Artifact from ranch days

Bill Kirkemunde kneels beside the built-in shelves he was refinishing when he found the checkbook he's holding. The checkbook is clearly marked as belonging to the XIT Ranch.

BUILDING

A washroom, later converted to a bathroom, was added in 1901. Only two or three tiles from the fireplace in the larger room were missing and they found a craftsman in Sunnert who made very close copies. The smaller room, which was the private office of Col. A.G. Boyce, the ranch's general manager when the building was constructed, also has a fireplace, but the tile is much harder to replicate. "We're still hoping, though," said Mrs. Kirkemunde. "We're also looking for coal grates for the fireplaces."

Etched glass windows were decorative features in two gables of the building's exterior. At some time, probably not long before the Kirkemundes bought the building, the window on the front was broken out. "We found the glass on the floor," said Mrs. Kirkemunde. Her husband did a rubbing of the window in the south gable and sent it to be copied. Again, there's no way to detect the replica from an original. Crudely installed electric and telephone wiring in the building have been removed.

Clinton proposes 'gay' compromise

WASHINGTON (AP) - Although President Clinton is retreating from his pledge to lift the military's gay ban outright, the White House says the proposed "don't pursue" policy would end witch hunts for homosexuals in uniform.

Clinton won't formally announce the new policy until next week, but both sides already are attacking his approach to the explosive issue.

The two openly gay members of the House said Friday that Clinton's plan didn't go far enough to end discrimination against homosexuals in the military - as the president had promised during the presidential campaign.

Senate Armed Services Chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said he would push for a law to ban military service by people with "a propensity to engage in homosexual acts."

Senior administration officials Friday laid out details of a Pentagon proposal billed as "don't ask, don't tell, don't pursue." They said Clinton was "generally supportive" of the plan, six months in the making, and was likely to announce a fine-tuned version early next week, perhaps Monday.

Under the plan, homosexuals would be allowed to serve in the armed forces if they kept quiet about their sexual orientation. Homosexual conduct itself would be prohibited.

Military personnel would not be asked about their sexuality, and military officials would be allowed to investigate them for potential ouster only if there were "credible evidence" of homosexual behavior.

"It will clearly create, we believe, a zone of privacy in the military for individuals ... that will respect the privacy on both sides," said a senior administration official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

"We think that probably the most significant advance is ... no witch hunts, no pursuit policy," the official said.

A second administration official, also speaking on condition of anonymity, said that if someone were to declare himself or herself a "practicing homosexual" that would be cause for investigation.

Merely being sighted at a gay bar or attending a gay rights parade, for example, would not be grounds for investigation. But multiple reports of overt behavior such as same-sex kissing or dancing would be within a "danger zone" for investigation, the officials said.

Only a commanding officer could launch an investigation.

The officials said the new approach would be a significant departure from existing policy, under which the military spent some $500 million between 1980 and 1990 pursuing investigations, with 17,000 people ordered out of the service as homosexuals.

Walcott gets state award

Bill McLaughlin, superintendent of the Walcott Independent School District, is in Austin this weekend to accept an award for the district.

McLaughlin will be presented a $30,000 award from the Texas Successful Schools Award System after the district was named a 1993 Texas Performance Gain Award winner.

The awards ceremony was scheduled for 10 a.m. Saturday on the campus of the University of Texas.

Special speaker at the ceremony -- which recognizes award recipients from throughout Texas -- was scheduled to be state Education Commissioner Lionel R. "Skip" Mena.

Coal-burning fireplace

One of two coal-burning fireplaces in the XIT Ranch office building, this one required several new tiles which were replicated and placed in the top of the border. The mantle for the fireplace was missing when the building was purchased by Bill and Patricia Kirkemunde.

The Kirkemundes had an analysis done of the mortar in the brickwork so they could touch up the exterior. However, after carefully mixing it, they discovered there is some difference because of weathering of the original.

"The house looks kind of like a speckled pup, now," Pat Kirkemunde laughed.

Records indicate the building cost $1,914.75 for materials and labor when built. Another $248.95 was invested in 1901 with the washroom addition.

There's no telling what the Kirkemundes have spent to this point on their restoration and they decline, modestly, to say.

While the money is not unimportant, they give the impression that, from their point of view, the finished product will be worth every cent.

And, when the inside is all cleaned up and a new "old" picket fence is installed in front to replace the chain link fence now there, the couple will have done a service that may be priceless to students of Panhandle history.

Drum-bugle corps slates concert here Wednesday

The Velvet Knights Drum and Bugle Corps of Anaheim, Calif., will be in Hereford this week for a day's rest and rehearsal during its 30th anniversary tour.

Then, at 7 p.m., a full concert will be held in the stadium. It is open to the public at no cost.

The Velvet Knights were founded in 1963. The group is composed of young people between the ages of 14 and 21.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

Yes, students, it's true! Teachers just go to school all the time! A Thematic Science program sponsored by WTSU and Region 16 is being held July 12-August 6 and will be attended by HJH teachers Connie Gilbert, Dona Hendrickson and Nisar Chand. These teachers will also attend sessions two days each month during the '93-'94 school year. The study concludes with a four week program in the summer of '94.

For those who may not know all they'd like to know about the history of Deaf Smith County schools, the following is a brief introduction.

A county's development and growth are generally reflected in her school system. Deaf Smith County schools had a humble beginning, with a gradual and steady growth from a one room school, Wombles, located in the northeastern corner of the county in 1893, to a teaching staff of over 400 in the Deaf Smith County schools today. This number includes teachers working with over 4000 students in the HISD, Walcott, St. Anthony's, Nazarene Academy and Community School. There have been over sixty schools scattered throughout the county during this 100 years of growth and change.

Some early schools were known by as many as three names, as schools would be moved to be nearer the students. Before schools were formally organized, pioneers provided for their children's education in private homes and community schools sprang up as the area developed, proving the importance of education even in the early days of settlement.

The first school building in Hereford, moved from Old Dawn, had one room and was situated at the intersection of Eighth and Dewey Streets. Asa Marin was the first teacher. By 1899, there were 53 students and by 1900 there were four teachers and 208 students. This growth caused the need for more room and a square, two-story frame building was constructed where Old Central now stands. In 1901 a room was added on each level.

The first graduating class of nine students held their exercises May 18, 1906. Citizens had provided for higher education for their youth "at home" with the opening of Hereford Christian College, later named Add-Ran College, and still later, Panhandle Christian College. Hereford Christian College opened in 1902 with eight faculty members and 250 students. The college was located where the high school is now located. The first football team in the county was organized in 1909 at the college.

Many changes have occurred since that first school opened in Deaf Smith County. Gradually all of the county schools outside of the city of Hereford, with the exception of Walcott, have closed.

100 years of growing...and who knows what the future might bring! "What happens to a dream deferred? Does it merely fester? Or does it explode?" -Langston Hughes.

We can be thankful that the early pioneers and those who followed to settle Deaf Smith County did not defer their dreams of education for their youth. Let us strive to continue the dreams and realities of a good education for each and every child in Deaf Smith County. They are our pioneers of tomorrow--pioneers in health, science, religion...the list is endless.

City Update

By CHESTER NOLEN
Hereford City Manager

Things have been moving fairly rapidly here at City Hall during the last several weeks.

1) The Swimming Pool committee has met and organized to elicit community support.

2) Three firms are to be interviewed by the committee and a recommendation will be forwarded to the City Commission for approval. One of these firms will perform the architectural/engineering and planning for the facility.

Water consumption hit a high this summer of 7.3 million gallons per day. Our production capability is only 8.3 million gallons per day. However, we cannot sustain maximum production day-in and day-out for very long.

Please be water wise. Water your plants early in the day before 9 a.m. This allows the maximum utilization of the water by the plant without a great loss to evaporation.

The City is proceeding to develop additional water supplies which will entail about $2 million in improvements and construction.

The City of Hereford Police Department is going to conduct a Citizens Police Academy starting in September. If you are interested, mark your calendar and look for more information concerning the academy.

Thanks for reading.

Consultants may reap business from school finance bill

AUSTIN (AP) - The new school finance law might spell new business for some high-powered consultants who say they can ease the potential transfer of property from rich to poor school districts' tax bases.

The consultants - including two former lawmakers, a former Texas education commissioner and a prominent lawyer who represents poor school districts challenging portions of the new law - haven't done any property transfers yet.

But their venture could boom if rich school districts can't get voter approval to reduce their property wealth in another way, such as sending some money to the state.

Unlike several other options for sharing wealth allowed under the new law, transferring property doesn't require a school district election.

"I'm going to be surprised if any substantial number of these elections pass," said Austin lawyer Buck Wood. He represents poor school districts suing over part of the new law and also is involved in the Property Placements Inc. consulting business.

Texas voters in May overwhelmingly turned down a share-the-wealth school funding proposal. That prompted lawmakers to pass the current measure, which didn't require a statewide vote of the people.

Under the new law, the 100 school districts with more than $280,000 in property wealth per student must choose by Sept. 1 among five options for reducing their riches.

The alternatives include sending money to the state; contracting to educate other districts' students; merging tax bases with one or more poorer districts; consolidating voluntarily; or moving some taxable property to another district's tax rolls.

The first three options require voter approval. Officials say their discussions with school districts indicate the first two are the most popular, likely because there is a court challenge and those options could be easily abandoned.

But if those elections fail - and the law remains in place for at least this school year, which appears likely - school districts must make another choice to avoid having the state either move their property or consolidate them with others.

School districts "might find themselves here in the middle of August with a failed election," Wood said. "Then there's going to be a mad scramble to get this done."

Besides Wood, the consultants include former state Sens. Kent Caperton and Jack Strong and former education commissioner Bill Kirby.

"We think we can be of help," Caperton said. "That's not to say a district could not accomplish a transfer without our services."

Property-poor Karnes City Independent School District is among those that have told the consulting firm to see what sort of arrangement it could come up with, said Superintendent William Gary.

"We should be attractive" to a business, considering the district's tax rate of 94 cents per $100 property valuation, Gary said. The state average local property tax rate in school districts was nearly $1.30 in 1992, according to the state comptroller's property tax division.

The rich and poor school districts must agree for property to be transferred. The business involved doesn't get a vote in the matter, said TEA spokeswoman Della May Moore.

But businesses - which could see their tax bills cut if they are moved to a low-taxing district - are the ones that would pay for the consulting service, said Caperton. "No taxpayer dollars would be paid to us," he said.

Trooper was victim of senseless violence which touched many lives

By GERARD FARRELL
The Victoria Advocate
VICTORIA, Texas - That Bill Davidson was a victim of senseless violence is undisputed.

But when Ronald Ray Howard shot the veteran highway patrol trooper during a traffic stop, his bullet claimed many lives besides the one it ended.

For when Davidson hit the pavement on U.S. Highway 59 in 1992, it set off a chain reaction of shattered lives.

His wife, Linda, to whom he'd spoken on the telephone just minutes before he was shot, and their children, Kimberly and Trey, have been victimized by Howard's anger as surely as their husband and father was.

To Ronald Ray Howard, Bill Davidson was "the law" - a nameless person in a hated uniform, a target for his rage.

To everyone else, he was Bill, Bill the husband, Bill the fishing buddy, Bill the city councilman, Bill the Little League president, Bill the UIL football referee. And so on.

With one bullet, he became Bill the cherished memory.

On Wednesday, with Ronald Ray Howard condemned to death, Linda Davidson said she and her children will now try to live a normal life again. But she called that task "impossible now that we don't have Bill anymore."

For Kimberly, a return to normalcy means going back to college - and hopefully to the Department of Public Safety Academy in Austin to follow in her father's footsteps.

But it also means an empty chair at graduation, where she would otherwise have found her father. And another one at home, where she would otherwise have found help understanding Texas traffic laws.

For Trey, to whom Bill Davidson was "coach" as well as "dad," it means a wall of trophies, bittersweet memories of championships and of a fallen champion.

To Don Wardlow, who sat through almost the entire trial - most days after an hour's drive from Rockdale after working all night - it means the end of a lifelong friendship.

"We really didn't see each other all that much the last few years, but our friendship was there," said Wardlow, a friend since both were second-graders in Belton.

For them, the pipe dreams of boyhood became reality when, in 1968, they enlisted in the Army together.

Wardlow would later follow his friend into the highway patrol, graduating from the DPS Academy two classes behind Davidson.

Add the loss of a brother officer to that of a boyhood chum.

And what of Howard's family? His grandmother, Birdie Prince, wept uncontrollably Wednesday as she stretched to hug her 6-foot-1 grandson after the jury passed its death sentence.

"Don't kill my baby. Don't kill my baby. Don't kill my baby," she could be heard saying through her sobs.

His mother, Debra, despite her poor judgment in buying him the gun that he would later use as a murder weapon, also is a victim of her son's action.

That a mother, any mother, should have to hear her child condemned to death is itself tragic. That a woman should have to ride a bus from Houston and hobble on crutches into a courtroom full of strangers to do so is pitiable.

Howard's children - as many as six of them - will grow up knowing only that their father killed a police officer and was sentenced to die for it.

A Texas death row inmate spends an average of 8 1/2 years in a legal battle for his life. If Howard's efforts fail, he will face his end strapped to a gurney behind a red-brick prison wall in downtown Huntsville, lethal drugs coursing through his veins.

Bill Davidson had no time to prepare for his end, comatose in a Victoria hospital bed, a bullet fragment in his lung.

When his time comes, Howard's family will be able to say goodbye. Until then, they will speak to him on the telephone, write him letters and visit him in prison.

But never again will he braid his sister Octavia's hair as she gets ready for school, or shoot baskets with little brother Wilber.

Whose fault is that? His lawyer tried to blame his upbringing in a violent Houston ghetto, or savage beatings by his father, or the influence of violent rap music. Or a combination of all of them.

When asked for his idea of who's to blame, Howard's answer was simple: "Me."

Ultimately, 12 Travis County residents agreed with him.

That the question should ever have been asked is the greatest tragedy of all.

MAXIMIZE YOUR STORAGE SPACE

Most people feel they never have enough closet or storage space. This is the reason most buyers place closet and storage space very high on their want list. When a prospective buyer opens closets, it's not to snoop, they want to see the size of the closet and how much space there is. If the closets are cluttered, even large closets will appear small. Because closets and storage space are a big selling point, it is essential to have them organized and neatly arranged while the home is on the market. If there are too many items in these areas, consider renting a storage locker or having a garage sale. After the closets and inside storage are clean, work on the garage and other storage areas. It will make your home much more spacious and attractive to buyers. If you read our column, we appreciate your comments or questions.

Hospitality is the art of making people want to stay without interfering with their departure.

Our 19th Congressional representative, Larry Combest, appears to be doing a good job for us in Washington. Combest this week helped introduce legislation that will assure West Texans in small communities can continue to use their local landfills safely.

Combest and fellow West Texas lawmakers maintain that a federal judge in Washington, D.C., incorrectly interpreted new landfill regulations when he insisted they also apply to small communities. The court ruling has reversed exemptions for small landfill operations actively pursued by Combest, and Reps. Bill Sarpaluis and Charlie Stenholm.

We're not sure how the final ruling will apply to smaller communities, but we salute Combest for his action on the matter.

Combest said the legislation offered is "to correct a federal judge's mistaken view that the routine trash of our arid region should be handled the same as the mountains of waste in the polluted Northeast."

"Our exemptions apply to small landfills in dry regions where there is no evidence of causing groundwater contamination. To incorrectly assume that all trash is equal is a typical approach of the federal government's one-size-fits-all philosophy that will ruin these small communities."

"Public opinion in the Panhandle has always favored the Pantex operation, even at times when national concern over nuclear weapons bordered on hysteria."

Trade problems

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) - Consider the apple, the congressman said, an everyday snack in America, a costly delicacy in Japan. Forbidden trade fruit, it is an apt symbol of the challenge facing U.S. negotiators trying to get more American exports into Japanese markets.

Rep. Sam Gibbons pointed that out at a hearing the other day, asking the U.S. trade representative whether he'd ever eaten a Japanese apple.

Mickey Kantor, just back from the economic summit in Tokyo, said he had. "They were nice enough to have a basket of fruit in my room, which I think must have cost a fortune," Kantor said.

"Their apple isn't an agricultural product, it's an art form ... it's a meal," said Gibbons, a Florida Democrat. Each apple is coddled and guarded while it grows, often gift wrapped after it is harvested.

It also is the subject of a 22-year trade dispute. Despite an agreement to open the market in 1971, Japan imports no U.S. apples, citing concern about agricultural diseases, insects and worms.

Obviously, apples are a small bite of the nearly $50 billion U.S. trade deficit with Japan. But the case illustrates the differences negotiators must resolve.

Even the new Tokyo agreement that set the framework for a year of trade talks is read differently in the two capitals.

Kantor said this is different from prior agreements that didn't deliver reductions in the trade imbalance. "No. 1, it's results oriented," he told the House panel, and that means specific measurements of progress toward more balanced trade.

But the Japanese rejected numerical trade targets, balked at a commitment to cut their $50 billion U.S. trade surplus in half over the next three years, agreeing to "sets of objective criteria," but leaving the definition for later.

"We've got some hard bargaining to go," Kantor said. "These are only the rules of the game."

The agreement was reached with a lame duck Japanese government that may lose its parliamentary

"We hope O'Leary leaves Amarillo with a new understanding of how communities and DOE facilities can work together. Nuclear materials may never be safe, but wise management and cooperation can make the risk reasonable and the payoff worthwhile for both the DOE and this region."

Times change and editors change, but we recall this was not the same attitude The News expressed when DOE was involved in research for a nuclear repository in Deaf Smith County.

Opinion, sometimes, depends on whose ox is being gored.

Mother had a way with words. My mother is no longer around, but I'd like to offer this prayer in memory of lessons she taught:

Lord, keep me, as my mother used to say, from getting too big for my britches.

I work hard, Lord, to achieve things and now and then I accomplish something that gets me a bit of praise. Keep that praise from making me too big for my britches, Lord.

I've spent a long time, Lord, behaving myself in a civilized manner, and I have thereby become what I wanted to be--a reasonably respectable citizen. Keep that respectability from making me too big for my britches, Lord.

I selected a mate and treated her well, and she tells me I'm a good hubby. Keep that marital compliment from making me too big for my britches, Lord.

I've been lucky enough to meet some fine folks, and to gain and keep their friendship. Keep that tribute from making me too big for my britches, Lord.

I've studied my trade for a long time and practiced it diligently, and now I'm sometimes called an expert in the field. Keep that designation from making me too big for my britches, Lord.

In short, Lord, just don't let get too big for my britches. It's up to You, Lord, now that mother isn't around to do it.

Amen.

majority in national elections on Sunday. The Clinton administration says that won't be a problem because the permanent bureaucracy really runs things anyhow.

There's already a side argument. In a letter on Tuesday, the Japanese threatened to withdraw from the planned talks if the United States should take punitive trade actions under its law against unfair trade practices.

President Clinton is making trade a priority in his economic game plan, saying freer, fairer terms for imports and exports will mean jobs for the United States and its trading partners. The preliminary arrangement with Japan, and another, including western Europe, that will help in the push for a worldwide trade agreement this year, were two of his trophies at the economic summit.

But they are only opening moves. "There is a tendency to come home and want to overstate what you have achieved," Kantor acknowledged. "This is going to be tough sledding."

The administration also is trying to complete a process the Republicans began, and extend the North American Free Trade Agreement to Mexico, despite labor and liberal misgivings. That will go to Congress in the fall.

Economically, progress toward a worldwide trade agreement probably would rank as the most important legacy of the Tokyo summit. Politically, a deal that really does reduce the $50 billion Japanese trade surplus with the United States would be the biggest plus for Clinton.

It is the most visible symbol of the trade problem. GATT and NAFTA are only initials. Japanese cars and TV sets are everyday reminders of that trade imbalance.

"This problem has, as all of you know, fueled resentment in our country," the president told a Tokyo university audience. "It is clear that our products are more open to your products and your investments than yours are to ours."

Kantor put it bluntly, telling the House committee that U.S. exports are effectively locked out of Japanese markets for the goods that account for about 65 percent of the trade imbalance, electronics, automobiles and parts, and computers.

He said that has to change. "We're not trying to bash anyone," he added.

Out of the Blue

By Garry Wesner

Well, well, well. It appears that yet another of President Clinton's nominees is headed for the hot-seat over something other than just the issues.

Joycelyn Elders was nominated to be Clinton's surgeon general, but the Senate on Friday postponed her confirmation hearings because of questions unrelated to her job.

This time the flak is over her family's taxes, her role on an Arkansas bank board and her continued acceptance of a state salary while working as a consultant in Washington.

Of course, I don't think any of us are surprised in the least that Clinton is having problems getting one of his nominees into office.

In fact, I think he's probably more surprised when one of his nominees gets in WITHOUT a fight.

The administration is naturally coming out in total support of the 59-year-old Elders, saying they don't think there will be any problems getting her confirmed and that everything is hunky-dorey.

Which just reconfirms (in case you wondered) the idea that the current administration is made up of a bunch of people who are wearing rose-colored glasses, thinking everything is right with the world just because they are in office and Slick Willie will cure everything from the deficit to the common cold.

I don't know much about Ms. Elders' views, but one story I read indicates she has already come under fire from conservatives for her views on abortion, birth control and sex education.

That probably means she favors unlimited amounts of all three (you know, the premise that sex education and unlimited birth control, plus free, government-funded abortions, will make teenagers quit having babies!).

RIIIIIIIIGHT!
All I can say is, if Billary Clinton supports Elders, she ought to call Lani Guinier and then start packing to return to Arkansas.

Speaking of our favorite liberal politicians, I read a story the other day that should make Ted Kennedy happy.

Seems Ted has "reformed" his life and, as a result, Jay Leno has decreed that there will be no more Ted Kennedy jokes told on "The Tonight Show."

What Leno says is that Kennedy has stayed married to the same woman for a whole year (WOW), that he is losing weight and "turning his life around," so he should not be picked on.

While it is admirable that Ted is "turning his life around," I am skeptical.

I mean, it wasn't that long ago that Ted was swimming out of a river, leaving his girlfriend behind after driving off the bridge in a drunken stupor.

It also wasn't that long ago that

Sen. Ted was standing up piously for his nephew, William Kennedy Smith, at his rape trial.

(By the way, an attorney from that trial has recently begun dating one of the jurors. HMMMMMM.)

I think Ted's true colors have been flying for too long for anyone to really believe that he has changed, or that he should be allowed to live a quiet life, free from public scrutiny.

Well, let's get away from politics for a while, okay?

In case you missed it, last week was the annual Running of the Bulls in Pamplona, Spain.

You know, that highly cultural event where herds and herds of crazed bulls (complete with horns) are loosed on this Spanish town to run wild among the tourists.

For some demented people, this is a highlight of the summer. A colleague here suggested that it might be that naive Americans think the bulls are tame and the whole thing is set up for the benefit of foreign tourists.

Well, Lee Whitney Marshall Jr. of Dallas found out the hard way.

Seems he went to Spain for this year's event and recently returned to recount his experiences.

Marshall was one of 54 people who found themselves on the wrong end of the bull, but still lived to tell about it.

This airline executive arrived in Houston the other day wearing a cast to hold his battered body together until surgery is performed to stick everything back in place.

He suffered broken collarbones, a shattered knee, a broken left hand and pulled ligaments and tendons.

Despite all this -- plus the anticipated pain from upcoming surgery -- Marshall said he would like to return next year for the bull running.

And we wonder why the airlines are in the shape they're in, with guys like this running them?

I hope you've been reading some of the stories written by the newest member of the Brand family here -- Lindsay Radford, our summer intern.

Lindsay just completed her freshman year at Northwestern University after graduating from Hereford High School in 1992.

She came in and asked if she could write for us and we were all pleased to put her to work.

In addition, she is working as pool manager at the Hereford Country Club.

Anyway, she has shown a great deal of incentive, she enjoys what she is doing and -- with a little instruction from our own veteran newswoman Georgia Tyler -- has written some very interesting stories.

We're glad to have her around and hope you enjoy her stories.

Don't forget to say "hi" when you see her sometime.

Well, that's all for this week. Have a good week and, remember, let's be careful out there.

Editorials from around the state

By The Associated Press

Here is a sampling of editorial opinion from Texas newspapers:

July 7

El Paso Times on Spanish insurance policies:

Texas law requires all drivers to carry vehicle liability insurance, but someone who speaks only Spanish cannot now buy a policy that he or she can read.

That is about to change for the better.

Within two months, the State Insurance Board is expected to approve Spanish-language versions of the basic policies sold in Texas for use by insurance companies.

Soon after, insurance companies will be required to provide policies in Spanish to people who ask for them.

It was not a step that insurance companies volunteered to take. The Insurance Board ordered it after hearing a few consumer complaints and some statistics.

"Census figures show that 3.5 million or 22 percent of Texans speak Spanish in the home and that 750,000 report that they are not fluent in English," state Insurance Department spokesman Rafael Ayuso said.

Some people - and insurance companies - are bound to complain that the requirement represents some official acceptance of Spanish. In fact, it is just an acknowledgement of reality.

As the Insurance Department's Associate Commissioner for Consumer Service Rob Schneider said, "This is not to make Spanish an official language, just to facilitate communication. That's all."

El Paso Herald-Post on Haiti:

Temporarily at least, the agreement to restore Haiti's elected president must be counted a success for the Clinton administration, which gave the issue priority. Whether the ambitious agreement will hold is far less sure.

The palpable difficulty of stitching an accord together in the first place is symptomatic. The two principals, deposed President Jean-Bertrand Aristide and the military usurper, Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras, refused to meet face to face, communicating only through United Nations mediators. And even now skepticism prevails in Port-au-Prince, where the attitude toward Aristide's announced return by Oct. 30 seems to be: show me. ...

July 8

San Angelo Standard-Times on school milk program:

Give the kids what they want even when they'd be better off without it.

That's sometimes claimed to be holy writ in the catechism of permissive child-rearing decreed so fervently by traditionalists (as well as others who realize the value of saying no even in a laid-back society).

The 1994 agriculture appropriations bill that came out of committee last month said no longer would school districts that take part in the federal lunch program be required to give the moppets a choice between skim, low-fat, whole or chocolate milk. But, some dairy state lawmakers did nip-up over depriving kids of that fat, even though Congress itself has urged schools to cut back on fats in pupils' diets.

Floor debate became high-flown, invoking a "freedom of choice" right that is laughable in most minds. But it worked. Youngsters can have it their way. And you do understand that the 2-to-1 House vote was based on basic rights, not on the fact that the dairy states want markets for all that delicious, artery-clogging cream.

July 9

Austin American-Statesman on State's school textbooks:

Contrary to the cliché, ignorance is not bliss.

Like curriculum, Texas textbooks must be based on reality if they are to have any meaning to students. A most important example is health textbooks. Those books cannot ignore human sexuality. ...

Books the state board ultimately selects for secondary health courses must balance concerns of parents who are worried their children will be unduly influenced and the needs of students who must be well-informed about the life and death choices they confront daily. The scale must tip in favor of education.

July 12

Fort Worth Star-Telegram on court decision to allow bond sales:
The Texas Supreme Court has moved in timely fashion to ensure that state-supported colleges and universities aren't plagued by the same uncertainties to which lawsuits about equitable funding have subjected the public schools.

The court recently issued an order that will grant universities uninterrupted authority to sell bonds while the justices are trying to reach a decision on a lawsuit alleging inequitable state funding for colleges in South Texas. Last year, ruling on a case filed in 1987 by the Mexican-American Legal Defense and Education Fund that charged state officials with denying a fair share of state resources to public universities in South Texas, State District Judge Benjamin Euresi Jr. gave lawmakers until this May 1 to make changes or quit funding all state colleges and universities.

The state appealed, and the case is still pending adjudication by the Supreme Court, prompting attorneys for the state to express concern about the legal status of bonds issued after May 1 should the court affirm Euresi's order.

To allay those fears, the court held Euresi's injunction in abeyance until a final ruling on the case is issued, which will allow schools to continue selling bonds in good faith.

It was a common-sense decision, one that can keep economic disruption to a minimum while the court continues to study the case.

Family fights to prove convicted rapist is innocent

"I'm fighting for the truth, and I knew from the beginning it was going to be a tough fight." Jacquelyn Mitchell, wife of a convicted Texas rapist.

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

ABILENE, Texas (AP) - Despite compelling and incriminating physical and scientific evidence, the family of a convicted rapist is taking extraordinary steps to prove him innocent.

"PLEASE HELP!!!!" said Jacquelyn Johnson Mitchell in a recent letter to The Associated Press and others.

"We know for a fact he did not commit this crime."

She insists her husband, Johnny Mitchell, 27, was "railroaded" by a zealous Abilene police force under mounting pressure to catch a vicious sex offender known as the "Southside Rapist."

"We realize there are those who simply can't accept the fact that their loved ones have committed such a hideous crime. ... This isn't the case here," Mrs. Mitchell said.

Night and day, the family pores over trial transcripts, investigative reports and major and minor evidence, looking for flaws in the state's case.

"For him, it's like dying a different death every day," Jacquelyn Mitchell said. "For his family, it's like witnessing a loved one being slowly tortured before your very eyes."

"There is such an overwhelming feeling of helplessness and anger."

But Abilene police Det. Jay Hatcher told the AP Mitchell is a "dangerous individual" who grew "worse and worse and worse" as the sexual attacks escalated.

"The evidence is overwhelming," he said. "It is really amazing that the family is fighting this battle with such force."

A jury convicted John Henry Mitchell last fall of raping a 21-year-old Abilene woman and assessed a 99-year prison sentence. He is in jail awaiting trial on another sexual assault.

Police say Mitchell is a suspect in as many as eight attacks in 1991.

With her letter to the AP, Mrs. Mitchell sent volumes of news stories, trial transcripts, investigative records, crime lab reports, letters to and from lawyers and a provocative list labeled "Disturbing Factors."

Also included was a list of "testimonial inconsistencies" and questionable investigative procedures prepared by a lawyer friend of the family, John Young.

"Evidence which could have exonerated Mitchell if properly processed was destroyed, botched or not tested at all," Young concluded.

"... Particularly, I believe there is a serious question regarding the thoroughness and, perhaps integrity of the investigation."

Hatcher, the lead investigator in the Mitchell affair, acknowledged that police made mistakes - none critical - but said that is not uncommon in a long, intensive case involving multiple offenses.

"It is a common defense ploy to look at a grueling investigation and focus on three or four mistakes," he said.

Mrs. Mitchell and her mother, Lucy Johnson, both of nearby Sweetwater, have taken their appeal to everyone from the NAACP to Donahue and Geraldo and to news shows such as "20/20," "Prime Time Live" and "48 Hours."

Just last week, they were in Austin seeking political support from the New Alliance Party.

"I would not be able to sleep at night knowing Johnny was gone for the rest of his life," Mrs. Johnson told a reporter during an interview with her and her daughter in their stylish Sweetwater home.

"We could cope with it better if he was guilty. We could go on with our lives," she said.

"It's enough to make you lose your sanity," her daughter sighed as she attempted to corral her young son, whom she calls Little Johnny.

Mrs. Mitchell and her mother testified that Mitchell was with them in Sweetwater the evening of the assault. And two of Mrs. Mitchell's co-workers at a day-care center swore they saw Mitchell there between 5 p.m. and 5:30 p.m. the Friday in question.

The attack occurred in Abilene, 40 miles east of Sweetwater, between 6:30 p.m. and 7 p.m. on Nov. 15, 1991.

The victim said she was bathing her 3-year-old son at her southside home when a gunman wearing a white hockey mask entered the bathroom and declared: "If you scream, I'll kill you."

The assailant, she said, was wearing a burnt orange satin stadium jacket, a gold earring, dark jeans, a blue Bugle Boy shirt and a distinctive gold ring.

He also wore gloves, one of which he left behind.

She said he dragged her into the bedroom, put a pillow over her head, ripped off her clothes and, when she resisted, threatened to kill her son.

"He got very angry and hit me across the face and kept hitting me," she said.

He sexually abused her with his pistol before raping her, she reported.

After the assault, the victim telephoned her boyfriend, who took her to a hospital. Several vaginal swabs were taken and a nurse said a stain on the victim's underwear tested positive for sperm.

In light of later events, this would be pivotal to the state's case.

On Dec. 3, 1991, after a series of sex crimes, Abilene police sent evidence from six assaults to Fort Worth for DNA testing by the Tarrant County Medical Examiner's office.

At the time, there were no arrests and no suspects.

Two days later, a gunman in a burnt orange jacket and wearing a white hockey mask raped an 11-year-old school girl in her home. Within hours, police arrested an Abilene teen-ager.

At least two people identified him as the assailant and police said it was partial license plate numbers that led to his arrest.

Investigators said he also was a suspect in the earlier southside rapes.

However, on Dec. 9, an Abilene resident telephoned police to report what appeared to be a residential burglary attempt. The caller said a man was acting suspiciously at a nearby duplex.

When police arrived, the man climbed a fence and fled.

"He tried to hide but an officer found him," Melvin Martin, the assistant police chief, told a news conference.

The man was Johnny Mitchell, who was wearing an orange University of Texas jacket and a gold earring when arrested. Investigators soon learned he was on parole for an aggravated robbery conviction nearly a decade earlier.

"We feel this made him the perfect candidate for a major railroad job," Mrs. Mitchell said.

Police also reported finding a pistol and a white hockey mask in bushes outside a motel along Mitchell's purported "path of flight" from the duplex.

Police apparently took no photographs. Nor did they later test the mask for fingerprints, which Hatcher concedes was a mistake.

But investigators soon theorized they were dealing not with a burglar but a rapist, and that the intruder was trying to get at a 17-year-old woman in the other side of the duplex.

"He was caught in the act," Martin, the assistant police chief, told the AP. "But at the time, the officer in pursuit did not realize he was chasing the Southside Rapist."

Under those circumstances, Martin said, he was surprised the family would "go to this extreme" in defending Mitchell.

In a recent jail interview, Mitchell told the AP his lawyer ordered him not to discuss the case, but said: "I wasn't there to bust through the wall to get to her, like the DA wants everybody to believe."

The earlier suspect, meanwhile, was freed on bond, and four months later the charges against him were dropped.

Shortly after Mitchell's arrest, police scoured his Abilene residence with a search warrant. Mitchell and Jacquelyn were not married at the time and he lived with his mother.

The search party reportedly recovered a yellow-gold ring and a single glove, which, though fingerless, appeared to match the glove found in the home of the 21-year-old rape victim.

Hatcher says police took photographs of the evidence in place but inexplicably lost the film. And Mitchell now says neither the ring nor glove were his.

Investigators and a doctor also took blood and saliva samples and head and pubic hairs from Mitchell and these, too, were sent to Fort Worth.

The evidence against Mitchell was presented first at a bond revocation hearing in March 1992. And even though the rape victim testified, the parole board refused to revoke bond, citing insufficient evidence.

However, when the case came to trial last November, the victim recalled more vividly many details of the episode that tended to incriminate Mitchell, including identification of the ring.

Even more compelling was the DNA evidence.

Dr. Meghan Clement of Fort Worth, a forensic biologist in the medical examiner's office, testified that Mitchell's blood matched sperm from the rape analysis on five of five "probes" of DNA material.

The National Research Council, in a 1992 report on DNA technology in forensic science, noted that "even in today's technology, which uses three to five loci (probes), a match between two DNA patterns can be considered strong evidence that the two samples came from the same source."

"My personal feeling in this case, with a five-for-five probe match, the chances of this DNA originating from someone else are infinitesimally small," Ms. Clement said.

Fort Worth lawyer Bill Lane, who tried the first case in Texas to incorporate DNA testing, is a strong advocate of using DNA evidence in criminal cases.

But he told the AP such evidence is easy to fabricate and "is no better than the integrity of the police department that collects it."

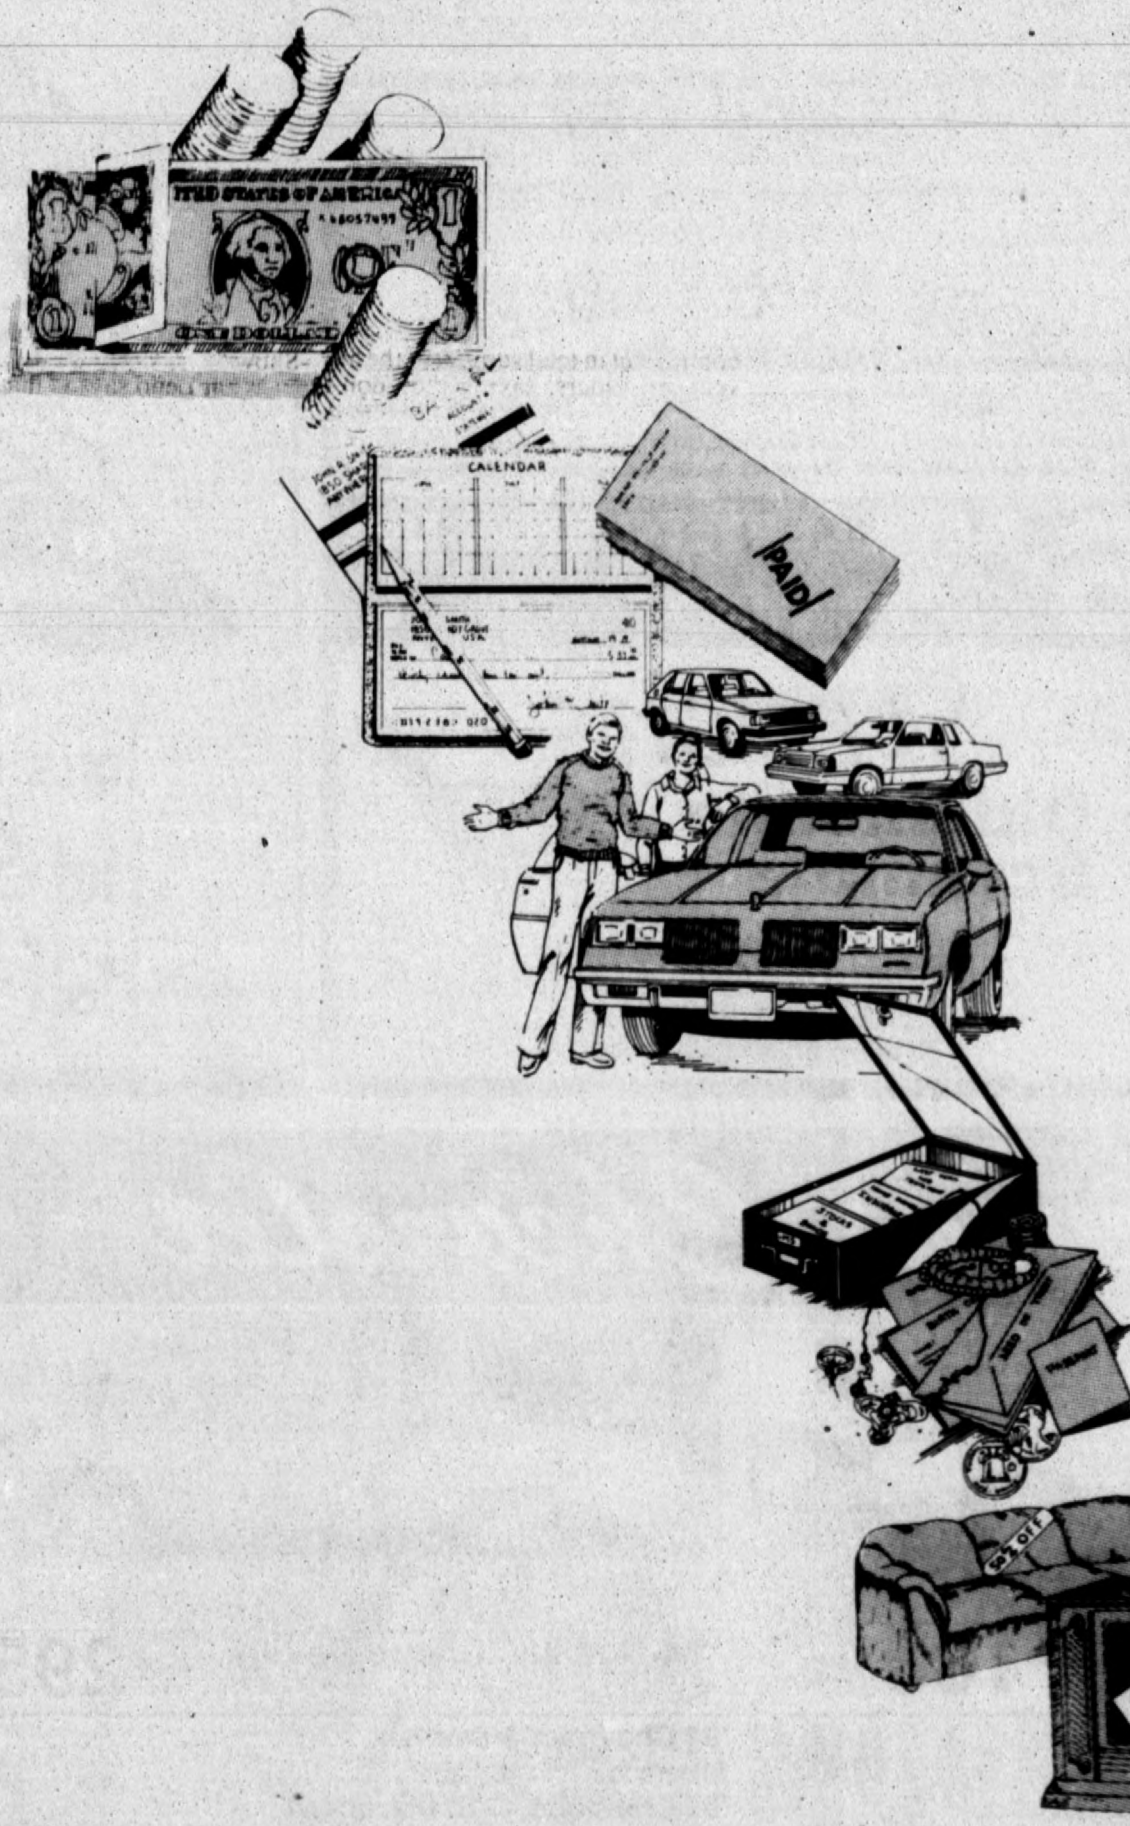

Mitchell, in the jail interview, offered no explanation for the DNA results but said: "Something isn't right about this. There shouldn't have been a match. I was in another city at the time."

His wife is more adamant.

"We know beyond a shadow of a doubt that the DNA had to be tampered with," Mrs. Mitchell said. "The evidence is in there somewhere and I'll dig until I find it."

"I don't care how long it takes."

Sox' Clemens makes sparkling return

By The Associated Press

Boston surged while Roger Clemens was on the disabled list, so it was only natural that the Red Sox stayed hot when he returned.

The Rocket allowed one run on four hits and struck out six in six innings Friday night in his first appearance since June 18, lifting Boston to a 5-3 victory over the Seattle Mariners.

The outcome capped an upbeat day for Red Sox manager Butch Hobson, who signed a one-year contract extension before the game. Before the Red Sox posted a 15-5 record with Clemens on the disabled list with a groin injury, Hobson's job security was decidedly shaky.

"I was a little sharper than I expected to be," said Clemens (8-6). "It was an exciting day. We got good news about 10 minutes before we took the field about Butch. You have to feel good about that."

Clemens was at his best in two tight situations.

He struck out Rich Amaral with the bases loaded to end the second, and allowed just one run after Seattle loaded the bases with one out in the fourth. Amaral drove in the run with a groundout.

Elsewhere in the American League, it was California 2, Cleveland 1; New York 10, Oakland 3; Baltimore 9, Minnesota 7; Kansas City 7, Toronto 3; Chicago 4, Milwaukee 3; and Texas 9, Detroit 6.

Bob Zupcic and Mike Greenwell had two-run doubles and Andre Dawson doubled in another run for Boston, which scored two runs in the third inning and three in the fourth, all with two outs.

The Mariners, who had a six-game winning streak broken, left 11 men on base. They made it 5-2 in the eighth on Dave Valle's RBI single and got a sacrifice fly from Jay Buhner in the ninth.

Jeff Russell, the fourth Boston pitcher, got the last three outs for his 21st save.

Rangers 9, Tigers 6

Juan Gonzalez hit a pair of two-run homers at Arlington Stadium to become the 11th-youngest player to reach 100 home runs, and Texas stretched its winning streak to six games by defeating Detroit.

Gonzalez hit a two-run shot in the first inning and added his major league-leading 25th homer of the season in the third, giving the Rangers a 6-2 lead. He reached 100 career homers at 23 years and nine months, tying him with Joe DiMaggio for No. 11 on the major league list.

White Sox 4, Brewers 3

Chicago stayed in first place in the AL West when Lance Johnson tripled and scored the winning run on Ron Karkovics' suicide bunt single in the ninth inning, capping a tumultuous victory at Milwaukee.

Johnson tripled off Cal Eldred (10-9) before Karkovics' bunt got past third baseman B.J. Surhoff. Roberto Hernandez then retired the Brewers in the bottom of the ninth for his 18th save, making a winner of White Sox reliever Scott Radinsky (3-0).

Orioles 9, Twins 7

Mike Devereaux, Harold Baines and David Segui each hit their sixth homer of the season in the fifth inning, carrying Baltimore past Minnesota. Devereaux went 4-for-4 with three RBIs as the Orioles won for the sixth time in eight games.

Kent Hrbek homered and drove in four runs for the Twins.

Mike Mussina (11-4) was the winner despite allowing six runs in six innings.

13-year old Babe Ruth All-Stars knocked from regional tourney

Hereford's 13-year-old Babe Ruth All-Stars were knocked out of the regional tournament in Canyon with a 21-11 thrashing by Plainview Friday. Plainview scored 10 runs in the second inning to take a 13-2 lead. Hereford's bats started to get hot, as Hereford scored three in the third and four in the fourth, but it wasn't quite enough to avoid being beat by the 10-run rule after five innings.

Plainview took the regional title without a loss in the double-elimination tournament and goes on to the state tourney. Hereford needed to beat Plainview twice Friday to win the tournament.

Tanner Murphey led Hereford with two hits and three RBI. Sonny Perez drove in two runs, and Jeremy Brock, Raymond Gonzales and John Marty Galan each had one RBI. Wade McPherson added two hits.

Hereford's 14- and 15-year-old All-Stars were set to resume their tournament Saturday afternoon in Plainview after several days of rainouts. The Hereford team lost Tuesday in their first game of the tournament.

Davis finds old form with Padres

By FRANK ELTMAN

Associated Press Writer

Welcome back, Mark Davis.

After saving 44 games and winning the 1989 Cy Young Award with the San Diego Padres, Davis decided to seek his fortune in the free agent market.

He signed a four-year, $13 million deal with the Kansas City Royals, but turned into a bust, saving only seven games in three seasons. The Royals sent him to Atlanta in 1992 and he moved to Philadelphia in the off-season.

He was released by the Phillies last week and the bargain-hunting Padres decided to give him another chance. His $3.25 million salary this season is being paid by Kansas City, Atlanta, Philadelphia and San Diego.

On Friday night, Davis saved his second consecutive game (his first two since 1991) as he helped the Padres beat the slumping Phillies 5-3 at Jack Murphy Stadium.

"It's nice to do that, but I'd like to just come out and do what I can to help the team, whenever and wherever that is," Davis said.

Padres manager Jim Riggleman said, "He's a quality pitcher. Whatever the reasons he struggled before, I don't know, it's hard to throw better than he is now. He's got a good fastball and breaking ball."

Tony Gwynn hit a two-run homer to cap a five-run seventh inning as the Padres sent first-place Philadelphia to its sixth loss in eight games.

Elsewhere in the NL it was Houston 7, St. Louis 6; Los Angeles 2, Montreal 1; San Francisco 4, New York 2; Atlanta 3, Pittsburgh 2; Cincinnati 4, Florida 0; and Chicago 8, Colorado 2.

Astros 7, Cardinals 6

Eric Anthony hit a tie-breaking home run in the eighth inning to help Houston beat St. Louis in 94-degree heat at Busch Stadium. Anthony hit reliever Lee Guetterman's (1-1) first pitch over the right-field wall for his eighth home run, snapping a 4-4 tie. Reliever Tom Edens (1-1) pitched two scoreless innings for the victory.

Giants 4, Mets 2

Darren Lewis had two hits, drove in a run and set a defensive record, leading the San Francisco to a victory over New York at Candlestick Park.

The Giants spoiled a fine outing by Dwight Gooden (8-10). San Francisco starter Brian Hickerson (4-1) allowed five hits in seven innings.

Rod Beck got the last three outs - all strikeouts - for his 25th save.

Lewis played in his 267th consecutive game in the outfield without an error, breaking the record of Don Demeter with Philadelphia and Detroit (1962-1965).

Rangers' draft picks are best since '86 class

By SIMON GONZALEZ
Fort Worth Star-Telegram
ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - Mike Bell considered his fellow members of the Class of 1993, and a smile slowly spread across his face.

"It's the best team I've ever played on," he said. "I think that's safe to say."
Safe to say? The Texas Rangers certainly hope so. Bell's last team was the Cincinnati state high school champion. Bell's current team is the Rangers' representative in the Gulf Coast rookie league, a club Texas officials say could be their best ever at that level.

"It's the most talented I've ever had, without a doubt," said Chino Cadahia, the Gulf Coast manager since 1988.

The Gulf Coast Rangers are loaded with the best, the brightest and the youngest prospects from the June amateur draft. The roster is filled with talented teen-agers, including Texas' first seven picks.

"They're very impressive," Rangers farm director Marty Scott said. "The jury's still out, but the early reports are that everybody's excited about them."

The young Rangers are so impressive that they are being mentioned in the same breath as the Class of '86. That year's draft crop included six future major-leaguers - a few of whom could be classified as superstars.

Juan Gonzalez, Dean Palmer, Sammy Sosa, Rey Sanchez, Kevin Brown, Roger Pavlik and Wayne Rosenthal all made the major leagues.

Cadahia didn't manage the Rangers that year, when they played in Sarasota, Fla. But he did manage most of the Class of '86 the next season at Class-A Gastonia. And he said Bell, Edwin Diaz, Andrew Vessel, Toure Knighton, Rodéric Walker, Daniel Smith and Mark Ocasio, the first seven choices this year, have similar potential.

"If we can come up with that ('86) draft all over again, we're going to be OK," Cadahia said. "I think it will happen again here."

The similarities between '86 and '93 begin with the ages of the players.

With the exception of Brown, who played three games at Sarasota before moving up to Double-A Tulsa, and St. John's University product Rosenthal, the Class of '86 graduated from high school to the pros.

The same holds for this year's group. All seven were in high school just a month and a half ago. Walker and Smith are 17. The other five are 18.

Sandy Johnson, Rangers assistant general manager for player personnel and scouting, said the team didn't make a conscious decision to draft teen-agers. They just were the best players available.

"The guys at the top or our list were high school guys," Johnson said. "We stayed with the philosophy of whoever's at the top of our list we'll take. It turned out to be high school guys."

That doesn't mean there wasn't some trepidation about using the first seven choices on players who are several years away from helping the big-league club.

"Rather than go safely (with college players) we decided to take a chance on the high ceiling of the high school guys," Johnson said.

They took them because of the other similarity between the Class of '86 and the Class of '93: the ability to hit, catch and throw a baseball. The talent begins with Bell, a third baseman and their first pick in the draft.

The son of former Ranger Buddy Bell, he is leading the rookies with a .395 batting average. He had one double, six triples, one home run and 12 runs batted in through Tuesday, even though he's just now beginning to feel comfortable with a wooden bat.

"I'm starting to adjust to it, getting used to it," he said. "Anybody who says it's easy to hit with them doesn't know what they're talking about."

"Bell plays good defense and has a good bat," Scott said.

That also applies to Edwin Diaz, the second-round choice. The 18-year-old from Vega Baja, Puerto Rico, the same hometown as Gonzalez and Rangers catcher Ivan Rodriguez, is hitting .333 with seven extra-base hits, has stolen seven bases in nine attempts and playing a stellar second base.

"I'm very impressed with Diaz," Scott said. "Based on all the skills he exhibited he is a No. 1 draft pick, too. He's a solid second baseman who turns the pivot well. He'll hit some homers and steal bases for you."

Third-round pick Andrew Vessel should do the same thing. The 6-foot-3, 205-pound outfielder combines a powerful frame with a quick swing.

"When you see a kid with that swing, you can't help but get excited about him," Cadahia said.

Vessel is a favorite of Cadahia because he arrives at the ballpark every day with a smile on his face and with the desire to learn.

"I see him doing things now he couldn't do five days ago," Cadahia said.

Vessel has yet to hit a ball out of the yard, but no one's particularly worried. Gonzalez, who hit 43 home runs last year, didn't hit any homers when he was a rookie, even though he had a league-leading 233 at-bats.

When the comparisons to '86 are being made, Bell, Diaz and Vessel play the roles of Palmer, the Rangers third baseman, Sanchez, the Chicago Cubs shortstop, and Gonzalez, Texas' All-Star outfielder. Not just because Bell and Palmer are third basemen, Diaz and Sanchez are middle infielders and Vessel and Gonzalez are outfielders, but because they have similar potential.

"Those three are real exciting," Scott said.

The Rangers are also excited about Knighton, Ocasio and Smith, a trio of right-handed pitchers.

Knighton is 0-1 with a 4.09 earned-run average but has three walks and 13 strikeouts in 11 innings. Ocasio is the big winner of the staff so far. He is 2-0 with a 2.01 ERA. Smith is 1-1 with a 3.86 ERA.

"The three pitchers all look real good," Scott said. "They're not afraid to pitch inside. They have a good idea of what they're doing."

The final member of the Magnificent Seven is Walker, the shortstop.

He is struggling with a .154 average in his first 10 games, but no one is worried. Walker turned 17 in February and was the youngest player in the draft, so the Rangers anticipated some difficulties in his first season.

"He'll have his problems here, but that's to be expected," Cadahia said. But even when he doesn't look good at the plate, he displays some positive attributes.

"He's not afraid to charge the ball," Scott said. "Sometimes he gets out of control, but I like his aggressiveness."

While Rangers officials are excited about their rookies, no one expects all seven to march through the system and into the major leagues.

"There are so many things that can happen," Johnson said. "You've got injuries, you've got to hope they stay together mentally and physically. It depends on how they'll handle adversity, what kinds of bodies they'll have. So many things are out of our hands."

Cadahia knows that it's unrealistic to expect all seven to appear in the majors someday. He has had talented players before who never made it.

"This is not a picnic," he said. "On any given day they're here before 8 a.m. It's not an easy life. It takes total dedication. A lot of kids don't adjust."

But a lot do. Seven did it in 1986. The Rangers hope history repeats itself.

Pebble beach is golf heaven

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) - Jack Nicklaus was right. Pebble Beach is where you would like to be sentenced if you only had one golf course to play for the rest of your life.

A lifetime of stuffing the piggy bank with coins led this vacationing golf gypsy to the shores of the Pacific ocean and to the course that has the most spectacular stretch of holes and real estate in the world.

Augusta National, St. Andrews, Royal Troon, Spyglass, Bay Hill, Cherry Hills and Olympic, have their own particular appeal, especially Augusta National amid the pines, flowers, and green velvet fairways.

What can be more scenic than waves crashing against rocks, marking one of the most permanent out-of-bounds you've ever seen? Ball retrievers don't work here.

It's hard to concentrate at Pebble Beach. You can hear seals barking and it's tempting to watch a sea otter try to crack an abalone shell on a rock.

On land, deer stroll across the fairway like they are unafraid of what happens if they get hit by a line-drive 3-iron.

From the air, seagulls and crows swoop down on your golfcart to steal any food they can find. Recently, a lady lost a ring she had put in her cart while she made a swing. The seagull just carried it off.

The ocean doesn't come into play until you reach the seventh hole, a 100-yard shot from the top of a cliff with the tiny green below. Hit the ball too hard and you're in the ocean. Hit it too soft and you are bunkered short of the green.

This day my lucky lurch with an 8-iron into the wind landed three feet from the pin. The putt dropped for a birdie deuce.

On to the eighth hole, a 400-yard par-4 doglegs right around the ocean. Your second shot has to carry over a cliff.

On the ninth and tenth holes, the ocean is on your right, awaiting a pushed tee shot.

The course swings back inland. Eventually you come to No. 14, a long par-5 that has a green as hard to hold with a shot as an upside down saucer. The bunker in front could swallow a team of Clydesdale horses. It's rated one of the best and toughest par-5s in the world.

The 16th hole is an intriguing par-4 which gives you two different areas to land your tee shot. This par-4 is protected by deep bunkers and overhanging trees.

Then comes the famed 17th, a 200-yard par-3 where Tom Watson once chipped into the hole out of thick rough around the green to beat Nicklaus in the U.S. Open. The green is protected by a deep bunker and a hooked shot will find the land of the sharks and whales.

The 18th could be, and if it's not should be, the most famous hole in the world. It's a sweeping dogleg left along the curve of Carmel Bay and the ocean. For a golfer, it's terrifying to see all that beach, rocks and ocean below.

Hale Irwin came to the hole once leading a tournament on the final day and hooked his tee shot badly. While it was on its way to be shark bait, the ball hit a rock and ricocheted back onto the fairway. Irwin went on to win the tournament.

I did the wimp thing here and bailed out to the right on three straight shots to ensure a bogey six.

It was a tremendous golfing experience playing Pebble which we've all seen so many times on television during the Bing Crosby Pro-Am, now the AT&T Pebble Beach Pro-Am.

If you want to play Pebble, start saving dollars not pennies. Pebble Beach, and nearby Spyglass and Spanish Bay are under new management since the Japanese bought the property.

The course was in great shape but the green fee situation is ugly. If you don't stay in the hotel (The Lodge) on the premises then you have to fork over $225 to tee it up. Only 15 years ago the green fee was $40.

One night's stay at The Lodge is about $300. But they'll knock down your green fee to $175. I played a "twilight" round at Pebble after 5 p.m. and it was a "bargain" at $125. That was the best deal. I finished just at dark, chasing deer off the greens so I could putt.

It's a crime that a national treasure and a public golf course like Pebble Beach has such pistol-to-your-head rates.

Maybe President Clinton's wheeling and dealing with the Japanese will produce lower green fees at Pebble.

Counting green fees of $175 and $125, it cost me about $8 per hole for my 36 holes at Pebble Beach.

Pray tell what will it be in five years.

My memories of 85 and 81 from the gentlemen tees will have to last a long, long time.

Extension News

By BEVERLY HARDER County Extension Agent-H.E.

It is estimated that Americans will spend $236.5 billion while eating out this year, but how will they know which meals are more nutritious?

The average American eats out 3.8 meals per week or 198 meals per year, according to 1993 National Restaurant Association Foodservice Industry Forecast figures. Also, Americans are purchasing more take-out foods to eat off premises of the restaurant.

So, knowledge of factors such as ingredients and preparation methods are still essential in making healthier choices. Also, if you are on a special diet such as a diabetes diet or just want to eat healthfully, knowledge about serving size from each of the six food groups--breads, vegetables, fruits, meat, milk and fats--is essential.

Many of the restaurants are offering heart-healthy choices designated by a heart on the menu. These foods are low in fat, saturated fatty acids, cholesterol, sugar and sodium. Some of the fast-food restaurants are offering information about the nutritive value, including carbohydrate, protein, fat, calories, sodium and cholesterol content of the food items on the menus. Many restaurants are even providing nutrition education bulletins on topics such as the dietary guidelines, healthy eating tips as well as selection of healthier food choices just to attract customers.

Skills and strategies for teaching clients to eat away from home are listed below:

- Develop healthful mind set and a can-do attitude.
- Determine frequency of eating out--how often, where, when and what's ordered.
- Balance higher-calorie restaurant food with lower-calorie choices the rest of the day and exercise.
- Preplan for what you will eat before eating out.
- Ask the server about preparation methods, ingredients used and added fat.
- Ask about portion size.
- Make special requests such as a luncheon portion for a dinner meal. Or, ask for a doggie bag to take extra food not eaten home.
- Enjoy the non-food pleasantries of restaurant dining.
- Remember, alcohol provides extra calories, plus increases your appetite. So, if you are trying to control your caloric intake, then select either tea, coffee, water, skim milk or juice.
- Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, religion, handicap or national origin.

Air conditioner needs routine cleaning

"My window air conditioner is humming right along, but doesn't seem to be cooling as well as it did earlier this month. Does it need service?"

According to home economists a room air conditioner that seems to have lost some of its "oomph" probably just needs a little routine maintenance rather than a service technician.

"The most frequent cause of poor cooling is a dirty or clogged air filter," they report. To correct the problem, home economists offer these suggestions:

- First, check the manufacturer's use and care instructions for removing, cleaning and replacing the filter.
- Remove the filter. If it's coated with dust, clean with a vacuum cleaner dusting brush.
- If the filter is very dirty, wash it in warm water with a mild detergent. Blot moisture from the filter with a towel, or air dry thoroughly before replacing.
- Replace the clean, dry filter. Economists suggest checking the air conditioner filter every two weeks and cleaning it before it becomes dust-coated.

How to call for help

Do you know what to do if someone is suddenly sick or badly injured? "In an emergency, every second counts," says Kelley Hails, MD, Medical Director of Emergency Medical Services (EMS) in Dover, NH. "Find out whether you can call 9-1-1 for emergencies in your area. If not, know your local emergency numbers and keep them by the telephone to get the help you need fast."

Emergency medical services, or EMS, is a whole team of emergency professionals who are trained to handle medical, fire, rescue and other emergency situations. The team includes dispatch operators, emergency medical technicians and paramedics, fire fighters and police, and emergency nurses and physicians.

In communities that have a 9-1-1 system, simply dialing 9-1-1 in an emergency will connect you with EMS, the police and the fire department. In other communities you should keep the list of emergency numbers by the telephone. Be sure to find out the correct numbers when you are away from home on business or vacation.

Even very young children should know how to call for emergency medical help. Teach your children how to call for help from home and from a pay telephone.

When should you call an ambulance instead of driving to the emergency department or calling your doctor? Ask yourself the following questions:

-Is the victim's condition life threatening?

-Could the condition get worse and become life-threatening on the way to the hospital?

-Does the victim need the skills or equipment of paramedics or emergency medical technicians?

-Would distance or traffic conditions cause a delay in getting to the hospital?

"If the answer to any of these questions is yes, or if you are unsure, call an ambulance," says Dr. Hails. "Paramedics and EMT's communicate with the emergency physician by radio. They are trained to begin medical treatment on the way to the hospital, and to alert the emergency department of the patient's condition in advance."

When you call for help, speak calmly and clearly. Give your name, the address, phone number, and location of the patient (such as upstairs in the bedroom). Describe the problem or situation. Don't hang up until the dispatcher tells you to—they may need more information or need to give you instructions.

News for veterans

As has always been the case throughout the years, veterans stand ready to do their fair share in getting our nation's economic house in order.

Even so-or perhaps for this very reason - we must redouble our vigilance in ensuring that the additional sacrifices asked of us are fair, and that VA and veterans' programs not be lumped together with those out-of-control federal programs that are truly responsible for the nation's plight.

Lawmakers have at least, for now, embarked on the extremely difficult fiscal journey of trying to achieve, if not a balanced budget, at least one that is arguably more in keeping with a fiscally responsible approach to government spending.

...nee Yolanda Chavez

Chavez, Saucedada vows exchanged July 10

Yolanda Chavez of Hereford became the bride of Tommy Saucedada of Ballinger during an afternoon wedding ceremony Saturday, July 10, in St. Anthony's Catholic Church of Hereford.

The ceremony was officiated by Msgr. Orville Blum of the church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lupe Chavez of Hereford and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Margarito Saucedada of Ballinger.

Faz-Zita Chavez of Brownfield served as maid of honor and Eric Lugo of Ballinger was best man.

Padrinos included: Mr. and Mrs. Leo Ortiz of Quitaque, lasso; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Escobar of Rowena, Bible and rosary; Mr. and Mrs. David Pena of Midland, cojinos; and Mr. and Mrs. Bennie Medrano of Ballinger, arras.

Serving as bridesmaids were Sylvia Ortiz of Quitaque, the bride's cousin; Lucy Cano, Stratford; Delma Martinez of Quitaque, the bride's cousin; Lisa Chavez of Hereford, the bride's sister; and Melinda Martinez of Quitaque, the bride's cousin.

Groomsmen were B.J. Gomez, Mario Medrano, Victor Garza, the groom's cousin, and Bobby Gomez, ail of Ballinger, and Robert Caballero of Hereford.

Serving as ushers were Randy Villarreal of Lubbock; Peter Saucedada of Ballinger, the groom's brother; and Margarito Saucedada Jr. of Grand Prairie, the groom's brother.

Candles were lit by Amanda Chavez and Jimmy Roy Martinez, both cousins of the bride.

Sharon Cramer, accompanied by Tanya and Benny Dominguez of Brooklyn, N.Y., the bride's sister and brother-in-law, sang "The Wedding Song," "Taste and See," "Our Prayer For You" and "Pan de Vida."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a white satin designer's gown fashioned with a modified scalloped sweetheart neckline, fitted bodice, basque waistline and bishop sleeves which extended to the wrists. Lace appliques, beads, pearls and sequins further adorned the gown and the sleeves which were accented with white bows with pearls. The hemline was edged with scalloped lace and extended into a chapel-length train.

The sunrise veil, accented with hand-beaded pearls, was attached to a floral headpiece with sprays of pearls, white satin flowers and sequins.

The bride carried a cascading arrangement of white silk roses accented with dusty rose ribbon and dusty rose miniature roses.

Her jewelry included a pearl necklace with a pearl drop surrounded by diamonds and pearl earrings surrounded by diamonds.

Bridal attendants wore mauve satin knee-high length gowns fashioned with sweetheart necklines and lace bishop sleeves with hand-beaded pearls that extended to the elbows. Each carried a bouquet of pink roses and white and mauve carnations.

Diane Hanna invited guests to register at the church and the reception/dance held at the Bull Barn. The music was provided by Sumthing Simple.

Former Hereford resident, Chad Fitzgerald of Midland, created the wedding cake which was served by Laura LaFuente, Terry Perez and Veronica Diaz. The nine-tiered Italian creme cake was surrounded with rubin lilies, pink and white roses, burgundy astromerias, pink mini carnations, purple status, baby's breath and tropical greenery. The groom's double layered chocolate heart cake was surrounded with pink roses.

The church was decorated with white bows which marked the pews and floral arrangements which were created with mauve carnations, pink miniature carnations, white gladioli and tropical greens.

The bride is a 1986 graduate of Hereford High School and received her Bain social work from West Texas A&M University in 1991. She is currently employed by the Texas Department of Health and is seeking a masters degree in psychology and counseling from West Texas A&M University.

The groom is a 1987 graduate of Ballinger High School and will receive a BS degree in kinesiology from West Texas A&M University in December. He is currently working at Tri-State Chemicals.

Hawaii was organized as a U.S. territory in 1900.

Summer homes need a thorough cleaning before moving in since allergy-causing mold and mildew have had all winter to grow. To kill germs that cause mold and mildew and eliminate the source of odors, treat surfaces with a disinfectant. Don't use products like ammonia, baking soda or vinegar which may clean but do not disinfect.

Teach kids to recognize and avoid poison ivy, oak and sumac. If your child is exposed, seek a doctor's advice for treatment and keep the child from scratching the infected area.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: In your column someone asked how to keep armchair covers on the chair.

I have been using twist pins which can be bought at any fabric store. They have a clear plastic head and a thin spiral wire. You just twist them through the cover and into the chair.

They will not tear or hurt the fabric. I have been using them for years and they work perfectly.

To remove them you just untwist and they come right out. — E.H., Colorado Springs, Colo.

— YOUR EYES —

SUN'S OUT!

Of course, the sun is out all year around, but somehow we don't seem to notice it as much until spring when the days are longer and we spend more time out of doors.

Time was, wearing sunglasses was a matter of comfort. But now that we know that sunlight can damage our eyes as much as it burns the skin, it's extra-important to protect them from ultraviolet rays.

The American National Standards Institute (ANSI) has set up a ratings system. Cosmetic lenses that absorb less than 60 percent of visible light offer some eye comfort but little real protection. What ANSI calls general-purpose lenses will absorb from 60 to 92 percent of visible light, 95 percent of ultraviolet-B and 60 percent of ultra-violet-A, good enough for most outdoor activities in temperate regions. But where sun will be reflected off sand, snow or water, special purpose lenses are recommended to block at least 99 percent of UB-B, 60 percent of UV-A and up to 97 percent of visible light.

Americans wage war

For many Americans, a 29 cent investment may be the best they ever made. They're buying stamps to stick on letters to their legislators, expressing opinions on an important subject: PACs.
 Although the letters stand for Political Action Committee, many people believe they also stand for Protect American Citizens against loss of money, loss of jobs, even loss of freedom.

candidates understand the importance of health insurance, prenatal care, the health needs of the elderly and much more. Architects can get out the facts on environmental protection, historic preservation, affordable housing and livable communities. Through a PAC, you can tell Washington what's important to you.

PACs are a way for ordinary citizens to band together with their peers and make their needs and ideas heard in elections for Congress, in accordance with the right of free speech and to petition the government guaranteed by the First Amendment to the Constitution. There are PACs for nurses, teachers, dentists, architects and probably one representing you through your company, union or other interest group.

PACs were born in the political reform movement of the mid-1970's. Some political reformers of the 1990's want to eliminate or strictly curtail them in the name of campaign finance reform. Experts believe this is not only unnecessary, it could be a big mistake, in terms of protecting personal rights and promoting accountability of campaign funding. It also could affect the ability of economic interests to work with government, perhaps, endangering jobs and prices.

By pooling their contributions, PAC members become players in their country's political process. In a democracy, the experts say, PACs promote aspects of government that make society more tolerant of diversity, better educated, and more vigilant and involved as citizens. PACs stimulate small campaign donations and increase the political reach of average Americans.

Through PACs, teachers can promote their interests, such as drug free schools, adult literacy and dropout prevention. Nurses can help

Tips on buying a car

Here are some car buying tips that can help you drive a real bargain.

Before you begin, decide if your family needs a large vehicle with four doors and lots of load space, or a small, economical, easy-to-park model. Next, make a list of all the makes and models you're interested in and do some homework on those cars.

The Test Drive

The only way to get a proper feel for the performance, handling, ride and comfort of a new car or truck is to drive it. You should test drive all the models you're considering and you should drive them on different types of roads.

How much should you spend? There's no magic formula, but the car payments should fit comfortably within your budget without crowding regular fixed expenses.

The very nearest star to the earth is about 7,000 times as far away as the most distant planet.

Buy Or Lease?

There are two types of leases; closed-end and open-end.

When a closed-end lease ends, you simply return the vehicle. You don't owe any additional money. An open-end lease generally offers lower monthly payments, but includes a specific value that the vehicle will be worth at the end of the lease period. If it's worth less, you owe the difference.

Advantages of leasing include fast and easy possession with little down payment. The obvious disadvantage is that you do not own your vehicle and build no equity as you make payments.

Price

Although prices are sometimes negotiable, automobiles are the only consumer items required by law to carry manufacturer suggested retail price stickers. This offers guidance for negotiations.

Remember, don't sign a contract until you are sure you have made the right decision. Finally, before driving away, the salesperson should go through the owner's manual and explain any special break-in procedures as well as routine maintenance schedules.

By taking just a little time, you can get the car or truck you want at the terms best for you.

This is the last week of the Summer Reading Club. On Tuesday, July 20th at 10:00 am Veterinarian Venita Purdy will be bringing two of her dogs and presenting a program on pet care and training. July 24th will be the last day that the prizes for the reading will be awarded. Don't forget to come by to get your prizes and pick up your tigers. All of the club members have worked hard this summer and deserve a pat on the back for their effort. I also want to thank you parents for your support and making it possible for your children to be a part of our library program.

The new book list this week begins with Jack Higgins Thunder Point. The story begins in 1945 in the Fuhrer's Berlin Bunker, the day before Adolf Hitler's suicide. The Fuhrer has arranged for Reichsleiter Martin Bormann to flee Germany and arrive in South America via German U-Boat. Then in 1992 Sean Dillon, an elusive terrorist is saved from a firing squad in Yugoslavia by Brigadier Charles Ferguson, the head of the British prime minister's personal action unit "Group Four." In exchange for his life Dillon must take the "black job" for Ferguson in the Caribbean. The wreck of the German U-boat has been discovered at Thunder Point just off the coast of St. Johns in the American Virgin Islands. Dillon is to retrieve the diary belonging to the U-boat captain and the contents of the watertight briefcase belonging to Martin Bormann. The papers are thought to contain the names of members of the British establishment who were Nazi sympathizers. Also among the papers, they hope to find the "Windsor Protocol." This is the document signed by the Duke of Windsor which assured his ascension to the British throne following the successful invasion of Britain by German forces in 1940. Ferguson wishes to spare the Royal family the horrific embarrassment of this discovery, while others are determined to gain the documents for their own sinister reasons.

Nicole McGeehee, the former managing editor of the Washington Report on Latin America and the Caribbean presents her first novel Regret Not a Moment. This "richly satisfying novel begins in the 1930's. Devon Richmond is the beautiful, witty, and intelligent daughter of a prominent Virginia family. Many men have tried to capture Devon's heart, but none have succeeded until dynamic business tycoon John Alexander arrives. Theirs is a fairy-tale romance. They marry, raise a family and create the best Thorough bred horse farm in the world. Then a terrible tragedy devastates their marriage and Devon must struggle to overcome this adversity on her own terms.

The Road To Willville by T. Corghaessan Boyle takes place in the book town of Battle Creek, Michigan in 1907. Dr. John Harvey Kellogg, inventor of the corn flake, peanut butter and coffee substitutes promises the secret to a longer and healthier life. The Battle Creek Sanitarium, the "Temple of Health," is a luxury hotel hospital and spa rolled into one and will see to the needs of over twenty eight hundred patients. The rich, the preposterously rich, and the famous from all over come to Dr. Kellogg for his dietary wisdom in search of the magic pill that will prolong their lives. Among the visitors is Eleanor Lightbody a beautiful, rich, health nut that lives out the vegetarian ethos with a vengeance. Will Lightbody, a man with an undiagnosed stomach ailment who loves his wife so much that he also becomes one of the patrons of the "Temple of Health." This is a delightfully witty adventure.

Hill Towers by Anne Rivers Siddons introduces Catherine Gaillard, who suffered a very traumatic incident as a small child which left her unable to leave Montview, the small college town in Tennessee. Thirty years later, now married to Joe, Catherine ventures out of her safe haven to Italy to attend the Roman wedding of their friends Colin and Maria. At first Italy seems frantic and unsafe to Catherine, but gradually Cat becomes enthralled by Italy's beauty and vitality. With each new discovery that Cat tries to share with Joe he seems to become more distant. Then Cat meets Sam Forrest, a charismatic American painter who has joined the group as the tour the hill towns of Tuscany.

Cut firewood now, enjoy fires later

If you've found it hard to kindle a winter flame, you may have cut your firewood at the wrong time.

That's the opinion of forestry experts. According to Forestry Engineer Mark Michaels, suburbanites, farmers and "week-end woodsmen" who do their own cutting will get best results from following a few simple steps.

-Cut firewood in spring or early summer. This will allow it to dry properly and burn more easily next fall.

-When cutting, stand on firm ground to one side of the cut. Keep an escape route open, should a log start to roll.

-If the trunk has a downward bend, start the cut at the top. Make the final cut from underneath.

-Avoid pinching the saw in any fallen trunk that is under tension. To do this, make the first cut one third the way into the tree on the side opposite the tension. Then, finish the cut on the side under tension.

-When cutting a pile of wood, make sure the chain saw tip does not come in contact with any logs behind the one you are cutting. Such contact may cause the saw to "kick back." Put larger logs on a sawhorse first. Never stand on a log pile.

-Always wear protective clothing: work gloves, eye and ear protection and chain saw protective pants or chaps.

Over the past decade, the U.S. death rate from asthma rose by nearly 50 percent, according to recent reports from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. About 12 million Americans suffer from the suffocating disease, including 2.7 million children.

Between The Covers

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - Actors named Connery, Quinn and Welch are starring in a new western to be shot here this fall.

But they're not Sean, Anthony and Raquel.

The film titled "Leska" is due to star Francesco Quinn, son of Anthony; Jason Connery, son of Sean; and Tahane Welch, daughter of Raquel. The film, directed by Jim Fargo ("Every Which Way But Loose" and "The Enforcer") is about a Sioux Indian.

"All the children are around the same ages as when their parents broke in," said co-producer Penny Styles McLean.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This is in response to "Housemates in the Northwest," whose wife rejected him sexually.

I am one of those wives who rejected her husband. We've been married only two years. I'm in counseling now, and my husband appreciates my efforts to overcome my aversion to sex. When I read the letter from "Housemates," I felt terrible, because I saw myself doing the same thing.

I was active sexually as a teen-ager, but when my husband and I married, intimacy came to a screeching halt. I love him dearly and enjoy the hugs and kisses and cuddling at night, but sex is terrifying. In this world of wife beaters, divorce and cheating husbands, I realize that my husband is a prince. I am sick at heart that I am not able to be as generous and loving as he is. We also want children, but I've already suffered two miscarriages and an ectopic pregnancy.

Although I feel sorry for "Housemates," I wanted to let someone know that not all wives who are unable to be sexually active hate their husbands. I adore mine and pray that my condition is not permanent.--Loving But Not Able in Texas

DEAR TEXAS: I'm glad you are getting counseling, because you need it. There's a strong possibility that your miscarriages and ectopic pregnancy have a lot to do with your aversion to sex. Or can it be that you were sexually abused as a child?

I'm sure your counselor will pick up on all of the above. Good luck, dear, and here's a gardenia for your husband's lapel. He sounds wonderful.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This is for "Stressed in North Lauderdale," whose drug-addicted daughter was driving the whole family crazy.

I am now 24 and have two years of sobriety under my belt. When I read that letter, it described me to a T. I was on drugs for eight years and put my parents through hell. They finally got smart and threw me out for good.

Some people have to reach rock bottom before they can start the climb back to a normal, productive life. Believe me, it's not easy, but it's a thousand times better than the life I was leading when I was on drugs. I realize now that it practically killed my parents when they had to throw me out, but because of their tough love, I am alive today.--The Other Side of the Coin

DEAR COIN: Your testimony is beautiful. Thanks for being so honest.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We hear a lot about dysfunctional families. Please describe a "functional" family. Your readers need some notion of what is required to make family relationships work.

There is so much alienation, resentment, anger and bitterness in the world, and I'm sure a lot of it is the result of families who never got along. Please, Ann, tell us what to strive for.--Trying Hard in Wisconsin

DEAR WIS.: A functional family is one that "works." People respect one another's right to be different. They don't impose their values on others.

They help each other when they're in trouble. They are non-judgmental and supportive. They refrain from jealousy, back-biting and tale-carrying. And most of all, they honor that old Ann Landers axiom, M.Y.O.B.

GEM OF THE DAY: Yesterday is a canceled check. Tomorrow is a promissory note. Today is cash in hand. Spend it wisely.

Is alcohol ruining your life or the life of a loved one? "Alcoholism: How to Recognize It, How to Deal With It, How to Conquer It" can turn things around. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.65 (this includes postage and handling) to: Alcohol, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Your response to "Ohio Quandary," who asked if her boyfriend could be addicted to pornography, was not your best. You said he was just immature and she shouldn't let it become her problem. Ann, wake up. Pornography can be an addiction, just like gambling, drugs or alcohol.

Several months ago, I caught my husband making calls to a 900-sex number. After a week of denial, he admitted that for several years he had been hooked on porn magazines, porn movies, peep shows, strippers and phone sex.

This addiction can start early in life. With my husband, it began at age 12, with just one, simple "harmless" magazine. By the time he was 19, it had become a completely out-of-control addiction.

For years, my husband hated himself, and it affected his entire life. He is in therapy now and was surprised to find that his therapist had enough clients to start a group, each member thought he was the only "weirdo" with this problem.

Through counseling, we are saving our marriage. Tell "Ohio" her boyfriend may be hiding more than magazines. He needs counseling.--Alaska

DEAR ALASKA: You are right. My answer to "Ohio Quandary" was not one of my best. In fact, after reading thousands of complaints, I've concluded that it may have been one of my worst. Keep reading.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I disagree with your advice to "Ohio Quandary." Sexual addiction is a full-fledged problem, and people don't "grow out of it."

Men who get hooked on pornography have trouble relating to flesh-and-blood women. You have no idea how destructive this can be for wives and girlfriends of pornography addicts. They feel devastated and blame themselves.

Many years ago, I found a girlie magazine in my husband's briefcase. I was shocked and hurt and felt that he was comparing me to the photographs. When he couldn't understand why it upset me, I bought some copies of Playgirl magazine, cut out the nude male centerfolds and displayed them all around our bedroom.

I kept them up for three days, he hated it and kept asking if I thought he was as well-endowed as the guys in the pictures. He went for counseling and things are a lot better. Thanks for opening up the subject.--Collinsville, Okla.

DEAR OKLA.: Thanks for the input. Keep reading for another point of view:

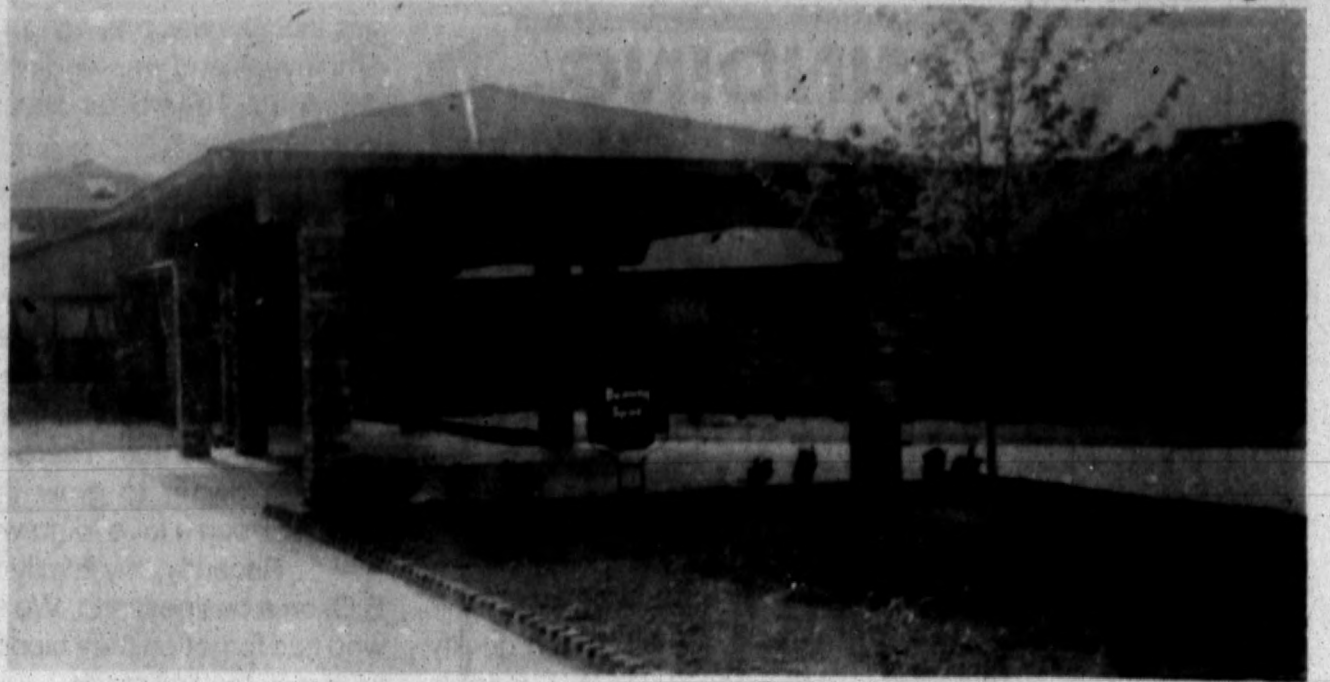

DEAR ANN: May I speak on behalf of so-called porn "addicts?" I'm not into pornography because I'm "immature" or because my sex life with my wife is unexciting. I do it because it fills a need for relaxation.

My wife and I are both overstressed attorneys who must turn off the tension at the end of a long day. We're usually too tired to make love.

My pornography archive provides a simple solution. It helps me relax and enjoy pretty (though admittedly unrealistic) pictures. Sure it's habit-forming, but unlike cocaine or chocolate cake, this habit does no harm. My wife isn't crazy about it, but she doesn't feel threatened. Sign me--Happy Hobbyist in N.Y.

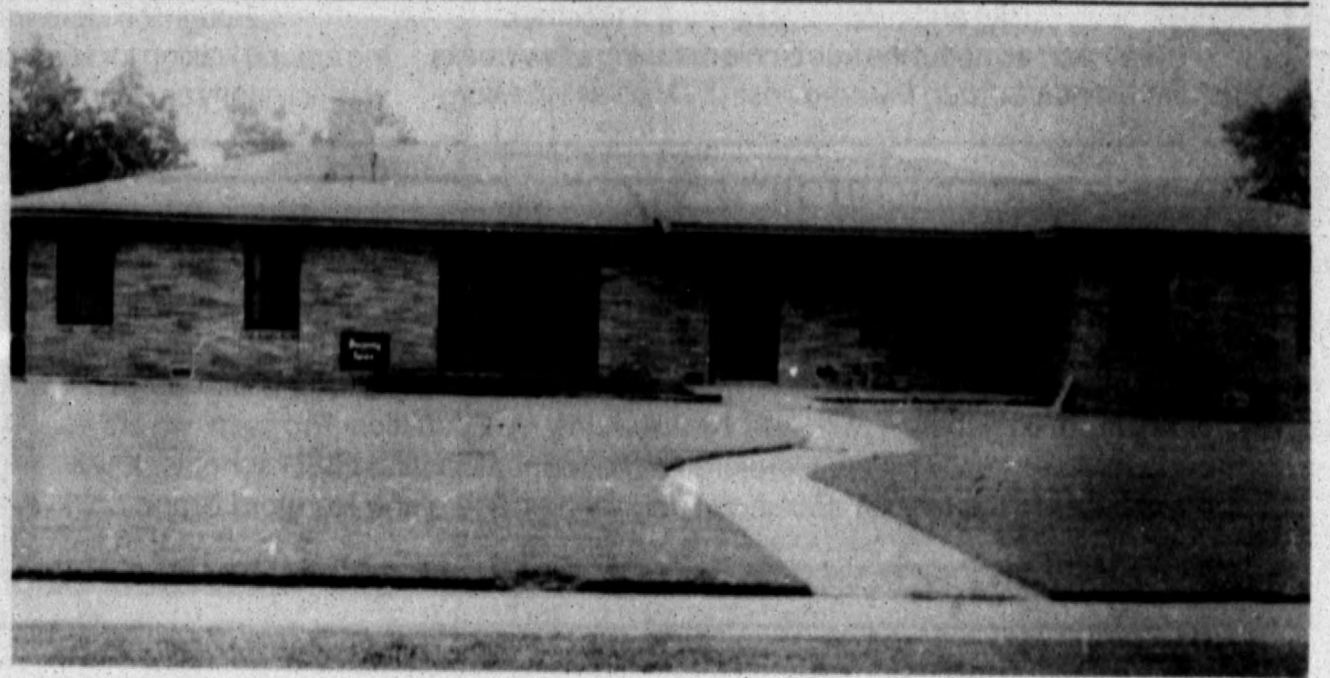

DEAR HOBBYIST: Thanks for speaking out. Perhaps the reason your wife isn't "crazy about it" is because she feels she's being deprived of what is rightfully hers.

Any man who expends so much energy on his job that the best he can do at home is "unwind" with pornography has a problem.

WHEN YOU HAVE SOMETHING TO SELL, NEWSPAPER SELLS IT BEST.

No matter what it is you're selling, newspaper can sell it best. You can show it. Describe it. Explain it. Compare it. Offer a coupon for it. And cover your entire marketplace with it. All in one day. And for a lot less than radio and TV.

And the unique thing about newspaper is that it adds credibility to your message. People believe it when they read it in the paper. Maybe that's why retailers use newspaper more than any other medium?

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

THE BIONIC WORK FORCE

It is not a new idea. It is not new technology. In fact, there is evidence that bionic work forces have been around for centuries. The evidence exists in many forms of high quality products whose bionic craftsmanship has lasted for hundreds of years.

I realize I may have confused some of you who were big fans of the "Six Million Dollar Man" television series. You are thinking bionics as in electromechanically enhanced body parts. However, the bionic work forces I'm talking about existed long before electricity and medical science got together.

I first learned about the true bionic meaning a few weeks ago from Glenda Carper, the co-owner of Doodles Hamburgers, Inc. She was preparing a work force training program for their employees and was kind enough to share her thoughts with us. As soon as I heard her discuss the subject, I knew I should pass it along to you.

The bionic meaning

Carper's bionic training program uses an acronym built from the word bionic. The letters introduce the phrase- "Believe It Or Not, I Care." Bionic service is pretty rare these days. In fact, when you run across a company or an employee who really cares, it stands out because it is so unique.

It's a shame that caring companies and employees are scarce, but it is true. There are glorious opportunities for every business owner to grow their business by providing caring service. People love to go where they are treated well.

Recently, my family traveled with me to Myrtle Beach, S.C. on a business trip. We saw many examples of employees who had forgotten their bionic training or had never been taught to care in the first place.

The most memorable poor service or lack of a bionic attitude was at a fast food restaurant. We arrived at 10:05 a.m. with the intention of ordering a quick breakfast at 10:25 a.m. we were still standing in a slow moving line when they announced that they were no longer serving breakfast.

Although the store was busy, the employees were standing around waiting for someone else to do something. The place was not nearly as clean as other stores in the chain and there was a lot more conversation than activity. This crew needed a bionic attitude.

Low level service

The second most memorable need for bionic training happened on the airplane coming home. We boarded the plane and it was obvious to me that the plane would not be full. Since the airline assigns seats on its airplane, I asked the flight attendant for permission to take one of the empty seats. She replied, "Sir, the plane will be full, you will have to sit in your assigned seat." She said it firmly and without a smile.

As we settled snugly together in our seats, I offered to bet my seat mates that the plane wouldn't be full. The flight attendant must have been standing right behind me because she stepped up and repeated curtly that the plane would be full.

A few minutes later as we backed from the gate, I counted 11 empty seats in the three rows directly in front of me. Later in the flight the attendant told me it was alright to move to an empty row if I wanted. I told her my present seat was fine. What I didn't tell her was the seat was ok, but I would choose a different airline for my next flight. The airline's slogan "We love to fly and it shows" must not be based on bionic service.

Caring work forces can make a difference. Try developing a "Believe It Or Not, I Care" attitude and watch your business or career grow.

House designed for porch fans

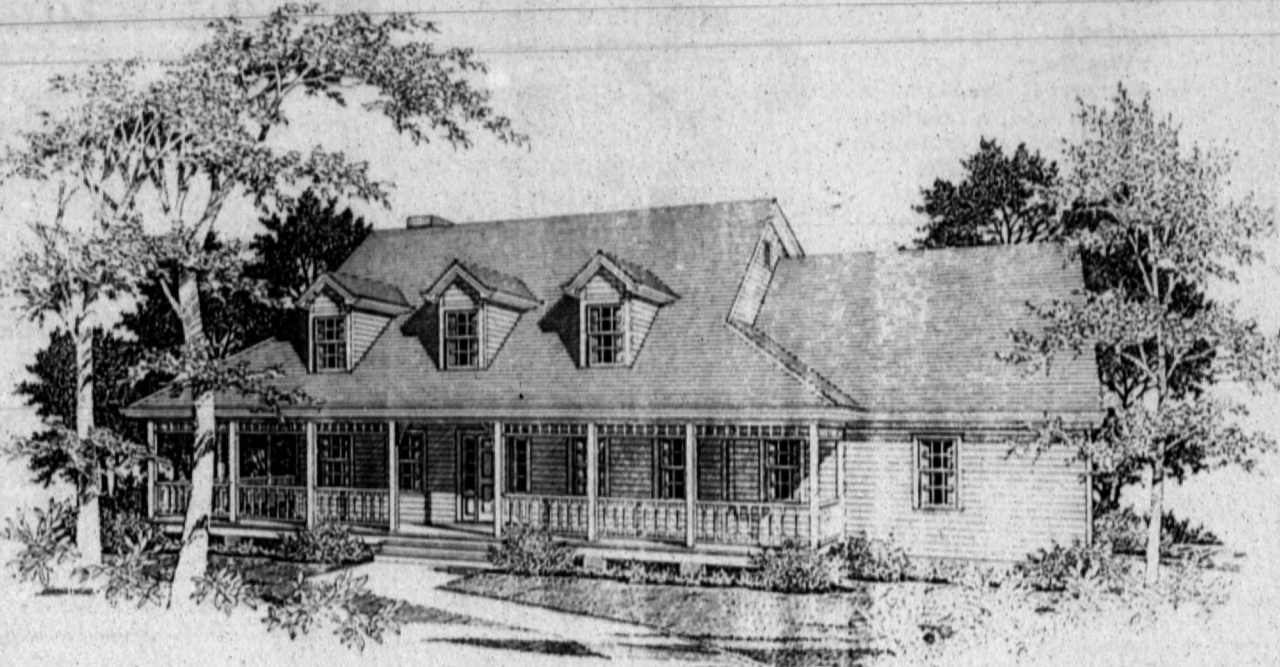

FEATURE HOMES

© BY W.D. FARMER, F.A.I.B.D.

As you step onto the porch of this plan you will notice that it continues around and down the side of the home and into the rear screen porch and deck as well. The foyer is bound by the traditional living room and dining room. To the rear of the foyer is the abundantly large family room with a fireplace and a door to the screened porch. The kitchen is adjacent to the family room and includes a large island shown with a down draft surface unit. Access to the sun deck and double garage are at the junction of the kitchen and breakfast room. The breakfast room is highlighted by a large bay window and an entrance to a large laundry with pantry is here as well.

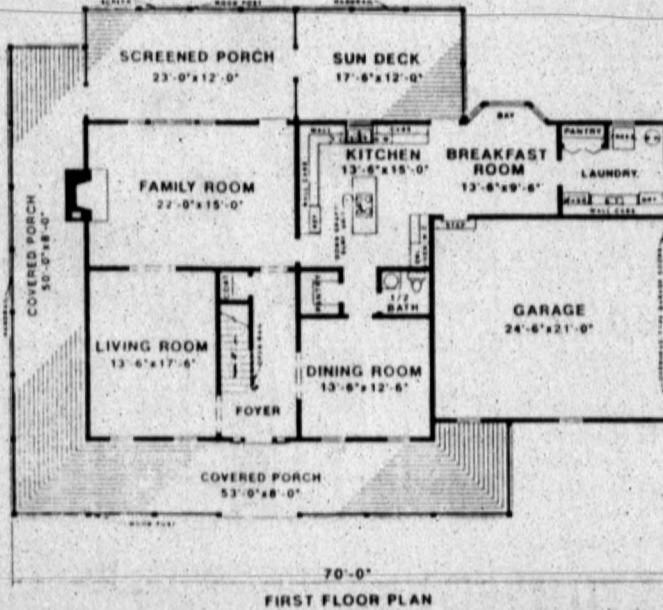

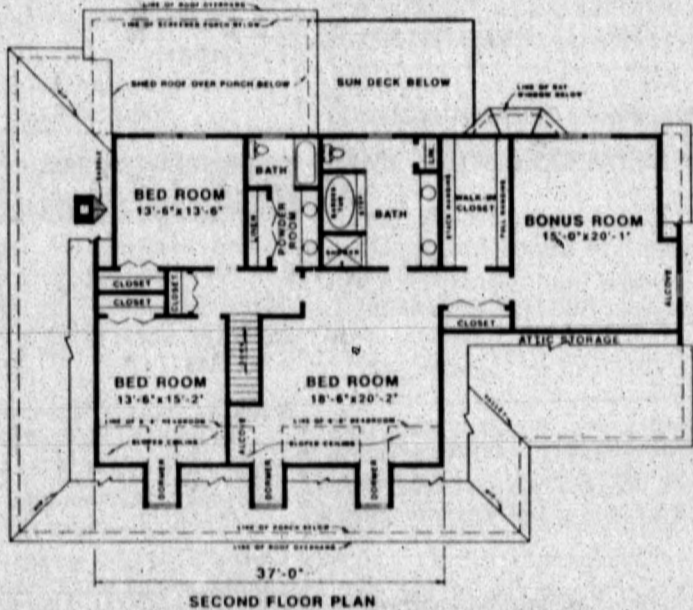

Three bed rooms and two baths, plus a large multi-purpose bonus room are upstairs. Each of the two auxiliary bed rooms has ample closet space and share a large central hall bath with linen closet and double vanity. The master bed room suite is generously sized, with a walk in closet that appears endless. Also included is an auxiliary closet for out of season storage. The master bath has the luxury of a separate step up garden tub and shower stall. A twin lavatory vanity and linen closet are also provided.

The country style exterior is highlighted by the wrap around porch, horizontal wood siding, steep gable roof and three dormers.

Plan number 3325 is computer generated and is furnished with a crawl space foundation. The home includes 3,366 sq. ft. of heated space including the bonus room. For further information on this plan, write W. D. Farmer Residence Designer, Inc., P. O. Box 450025, Atlanta, GA 30345.

Questions/Answers

By POPULAR MECHANICS

Q: We rarely use our General Electric dishwasher (once every six to eight months). Recently we decided to run it in order to keep the seals from drying out because the water that normally stands in the bottom of the tub had evaporated. The dishwasher filled with water and the heating element worked, but the motor would not run - it would just hum.

A: The water probably evaporated because the dishwasher was not used for a long period of time. The minerals that are left after the water evaporated, combine with detergent residue and grow into a very hard crust on the face of the seals inside the pump assembly. The crust is sometimes referred to as scale.

This crust causes the seals to stick together, and this prevents the motor from turning. The dishwasher will fill with water, but won't go into the wash cycle because the motor is stuck. Instead, the motor heats up and clicks off when overloaded.

To correct this, remove the standing water at the bottom of the tub using a turkey baster. Then dissolve 2 ounces of citric acid crystals (available from drug stores, hardware stores or GE parts centers) in 2 cups of hot water.

Pour the mixture over the pump cover, and let soak for 20-30 minutes. It should be able to dissolve the crust in that amount of time. Latch the door and start the machine through a cycle. If the motor doesn't start, you will have to turn it by hand. Disconnect the power to the dishwasher, and remove the lower access panel by removing the Phillips head screws in the corners.

Use a flashlight and look under the machine to find the motor. The right side of the motor is bullet shaped. The left side of the motor next to the pump assembly, has some air holes through which you can grip its L-shaped fan blades and turn the motor. Grip these blades with your fingers and "walk" them around. Turn one blade down, then grip the next one and turn it down. Keep turning until you feel the fan blades snap free.

Now reinstall the access panel and reconnect the power. Fill the detergent cup with citric acid crystals as you would with detergent but don't put any dishes in the machine. Run the dishwasher through a wash cycle. The citric acid crystals will dissolve the remaining scale on the seals.

To prevent this from happening again, you might try running the machine with citric acid after long periods of disuse.

To submit a question, write to Popular Mechanics, Reader Service Bureau, 224 West 57th Street, New York, NY 10019. The most interesting questions will be answered in a future column.

PBS' 'Trailside' invites viewers to watch less TV

BY MICHAEL SCOGIN

PBS encourages couch potatoes to get out of their living rooms and into the wilderness in "Trailside: Make Your Own Adventure," an outdoors how-to series premiering this summer in most areas. Check local listings for specific dates and times.

According to John Viehman, the program's host and editor of Backpacker magazine, many people have already heard the call of the wild. Viehman estimates there are more than 22 million day hikers in the United States and nearly 12 million backpackers. Sales of mountain bikes and camping gear have steadily increased despite a sluggish economy, he says.

"It points toward an appreciation of the obvious and that's what's outside your doorstep," Viehman says. "We have so many national and state parks, you can pretty much do it anywhere. The outdoors is a great place to get away from all the distractions."

Viehman's weekly, 30-minute program is a teaching and motivational tool, not only urging viewers to enjoy outdoor activities, but encouraging safe and responsible ways to enjoy the environment while providing a historical background to the places the show visits; sort of a "This Old House" of the outdoors.

"We're not trying to hide the fact that this is a how-to show," Viehman says. "The whole notion of teaching somebody something is what we're trying to do, and, of course, have some fun and make it entertaining."

"Trailside" takes viewers mountain biking in Moab, Utah, sea kayaking in Mexico's Baja California, rock climbing in Joshua Tree, Calif., and wet weather camping in a Caribbean rain forest — and that's all in the first month. Program producers have plans to eventually take the show to places such as Iceland and New Zealand.

Safety is a natural concern for a show that exposes viewers to extreme activities that could be dangerous. Not everyone is ready to challenge the Sea of Cortez in a kayak or plunge two miles down a dank cave.

Viehman says, "We do sessions on self-rescue. We make sure people are aware of judgment and whether or not they should be doing some of this."

Viehman had not planned, on being host of the show when he first got involved with the project. But after 20 years as an outdoors writer and advocate, producers knew he was the person they wanted.

"I describe myself as the AHB — Average Human Being. I'm not always taking a spill or two and I'm always anxious to learn new things," he says.

Although Viehman is experienced at most of the activities that "Trailside" asks him to do, the show has presented

Robards & 'Heidi' so far, so good

By LYNN ELBER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) - Jason Robards is known for his evocative portrayals of such men of letters as writer Dashiell Hammett, newspaper editor Ben Bradlee and Abraham Lincoln.

But in "Heidi," the Disney Channel's new movie based on the classic children's story, the 70-year-old actor takes on a more physically challenging role.

"I do a lot of yelling over storms," Robards says wryly, in his deep, distinctive twang.

The four-hour film, debuting July 18 and 19 on the cable network, put him through his acting paces on location in the rugged Austrian Alps.

"We were filming up around 10,000 feet," Robards says in a telephone interview from his home in Connecticut. "The hardest part was going up in the morning. We were living at about 7,000 feet and we all had to go up - all this equipment, actors, technicians.

"I was gasping, but I made it. They have an oxygen truck around for tourists in the area. They fall over, I guess."

For the record, he adds, "I didn't have to use it."

Noley Thornton stars as the scrappy Heidi, in a performance that Robards lauds. He also has praise for co-star Jane Seymour, in a different turn as a coldly unattractive governess. Acclaimed actresses Patricia Neal and Sian Phillips also appear.

Robards, who read "Heidi" to his children when they were young, says the Disney version differs from the 1937 film that starred a very famous dimpled, curly-topped child star.

"I thought this was more true to the book than one Shirley Temple did, although I thought she was marvelous," he says.

Johanna Spyri's 19th-century novel about an orphan who struggles to find love, and a home, also was the basis for a 1968 TV version. That version on NBC became famous, or notorious, when the network started the film and cut off the closing minutes of a New York Jets-Oakland Raiders football game, marked by an amazing reversal of the game's outcome in those minutes.

The new TV movie was adapted from a story written by Jeanne Rosenberg, whose credits include the films "The Black Stallion" and "White Fang" - also adaptations of much-loved novels.

"What I had in my mind was the fluffier, brighter images of the 'Heidi' movies I had seen," Ms. Rosenberg says. "What I found in the book was a darker side and edgier tone.

"Something seemed to resonate in a modern way. Here's a little girl whose family was ripped out from under her. She was searching for a family, that center, that core, to hang it on."

Heidi's character also undergoes a bit of a film transformation, Ms. Rosenberg says.

"She couldn't simply be a passive, golden light that affected people, but she had to make her own stand," she says. "That's probably a difference in the way we see little girls today from the way Johanna Spyri saw girls."

For Robards, this wasn't his first brush with "Heidi."

"Oddly enough, I was coincidentally involved with it back in the '50s when I dubbed a foreign film version. I was dubbing films for a living."

Although only about 30, Robards was hired to re-create the character of the grandfather in English.

"I put on one of those voices," he says, dropping into a shaky-voiced parody of a crotchety older man. "I was good at it, so they hired me for three or four films - 50 bucks a picture."

His career, of course, soared, earning him Oscar, Tony and Emmy awards.

Robards debuted on Broadway in 1956 with Eugene O'Neill's "The Iceman Cometh." He also was featured in a landmark 1973 production of the playwright's "A Moon for the Misbegotten."

He etched indelible renderings of the mystery writer Hammett in "Julia" and Washington Post editor Bradlee in "All the President's Men."

He's played Lincoln more than once for TV, and Twain in "Mark Twain and Me," a Disney Channel film about the writer's friendship with an 11-year-old girl in the last year of his life.

In "Heidi," he again shares the screen with a young co-star. Robards, father of six children and grandfather of three, has never heeded W.C. Fields' warning about avoiding scene-stealing child actors.

"I've only had the most wonderful luck with children," Robards says. Why?

"Their parents brought them up right," he quips.

Young actors "are very true to a lot of things that one might overlook," he continues. "They're very straightforward. It helps me. I just follow right along with how they're going."

"So far, so good."

Michael Tylo puts family first

BY CANDACE HAVENS

Who is Blade, and what is he doing in Genoa City? That is the question fans of "The Young and the Restless" are dying to have answered. Blade has been a part of the show for more than a year now, and viewers still don't know much more than they did when he first arrived on the scene.

Michael Tylo, the handsome actor who portrays Blade, doesn't have any answers. "I have no idea what they are doing or going to do with my character," Tylo says. "That is up to Bill Bell, his team of writers and the gods."

Tylo is married to one of the most beautiful women on television, Hunter Tylo of "The Bold and the Beautiful," but he doesn't have a problem with being one half of a two-actor family.

"There is no competition between Hunter and I," Tylo says. "I enjoy it when she is working and I'm not, because I get to spend more time with my children and play golf. We made a policy a long time ago that we didn't care who made the money as long as the bills were paid."

"She is younger, prettier and in lots of ways more talented, so I would be foolish to even try to compete," Tylo adds.

"My father was a plumber. He used to tell me he was an artist at what he did, and I'm an artist at what I do," Tylo says. His point was we never look down to what other people are doing or up to them. It's all basically the same thing, we are just working at something we like to do."

Blade is Tylo's fifth daytime role. He started on "Another World" as Peter Belton, then starred as Quinton Chamberlain on "Guiding Light" and Matt Connelly on "All My Children." Tylo landed the role of Charlie Prince on "General Hospital." In addition, he was Dee Boot in the CBS miniseries "Lonesome Dove." He moved to Spain to do "Zorro," but returned to Los Angeles to be closer to his family.

"My family comes first now. If you don't make your life happy and enjoy your family, then the career means nothing," Tylo says.

TRIVIA

The term "southpaw" comes from major league baseball diamonds, which place the pitcher facing west, his left arm to the south.

TRIVIA

The phrase "steal one's thunder" comes from the 18th-century playwright Dennis, who said his rivals copied his sound effects machine.

HIGHLIGHTS

Noley Thornton plays the title role in a Disney Channel adaptation of "Heidi." The miniseries, filmed entirely on location in the Austrian Alps, premieres Sunday and Monday, July 18 and 19, on the premium cable channel. Starring opposite Thornton is stage and screen veteran Jason Robards as Heidi's irascible grandfather. Jane Seymour plays the well-meaning Fraulein Rottenmeier, and Patricia Neal makes a special appearance as the blind grandmother of Heidi's goatherd friend, Peter.

TRAILSIDE

him with opportunities for challenges he hasn't yet even attempted to conquer.

"I got the chance to swim with sea lions on the kayaking show in Baja," Viehman says. "You start swimming around in the water and pretty soon all the pups approach because they're curious. They love to swim with you and mimic you as you dive down 20 feet."

Viehman also made some discoveries at the El Yunque Rain Forest in the Caribbean National Forest.

"I never realized just how noisy a place could be at night. It doesn't get quiet until the sun comes up," Viehman says. "Everything is nocturnal, so the noise is almost deafening."

"There's always room to learn," he says. "No one could be expert at every one of these activities."

'Naked Sports' delivers frank portrayals

BY MICHAEL SCOGIN

Showtime takes an open and honest inside look at Michael Jordan, Tom Landry, Marge Schott and Dan Duva: four powerful names in the world of sport in "Naked Sports: Four Portraits."

The program debuted earlier this month and airs again on Thursday, July 22. It uses behind-the-scenes footage and interviews to paint surprisingly effective portraits of The Coach, The Player, The Owner and The Promoter.

Tom Landry is The Coach, whose strong character and Christian approach to football made him one of the game's most respected individuals. As Skip Bayless, a Dallas sports journalist says, "I would go to church on Sunday morning and then come home and get my second sermon from Coach Landry on the sidelines."

Michael Jordan, perhaps the greatest athlete of all time, is The Player. "Naked Sports" examines the marketing and merchandising that put an estimated $25 million per year into the pockets of the Chicago Bulls superstar.

The Owner is the embattled Marge Schott, baseball's only female owner who was recently suspended for racial slurs against athletes and other Cincinnati Reds employees.

Dan Duva is The Promoter (he formerly worked with ex-heavyweight champ Evander Holyfield), whose large family helps run his business.

TRIVIA

Phyllida Law, the mother of Oscar winner Emma Thompson, appears as Thompson's mom in the current film "Much Ado About Nothing."

TRIVIA

Unlike his refusal of a 1970 Oscar for "Patton," George C. Scott accepted an Emmy for his performance the same year in "The Price."

Improved 'Chantilly Lace' a true women's film

BY DAN RICE

Last March, 1992 was declared the "Year of Women" at the Academy Awards presentation, a pronouncement many actresses still find laughable owing to the paucity of leading roles for women in film. Yet it seems that in the midst of every famine someone has a feast, and in this case it is a plum project served to seven fortunate femmes. "Chantilly Lace," debuting Sunday, July 18, on Showtime, is noteworthy not only as one of the few true "women's films," but also for the fact that it was almost totally improvised.

Executive producer/director Linda Yellen is happy with the results. "Nothing that I could have written could compare to when seven people with talent and imagination bring their own voices to characters that are very carefully delineated. It's just magical."

The minimalist plot brings the characters together for three reunions in the Colorado cabin home of nurturing Val (Jill Eikenberry). The first occasion is the 40th birthday party for movie critic Natalie (JoBeth Williams), attended by the rest of their circle of longtime friends: rebellious nun Maggie (Talia Shire), divorcee Rheza (Lindsay Crouse), artist Hannah (Helen Slater), Val's sister Lizzie (Ally Sheedy) and her photojournalist companion, Anne (Martha Plimpton).

In this gathering and a subsequent bachelorette party, the viewer sits in as the friends share their frustrations and revelations. A candid, home movie feeling is provided through the improvised dialogue and the consistent use of annoying hand-held camera shots. Not surprisingly, most of the girl talk is about sex - even Maggie the nun joins that conversation with disclosures that some viewers may find offensive.

The final scene draws six of the characters together to watch the goodbye tape of the seventh, who is dead. "We shot the first two parts not knowing who was going to be dead in the third part," Williams says. "We had to draw pieces of paper to find out who was going to be dead."

The improvisational nature of "Chantilly Lace" succeeds in approximating reality, but not all reality is engaging.

'American Music Shop' episode for little folks-

BY SCOTT WHITE

With his shiny vest, bushy beard and beady eyes peeking from under a giant hat, Charlie Daniels looks almost cartoonish while serving as host of a special children's edition of "American Music Shop." Daniels invites youngsters and parents alike to share an hour of music and fun from the Barns of Wolf Trap in Vienna, Va., airing on The Nashville Network Tuesday, July 20.

Pop veteran John McCutcheon rolls out a couple of silly numbers, including a rendition of Woody Guthrie's "Mail Myself to You" adeptly performed on hammered dulcimer. Nicolette Larson takes the stage to sing two maternal songs from her upcoming album of lullabies titled "Sleep, Baby, Sleep."

Award-winning children's artists Cathy Fink and Marcy Marxer steal the show with a pair of audience-participation numbers, including "When the Rain Comes Down," which features an entire verse in sign language.

Daniels performs two numbers about being small titled "Little Boy Blue" and "Little Folks Are People, Too." Then the entire cast takes the stage to sing "Would You Like to Swing on a Star?"

With its eclectic mix of folk, traditional and standard blues/country arrangements, this episode of "American Music Shop" proves to be unpretentious fun for the whole family.

HOME BIJOU

Smith could take or leave Hollywood, but entertaining film legacy survives

BY STEVEN ALAN MCGAW

June marked the sad passing of Alexis Smith, after a brief battle with cancer. After roles in Canadian summer stock, Smith came to California to attend college. She was seen in a school production by a Warner Bros. talent scout and was soon signed to a contract, making her movie debut in 1940's "The Lady With Red Hair." Elegant and sophisticated, Smith was most effective in romantic or suspenseful films. But career was never that important to her, and in 1959, Smith retired from acting. She made a brief comeback in the '70s with a triumphant Broadway turn in "Follies" and a handful of films.

"The Two Mrs. Carrolls" (1947) Humphrey Bogart stars as Geoffrey Carroll, a London-based artist who murders his wife after finding a new love (Barbara Stanwyck) while vacationing in Scotland. All is well until pretty Cecily (Smith) catches his eye and he plans to use the old poisoning scheme once again. Adapted from Martin Vale's Broadway hit, the film is saved from seeming stagey by the acting and Peter Godfrey's taut direction. Franz Waxman wrote the score.

"Split Second" (1953) Two cold-hearted convicts (Stephen McNally, Paul Kelly) escape from a Nevada prison and hide out in an abandoned building within an atomic testing range. With them are six hostages, including a doctor, his wife (Robert Paige, Smith) and a reporter (Keith Andes) sent to cover the prison break. As the long night passes and tempers flare, the crooks and captives interact in surprising ways. Adding to the tension is the fact, known only to McNally, that a test bomb is scheduled for detonation at 6 the next morning.

"Sleeping Tiger" (1954) A strange love triangle develops between a criminal (Dirk Bogarde) the psychiatrist (Alexander Knox) who saves him from prison in order to test his theories of rehabilitation, and the doctor's repressed wife (Smith). Joseph Losey directs with real flair.

'Chris Cross' star Byrd rises from editing block

BY SCOTT WHITE

Eugene Byrd, 17, has watched his acting career gather dust on the cutting room floor all too often.

But now the star of the Showtime favorite "Chris Cross" is standing firmly on his own two feet. Playing Oliver Cross, a student disk jockey at a stodgy English boarding school, has taken Byrd one step closer to his dream of fronting his own hit series. Incidentally, "Chris Cross" has been renewed for a second season on Showtime.

Self-described as "the leader in chaos and devilry," Byrd's parents enrolled him in acting school as a boy to provide an outlet for his overabundant childhood energy. Commercial gigs led to small roles in "Witness" and "Raw" that didn't make it past the editing block. He was also cut from a role on "Cosby" before arriving on the set.

However, his career took an upward turn with roles on "Monsters," "Beverly Hills, 90210" and eventually a successful 1991 guest-starring appearance on his dream show, "Cosby."

One of his most endearing assignments was 34 episodes he shot for "Sesame Street" when he was 14 and 15.

"It was like going to a job in wonderland," Byrd recalls. "Everything looked like it did on TV. I found out that Big Bird was a man with his hand sticking way up to hold up the character's mouth and move it. I was eaten by Snuffleupagus in one scene. It was everything I expected."

STAR NOTES

For Keith Richards, the beat goes on

BY STEVEN ALAN MCGAW

"You wanna hear some good music? Here's some guys that wanna play it for you."

A simple enough proposition, and all that Keith Richards had to say to Kurt Loder when the journalist was writing the liner notes for "Live at the Hollywood Palladium," a scorching 1989 release by Richards and his crack band, the X-Pensive Winos.

Wait a minute. His band? What about that rough and ready, blues-based, multi-million-dollar conglomerate known as the Rolling Stones?

The Stones are alive and kicking, thank you, though without original bassist Bill Wyman, Richards and long-time partner Mick Jagger (they've known each other since they were 4) are currently writing songs for a new album, to be followed by another of the Stones' characteristically massive tours.

But one band, especially one that only regroups every three or four years, is not enough for Richards. So, in 1987, he began assembling the Winos, consisting of guitarist Waddy Wachtel, drummer Steve Jordan, bassist Charley Drayton, saxman Bobby Keys and Ivan Neville on keyboards.

After three albums ("Talk Is Cheap," the live opus, 1992's "Main Offender"), the Winos are at it again, performing a blistering, no-frills set for PBS' "Center Stage," airing Monday, July 19, on most public television affiliates.

You wanna hear some good music?

HIGHLIGHTS

It wasn't everybody's jelly doughnut, but while it lasted David Lynch's "Twin Peaks" really hit the spot with some folks.

Artsy cable network Bravo is currently reprising the ABC series, starring Kyle MacLachlan and Michael Ontkean, on Sunday evenings for those who never got enough, missed a couple of clues or were just out of the country in the spring of 1991.

In the episode airing Sunday, July 18, Agent Cooper (MacLachlan) and the Bookhouse boys pay a visit to One-Eyed Jack's.

TRIVIA

Accepting his 1963 Oscar for How the West Was Won, veteran scriptwriter James Webb said, "It took me as long to win this as it took to win the West."

SATURDAY

Saturday in CBS' "The President's Child," William Devane plays the top aide to a hotshot presidential candidate who takes his own form of "special interest" in the secret past of journalist Donna Mills.

Emery moves on to new projects; Leary joins Stone's cast of 'Killers'

Though he's stepping down as host of The Nashville Network's nightly talk/variety show "Nashville Now," Ralph Emery certainly intends to stay involved with the all-country cable channel. Emery's plans include developing concert specials and series for the network, as well as more in-depth interviews in the style of his "Ralph Emery: On the Record" presentations. Emery vacates the host's seat behind the "Nashville Now" desk on Oct. 15, after a week's worth of shows from the Fiesta Texas theme park in San Antonio. ... Congratulations to Romell Miller (age 10), Karissa Rose Caferro (age 7), Shirlita Smith (age 12) and Yesenia Arvizu (age 9), all winners in the "Talk to a Superstar" sweepstakes sponsored by PBS' popular "Ghostwriter" children's series. Selected from more than 40,000 entries, the young journalists will soon travel with a parent and a friend to meet and interview their chosen celebrities. Miller will talk with baseball's Bo Jackson; Caferro chats with MTV personality Daisy Fuentes; Smith looks forward to meeting Kadeem Hardison of

Ralph Emery of "Nashville Now": not anymore

NBC's "A Different World"; and Arvizu will interview Mayim Bialik of NBC's "Blossom." ... Chain-smoking comic Denis Leary has joined the cast of Oliver Stone's currently filming

"Natural Born Killers," a black comedy starring Woody Harrelson and scripted by Quentin Tarantino, the gifted writer/director behind last year's sleeper "Reservoir Dogs." Stone's company, meanwhile, Ixtlan Productions, will join forces with Propaganda

Films to produce a feature version of Randy Shilts' "Conduct Unbecoming," a non-fiction work about gays in the U.S. military. ... July 13 marked the release of the soundtrack to "Free Willy," a feature film about a troubled boy who befriends a whale housed in an aquatic theme park. Why is the soundtrack so significant? Because it's the first release on Michael Jackson's new MJJ/Epic label. Jackson sings the movie's theme song, a ballad titled "Will You Be There?"

TV FOR KIDS

Why do 'Star Kids' get to have all the fun?

BY SCOTT WHITE

Viewers may just turn green with envy watching child stars having a ball as they compete for their favorite charities in the third annual "Star Kids Challenge," airing in syndication through July.

It's not enough that Cirroc Lofton gets to play a space commander's son in "Star Trek: Deep Space Nine," or that Taran Smith of "Home Improvement" acts in one of TV's highest-rated shows. No, they get to play Scramball, navigate their way through the tortuous Web, climb the Slim Jim Wall and top it all off with a rousing team game of Nintendo's "Star Fox."

And it all looks like just as much fun as it sounds.

Twenty-eight young celebrities gathered in April to compete in a two-day event at Universal Studios, going head-to-head for $100,000 in prize money to divide among four deserving charities.

Alfonso Ribeiro ("Fresh Prince of Bel Air") and Downtown Julie Brown are the hosts. Joey Lawrence ("Blossom") and Josie Bissett ("Melrose Place") serve as reporters.

The worst part about watching the "Challenge" is that the events look like so much fun that you wish you could participate yourself. Why should a pre-teen with a hit show have all the fun?

Well, you might be in luck. This fall, the "Challenge" may become a weekly half-hour syndicated series featuring child stars in team competition with ordinary kids from around the country. Stay tuned!

IT IS BELIEVED THAT DOGS HAVE DESCENDED FROM WOLVES. THEY SAY THAT THE CAVEMEN OF 12,000 YEARS AGO USED TO TAME WOLVES TO KEEP GUARD.

TWO ENGLISH COUPLES LIVING IN TURKEY USED TO VISIT EACH OTHER TO PLAY CARDS. IN ORDER TO MEET, THEY HAD TO CROSS THE GALATA BRIDGE. BECAUSE OF THIS, THE CARD GAME THEY PLAYED IS BELIEVED TO HAVE BEEN NAMED "BRIDGE."
