Bulgaria cites pope case conspiracy

Italian judge with involvement in a plot to kill Pope John Paul II, Communist Bulgaria has accused the United States and NATO of conspiring to use the case to discredit socialism and worsen East-West relations.

Italian Judge Ilario Martella, who conducted a three-year investigation of the May 13, 1981 attempt on the pope's life, indicted three Bulgarians and four Turks on charges of complicity Friday.

The judge also charged that Turkish assailant Mehmet Ali Agca, already serving a life sentence for wounding the pope, was accom-panied by a second Turkish gunman who escaped.

Martella alleged that a reputed Turkish Mafia leader offered $1.2 million for the attack, that Bulgarian Embassy employees helped plan the shooting, and that a Bulgarian was to drive the getaway car.

No date was set for a trial and defense lawyers said they don't expect one until next year. All the defendants face life terms if convicted on the charges of complicity in the assassination attempt.

The trial is potentially explosive because of the implications for shaky East-West affairs of an alleged international plot to kill the head of the Roman Catholic Church.

Bulgaria, in a statement released in the capital of Sofia through the official BTA news agency, said the charge of its involvement was a "political conspiracy against Bulgaria and socialism."

Relations between Italy and Bulgaria already have soured since the assassination attempt, and on Friday a member of Italy's Parliament called for an end to diplomatic relations with the Soviet bloc coun-Publio Fiori, a member of the dominant Christian Democrat Party, said Martella's findings confirmed "a plot of Eastern (bloc) countries against the pope.

Only one of the Bulgarians, 36-year-old Sergei Ivanov Antonov, former Rome manager of the Bulgarian state airline, is in custody in Italy. The judge alleged that Antonov was waiting in a car outside St. Peter's Square to help the assailants

A 12-page summary of the 1,243-page indictment released to reporters said Todor Aivazov, 40, a former Bulgarian Embassy cashier, accompanied the gunmen to St. Peter's Square, but it gave no other details. The third Bulgarian indicted was Maj. Zhelyo Kolev Vassilev, 42, former aide to the military attache at the embassy.

PROs hit hospital scene

By REED PARSELL Managing Editor

Last year's Medicare bombshell those involved with health care of elderly citizens must cope with PROs.

Peer review organizations, according to James Bullard, are "three times as scary" as the diagnosisrelated groupings initiated in October of 1983. The Deaf Smith General Hospital adminstrator said, though, his facility is braced for the new evaluation process and should not be troubled much by it.

Both DRGs and PROs are designed to quell Medicare's ballooning costs. Eighteen years old, the federallysponsored program now boasts a budget near $100 billion. Bullard described Medicare as "a monster that is eating us" and has said its debt could approach $400 billion a dozen years from now.

Sweetheart for 1984-1985.

Medicare cost-cutter

The cost-cutting system started last fall groups Medicare-sponsored treatments into 23 major diagnostic categories and 467 DRGs. A set payment - based on the national average cost for the particular medical service - is assinged to each DRG.

Peer review organizations are to determine, among other things, whether a Medicare treatment performed in a hospital was medically necessary. If the service is judged not critical, no federal money will be sent to the erring facility.

According to Bullard, only two faulty Medicare admissions were found to be executed by DSGH during the first year of DRGs. This is an indication, he said, the local hospital should not have too much trouble with PROs.

vention in Fort Worth.

"I think that we're just going to have to do business as usual," Bullard commented, "and understand we're in a far better situation than 70 to 80 percent of the area's rural hospitals."

Many Texas hospitals - 96 of about 220 participating in the Medicare program, Bullard said - are to have all their DRG charts monitored by PROs. Since Deaf Smith General had such a clean record with DRGs last budget year, it is not subject to the 100-percent review.

Bullard explained any hospital which is judged to have mistreated or mis-diagnosed at least 2.5 percent of its Medicare treatments will automatically have all its DRG treatments reviewed.

What should be the biggest burden peer reviews will place on DSGH, Bullard said, is the cost of bookwork. At a Tuesday meeting of hospital district directors, he said he felt "logistics will be far more difficult for us than the results."

The annual paperwork cost of Deaf Smith General complying with PROs should be around $3,000, the administrator guessed. "We think we'll spend more money justifying the system than we'll lose in denied claims."

Peer review organizations are to consist of nurses and medical record librarians hired by the Texas Medical Foundation. On Oct. 4, TMF signed an $18.3 million contract with the Health Care Financing Administration to oversee Medicare disbursements in the state.

The PRO system went into effect Oct. 1 despite the agreement being reached three days later and state hospitals having until Nov. 15 to sign contracts with the TMF. Bullard said DSGH should not run into major problems with the retroactive regulations.

In addition to determining medical necessity of Medicare treatments, PROs are to check for readmissions within seven days of dismissals to make certain petients were not prematurely discharged. Transfers between hospitals must be approved if payments are to be made.

Also scrutinized are to be pacemaker insertions. One thing PROs will check for, Bullard said, is hospitals requesting reimbursement for new pacemakers when the old ones were still on warranty.

A review process has been established for hospitals appealing unfavorable PRO decisions. Ten steps are listed on the flow chart,

With an assist from Mayor Wes Fisher, the Hereford Hustlers and other guests, Security Federal Savings & Loan Association held a groundbreaking ceremony Friday for a new office building to be located at 501 W. Park Ave.

Construction on the $375,000 facility is to get underway soon, and the building will have twice as much space as the present office at 1017 W. Park. It is scheduled for completion in the spring of 1985.

"The new building is a symbol of the confidence we have in Hereford." said J.E. Sweet, president of Security Federal. "We are proud to be part of this community and are looking for more ways to help our friends and neighbors here," he said at the groundbreaking Friday morning.

Security Federal opened a branch office here July 7, 1975. At present, the local office has approximately $19 million in total loans in Hereford and total deposits here of $13.5 million. Bill Harris, local manager, says most of the loan balance is in single family homes and most are owner occupied.

Security Federal has seven offices located throughout the Panhandle with assets of more than $291 million.

The county budget for 1984-85 is listed at $3,777,925. Anticipated revenues include $1,729,543 from taxes and $1,548,382 from fines, fees and other sources? That left $500,000 to be covered by beginning cash.

Mothers say cadets 'scapegoats'

BRYAN, Texas (AP) - Four Texas A&M University students indicted in connection with the hazing death of a campus military Corps of Cadets member are being used as "scapegoats" and "sacrificial lambs," two of the youths' mothers have charged.

Attorneys W.W. "Bill" Vance and Henry Paine Jr., who were representing the students, entered innocent pleas Friday before Brazos County Court at Law Judge Carolyn Ruffino in the Aug. 30 death of Bruce Goodrich, a 20-year-old sophomore.

Goodrich, a transfer student from Webster, N.Y., was rousted out of his bed and forced to perform "motivational exercises," including pushups and situps, investigators said. He collapsed and later died at a Bryan hospital.

A Brazos County grand jury last month indicted Jason Miles, 21, of Houston; Louis Fancher III, 20, of San Antonio; and Anthony D'Alessandro, 21, of Houston on misdemeanor charges of hazing and negligent homicide.

Gabriel Cuadra, 21, the former senior personnel officer of Goodrich's F-1 unit, was indicted on charges of hazing and tampering with evidence.

Doggett, Gramm discuss money

U.S. Senate candidates Lloyd Doggett and Phil Gramm continued their campaign of hurling charges at each other, this time about campaign funds and whether they were obtained legally.

Meanwhile, Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale, wooing the Hispanic vote in El Paso, appeared Friday at the 405-year-old Ysleta plaza to attend the Ysleta Mission Fiesta. Doggett said Friday that his Republican opponent took more money from "special interest groups" than the law allows. In Austin, a Gramm spokesman Larry Neal said Doggett took money from a political action committee, funded in part by Florida dog racing interests, that violated federal election requirements. Neal said Doggett got $1,000 from Grey PAC in May. Neal said the committee never filed the required registration with the Federal Elecion Commission.

He also said contributors to Grey PAC donated more than the $5,000 per year set by federal law. Neal said there apparently was nothing wrong with the donation to Doggett, but added:

"The candidate bears some responsibility for seeing to it the donations he receives are from legally constituted entities.'

Pickax killer might testify

HOUSTON (AP) - A woman sentenced to death in connection with the pickax murders of two people is not the common-law wife of her co-defendant and may testify against him, a judge says.

State District Judge A.D. Azios ruled Friday that Karla Faye Tucker and co-defendant Daniel R. Garrett were not husband and wife at the time of the grisly June 13, 1983, slayings.

Ms. Tucker, 24, is expected to testify against Garrett next week. Garrett's attorney, Ray Bass, maintained that Ms. Tucker and Garrett, 26, were married by common law and that she could not testify against him because of the husband-wife privilege.

Ms. Tucker and Garrett were accused of killing Jerry Lynn Dean, 26, and Deborah Ruth Davis Thornton, 32. The couple had been struck repeatedly with a pickax and the ax was still embedded in Ms. Thornton's chest.

Ms. Tucker was convicted of capital murder in April and sentenced to death by injection. Garrett's capital murder trial began Oct. 9.

The First Baptist Church of Hereford will observe its 85th anniversary Sunday (tonight) with the Rev. Gerald Mann, former pastor, as the principal speaker for a 6 p.m. service.

The observance begins with a 5 p.m. reception for former staff members and former church members. The reception will be held in Fellowship Hall.

The Sunday night service will also feature the music of Jeryl Hoover and Randy and Sherry Talley. Former pastors Doug Manning and B.L. Davis will also be recognized at the reception and service. There are only three former pastors now living.

A brief history of the church, condensed from the Deaf Smith County History Book follows:

A group of 10 men and 8 women met in a vacant store building on Oct. 15, 1899, to organize a Baptist church. A church covenant and articles of faith were approved and the name of "First F otist Church" was adopted.

Shortly after organizing, a pastor was called from Canyon at a salary of $180 per year. T.J. Burnett was the first pastor. In one year's time, the church outgrew its meeting place and started a building fund. The new building, at 4th and Jackson, was completed by Christmas time, 1900. The first service was a musical program with a community Christmas

In July, 1910 a Sunday School annex was added and a baptismal spot was acquired on Tierra Blanca Creek. The baptistry and dressing rooms were not built until three years later. A Ladies Aid Society (later called the Women's Missionary Union) was organized and they were soon busy sewing, quilting and doing work for the needy. The Men's Brotherhood was organized in Only 18 years after the first church was built, a larger building was required. E.W. Harrison donated a building site in March, 1928, on the corner of Main and 5th streets-the present location of the church. Public subscriptions for a new building were raised in the amount of $64,614.

The groundbreaking was held June 18, 1928 with Mr. Harrison turning the first shovel, but he died before the building was finished. The first service in the new church was held May 19, 1929. The building note was reduced to $24,000 before the "dust bowl" days came, but even then the members reduced the debt to $10,000.

The FBC has started several missions which are now churches. In 1942, mission work started the Dawn Baptist Church; in 1945, mission work began in northwest Hereford and the Avenue Baptist Church was started; in 1952, a mission established in northeast Hereford later became Temple Baptist Church, and in June, 1956, a Mexican mission was started which resulted in the First baptist Mexican Church.

GERALD MANN

In 1950, the church added the Conkwright educational building to its grounds, and in 1952 leased a lot at Glorieta, N.M., where the church now has a lodge. In 1958, a new elementary education building was built, and a year later the church sanctuary was redone with new carpet, pews and a sound system. New lights and a new paint job were also accomplished. Later, a lodge was built at the High Plains Baptist Assembly grounds near Canyon.

A new elevator was installed in 1964, and the new Fellowship Hall was built in 1970. The church voted to completely renovate the sanctuary in 1979. It was completely stripped and then rebuilt and refurbished. Included in the project was a "bride's room" adjacent to the sanctuary.

Another addition to the church facility was the Kinsey Parlor, named in honor of Delbert C. Kinsey. The church libary, main office, pastor's study and class rooms are located in the Conkwright educational building.

Memorials etched on brass plaques hang in the breezeway connecting the educational building and the sanctuary. Other plaques and memorials are displayed in the Kinsey Parlor, and the church also has a Memorial Rose Garden.

Cleanup of Houston homes commences

HOUSTON (AP) - Hundreds of families forced from their waterlogged homes by as much as 15 inches of rain began cleanup chores today as swollen creeks and bayous started retreating.

"We're not expecting any more problems unless we get the torrential rains again," said Markett Ryza of the Harris County Flood Control District's engineering district. "All the bayous have stablized. Some aren't going down very much, but at least they're not rising.'

Meanwhile, authorities on Friday found the body of Dorothy Wied, 43, of Houston. Her car collided with two others during Thursday's storm, slid down an embankment and into the muddy Braes Bayou. No other serious injuries were reported.

Insurance adjustors began examining the damage to homes in northerns sections of Harris County, hardest hit by the deluge.

"The worst appears to be over," said Bob Fields of the National Weather Service office in Houston.

Authorities used airboats Thursday to evacuate residents from waist-deep floods that inundated neighborhoods in north Houston and northern sections of Harris County.

The weather service reported 9.21 inches of rain in the 24 hours ending at'6 a.m. Friday, but gauges at one northeast Houston reporting station measured 15.5 inches of rain. Nevertheless, the smaller official figure was the third-highest ever recorded in the city, surpassed only by a 15.65-inch deluge on Aug. 28, 1945 and 10.25 inches Oct. 8, 1949.

"It could be Saturday morning before we get completely out of trouble," Harris County Flood Control, District spokesman Bill Evans said.

John Caswell, assistant director of the Houston-Harris County Civil Defense, estimated 1,000 people fled their homes.

The Aldine School District northeast of the city was closed. But spokeswoman Judy Williams said about 100 stranded teachers and students spent the night in several school buildings before returning home Friday.

Reagan, Bush seek to explain Shultz speech

By LARRY MARGASAK Associated Press Writer

While President Reagan and his running mate distanced themselves from Secretary of State George Shultz's speech about anti-terrorist measures, Walter Mondale accused Reagan of ignoring the first anniversary of the Beirut bombing that killed 241 U.S. servicemen.

Responding Friday to Shultz's comments that innocent people might be inadvertently killed in a retaliatory attack on terrorists, Vice President George Bush said: "I don't agree with that.'

Later Bush tried to soften his differences with Shultz.

Initially stating that Shultz's speech represented administration policy, President Reagan later told reporters the secretary's comments didn't reflect his policy on dealing with terrorism.

Mondale, meanwhile, told a rally facility will be located on the east in Des Moines, Iowa, that Reagan ignored this week's first anniversary "With our growth, we've been able of the Beirut bombing but publicly to add such services as personal and relived memories of last October's installment loans, IRA and other successful invasion of Grenada at a retirement accounts, interest-paying campaign-style celebration at the checking accounts and 24-hour White House. automatic teller services," said Har-

Mondale vowed to "campaign with everything I've got" while Ms. Ferraro predicted that on Nov. 6, voters will turn out "by the hundreds, by the thousands, by the millions" to vote for the Democrats.

Reagan, campaigning in the Northeast, and Bush, stumping for the GOP ticket in Ohio and Kentucky, sought to explain Shultz's comments about retaliation against terrorist at-

In his speech Thursday night in New York, Shultz said the United States "must be willing to use military force" both to retaliate against terrorism and to make preemptive strikes to prevent terrorist attacks.

"The public must understand before the fact that there is potential for loss of life of some of our fighting men and the loss of life of some innocent people," the secretary told the audience at the Park Avenue Synagogue.

Initially, the president said: "There is nothing new in that speech that is not already policy." But later, during a campaign stop in Fairfield, Conn., Reagan said: "I don't think it was a statement of policy. He was saying all these things must be considered."

Reagan said Shultz meant "you couldn't rule out the possibility of innocent people being killed. He was not saying that we would do that."

One-person rural post offices vital

By MIKE ELSWICK Longview Morning Journal LONGVIEW, Texas (AP) — The rural post offices of Northeast Texas are smaller than their big city counterparts and lack the mechanization their city cousins have, but they play a vital role in the communities they serve.

One-person post offices may seem to be a thing of yesteryear but they are very much alive in the 1980s, say Betty Little and Gordon Pierce.

They should know.

Mrs. Little is postmaster at Judson where she does everything from taking out the trash and washing winand sorting mail.

In Diana, Pierce works in much the same manner, but he also supervises two rural mail routes, which Judson does not have.

"I do everything from raising the flag to sweeping the floors," Pierce said. "Being the only full-time employee I've got to do it all."

Mrs. Little said even though she has many daily chores such as cleaning that her city counterparts do not have to contend with, she wouldn't even think of changing places.

"I love it here," Mrs. Little said of the job she has held since 1973. "If dows to waiting on postal customers you've got to work, it sure is nice to work where you enjoy it."

Among the aspects of the job she likes most is the opportunity to meet and get to know the people who use the facility.

Like big city postmasters, she is expected to do her share of paperwork and record keeeping to ensure all funds are accounted for and that the mail is handled as efficiently as the post office in 1965. In the nearly 20 years she has been associated with Judson, not a lot about the day-to-day operation has changed. Mrs. Little still manually sorts the mail in the morning and places it in the proper postal boxes.

One thing that has changed in that 20-year span, she said, is the work load.

Used to be, back in the '60s, she said, there was a lot of slack time during the day. Mrs. Little said she used this time to read or crochet.

But in the last two decades, Longview, to the south, has grown tremendously, she said, and she has found the Judson Post Office lying in the line of growth.

Back in the '60s, there were 90 post office boxes available but only about 20 of those were rented, she said. As more and more people have moved into the Judson area, the number of rented boxes has jumped to 175, and

Pierce said most customers would not notice a change to second-class. He said the status is a tool mostly used by postal management.

Pierce, who previously worked at postal facilities in Marshall and Tyler and has been at Diana about four years, said he spends the first two hours of each day sorting and delivering mail to the boxes. His window service starts at 7:30 a.m., and he said a steady stream of customers usually files through during the day.

Pierce said he now has 155 boxes rented and that more than 850 Diana area rural boxes are served by two rural carriers, Richard Conner and Gorman Coston. This all adds up to quite a bit of bookwork to be squeezed in between waiting on customers, he said.

Pierce said when the Christmas rush and the subsequent January sales bring heavier work loads, his job includes many extra hours to meet the demand, since the postal system does not authorize extra help in the peak periods.

Mrs. Little said jokingly, of Christmas, "I don't want to talk about it." She says she, too, meets the added seasonal work by coming in early and staying late.

Pierce, who entered postal work in the Air Force in 1962 and became a civilian postal worker in 1966, said the biggest change he has noticed in the postal system over the years has been mechanization.

And while, there are no automatic mail-sorting machines in Diana, he said he still benefits from mechanization because some of the mail that comes in is already partially sorted by machine.

'The overall system is much more efficient now," Pierce said. "We are handling much more mail with less people.

Lasers tracking fingerprints

By JUDY GIANNETTINO Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - Searching for fingerprints at a crime scene has become as easy as pointing a laser beam at a surface, and a Texas Tech University professor researching the sophisticated technique says the day will come when laser detection makes print dusting obsolete.

"Quite often, you can pick up fingerprints (with the laser) that you couldn't get otherwise and I see the day when this will be the way to detect fingerprints," said Roland Menzel, a Tech physics professor.

"It's not a quick process, but it's been a long time since I've had a laser," he said.

Menzel said a few law enforcement agencies, such as the FBI and the Los Angeles Police Department, already are using lasers to identify fingerprints.

But his research should one day make laser print detection commonplace, he said.

Menzel, who pioneered laser print detection, is apparently the only person besides FBI researchers currently studying the technique. In his eighth year of research, the 41-year-old professor said recently he is working on devising and refining methods for detecting fingerprints on wood, cardboard, cloth and skin - surfaces on which prints generally cannot be detected. On more typical surfaces and with prints can be seen and photographed

"It's all so compact that you can just load it in the car and take it to the crime scene," Menzel said.

Menzel has used his laser fingerprint detection methods on several national murder investigations. "I get casework from all over the place," he said. But he said he prefers to concentrate on his research.

For wood and cardboard, Menzel said he is working on ways to reduce case where I didn't do better with the the amount of background seen by altering the illuminating light color and by mixing various chemicals with the prints.

For cloth and skin detection, he said, enzymes are being tested to break down inert concentrations of the fingerprint into amino acids.

The enzymes attack the proteins and make fingerprints visible to the laser, he said. "I have on occasion picked up prints on cloth or skin, but they are very rarely found," he said. "We need more research on the enzymes and the stabilization of the prints. But I think in due course we'll get the cloth."

Menzel also is researching the use of computer images in identifying fingerprints, he said.

"Too often, you get these prints a specially designed laser, finger- that are good but not good enough to positively identify," he said.

Voting Process

Deaf Smith County has approximately 9,887 registered voters this year, and it will be interesting to see how many of them go to the polls on Nov. 6.

For those who want to cast ballots, there is no excuse for not being eligible. It's much easier to vote than it was some years ago. There was a time when a person had to pay a poll tax of $1.75 in order to be eligible. The courts ruled the tax was unconstitutional.

It may be too easy to vote. Downstate where some 300,000 new voters have been recorded, it is charged that many of them are illegal aliens who are not citizens and thus not qualified to vote. In fact, we heard rumors here during the primary elections that some illegal aliens were voting.

Because of our Voting Rights Act, it is very difficult to prove that a certain voter is not legally qualified to cast a ballot. The only way to challenge a vote is to do it individually and that means making an individual submit proof of citizenship, that he or she is not a felon and have the right to vote.

Unfortunately there will be instances in some parts of the country where special interest groups have worked to register voters and will herd them to the polls and try to tell them how to vote. This does not do much for democratic process but, perhaps, there is no better way.

We can only hope that all of those registered voters are fully qualified to cast a ballot. But we hope some of those registered voters don't go to the polls. Only those citizens who care enough about the issues to become informed as to the candidates and what they propose should actually vote.

It's scary to think that some candidates may win because they look good on the television screen, or because they tell lies about their opponent, but that seems to be the way many campaigns are conducted these days. We'll have to deal with that until a better system is available.

Widening Deficit

While we hear a lot of talk about cutting the deficit these days it is not likely that we will see much whittling done on it as long as Congress continues to pass around the favors that involve spending our tax

Members of Congress are thinking about the home folks in this final windup of the session before the elec-

Despite the rhetoric about the virtues of balancing the federal budget, the lawmakers are preparing to enact billions of dollars of spending measures and tax breaks that will please many voters but deepen the budget deficit.

The Wall Street Journal this past week reported on some of the spending projects that have come into the legislative hopper even as Congressmen are deploring the deficit.

If Congress were really serious about tightening the belt and actually cutting down on the deficit, it would not pass such measures as the one which Sen. Thomas Eagleton of Missouri slipped in to spend $8.7 million to renovate the courthouse in his home town of St. Louis.

Neither would there be a bill providing tax relief for U.S. umbrella makers.

The House has passed bills that would authorize $172.5 million in aid to schools for physicians, pharmacists and other health professionals and $200 million to subsidize the constructoin of ships in the U.S.

The session-ending calendar is loaded with bills containing funds for various water projects, grants, and aid to varous states and communities, plans to send more federal money out into the 50 states where presumably it will impress constituents and encourage them to vote for their legislator, whoever he may be.

With this kind of attitude, the deficit is going to be permanent. -The Perryton Herald

Campaign Funding

Editor's note: The Bootleg contributions from politicians. Philosopher on his Deaf Smith County grass farm comes up with an imssible plan this week.

Dear editor:

According to articles I've read in the papers lately the cost of running for office is now at its highest point in history, and I have figured out something to do about it.

In one state, two candidates running for the U.S. Senate are spending more than 20 million dollars. In less affluent states, 10 million dollars is ordinary. A race for a seat in Congress costs anywhere from $500,000 to $1,000,000, with no bearing on the caliber of the Congressman you get. There's no telling how much total money will be spent this year to elect Senators and Congressmen, it's in the millions and millions, and most of it will be spent for television com-

Now individual TV stations and the networks are undoubtedly the outfits least in need of functial assistance. Any time a network can get $200,000 for 60 seconds worth of time advertis-ing tooth paste, it doesn't need any

Since it seems that the candidate with the most money for TV ads has the best chance of winning, I have a proposal for making better use of that money.

If it's foregone that the one with the most money wins, why run all those dollars through TV stations that don't need it anyway? Why not open the office of Senator or Congressman to out-and-out bidding?

On election day, sealed bids from the two candidates seeking the same office will be opened and the highest bidder wins. The money from each, in the form of certified checks, then goes to the U.S. Treasury instead of having been handed out to TV sta-

This not only will help the U.S. Treasury, it'll keep television from being cluttered up with those dull political ads. I've never seen a political commercial half as entertaining as some of those far-out regular commercials. As for which is the more honest, what's honesty got to do with political ads?

Yours faithfully.

The Penultimate Word

Clint Formby is back in town. The boy gets around. This time he went to Korea to check out how things have progressed there since the war.

I think he came close to heating up the hostilities all over again. It seems he pointed his camera and they pointed their guns. At least this is the story Clint tells. What probably happened was that Clint told them to cut their weeds and they decided to shoot him.

Clint has never grasped the truth of the little boy's essay on Socrates. The boy wrote:

Socrates was a great man.

Socrates told the people how they should

They poisoned Socrates.

All kidding aside, Clint's life is really remarkable. How anyone from Hereford, Texas could walk in the circles he walks in and experience what he experiences is amazing. I am proud of his accomplishments. Hereford is fortunate indeed to claim such a citizen of the world.

I use Clint's name a great deal. It is the one sure way I have to get inside otherwise closed doors. I actually believe I could get a private audience with the Pope by simply saying, "I know Clint Formby."

I do have one small problem with Clint. He has the unique ability to make me feel guilty. He is sort of my Jewish Mother. He comes home from one of his tours, starts in on my weeds, and I go into a fit of guilt and depression. I don't cut the weeds, but at least I feel guilty.

I shall feel guilt no more. I listened to him the other morning, took the trash out and there, in magnificent splendor, stood a veritable jungle of weeds. I carry a gun with me to the alley. There is no telling what manner of beast lives in that jungle.

I felt guilty all day. That night I turned on the tube. I am a cable subscriber and Clint, of course, owns a large share of the cable company. I tried to watch Cinemax but the police radio interferred with the broadcast. I searched in vain for an educational channel. There was a sign on one channel that said we would get educational TV sometime after the second coming.

Well sir, I had my answer. I decided I would cut my weeds when and only when, old Clint gets the cable fixed. No more guilt for me. At last I can grow weeds without guilt. Thanks, Clint. I needed that.

Watch out for Congressmen

President

WASHINGTON -- First-time parents quickly learn that a newborn demands full-time attention. To leave baby unattended or even to look away ever so briefly is to risk the safety of child.

Congressmen, though rarely as cute, must also be watched carefully. Oh, not that if left to their own devices they might hurt themselves. Rather, we fear, and with reason, that out from under the watchful eye of taxpayers, Congress may do damage to us. We know from sad experience that when we're not paying close attention, they are given to fits of tax increases, pork-barrel spending, and special-interest regula-

It's not easy for us taxpayers to keep track of what our congressmen and senators are doing. This year alone, the House of Representatives had 362 roll call votes; the Senate had 250. Add to these recorded votes the many recorded voice votes or the use of unanimous consent and we as voters have a lot of material to wade through if we are to make intelligent decisions about who to return to Washington after the Nov. 6 election.

In judging our present crop of Congressmen and Senators there are, of course, some bellweather votes we can look at. The 1981 Economic Recovery Tax Act-the 25 percent across-the-board tax cut-is one such vote. This tax cut brought us our present economic growth and only a politician with a congenital contempt for taxpayers could have voted against it.

The balanced budget amendment is another make or break vote. In 1982, both houses of Congress voted on this measure, which would end the deficit problem once and for all. It passed the Senate but failed to garner the required two-thirds vote in the House of Representatives.

The problem with such key votes as the 1981 tax cut and the balanced budget amendment is that only those politicians so far to the left that you need a pair of binoculars to spot them voted against these measures. These bills were debated in the full light of a national debate. They were accurately labeled and everyone knew just what they were voting for or against. Such votes, however, give us only a first cut in dividing the opportunities from the men and women of principle.

TEXAS PRESS

ASSOCIATION

AWARD WINNER

To find out who in Washington is really representing our interests as a free people, one must look at those votes that receive little attention and whose true effects are often distorted

I commend two particular pieces of pending legislation to your atten-

The first is the so-called Civil Rights Act of 1984. A lot of Congressmen were fooled into voting for this measure a few months back because they thought it was, as labeled, civil rights legislation. Well, since then, everyone has had more time to look at this bill and the longer one looks the worse it gets. It is nothing more than a power grab by Washington, D.C. The easy vote for a Congressman or Senator would be to vote for the bill and simply tell his constituents that he thought it was a simple civil rights bill. The fact is that Congressmen now know better than that. Any vote for this bill is a knowing vote for a bigger government and a vote against any meaningful definition of civil rights. The second piece of legislation travels under the name of "Comparable Worth." It is not a bill mandating equal pay for equal work for men and women, as its supporters sometimes claim. Equal pay for equal work is already the law of the land. It has been since 1964. This bill would force the establishment of bureaucratic committees to determine how much your job is worth and how much you should be paid. If the bureaucrats determine that your job is "comparable" to someone else's job that pays less-well, you're out of luck. What is the name for a system where the government determines everyone's wages? Socialism.

The Weakly Reeder

By REED PARSELL Do you believe everything you read in the Brand? A national poll indicates you probably don't. Common sense says you probably shouldn't. After all, our managing editor once put "April 12" on the front page of the Aug. 12 issue. Yes, he still works here. According to a survey conducted earlier this month by Gallup, just 39 percent of the 750 adults polled believe almost all or most of what they "read or hear in the news media as a whole." Confidence in newspapers and television reports were comparable with each other and about even with those of big business, Congress and organized labor. People participating in the poll said they felt more trustful of banks, churches, the military, public schools and the Supreme Court.

Fifty-three percent said they could believe "only some" news coverage they are exposed to through the media, while 8 percent claimed they could take "very little" of the news reports as being the gospel truth.

Though only 39 percent could believe almost all or most of what they "read or hear in the news media as a whole," seven in 10 agreed media stories are generally accurate.

Forty-six percent of those polled who have been interviewed by the news media said facts were kept straight in the resulting reports. Thirty-seven percent said the stories were innacurate and 17 percent presumably those who were objects of accurate though uncomplimentary reports - offered no comment.

Too aggressive, obnoxious, imprudent - media mongers could be classifed in those terms, I'll agree. But innacurate? Very infrequently so, and in many such incidents it is the sources, not the reporters, who are responsible for fallacies.

Trust us.

Remember that phrase when you set your clocks forward one hour this coming Monday, the 29th of June.

Development's gate costs $1.75 million

By DOUG CRICHTON Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - When most people think about building a gate to adorn their driveways, it's usually just two posts and some chunks of wood or strips of iron.

But at a 140-acre residential development on prime Lake Travis property, the entranceway gate will be so extravagant one would almost

HIGHEST FLIERS

(Source: Airlines industry estimates) The two major airlines in the United States are battling each other. With 14 percent of the domestic market, American is trying to win the top spot from United (19 percent). Both are adding planes, flights and facilities.

Lake Travis are spending $1.75 million just for their gate. Construction of the pair of exotic doors is requiring almost 20,000 pounds of wood and 40,000 man-hours of carving.

The developers, a trio of Houston businessmen, "wanted from the start to build the most prestigious development in the country," said Tom Gay, a partner in Trophy Properties, the sales agent for the development.

"First impressions are what everybody deals with," he said. "These gates are a magnificent accomplishment. I can't find anything else like them in the U.S."

The two intricately carved doors, under construction in a Dallas warehouse, are each nearly 17 feet high and 18 feet wide. And while they're not quite Pearly Gates, their designer said getting through them will be more difficult than skirting past St. Peter.

Only residents of the exclusive west Austin subdivision will have access to magnetically coded cards that bid the doors to slide silently back into 6-foot-thick, 102-foot-long stone walls, said designer Barnes Davis of Dallas.

The group hired Davis in 1982, and work began on the mammoth project in March 1983 in a north Dallas warehouse. Davis said he recruited 13 carvers from all over, including an Italian artist who learned his craft in South Africa.

"People have to have something to attach themselves to," he said. "This is something my children and grandchildren can see - it's creating a heritage that blends art and the developers' interests."

Davis said the bas-relief designs on the doors reflect traditional themes of family unity and strength as depicted in nature.

The doors' scenes are all topped with various bouquets and curtain scrolls that frame the central theme below. All of the scenes are based in nature - including swans, a stag, a beehive and a heron - that he said make them timeless.

Florida canker woes may aid Texas

By SYDNEY RUBIN Associated Press Writer

MISSION, Texas (AP) - Bill Thompson leaned his elbows on the steering wheel of his pickup parked on the edge of an orange grove and watched a growling bulldozer churn under a 30-year-old tree.

"It took 30 years to grow that tree and about 30 seconds to knock it down," Thompson said.

Thompson, like hundreds of other Rio Grande Valley citrus producers, is struggling to rebuild an industry left as barren by last winter's recordshattering freeze as the bulldozed

In the midst of the rebuilding, Texas growers are lamenting their winter misfortune because they can't take advantage of citrus woes in Florida, where citrus canker, a highly contagious infection that kills citrus trees, hit some nurseries.

"The canker problem in their nurseries should reduce tree replacement stock and slow down their recovery a bit and keep prices up," said Ray Prewett, director of the Texas Citrus Mutual.

Florida lost one-quarter of its 800,000 acres of citrus to last winter's freeze but was replanting faster than Texas until the canker problem hit the nuseries, Prewett said.

Seven million seedlings in Florida have already been burned, the only known way to destroy canker.

"You can always expect a few good years after a freeze when demand has been greater than supply. Whoever gets there first has an advantage, you know prices will be good," Prewett said.

A lot of Texas growers who had reservations about staying in the citrus business because of low market prices before the freeze are encouraged by Florida's misfortune, he said.

Thompson said that when trees begin producing again in two or three years and "investors see there can be a profit in citrus, people will get back in the business.'

"The canker in Florida is one of the best things that has happened to us in a long time" because growers who do recover from the freeze will find higher prices for their fruit," he said. "Of course, I don't think we're going to get rich quick off Florida's

More reliable pH analysis available

COLLEGE STATON - The pH level in soil can and does make a difference in crop production in various areas of Texas, and now farmers can get a more reliable analysis regarding soil acidity or alkalinity.

It's all due to an automated system for testing a soil's pH level that has been developed by Dr. Dale Pennington, soil chemist with the Texas Agricultural Exension Service, Texas A&M University System. Pennington operates the Extension Service's Soil Testing Laboratory at Texas A&M University and also oversees the soil fertility program for the Extension Service soil testing lab at Lubbock.

Pennington, who directed the Lubbock lab for several years before assuming his present position earlier this year, is no novice to automated soil testing. He developed a computerized soil testing unit for nitrogen at the Lubbock lab which sharply reduced the turnaround time for each soil sample and greatly increased the lab's overall efficiency by reducing labor costs.

At Texas A&M, Pennington has forged ahead with the automation process and is computerizing the lab's entire testing programs. Eventually, fertilizer dealers and farmers with computers will be able to obtain soil test information almost instantaneously.

According to the soil chemist, some 5,000 soil samples have been run via the new automated pH test in the past four months. The unit runs a complete analysis ever 2 minutes and references every tenth sample, making for extreme accuracy. A second electrode will eventually be added to the unit to double its testing capacity. Pennington said the next step to fully automate pH testing will be to tie the operation directly to a computer.

"Our producers have been extremely pleased with the pH tests we have been able to provide since our automated unit has been on line," Pennington pointed out. "They believe the analyses to be more reliable, and we are more confident in our recommendations for a particular crop or area of the state."

He added that his lab is already experiencing an increase in the number of soil samples being sent in for analysis because word is getting out about the new testing procedures. The lab in College Station annually handles about /18,600 samples, and Pennington expects about a 10 percent increase over the next year.

problems by a long shot."

Industry experts say acreage devoted to citrus production in Texas may never again reach what it was before last winter's freeze.

About half of the groves covering 70,000 acres were lost to the freeze, but the real extent of the destruction won't be known until the first aerial grove survey is completed in December.

"My dad and grandfather set out this grove of Valencia oranges," said Thompson, 33. "It's like losing a home that belonged to your parents, one that you've worked at building and cared for for years. It's a piece of yourself to lose. It hurts."

Trees that might have recovered from the winter couldn't survive the adversity of spring, he said.

"We went from 19 degrees to 107 degrees in about three months," he

Growers who would normally be starting to harvest oranges this time of year instead are bulldozing fields and transplanting seedlings. The baby trees were cultivated all summer long to replace nursery stock also lost to the cold.

It will be three to five years before citrus trees are back in large-scale production, experts say. But growers are planting more marketable, higher-yield citrus varieties and hope to get more fruit per acre when trees mature.

"We hope to get 40,000 acres replanted in the next four years," said Prewett. "But it will cost about $100 million to do this."

Thompson is hoping to quickly replace about 110 acres of citrus trees on his family's 1,000 acre farm.

over the next five years, he said, because even trees that survived the freeze will never be the same.

Underneath the summer leaves that cover surviving trees are weather-caused gashes that look like open wounds and make trees vulnerable to disease. The trees will never be "big producers" again, he

"It's like a car wreck," he said. "When you're young you recover real good, but if you're 50 years old, you'll probably never be the same.

Another 200 acres will be replaced It's the same with a 20-year-old tree."

Boren faces two obscure opponents

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) -Democrat David L. Boren is the odds-on favorite to win re-election to his U.S. Senate seat Nov. 6 against two opponents whose campaigns have been hurt by a lack of financ-

Will E. "Bill" Crozier, a former state employee from Minco, is the Republican nominee. Both he and Libertarian Robert T. Murphy of Norman are making their first statewide races against Boren, one

By RON JENKINS Associated Press of Oklahoma's most prolific vote-getters. The fact that neither the state Republican Party nor the GOP Senatorial Committee gave financial support to Crozier is considered the most telling feature of the Senate

Boren, meanwhile, is expected to have a hefty surplus from a campaign war chest which has topped the $800,000 mark. The Seminole Democrat easily defeated littleknown Marshal Muse of Oklahoma City in the Aug. 28 primary.

Murphy is on the ballot as result of a federal court ruling forcing state election officials to accept Libertarian Party nominees. Like Crozier, his campaign has been hurt by a lack of money and name recognition. Boren, 43, is bidding for a second six-year term. He was elected in 1978 after the incumbent, the late Dewey Bartlett, a Republican, did not seek re-election. Crozier has been trying to capitalize on the popularity of President Ronald Reagan in the state, sayof the president than is Boren. He has stressed his anti-abortion stand, saying he will back President Reagan's future Supreme Court appointments to "correct the wrongs done by the court in 1973." He said the abortion issue overrides all others facing the nation, comparing it with the slavery question in the days before the Civil War. Crozier said Boren has fooled many Republicans into thinking he is a conservative when he "actually is middle-of-the-roader who votes half-and-half on everything."

Boren, the son of former Oklahoma Congressman Lyle Boren, gave up a chance to become the first person to be elected to successive terms as governor when he ran for the Senate in 1978. He defeated former U.S. Rep. Ed Edmondson in the Democratic runoff, then scored a landslide victory over Republican Robert Kamm in the general election. Boren was a relatively little known state House member before being elected governor on a reform platform in 1974, taking advantage of corruption charges facing then-Gov.

As governor, Boren became a spokesman for Oklahoma's energy industry in the struggle over oil and natural gas supplies following the Arab oil embargo. He thus became the beneficiary of considerable campaign contributions from oil in-

He said he is running on his record, which includes advocacy of conservative spending practices and congressional reform. "I've worked as hard as I can the last six years and I hope the voters will see fit to return me to the Senate and put that experience to work," Boren said. "I want to be a consensus builder," he said. "There is too much partisan politics and bickering. "My No. 1 priority is to get the budget deficits down. I advocate an across-the-board budget freeze with everybody sacrificing alike. We must get the deficits down or it will pull down the economy." A graduate of Yale University and a former Rhodes Scolar, Boren is a member of the Senate Finance and Agriculture Committees. He is married to former Special District Judge

Molly W. Shi of Ada. They have two children, Carrie and Daniel David, by his previous marriage. Crozier is making his second bid for elective office. He was the GOP nominee for 4th District congressman in 1972, losing to the late Rep. Tom Steed. He was a management instructor for the Federal Aviation Administration in Lawton before filing for office. He is a former employee of the Transportation Department.

He is married to the former Christy Darnell. They have no children.

Receiving a strong vote in Tulsa, Crozier defeated George L. Mothershed by a thin margin in the Sept. 18 runoff election to win the GOP nomination.

Murphy, 36, is running on an antitax program geared to cutting down the size of government.

He said he supports a constitutional amendment to repeal the federal government's ability to borrow money, except in time of war.

Murphy, a communications technician, acknowledges his candidacy is "a real longshot."

"The main reason I'm running is to build a Libertarian society," he said. He said such a society would be free of government intrusion into the lives of citizens.

Cotton prices to remain down

COLLEGE STATION - What goes up usually comes down, but in the case of the cotton market, prices have dropped like a bombshell and will likely continue weak in the mon-

"Cotton farmers have already seen the price of their crop drop about $75 per bale in the past five months, and they will continue to see a weak market this fall and winter," according to Dr. Carl Anderson, cotton marketing economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. Now, the average price is near the base 55-cent loan rate and may settle in around the 60-cent mark for the 1984 crop year.

"The main forces putting downward pressure on cotton prices are a big increase in global production and increasing stocks in the U.S.," Anderson said. "Just where prices end up will depend heavily on the export situation. Weak prices this fall should stimulate demand and curtail 1985 world production somewhat."

Global cotton production could reach a record 76 percent bales this year, up 8 million from a year ago, the economist noted. This reflects a 70 percent recovery of the U.S. crop and about a 6 percent larger crop abroad. At the same time, world mill use is projected at a record 70 million bales, up 2 million from the past

China is having the biggest effect on the world cotton situation, Anderson said. That country produced 21 million bales last year and has gone from a cotton importer to an exporter in the past few years. This, coupled with the fact that the U.S. dollar remains strong abroad, will have an adverse effect on U.S. cotton exports. Weak credit conditions in developing countries also will continue to stymie exports.

"In the U.S. cotton farmers are in a stock rebulding year after the government's PIK program reduced supplies sharply last year," Anderson said. "However, the reduction of domestic supplies had little effect on world stocks of cotton as other countries kept up their pace and, in some cases, even increased production. So U.S. carryover next Aug. 1 could approach 5 million bales, up more than 2 million from this past august."

Plainview suffers first loss in '84

Hostile Herd hangs on to trip 'Dogs, 17-16

By DENNIS BALL Sports Editor

"There's been too much said about the Angry Red; the Hostile Herd will have the final word."

For the 7,500 fans packed into Plainview's Bulldog Stadium Friday, that sign said it all this particular football game.

The Hostile Herd did, indeed, have the final word. The Whitefaces had built a 17-7 lead over the Plainview Bulldogs near the end of the third quarter, but had to hold on tight for a 17-16 District 3-5A win. Hereford's win dropped the 'Dogs from the undefeated ranks.

The approximately 25-yard sign draped over the visiting bleachers at Plainview then was not made in vain.

"I'll tell you what the turning point of the game was," Hereford football coach Jerry Taylor said, "it was the effort on the part of 34 young men. Almost every play in the game was a big play."

But Taylor had to agree that perhaps one of the biggest plusses for the Herd's momentum came in the third quarter. Leading 10-7 on a Javier Mendiola 31-yard field goal and an Alan Dudding 3-yard run in the first half, the Whitefaces punched the ball across for a touchdown from the Plainview 15, surprisingly to record the Herd's only first down of the second half.

Hereford linebacker Curtis Cotten recovered a Ronnie Bradic fumble on Plainview's opening possession of the third quarter, and Whiteface quarterback Mike Scott found receiver Chet Bunch standing wide open in the end zone for the TD five plays later. The scoring play came Herd, as did Hereford's first touchdown in the second quarter.

"It (the score in the third quarter) was very important," Taylor said. "I felt like we needed to establish something, some confidence, so I decided to go for the touch."

The Herd had lined up to go for an apparent field goal on fourth-andnine from the 14, but when an offside penalty moved the ball inside the 10, Taylor waived that chance.

"That was the difference of the game," Plainview football coach on a fourth down attempt for the Greg Sherwood said. "We would hold them for awhile, but it just wasn't enough."

> The loss put Plainview, 7-1 overall and 6-1 in district, at least one more week away from clinching the league title. The Bulldogs already have wrapped up a tie for the crown entering the game.

> "That's a nice thing about it," Sherwood said. "We've got another shot at it next week when we play Caprock."

Hereford, now 5-3 and 4-2, remains in a tie for second place. With the victory, the Herd extended its winning streak to four games and kept its playoff chances alive.

From the outset, the Whitefaces showed the Plainview Homecoming crowd they weren't going to lie down for the 'Dogs. Mendiola's 31-yard kick for three at the 6:26 mark of the first quarter capped a 13-play drive that began on Hereford's 16. The drive was Hereford's initial possession and featured a touchdown called back when officials ruled Chris Rowton had caught a 14-yard pass from Scott out of bounds in the end

"Hereford did a great job of preparing," Sherwood said. "Hereford has a fine bunch of people over there."

Dudding's TD run capped another sustained drive by the Herd, this one in the second quarter. This time, the Whitefaces used 14 plays in moving the ball 74 yards to paydirt. The sixpointer came on a fourth-and-goal call from the 3-yard line.

The drive maybe should have ended in a TD, however, on the second play of the march. Scott hit wide receiver Sammy Suarez on a 39-yard toss that was just a little underthrown that allowed Bulldog defenders to catch up to Suarez. And if not the second play, the sixth could have resulted in the drive's end. An offside penalty wiped out a 15-yard pass from Scott to Suarez in the end

Total, three important passes aided the Herd assault. But Scott threw only two, the 39-yarder to Suarez and a 16-yarder to running back Vincent Brown. Halfback Stefen Hacker got the other on a 21-yard halfback pass to Rowton. The play came on a thirddown-and-eight from the Bulldog 36.

Scott finished the night 7 of 14 with one interception.

"Scott is a great quarterback," Sherwood said. "He is just a great football player.'

Plainview had the chance to go in at halftime with the lead, but Cotten intercepted a Chad Engelhardt pass near the 15 to thwart the Bulldogs' efforts. Plainview earlier had scored on a 9-yard run by fullback Scooter Billington and Jason Wheeler PAT.

Plainview wingback Thomas Curry performed a tight-rope walk in the third quarter to pull Plainview

Oilers meet Bengals today

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ AP Sports

HOUSTON (AP) - The Cincinnati Bengals, 2-6 this season, will try to improve their playoff possibilities when they meet the winless Houston Oilers in a National Football League game in the Astrodome Sunday.

The Bengals in the playoffs?

That was the cry a week ago when Jim Breech kicked four field goals to lead the Bengals to a 12-9 victory over Cleveland and a second-place position in the American Football Conference's once-proud Central Division.

It is a sad commentary on the division that once was the "bumps and bruises" division. Now Pittsburgh leads with a 4-4 record and the four teams have a combined 7-25 record for the first half of the season.

mer of a chance for us coming back and being in the hunt later in the year, it may had added motivation," Cincinnati Coach Sam Wyche said. "But we really never had that problems where the team felt like it was condemned to a poor finish."

Wyche used three quarterbacks trying to find a winning combination against the Browns, who fired Coach Sam Rutigliano after the game and Breech's game-winning fourth field goal came in the closing seconds.

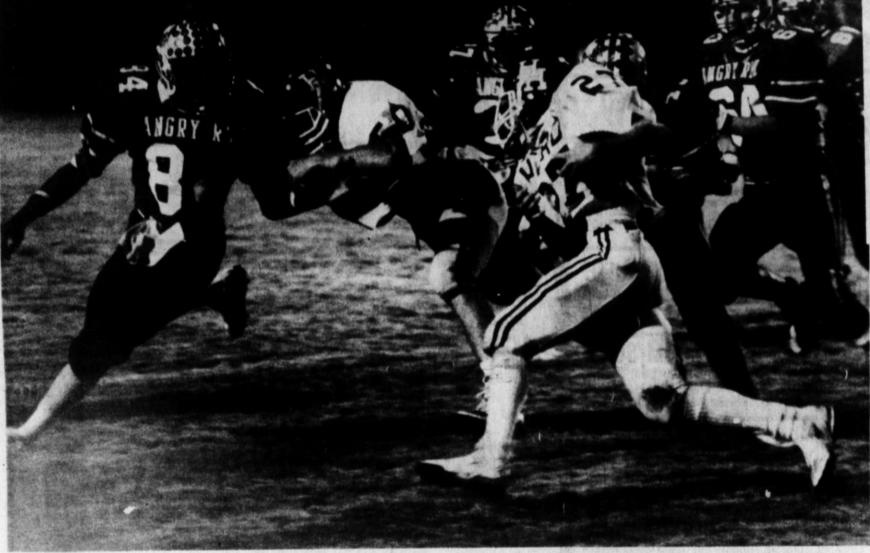

Wyche seized the moment after the game by saying, "We're in it."

Wyche has reason for confidence going against the Oilers, because he's settled on quarterback Ken Anderson to start the game. Anderson has been an Oiler nemesis over the years. He completed an NFL record 20 consecutive passes in a 35-27 victory in 1982.

Anderson dinged the Oilers 55-14 and 28-10 last season. Anderson was sidelined by injury Oct. 7 in the two teams' first meeting but Boomer Eliason led the Bengals to their first victory of the season, 13-3.

Despite their dismal first half, the Oilers have shown improvement in their past two games against Miami and San Francisco, despite 28-10 and 32-21 losses.

(See OILERS, Page 10A)

Tough Yards

Hereford running back Alan Dudding sweeps left for a short gain in Hereford's 17-16 win over Plainview Friday night. The running game proved to be tough going for the Whitefaces against the Angry Red defense as the Herd managed only 37 vards on 35 carries on the ground.

New boss in first outing with New England

By DAVE GOLDBERG AP Sports

Writer New England Patriots players may be excused if they claim that their concentration was broken a bit this week for Sunday's game with the New York Jets.

It's been a week when the big news out of Foxboro, Mass., where the game will be played, has been the upheaval on the Patriots' coaching staff. On Wednesday, much to the consternation of many of the players, Coach Ron Meyer fired defensive coordinator Rod Rust; on Thursday, Meyer was fired and replaced by Raymond Berry, who reinstated Rust.

Berry, a Hall of Fame receiver with the Baltimore Colts and a onetime New England assistant, said he would make no changes in Meyer's game plan for the contest with the Jets, which could have considerable bearing on the race for wild-card playoff spots in the American Conference.

General Manager Pat Sullivan said he made the switch at the season's midway point "because I oppose disruptions and we need a stable situation here."

Coach not as successful at A&M

Sherrill having another dismal year

An AP Sports Analysis By DENNE H. FREEMAN AP Sports Writer

It's barely Halloween and Year III of Texas A&M's Jackie Sherrill Experiment is already another Cotton Bowl crop failure.

In fact, some critics feel Bust-Of-The-Year honors could be in order for the Aggies and their $250,000-perseason football coaching messiah from the East.

It's obvious that whatever formulas Sherrill used to work wonders at the University of Pittsburgh aren't clicking in the man-bites-dog world of the competitive Southwest Conference.

For uncipherable reasons, Sherrill's first three A&M teams leave the impression of being unsound in fundamentals and a tad short of polish.

They appeared incapable of the concentration needed to control a game for four quarters in the first six games on their schedule.

Sherrill inherited a 7-4 bowl team from the fired Tom Wilson so there were some good players when he got to A&M.

Now, there are juniors playing who were recruited by Sherrill.

The talented Aggies are stacked with bluechip players once deemed the cream of Texas.

Please give testimony to Sherrill's recruiting ability; the man is very good at selling himself and his

In fact, some experts figured the Aggies as the team to watch in the 1984 SWC football race.

A&M finished third behind Texas and Southern Methodist in Texas Football magazine's 21st annual poll of writers. Seven writers picked the Aggies first, just one less than Texas.

But it was clear something was wrong from the start. They barely defeated Texas-El Paso, Iowa State and Arkansas State in Kyle Field.

Sophomore quarterback Kevin Murray was lost for the season in the Arkansas State game but hadn't shown the promise of his 1983 Offensive Newcomer of the Year season.

Then came losses to Texas Tech, Houston and Baylor in conference play to doom Aggie championship

The offense had trouble scoring inside the 30 and the defense broke down at critical junctures.

When the end comes Dec. 1 against Texas, it will make 17 years since Texas A&M has visited the Cotton

Sherrill believes 1985 will be the Aggies' year. He has a horde of redshirts available and Murray should be back hale and hearty. Some alumni believe there will be sweeping staff changes after the season with Sherrill bouncing some Sherrill is still in solid with the Burn Bright-led board of regents at least through the 1985 season. Recall, it was Bright who recruited Sherrill. However, even Bright's patience has its limits. He told the Houston Chronicle recently his patience was dwindling. "One of the things he has not done as well as I would have liked is win football games," said Bright.

Indeed, Sherrill has done everything right but win since he year then be advised there will be some rich Aggie alumni ready to write him his severance check. Without batting an eye.

King's scouting report fails to pay off

HOUSTON (AP) - Betsy served," King said. "I watched them Nagelsen and Butch Walts played just the way Billie Jean King's scouting report said they would.

But it didn't help the fourth-seeded King and her partner Peter Fleming.

Nagelsen served superbly and the pair didn't make "stupid" mistakes in recording a 3-6, 7-6 (7-4), 7-5 victory in a quarter-finals match of the $400,000 World Mixed Doubles Championships Friday night.

Top-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd and Jimmy Connors emerged as the only seeded team in Friday night's semifinals with a 6-4, 6-1 victory over Gabriela Sabatini and Jose Luis

"I wasn't surprised how well Betsy play last night and they didn't make any stupid errors. Betsy plays better in mixed doubles because the guys hit hard and that's the way she likes

Fleming apparently didn't read the scouting report on Nagelsen's

"I was definitely surprised," Fleming said. "She hit six or seven unreturnable serves to me and that's surprising."

Fleming served well through most of the match. He won 15 consecutive points off his serve including three love games in the first set. Fleming continued to serve well in the second set but he lost three of four points on his serve in the tie-breaker.

"I wish I had served better in the tie-breaker," Fleming said. "It let us down. But overall I was pleased with the way I served. I felt I was in control of the points."

Fleming's serve was not broken in the match.

King-Fleming broke Walts in the sixth game of the final set giving King-Fleming a 4-2 lead but Nagelsen-Walts broke King in the next game.

"The key game was after I got broke and we broke Billie Jean in the next game," Walts said. "We got ourselves pumped back up and once we broke Billie Jean we knew we had a chance to win."

Nagelsen-Walts broke King again in the 11th game and Nagelsen then served for the match.

Nagelsen's forehand passing shot in the 12th game sent the match to the first match point and Walts hit an overhead winner for the victory.

Dallas has beaten the Baltimore Colts four consecutive times dating back to Jan. 17, 1971.

It was that day that the Colts downed Dallas 16-13 in Super Bowl V on a last-second field goal by Jim Dallas is 5-3 in the series and beat the Colts 37-13, the last time the two teams met in 1981. Tony Dorsett rushed for 175 yards on 30 carries for the Cowboys.

Dorsett is happy to see the Colts coming.

He hasn't rushed for 100 yards in 11 straight games dating back to last season.

"I think we are going to start running the ball better," said Dorsett. "The overtime victory over New Orleans is the shot in the arm we've needed. I think we became a team."

Dorsett needs 70 yards Sunday to become the sixth player in National Football League history to rush for 9,000 yards.

Dallas Coach Tom Landry said Dorsett is going to have a tough time

"Danny was a great, great competitor at Arizona State," Kush said. "He always came up with he big play. Just like he did bring the Dallas is last in the NFL against the rush. The Colts are first in the AFC in rushing.

"We've got to start stopping the run," Landry said. "We haven't done it in three weeks."

Middle linebacker Bob Breunig, who has drawn some criticism for making only two solo tackles in the last two weeks, hurt his back again and may not play.

THE ROLLOVER IRA The rollover IRA can be very important to several categories of people. An employer may have provided a retirement plan which llows "lump-sum distribution" of the funds if the employee retires, dies or leaves prior to retirement age. Or, an employer may decide to terminate a plan. In this case, all the participants would receive their share of the plan. A rollover IRA allows an employer n the case of death, a surviving sp to continue tax-free accumulation of the retirement plan funds. A second source of many rollover IRA's is the decision of an IRA participant to move his fund from one earnings vehicle to another.

HOW MUCH BARK IS TOO MUCH BARK IN COTTON? A lot more than you may have ight, indicates the Textile Research Center in Lubbock, Texas. According to the Center's findings, unless there is a very heavy bark load present, textile mills actually "look for barky cotton as good, cheap, high strength cotton." In fiber tests, barky cotton actually produced a stronger fiber than cleaner cotton in three out of four procedures. Says one researcher, "In our tests the strongest fiber we spun was from a barky balé." He went on to say that bark has proved to be another kind of trash which, unless it is excessively heavy, can be eparated out. "Grade reduction on the basis of bark discriminates against cotton," he said. In the High Plains production area, the reduction in grade for barky cotton, despite the Lub-bock findings is automatic: A 4 to 4.5 cent reduction in the loan price.

The Herd defense held its ground the final half, limiting Plainview to only 97 total yards. However, rather than the overall play of the defense, the timing of big plays may have been most important.

The Herd stopped two Bulldog threats the final 24 minutes, forcing punts from the Whiteface 44 and 42. "Anytime you have to punt, it means a drive has been stopped," Sherwood said. "That hurts, but we felt like we could hold them (deep in-

"The reason I don't win as often now," Nicklaus said, "is because I don't shoot as many really low scores as I used to. And one other thing: There are a lot more good golfers out there now than I encountered when I first started out."

He also admitted that he takes fewer Los Angeles. After Dixon and Waitz, gambles on the links than he did some the men's and women's fields are years back.

Marathons competitive outside of running By BERT ROSENTHAL AP Sports

NEW YORK (AP) - Bob Bright, race director of the America's Marathon-Chicago, thinks he has the New York City Marathon on the run, claiming, "I think we're beating them at their own game."

"I think we have a more competitive race," added Bright, who has been engaged recently in a heated battle for talent with Fred Lebow, director of Sunday's 15th New York City Marathon.

Bright made a lot of big strides with the eighth America's Marathon last Sunday, with a field that included Steve Jones of Britain, who set a world-best of 2 hours, 8 minutes, 5 seconds; Olympic champion Carlos Lopes of Portugal, who finished second; 1983 world champion Rob de Castella of Australia, the third-place finisher; 1984 Boston Marathon winner and 1983 New York City runner-Geoff Smith of Britain, who ound up fifth, and women's Olympic bronze medalist Rosa Mota of Portugal, who finished first among the women.

Lebow's best entrants for Sunday are defending champions Rod Dixon of New Zealand, who was 10th in the Olympics, and Grete Waitz of Norway, the women's silver medalist at considered thin.

"I would say that unless someone breaks a world record, Fred would have to scramble next year," Bright said Friday at a press conference.

The chances of any runner in Sunday's field of more than 18,000 lowering Jones' mark or the women's world-best of 2:22:43, held by Joan Benoit of the United States, are considered slim because of the weather. The forecast is for the temperature to be in the 70s - very warm for a marathon.

Bright pointed out that he and Lebow have somewhat different philosophies about putting together a marathon.

Bright, in his third year as director of the Chicago event, said that one of his main ingredients for an outstanding marathon "is the right mix of

"We had guys who took turns at hammering out the pace," he said about last Sunday's historic race.

OILERS 2

Oiler quarterback Warren Moon turned in one of his most versatile performances, completing 25 of 33 passes for 356 yards and two touchdowns against the 49er defense. It was his second 300-yard game of the season and cause for encouragement from Coach Hugh Campbell.

That was the good news. The Oilers' defense also was riddled by 49er quarter Joe Montana for 353 yards. The Oiler defense ranks 28th in the NFL in total defense and the offense is 27th. Cincinnati is 10th and 14th in the two team categories.

"I think it is possible to move the ball against Cincinnati," Campbell said. "I'm not going to predict a lot of points because they are very solid. I have to agree that Cincinnati has one of the worst records but personnel wise, they are a very strong team."

Kickoff is at noon CDT.

Retires as pro quarterback

Ken Stabler hangs up cleats

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The New Orleans Saints' 1984 season wasn't what he had in mind as his last in the National Football League, quarterback Ken Stabler said in explaning his sudden retirement.

On Friday night, the Saints announced Stabler — one of the most accurate passers ever to play the game — was retiring immediately halfway through a disappointing season.

The news release gave no reason, but Saints fans had become more outspoken recently in their condemnation of the performances by Stabler and Richard Todd, who beat out Stabler and Dave Wilson for the starting assignment.

Then, Stabler's fourth quarter fumble last Sunday night against Dallas on national television produced the game-tying touchdown that helped the Cowboys rally to a 30-27 overtime victory against the Saints.

When our early settlers struck out for new opportunities, they had to be prepared to handle any problem that came up.

They had to be the surveyors, the carpenters, the hunters, the farmers, the mechanics, and the doctors.

For most of our country's pioneers, it was "on-the-job-training" that provided them with the skills to cope with what seemed like insurmountable problems.

At our bank, we have a philosophy that's based on the pioneer spirit. It means we work hard to provide financial services that will help you cope with Twentieth Century situations.

We offer savings accounts, checking accounts, individual retirement accounts, home improvement loans and a host of other services designed to make your life easier. And we don't stop here. Every day our staff is looking for new services and programs to serve you even better. It's this kind of dedication that makes us the bank with the pioneer spirit.

Amendment would help universities

By DOUG CRICHTON Associated much of which went for university Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) - When it came to tampering with the fund that helped make Texas A&M University and the University of Texas among the wealthiest in the nation, those schools' officials were understandably hesitant.

But Texas' other public universities, many left without capital improvement cash after the state dumped its property tax in 1982, have been clamoring for more state money or a share of the Permanent University Fund.

So now, when Texas voters step into the ballot booth Nov. 6, a compromise constitutional amendment aimed at spreading the wealth a bit will be one of eight amendments awaiting their decision.

Both A&M's and UT's boards of regents have endorsed the amendment "despite earlier feelings that the PUF shouldn't be changed," said Texas A&M spokesman Lane Stephenson.

With the state property tax dead it had raised $50 million annually, and legislative appropriations.

But the PUF, a $2 billion permanent endowment funded by oil and gas revenues from UT lands, covers only five campuses within the UT and A&M systems. The other statesupported schools have to get funding piecemeal from the Legislature.

"That has been thought unfair because those schools can't plan long-term," said George Christian, an Austin businessman promoting passage of the amendment. "You can't use what appropriations you get in a fiscally sound way when you don't know what you'll get from one year to the next."

set up a new dedicated appropriation of $100 million per year, starting in fiscal 1986, for a new college fund. The 26 eligible institutions could use the money to acquire land, construct or equip buildings, rehabilitate buildings and acquire capital equipment and library materials.

Heart may shut down completely in dreams

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN Special Correspondent

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP)-Medical researchers have discovered that the heart may stop completely for a couple of seconds during our dreams.

This phenomenon was recently reported in the New England Journal of Medicine.

I have had several such show stoppers on my own personal late, late movie that I would like to share with the laboratory dream collectors.

In fact last night there was that light-flashing, horn-blowing, bellringing, coin-clanging dream in which I hit the jackpot on the third yank of a 25-cent slot machine, using the roll of free quarters distributed to passengers on the express bus to Atlantic City from Danbury, Conn. My heart must have stopped for at cozy?' least five seconds while several thousand dollars in quarters splashed onto the carpet all around me, and the frowning casino manager perfunc- jolted me back to the dull work-a-day the post. torily congratulated me.

The research directed by Dr. Christian Guilleminault of Stanford University discovered that the hearts of otherwise healthy adults can stop working for up to nine seconds while they dream. The old ticker, the researchers found, stopped tocking during REM, which stands for "rapid eye movement," and describes the period of sleep when the sleeper's eyes dart about as if actually watching a dream.

Most people, the dream merchants tell us, experience REM and private late shows three or more times a night. Fortunately, the heart goes back to work afterward.

I know my old Mickey Mouse must have gone into a holding pattern and my eyes boggled to a Groucho Marx leer the night Farrah Fawcett invited me up to her place for a drink.

Nov. 8 ballot: -Amendment 1 would grant state-chartered banks - about 48 percent of those in Texas - all rights and privileges that nationally chartered banks in the state now have.

Supporters say the provision is needed to keep state banks competitive with national banks. Opponents counter that it would be impossible for the state to impose on state banks any regulation more stringent than national regulations.

-Amendment 3 would add dependent parents and siblings to the list of survivors eligible for state aid when public-safety officers are killed while on hazardous duty. Currently, only the surviving spouse and dependent children are eligible for the funds.

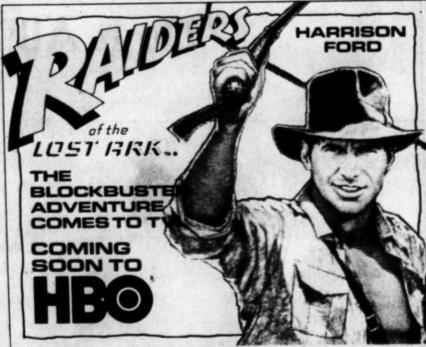

Supporters point to two cases in the 1970s where public safety officers killed while on duty were not married but had dependent relatives. Opponents say the measure shouldn't be passed until its fiscal implications are clear.

-Amendment 4 would allow voters in Bexar and Collin counties to abolish their county treasurers' offices. If the offices were abolished, their duties would pass to the county clerk.

Supporters say the treasurer offices' functions are needed for good government, but that the current offices aren't needed to perform them. The incumbent treasurers in both counties favor abolishing the posi-

Opponents argue that if the offices are obsolete in those two counties, they're obsolete everywhere in the state. They say the amendment should allow all counties to decide whether they need a county treasurer

-Amendment 5 would change the procedure for replacing the lieutenant governor should that person die in office, resign or be removed. The amendment would require the Senate president pro tempore to convene the Senate within 30 days of a vacancy to elect a replacement. Currently, the Senate pro tem assumes

Retired admiral commands own pool

By JAN TOMAS San Angelo Standard-Times

KERRVILLE, Texas (AP) -These days the largest body of water commanded by retired Rear Adm. Charles "Chili" Kirkpatrick is a kidney-shaped swimming pool on a hillside terrace outside his living

But in his youth, Kirkpatrick commanded a submarine that sailed beneath the Pacific seas in World War II and sunk thousands of tons of enemy shipping. He dodged Japanese bombs that rained on Pearl Harbor. Later on, a deadly kamikaze (Baka) bomb struck directly beneath the bridge of a destroyer he commanded.

Kirkpatrick, a native of San Angelo, joined the Navy as an apprentice seaman in 1926. The next year he was appointed to the Naval Academy at Annapolis.

"A reporter once asked me why a West Texas boy from San Angelo would want to join the Navy. I said 'Son I was looking for water, I didn't care what kind."

Kirkpatrick, 77, said he was unsure of how he acquired his nickname. A boy across the street where he lived at 305 W. Concho was also named Charles, with a nickname of Chili. "I was always Chili from the time I remember. I don't think it had anything to do with a bad temper," he said with a trace of a smile.

The intrepid Navy man possesses memories not given to ordinary sailors. His yarns evoke the feelings of an extraordinary era - at once terrible and adventurous.

For more than a year during the war, one of Kirkpatrick's duties was to take notes while Commander-in-Chief of the Pacific Fleet Admiral Chester Nimitz and his staff debated battle tactics and evaluated personnel. As assistant operations officer, Kirkpatrick also traveled to the historical summit meetings where Churchill, Roosevelt and Stalin met.

"The conferences were unbelievable. I saw the high-level control of things." Kirkpatrick said he traveled aboard Churchill's train, was decorated by Gen. Douglas MacArthur, and became familiar with people whose names appear regularly in military history books.

Kirkpatrick will tell you that Nimitz was "one of the most lovable characters I have ever known. He tried to do the right and best thing and he usually did.

"He (Nimitz) was not easy on anybody, not with that kind of war on your hands."

Vice Adm. William F. "Bull" Halsey Jr. was "a wonderful leader. He was made to order for those jobs," according to Kirkpatrick. As a combat commander, Halsey rated tops with his men and officers. "If he told everybody to jump over the side, they would do it."

Halsey autographed a picture of himself and gave it to Kirkpatrick.

As commander of the submarine Triton for 16 months in 1943-44, Kirkpatrick was credited with sinking 22,949 tons of enemy shipping.

"There were some times I got scared. Anybody who says they weren't is either lying or dumber than hell." Kirkpatrick said he remembers one bad time when the Japanese depth-charged his submarine for an hour and a half. "We were all scared. It was on the equator and hot. We had to turn everything off. Even my bedroom slippers were wringing wet."

In September, 1944, Kirkpatrick became the commanding officer of the destroyer-minelayer Shea. For eight months, Kirkpatrick operated in the Okinawa area until a Baka bomb (human piloted) badly damaged his submarine.

Kirkpatrick said the Shea was on a radar picket, Station No. 14 of 100 ships stretched about 100 miles, intercepting Japanese planes.

"One day, about mid-morning, we shot down a bomber. But we saw this bomb headed toward us. We shot at it, but couldn't hit it. It dropped closer. We didn't know it was a Baka (human piloted) until the last few seconds. It had plywood wings. I remember yelling 'Hit the deck.'

"The bomb hit the starboard side right under where I was standing on the bridge. It went clear out the other side of the ship, leaving a hole like this and exploded 25 yards to port." Kirkpatrick illustrated his story by making a wide circle with his arms.

"It should have gone off on the ship, but it left two huge holes above the water line. Even though the bomb exploded well out, the shrapnel flew, killing people right and left. A bomb wing caught a 50-caliber machine gunner at the throat. The man at the wheel lost an arm and a leg. I got a bad knee. The deck came to meet me on my way to the deck.

"A piece of the bomb went into the

into the handling room full of powder. It set off the powder. Those men were incinerated. It was awful. Had water not entered the handling room, we would have lost the ship."

Seventy-five men were killed or badly wounded, Kirkpatrick recall-

After unloading the wounded men at Okinawa, Kirkpatrick took the Shea to a nearby island chain for repairs, and subsequently brought the ship to the United States for a major overhaul.

The trip home was uneventful, except that Kirkpatrick heard a good friend of his, Jack F. Glenn was aboard a tramp steamer enroute to the States. Kirkpatrick, who had obtained Glenn's previous posting for him, boarded the steamer and requested the captain allow Glenn to transfer to his battleship.

"I promised Glenn's wife that when I came back, I would bring him with me. I did that after I got him that job. Then I worried that if anything happened to him, his wife would hold me responsible."

Kirkpatrick sailed into port, his friend safely aboard.

Kirkpatrick was greeted by his wife. Lalla, who had reluctantly left Hawaii two months after the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor. "It was days before I knew if Charles was safe.

"Since we survived, I was glad I was there. I saw history in the making," Mrs. Kirkpatrick said.

Early on Dec. 7, 1941, Kirkpatrick and his commanding officer, Adm. Milo Draemel, were headed toward a golf course. Kirkpatrick heard antiaircraft fire about 7:30 a.m. When Draemel heard the noise, he speculated the Army was conducting early morning maneuvers. Kirkpatrick disagreed.

"On Sunday morning, Admiral?"

Kirkpatrick said Draemel ordered the driver to stop and ran up a stairway to a small grocery store to use the telephone. "He came down those steps five at a time," Kirkpatrick recalled.

The two men, dumbfounded, returned to the base and commandered a boat to ferry them to their flagship, Detroit, as the Arizona was being blown up. As the officers and most of the enlisted men arrived, the ship was unable to back away from its berth as another ship was hit by an armor-piercing bomb which passed through the ship and exploded at the bottom of the bay.

In front of the flagship, the carrier Utah rolled over and sunk. "We watched one of our destroyers ram a submarine that had its periscope up. It got up so much speed that it nosed into the cane field. But it backed up and went on out to sea afterward."

"Oh Lord, we were too busy to be afraid - fear didn't enter into it."

The day was filled with strange wists. Kirkpatrick said a fleet of Flying Fortresses arrived from the mainland in the middle of the Japanese attack. Meanwhile, carriers were delivering airplanes to Midway and Wake and the Japanese missed them, Kirkpatrick said.

In the chaos following the initial Japanese attack, men scrambled onto small boats and headed for "anything that floated" Kirkpatrick said. One destroyer had only one officer aboard, and he was an ensign.

"I told him 'You have good petty fficers, use them," Kirkpatrick said.

Later that evening on a search and destroy mission, Kirkpatrick discovered a nearby ship had targeted his ship as an enemy contact. "I rushed past the officers on the bridge with no explanation and radioed that ship, 'We have you on the reverse bearing you gave us. Be careful. Be careful.'

Kirkpatrick said he didn't get home until the end of the week. He had not slept at all. "I don't understand that. You never know how much you can take until you have to."

After the war, Kirkpatrick served afloat and in various desk jobs. Among his assignments were that of executive officer of the battleship Wisconsin; commander of a submarine squadron; and Chief of Staff to the Commander United States Taiwan Defense Command. In July, 1961, he served as Commander of the Training Command in the Pacific Fleet. From there he went to his last duty post as Superintendent of the Naval Academy.

A heart attack forced his early retirement in 1964. It struck the night before Kirkpatrick was scheduled to be relieved and travel to Washington, D.C., for a position as Deputy Commander of Naval Operations, Head of Personnel.

"All my uniforms had been changed for three stars - I would have been a Vice Admiral," Kirkpatrick said. Although Kirkpatrick said the Navy wanted him to continue working, he decided to retire upon the advice of his doctor.

It was the hardest decision of his naval career. "I decided quickly, but living with that choice was very hard." Kirkpatrick said.

Kirkpatrick paused briefly. "I wouldn't have missed anything. There were some real thrills."

Galveston teacher endures 61 years

By CLETA SIRENO GALVESTON DAILY NEWS

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) -Lenora Dorian Jones has been sitting on a piano bench for almost as long as she can remember. At the age of five, she began piano lessons at St. Joseph's School here on the island and has been playing ever since.

Now 72 years later she is celebrating her 61st anniversary as a teacher of voice and piano. Recently, old and new friends of Mrs. Jones got together for a reunion recital.

"I can't remember my first solo, but I played a duet called "The Crescent Waltz," said Mrs. Jones. "I still have the music to that song." She wonders now how a 5-year-old was able to play such a difficult piece of music.

As her mother before her, Mrs. Jones was born in an upstairs room in the high-rise white frame family home on 23rd Street. The house also serves as her music studio, where she began giving formal piano lessons at about the age of 16, although she taught a few of her classmates and friends at an even earlier age.

The room in which she was born has been used by five generations of girls and is now occupied by Mrs. Jones' great-granddaughter, Jennifer. Mrs. Jones, whose only daughter is deceased, shares her home with her son-in-law and her granddaughter's family.

The old screened-in-porch on the southwest side of the house was once used by the family in the evenings. Mrs. Jones recalls they would sit and visit with neighbors and catch the southern breezes from the Gulf. "In those days we knew all our neighbors," she said.

Now the porch has been enclosed and serves as a small waiting room for students who take piano from Mrs. Jones. It would be difficult to count the students she has taught, but Mrs. Jones says she is now on the second and third generations of some of her former pupils. Many a student can recall waiting in the little alcove either for their lesson or to be picked up by parents.

The music studio is through the hall to the left. Seated at the grand piano, where she plays and students get to practice at recital time, Mrs. Jones tells about some of the mementos and keepsakes scattered about the room. The items reflect a colorful family history, gifts from family and of piano workbooks and sheet music fill the shelves and another upright piano for students' lessons, as well as a small work table and chair fill the room to capacity.

Proud of her family heritage, Mrs. Jones explains that her maternal great-grandfather's family came here from Germany in the early 1840s, and her father's family from France soon after that. She still has her grandfather's service revolver from when he was in the Galveston police force, along with other family keepsakes and certificates. Her father's family - except a twin brother and other members who were in New Orleans - all were lost during the disastrous 1900 hurricane that killed thousands in Galveston.

She says her father, Charles Dorian, retrieved the bodies of his family and buried them himself. In 1906 her father married her mother, Agnes Plfuger, and moved into the family home on 23rd street. In 1907 Lenora, named for her great-greatgrandmother, was born.

Mrs. Jones graduated at age 16 from St. Joseph's High School, the first parochial high school in Galveston which opened in 1876 and friends and her love of music. Stacks finally closed in 1926. The school was a co-educational, nondenominational institution advertised in the early 1900s as "St. Joseph's German and English Catholic School for boys and girls." It was operated by the Sisters of Divine Providence.

These sisters were the ones who taught and instilled into her the love of music, she says. "I always found reading music to be so easy. I thought it was like that for everyone, but I have found it isn't," she said. "My mother always said I was fortunate and she was glad I could read music so easily. She could play from listening but she didn't read music." Mrs. Jones started her teaching prior to her graduation when she was in eighth grade. Her graduating class of 1924 was the first one to graduate from the city auditorium. 'Most of the earlier classes graduated from the Cathedral Hall," she explains.

Later, when she went off to college, her mother continued to give lessons to her students, so that she still had the music school when she came back. She studied at Our Lady of the Lake College in San Antonio and at St. Louis Institute of Music in St. Louis, Mo. where she received her

She has also studied piano and voice with Professor Frank B. Herrle of Galveston. In St. Louis she studied piano with Gottfried Galston and harmony with Ernest Kroeger, Louis Victor Saar and L.M. Dodd.

In the past Mrs. Jones has had several assistant teachers in her employ, and several more pianos in the house, but she teaches alone now. "I used to do a lot of work with the Galveston Little Theater, years ago, but I couldn't do that now," she said.

She is already busy five days each week giving lessons to 25 students. She explains she used to have up to 80 or 90 students at a time, with several lessons going on at once, with help from assistants.

"Several of my assistants were former pupils who came back and taught for me," said Mrs. Jones who seems not only to love music, but people as well. "Many of my former pupils have excelled in teaching music in other cities," she said.

Mrs. Jones has managed to find a little time for her family and community amidst all that piano playing. Over the years she has been a member and has served two terms as president in the Pilot Club, the Galveston Musical Club, the Galveston Garden Club and the Stratford Study Club.

"I think I enjoy teaching music more now than I did a number of years back," said Mrs. Jones, after giving a brief demonstration of her capabilites on the instrument herself. She says Chopin is probably one of her favorite composers, although she really likes lots of popular music.

She can even play some of the really new hard rock or New Wave. "I don't say I get the point," she says laughingly, "but I have to know about it so I can teach the students who want to learn it."

"I've always loved playing and teaching and once in a while I get a real jewel to work with," says Mrs. Jones with a twinkle in her eye. "I have two of those in my present classes - Magic D'Arienzo and Peggy Laros," she said.

"My friend who is a nurse says I'm lucky. In other professions people have to retire at a certain age, but I just keep on teaching," she says proudly, adding that she plans to do just that for some time to come.

On national wildlife refuge

Gas wells might endanger woodpeckers

MONROE, La. (AP) - The oilman cometh to the D'Arbonne National Wildlife Refuge, making life tougher for an endangered species of woodpecker that lives nearby.

Sixteen natural gas wells are being drilled in a 160-acre patch of the refuge, near the nesting area of the red-cockaded woodpecker.

Lee Fulton, refuge manager, said there's nothing he can do about it, although some of the new wells will be as close as 625 feet apart - less than one-third the distance needed anywhere else in Louisiana.

"It's the way the rules were written back in 1924," said Charles McGough, district manager for the state Office of Conservation.

"The mineral estate ... takes preference over the surface estate. All they are required to do is pay the surface owner for damages, no matter who the surface owners are."

Since 16 sites are being cleared, the 160 acres will lose one-tenth of its woods, Fulton said. The redcockaded woodpecker, which feeds on insects under the bark of living trees, has a nesting place just north of the tract.

Fulton said he was concerned because this breed of woodpecker has limited range.

It's not that Fulton thinks all drilling should be kept out of the refuge, which was established in 1982 on land acquired in the 1970s by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

"A few wells out there provide diversity by breaking up the ... forest with grassland, which provides birds with insects. A few of them are good, but not when you get more than in my professional opinion we need,"

he said. Good or bad, it's legal.

In most of the state, the law requires at least 2,000 feet between gas wells. But the politicians who imposed that limit did not set any spacing requirements for the Monroe Gas Field, part of which extends beneath the refuge.

The refuge stretches across 17,000 acres in Union and Ouachita Parishes. However, the Corps only acquired surface ownership, it did not get mineral rights - and in this oil state, mineral rights take prece-

"This is not a new problem," he said. "It's really a bad situation that land was converted into a refuge in an area that more wells have been drilled than anywhere in the United States. If I had a choice, I'd rather be drilling off the refuge, but I don't have that choice."

Fulton said drilling is taking place on about 3,300 acres of the refuge, but not as heavy as Terronne plans.

He said he's also worried because gas wells produce salt water that kills all trees and plants - further cutting back what was set aside as a habitat for deer, squirrel and other

From 11 a.m. until 2 p.m., lunch will be served and dinner is scheduled from 5 to 8 p.m. The menu includes chili rellenos, enchiladas, beans, pralines and coffee or tea. Price of meal tickets are $3.50 for adults and $1.50 for children with hot dog plates also being available for $1.

A pumpkin carving contest will be held and contestants are asked to have their entries in by 6:30 p.m. Wednesday. The pumpkins may be carved, painted or decorated. Age groups for the contest are seven and under, 8-11, 12-15 and 16 through 18. Family decorated pumpkins may be entered as well, and first, second and third place prizes will be awarded in each age group. Prizes will be awarded at 7:45 p.m. in the Friendship Court.

Activities for both young and old are planned during the event. Adults may play cards and dominoes in the adult game room and events for the children include a dunking board, hay rides, pet rock, cake walk, go fish, frisbie toss, photo booth, dart throw, cupcake walk, nickel slide, grab bag, video room, theatre room and a Halloween costume parade.

Children wishing to play games may purchase a $5 or $2.50 card which is good for several of the booths.

All proceeds will be used by the church.

The Jack-o-lantern Junction, which opens to the public at 10 a.m. Wednesday, will be held in the Friendship Court of the First Christian Church and will offer a variety of craft items, baked goods and Christmas decorations. Also, several activities have been planned during the event which is being chaired by (from left) Kathy Johnson, Sharon Hodges and Glenda Keenan.

The bazaar will also feature a country store which will have many items for sale including handmade Christmas ornaments, wooden toys and decorated

Ann Landers

Use good judgment

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A colleague at work received word from the school that her 9-year-old daughter had collapsed with a high fever. She phoned her physician, who ordered an ambulance and arranged to meet her at the hospital. My friend was so upset I offered to drive her there.

On our way down from the 32nd floor, the elevator stopped many times for passengers, which was unavoidable, but one bright-faced young woman stepped out each time, held the door and looked both ways down the long corridors. If anyone was approaching, she waited. Most of them did not want the elevator. When a passenger boarded, she beamed a simpering smile, as if to say, "Don't you all agree I am a wonderful person?"

After several such performances, my friend became so frustrated she broke into tears. I explained to "Goody Two-Shoes" that we were on our way to a desperately ill child and the delays were distressing. She became downright nasty, snapped something about "selfish people" and "only a few seconds," but at least she stopped the foolishness with

I've thought a lot about that incident and concluded that many doorholders are on an ego trip. They enjoy the approval from the latecomers and ignore the scowls of those who are already on board I'd say they have a problem. What would you say, Ann Landers?- Dallas Morning News Reader

DEAR DALLAS: Judgment is the key word. It's considerate to hold the door for a person who is only a few seconds away, but to step outside and look for potential passengers suggests an unhealthy need for ap-

DEAR ANN: Recently a senior in high school committed suicide in our city. When something like this happens all kinds of rumors start going around. Someone always says, "She was pregnant."

A funeral director told my aunt, 'She wasn't pregnant, I checked." Ann, is a funeral director qualified to check? If he is, should the information be made public?-Prescott,

DEAR PRESCOTT: Unless the funeral director is also a gynecologist he would not be competent to make such a diagnosis. Under no circumstances should he be "checking." To make such information public is highly unethical.

DEAR ANN LANDERES: Is it true that lightning never strikes in the same place twice? I say no. Mr. X. says yes. Who's right?-Hays,

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You are. According to the Guinness Book of Records, a park ranger, Roy "Dooms" C. Sullivan of Virginia, was struck seven times (the world's record). The first time (1942) he lost his big toenail, in 1969 he lost his

FREQUENT-FLYER NEWS

Almost 10 million travelers have enrolled in one or more of the frequent-flyer bonus programs begun by the airlines in the last several years. Because of the recent changes in many of these plans, the fad promises to become even more popular and rewarding in the coming months. New promotions provide mileage credits for staying at particular hotels, for renting cars from designated firms and even for sailing on selected cruise lines. Some of the airlines no longer require the traveler to patronize just one company to build up frequent-flyer points. Several major airlines now interchangeably credit mileage. The usual miles-traveled threshold for substantial rewards is 50,000 miles or

PEO sells greenery for scholarship fund-raiser

The international Christian organization, Philantrophic Educational Organization, is selling greenery to raise money for the scholarships that the organization awards every year.

The organization furthers women's educations and presented a continuing education grant for $500 to Kathleen Haney who is attending West Texas State University to receive her teaching degree. The group also gives a scholarship to a graduating senior girl at Hereford High School each year for her to use for the college of her choice. Last year Dallas Phillips received $350.

PEO awards scholarships when a need is found and also presents international peace scholarships.

The fresh greenery, shipped in from Washington, is the only fundraiser for the organization and is sold only at Christmas time. A seven-foot garland is $18, wreath sell for $10, English holly for $3 a bag and kits to make the items youself are $5.

Orders are being taken at The Vogue, Caryn's Hallmark and from individual members. The last day to order the greenery is Thursday.

Non-fiction bestsellers are featured this week at the Deaf Smith County Library. The books featured this week are "Close Encounters" by Mike Wallace & Gary Paul Gates, "The Wendy Dilemma" by Dr. Dan Kiley, and "Murder at the Met" by David Black.

"Close Encounters" is the inside story of Mike Wallace's career as one of America's most respected and controversial television journalists. He is the senior correspondent of the most successful news show in TV history: CBS's 60 MINUTES, which has rated among the top ten of all programs for the past seven years.

Mike Wallace is known for his no-holds-barred, hard-hitting interviews with the famous and infamous, as well as the unknown. Wallace tells of his gut reactions to events and experiences he has encountered over the years. Wallace's interviews have taken him around the globe. The list includes: Ronald Reagan, the Ayatollah Khomeini, Richard Nixon, Anwar Sadat, Johnny Carson, and The Shaw of Iran.

"Close Encounters" is a candid, forthright, disarming and lively account. It tells how he developed his tough, confrontational approach, and draws the reader into a history of our

Also available this week is "The Wendy Dilema": when women stop mothering their men by Dr. Dan Kiley. You don't have to tell a woman she shouldn't mother her man. However, when she stops mothering him, she faces a dilemma. How does she break this mothering habit without being rejected? Dr. Dan Kiley calls this the Wendy Dilemma. Wendy was the woman who mothered the childish Peter Pan. When women encounter the Wendy Dilemma, they often make the mistake of sacrificing themselves in order to be accepted. This increases their mothering response and doubles their frustration.

In effect, females are told that they are too weak to protect themselves from the world and must have a man do it; it is their job to protect a man from his own emotional blind spots. As a woman strives for partnership with her man, she will violate their restrictive script and may suffer pangs of guilt. When a woman resolves the Wendy Dilemma, she escapes the mothering trap. She becomes a self-possessed person

Dr. Dan Kiley is the author of the wildly successful "The Peter Pan Syndrome." He is a familiar face and voice to millions of Americans as well as an accomplished writer and expert in the field of human relation-

Also available this week is 'Murder at the Met" by David Black. On July 23, 1980, Helen Hagnes Mintiks, a thirty-year-old violinist, left the orchestra pit at the Metropolitan Opera House during intermission-and never came back. The following day her body was found. She had been bound, gaged, and thrown down an air-conditioner fan shaft to her death. "Murder at the Met" is the true inside story of the brilliant and bizarre investigation that cracked one of the most important cases in the history of the New York City Police Department.

Other new books available this week at the library are "In God's Name" by Yallop, "The Rest of Us" by Birmingham and "Julie" by Catherine Marshall.

What Composes a Bad Day?
Always write about good things.
Have decided I want the world to know I have bad days. Today has been one. This is a Sunday. I get up. It's raining, cold, and dreary. I get the older three children to Sunday School in the morning and choir practice at night. My mother always told me not to try to do any kind of work in lieu of going to church. That may have been my problem as everything went wrong.

Saturday I was in Amarillo in a fabric store with a couple of friends both County Extension Agents. They're buying fabric to make wool jackets and suits. Then there's me - I buy interfacing to repair a skirt and buttons to finish a jacket I made in a blazer construction workshop in June. Bedtime has come. I have an imprint of my iron on the skirt I was mending. Skirt would have lasted longer without my repair effort. Nothing like ruining a skirt to an expensive suit.

Then there's three buttons sewn on my blazer. Five still need to be sewn on and two buttonholes remain to be made. I'm sure my two friends will be wearing new wool outfits in the morning. But their children are considerably older than mine. Some are even away from home. I spend my time changing diapers, feeding a baby, vacuuming cracker crumbs, refereeing fights, being a taxi for three kids to all kinds of extracurricular activities. They spend their time sewing. Excuses, excuses for not being productive!! However, I do believe they're real. Also, I wouldn't take a million dollars for all my younguns. By the time I get my children raised - I'll be out of the mood to sew.

And you farmers wives can appreciate this. One of the largest annual debts is the land payments. Here it is - payment due in ten days and the way I figure it - we're a few thousand short on money. Is my husband concerned? Well, no. He also tells me to worry about important things. I thought I was.

Then I venture to carefully examine the children's teeth. Oh, my gosh, all three are ready for braces. Can't figure where we'll get a down payment. Also hate to think of paying monthly on three children's teeth for the rest of my life.-well three or so

It seems each weekend is the same. Friday - I think - gosh, two whole days - well, sometimes - I visualize all the neat things I can do finish a blazer, finish a suit, finish reupholstering a footstool, organizing the personal and farm records, cleaning out the closet, cleaning the garage, and on and on. Sunday night comes and all I've done - routine laundry, weekly housecleaning, and cooked four meals plus some snacks. And it took every minute of my time! Hard for you to believe! I hope not!

If I ever get enough money coming my way, there's two things I will do hire a housekeeper and go to the beauty shop twice weekly. I'll hire a housekeeper because it seems I spend all my waking hours at home doing housework. After work each day, there's a meal to cook, dishes to

CWU to celebrate Community Day

Church Women United in Hereford will meet Friday at 9:30 a.m. in First Presbyterian Church to celebrate 1984 World Community Day.

The theme for the day is "A Place Called Home." Jim Conkwright and Cameron Gault who have just returned from a trip to Israel will present slides they took on their visit.

Troyce Hanna, president, will preside at a short business meeting. New officers will be elected following a report by the nominating committee which consists of Eloise McDougal, chairman, Claudia McBrayer and Betty Koelzer. Nominations from the floor may be made with the nominees consent. The installation will take place in World Community Day grew out of the concern of Church Women United that a just, peaceful and caring society become a reality for all people everywhere. First observed in November, 1943, this annual event has been a time when Christian women gather to focus attention on their individual and collective responsibilities for justice and lasting world peace.

J.V. Pickens will be honored today at noon with a dinner hosted by his children and grandchildren at the home of his daughter and son-in-law, Carroll and Ruth Newsom, 150 Live Oak, on the occasion of his 92nd birthday.

Pickens, a retired farmer, was born in Fannin County, October 29, 1892. He moved with his parents from Texas to Indian Territory in 1897 and was living in Boswell, Choctaw County, at the time of Oklahoma statehood in 1907.

He married Lora Susan Self, November 15, 1916 in Hugo, Okla. The couple moved to the panhandle of Texas in 1926 and lived in Borger briefly. In 1927 they moved to the Lower Rio Grande Valley where Pickens engaged in farming. They returned to the Panhandle in 1943, living and farming southeast of Hereford. They continued to live on the farm after retirement. Mrs. Pickens died in 1982.

Pickens is a member of the First Baptist Church and the Witherspoon Sunday School class. He was chosen as "Senior Man of the Year" in 1983 by his Sunday School department. He is a member of Hereford Senior Citizens and was elected "Valentine King" in 1984. He is a charter member of Golden K Kiwanis.

Holly Sugar, Farm

Facilities expand

Name changed, changed back

By KIMBERLY THOGMARTIN Staff Writer

First it was the Texas Sugar Beet Growers Association. Then the name was changed to the Texas-New Mexico Sugar Beet Growers Association to accommodate farmers in the Clovis area who contracted with Holly Sugar Corporation.

Then transportation costs went up, and the New Mexico growers dropped out, so the 300-member organization took its original name back.

More than just a fraternity, the association was founded even before Holly Sugar's Hereford plant started "boiling" sugar beets twenty years

"We worked to recruit the growers for Holly," association president Bill Cleavinger pointed out. "The original responsibility of the association was to negotiate grower contracts with the company.' The group's duties have by necessity been greatly expanded in the past 20 years, and at one point may have kept the multi-million dollar business from pulling out of the county. "Grower relationships with the company reached some low points," Cleavinger said candidly. "The acreage dwindled down to 17,000 one year."

This year, 38,000 acres of beets were grown for the sugar refinery. Acreage reached a maximum of 45,000 in 1969.

The grower's association jumped in with both feet to establish better communications between the company and the growers. "It helps for the growers to understand their problems," Cleavinger pointed out. "Like why Holly can't stockpile a lot of beets, things like that."

Cleavinger has made that sort of education a priority since he took over as president in 1977.

"I told them I would be involved with the factor, that I would be there and know what was going on."

Cleavinger said the association board now includes a director from every growing region in the sevencounty area. "This helps us maintain Cleavinger listed among accomplishments of the association a new truck quota system that eases traffic at harvest time. "We used to have trucks lined up all the way back to Hereford," he remembered.

The Texas group now belongs to the American Sugarbeet Grower's association, founded two years ago. Cleavinger serves as vice president of that body and as chairman of its PAC (political action committee).

Local sugar processing plant celebrates 20th anniversary

By KIMBERLY THOGMARTIN Staff Writer

One of the two largest plants of the nation's third largest sugar processing company makes its home in Deaf Smith County.

Holly Sugar, located west of Hereford since 1964, celebrated its 20th year in the county by recently spending more than $4 million on capital improvements to the huge

Cal Jones, agricultural manager for Holly Sugar, said the new crystallizing equipment means increased efficiency. A 30,000 square feet warehouse will allow the plant to keep more processed sugar on hand and ready to sell, he explained.

Jones said he is expecting 1984 to be a bumper year for sugar beet growers who contract with Holly Sugar. At least 900,000 tons will be harvested this year, he thought, which translates to two million hundredweights of processed sugar.

During the processing season, October through January, Holly will "cook up" about 14,000 hundredweights per day, he said.

After listening to Jones toss out all those big figures, which are for just one of seven Holly Sugar factories, one may be surprised to learn the United States still imports a lot of

"We only produce about half of what we consume," Jones pointed out. He said that does not mean the market is all that great for domestic sugar companies, though, because they are forced to compete with "cheap foreign sugar dumped on our Protection for domestic sugar growers was included in the 1981 Farm Bill, Jones said, which has been a big help.

"Without it, American consumers would be constantly tossed from one end to the other on sugar prices," according to the agricultural manager. "Basically, that program costs the taxpayers nothing.'

The United States imposes import duties, tariffs and quotas on foreign sugar, which keep imported sugar prices comparable to U.S. prices. Duties collected on the imports provide more than $100 million to the

'Sugar is the most politicized commodity on the globe," Jones claimed.

"Most nations protect their sugar producers with support programs. The European Economic Community, which serves France, Germany and Italy, guarantees sugar producers a price which is substantially above their production costs."

Money is not the only thing sugarproducing countries get for their commodities, Jones added. "Cuba ships sugar to the Soviet Union and eastern bloc countries in exchange for fuel, arms and other barter."

Holly Sugar's birth detailed

By KIMBERLY THOGMARTIN

Staff Writer Nobody knows the story of how Holly Sugar came to Hereford better than James Witherspoon.

Aside from Witherspoon, probably nobody can tell the story better than his longtime law partner, Earnest

Langley was around back in 1962 when Witherspoon began what turned into a two-year campaign to change the National Sugar Act. Witherspoon enlisted the moral and financial support of virtually the entire community, including committee members Henry Sears, Lee Benefield and Bob McClean, a Dimmitt banker.

When Castro came in to power in 1959," Langley remembered, "it became evident that trading with Cuba was to become a thing of the past. So, we the United States began looking around for another source."

The domestic sugar beet industry saw its chance, Langley explained. Until then, Americans were eating mostly cane sugar produced in the Carribbean. The domestic beet sugar industry, what there was of it, was confined mostly to the western

But even with the situation in Cuba, domestic policy stood in the way of beet sugar expansion. The National Sugar Act set domestic acreage allotments for sugar production, and Hereford had little if any support from the act.

"To get that opportunity, the industry had to get a proportionate share of the quota for domestic sugar," Langley explained. "And there had to be a market before local farmers could be convinced to grow sugar beets."

At that point, Langley did not hesitate to throw in a plug for his business associate. "The person in the whole United States who recognized that first and most importantly was Jim Witherspoon."

There were sugar beets being grown in Hereford in 1962; in fact, a few acres were planted here as early as 1911. The 2,000 or so acres harvested each year were shipped by rail to the American Crystal Sugar Company in Colorado. It was really just an experiment, Langley noted, subsidized by American Crystal, to prove that the beets would grow in Deaf Smith County.

"I remember one field growing where Big Daddy's is now. People used to drive out and look at it a lot." Tough as it was, the fight to get the Sugar Act amended was just half the

"It would not help us directly to get the law passed unless we could get a refinery," Langley pointed out. "So we were working on both things at the same time."

So, in between trips to Washington to bug whatever member of Congress would stand still long enough to listen, Witherspoon and his committee negotiated with such sugar refineries as Great Western, American Crystal, Spreckles and Holly.

"Jim spent a lot of his time in Washington during that two-year period," Langley said. "He didn't quit working until the last Congressman went home. He's a bundle of energy. By the end of the two years, he knew the majority of them on a personal basis. Senators and representatives both.'

According to an account of Witherspoon's campaign in the March 24, 1967 issue of the Wall Street Journal, the committee used some tactics "that would make a professional consultant shudder."

Witherspoon organized 70 growers' associations in 10 states, asking each member to write to his congressman.

"Spurred on by their teachers," the Journal story read, "the 650 students of Hereford High School showered Congressmen and the president with 3,000 handwritten letters pleading for a change in the law. Mr. Witherspoon added another persuader-50 lb. sacks of Hereford onions shipped to the president and to House committee chairmen."

"When they did pass the act in 1962," Langled said, "it was sort of a reward for the efforts Hereford had made that one of the new sugar refineries built in the United States was designated to be built here."

Once Holly made the decision to build in Hereford, it was left to find farmers who would grow beets for the company. "They had to teach them how," Langley remembered. "The company brought seed and specialized machinery they needed."

As for finding the appropriate site and acquiring the land at a reasonable price-well needless to say Witherspoon did a lot of the legwork in that area as well.

In 1964 the plant was finished and named after Merrill Shoup, the Holly executive who made the deal and died before construction was completed.

Colorful leaf changes come thanks to chemical reactions

revolution that happens each fall. Slowly but surely Mother Nature goes about painting leaves on trees and shrubs to produce a riot of red, purple, orange and yellow for spectacular fall displays.

It's all tied to chemical processes in leaves as the sumemr season gives way to fall and the approaching winter.

"Leaves are actually little factories that manufacture food to support a tree's or other plant's growth," according to Alan D. Dreesen, a forestry specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. "They are busy producing food during spring and summer, but as fall approaches, their work slows down as temperatures and daylight hours change. Chlorophyll-the green pigment in leaves-breaks down and other pigments, mainly yellows and oranges, become visible and gives leaves their fall splendor."

At the same time, other chemical changes are occurring to form additional pigments varying from red to blue, Dreesen said. These give rise to purplish leaves on such trees as dogwoods and sumacs and brilliant orange or fiery red and yellow leaves on sugar maples. Some trees, such as quaking aspen, birch and hickory, boast only yellow colors while many oaks and others display predominant brown or bronze leaves.

"Leaf colors will vary greatly from year to year, depending on weather conditions and the amount of chlorophyll and other pigments in leaves," Dreesen explained. Warm, sunny days in the fall followed by cool nights with temperatures below 45 degrees Fahrenheit are ideal for the formation of brilliant red colors, he pointed out. These conditions enable leaves to produce a lot of sugar during the daytime but slow down the movement of these sugars from leaves at night. Consequently, trapped sugars form the red pigment that is so vivid-maple, flowering dogwood, sweetgum, black tupelo or blackgum and sassafras.

"A lot of warm, cloudy, rainy weather in the fall, on the other hand, will produce leaves with less red coloration because of the reduced sugar production in leaves," Dreesen said.

"Fall leaf color can also vary from tree to tree," he added. "For example, leaves directly exposed to sun may turn red while those on the shady side of the same tree or on other trees in the shade may be yellow. Some leaves simply turn dull brown from death and decay."

Where can one find an abundance of showy fall displays?

The eastern United States and

Some mountainous areas of the western U.S. also offer vistas of fall colors along with eastern Asia and southwestern

While arranging for all the fall leaf colors, Mother Nature is also preparing the twigs that hold leaves to gradually sever themselves from the branches, Dreesen said. When the leaves finally fall, due to their own weight or a sudden burst of wind, they enrich the forest floor, returning part of the nutrients that were used by the tree.

Corn cutbacks unnecessary

Farmers not paid to idle land

Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The government will not pay corn farmers to idle part of their cropland next year, saying inventories of feed grains are low enough to make further production cutback incentives unnecessary.

The decision was announced Wednesday following a review by the Agriculture Department of new supply-and-demand statistics for major commodities.

Deputy Secretary Richard E. Lyng said in a brief statement that "there will be no modifications" in the program announced last month.

"Since feed grains supplies are not expected to reach excessive levels in 1984-85, no further production adjustments will be necessary," Lyng

As announced on Sept. 14, corn farmers who want to share in federal price support benefits next year will have to idle 10 percent of their base acreage, with none of that acreage qualifying for direct cash payments.

The signup period for the feed grains and other 1985 crop programs began at county USDA offices on Oct. 15 and will continue through March 1.

Agriculture Secretary John R. Block was under pressure from some members of Congress and commodi-

The so-called "paid diversion" would have been required if earlier estimates had indicated the corn stockpile would rise to more than 1.1 billion bushels by Sept. 30, 1985, the end of the current corn marketing

But when Block announced the program on Sept. 14, the corn carryover was projected at less than 1.02 billion bushels, thus no paid diversion. The projection changed to slightly more than 1.11 billion bushels on Oct. 12, but a final decision was deferred un-year this Oct. 1. Proponents of the paid diversion option wanted it to help trim corn production further next year, thereby helping to bolster market prices in the 1985-86 season. Also, the feature would have been popular in financially hard-hit areas of the Midwest.

The report projected corn prices at the farm in 1984-85 at $2.65 to $2.95 per bushel, unchanged from the Oct. 12 projection. Last season, when the 1983 corn crop was reduced sharply by drought and government acreage curbs, corn prices averaged $3.20 per bushel.

The corn stockpile rose to a record of 3.12 billion bushels a year ago, reflecting record harvests in 1982 and 1981. Those led the administration to a massive land-idling program in 1983 to help reduce the surplus.

Coupled with drought, the program reduced last fall's harvest to 4.17 billion bushels from 8.24 billion the previous year. This year's corn crop is estimated at 7.5 billion bushels

Rains offer welcome relief last week

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) - Rain - good, soaking rain - fell over much of Texas the past week, bringing some relief from the dry weather that has plagued the state for more than a year.

The rains, ranging from 1 to 2 inches in western areas to as much as 10 to 20 inches in some coastal locations, filled many stock tanks and gave a boost to small grain crops (wheat and oats) planted for fall and winter grazing.

While the rains were too late for this year's crops, they should bring improved fall and winter grazing and should replenish some of the soil moisture lost to the extensive dry weather, said Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

The moisture will allow for an additional hay cutting in eastern and coastal areas if warm, open weather prevails for a while, noted Carpenter. That would be a big help since hay supplies have been cut short by this year's drought.

The rains also have caused a slowdown in livestock marketings and have given a lift to market prices. Feeder cattle prices are up some due to improved prospects for small grain grazing, Carpenter said. Although the rains were beneficial in some areas, they did put a damper on harvest operations. Some soybeans, peanuts, grain sorghum and sweet potatos remain to be harvested in central areas. Most of the cotton crop is still to be harvested in the plains and western sections of the

Also, corn, grain sorghum and sugar beets remain to be harvested in the Panhandle and South Plains. Soybeans are ready to harvest along the Upper Coast and are suffering some wet weather damage.

Pecan harvesting is under way in southern, central and eastern sections, with yields and quality generally below normal due to the dry growing season, Carpenter said.

Reports from district Extension directors showed these conditions.

PANHANDLE: Cool, damp weather is delaying cotton maturity and slowing harvest operations. Most of the corn crop is in, with good yields. Sugar beets are about 35 percent harvested. Most grain sorghum will not be harvested until after a hard freeze. Carrots and cabbage are still being harvested in Deaf Smith County. Young wheat is making good growth.

SOUTH PLAINS: Drizzling rain over the region has slowed harvest final stages while most grain sorghum and sugar beets remain to be harvested. Some cotton has been desiccated and is being harvested as weather conditions permit. Cool, wet conditions are hurting cotton quality. Wheat is making good growth.

ROLLING PLAINS: Some cotton harvesting is under way in southern counties; this year's crop will be short due to the drought. Some emerging wheat has been damamged by high winds and blowing dust. Recent rains have improving grazing and stock water conditions and have slowed beef herd liquidations.

NORTH CENTRAL: Heavy rains over much of the area filled stock tanks and provided needed moisture for small grains. Early planted wheat and oats are making good growth. The rains halted peaunut harvesting; some peanuts have been baled for hay due to poor crop prospects. Pecan harvesting has started; crop prospects are poor. Some livestock remain in poor condi-

NORTHEAST: Good rains over the area have filled stock ponds and will winter pastures. However, the rains halted soybean, peanut, grain sorghum and sweet potato harvesting. Another hay cutting will be made if open, warm weather prevails. An average pecan crop is maturing.

FAR WEST: Cotton harvesting is under way although scattered showers have caused some delays. Pastures and ranges are continuing to respond to improved moisture conditions. Pepper harvesting is active and cabbage harvesting is about to WEST CENTRAL: Rains of up to 2 inches have provided moisture for small grains and have enabled ranges to green up. However, little time is left in the season for range grasses to grow. Cotton and peanut harvesting continues as weather conditions permit; the cotton crop is short but peaunut yields are good.

CENTRAL: Good rains over the area helped fill stock ponds and have given a boost to small grain crops. Peaunut harvesting will resume with open weather and a final cutting of hay will be harvested.

moisture conditons for winter pastures and should produce another hay cutting. However, the rains have slowed peanut harvesting, which is about 75 percent complete. Some cows are still being culled due to short hay supplies. Pecan harvesting has started; the crop is light.

UPPER COAST: Soybeans are mature and wet weather is causing some damage to the crop. Winter pastures should improve due to the rains. Pecan harvesting is under way; this year's crop will be short.

SOUTHWEST: Scattered rains continued to boost moisture conditions although rainfall is still considerably below normal. The moisture will help winter vegetables and small grains and will allow some green-up of ranges although the growing season is about over. Cotton harvesting is complete but gins reslowed peanut, cucumber and pecan harvesting.

COASTAL BEND: Rains of 10 to 20 inches fell in some locations, filling stock ponds and giving a boost to small grains and pastures. The rains should allow an additional cutting of hay, which is in short supply. Cattle marketings have slowed and market prices have improved some due to the rains. Pecan harvesting has started; the crop will be short.

SOUTH: Peas are setting a good crop and peppers are making good progress. Cucumber harvesting continues, and some hay making has resumed following recent rains. Hay supplies remain short. Most livestock have good grazing although dry conditions are still limiting forage growth in some locations. Insects and birds are damaging some

WASHINGTON (AP) - U.S. meat production this year may total about 55.4 billion pounds, a 1 percent increase from both the 1983 output and what had been forecast earlier this month, says a new Agriculture Department analysis.

Also, the report said Wednesday, meat production in 1985 may be around 55.2 billion pounds. That would be down slightly from this year but up a little from the previous forecast on Oct. 12.

"The major changes in meat output are in the beef sector," the report said. "Placements of cattle on feed this summer were larger than expected while marketings were lower. is likely next year," the report said. e number of cattle on feed at the Turkey production may be down beginning of October was up 6 percent from a year ago."

Money sought from bankrupt dealers ding to company officials.

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) - Farmers, truckers, elevators and grain trading companies in six states are trying to collect about $7 million owed them by three Kansas grain dealers forced into bankruptcy court during the past two months.

More than 400 creditors from Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, Colorado, New Mexico and Texas are pursuing claims against Fleming Grain Co. Inc. of Wichita, The Sandburg Co. Inc. of Overland Park and Midway Grain Brokerage Inc. of Salina. Court records show the claims involve both small and large operations ranging from independent truck drivers to fleet trucking companies and small country elevators to large nationwide grain giants such as Cargill and Pillsbury.

Many of the creditors are owed money by more than one of the now defunct grain dealers. Goodland Coop Equity Exchange in Goodland, Kan., is somewhat typical with a potential loss of about $285,000 because of money owed it by Fleming and Sandburg.

'Hopefully, we can show a profit to offset that," said Alan Stewart, the co-op's manager. "It's a terrible

The genisis of the crashes that led the the filing of the three involuntary bankruptcy cases was in late July when Fleming's bank, Kansas State Bank and Trust Co. of Wichita, froze its accounts. Fleming has reported a debt of about $4.7 million. It admits owing $4.1 million to 85 elevators, farmers and grain merchants and more than $600,000 for trucking, trading fees, supplies and services.

John Fleming, president of the 5-year-old company, said its financial problems "are quite a complicated deal.'

He said the company sustained major losses while hedging grain on the commodity futures market.

It is common for elevators and other grain merchants to "hedge" by selling grain they have purchased on the commodity futures market in an attempt to make a profit. In a hedge, the merchant has to pay his broker a percentage of the contract's worth, called a margin. If the contract's worth increases, then the broker issues a margin call requiring the hedger to pay more margin to keep the contract alive. Fleming was unable to pay its margin calls, accor-

'The market went against us and the bank's bailing out was the big problem," Fleming said.

Court records show KSB&T froze Fleming accounts totalling $1.25 million on July 26. The company was $1.5 million in debt at the time, according to court records.

Word of Fleming's predicament spread quickly through the grain trade during August. The common practice of allowing a grain merchant 30 days or more to pay was abandoned.

"It created a shock wave out here in the country," Goodland Co-op's Stewart said. "Everybody got on the phone to companies that owed them money and said 'Pay us!'"

"It was like a run on the bank," said Richard M. Blackwell, the Salina lawyer who reptesents Midway. "All through August it kept happening. People kept coming in and asking for their money."

Sandburg foundered first. Its response to the involuntary bankruptcy case filed against it listed 172 creditors with claims totalling about $2 million. Some of the larger claims include First National Bank of Olathe, $546,884; the Goodland co-op, $155,276; grain merchants and elevator operators J. Lynch and Co. of Salina, $233,806; and Wright-Lorenz Grain Co. of Salina, $190,182.

Midway wrote its creditors a letter and asked them to hold off for 60 days. But 11 elevators filed state district court suits seeking about $265,000. Eventually, creditors also filed an involuntary bankruptcy case against Midway.

Blackwell said the company won't fight the case. He said Midway owes about 50 creditors around $500,000.

The people owed by the grain companies may eventually get part of their money, depending on the assets that can be liquidated in each case, lawyers for both sides said.

But the potential losses come at a time when there is fierce competition in the grain trade with each company's profit margins already being cut to the bone. In some instances, the creditors readily admit they were attracted to doing business with the three companies, none of which was more than 5 years old.

Frenchman studies Panhandle farms

Staff Writer

With his father managing three ranches of 16,000 cattle in the once French territory of Cameroon, Africa, Olivier Poitevin is extremely familiar with the business.

Why, then, did he come to Hereford for five months to study cattle ranching? As Poitevin says, since he has been here he has been able to see new ways of operating and has found different aspects he would like to experiment with at home.

Poitevin, a French international exchange student, has been living since May with John and Susan Perrin. The couple applied for an exchange student through the International Student Exchange of Iowa.

"I wanted to work where there were lots of cattle," Poitevin said. "Since I've been here, I've just worked where I've been asked to. I've plowed, planted and harvested wheat, and worked with the cattle.

"There are so many things that I have learned that I will be able to take back with me," he continued. "It's been good experience to see the big equipment. We really need that kind of equipment.

"I'd also like to experiment with farming and growth implants for cattle. Maybe the disposable needles,

Other than needed improvements in Africa, just how different is the cattle business from that in Texas?

To begin, an individual person may not own land in Africa. All of the land is government controlled, and if an individual can prove that he was on the land first, the land is his.

"As a result of that rule," Poitevin explained, "it is extremely hard for a white man to get any land."

The land that Poitevin's father manages is owned by Compagnie Pastorale-a company that was once under French control, now owned by the Cameroonian government.

"The company owns all of the cattle and the slaughter plant, too,' Poitevin said.

"It is hard to work there (in Africa). We use very little machinery and have shepherds to work the cattle."

Machinery is limited because the parts are hard to come by if anything breaks down, according to Poitevin. Equipment shops are non-existent in Cameroon, and most repair-work must be sent to France.

Cameroon farmers do, however, burned, but it is often inevitable. No have a few tractors, a hay mower and a small tractor to rake the hay.

The shepherds actually live with the cattle and have grass huts in which to reside. One shepherd is assigned to one herd which may have anywhere from 40 to 80 head. The shepherds move the cattle each day, but stay within a two-mile radius.

"You can really tell a good shepherd," Poitevin said. "His cattle will be quiet when he counts them, he has no trouble with the animals, and a really good shepherd can pick his cattle out of two herds that have mixed together."

The only cattle in Cameroon are Zebu--a breed resembling the

Another factor which distinguishes the cattle business in Africa is the two-season climate: wet and dry.

The wet season lasts for seven months, from March or April to November. It rains every day, and the native grass grows five-feet tall.

"The work is easy in the wet season," Poitevin explained. "You don't have to worry much about the cows because the grass grows and feeds them.

When it begins to dry, the grass is cut. The Poitevins take out 1,440 acres and make shocks. With approximately 1,000 extra people brought in to help, it still takes about two months to complete the process. The hay stacks are made by hand and remain in the field. When the stacks are complete, the cattle are put on the land to feed.

During the five months of the year which constitute the dry season, the tradition is to burn all of the bush (the country). The Poitevins, however, try to not let their land be "The biggest problem we have is the tse-tse fly," Poitevin said. "We would lose all of our cattle if we did not vaccinate them against it."

The tse-tse fly is worse in the wet season and where the trees grow. Consequently, the ranchers are trying to clear the pastures.

A disease prevalent in the dry season is teltou.

"You can have a big steer, in good shape, and he will just fall down and die all of a sudden," he said in explaining the seriousness of the disease. "Of all the cows that die, 45 percent is a result of teltou."

Currently, no vaccine or cure exists for teltou. If a place has more octle are moved and given salt.

"The salt seems to help some," Poitevin said. "But we don't know why."

Every afternoon and morning in both seasons, the animals are given a protein supplement--cottonseed meal. Water is not a problem for the ranches because of the many small flowing rivers. Some water troughs are used, however, and these are made from tree trunks.

Poitevin said that he has been too busy to have missed much from Cameroon. The country consists of 52 tribes and is a bi-lingual country with two primary languages, French and

"Cameroon and South Africa are the only two countries that have good agriculture," Poitevin said. "They want agriculture before they have oil. Those two counties are also always able to pay back money to other countries. They are always solvent and can always feed their peo-

Although Poitevin and his family live in Cameroon, they keep their home in Normandy, France, and return there for holidays. # Wheat acreage increases under skyscrapers

DALLAS (AP) — As construction crews plant tract homes and office buildings in the pastures surrounding Dallas, agriculture experts say many farmers once dependent on cotton or sorghum are planting wheat.

Wheat producers are finding that East Texas, including the Dallas area, is a dependable area to grow the world's largest food product.

"We're seeing a lot of emphasis on wheat farming," said Jim Blalock, Texas A&M Extension agronomist in the Dallas suburb of Plano. "In 1980 wheat production really took off in the Dallas area. It boomed for a while and now it has leveled off."

The increase stems from several factors, including weather.

"Wheat production has expanded where there has been a failure of another crop," said Frank Petr, agronomist at Texas A&M Agriculture Extension Service in Amarillo.

"Wheat is stable in the rolling plains and high plains, and is expanding in South Texas and in the area from Dallas south to Waco," he said.

It's there that heat and drought have destroyed thousands of acres of sorghum and cotton in recent years.

"Two years ago, 75 to 85 percent of Texas wheat was produced in West Texas," according to U.U. Alexander, agronomist at A&M's extension service in Vernon. "Now, only about 40 percent is grown there. The big increase in wheat acreage is in East Texas around Dallas and farther east."

Until 1979, Texas had a farm economy dependent primarily on cotton and grain sorghum. Since then, cotton acreage decreased 59 percent, grain sorghum fell 34 percent and corn dropped 71 percent, Blalock said. In 1984, cotton was only other warm-weather crops. one-third its normal average yield in Texas because of the drought.

At the same time, wheat production flourished as farmers increased production to help balance out their

Texas farmers produced 144 million bushels in 1982, 161 million bushels in 1983 and 150 million this year, said Doug Spillmann, an agriculture statistician with the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service in Austin.

Texas' $500 million wheat industry is now the nation's fourth largest behind Kansas, North Dakota and Washington.

With cotton, one year out of five will fail, said Alexander, who directs a 21-county district in the heart of Texas wheat country. Growers say wheat is a good substitute crop because it is less subject to fluctuating weather condition, especially drought.

farmer don'thave Most underground water supplies for irrigation and are at the mercy of Mother Nature, said Alexander. Less than five percent of cotton in the Vernon district is irrigated, he said.

Because it is planted in the fall, grows in the winter and is harveted in spring, wheat's prime growing time coincides with Texas' rainy season. On the other hand, summer rainfall often is inadequate to mature cotton and sorghum during their crucial growing months.

Farmers also are using more wheat as a rotation crop to control insects, and diseases, and to spread the financial risk, Petr said.

Since disease and insects don't thrive in cool wet weather, wheat farmers are spared the problems and expense that plague cotton and

"In the blacklands of East Texas, farmers had problems with cotton root rot so wheat has come in and substituted in a lot of those acreages," Alexander said. "Some farmers are rotating, but some are just plain converting.

Alfred Croix, A&M extension agent in Denton just north of Dallas, has discovered a different problem for farmers, even wheat farmers - urbanization.

year to concrete and houses," said

ample, were forced out of business recently in favor of a man-made recreational lake, he said.

Despite urban sprawl, wheat production in and around Denton is expanding. Farmers are planting more wheat than ever before, Croix said. Wheat income was the largest single crop income in Denton in 1983 and is expected to bring in top receipts again in 1984.

Blalock believes financing also is a 'We're losing 10,000 acreas per major factor in the growth of wheat production in the Dallas area. In ear-

Croix. Several area farmers, for ex- ly 1980, with interest rates high and many farmers losing money, bankers weren't willing to loan as much, Blalock said.

"Farmers were looking for ways to cut production costs and planting wheat was one way they could do it,' he said. "That's because it doesn't cost as much to grow as other crops and the yield is better."

Yet despite the advantages, experts aren't predicting a statewide conversion to wheat production because wheat in Texas is not considered a "profit crop."

up, Petr noted, wheat prices are lagging behind.

Government price control programs have given farmers little incentive to hold production down. Alexander said there is little participation in next year's pay diversion program because the government is offering only $2.70 a bushel and farmers can get $3.40 on the open

"Wheat is one of the state's major crops. It always has been and will continue to be," Spillmann said.

Sally Field tries contentment

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) - The bulletin board of Sally Field's office at the Burbank Studios features a quote from the late mystery writer Agatha Christie: "The happy people are failures because they are on such good terms with themselves that they don't give a damn." The maxim seems to apply to Miss Field, not that she has any reason to be unhappy. She has been drawing raves for her latest film, "Places in the Heart," and she is in love - with Alan Greisman, producer of the film,

"Windy City." But she is so serious that during a recent interview her face betrayed a smile only a few times. And she does care about a number of things, such as preserving her own privacy and making good films.

By her own calculation, she has appeared in a movie only once every year and a half since she won the best actress Academy Award for "Norma Rae" in 1979. "Absence of Malice" proved a hit, but "Back Roads" and "Kiss Me Goodbye" fail-

Of the latter film, a supernatural comedy with James Caan and Jeff Bridges, she said she liked it and still does. "I thought it was funny and sweet, no matter what some of the critics said," she remarked.

To assure more control over her career, Miss Field has formed Fogwood Films, which is developing projects with the backing of Columbia Pictures. Fogwood is no vanity operation to placate a superstar. The company's first production, "Murphy's Romance," is scheduled to begin in January. The director is Martin Ritt and the writers are Harriet Frank Jr., and Irving Ravetch, the crew that created "Norma Rae."

"Places in the Heart" returned the actress to the rural South, this time as a Depression-era widow who struggles to save her family from breaking up and her farm from being foreclosed. Director-writer Robert Benton made the film entirely in Waxahachie, Texas, where he restaged many of his boyhood memories.

THANK YOU

As we celebrate 20 years in Hereford, Holly Sugar wishes to express their appreciation to the community, the beet growers of our area, and to the employees who have made this and all the previous campaigns a success.

We're proud to have been a significant part of Hereford's agriculture economy in the past 20 years and as we look forward to the next 20 years, we hope to play an even greater role in this progressive community's future.

- •311 growers in a nine-county area will sell their sugar beets to Holly Sugar this year.
- •Holly Sugar will pay $21,900,000 for those beets.
