That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says tolerance is not a matter of conversation; it is the business of living.

Businesses succeed when someone attends to the small details that the average boss is too busy to fool with.

The Brand has made plans for a big St. Patrick's sale promotion, March 15-20, and participating merchants will be offering special bargains and prizes along with some "hot" items in their stores.

The "Lucky Bucks" sales event is designed to provide some money-saving merchandise items as well as create a lot of interest among our readers. Full details will be published in next Sunday's paper, March 14. Watch for this exciting promotion because you could be one of the winners of special discounts, gift certificates or free

A few issues back, we discussed the problem of "type gremlins" getting things fouled up in our newspaper. We noticed where a newspaper downstate really had problems when a typesetter decided to put in her own two-bits worth in a story.

She typed some comments in one afternoon in jest, then got ill that night and didn't go to work the next day. The lines she typed were overlooked by the proofreader and got into the paper. The result was that a classified ad under help wanted had a few choice lines reporting that a drunk and cheat would fit right in this business firm.

Wildly ringing telephones, front page apologies and an unemployed typesetter overshadowed the fact that all copies of the newspaper sold out.

Along this subject, typewritten errors can also occur in other businesses. For instance, an educator recently reported how a memo could take its course at school: Memorandum:

Economy Studies Cost $50 Million

WASHINGTON (AP) -Federal agencies spent more than $50 million in 1980 trying to predict the economy, according to a report by the General Accounting Office.

Twenty-four federal departments and agencies undertook economic forecast studies during the year, said the report, released Saturday by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas.

"I fail to understand why government agencies like the Civil Aeronautics Board, the the Department of Justice and - for that matter - the General Accounting Office have to spend tax money in all these individual efforts," the senator said.

The east dining hall of the university which Sherman served as president until January 16, 1982, can seat 700 persons and supporters hope every seat is taken as Sherman launches his first race for state-wide office. The rally begins at 7 p.m.

Sherman is expected to make a brief talk at the rally, which will also feature music and other entertainment.

MIAMI (AP) - A rash of tornadoes blasted a three-mile swath across the south side of Miami early today, injuring at least one person, ripping off part of a church roof and flinging trees into cars, Metro-Dade police

"Everything was hit - we have a report of about 1,000 cars being damaged in one complex from trees falling down on them," said Metro-Dade dispatcher Jane McClain.

National Weather Service forecasters reported a series of tornadoes hit the Perrine area of south Miami, accompanied by heavy rainfall, hail and lightning strikes. The storm system had moved out over the water by about 4 a.m., officials said.

The heavily residential area had numerous power outages, said forecasting aide Martin Nelson. One motorist was injured slightly when the car he was in was hit by a falling traffic light, said police supervisor Ella Williams. A church partly collapsed when high winds swept off part of its roof, she said.

Nelson said the system had moved northward across Miami at 15 mph.

"It seems to have cut a three-mile swath," Ms. McClain said.

The Florida Highway Patrol also reported citing a tornado moving north of Perrine, Ms. McClain said.

Comeback

The challenges were Ramirez' excess weight, and a lay off of some seven years from the sport. "He told me that I was kind of fat, and that my legs were gone some, but that he thought we could bring them back," Ramirez remembered with a laugh. "The more he talked the more I began to think that I really could make a comeback."

So, the training began; virtually in secret since Ramirez was afraid to tell his wife and mother what he was doing. "I knew that they'd throw a fit and get me to stop," he said.

But, the workouts for a 37-vear-old were much harder than for the high school student Ramirez was when he originally got into martial arts. He spent seven years earning his black belt, interspersing workouts with studies and playing football as well.

"I played for Amarillo High under Bum Phillips,' he revealed. "I was a 245-pound halfback on a team which had guards that weighed only 170 or 180," he laughed. Ramirez was good enough to be picked second team All-State and he went to Texas A&M on a football scholarship.

But, the Vietnam war intervened, and he enlisted in the Marine Corps. After a stint as a Leatherneck, he entered law enforcement. "Martial arts today isn't like it was back when I got started," Ramirez said. "Today most of the competitors are doing it for money. Back when I began there was a lot more ritual and respect involved." Besides the need to shed some weight and get back into shape, Ramirez had a more selfish reason to get back into martial arts. He had never won a gold buckle, a symbol worn by a participant who has demonstrated himself as a credit to the sport. "I really wanted to win that buckle," he said. "And I knew that I had to defeat five opponents to get one."

The road to recognition didn't include any feasts of jelly doughnuts. It was a near cruel regimine of self-denial and discipline. "When I first began working out seriously I went down to the track and ran two laps at full speed," Ramirez said. "I nearly died." The training also included a program of visits to a diet consultant. "The hardest part was to discipline myself to get out in the cold mornings and at night and run," he said. Finally, the day of reckoning came when Rice called few kicks later that day his opponent lay on the canvas, Ramirez one Tuesday and asked him if he was ready. "I and the gold buckle was told him sure, bring them awaited them. When they arrived at Clovis, Ramirez was stunned by the vouthfulness of the other competitors, "When I walked in there it looked like a kindergarten class," he said. "And, the other guys started calling me Granddad, and asking me where my rocking chair was."

His opponent was especially impressive. "He was the biggest Chinaman I'd ever seen," Ramirez said. "He never went through the customary rituals before the match, he just kept giving me the old evil eve."

Depending mainly upon his boxing skills, Ramirez managed to keep from going down in the match, but found himself behind on points as the third, and final, round began.

"I was dead tired, and I promised myself that if I lived through the match I'd never eat another jelly doughnut as long as I lived," he said.

The match finally ended when his opponent went high for a kick and Ramirez grabbed his leg. "He went real high and I grabbed him, but I slipped as I turned and we both fell," he explained. Ramirez managed to roll over and stand up, struggling back to his corner. "I thought the buzzer had sounded and saved him, but Garland's wife told me that the referee had counted him out," he ad-

New books available this week feature novels of adventure and suspense. Robin Cook, author of "Brain" and "Coma," heads the list of new books with "Fever." When medical catastrophe strikes the family of physician Charles Martel for the second time, the doctor turned researcher takes it upon himself to save his daughter Michelle's life.

Dr. Martel is trapped by a medical-industrial system insisting on treatments he knows to be futile. Charles fights to track down the source of Michelle's disease and then to cure it.

What Charles Martel finds in his quest for a cause and a cure will' threaten every aspect of his life. "Fever" is both a heart-pounding novel of suspense and a work of serious and vital speculation.

Winston Graham, the author of the "Poldark Saga," continues the family saga with "The Stranger

From The Sea." Tales of ambition and romance interwine with a narrative of England's political confusion in 1810. Ross Poldark must journey to London, while in Cornwall the lives of his children, Jeremy and Clowance, and profoundly changed by the arrival of a handsome newcomer to their shores.

"The Stranger From The Sea" promises to keep Poldark fans in speculation and high suspense.

Cruel Cuts?

Critics of President Reagan's budget cuts are claiming that further reductions in social programs are "cruel and unbearable" and that the prospective deficit is impossible to en-

One thing most of the critics choose to overlook is where the cuts start from and how they compare with just a few years ago.

The food stamp program is a case in point. Left unchecked, food stamps would have cost taxpayers an estimated $11.4 billion next year. Reagan's budget cuts this to $10.3 billion, according to figures we've seen.

When the program was launched in 1965, it cost $36 million. As people learned how easy it was to get food from Uncle Sam, the total jumped to $577 million in five years. By another five years, in 1975, the program cost a whopping $4.7 billion. In 1980, the figure was $9 billion.

Is a reduction to $10.3 billion a cruel and inhuman slashing of food for the poor?

In 1978, Social Security and Medicare came to $103.9 billion. The president's 1983 budget would call for $209.6 billion. An elderly couple retiring next year could receive $15,700 in taxfree benefits. We don't call this cruel and unbearable treatment.

How about housing outlays? In 1977 Uncle Sam shelled out $3 billion in housing subsidies, supposedly for the poor. Five years later the president recommends holding this to $8.9 billion. How can this be labeled as cruel treatment of the poor?

The hue and cry from liberal do-gooders, who think they know best how we spend our money, has strong support from the long line of folks at Uncle Sam's subsidy window. That tells us a lot about how American attitudes have changed in a few short years.

There was a time, for instance, when Americans got by without subsidizing 95 million meals a day in public schools. Many school children carried their lunches in a paper sack or lunch pail and they managed to grow up healthy . . many of them without knowing they were poor.

These changes in attitudes started long before Reagan, so we can't lay all the blame on "Reaganomies." We need to return to the emphasis on self-reliance and fiscal responsibility.

It may need to start with changing our attitude on what Uncle Sam should be giving us and what we should be giving Uncle Sam:

Voters probably know as little about the office of Land Commissioner of Texas as any statewide post, but it is of vital concern to

The constitutional office of Commissioner of the General Land Office is one of major responsibility because it administers all the land in Texas' public domain. Those holdings last year produced some $600 million in state revenues for the Permanent School Fund, which now exceeds $3 billion.

Also, the Land Commissioner traditionally serves as chairman of the board for lease of University Lands, responsible for the Permanent University Fund. Every taxpayer in Texas has a stake in these funds because every dollar earned and used to benefit the schools is one less dollar that must be raised by taxation.

With these important factors in mind, voters should elect a Land Commissioner with proven experience, honesty and a desire to maintain the integrity of the funds and enhance

Our choice for the position is Pete Snelson of Midland, presiding dean of the Texas Senate, chairman of the Senate Education committee and a member of the Finance committee, inter-governmental relations committee and Legislative Budget Board.

Each of these positions, along with experience as a state representative and experience in the education and business world, provide Snelson with top qualifications for the

We know Snelson, personally, and invite voters to examine his record of public service. Texas Monthly magazine this year selected him as one of the 10 best legislators. He was cited for his "openess, honesty and no hidden agenda" approach to his senatorial duties.

A Midland Democrat, Snelson is not a "flashy" politician, but he is a devotee of Grover Cleveland's maxim that honor lies in honest toil.

We heartily endorse Snelson for election as the next Land Commissioner of Texas.

CONFESSIONS OF A SMART ALEC

The problem with youth is that it is wasted on the young. I could use a little of it about now. I have about enough energy to yawn.

Where is all the energy I wasted sitting on main street till all hours of the night? When I had energy, I had no ambition. Now that I have ambition, I wear myself out shaving.

My education was a search and destroy mission. The teacher searched in vain for a glimmer of intelligence while I destroyed all hope of ever finding it. Then it was cute, now it is

I thought math was a drag. My high school principal gave me a course in geometry so I could graduate. I thought it was because he liked me. Now, I find it was to avoid a general strike by the teachers if I came back. That was great fun then. Now that I am a grown man and still counting on my fingers, somehow, it ain't funny anymore.

English was a drag. My theory was that as long as you could talk well enough to borrow five from a friend, you had about all the English anyone could need. How was I to know talking would one day see me speaking on college campuses?

You have not lived until you stand on some hallowed ground like Harvard and dangle your participles. When professors can't hear you because they are gnashing their teeth, it gets sort of embarrassing. It ain't much fun having grammar that causes people to break out in hives.

I took typing. Now that was an experience! When would I ever use a typewriter? I had no idea what I was going to be if I grew up but I knew being a secretary was not a considera-

Toward the end of the year my friend, Billy Bob Bruster, and I had not turned in a single typing assignment. The afternoon before the final deadline, which was the following morning, we pulled the smartest move in the history of high school education.

When school was out that afternoon we walked the halls kidnapping girls. Each one we grabbed was carried screaming into the typing room. Our ransom demands were simple. When our typing assignments were finished they could go home.

The next morning we presented a full year's typing to a teacher who sat there in a slackedjawed amazement. That was great fun!

How was I to know I would spend my life with cramps in my hands from writing four books, a weekly newspaper column, twenty articles for magazines, and three sermons a week...all in longhand.

How was I to know my handwriting would be so bad people would try to get prescriptions filled with it?

learn to type...I have tried the touch system with no success. I am now using the old hunt, peck & cuss method. A few moments ago I threw the typewriter out the front door and walked the streets looking for some girls to kidnap. I nearly got arrested. I guess hand cramps aren't so bad.

President Reagan's Blind Spot

We used to identify military men with saber-rattling militancy.

arguments Political against a military man in the White House always began with the allegation: "He'll lead us into war!"

History says it does not work that way, that the leader with little or no personal military experience is more likely to be seduced by march music.

Does President Reagan have a blind spot?

It took a former military captain, Truman, to blow the whistle on World War II. It took a military man,

Guest Editorial

Eisenhower, to disengage us in Korea.

Nobody more than the archtypical military man, Douglas MacArthur, cautioned us to avoid land war in Asia.

Military men, per se, do not thirst for blood.

Conversely, it is the civilian-oriented leader who can be enamored with the pomp, power and pride represented by gun-thunder. George Gallup's pollsters hear the same thing I hear, coast to coast. Americans generally are supportive of President

Reagan's federalism, believing central government more wasteful and local government more responsive.

Americans generally are supportive of Reaganomics. I've been recently in enormous gatherings of home builders, car dealers and Nobody has been pinched more hurtfully by tight money than these--home builders, car dealers and farmers. They live on borrowed money. Sky-high interest rates threaten them with suffocation.

Yet, in every such meeting I hear almost unanimous support for Reaganomics.

"We know what he is trying to do and it needs to be done. It hurts like everything but let's give him a chance."

But then we come to subject of foreign affairs and I hear next-to-no support for our President's willingness to throw American dollars to El Salvador. And never, whatever State Secretary Haig says, never ever to send American troops into that unworthy bloodbath!

The Communists, reaching out, grow weaker--not stronger.

If somebody is going to bleed to death, better them

Restoration of Responsibility

Ronald Reagan has initiated the restoration of individual responsibility in America. Anyone who questions the superiority of individual control over Big Brotherism might profit from a session with Milton Morris, the founder and administrator of the Opportunity Plan Inc.

As is usually the case in individual transactions, Mr. Morris does not hand our money with no strings attached. Before he puts a student on the Opportunity Plan, he requires a realistic budget-with a monthly accounting.

And to Mr. Morris, a realistic budget covers food, shelter, books, tuition, a minimum of clothing, and other necessities. (Cigarettes, movies, etc. are not necessities). Morris also requires his students to work and make payments on their loans while in school. There are students who liquidate their loans by graduation-thanks to the guidance and support they receive.

In spite of the fact that Mr. Morris often finances students who are such poor risks no one else will even consider them, he says his delinquency rate is only about 3 percent. And those losses result from extreme hardship cases where the students become physically or mentally ill. And you can be sure Mr. Morris knows the students, and verifies the exact state of their health.

If the Reagan Administration forces the states to assume responsibility for their citizens, perhaps it will not be long until the states manage to get their citizens to assume responsibility for themselves.

We who remember what America was like before Big Brother took charge know that we were allowed to keep most of our own money. And we did not live under the pressures that are driving us mad today.

What about little children, old people, and the poor? Little children were cared for by their parents, old people by their children, and the poor worked for a living. Children without parents, parents without children, and the helpless poor were supported by relatives - and county officials were difficult to defraud.

How did the workers manage? They did it on a much smaller percent of their income than they now send to Washington. They only had to support themselves and the helpless; they didn't have to support an army of

No matter who hands out the money, working people are still its source. And the closer to home it is administered, the lower the cost of administration. All our President is trying to do is cut out the expensive

It's My Turn

U.S. Rep. Kent Hance has released the results of a questionnaire he mailed out to constituents in the 19th Congressional District recently. Hance reports that 32,000 residents of the district responded to the list of questions

Hance has indicated that he will use the results to help him formulate legislative policy during the remainder of the 97th Con-

Some of the results are quite interesting. For instance, 65.8 percent of the respondents said they felt that the federal budget should be balanced before taxes are cut, while 32.2 percent felt the opposite, and two percent had no opinion. The closest question was one concerning control of the sale of handguns as long as rifles are specifically excluded from the law. Of the respondents, 56.7 percent rejected such an act, while 43.3 percent thought it was a good idea. To a question as to what action the United States should take in the event that the Soviet Union invades Poland or another Eastern European country, 34.8 percent said the U.S. should reduce or eliminate relations with Russia, 28.4 percent felt the U.S. should end diplomatic relations with the Russia, and 13.2 percent said the U.S. should send troops to protest the action, while 6.4 percent felt the U.S. should take no action at all.

On the economic front, 63.3 percent felt that proposed cuts in federal spending are fair and even-handed, while 28.2 percent felt they favor some groups more than others, and 8.6 percent were undecided. And, 52.1 percent of the respondents felt that the administration's tax cut proposals are fair and even-handed, 24.1 percent felt they favor the rich, and 6.9 percent felt they favored businesses over individuals.

Finally, 72.3 percent of those answering the questions were more optimistic about the future of America as compared to a year ago, while 16.3 percent were about the same, and 9.1 percent were less optimistic. We're not sure how many of the U.S. Representatives mailed out similiar questionnaires, but we feel that this is another example of Hance's attempt to get the feel of those whom he represents. It's good to know that he likes to keep in touch with the voters who put him in Washington with gauges of public opinion such as the questionnaire and his famous "Town Hall Meetings."

If you received a questionnaire and mailed it back in, perhaps you can feel that you did your part in running the government of this

Bootleg Philosopher

Forgetful Politicians

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Deaf Smith County grass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek has a suggestion for forgetful politicians this week.

Dear Editor:

I understand there is a special course you can take that'll vastly improve your memory.

I have a habit of listening to politicians on television and I'm convinced nearly every one of them ought to sign up for that course. They're having too much trouble remembering this year what they said last year.

Either that, or they ought to pass a law saying that every TV tape, once shown, can not be dug up and shown again until at least 50 years hence. Like it is, some busy-body TV network is always re-running something that takes some of the fun out of being a politi-I guess the prime example of this occurred the other day, when Vice President Bush said as a candidate running for President he didn't accuse his opponent, Candidate Reagan, of advocating 'voodoo economics," Then a network dug up a tape showing him saying exactly that, in living color. Where do you sign up for that course?

I'm not singling out Mr. Bush, nearly all politicians, Democrats and Republicans, have these embarrassing memory lapses and it's clear what this country needs is more politicians with longer memories or voters with shorter ones.

Changing the subject, before I forget, I'm afraid this New Federalism idea of shifting problems from Washington to the states is in for some hard going. We've spent years sending problems we can't handle to Washington and when somebody suggests we take them back I'm afraid we'll all look the other way.

Yours faithfully,

The Consumer Alert

by Mark White Attorney General

AUSTIN-This is the coldest Texas winter in a long time and many of us in the central and southern parts of the state are late in restocking our firewood supply. If you are still purchasing this year's firewood, here are a few things to keep in mind.

The most important step to take in acquiring firewood is to select a dependable firewood dealer. If you do not already have an established source, ask around for recommendations before you decide to buy. Most consumers in the market for firewood never experience any difficulty, but some have been "burned" by a few unscrupulous dealers.

The most common complaint our office receives about firewood is that either less wood is delivered than was expected or that the price charged is more than was agreed on. The best way to get the amount of wood you want is to buy by standard measuring amounts. For examnle a "cord" of wood, the

Her later testimony helped send Jerry Joe Bird of Corpus Christi to death row at the state penitentiary. The other robber, Emmett Leroy Korges of Corpus Christi, was handed a life prison term in a separate trial.

She is not unique in having lost a loved one at the hands of a killer later sentenced to die in return.

Two women and 165 men currently are under sentence of death in Texas. Some were convicted in multiple killings and others have additional charges pending.

Unlike most surviving relatives, who can only imagine the trauma their family members suffered, Mrs. Trammell knows first hand the terrors that raced through her husband's mind before he died.

If the years have softened her pain, they have not diminished her hate. Her only regret is that Korges was spared the death sentence.

"At the time, I thought maybe he (Korges) wasn't quite as guilty. Now I feel like they should have both been burned," said the attractive blue-eyed widow, whose looks belie her age.

She married Trammell in 1947, after her first husband died in World War II.

"You wake up and your husband is gone. Your house is gone. It certainly makes you resentful." she said. "You think people like that should live to do it to somebody else? No way. If someone takes another life, especially something premeditated, I can't see any reason why they should live."

After a three-day hospital stay for exhaustion and a broken toe, Mrs. Trammell said her only thought was to catch the two men who tried to kill her.

Investigators brought her books of mugshots in hopes she would recognize her

She did. Five days after the night of death and arson, Bird and Korges were arrested in Corpus Christi.

Some of the guns were recovered. Mrs. Trammell got back only a handful of the 100 antique mustache cups she had displayed in a corner cabinet. Some friends let her move into their second home until she was ready to find a permanent home. Her daughter from Corpus Christi and a son in college came home to help her recover.

Like other crime victims, she was forced to re-live the tragedy from the witness stand in court.

She never shed tears during testimony at two trials.

"I didn't cry. I wouldn't let myself. They (the media) made a lot of that," she recounted.

The trials meant not only reconstructing the terrifying scenario but coming face-toface with Bird and Korges.

"I'm sure his (Bird's) lawyers told him to stare at me. I just stared right back at him. I didn't feel intimidated," she said.

At one point, she was asked to identify her husband's killer with a tap on the shoulder.

"I must have gone over and hit him, since my friends told me afterward I really brought my hand down. You wouldn't touch a rattlesnake, and that's what I thought about him," she said.

Bird was convicted and sentenced to death. The case was overturned on appeal.

Before Bird's retrial, Korges was found guilty and sent away for a life term.

Mrs. Trammell suffered a mild stroke after Korges' trial. Her doctor would not let her testify at Bird's second trial but prosecutors were allowed to use her statements from the original proceeding and sent Bird back to death row a second time.

"My health just about did me in. I was in good health before," she said. She blames the stroke on the harrowing experience and first two trials.

She says she leads a quiet life now, reading and visiting close friends and family. She tries to put the events out of her mind, although she says she has gotten over her initial difficulty of talking about it.

"It's incredible the way they did it. They had it all planned," she said. "My husband tried to reason with them. He told them, "Take everything, just leave us alone. Don't hurt us.""

She asked the robbers why they were taping her eyes shut

"They said, 'So the fuzz will know this is a professional job.' They had answers for everything," she said, shaking her head in disgust. "I told them at one point I had to go to the bathroom. He took the tape off my legs and let me go. He (Korges) forgot to put it back on and that helped me get away."

She said she had never felt afraid in their rather isolated homestead and often stayed there at night alone. The Trammells had moved to Harlingen in 1949 from California. He retired after a career in teaching and farm-

The long appeals process in a death sentence case irritates Mrs. Trammell.

"I think there are too many loopholes. People wear it out," she said. "If they're going to sentence somebody to something, they should do

To Enforce Meeting Law

Prosecutors Are Reluctant

AUSTIN(AP)-Prosecutors are reluctant to enforce Texas' open meetings law, leaving it "virtually meaningless," according to journalists who told legislators Friday they should beef up the law.

Two journalists representing press associations told a House Judiciary subcommittee, chaired by Rep. Tommy Adkinson (D-San Antonio), that putting more punch in the enforcement clauses of the law would better serve journalists and the public.

The panel plans to submit changes in the state's open meetings act to the 1983 Legislature.

Jerry Huff, executive editor of the Amarillo Globe-News, told the panel that violations of the law are rarely prosecuted, rendering it "virtually meaningless in its present form."

"Local prosecutors are reluctant to enforce open meetings," Huff said. "Evidence of closed meetings is difficult to obtain, case law is non-existent and prosecutors are generally unwilling to take on fellow of-

A Gregg County prosecutor who did file on county commissioners there but later dropped charges, Huff said, "summarized the incident this way at last month's Texas Press Association meeting: 'During the past year, I have had my hair pulled, my butt kicked and my budget cut.""

Huff, representing the TPA and Texas Daily Newspaper Association, said such reluctance on the part of prosecutors frequently leaves journalists trying to get the law enforced "in the awkward and unwanted role of making news instead of reporting it."

Houston Post reporter Jim Asker, representing the Gulf Coast chapter of the Society of Professional Journalists, told the panel that journaists "do not seek access to public information only for ourselves."

"We see ourselves as the front-line troops in the effort of the entire community to know what is going on in government," he said.

Asker agreed with Huff's suggestion that all sessions, including closed "executive sessions," be tape-recorded to facilitate prosecution of violators.

But Asker said most public officials "are making a conscientious effort to comply" with the law, and that most journalists "accept the notion that there are some things which must be done in closed sessions."

In a letter to the committee, Marshall News Messenger Executive Editor Rodger Cramer suggested that the term "willfully" be stricken from the "Violations and Penalties" section of the law. "Our experience has been that public bodies and boards who are inclined to deliberate public business in secret know, or at least sense, the protection afforded them in the language of the very law that prohibits such conduct,"

Cramer wrote.

Sandie Girls Defeated 55-51 in Semis

By KEN HERMAN

Associated Press Writer AUSTIN, Texas (AP) -Victoria will play for a state high school girls' basketball title today because the Houston Yates Lions couldn't turn to their big Lamb when they needed her.

Victoria, a 63-50 Friday night winner over Yates in the 5A semifinals, meets Dallas South Oak Cliff, a 55-51 semifinal victor over previously unbeaten Amarillo, for the state title to-

Today's finals also include matchup between defending 2A champ Hardin and Phillips: Hardin bombed Grapeland 62-37 Friday and Phillips edged Boyd 47-46.

Yates gave Victoria a tough time for the 13 minutes that Monica Lamb, a 6-5 junior who spent most of the game on the bench with foul trouble, was in the game. Lamb finished with 15 points on six of seven from the floor and three of four from the free throw line.

But Lamb's foul woes started early, and Victoria's sparkling Yulonda Wimbish took advantage, finishing with 28 points before she fouled out with 5:16 to play, 17 seconds after Lamb fouled

Lamb went to the bench with three fouls with 5:19 to play in the second quarter with Yates down 21-19. Victoria, sparked by the 5-10 Wimbish, then ran off a 12-2

Lamb picked up her fourth foul with 6:50 to go in the third period and again was seated.

Victoria built a 49-38 lead going into the final period, but Lamb roared back into action for the Lions. She scored the first six points of the period before fouling out with 5:33 to play and Yates down by seven.

Wimbish fouled out shortly after, but Victoria ran off 11 unanswered points to put the game away.

Today's final is a rematch Victoria's 51-49 win over South Oak Cliff earlier this

However Amarillo, behind the strong inside play of 5-11 junior Carmen Wynn, fought back and tied the game at 37 with 2:32 left in the third

SOC took the lead for good with 7:25 to play in the game when Green, a 5-7 senior, made a jump shot and added a free-throw after she was fouled to give the Golden Bears a 44-41 lead.

Silas Pro-Pels Cavs Over Portland, 111-110

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD AP Sports Writer

James Silas displayed the cool that one might expect from a 10-year pro.

"For a player to go to the foul line after a game with his team trailing the home team by one point and a full house screaming in his face, and hitting both shots - that's the mark of a real pro," Cleveland Coach Chuck Daly said after the Cavaliers beat the Portland Trail Blazers 111-110 Friday night.

It was only the 13th victory in 58 games this season for Cleveland, which has the worst record in the National Basketball Association. The Cavs are now 6-20 on the road.

Daly said Silas, who is averaging 11 points per game for Cleveland this season compared to his career average of better than 16, has been "playing very well for

SPORTS TALK: Jim Drucker

Interviewed by Howard Siner

Jim Drucker, 29, is commissioner of the Continental Basketball League, America's only nationwide minor league. He is the son of long-time NBA referee Norm Drucker. The eight-team CBA is subsidized by the NBA as a talent pool.

Where does the Continental Basketball League operate?

The CBA has eight franchises. That includes the Dusters in Lethbridge, Alberta; the Northern Knights in Anchorage, Alaska; the Hi Rollers in Atlantic City, N.J.; the Volcanos in Billings, Mont.; the Lightning in Lancaster, Pa.; the Lumberjacks in Bangor, Maine; the Golden Nuggets in Great Falls, Mont.; and the Zeniths, in Rochester, N.Y What kind of a schedule do CBA teams play?

It's a 46-game season. We started Nov. 28, about a month after the NBA. So as soon as the NBA players are cut, they come to our training camps and work out for two or three weeks. Then we start our season. Our season will end March 14, with playoffs through April 1. Isn't the CBA fairly new? How did it get started?

The league was originally the Eastern League, a small semi-pro circuit in the state of Pennsylvania. Their goals were different; they played 20 games a season. Really, all the players did it as part-time jobs. But as a result, they never sent many players to the NBA. It's only been the last four years, since 1978, that new ownership came into the league. They decided that they wanted to have a full-time professional league, which they could be proud of, number one. And which, economically, they could make money out of, number two.

So, starting in 1978, we changed our name to the Continental Basketball Association and started a national expansion campaign with the goal of developing players for the NBA.

How much does an average CBA player make? Our players make about $400 per week, not a lot. But for minor-leaguers, it's great. They get exposure to the NBA since their scouts are at, really, most of our games.

In what way does the NBA underwrite the CBA's costs each Well, literally, they write a check for a quarter of a million dollars. In return we give them the right to sign any player at any time.

We give them total control of our referee program, and we become their laboratory for rule changes. After Darryl Dawkins smashed two backboards a few years ago, the NBA came to us. Last season we tested two different styles of collapsible rims. After significant testing, the Toss Back rim was selected and evaluated as the better rim. Now this year, after our experiment last year, the NBA has adopted the Toss Back rim.

us lately, but it hadn't helped in the win column. It was sure great to have such an experienced player on the foul. line for us in such a critical situation."

In other NBA games, Philadelphia tripped Atlanta 89-80, New Jersey bombed Chicago 107-90, Phoenix beat Kansas City 110-98, Boston edged Houston 100-98, Denver trimmed Washington 127-126, Golden State nipped San Diego 117-116 in overtime and Seattle topped Dallas 98-97.

Silas, who scored 22 points, was fouled by Calvin Natt on a desperation shot at the buzzer after Cleveland got the ball with 22 seconds left. trailing 110-109.

Cleveland center James Edwards took a shot and missed, but Portland's Mike Harper and Bob Wilkerson tied up the rebound with five seconds left.

Harper, three inches taller than Wilkerson, batted the tip toward midcourt, but Silas got the ball and shot from behind the three-point line. Referee John Vanek cited Natt for a blocking foul, giving Silas the chance to win the

"This must have really hurt Portland," Daly said, referring to the fading playoff hopes of the Blazers, 30-28 "Every game is especially big for them at this point and they must have expected to get this one."

"Those games are heartwrenching," Portland Coach Jack Ramsay said. "All the little things you do poorly allow the other team to come back and haunt you. This loss makes our job a little tougher." To make the playoffs, Ramsay said, "We've got to win when we have these opportunities."

points for Cleveland before fouling out, while Mychal Thompson led the Blazers hit a three-point play with 35 with 28 points and 10 rebounds.

Sonics 98, Mavericks 97 Gus Williams scored 38 points for Seattle and hit a free throw with 30 seconds left to break a 97-97 tie. After Williams put the SuperSonics ahead, Dallas' Allan Bristow missed a shot that would have given the Mavericks the lead. After Dallas rebounded and called time out, Brad Davis missed another jumper at the buzzer.

Jack Sikma added 22 points and 17 rebounds for Seattle.

76ers 89, Hawks 80 Julius Erving scored 22 points and Bobby Jones added 20 to lead Philadelphia over Atlanta, which because of injuries had only nine players and had two foul out.

The Hawks, who trailed 83-68 with five minutes left in the game, scored 10 straight points to cut the deficit to five with three minutes left. But four points by Erving and a dunk by Jones blunted the comeback.

Nets 107, Bulls 90

Reserve guard Darwin Cook scored 13 of his 19 points in the fourth quarter when New Jersey outscored Chicago 37-14 to win its fifth straight game.

The Nets trailed by as many as 14 points in the third period and faced an 81-72 deficit early in the fourth quarter. But they outscored the Bulls 22-3 in the next 5:45 to grab a 94-84 advantage with 4:20 remaining.

Hoyas Nip St. John's, OU Upsets K. St

By JOHN NELSON ' AP orts Writers

The temperature in the Hartford Civic Center was hot enough to curl a starched

Tempers grew short and, once again, the man in the middle was Patrick Ewing, the Georgetown center.

Ewing, involved in several scuffles earlier this season, got into a shoving match that took some of the attention from the eighth-ranked Hoyas' 57-42 victory Friday night over St. John's in the semifinals of the Big East Conference tournament.

"I sort of worry about it when the guys go off the floor and they're still angry at each other," Georgetown Coach John Thompson said, "... but I noticed the players hugging afterward."

Ewing, a 7-foot freshman, was fouled under the basket by Bob Kelly of St. John's with about 13 minutes to play and the teams separated by four points, 29-25. Ewing retaliated with a shove, creating the mismatch of alltime. Kelly, a guard, is 6-2.

St. John's Coach Lou Carnasecca characterized it as "just a little bit of subway shoving."

On Georgetown's next possesion, St. John's center Jeff Allen and Georgetown guard Eric "Sleepy" Floyd pushed each other, bringing players off both benches. That incited an overture of boos, many of them directed toward Ewing, who was in the general vicinity of the fracas. Officials then called a timeout to allow both sides, and the fans, to cool off.

"Sometimes we see the kids playing a high-powered, high-pressure game, and we expect too much out of them," Thompson said.

Ewing scored 14 points and Floyd had 19 as Georgetown overcame a sluggish first half to beat the Redmen. Georgetown, 25-6 on the season, led by two at halftime, 21-19.

The victory put the Hoyas into the title game today against regular-season Big East champion Villanova, 22-6. Villanova got 21 points from Ed Pinckney and 16 more from Stewart Granger to defeat Boston College 74-71 in the other semifinal.

"I really haven't had an opportunity to think that much about Villanova," Thompson said. "My emotions can hardly take St. John's, let alone think about Villanova."

Other conference finals today will match No.5 Missouri against Oklahoma in the Big Eight; No.9 West Virginia against Pittsburgh in the Eastern Eight; No.14 Arkansas against Houston in the Southwest, and No.15 Kentucky agaist No.18 Alabama in the Southeastern.

Missouri defeated Nebraska 58-53, Oklahoma upset No.17 Kansas State 68-62, West Virginia downed St. Bonaventure 80-65, Pitt beat Rutgers 60-47, Arkansas shaded Texas Christian 80-70. Houston drubbed Texas A&M 89-76, Kentucky fought off Mississippi 62-58 and Alabama beat Tennessee 56-50.

The Pacific Coast Athletic Associated declared a winner Friday night as 12th-ranked Fresno State downed Fullerton State 69-57.

In addition, the regularseason titles of two conferences without tournaments were decided Friday night. Wyoming clinched the Western Athletic Conference crown with a 39-37 victory over Hawaii, and Penn claimed the Ivy League title with a 68-50 victory over Cornell.

The Atlantic Coast, Big Sky and Metro conferences began tournament play Friday night.

In the ACC, No.1 North Carolina clobbered Georgia Tech 55-28, third-ranked Virginia edged Clemson 56-54, No.16 Wake Forest ran by Duke 88-53 and North Carolina State downed Maryland 48-28.

Sixth-ranked defeated Weber State 57-55, and Nevada-Reno outlasted Montana 97-93 in two overtimes in the Big Sky playoffs. Idaho meets Nevada-Reno in the final of this four-team tournament today

Local Volunteers Take Part in National Braille Project

By LINDA CAUDLE - Family News Editor

"Bringing Christ to Those in Darkness." This is the motto of approximately 14,000 Lutheran Braille Workers throughout the United States and Canada who work in volunteer centers that produce more than 15 million sheets of Braille annually, including books of the Bible and a wide variety of other religious materials. Through a national network, materials used to construct Braille books are donated and distributed to volunteers in 152 centers across the nation, the volunteers make the books, and then give them away to many of the 64 million blind people throughout the world.

One of the LBW centers is located in Lariat, Texas, a small community between Muleshoe and Farwell. Six Hereford women travel to Lariat once a month to work with other ladies from Rhea and Friona, under the direction of Phyllis Schelter, the wife of the pastor of the Lutheran Church there, where they meet to construct Braille books. Local volunteers include Bertha Tiefel, Ella Stehr, Margaret Osborn, Anna Vogler, Ruth Groneman, and Ella Caudle.

There are three different groups of volunteers which meet at the church on different days of the month. Other volunteers come from Bovina, Friona, Farwell, and Clovis, N.M., as well as Lariat. Each group meets from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. and volunteers always bring a sack lunch.

This year the Lutheran Braille Workers are celebrating 38 years of Braille production. The whole idea began in 1944 in the home of Helen Lowell Koehlerin in Yukaipa, Calif., with just five volunteers. Gradually expanding, volunteers throughout the country now produce Braille and sight-saving large type print.

Braille, which is a system of transcribing for the blind utilizing dots embossed on heavy paper, was inverted in 1829 by Louis Braille (1809-52), a French teacher of the blind. It was later introduced with modifications into England and the United States and has now been revised and made uniform.

At the LBW Headquarters in Yukaipa, Calif., volunteers type the Braille materials onto zinc plates, which volunteers at the centers use to imprint the individual sheets of paper. They also prepare the initial translations, maintain mailing lists of readers and supporters, and distribute a monthly newsletter. Materials which are shipped out to the centers are donated by supporters of the LBW Corporation.

Works which are reproduced in Braille by LBW include Lutheran Hour Bible correspondence courses, Lutheran Hour sermons, Easter and Christmas devotions, books of the Bible, and such titles as "A Child's Garden of Bible Stories," "Introduction of Books of the Bible," "Wonders of the World," and "One Hundred Bible Stories."

The Lariat group is presently producing copies of the Acts of the Apostles in the Greek language. Other groups throughout the country are also producing Braille books in foreign languages, such as the Gospel of Luke in Russian Braille, the first Russian work to be done by LBW, and Cantonese Braille for the blind in 'Red China. On the national level, LBW makes Braille books in about 40 languages.

"The books are like missionaries into countries that will not allow Bibles or missionaries to come in," comment volunteers. International distribution is possible because LBW is a member of the World Council for the Welfare of the Blind, an international organization to which only five organizations from any one country may belong.

The actual process by which volunteers make Braille books begins by placing special high quality paper between zinc plates embossed with Braille "dots." This process is called stuffing. The plates are then run through a roller press, which presses the dots onto the paper. The pages are printed on both sides. When all of the pages of a particular book have been embossed, they are placed in order and prepared for binding.

Although none of the local volunteers can read Braille, they are able to check margins and page numbers, so they know if they have made a mistake in sorting. After proofing, the book is placed in a punch machine and then on a binder, which applies the spiral binding. Books are checked once more for errors, and then they are boxed and packaged for shipment to various countries around the world.

The Lariat group mails out approximately 70 books each month, which volunteers from all three sessions have completed. In their seven years of operation, this group has produced 4,000 copies of a Korean Religious Handbook and 2,000 copies of "Prayer for the World," in the English language.

Hereford LBW Volunteers

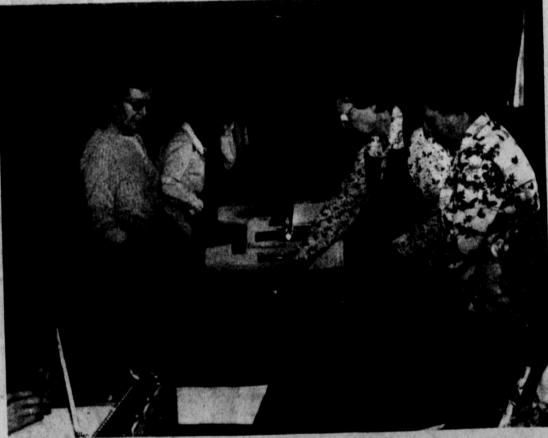

Six ladies from Hereford travel to Lariat once a month to work with four to six other Lutheran Braille Workers from Rhea, Friona, and Lariat to construct approximately 20 to 30 Braille books each session. There are three such groups which meet monthly at

Embossing Braille Pages

Ruth Groneman, left, and Ella Stehr begin the process of making a Braille book by placing the special paper between zinc plates embossed with Braille "dots." This process is called stuffing. After the paper is between the plates, the plates are run through a roller press, which imprints the dots onto the paper.

Binding the Books

The ladies shown above are removing the sheets of newly formed Braille from the zinc plates after pressing. After checking for errors and putting the pages in order to make a book, the volunteers place the stack of pages on a punch machine (lower left) which makes holes in the side and then on a binder which applies the spiral binding. The books are then ready to be mailed.

Ready for Mailing

Ruth Groneman, left, and Phyllis Schelter of Lariat, help to pack the finished Braille books in boxes and then in large heavy canvas sacks in which they will be sent to various countries around the world. Volunteers who work at Lariat, making up three different groups, mail out approximately 70 completed issues of a particular Braille book each month.

Vows Exchanged Late Saturday Afternoon

Miss Sylvia Ann Betzen and Thomas Dean Myrick, both of Chapel Hill, N.C., exchanged wedding vows in a late afternoon ceremony Saturday at St. Anthony's Catholic Church. Father Boniface Riedmann officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence A. Betzen of 406 Douglas and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray L. Myrick of Greensboro, N.C.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an ivory chiffon and Shiffle lace gown featuring a two piece high lace collared blouson jacket over a bandeau pearl embroidered lace net bodice.

Fitted cuffs of matching lace trimmed the sleeves and the softly gathered skirt was enhanced with an attached chapel length train.

Her bridal veil was fashioned of silk English illusion attached to a camelot headpiece of gypsophila and pearls. She carried a cascade of camillas, gardenias, burgundy roses, gypsophila and variegated ivy and satin

To complete her bridal ensemble, the bride wore an heirloom ruby ring which belonged to her maternal grandmother.

The bride's sister, Mrs. Dan Wegman of Dallas, was matron of honor and the bridegroom's father was best

Bridesmaids were attired in mauve pink polyester knit gowns designed with a full skirt and a bodice featuring surplice with spaghetti straps and a natural waistline. The detachable overblouse of point d'esprit had a crown collar of chantilly lace and cameo insert on the V-yoke. Chantilly lace was used to edge the yoke and it also trimmed the cuffs of the bishop sleeves. Each carried a single long stemmed pink rose tied with a white satin

Male members of the wedding party wore gray Barclay tuxedos with white formal shirts and ascot ties. Boutonniers were made of pink

The bride's mother was attired in a slipper length gown of mauve chiffon with lace bordering the neckline and cuffs. The bridegroom's mother wore a pale blue chiffon gown accented with pearl trim. Both had pink orchid corsages.

Inviting guests to register at the reception and dinner held at Hereford Country Club was Sherry Willis of Dallas.

The bride's table, which was covered with a pink overlay, was centered with a five branch silver candelabra and roses and carnations in shades of pink.

The three-tiered Italian cream cake was decorated with hand-made gum paste flowers in various shades of mauve and pink. The flowers cascaded down the sides of the cake and were also used to trim the cake top.

The cake was cut with the knife which was used by the bride's grandparents at their golden wedding anniversary and since has been used by all the brides in the family.

What this country needs is more congressional listen-ings and fewer hearings by that body, says our political listening to a grandparent, great uncle or aunt tell folklore in our families histories. Some of us have tried to identify a time and place for this lore and have found one needs more than just these remembrances.

Thus, people everywhere are causing geneological libraries to be established containing the best data available on people. Societies, associations and organizations of various purposes have been established to both preserve authentic data and to assist those wishing to glean ancestorial facts from these data.

At Wits End BY ERMA BOMBECK

The recent column on cupboards of half-empty cereal boxes drew a lot of mail.

I had no idea how much this country is in need of a Uni-Cereal...a cereal for all seasons and all ages. A cereal that tap dances in the bowl, builds a fire in your tummy on a cold morning, makes strong bones and teeth, doubles as a snack, crunches when you chew it, makes you regular and gives you premiums the entire family can enjoy.

There are no easy solutions to 30 or 40 boxes of half-empty cereal sitting around on the shelves growing stale.

There was a man from Utah who sneaked out at night and mixed all the old cereal together in one box. He had also tried it with all the old ice cream in assorted cartons, so it fooled no

There was a woman in New York who put the cereal in bowls with a note, "DON'T TOUCH - SAVING FOR BRIDGE CLUB," which worked for a couple of weeks.

But perhaps the most creative idea came from a mother in St. Louis who posted the following announcement on her refrigerator door:

ENTER MOM'S COLOSSAL CEREAL CONTEST

PRIZES! PRIZES! PRIZES!

Whoever finishes the most boxes of cereal wins. Special prizes for creative combinations of finished cereal. RULES

1. Contest open to persons of all ages.

2. Cereal may be eaten with or without milk. 3. Cereal to be finished must be in previously opened boxes (violators will be punished.)

4. All cereal poured must be consumed.

5. Proof of consumption will be required (box bottoms or notarized statements from prominent household figures). 6. Cereal may be legally consumed 24 hours a day.

7. NO ONE MAY EAT AN ENTIRE BOX OF CEREAL AT ONE MEAL. ONLY OPENED BOXES MAY BE EATEN.

We won't keep you in suspense any longer. The contest was won by her 21-year-old son, Jim, with 23 box bottoms. His prize was two tickets to the St. Louis Steamers soccer game. Jim was afraid to open a box of popcorn for fear he'd have to finish it off later.

Partnership Mortgage Plan May Help Some Home Buyers

Frustrated home buyers unable to afford high down payment of soaring interest rates may soon find relief in the ERA Partnership Mortgage Plan.

According to Marn Tyler, ERA Marn Tyler Realtors, the Partnership Mortgage Plan is designed to help home buyers purchase a home with no down payment or purchase a home with the equivalent of a lower interest rate (up to 4 percent or more) so that the home buyer can qualify for a more desirable home at reduced monthly payments. The ERA Partnership Mortgage," Tyler explained, "is based on co-ownership in which the investor shares in the cost of the home in consideration for a share of the annual tax deductions and equity appreciation, In most cases, the investor assists by making part of the monthly mortgage principal, interest, and tax payments for the first five years, which not only helps the buyer qualify but almost makes the monthly payments lower. "After the five-year period when the buyer is more likely to be able to afford the monthly payment increase, the payments go up by application of the current mortgage interest rate.

If the buyer decides to sell the property, the buyer and investor share in the appreciated value of the home, if any," she added.

"An ERA Partnership Mortgage with no down payment is also possible," Tyler said, "As the name implies, it enables a qualified home buyer to purchase a home with little or no down pay-

According to Executive Director Janie Nino, some 40 children have already been matched up, but 32 more are still on the waiting list.

Increasing numbers of children are growing up in a single parent household; nearly eight million children across the nation today live with only one parent. Their needs are often more than one individual can meet.

For nearly eight decaded, BB-BS has been concerned with helping these kids make it. Friendship, understanding and a sense of self-worth are the gains of the child.

For the organization, the reward is in knowing they've given a child a chance and maybe kept him from getting into trouble. Most volunteers maintain that they receive more benefits from the relations than they give, and that the knowledge that they are needed and the joys of the good times spent with their young friends make the experience one of the most valuable in their lives. Throughout this week, Mayor Dowell will ask men and women of Hereford if they can't spare a little time each week to make this year better for some young boy or

Watt Startles Conservationists With Big Turnaround Statement

WASHINGTON (AP) -Did the wilderness bombshell James Watt dropped on national television signal a public relations breakthrough or the beginning of the end for the controversial interior secretary?

Was that really an 180-degree turn he made on NBC's "Meet the Press" or an attempt to lull his critics with an artful lie?

Watt startled conservationists during the Sunday interview show by saying he would like to bar all drilling, mining and timber-cutting until the end of the century. Until then, Watt had been ty to issue leases on wilderness lands.

William Turnage, executive director of the Wilderness Society, called the announcement a "real victory for the American people" and a "complete tur-been hailed by the National Wildlife Federation as "The Year of the Eagle," and bald eagles in Texas appear to be responding to the 200th year of their acceptance as the national bird by making extra efforts at reproduction.

Biologists of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department already can account for 12 nesting pairs of the national bird, the greatest number recorded since the pesticide difficulties in the early 1950s.

John Smith, wildlife biologist in Rockport, has observed nesting activity in 11 sites along the mid-cost region. During aerial and ground inspections of six sites in Victoria, Goliad, Refugio and Calhoun Counties, he found four eaglets, but the nesting birds at four other sites would not leave the nests long enough for inspec-

Such insistence to stay on the nest is interpreted as a good sign that the birds either have eggs or young, he said. One nesting pair in Goliad County probably has the best parenting attitude of the group, but they have not produced young in the last four Grande Childrens Home in Another five sites in Matagorda, Brazoria and Fort Bend Counties along the Texas Coast will be inspected by air as soon as suitable weather arrives, he said.

Harry Haucke, wildlife biologist in Red River County in Northeast Texas, is awaiting suitable weather to inspect a known nesting site on the Red River. Ranch hands have reported activity around the large nest in a 100-foot tall cottonwood tree, but they haven't been able to get close because of the mud, Haucke said.

Sheep Industry Growing

LUBBOCK-The sheep and lamb industry is on the grow thanks, in part, to the Blueprint Plan for the Expansion of the Sheep Industry, a Texas Tech sheep and wool expert said.

The 10-year plan, drawn up by national lamb, sheep and wool grower organizations in 1975, was aimed at increasing this arm of livestock productions which had been declining in the United States since World War II.

Dr. B. Frank Craddock of the university's Animal Science Department is not sure if the goals of the plan are realistic for all management systems in different parts of the country. But, he is sure that lamb and sheep production, since the plan

Range production, Craddock said, is limited to the western states where large flocks of sheep roam on lands frequently owned by the federal government. Farm flocks are smaller sheep operations using relatively small, privately owned acreage. These producers do not rely exclusively on sheep

Can Cost Money able to push the rod into the until compacted soil is reach-

COLLEGE STATION - Soil compaction can act as an unseen enemy to farmers and reduce crop production. Commonly called a "hardpan," compacted soil can literally 'choke off' plant roots so that they're unable to get water on nutrients.

"Probably the most evident plant symptom of compacted soil is a shallow root system," says Dr. Ed Colburn, agonomist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. "Plant roots may be unable to penetrate a severely compacted soil and may grow horizontally, resulting in what some farmers call 'crow foot' in such crops as cotton that have a tap root."

Along with stunting plant roots, soil compaction may affect seed germination, seedling emergence and other phases of crop growth and production, says Coi-

Poor stands, poor plant growth, discolored plant leaves and premature wilting may signal problems due to compacted soil, notes the agronomist. However, many of these same symptoms can also be due to dry weather, nutrient deficiencies and other factors.

Excessive soil compaction also reduces water penetration and increases run-off and soil erosion," adds Colburn. "Water standing in a field may signal a soil compaction problem since water infiltration is slowin a hardpan area.

The best way to identify a hardpan is to dig a hole at leastthree feet deep and look for crop roots in the subsoil," explains Colburn. "If roots have penetrated the subsoil, then he next crop should also able to move to that

A farmer can also use a sharp rod or soil probe to check for hardpans, says the agronomist. You should be

was implemented, has increased.

"Farm flock production in states such as Illinois and Iowa has been growing. These operations with maybe 50-100 sheep do not have the labor and grazing rights problem that the range people do. They do have the predator problems, however," he said.

Soil Compaction soil at a fairly constant rate

What causes soil compac-

ed. The average person will have trouble pushing the rod through a hardpan.

"Some soils are naturally compact, especially subsoil material," explains Colburn. "Excessive tillage, which reduces the size of soil granules, and tillage or other field operations when soil is wet are two major causes of soil compaction.'

In fact, any machinery operation results in soil compaction, notes the agronomist, whether it's planting, cultivating, fertilizing or harvesting.

"Farmers should limit the use of heavy equipment and the number of tillage operations to those required to keep soil productive," recommends Colburn. "Avoid tillage if it does not improve soil physical conditions, promote water infiltration and aeration, help weed control, incorporate crop residues into the soil, prepare a seedbed, or help control wind and water erosion."

for income while rangeland producers do.

"It's hard to find competent people who are willing to herd sheep on rangeland. It is a rough life and the pay is not good," Craddock said. "I believe an incentive program should be developed in this region to attract better help."

Craddock said rangeland sheep producers could offer hired help a percentage of the lamb crop over a defined level. Because many ewes do have multiple and even triplet births, better and more competent help could be hired knowing there were benifits.

"The use of public lands for grazing is a major problem to many range producers," he said. "Range people do rely on the grazing rights on public lands and there are more and more restrictions being put on the grazing."

Craddock hopes the new federal administration will be more sympathic to rangeland sheep producers.

"Predator control is going to continue to be a problem until we get some of the chemicals, outlawed during President Nixon's administration, back in use," Craddock said.

"Predators aren't only killing sheep and goats but also cattle. Coyotes, I've heard, are even preying on people in some cities. Maybe when this gets to be an even bigger problem the ban on chemicals will be lifted," he said.

"Even with the increased number of sheep we are still having to import lamb for human consumption," Craddock said.

A popular ethnic food on the east and west coast, lamb is not available in all parts of the country.

Craddock said industry organizations must promote lamb to make up for the damaged reputation the meat suffered during the war

But one sheep product which does not need promotion is wool, which is gaining popularity on its own merits, he noted.

"People are having to turn their thermostats down and are putting on more clothing to keep warm," Craddock said. "Wool can hold a lot of moisture and still the fibers themselves remain warm." Improvements in the treatment of wool have cut down its tendency to wrinkle. Some wools today can also by machine washed, without shrinking, and do not need dry cleaning.

"The use of synthetics has decreased as their price. because of the oil from which they are made, has increased. Wool is now competitive in price with these synthetics," Craddock said.

"Management, specifically in the area of breeding the animals for the highest lamb yields, is playing a bigger and bigger role in sheep production." Craddock said. "The potential for farm flocks in the High Plains is tremendous. There is so much cotton waste, gin trash burrs and crop aftermath that could be used for feed. Sheep production could supplement the farmer's income.

Sheep production in the future, he said, may include the artificial raising of lambs in confinement as well as the present grazing practices. Confinement production would, Craddock said, increase the efficiency of sheep production.

"Presently this is too expensive. The cost of housing animals is too high. But, if we could improve breeds to produce more lambs we could undercut the housing costs and make this type of production economically feasible,"

Calling It 'The Enemy'

Block Attacks Dairy Program

By DON KENDALL AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - In one of his strongest attacks yet on the government's dairy support system, Agriculture Secretary John R. Block is calling the program cost "the enemy" that "will have to be dealt with accordingly."

"I'm talking about a quarter of a million dollars," he said. "Not every month or week or day. They taxpayers of this country are giving the dairy industry a quarter of million dollars every hour -24 hours a day. This is embarrassing, unacceptable and intolerable. It cannot continue."

That would put the cost of the support program at $2.2 billion this fiscal year, more than 40 percent above the budget estimate sent to Congress a month ago.

Block's comments were in a speech prepared for the Western States Dairy Conference, Seattle, Wash. His office distributed copies here.

A public meeting will be held March 22-23 in Kansas City, Mo., to "gather input from a wide range of knowledgeable people about how we can tackle the severe problem of dairy surplus" and the program's rising. costs, Block said.

But the heart of the problem, he said, is that farmers "have over 1 million too many cows" and that there is only one way to cure the surplus milk problem - a voluntary reduction of dairy

The 1983 budget President Reagan sent Congress last month includes an estimate that $1.54 billion will be spent on the milk price support during the current fiscal year. According to Block's figures in the speech, however, the total for 1981-82 will reach $2.2 billion Budget officials in the Agriculture Department said they were unaware of the new figure but acknowledged that Block has been criticized on Capitol Hill for what appeared to be low estimates including the Reagan budget estimate of $852 million for dairy supports next fiscal

The Congressional Budget Office, for example, has estimated costs at nearly $2 billion in each of the two fiscal years.

Under the program, the government - in this case, the Commodity Credit Corp. of the Agriculture Department - is required to buy surplus butter, cheese and non-fat dry milk to prop up the price of milk paid to

As of Dec. 31, the CCC's inventory included 250 million pounds of butter, down from 321.7 million a year earlier. However, cheese supplies totaled 547.4 million pounds, nearly double the 231.4 million of a year earlier. Nonfat dry milk stocks, at 902.2 million pounds, were up from 549.9 million a year earlier.

Block said the stockpile has continued to grow and now includes 290 million pounds of butter, 581 million pounds of cheese and 920 million pounds of powdered milk.

"Even with the program revisions made within the past year, production is up, demand is flat and the taxpayer is forced to buy the difference," he said.

Nobel Prize Winner To Deliver Speech

WASHINGTON (AP) -Theodore W. Schultz, cowinner of the 1979 Nobel prize in economics, will delivery the keynote speech March 17 at a 2-day conference on agricultural soil resources. The conference will be sponsored by the Agriculture Council of America and the ACA Education Foundation.

USDA Painting Gloomy Cotton Industry Picture

By DON KENDALL AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) -Referring to "the dismal performance of the economy," a new analysis by the Agriculture Department paints a gloomy picture for the cotton industry in the months ahead.

"Excessive supplies and low prices dominate the U.S. cotton outlook," the department's Economic Research Service said Thursday. "A 28-year high in production, coupled with disappointing U.S. (textile) mill use, points to extremely large ending stocks (carryover) this crop vear."

The cotton inventory carried over when the current marketing year ends on July 31 is estimated at 6 million bales, which would be more than double the 2.7 million on hand at the beginning of the year last Aug. 1.

"Reflecting this prospect, farm prices this winter are averaging about a third below a year earlier," the report said.

Based on surveys in early February, cotton farmers in-

The Agriculture Department says the beetle evidence was found in a warehouse of the American Terminal Corp. in South Kearney, N.J., in the New York port area.

Ronald Johnson of the department's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service said Thursday that larvae of the beetle were discovered during an ongoing surveillance program aimed at spotting the beetles at ports of entry.

The warehouse, which is fee, will be furnigated to eliminate any of the beetles, he said.

Johnson said it was the first confirmed khapra beetle infestation in the United States since inspectors found the insect in an empty Port-Authority warehouse in Newark, N.J., last December. During late 1980 and through 1981, inspectors found 21 separate beetle infestations in the United

After a delay of almost two months, the Soviet Union resumed buying U.S. grain Feb. 10. Since then, Moscow has bought about 1.94 million tons.

The agreement guarantees Moscow at least 8 million metric tons annually - more if the United States approves. The Soviets were told last fall they could buy 15 million more than specified by the pact for the current fiscal survey probably did not reflect farmers' response to the control programs, which requires a 15 percent reduction in this year's cotton acreage for a producer to be eligible for benefits.

'Widespread participation in the program is likely, because cotton prices are well under the 1982 target price," the report said.

The 1982 program calls for a target price of 71 cents a pound for upland cotton. That means if market prices fall below the target the government makes "deficiency payments" to make up the difference.

In 1981, for example, the cotton target was 70.87 cents a pound. The market price averaged 63.2 cents, meaning a deficiency payment of 7.67 cents a pound or around $480 million in total payments.

The 1981 cotton crop was about 15.7 million bales, up 41 percent from 11.1 million in drought-gripped 1980. That was the biggest crop since 1953 when farmers harvested 16.5 million bales.

"Reflecting the dismal performance of the economy and increased cotton textile imports, U.S. mill use continues to drop and for the season is projected at only 5.6 million bales," the report said. "In December and January, use fell to 4.6 million and 5 million bales, respectively, on an annual basis - the lowest in almost 50 years."

Cotton use by textile mills was 5.9 million bales in 1980-81 and 6.5 million in 1979-80, by comparison.

One bright spot: Exports are expected to reach 7 million bales, up 18 percent from last season.

Oil Field Technique Could Save Aquifer

LUBBOCK--A technique long used to extend the life of an oil field may be able to prolong the life of the Ogallala Aquifer.

Secondary recovery methods, which have squeezed additional barrels of oil from old fields, are being applied to test water wells and the results are being reviewed by Texas Tech University civil engineers.

Texas Tech Civil Engineering Professor B.J. Claborn said conventional pumping techniques in both oil and water wells only extract approximately a fourth of the liquid in an underground formation. The remainder of the liquid is held by capillarity, or surface tension, among the grains of sand in the aquifer.

For years, oil companies have pumped water or air into the ground to break the bonds of capillarity and to herd the crude oil toward a well where it can be recovered. A. Wayne Wyatt, general manager of the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1, which is overseeing the project, originated the idea of secondary water recovery.

"Everyone's reaction," Claborn said, "was to laugh. But the more everybody thought about it, the more we began to say 'Why not?'. I don't think any of us are totally convinced it is going to work, but we hope it will."

By summer's end, Claborn said some answers on the feasibility should be known because of information being gathered at a 140-foot-deep test well near Slaton. Analysis of the old well has shown that in each cubic foot of sand from the aquifer 60 percent of the space is occupied by the sand itself, 30 percent by water and 10 percent by air.

After an oil well is drilled, normal production methods will bring to the surface about 25 percent of the oil. Another 25 percent is retrievable with secondary recovery techniques, Claborn said.

But Claborn cautioned that this preliminary finding is based on only one well. From other reports, Claborn indicated the amount of water remaining in an old well may vary widely depending on the well's location and the characteristics of the aquifer.

One prerequisite for employing secondary water recovery is some type of "cap" over the aquifer, Claborn said. The cap is a formation through which air or water will not readily pass. When air is pumped under great pressure into a well, the water is forced to move away from the air source between the cap and the impenetrable bedrock. In this way water can be pushed toward another well.

At least that's the theory that is being tested.

"We will have a much better idea about air injection before the summer is over," Claborn said. "We should know if it is technically feasible and, if not, why.'

Claborn said. Such a technology could help prolong the life of the Ogallala Aquifer which extends from Texas through Nebraska. The Ogallala is being depleted faster than the aquifer can be replenished by rainfall percolating from the surface, the formation's only source of recharge. The Ogallala is the basis for an irrigated agriculture economy throughout the Great Plains.

inflation," he said.

"A greater emphasis must be placed on energy management research, greater use of low-cost by-product plant materials as feedstuffs, transportaion systems that minimize stress on cattle, improved health and disease control, the general improvement of feeding practices and increased computerized marketings of beef and grain," Curl said.

These priorities for research have been influenced by developments in agriculture during the 1970s, he said.

Spiraling production costs due to high energy prices, a tight money supply and increased interest rates, increases in the minimum wage, increased costs of fertilizers, feed, seed and chemicals and inflation in general have, together with low prices, resulted in a depressed agricultural industry, Curl said.

"High energy costs have caused us to rethink our use of energy not only for production but also in marketing, processing and transporting our agricultural products," Curl said. "We will undoubtedly see increased processing of agricultural products at or near the point of production as energy costs continue to escalate.

An effective partial solution to the energy problem may come about through the use of wind and solar energy and biomass conversion. Whatever the development, Curl said research must be increased ten-fold to find solutions to the energy problem. Systems must also be designed for food and fiber renewable rather than depletable energy supplies. A crucial problem in Texas is the declinin water supply. Estimates are that total water use will continue to increase at the same rate as for the past 20 years.

"By the late 1980s additional surface water will be needed from new reservoirs or water will have to be imported if we are to meet our projected requirements," Curl said. "Research on efficient use of water for irrigation must be greatly expanded with continued attention to energy requirements."

Another major concern for agriculture in the 1980s is the manner in which we use our valuable land resources, he said. "We are losing tremendous acreage of good land each year to the ravages of wind and water erosion and to the development of cities and highway systems."

The cantaloupe takes its name from the castle of Cantaloupe in Italy where the fruit was grown in the gardens surrounding the building of a 16th-century

THREE RIVERS -- season at the new Choke Canyon Wildlife Management Area near here.

Texas Parks and Wildlife Department biologist Joe Herrera of Beeville said hunters averaged 3.7 quail per day, which is considered outstanding. "We were able to utilize about 20,000 acres of the 37,000 total acres for hunting," Herrera said, "and it was consistently good for both quail and doves." Herrera commented that the dove harvest would have been higher, but development on the area prevented hunting until the first segment of the dove season was almost over. Even with the short 16-day season, hunters managed to take an average of 5.1 doves per day.

Much of the area hunted eventually will be inundated by waters of Choke Canyon Reservoir. Construction work on the dam is nearing completion, and the lake is expected to start filling in one to two years, officials said.

Amount of water needed to wet top five feet of soil to field capacity (in inches)

Soil Survey Results

The annual pre-plant soil moisture survey in the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District 1 shows that two to eight inches is needed to wet the soil to field capacity. The soil moisture deficit was determined at 135 observation points. Samples were tested at the soil physics laboratory at Texas Tech University. The survey was compiled by the Soil Conservation Service, the conservation district and the Texas Department of Water Resources.

Resistant Pigweed Possible Says Specialist

Have pigweed in the Panhandles of Texas and Oklahoma developed resistance to postemergence applications of 2,4-D and Atrazine? Dr. A.F. Wiese, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station weed researcher from Bushland, and Doc Tripp, area agronomist with Oklahoma Agricultural Extension Service at Guymon do not have research to prove it one way or the other, but poor control in fields for several summers makes the two specialists believe resistant pigweed is a good possibility.

This past summer several applicators ended up with poor control on several thousand acres. To make matters worse, retreating the fields did not kill the weeds. Poor control made farmers take a beating on yield. To top it off, the pesky weeds cost applicators because farmers were reluctant to pay for poor weed control jobs.

Wiese said there are several possible explainations for the phenomenon. Using one herbicide on the same field may have gradually killed out pigweed that are most sensitive to the herbicides and a population of tolerant weeds has developed.

According to the two specialists, there are many different kinds or species of pigweed, and no one knows if one species tolerates the herbicides better than others. "Over the years there has been a gradual change from redroot pigweed, which grows up to 30 inches to smooth pigweed and Palmer amaranth," Wiese said. These two pigweed species grow over six feet tall and will compete severely with the tallest sorghum hybrid. Wiese speculates that hard to kill pigweed may be natural crosses or hybrids between the two vigorous species. Two other pigweed species that grow in the Southern Great Plains are tumble pigweed and prostrate pigweed. However, these two species are not likely to be the trouble makers according to the specialists. Tumble pigweed grows in a ball shape like Russian thistle, but seldom gets over three feet tall. Prostrate pigweed grows flat on the ground and from a distance is easily confused with puncturevine or goathead.

Because the problem has everyone baffled, Wiese has planned research to solve the dilemma. Last fall Jon Green, a yound weed scientist working with Wiese gathered seed from several fields in the northern part of the Panhandle of Texas where control was poor. He also gathered seed from redroot pigweed in a pasture at the Research laboratory at Bushland that have never been sprayed. In the summer of 1982, plants from these seed will be treated with 2,4-D and atrazine to check for differences. In addition, seed of several species will be

Heavy Rains Soak Coastal Bend, Delays Spring Planting

COLLEGE STATION. Texas (AP) - Heavy rains during the past week soaked the Coastal Bend and Upper Coastal areas and halted spring planting there temporarily, but generally brightened the outlook for small grain crops and pastures. Elsewhere, farmers continued with planting of corn and grain sorghum in the South and South Central districts and into the Texas Blacklands.

Additionally, spring gardeners moved ahead rapidly to prepare their plots and some have started planting a variety of spring vegetables, said Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. Portions of South Central and West Texas, however, remain too dry to begin spring planting. Grass and forest fires continue to be a serious problem in these areas. Land preparation for spring crops continued at a rapid pace across much of the state as farmers took advantage of more favorable weather condi-

Soil temperatures warmed up during the latter part of the week, but chances are still good for a freeze or killing frost in much of the state, which could damage tender crops and make it necessary to replant, Pfannstiel said. Soil temperature averages at the four-inch depth this past week, as recorded by the National Weather Service, were as follows: Austin, 53 degrees F .: Beaumont, 58; Beeville, 59; Bushland, 45; College Station, 58; Eagle Lake, 56; Dilley, 61; Dell City, 54; Lavon Dam (near Dallas), 50: Longview, 56; Lufkin, 53; Pecos, 55; San Angelo, 55; Stephenville, 56; Uvalde, 60; Waco, 50 and Weslaco, 63.

The Extension Service has recommended minimum soil temperaures to insure good seed germination as 50 degrees F. for corn, 55 for grain sorghum and 65 for cotton. In the Rio Grande Valley, the sugar cane harvest is nearing completion with 26.500 acres harvested thus far. The first fields of onions were cut in the southwest part of the district this past week, and harvesting of cabbage, broccoli, carrots and lettuce continues, along with the citrus harvest. Some 35 percent of the grapefruit, 6 percent of early oranges and 90 percent of late oranges remain to be harvested. Reports from district

Extension directors showed these conditions:

PANHANDLE: Unusually warm temperatures over the Panhandle area during the past week boosted wheat growth, but soil moisture is generally short. Spring oats are being drilled, and land preparation for spring planting is underway. Cattle are in generally good condition. SOUTH PLAINS: Some snow was received during the past week, adding slightly to surface moisture but more moisture is needed. Wheat is making slow growth due to shortness of moisture. Land preparation continues with farmers applying fertilizer and herbicides as rapidly as possible. Livestock feeding continues, with most animals looking good for this period of winter.

ROLLING PLAINS: Some light snow and rain added as much as one inch to deficit soil moisture in Archer and other northern counties of the Rolling Plains this past week. The moisture, along with the return of warmer temperatures during the latter part of the week, brought excellent response from small grains. Winter wheat and winter weeds are beginning to provide grazing on native ranges. The calving season is progressing on schedule.

NORTH CENTRAL: Land preparation and feeding of cattle continue to highlight the agricultural picture for the past week. Some potatoes, onions and early vegetable crops have been planted and land preparation continues for cotton and corn planting. Some top-dressing and treating for insects is underway on wheat fields. Calving continues, with most livestock in fair to average condition.

NORTHEAST: Soil moisture is generally adequate, with a wide variance recorded in the weather pattern of the past week. Warmer temperatures are boosting wheat growth. Early vegetable plantings are being stepped up, and land preparation continues with nitrogen applications underway. Some pasture improvement is being noted.

FAR WEST: Some counties received good moisture this week, while others remain dry. Cropland is being prepared for spring planting. Last season's cotton is still being ginned. Irrigation continues for wheat and small grains. Onions are being set out and home owners are busily preparing garden plots. Calves, lambs and kids are arriving. Some heavy sheep and goat losses reported during cold, wet weather that followed shear-

WEST CENTRAL: Snow, tional needed moisture to most of the district this past week, and brightened wheat and small grain outlook. Some small grains, however, are suffering insect stress. Some lamb losses have been reported due to extremely cold, wet weather, and supplemental feeding of livestock continues heavy. Some onions, radishes and potatoes are being planted and other homeowners are preparing garden plots for planting.

CENTRAL: Rainfall this week increased the moisture levels in most counties and boosted small grain crop outlook, although some greenbug damage continues. Rains delayed planting in Bell County where some five percent of the grain sorghum has been planted. Corn planting also is expected to resume when farmers can get back into their fields. Livestock feeding is continuing, and ranchers are spraying herds to control lice

EAST: Soil moisture is adequate in most counties, and spring vegetable gardens are being planted. Warmer temperatures are enhancing early fruit bloom on peaches. Pastures are in fair condition, and are improving following recent rains. Fire ant control measures are being activated.

UPPER COAST: Land preparation continues to be a major farm activity as planting time nears, with a few producers getting a jump on corn and sorghum planting. Wheat, pastures and ranges are improving after receiving moisture recently, and clover is growing well. Home gardens are being planted. Cattle are in fair to good con-

SOUTH CENTRAL: Soil moisture is still short in much of the district, despite some light rain. Many fields are too dry to begin spring planting. Most wheat is in good condition and pastures are in fair condition, but all could use moisture. Most gardeners are planting potatoes and onions. SOUTHWEST: Most counties of the district received the first significant rains since October of 1981, although there was wide variation in the amount of moisture recorded. Despite recent rains, the moisture level falls short of the average cumulative total of 5.6 inches normally recorded from November through February. Growers resumed planting of corn, grain sorghum and vegetables by week's end, but more rain will be needed to assure a good plant population. Wheat fields and pastures are responding to the moisture.

Excellent lamb and kid crops are expected, but predators are posing serious problems. COASTAL BEND: Heavy rains ranging from 3 to more than 8 inches halted field work and delayed spring planting, although some few fields were planted before the rains came. The moisture was a great benefit to wheat and oat crops, as well as pastures. Most livestock, however, are in poor conditiion and continue to lose flesh. The calving season is progressing. In many areas, replanting of watermelon and cantaloupe crops will be necessary due to the heavye

SOUTH: Planting of grain sorghum continues across the district, although soils moisture ranges from short; to adequate. The sugar cane harvest is nearing completions with 26,500 acres harvested

New Christie Film Stylish, Low Key

By BOB THOMAS Associated Press Writer

EVIL UNDER THE SUN is a stylish, low-key (only one murder) Agatha Christie with. the mystery undefeatable and sometimes overbearing Hercule Poirot in charge of unravelment. self-proclaimed 'greatest mind in Europe" finds himself at a small, posh Adriatic resort among a curious mixture of guests. Most of them have good reasons to extinguish a Broadway star with a talent for ruining other people's lives. When she is found strangled on a beach, Poirot goes to work. Peter Ustinov is Poirot, vain, fussy, not at all endearing, yet a cerebral kind of hero. Long may he sleuth. After the mishmash of "The Mirror Crack'd," Guy Hamilton redeems himself with Christie fans. He surehandedly directs an imposing cast: Maggie Smith, James Mason, Diana Riggs, Roddy McDowall, Sylvia Miles, Jane Birkin, Aside from Ustinov, the film's best assets are the Mediterranean scenery and a smashing score based on Cole P.OTER STANDARDS. The music provides the perfect background for 1938 highsociety shenanigans. Rated PG, perhaps because of the murderous theme.

New York's Radio City Music Hall will be the setting for the entertainment spectacular, 'Night of 100 Stars,' which will air Monday, March 8 on ABC. The program will feature some of the world's greatest performers in a tribute to the Actors' Fund of America.

'Chicago Story' Has Promise

NEW YORK (AP) - NBC does Pirandello's "Six Characters in Search of an Author" two better with the new show, "Chicago Story," eight characters in search of an involving plot. Although this 90-minute series doesn't hit stride in Saturday night's with promise.

"Chicago Story" isn't just another cop show. It's a police show, medical show and legal show - three cops, three lawyers and two doctors, who grew up in the same neighborhood and now get entangled each week in everybody else's professional and personal lives.

It's precursor was the "Bold Ones," but that series did separate medical, legal and police shows under one umbrella title. "Chicago Story" twines them all together, but has the knotty problem of making certain the connections aren't counterfeit.

The story Saturday night,

Meanwhile, the other brother strolls into surgery and holds everybody hostage. This allows the three lawyers and other two cops to get absorbed into the crisis. One story, divided eight ways, doesn't go. But several stories each week would let the ensemble cast do more than fill slots.

All the major demographic bases are touched here. Besides the street cop, there's a serious black detective and his flighty Polish partner. The legal side has an Italian public defender and a WASP state attorney. They're friends and date the same woman, the crusading Irish lawyer. Medically, Miss Adams, the biggest name and weakest acting link, is a Swedish surgeon, while Tabori is a Jewish doctor.

Eric Bercovici, executive roducer of "Shogun" and 'McClain's Law" who created "Chicago Story." considers Chicago the ninth cast member. Totally filmed there, Bercovici plans to utilize its neighborhoods, sights and sounds for a bona fide urban environment, not the made-in-Hollywood look.

Saturday night's action, set mostly in a hospital, didn't allow Chicago to play a starring role, but, potentially, the chance to capture the climate of crime and city life is unlimited. "Chicago doesn't look like any other city," said Bercovici. "It has beautiful

Bob Frazer is a successful attorney, an over-achiever and an ambitious candidate for Congress.

Those are the outward characteristics, but the complex and deeply rooted inner workings of their personalities surface in "Between Two Brothers," a made-for-TV movie on CBS Tuesday night.

Pat Harrington stars as Russ and Michael Brandon is Bob in the story of two brothers whose lives are controlled by guilt and jealousy, and, finally, love.

Mike Robe wrote the original screenplay and Robert Lewis directed.

Harrington says he was not sure whether "One Day at a Time" would return next year, for a ninth season.

"I'm pretty sure CBS will pick us up," he says. "It depends on who wants to come back. There's some indecision on the part of Bonnie Franklin about returning. Valerie Bertinelli will return, but only for a limited number of shows. I'm under contract to do 24 shows."
