also has a stamp collection. He and his wife Cynthia, a part-time secretary, have three children.

Aguirre and his wife Gertrudis, who works at the Caison House, have four children. His youngest, Joe Jr., graduates from Hereford High school this year.

His hobbies include singing in the Saturday night choir at San Jose Church, and traveling in Mexico.

Aguirre is confident about the service performed by postal workers.

Grieving parents form group

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — To bury a child is to see a part of yourself — your eye color, your dimple, your sense of humor — being buried, too. It is one of life's harshest experiences, say surviving parents.

For years after a son or daughter is lost, the parents grieve. They imagine the teen-ager, the adult, the grandchildren.

Two Concord couples, who have each lost a child, say the pain lingers.

In 1981, Connie and Wayne Eddy's son, Jason, who was born with profound brain damage, died in his mother's arms. He was four but had a mental age of one month.

"I would be sitting at home reading the newspaper and hear a baby cry. I would go upstairs and realize he was no longer there," Wayne Eddy said.

Dick and Sandy King's son, Rick, died the day after his 18th birthday.

It was 1974, but they remember.

He was on a weekend backpacking trip with friends to celebrate his high school graduation and had a job waiting Monday morning. Hitchhiking home, he was hit by a car and killed.

Dick King wanted to talk about Rick's death, but people avoided him. Some friends ducked across the street when they saw him coming.

"When you don't talk about it," he said, "it's mental suicide."

And when the parents want to escape the loss, they can't. Common polite questions, such as the number of children in the family, may cause anxiety or pain.

Mrs. Eddy tells strangers she has one daughter, 18-month-old Meghan.

"But, when I talk to someone and think they may become an integral part of my life I sit down and tell them about Jason," she said.

When talking to new friends, King doesn't mention Rick. "I'm not going through it each time," he said. "It's too painful."

"The other day a neighbor mentioned Ricky. I see his friends grown and married," Mrs. King said. "I think about what his children would have looked like."

For 10 years the Kings had no outlet for their grief outside the family. Then in 1981, a group of grieving parents in Concord formed the state's first chapter of Compassionate Friends, a national support organization.

Experts once believed parents would grieve about a year. But Ronald Koenig, founder of the University of Detroit's Center of Death and Dying, said, "Now we are finding people who five, six, 10 years later are still struggling with incomplete feelings of grief."

Seven years after Rick's death, Mrs. King said she felt herself slipping into a deep depression and sought professional counseling.

"One of my daughters was having her second baby and I couldn't have cared less. It was just a great big dip back," she said.

Mrs. King said she believes she is ready to leave the group, but continues to stay.

"I no longer think footsteps or a knock at the door is Rick. I know you can laugh and that you can get on with your life. I want to pass that along to other parents," she said.

The Kings' and Eddy's marriages were strengthened by their children's deaths. But they are the exceptions. The divorce rate for couples who have lost a child is high, according to authorities in the field.

Linda Sims, whose 4-month-old daughter, Jessica, died in 1971 of congenital heart disease, began the New

Six newborns struggle for life

ORANGE, Calif. (AP) — Samuel Frustaci caressed two of his six newborn babies and told the tiniest to "keep fighting" as five of the critically ill infants got better while awaiting their mother's first visit.

"It's important for her to see these children she carried for all this time," said Dr. Martin Feldman, Patricia Frustaci's obstetrician. "Right now they're just photographs and images she's seen on a TV screen."

Mrs. Frustaci has been in good condition in intensive care at St. Joseph Hospital since she delivered four boys, two girls and a stillborn girl Tuesday morning. She probably will be taken by wheelchair to adjacent Childrens Hospital of Orange County to visit the babies for the first time tonight or Saturday morning, Feldman said.

Officials said they expected the Frustacis to name the infants soon. Until then they are babies A through F, although the smallest, 1-pound baby boy F, was nicknamed "the little Peanut."

On a visit Thursday to the newborn intensive care unit, Frustaci caressed the chests and feet of Peanut and baby girl A. He said he wanted to name her Anna Maria, but dubbed her Bigfoot.

Dr. Carrie Worcester, newborn intensive care director at Childrens Hospital, said Thursday that baby girl A was significantly better than on Wednesday, boys B, C and E were improved and girl D was quite sick but still somewhat improved. Peanut, the smallest and sickest, was unchanged.

Heart murmurs, which had indicated a duct between the aorta and the arteries to the lungs failed to close, vanished in all the infants except Peanut after they were given a three-dose treatment with the drug indomethacin, Ms. Worcester said.

She added all the babies but the smallest had better than 50-50 survival odds, but were still combatting a lung disorder that left them dependent on oxygen and respirators.

"They're very active babies, incredibly active," Ms. Worcester said. "That's a good sign."

Frustaci visited Peanut and the first baby girl Thursday afternoon in a session that was videotaped and shown later to reporters.

"You keep fighting now," the 32-year-old salesman cooed to the tiny boy. "Keep up the good work. Don't let anybody tell you different."

Then Frustaci bent over the girl and asked, "How ya doin' buddy? Hanging in there?"

He caressed the baby with his finger and said, "You got a big foot. I'm going to call you bigfoot. Look at this foot!"

The infants, barely longer than a large man's shoe, lie on their backs on warming trays, with tubes running from their mouths and other parts of their tiny bodies.

Feldman said Mrs. Frustaci "expressed a lot of grief for the stillborn. ... She asked if there was anything the stillborn."

Feldman said he told her no.

The 30-year-old English teacher, who conceived the septuplets and her 14-month-old son, Joseph, with the help of a fertility drug, was very anxious to visit the babies, but only after sprucing herself up.

"Patti wants to shampoo her hair and put on makeup because she realizes the press is going to be around," Feldman said.

Hunger war needs supplies from U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unless recent cutbacks in food and nutrition programs are reversed, the United States will fall further behind in the war against hunger, says Dr. Jean Mayer, who has led the nation's anti-hunger efforts.

"There is good evidence that by 1978 we had succeeded in roughly eradicating hunger and malnutrition in the United States," Mayer told a House hearing Thursday. But, he added, "we are backsliding."

Mayer, president of Tufts University, was chairman of the 1969 White House Conference on Food, Nutrition and Health and vice chairman of the 1979-1980 Presidential Commission on World Hunger.

Saying "there is increasing evidence that hunger and malnutrition are reappearing among poor children in this country," Mayer called for expanding the food stamp program, school lunch and breakfast programs and the special feeding program for women and infants.

"The cutbacks in funding since 1980, coupled with inflation and recession, have wiped out as much as a third of the gains," Mayer said.

Other witnesses before the joint hearing of the House Select Committee on Hunger and the Energy and Commerce subcommittee on health and the environment cited studies they said documented problems of hunger and malnutrition.

The women and infants program in New Mexico reported to the Physician Task Force on Hunger in America in 1984 that 18 percent of pregnant women entering the program are underweight, said Dr. Aaron Shirley, chairman of the board of trustees of the Mississippi Medical and Surgical Association.

A Minneapolis study found that 33 percent of pregnant women applying to its program were anemic, he said. In 1982, Houston's infant mortality rate in a poor section was 23 per 1,000 live births compared with 10 per 1,000 live births in a more affluent area, Shirley said.

"In Boston, close examination of neighborhood-specific data showed that in the poorest sections of the city, infant mortality rate rose 46 percent from 1981 to 1982," he said.

Every dollar spent on the women and infants program saves $3 the same year in medical costs, Mayer said. "Of all the stupid ways of saving money, probably not feeding pregnant women is the most stupid," he added.

Because so much money is being put into the arms race in the United States and the Soviet Union, he said, "I think children in both countries are beginning to live in the rubble of World War III."

On Wednesday, the Congressional Budget Office and the Congressional Research Service released a study that said more than one in five American children are now living in poverty.

Our nation's trade problems with Japan have attracted much attention in the past few months.

Our trade deficit last year was a record $123.3 billion. Our $37 billion deficit with Japan was bigger than with any other country.

But our trade problems are hardly restricted to Japan, the European Common Market or other major industrialized nations.

Between 1981 and 1984, our trade deficit with developing countries skyrocketed by $32.7 billion, according to a study that I requested, as chairman of the Senate Democratic Working Group on Trade Policy, from the Library of Congress.

We're not talking here about oil exporting countries that are members of OPEC, but other nations termed "less developed countries."

In 1981, we were buying $6 billion more from these emerging countries than they bought from us. But by 1984, that amount had increased to $38.7 billion.

If there is any silver lining to this study, it is that our spending with these countries slowed from 1983 to 1984, increasing by only $200 million, while at the same time our total amount of trade with them was rising by $20 billion.

The study clearly demonstrates that the U.S. market is far more open to imports from developing nations than, for example, the Japanese market.

While the U.S. had a huge trade deficit with developing nations in 1983, Japan had a trade surplus with them of more than $13 billion. In fact, Japanese imports of goods from developing countries as a percentage of its total imports have declined in recent years, while ours have risen steadily.

Japan, which is a third the size of the U.S., buys one-ninth what the U.S. buys from Mexico and one-tenth what the U.S. buys from Hong Kong.

The larger developing countries seem to be following Japan's example of managed one-way trade rather than our example of free trade. More and more, these countries are blocking our exports into their markets while expanding their imports to us.

This study clearly shows that we cannot afford to continue focusing only on our trade problems with industrialized nations.

As ranking member of the Senate Subcommittee on International Trade, I have become increasingly concerned about our nation's lack of a comprehensive, cohesive trade policy.

In recent weeks we have seen continuing trade deficits act to slow economic growth in this country. Growth during the first quarter was much slower than had been expected. The problem is simple: American and foreign consumers alike are spending less on U.S. products.

Americans still have money in their pockets but they are spending it, in record amounts, on foreign goods.

We can expect the trade deficit to continue adding to our economic woes in the weeks and months ahead, unless we act to reduce it.

As we do, we should keep in mind that it isn't just a problem with Japan or Germany or other industrial giants, but with nations that aren't even fully developed, as well.

Julia Child samples some Texas food

DALLAS (AP) — The fajitas were great, but the chicken-fried steak did not win any brownie points from Julia Child.

Although she has visited Texas several times, she sampled native Texas food for the first time last week during a trip to Dallas.

And that's a treat for the culinary grande dame, who said everyone wants to serve her something fancy. Ms. Child said she rarely gets "real food."

"These are delicious," she said as she fell in love with "fajitas" at first bite.

But the chicken-fried steak, a Texas truck stop staple, was too greasy and too heavily breaded, she said.

"I don't think I would ever like chicken-fried steak," Ms. Child said.

In less than 24 hours, Ms. Child tried everything from down-home cooking to Southwestern regional cuisine prepared by star chefs Anne Greer, Stephan Pyles, Avner Samuel and Dean Fearing.

At the invitation of The Dallas Morning News, she visited local restaurants first, where she tried some Texas favorites: chicken-fried steak with cream gravy, fajitas and barbecued ribs.

The ribs were good, but Ms. Child said she didn't really make any strong distinction between Texas-style barbecue and anyone else's.

"Ribs are ribs most anywhere," she said.

Her favorite, the fajitas, are not unlike Chinese pancakes used to wrap pieces of Peking duck or moo shi pork, she said.

"It's just like being in China," said her husband, Paul, as they ate the grilled strips of steak wrapped in flour tortillas.

Fajitas are "wonderful for outdoor serving," she said. They have universal appeal because they can be eaten with the hands in a casual manner, she added.

The sampling of down-home fare preceded a formal dinner at The Mansion — a top restaurant in Dallas — prepared by a quartet of Dallas chefs. The dinner focused on regional foods and included a fillet of catfish and an upscale version of a blue-corn tamale stuffed with venison.

Ms. Child was in Dallas to promote the establishment of a local chapter of the American Institute of Wine and Food. As honorary chairwoman, she said wine and food to be taken seriously as a science and profession.

"Cooking is a respectable profession. Young chefs today are college-trained," she said. "But it's considerably more fun to cook than it is to be a banker. In banking and real estate, you can't eat what you do."

Accreditation process may have to be changed

AUSTIN (AP) — Education Commissioner W.N. Kirby has quietly advised Texas private schools they may soon be dropped from the state accreditation program, the Dallas Times Herald reported today.

The newspaper said Kirby surprised private school officials by announcing in a May 13 meeting that, with the Texas Legislature demanding beefed-up examination of public schools, the state no longer can bear the cost of accrediting private institutions.

Accreditation, a process by which schools are certified as meeting minimum standards for facilities and curriculum, is essential for most schools because colleges usually require incoming students to be graduates of an accredited school.

If the Texas Board of Education goes along with his recommendation, Kirby said, private schools will have to come up with their own accreditation process, possibly as early as July 1986.

Officials said they have not determined the cost of accrediting schools, but said they no longer have enough staff members to perform the tasks, the Times Herald said.

"We are very, very strapped for resources. The top priority of the State Board of Education has to be the very conscientious accreditation and monitoring of public schools," Victoria Bergin, associate commissioner for general education, told the newspaper.

"We need to get out of the business of accrediting non-public schools," she added.

The state has been accrediting private schools that request it since 1909. About 500 private schools now have been accredited by the state at no cost to those schools.

What put a financial pinch on the state accreditation process, Ms. Bergin said, was a legislative requirement for all 1,068 state public school districts to be accredited every three years instead of every five.

Also, the Legislature decreed that the accreditation process must include an investigation to determine that schools were following new directives handed out by lawmakers last summer.

"We're under such pressure from the Legislature and the state board to really get in there and take a close look at those schools and to monitor for quality, which is very, very difficult to do," Ms. Bergin added.

"It's not like going in with a check list and checking the number of toilets or fire extinguishers."

Kirby's action elicited mixed response from officials representing private schools. Many complained that private schools should be given more time to devise their own accreditation process.

Richard W. Ekdahl, executive director of the Independent Schools Association of the Southwest, called Kirby's proposal "a positive move."

"For us, it wouldn't cause any difficulty at all, because we already have a process in which we do credit schools," Ekdahl said.

He said his group would seek to have the state approve his group's private accreditation procedure.

But others were worried that the public would perceive the state's action to mean that private schools are sub-standard when, in fact, most exceed state standards.

Catholic schools, which represent over half of the 500 private schools now accredited by the state, have been the most vocal in their opposition to Kirby's proposal, the Times Herald said.

They have been lobbying members of the State Board of Education to reject the proposal, which will be formally announced at the next board meeting, the newspaper reported.

"One of the major concerns we had was what the public perception of this would be," said Richard Daly, executive director of the Texas Catholic Conference. "It has absolutely nothing to do with the quality of education in private schools in Texas. We have always maintained standards and something above them."

Daly added, "I don't think they're going to save all that much money by not accrediting private schools."

But Daly and others said they expect the proposal to meet with the board's approval.

"My impression is that they're indeed eager to see this happen and it will be a very strong proposal to the state board," said Robert Tobin, president of the Texas Association of Non-Public Schools and headmaster of All Saints Episcopal School in Lubbock.

Tobin said his 300-member organization will not take a position on Kirby's position until next month. But, like Daly, he complained that private schools need more time to come up with their own accreditation processes.

"We would like to have three years," Daly said. "We don't maintain a problem in maintaining standards but in putting alternatives into place."

Ms. Bergin said the education agency might consider extending the accreditation of private schools for three years, but would not make any more monitoring visits to them or accredit any new schools.

"We do not want to put any of the schools that are currently accredited in any kind of jeopardy," she said. "We don't want to say, 'Hey, tomorrow you aren't accredited any more.'"

Senate approves two hazardous waste bills

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate has approved two bills to deal with what has been a major environmental issue for the past decade — the disposal of hazardous waste.

"For the first time, Texas will have taken a comprehensive approach to hazardous waste," bill sponsor Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, said after senators added several amendments to both proposals and sent them to the House.

Hazardous wastes include sulfuric and hydrochloric acid, pesticide residues, degreasing agents and dry-cleaning fluids. Approximately 85 percent of hazardous wastes are generated by petroleum refineries and the chemical industry.

Farabee said there are 250 hazardous waste dumps in Texas that need "remedial work," and 10 of the dumps are listed on the federal government's priority clean-up list.

Farabee's proposals would establish two hazardous waste funds, set up a council to coordinate waste regulations among state agencies, allow the recovery of clean-up costs and provide for more frequent inspections of dump sites.

Preferred methods of waste management would be spelled out, including reuse, recycling and treatment to destroy hazardous elements. Land disposal would be the least favored disposal method.

Fees levied on generation and waste disposal facilities would go for enforcement and the clean-up of dump sites.

Debate on the amendments focused on proposals to fund a hazardous waste research center at Lamar University in Beaumont and to allow the Texas Department of Water Resources to consider salt domes as disposal sites under certain circumstances.

Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, said the bill should prohibit wells from injecting hazardous wastes into salt domes. "When you've got a fault (in the dome), you don't want hazardous waste going down there," said Caperton.

Farabee responded, "You may never find a salt dome without a fault." He added that disposing of wastes in domes could turn out to be the safest disposal method.

Caperton's motion to table the amendment failed 8-22, and it was approved on voice vote.

Over Farabee's objection, Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, added an amendment to funnel $1.5 million in hazardous waste fees to fund a center to research possible alternatives for disposing of wastes.

Lamar regent chairman Lloyd Hayes, Port Arthur, said the amendment would promote the school "as the leader in the field of hazardous waste research."

Farabee said Parker's amendment could "jeopardize this package" when it goes back to the House. "When it comes to dollars, the cupboard is bare," said Farabee.

Farabee tried to table the amendment but the motion failed 14-17, and Parker's amendment was approved on voice vote.

Sen. Hugh Farmer, D-Fort Worth, won approval of amendment, 18-12, that would set aside an additional $500,000 to enforce hazardous waste regulations.

Holiday to honor Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Senate voted Thursday to designate the third Monday in January as a state holiday to observe the birthday of the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

The holiday will combine King's birthday with Confederate Heroes Day, which had been observed on Jan. 19.

The King proposal was sponsored by Sen. Craig Washington, D-Houston, the only black in the 31-member Senate. The House-approved bill was returned to the House on a 30-1 vote.

Washington's bill also would eliminate Columbus Day, which Washington said also happened to be his birthday, and Election Day as holidays. The bill specifies, however, that state employees shall be given adequate time off to vote.

Austin Sen. Gonzalo Barrientos, whose district includes approximately 45,000 state employees, asked Washington why he was taking away two holidays.

"It's not what I would love to have, but it's a reasonable, viable alternative," Washington replied.

Class 5A baseball playoffs may resume

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ AP Sports Writer

ORANGE, Texas (AP) — The state Class 5A baseball playoffs can resume, according to one state district judge, but the court fight over the state's controversial "no-pass, no-play" rule headed for the state Supreme Court today.

State District Judge David Dunn of Orange on Thursday ordered the University Interscholastic League to resume the playoffs, delayed by a court order since May 15, and further ordered that the playoffs must include West Orange Stark.

Dunn said the rule that prohibits a student from participation in extracurricular activities if he or she is failing any subjects, is constitutional and ordered the UIL to enforce the law.

Dunn's ruling on the constitutionality of the state statute conflicts with a ruling in Houston by State District Judge Marsha Anthony, who ordered seven Houston area school districts, including Aldine, not to enforce the statute.

Last Friday, Ms. Anthony said the "no-pass, no-play" rule, part of last summer's educational reform package that was made effective earlier this year by the State Board of Education, was unconstitutional but did not sign her order until late Thursday.

After obtaining Dunn's order Thursday resuming the playoffs, Assistant State Attorney General Kevin O'Hanlon said he would take Judge Anthony's order directly to the state Supreme Court today to seek a resolution to the conflict.

Ms. Anthony had ordered the Aldine school district not to enforce the "no-pass, no-play" rule, allowing them to use two ineligible players in their series against West Orange Stark.

But Mrs. Bennie Dallas, the mother of a West Orange Stark player, obtained a temporary restraining order from Dunn, halting all Class 5A action until the matter was settled.

Mrs. Dallas was angered because her son Johnny, had been ineligible for a six-week period but abided by the law. She went to court after seeing Aldine use the ineligible players in defeating West Orange Stark.

"They (Aldine) were almost flaunting it, I thought," Mrs. Dallas said. "It was like they were determined to use those players. I just felt somebody had to do something."

Jerry Pennington, representing Mrs. Dallas, told Judge Dunn "Johnny Dallas brought his grades up and that's to his benefit. But what I think should be on the court's mind is what will the other Johnny Dallas' do in the future if the law is not upheld?"

Connie Ode, attorney for the UIL, said the UIL had ordered Aldine to forfeit its playoff game against West Orange Stark prior to being served with a temporary restraining order telling the league not to enforce "no-pass, no-play."

Ode said since the UIL had already forfeited Aldine, the restraining order could not be applied retroactively.

UIL Director Bailey Marshall said he would begin notifying the 31 teams still participating in the Class 5A playoffs to complete their second round series by Saturday.

Marshall said he'd then try to get the 16 remaining teams to hold regional tournaments and get at least one game in by next Wednesday.

Marshall said he hoped to have the four regional finalists determined in time for the state tournament June 6-7.

Ms. Anthony said Thursday after signing her seven-page order that she was unaware of the ruling made about one hour earlier by Dunn.

"I wasn't aware of anything that Judge Dunn had done. I think that what Judge Dunn does is Judge Dunn's business," said Ms. Anthony, a former teacher.

Patrick Wiseman, chief of state and county affairs for Attorney General Jim Mattox, said he hoped the state Supreme Court would rule on an appeal of Ms. Anthony's order by this afternoon.

Wiseman said the contradiction of the two judges' rulings is "somewhat unusual."

"But they are courts of equal jurisdiction and there is nothing to preclude two courts from giving conflicting orders," Wiseman said.

According to Ms. Anthony's order, "extracurricular activities are valuable educational activities" and the no-pass, no-play rule deprives the plaintiff students of "their participation of the varied extracurricular activities, the freedom of association with their peers, personal and family privacy and the right of private family discipline."

Triathlon set in Lubbock

A triathlon, the Hub City Triathlon, has been scheduled on June 23 in Lubbock by Texas Tech University and the Lubbock Parks and Recreation Department.

The competition will include courses in swimming, cycling and running that tests each participant's fitness and endurance.

Action begins at 8:30 a.m. with a 900-meter swim at the Texas Tech Aquatic Center. The cycling course, 22 miles in length, will be the next part of the triathlon.

The cycling course will run through the northwest part of Lubbock.

The last part of the triathlon will be a five-mile run around the Texas Tech campus.

All participants will receive certificates and T-shirts. Athletes entering the triathlon must be at least 17 years old by the day of the competition.

Entries will be limited to the first 150 applicants, and will be taken on a first-come, first-serve basis. The entry deadline is June 14, and the entry fee is $12.50.

To enter the Hub City triathlon, send entries to the Recreation Sports Office, Texas Tech Student Recreation Center, Texas Tech University, Lubbock, TX, 79049, or the Lubbock Parks and Recreation Department, 1010 Ninth Street, Lubbock, TX, 79049.

Grand slam homer, 2 singles, stolen base

Ward powers Rangers past Red Sox, 7-6

By JONATHAN VITTI
Associated Press Writer
Gary Ward put on a show Thursday night with a grand slam, two singles, a walk and a stolen base to lead the Texas Rangers to a 7-6 win over the Boston Red Sox.
Ward also threw out the potential go-ahead run at the plate from left field in the top of the ninth inning.
“(Gary) did everything we asked of him tonight,” said Ranger manager Bobby Valentine. “We asked him to make a throw, and he did. We asked him to hit, and he did. We asked him to steal, and he did. He's an outstanding ballplayer.”

The Rangers scored the winning run on four walks in the ninth inning. After Cliff Johnson started the inning by popping out, Boston reliever Mark Clear, 1-1, walked Ward. Ward stole second and the Red Sox intentionally walked Larry Parrish.

Bob Ojeda relieved Clear and got Pete O'Brien on a long fly ball to right, but Ward and Parrish tagged and moved up. Ojeda then intentionally walked Glenn Brummer, bringing up Curtis Wilkerson, who walked on four straight pitches to pick up his first game-winning RBI of the season.

“I'll take them all,” Wilkerson said. “A walk or a single, both of them count. Either way, that was the game-winning ribbie.”

The run made a winner of Dave Rozema, 2-2, who pitched the last three innings in relief of starter Burt Hooton.

The Red Sox took a two-run lead in the first inning on a single by Wade Boggs, a double by Dwight Evans, a passed ball and a sacrifice fly. Ward then started his show with a grand slam in the bottom of the first to give Texas a 4-2 lead.

With Toby Harrah, Buddy Bell and Cliff Johnson aboard, the right-hand hitting Ward went the opposite way with a homer over the rightfield fence.

“The pitch I hit was a fastball up and away,” Ward said. “He had thrown me three fastballs that I had good swings on but fouled back and the fourth one I got pretty good.”

Boston added a run in the third on a single by Jackie Gutierrez and Evans' run-scoring double into the gap in right center, but Texas answered with a run in the bottom of the inning on a walk to Johnson and singles by Ward and O'Brien.

The Rangers took a 6-3 lead in the fourth when Bell doubled in Harrah.

But the Red Sox tied the game with three runs in the seventh. Mike Easler and Rich Gedman led off with singles, forcing Valentine to bring in Rozema to relieve Hooton. Marty Barrett greeted Rozema with a double to score Easler, and Gutierrez grounded out to second, scoring Gedman. Boggs then singled to left, scoring Barrett with the tying run.

The Red Sox had a chance to take the lead when they got Barrett to third with one out in the ninth. Boggs hit a fly ball to left, and Barrett tagged up. Ward made the catch and threw to Brummer, who was applied the tag while guarding the plate.

“All I thought about was letting the ball go and I hoped it would get there in time,” Ward said. “I know that Brummer likes to take a hit and that he would stay there in front of the plate.”

Mariners 5, Yankees 4

Phelps slugged his first major-league grand slam, turning a 3-1 deficit in the bottom of the third into a 5-3 lead. Phelps is 7-for-34 in 1985 with five home runs. Last season, he hit a home run every 12.1 at bats — 24 homers in 290 at-bats.

Phelps hit an 0-2 fastball from Phil Niekro.

“I got ahead of him and I screwed up. There's no excuse for it,” said the 46-year-old knuckleballer. “It was a waste pitch. I just tried to get it out there and didn't.”

“His knuckleball's near impossible to hit,” said Phelps. “You've just got to hope to get something straight to swing at.”

Phil Bradley struck a solo shot for the Mariners. Don Baylor hit two for New York and Don Mattingly added another.

Blue Jays 6, Indians 5

George Bell cracked a two-run homer to highlight a four-run sixth inning as Willie Upshaw lined a two-run single in the ninth to give Toronto a fourth straight victory. Dennis Lamp, 3-0, retired the only batter he faced for the victory.

Toronto trailed 5-4 entering the ninth. Lloyd Moseby and Bell led off with singles to put runners at first and third against Tom Waddell, 1-3. Moseby was thrown out at the plate on Jesse Barfield's grounder to third. Bryan Clark relieved Waddell and, after a groundout moved the runners up, Upshaw lined a shot through the box.

A's 4, Orioles 2

Dave Kingman's two-out single in the sixth inning scored Mike Davis from second base, breaking a 2-2 tie.

Tim Birtsas worked six innings in his first major-league start for his first victory. He allowed five hits and both runs. Jay Howell closed out the game to earn his 10th save, most in the AL.

“He looked to me like he's been up here a long time,” A's Manager Jackie Moore said. Birtsas, one of the pitching prospects acquired from the New York Yankees in the Rickey Henderson deal, was promoted from the minor leagues on May 2 and used three times in relief, allowing no runs in six innings before getting his initial start.

By baseball players union

Strike authorization is sought

By JAMES LITKE AP Sports Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — With one eye on baseball's future and another on the strike of 1981, the players union is out to strengthen its bargaining hand by seeking strike authorization from its members.

Meanwhile, a federal judge has ruled that broadcast rights belong exclusively to team owners and that any share players get from television revenues must come under contract negotiations. Players have sought one-third of such revenues.

In a 21-page summary judgment issued Thursday, U.S. District Judge Charles P. Kocoras ruled that “clubs own the copyright of the game telecast, which necessarily incorporates the pictures and performances of the players.”

But the overriding issue is the possibility of baseball's second in-season strike.

“I feel satisfied that the players will back us and come to the same decision we made after they've been informed,” said Kent Tekulve, a Philadelphia Phillies relief pitcher and a member of the union's executive board, who on Thursday authorized the strike vote.

Don Fehr, acting executive director of the Major League Players Association, said no strike deadline had been imposed “because we want to get input from all the players.”

Fehr said he would conduct sessions with all 26 teams beginning today in Chicago, and estimated it would take him two weeks to complete the briefings.

He said no strike would be called before July 1, but made it clear in a point-by-point denunciation of the owners' latest proposal that the union felt the negotiations were approaching a crucial stage.

Fehr warned the owners the authorization vote “was the consequence of their continuing the same type of posture” they had shown since negotiations began last November.

“It's unfortunate, but some of us have been through this before,” Fehr said, referring to the strike of 1981 that shut down the game for 50 days. “We have a terrible feeling we've seen all this before. But it seems that nothing else matters (to the owners) unless deadlines are set.”

Ann Landers Bank money

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We are a couple of old-age pensioners in a now situation, unless you can figure a way out.

Our only daughter married a very successful businessman. She worked for nine years after she married and banked all her money. She said she would quit after she had a baby.

Now she has two babies under four years of age and wants to return to work. She hates staying home with her kids. She asked Dad and me if we would look after the tots until she could find a suitable nanny.

Now she claims the little ones love us so, she doesn't want a nanny. She pays us $50 a week to watch the two, says we don't need the money and has suggested we bank it for their education.

She claims we are lucky to have the grandchildren, that everyone envies us and it's a real honor that she trusts us.

We have a choice: Either to start raising her family or she'll take the children and we won't see them again. Her husband's family can't take them because they travel a lot. To punish them she hardly ever lets them visit the youngsters.

We love these kids, but 10 hours a day is a long stretch. My doctor told me, "It's up to you to decide." We don't want to see the little ones hurt, but our daughter says they will be if we don't take them while she works. She claims no outsiders could take our place.—THE OLD GRAY HEADS

DEAR HEADS: If you can hang in there for a while longer, until the kids are ready for nursery school, it would be a terrific break for them. Meanwhile, bank the $50 a week for a vacation for yourselves. You deserve it.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I hope you won't think this too corny to print. When I first read it (it arrived anonymously), it sounded like Little Goody Two-shoes.

The second time I read it, it came through as down-to-earth, practical advice. Please print it.—TEXARKANA

DEAR TEX: Right you are. Often the simple things are the best. I like it. Here it is:

TEN COMMANDMENTS OF HUMAN RELATIONS

1. Speak to people. There is nothing so nice as a cheerful word of greeting.
2. Smile at people. It takes 72 muscles to frown, only 14 to smile.
3. Call people by name. The sweetest music to anyone's ears is the sound of his own name.
4. Be friendly and helpful. If you want friends, you must be one.
5. Be cordial. Speak and act as if everything you do is a joy to you.
6. Be genuinely interested in people. You can like almost everybody if you try.
7. Be generous with praise and cautious with criticism.
8. Be considerate with the feelings of others. There are usually three sides to a controversy: Yours, the other fellow's and the right side.
9. Be eager to lend a helping hand. Often it is appreciated more than you know. What counts most in life is what we do for others.
10. Add to this a good sense of humor, a huge dose of patience and a dash of humility. This combination will open many doors and the rewards will be enormous.

Teaching your kids about the facts of life can be easy or awkward. Ann Landers' booklet, "How, What, and When to Tell Your Child About Sex" can spell the difference. Send 50 cents along with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request, to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Pioneer Study Club has final meeting

Members of Pioneer Study Club met recently for their final luncheon in the home of Mary Panciera. Serving as co-hostesses were Mabel Heard and Bessie Hill.

Heard gave the invocation and Pledge of Allegiance was led by Hill. Leatrus Clark gave the Salute to the Texas Flag.

The program for the meeting, entitled "Resume of What We Should Remember about the General Federation of Women's Clubs" was given by Billee Johnson.

She said, "Ninety-six years of achievement and service have gone into the General Federation of Women's Club. Today G.F.W.C. is an international service organization." "G.F.W.C. club women no longer make apologies for the cartoon character of the past depicted in a flowered hat, gavel in hand, carrying on the meeting with her mouth open and her mind closed," she continued.

"She has been replaced by the action packed mini-skirted, maxi-brained club woman of today. She is shown holding blueprint instead of a tea cup, and the blueprint is the mold for the 21st century," she concluded.

Gladys Miller presided over the business meeting and Hill read the minutes. Fern Ford gave the treasurer report.

Committee chairmen gave their annual reports and Clark reminded the members of their duties for Pioneer Day scheduled Saturday at the Bull Barn.

The meeting was adjourned by repeating club motto.

Those present included Goochie Ball, Helen Bishop, Clark, Ford, Heard, Hill, Bea Hutson, Johnson, Etoile Manning, Gladys Miller, Panciera, Eunice Petersen and Fern Sigle.

Polly's Pointers

Polly Fisher
Sugar water

DEAR POLLY — Do you have a recipe for the special nectar to be put in hummingbird feeders? We'd like to attract some of these beauties to our yard this summer and have a feeder, but don't have a source for the food. — CAROL

DEAR CAROL — That special "nectar" is simple sugar water. To attract the hummingbirds to your feeder, boil a solution of half sugar and half water until the sugar is dissolved and you have a clear syrup. Boiling the mixture helps the sugar dissolve and retards fermentation of the syrup in the feeders. Dilute this syrup with three parts cold water (giving you a one-to-four ratio of sugar to water) and fill your feeders with the diluted syrup. Store any leftover syrup in the refrigerator.

Once you've established a feeding station and the birds are coming, you can further dilute your syrup to a ratio of one-to-six. In other words, start with a mixture of, say, one-quarter cup sugar boiled with one-quarter cup water, then add three-quarters cup additional water. After the birds have been attracted, the solution can be made up as one-quarter cup sugar boiled with one-quarter cup water, then add one and one-quarter cups additional water.

If you like, you may add a few drops of red food coloring to the sugar water. This will make it easier to see the level of sugar water in your feeders so you'll know when to refill them.

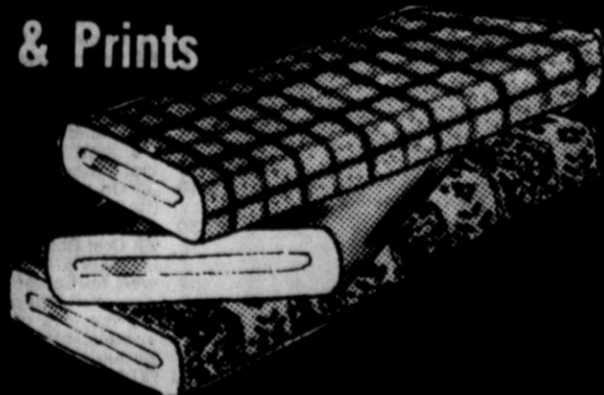

If you don't have a hummingbird feeder, you can improvise one by tying a small, narrow-necked bottle or a test tube to a tree or branch.

Sugar water will attract birds other than hummingbirds. Some orioles, catbirds, mockingbirds, warblers and yellow-bellied sapsuckers may also be attracted to your feeders. Putting out sugar-water feeders is an excellent way to attract a variety of lovely birds to your yard for the enjoyment of the entire family. — POLLY

Local Church News

CENTRO EVANGELICO CHURCH

Johnny Gonzales of Roswell, N.M. will be the guest speaker during a seminar scheduled from 9 p.m. until 3 p.m. Saturday at the church. His topic will be "Prison Life."

For Gonzales crime was his way of life and prison was the out come of his rebelliousness. He was born and raised in the Barrio of Artesia without the guidance of a father image and soon had transgressed into street survival. This consisted of drugs, alcohol, crime and violence.

He was first busted at the age of nine, sent to reform school at 13 and graduated to the state prison of Santa Fe at 13.

He is now engaged fulltime in ministry and is chaplain for prisons in New Mexico for the Full Gospel

Thyroid node needs an exam

DEAR DR. GOTT — Several years ago a doctor told me that I had a node on my thyroid gland, but he said that no treatment would be needed "unless something happened." Recently I felt some kind of enlargement in that area, and another doctor confirmed that the node still existed. Should I be concerned about this? What could happen that might require treatment?

DEAR READER — I worry about thyroid "lumps."

In a normal state, the thyroid is a symmetrical, smooth, dumbbell-shaped gland that sits just beneath the Adam's apple. The organ supplies a hormone that helps to control the body's metabolism.

On occasion, parts of the thyroid grow larger. These parts continue to produce hormone, but a lump may form. Sometimes these lumps become "hyperactive" — that is, they produce more hormone than the surrounding tissue. In these cases, the rest of the thyroid may reduce its output to compensate for the increased amount manufactured by the nodule or lump.

If a person with such a nodule is given a small dose of radioactive iodine, the chemical is carried to the thyroid gland, where it is concentrated. A few hours later, a technician can obtain a radioactive "count" of the gland. This is a type of "reverse" X-ray because, instead of the radiation passing through the body onto a film, the radioactive iodine emits energy that is captured by a counter. A "picture" of the thyroid gland is thereby produced. Ordinarily, only functioning thyroid tissue picks up the iodine; hyperfunctioning lumps pick up the most. Therefore, these nodules show up as bright spots on the counter, and are called "hot" nodules.

Like any gland, the thyroid can produce cancerous tissue. This is often in the form of lumps. However, cancer does not function normally; hence, thyroid malignancy does not produce an image on the counter. It casts a shadow, called a "cold" nodule.

Therefore, anyone with a thyroid lump should have a radioactive iodine scan. If the lump is "hot," no further treatment is usually necessary unless the person shows signs of excessive hormone. On the other hand, if the nodule is "cold," further investigation is indicated.

It's true that thyroid cysts can look like "cold" nodules. Your doctor is the best judge of whether your lump is squishy, like a cyst, or hard, like a cancer. The way the nodule feels, plus the way it shows up on the scan, will usually indicate the type of lump it is.

One final word: Years ago, doctors were enthusiastic about radiating, with X-rays, certain structures in the neck. Tonsils and thymus glands were commonly irradiated to cause shrinkage. We now know that this practice was harmful. Children who received neck radiation have a higher-than-normal incidence of thyroid cancer later in life.

I unequivocally urge any persons who had weak radiation (or X-ray treatment for facial acne) to seek medical attention. The risk of thyroid cancer is substantial in this group, and although the hazards of neck radiation have been well publicized in the medical literature, many people are still unaware that such a risk exists.

Business Men's Fellowship International. He is founder of Prison-Doors Ministries and works on the streets, the prison system and county jails.

Also, scheduled to speak are Mario Lopez, Pete Montoya and Dave Estes, all from Roswell. Other topics to be studied include "Family Relations", "Who Are We" and "Victories."

The evening worship service for Saturday will be at 7 p.m. and regular services Monday are at 10 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Graduation exercises will be held at 7:30 this evening in the fellowship hall.
