Lawsuit against city settled without trial

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

A lawsuit that could have cost the City of Hereford and several law enforcement officers millions of dollars has been settled for a total of $12,500.

Judge Mary Lou Robinson, judge of the federal Northern District of Texas in Amarillo, signed an order Tuesday to end the suit which asked damages for a police department mistake in a drug raid on Jan. 17, 1992.

Plaintiffs in the lawsuit asked for damages of $16 million although the figure could have escalated to $190 million if full damages were awarded.

The suit was filed by Rudy Villarreal, Rosemary Villarreal, Joe Villarreal, and Rudy and Rosemary Villarreal as next friends and parents of Mallory, Rudy Jr., and Anita Villarreal.

The settlement announced last week is for $12,500 to be divided among the plaintiffs and their attorneys.

Rudy Villarreal receives $1,050; Rosemary Villarreal, $2,197.03; Joe Villarreal, $600; Mallory Villarreal, $500; Rudy Villarreal Jr., $500; Anita Villarreal, $500; the law firm of Rex C. Easterwood, P.C., $6,957.97, and $1,050, to the attorney appointed to represent the interests of the three minor children.

The Villarreals claimed that members of the Hereford Police Department Special Reaction Team barged into Apartment 12 at 112 Avenue H without a valid search warrant.

The search warrant issued by Municipal Judge Tawanna Hollowell listed another apartment, the suit claimed. The suit alleged that officers forced adults in the living room to lie down on the floor or a sofa.

Rosemary Villarreal, at the time seven months pregnant, picked up her daughter Anita, who had started crying, and was shoved to the sofa by officers, the lawsuit alleged.

The 10 p.m. raid was over in about 10 minutes, the suit claimed, when officers determined that they had gone to the wrong apartment.

City Manager Chester Nolen, who announced the settlement Friday, reported that several factors were revealed in depositions taken for use if the case went to court, negating many of the suit's claims.

"We had a video tape that started when the officers went in. It showed two minutes went by from the time the officers went in until one came out and said it was the wrong apartment," he said.

Defendants in the suit were the city; the police chief at the time, Caydon Brush; Mike Ahrens, a detective lieutenant; Brent Harrison and Esreal Silva, detectives, and two officers, Tim Travis and Michael Benson.

Brush resigned from his position several months after the incident and now is employed in prison security. Ahrens left the HPD to become chief of security at South Plains College. Travis also left the department in 1992. Harrison, Silva and Benson still are employed in the police department.

Defending the city and officers in the lawsuit were attorneys retained by the Texas Municipal League, liability insurance carrier for the city. Cost to city for the suit was $5,000, Nolen said.

Champion horse

Ron Crist of Hereford and his wife, Mary, are the proud owners of Commandicate, a cutting horse that has charged to the top of his class and is running hard for the world championships. Crist is showing a trophy he won riding Commandicate at the Fort Worth Classic in 1991, a cutting horse competition for 5-year-old horses. The picture above the mantle is Crist riding Commandicate in that meet. Below, Crist rides Commandicate in a cutting competition in Augusta, Ga., in 1991.

Crist's proud owners of champion cutting horse

Lubbock has the TTU Lady Raiders, Dallas has the Cowboys and Chicago has the Bulls.

But Hereford has its own champion, too -- cutting horse Commandicate.

Commandicate, a 7-year-old gelding owned by Ron and Mary Crist of Hereford, is the top-ranked cutting horse in the world right now and is on his way to capturing the sport's world championship.

It is a long way from when the Crists nearly missed a chance to buy him at an auction in Roswell, N.M.

For the Crists, owning, training and showing cutting horses had been a hobby since 1980.

"I have been a cowboy and rode good horses all my life," said Ron Crist, "so I had a natural love for good horses."

After seeing a cutting horse competition, the couple decided to try buying horses themselves.

"We had piddled around with these common quarter horses and the horse breeds that were not quite so popular for two or three years," he said. Finally, "We knew we better have better horses" in order to seriously compete for cutting horse honors.

One of the best breeds around is the Smart Little Lena strain, which features a long tail and is particularly suited to the rigors of cutting cattle from a herd and holding them.

The Crists, Ron said, heard about a sale in Roswell that happened to have a Smart Little Lena horse on the blocks -- which was unusual, because the sale usually only sells stock for ranches or feedlots.

Still, the couple decided to pursue it and headed for Roswell.

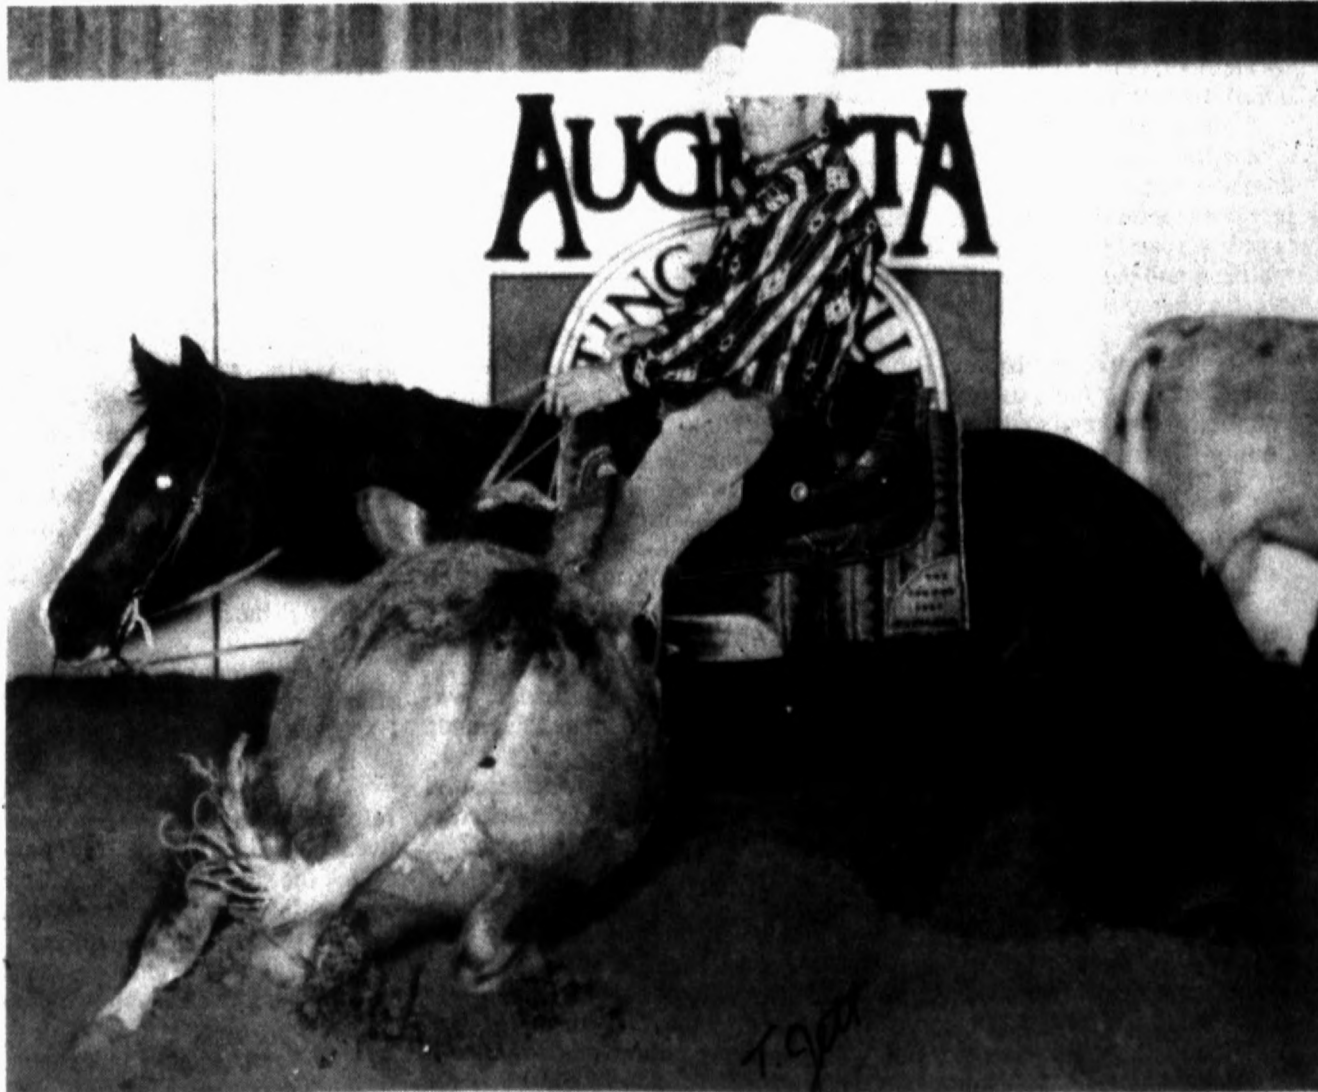

Due to unexpected delays, they arrived at the sale arena just as the horse preceding Commandicate was led out and he was presented for sale.

Despite having never looked at the horse before, the Crists bought him for $10,000.

"We came that close to missing the horse," he said.

After arriving back home, Ron Crist saddled up and rode him across

Special board meeting Tuesday

HISD tax rate hike needed to bring now-defunct CED taxes back to local district

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

The Hereford Independent School District board of trustees is poised to raise its tax rate 305 percent, but the dramatic increase will not result in massive increases in taxes for district residents.

The need for the stated increase was precipitated by the state legislature's abolishment of the County Education Districts during its session earlier this year.

The district's trustees will meet in special session at noon Tuesday to discuss the tax rate.

At that time, they will accept a proposal to set the tax rate at $1.239 per $100 valuation.

Then, at 4 p.m. Sept. 15, the district will hold a public hearing on the tax rate, to receive public comment on the rate proposal.

Trustees will then be asked to vote on the tax rate at another special meeting at noon on Sept. 20.

Overall, the supposed tax "increase" will not be an increase at all, said HISD superintendent Charles W. Greenawalt.

In Deaf Smith County during fiscal year 1992, HISD residents paid 93.9 cents per $100 valuation to the CED and 30 cents per $100 valuation to the district.

However, because the CEDs were abolished in the new education funding law, those funds need to be replaced into the local district.

"Our legislators made no provisions for the conversion of the CED tax rate into the district," said Greenawalt.

As a result, every school district in Texas is having to reclaim that money by raising the district tax rate.

Then, because those increases are greater than 3 percent, state law requires a public hearing be held.

However, Greenawalt stressed, "There will be no increase in the tax rate" here -- only in the way it is disbursed.

However, he said, some county residents will find their property taxes going up a little, because the CED

Homestead Exemption that had been present last year was eliminated along with the CEDs.

Last year, Greenawalt said, homeowners could claim a $5,000 HISD homestead exemption and a $5,000 CED homestead exemption.

This year, only the HISD exemption will remain.

The loss of the extra exemption will mean a $50,000 house will have an extra $94 a year taken out in school district property taxes.

Still, Greenawalt continued, the school district likely will collect a little less money than last year.

Last year, the $26 million in property of the Walcott Independent School District was added to the $439 million in the HISD to form the collect pool for CED taxes.

Then, HISD received 97 percent of the CED taxes collected and Walcott got the remaining money.

This year, the Walcott property wealth has been removed with the demise of the CED.

County to begin collecting fees imposed by legislature

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

When the Texas Legislative finished its business a few months ago, some quiet boasting came out of the capitol to the effect that there was no tax increase for citizens of the state.

NOT! say some county officials who contend that what the legislators did is the same as a tax raise, but they called it by another name -- new, or increased, fees.

At least one Deaf Smith County official, Justice of the Peace Johnnie Turrentine, has voiced some displeasure at the Legislature's shenanigans.

"They're not out here with their friends and neighbors," she declared.

"We're paying taxes for them."

Judge Turrentine's office is one of three in the county courthouse that are required to collect additional fees for certain services.

The offices of County Clerk David Ruland and District Clerk Lola Faye Veazey have new fee schedules for filing documents and costs charged in court cases.

Court costs in each of the three jurisdictions now reflect an effort of the state to provide a larger fund for victims of crimes.

In the justice court, Judge Turrentine must add to court costs for crime victims. The amount for that purpose previously was $5 and now is $15.

In criminal cases in county court, the crime victim's fund fee has been raised from $15 to $35 and is included in court costs levied on defendants in misdemeanor cases.

Felony defendants will pay a $45 fee to the crime victims fund when convicted in the district court, an increase from $20 previously charged. A misdemeanor defendant in district court also is assessed a $35 fee for the fund.

Counties will benefit from a new fee set by the Legislature to assist in preserving and keeping records. County Clerk Ruland estimates that Deaf Smith may receive more than $7,000 a year from an assessment of $5 on each civil, probate and criminal case filed.

The clerk's office will receive a fee of $5 each on official public records, marriage licenses and Uniform Commercial Code filings, a total amount that may reach as high as $20,000.

Ron Crist trained Commandicate himself for 15 months, until the horse turned 3 years old.

"I knew that he was such an exceptional horse, I knew I had to get him to a professional trainer to put the finish on him."

After six months of professional work with "the very, very best top trainer in the world," Crist said, Commandicate was ready for his first show.

In cutting horse competition, the rider may hold the reins to guide the horse in cutting a cow out of a herd in the arena.

After that, however, it's hands-off. The rider must hold the saddle horn and let the horse do all the work of keeping the cow away from the rest of the herd.

Hutchison will go before grand jury

By KAREN THOMPSON
Associated Press Writer
DALLAS (AP) - U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison says she intends to be in Austin next week to answer a subpoena issued to her by a Travis County grand jury.

The district attorney's office said the Republican senator was subpoenaed after the senator refused the grand jury's request for her to appear on Sept. 9 or Sept. 10 to testify in an investigation of her tenure as a state treasurer.

Mrs. Hutchison had been given a 3 p.m. Friday deadline to respond, Assistant District Attorney Claire Dawson-Brown said. Ms. Dawson-Brown said the senator's response "was not in accordance with the grand jury's request."

"When the grand jury asked me to appear, I wrote them a letter which was delivered to their homes. I delivered a copy to the district attorney's office as is proper," Mrs. Hutchison said Friday evening after arriving at the Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport on a flight from Houston.

"I said that because the Senate is voting on the dates that they asked me to appear, then I would like to appear on that Monday (Sept. 13) instead so that I could do what I was elected to do and that is cast a vote for the people of Texas," she said.

Mrs. Hutchison said the district attorney's office hadn't responded to her request to delay her appearance before the grand jury and that she plans to be in Austin on Thursday.

Mrs. Hutchison called the subpoena a political act orchestrated by Democrats to embarrass her and derail her re-election campaign.

"I think Texas politics has reached a new low today. I have tried very hard to keep the integrity of the grand jury process intact," she said. "This is political and the people of Texas realize it and the Democrats have to stop the character assassination. This is dangerous."

Mrs. Hutchison's attorney, John Dowd, called the subpoena a "publicity stunt" and said that Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle "is intent on pursuing a political agenda."

Earle has denied the inquiry is political. The grand jury is looking into allegations that state workers and equipment were used for personal and political purposes during Mrs. Hutchison's 2 1/2-year tenure at the Treasury and is trying to determine whether records were destroyed in a coverup.

Mrs. Hutchison has steadfastly denied any wrongdoing. She said the 11-week-old investigation, which began June 10 with a raid of the Treasury by Earle's office, is an attempt to derail her re-election efforts next year. Earle is a Democrat.

"Ronnie Earle is obviously trying to embarrass me," Mrs. Hutchison said.

place. Later, a judge changed his score by one-half point, giving the championship to the other horse.

Still, it was a good start and a portent of things to come.

In 1990, his first year of competition at the 3-year-old level, Commandicate won several major events, ending the season having earned close to $200,000 for the Crists.

"He got off to a very good start," Crist said.

The next two years, the now-62-year-old Crist took Commandicate on the road himself, riding the horse in cutting competitions all over the United States.

Although purses were much smaller, the horse won another $30,000 those two years.

Finally, as a 7-year-old this year, Commandicate moved on to the World Class of cutting and Crist decided it was time to sell him.

Kenny Patterson of Houston was enlisted to take Commandicate to a few meets and try to get a buyer for him.

Patterson asked once if he could instead take Commandicate on the run for the world title, but Crist said he was not interested.

Patterson persisted and Crist finally gave in.

"At that point, we were at least six weeks behind all the rest of the horses that were hauling for the world," Crist said. "They all had a pretty good head start on him."

But Commandicate would not be daunted by the task ahead.

In April 1993, Commandicate was listed at No. 38 among the top 50 cutting horses, according to the National Cutting Horse Association.

Rankings are determined by the amount of money won at cutting competitions.

By May, he was No. 26, then rose to No. 14 in June and No. 8 in July. When the August list was released, Commandicate was No. 2 in the world.

"As of today he is setting in the No. 1 position in the world," Crist said.

Cutting competitions will continue through December, with the world champion to be named after that.

"With his momentum ... he shouldn't have any problem winning the world," Crist said.

"If he hadn't been a world-class horse he wouldn't have had a ghost of a chance."

Life on the road to a world title is very tough, Crist said.

The horses compete in cuttings twice a week, traveling around the country in between.

Patterson is the full-time rider and showman for Commandicate.

Crist said the horses are bred for hard work, are fed well and receive vitamin supplements.

Still, it usually takes a horse several years to get to world champion status.

"If he wins this, he will probably be the youngest horse in history to win the world. Generally a horse has to be seasoned -- 9 or 10 years old -- to start out on this," Crist said.

Of course, if Commandicate wins, it will likely be the end of the line for him -- at least with the Crists.

Crist said he has not decided what he will do, but "more than likely" he will not try for a second title.

He might sell Commandicate, allowing another owner to try for a title run, or he might keep the horse in Hereford and join the Weekend Class, where horses compete with a club, for points there.

"More than likely if I keep him, I'll bring him home and show him myself. He'll be a super horse to play with," Crist said.

Since he purchased Commandicate, Crist has bought other cutting horses and shows them as well.

They are all of the Smart Little Lena strain, but none of them is nearly as good as Commandicate.

"I've got a little 4-year-old mare right now that's the next thing to him. She's doing really well," he said.

So, whatever happens this year with Commandicate, keep an eye out on Go Little Lena -- she just might appear one day as another Crist champion.

FEES

First time will charge a records preservation fee of $10, approved last spring by the Texas Legislature.

And, both county and district clerks will add a security fee to costs of court. The district clerk will place a $5 security fee on felony cases and $3 on misdemeanors.

Services of the county clerk's office also will require a security fee, ranging from $1 to $5, depending on the transaction. For public records, marriage licenses and UCC filings, the total is expected to be more than $4,000, based on experience.

Security fees will be placed in a county fund and may be used in whatever way feasible to improve security of the courthouse.

Judge Turrentine also has a new offense, "attempting to purchase alcohol by a minor," that carries a fine and court costs. A first-time offender may be fined $25, or up to $200, plus court costs.

With the addition of the crime victim's fund fee, court costs in the justice court now are $38, but only $3 stays in Deaf Smith County.

A seat belt violation will cost a driver $60, a $10 increase, and only $2.50 will stay in the county.

Fines exacted on justice court offenders are channeled to the county.

Both district and county clerks have posted new fees for the benefit of persons requiring their services.

Because of the high volume of recording instruments in the county clerk's office, the fee schedule is about four pages long.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

My, how time flies! This year's seniors at Hereford High were Hereford Junior High's first seventh graders. It has been interesting to watch this group mature and to hear of their plans for the future.

Picture this! The 1992-1993 Junior Historian officers were pictured on the cover of the September issue of "Texas Historian," the Junior Historian State Magazine. The picture was one that was taken at their installation at the Cowgirl Hall of Fame. This was a nice surprise!

During Advisory Period, a brief time of sharing following the Channel I news broadcast, some activities this week included a get acquainted period and a time of considering the impact that Hurricane Emily has had on students. Students considered having a group of east coast students coming to Hereford to stay until the hurricane damage was cleared. Needless to say, this generated a variety of comments and some good in-depth thoughts by our students. They examined both the pros and cons of such an adventure.

Junior Historians and other interested students have begun History Fair plans. The topic this year is "Geography in History-People, Places, Time". Some chosen topics are "Route 66," Palo Duro Canyon, Santa Fe Railroad and "Dust Bowl." They need access to primary resources-old documents, pictures, interviews, etc. If you can help in this way, do let us know! Also, if you have suggestions for topics, we'd like to hear about that, also.

On arriving at school each morning, students are to enter the building through the south doors between the gyms. This will leave the hallways by the office area free for parents and students needing to visit the office. Buses will be transporting their students to that area.

Geography Bee materials will be arriving soon. We need boys and girls to volunteer for this activity. Jim Moudy represented our school well last year at the state meet in Fort Worth and we want HJH to be represented again.

Progress reports will be sent home with students this week. Parents, do ask your HJH'er if they received a progress report. Many teachers send reports home with students and use this opportunity to express to the parent how each student is progressing in a given subject. These are preliminary to report cards. Teachers welcome a response to these.

Louis L'Amour once said, "It is often said that one has but one life to live, but that is nonsense. For one who reads, there is no limit to the number of lives that may be lived, for fiction, biography and history offer an inexhaustible number of lives in many parts of the world, in all periods of time."

This is a teacher's wish for all students-to enter the world of reading and live as many lives as they possibly can! Parents, be an example for them in this area.

Pope in Lithuania for first visit to ex-USSR

By VICTOR L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer

VILNIUS, Lithuania (AP) - Pope John Paul II arrived today in Lithuania for the first papal visit in history to the former Soviet Union. Thousands of cheering Lithuanians lined his route from the airport to the city's main cathedral.

The pope stepped out of the Alitalia jet from Rome dressed in a white robe, descended the steps and kissed the ground. He was greeted by Lithuania's president, Algirdas Brazauskas, Roman Catholic prelates and a color guard.

The Baltic country of 3.5 million is about 80 percent Catholic. More than 260,000 of its citizens are of Polish origin, like the pope.

The end of the Cold War and breakup of the Soviet Union have allowed John Paul to realize his dream and make the trip to Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia.

Unlike his trips to his native Poland when it was governed by the Communists, the pope is not arriving with ringing calls on the need for freedom.

Instead, he will urge the people of the Baltics to struggle against "indifference and secularism," as he recently told pilgrims, and to overcome differences among the various Christian denominations that have come out into the open in Europe with the fall of communism.

John Paul's visit is expected to be watched closely by the Russian Orthodox Church in Moscow, which has accused the Vatican of overzealous missionary activity now government repression of religion has ended.

The three Baltic republics are home to more than 3.5 million Catholics - 2.7 million of them live in Lithuania. Catholics were persecuted during the rule by Moscow, which annexed the Baltic republics in 1940.

The pope's activities today include a meeting with priests, nuns and seminarians at the Vilnius Cathedral, which had been turned into an art gallery by the Communists.

Q. & A. ABOUT HOME SELLING

Q. What can we do to make our home more attractive?
A. One of the incentives a seller can offer is to accept a contingency agreement. A contingency agreement relieves the buyer of worry over having to pay two mortgages and properties if their home doesn't sell right away. The most obvious thing that makes a home look more attractive is fresh paint, but only in neutral colors. And by fixing loose door knobs, hinges, mowing the lawn, replacing worn carpet and replacing dented garbage cans will also affect the potential buyers. The appearance of your home, and a potential buyers first impression has a great deal to do with the outcome. If a seller takes the time to make their home as attractive as possible chances are it will sell first. If you read our column, we appreciate your comments.

Palestinian leaders falling in behind Arafat on proposed pact with Israel

TUNIS, Tunisia (AP) - Yasser Arafat appeared to be winning approval of key Palestinian leaders for a landmark accord with Israel, despite anger Friday over his secret peacemaking methods.

The second meeting of the Central Committee of Fatah, the PLO's backbone, was turbulent, with two officials of the group's ruling 18-member body storming out after shouting matches with Arafat, PLO officials said.

Most of the criticism focused on accusations that Arafat failed to consult his aides, rather than objections to the substance of the agreement. That indicated he would get the majority he needs to continue the peace process.

Arafat adjourned the meeting until Saturday.

Also Friday, Arafat tried to mollify Jordan's King Hussein, who has halfheartedly welcomed the plan but bitterly criticized the PLO for failing to coordinate with other Arab states who have been meeting with Israel throughout a 22-month-old peace process.

The official Jordanian news agency said Arafat and Hussein conferred by telephone, and the Jordanian monarch renewed his support for the contents of the Palestinian agreement with Israel.

Israeli officials have said the accord, approved by the Israeli Cabinet on Tuesday, could be signed within days. Foreign Minister Shimon Peres said Friday the deal could be a catalyst for other talks with Syria, Jordan and Lebanon.

"We are very near to complete peace," he said after three-hour meeting with French President Francois Mitterrand. "It is the only way out for the Arabs, for us and for the world."

The Israeli-Palestinian agreement also could lead to mutual recognition between Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization, and U.S. recognition of the PLO, long shunned as a terrorist group. In Washington, officials said President Clinton's administration will approach Congress soon on reopening talks with the PLO.

Nabil Shaath, chief political strategist for Arafat, said in Washington "there are assurances" from the Clinton administration of U.S. recognition.

Despite talk of peace, violence was still the rule in some places.

Shiite Muslim guerrillas who oppose the peace process exchanged machine-gun and mortar fire with Israel's surrogate militia in south Lebanon.

No casualties were reported. But the hostilities kept tension alive on the only active Arab-Israeli combat zone despite the optimistic climate.

In Gaza, the radical Muslim group Hamas - the Palestine Liberation Organization's main rival in the occupied territories - claimed responsibility for killing an Israeli soldier and wounding another Thursday in the West Bank.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said that such "terrorism" wouldn't affect the agreement with the PLO.

Fundamentalist opponents of Israel-PLO peacemaking also clashed with Israeli troops Friday.

Israeli soldiers moved in after stones were hurled at their vehicles by youths emerging from the al-Qassam Mosque in Gaza. Soldiers fired some shots over the heads of 200 protesters who shouted, "We don't want peace."

The soldiers shouted back: "We don't want peace either."

In Lebanon, about 1,000 Palestinian refugees demonstrated against the accord in the southern refugee camp of Ein el-Hilweh, where about 70,000 people live. They burned portraits of Arafat.

But in Jordan's Baqaa camp, home for 100,000 refugees, a call for a anti-peace demonstrations attracted only 400 protesters.

The shrinking number of protesters suggested that more Palestinians are beginning to accept the limited opportunity offered to them after the initial outrage and astonishment.

Iran, meanwhile, renewed its opposition to the peace talks and blasted Arafat for trying to make peace with the Israelis. Ayatollah Ahmad Jannati, leading Friday prayers at Tehran University, said mutual recognition between the PLO and Israel included in the package amounted to "treachery," Tehran television said.

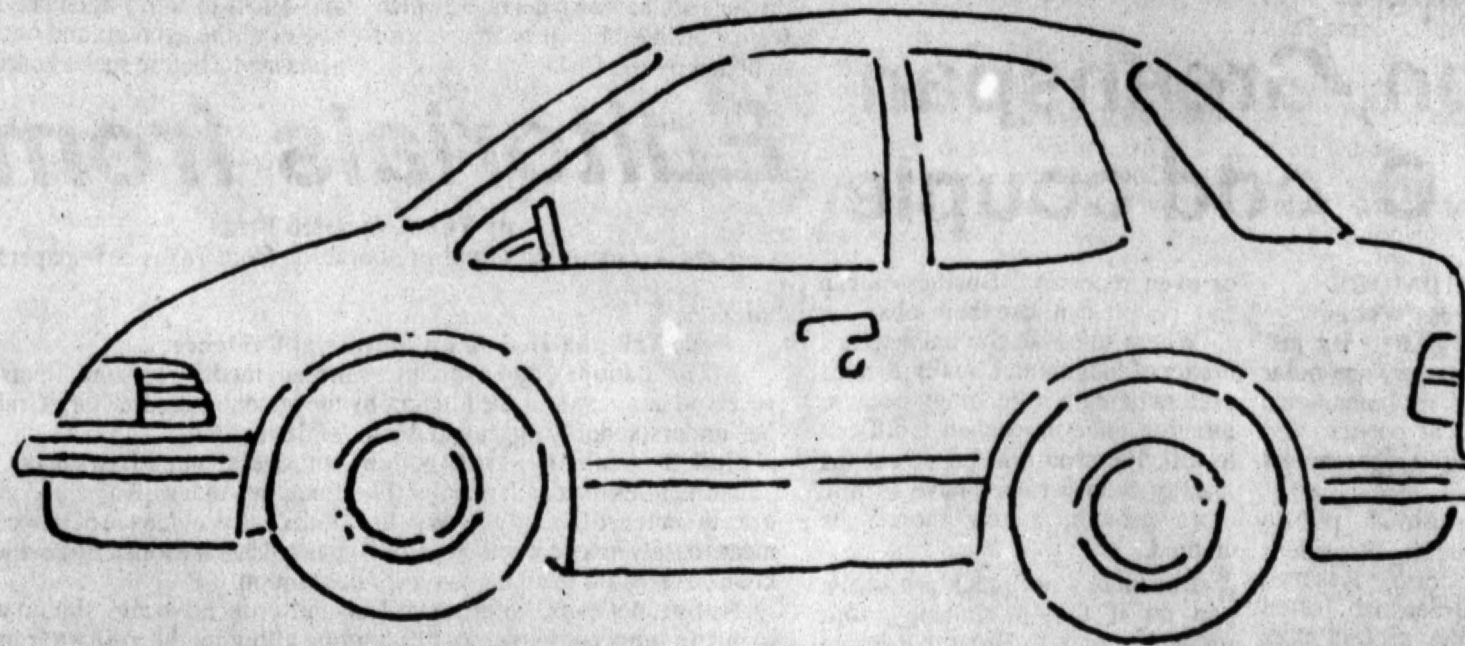

Internal resistance came from three Fatah committee members - Abbas Zaki, Mohammed Jihad and Subhi Abu Kirsh, PLO officials said. The three accused Arafat of going too far by agreeing to a deal on self-rule for only one town in the West Bank, seized by Israel in 1967.

Gratitude is a milder form of revenge.

— YOUR EYES —

GLAUCOMA

Glaucoma is a serious eye condition in which there is an increase of pressure inside the eye. It cannot be cured, but it can be controlled. And if it is caught early enough, damage to the eye -- especially to that part of the eye that gives clear side vision -- can be avoided.

In its early stages, glaucoma may not cause any symptoms at all. However, there is a simple test of inter-ocular pressure which is usually part of a complete eye examination for anyone over 35. That is how most cases of glaucoma are found, in time for successful treatment. Most at risk are people over 65, the severely near-sighted, diabetics or those with a family history of glaucoma. Your Optometrist may recommend more frequent examinations if you are at risk.

If there is a decrease in side vision, blurred images or any other change in the way you see, see your optometrist promptly.

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says never burn your bridges--you may have to cross the same river.

Religion: The Great Untold Story is the title of an article I read in the Reader's Digest some time ago. I clipped the article and saved it, so it may be several years old.

What the article says is that God doesn't get enough publicity in the news media.

The writer, Jon Carroll of the San Francisco Chronicle, gives an example of how most reporters handle the mention of God. In the first situation, a baseball player has pitched a no-hitter and a reporter asks him to what he attributes his success.

The player gives credit to his pitching coach. The reporter then asks probing questions, such as: "Did he teach you the split-fingered fast ball?" Or, "What did he say to you before the game?"

In the second situation, same scenario, the player responds that God is responsible for his success. Does the reporter ask a follow-up question? No, in all likelihood, he pretends he hasn't heard the answer. He behaves as though the player committed a boo-boo.

The writer points out that the media shouldn't promote any particular religious viewpoint, but neither should it avoid reflecting the important of religion in most people's lives.

After all, poll after poll confirms that: 9 of 10 Americans say they have never doubted the existence of God; 7 of 10 believe in life after death; 8 in 10 believe God still works miracles; 9 in 10 say they pray.

I would hope that more people are interested in the role of God in their lives than they are in, say, the political turmoil in Somalia.

But you wouldn't know it from reading the papers.

We've said before that our readers should be cautious in handling any solicitation for funds--even if they appear to be going to a good cause.

Russell Skiles, Lamesa editor, recently wrote a column on this topic and offered some good examples:

"A local resident this week provided us with two almost identical letters she had received from cancer organizations seeking funds. One had a Tennessee address and one was from the state of Washington. Not only were they asking for contributions, but they also wanted her to contact at least five of her neighbors for donations."

"I've never heard of either organization but the 'facts' about themselves, printed on the back of their solicitation letters, provide some insight into their operations."

"One indicated that 36.8 percent of what they raise is spent on soliciting funds. Another 6.5 percent goes for administration. Public education in conjunction with fundraising appeals uses 51.5 percent of the money. According to their own information, only 5.35 percent of what they raise is spent on 'program services.'"

"It's interesting that the lengthy information statements about both groups state specifically that they are not affiliated with the American Cancer Society. That's the cancer organization that is best known, here and probably across the country, for its cancer services."

Skiles notes that the American Cancer Society has a chapter in Lamesa, and that is the case in Hereford. There is also an office in Amarillo. The society conducts fundraisers here, but through local chapter volunteers. And most importantly, they receive praise from a number of cancer sufferers here for their services and assistance.

Information provided by the American Cancer Society indicates that, of the funds raised in Texas last year, 37 percent went to national research and programs, 27 percent went to public and professional education, and 21 percent went to patient and community service.

In contrast to the others mentioned, the ASC spent only 13 percent on fund raising and 2 percent on management and operation.

So, be careful when you are being asked for donations, either by mail or in person. Be sure you know where the money goes and what it's being used for. If you have questions, call the chamber of commerce or Better Business Bureau.

Here are some newspaper ads that need a little editing:

--Lost: one small apricot poodle. Neutered. Like one of the family.

--A superb and inexpensive restaurant. Fine foods, expertly served by waitresses in appetizing forms.

--Dinner Special...Turkey $2.35; Chicken or Beef $2.25; Children $2.

--For sale: antique desk suitable for lady with thick legs and large drawers.

--We do not tear your clothing with machinery. We do it carefully by hand.

or even recession. Businesses can fail; people can lose their jobs.

Where to strike the balance is a matter of judgment. Usually, the Fed prefers being a little stingy because inflation, once entrenched, is difficult to kill. Election-minded presidents usually would rather have a little more growth, a few more jobs created.

But there's not much presidents can do if they're unhappy with monetary policy. Federal Reserve Board members serve 14-year terms and can't be removed without cause.

The chairman serves a four-year term, which does not coincide with the president's.

Relations between the administration and the Fed under Clinton and Greenspan stand in stark contrast to the often bitter sniping between the Fed and the Republican administration of George Bush.

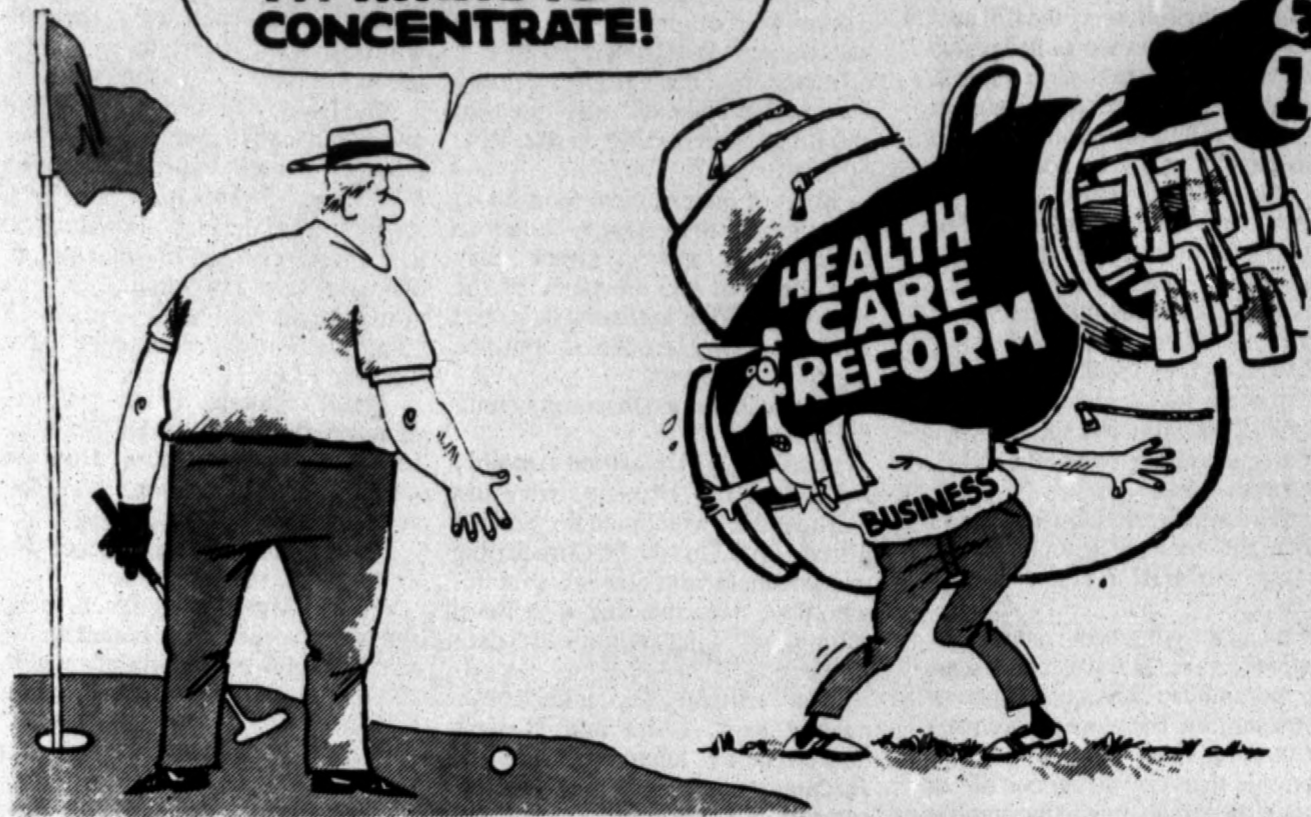

When Greenspan last month warned that interest rates would have to rise at some point, Laura Tyson, chairwoman of the White House Council of Economic Advisers, offered only this bland response: "The Federal Reserve must look at the situation and make a determination on what is wise."

A similar Greenspan statement during the Bush administration would have produced howls from the White House. But Jones and others in a small cadre of analysts who style themselves Fed watchers say the Clinton-Greenspan cooperation isn't as surprising as it might seem.

"Ever since the current administration took office, Fed policy has been absolutely unchanged," said economist Paul W. Boltz of T. Rowe Price Associates in Baltimore. "They haven't given the new administration any reason to be angry."

Short-term interest rates are about as low as they can go.

Out of the Blue

By Garry Wesner

Well, to paraphrase a popular phrase, "Here's another fine mess the Texas Legislature has gotten us into."

I don't know if you've heard about it or not, but the Hereford Independent School District is faced with raising its tax rate a whopping 305 percent this year.

This isn't the act of a money-grubbing district bound and determined to get as much money as possible.

Instead, it's because the district has to do something the legislature should have taken care of in its infamous "Sheriff Nottingham" school finance law (which takes from everyone and gives to the state).

You see, when our erstwhile legislators met in Austin earlier this year to hammer out their latest school finance law, they did away with County Education Districts.

These, you recall, were a product of another genius legislature searching for another way to equalize school funding.

Anyway, CEDs, as they were known, had taxing authority over all the school districts under them.

They took property taxes from all the districts, then divided them back up again according to the size of the district.

At the same time, the individual districts set their own tax rates, which were considerably less than those imposed by the CED.

Anyway, when the CEDs were abolished, lawmakers did nothing about returning CED money to local school districts.

It seems to me that anybody could have figured out that money being collected by taxing entities should go SOMEWHERE when that taxing entity is done away with.

But apparently the legislature didn't see it that way, even though it would have only taken about one sentence--something to the effect of "All property taxes collected by CEDs shall revert to the original taxing school district which collected those taxes prior to creation of the CEDs."

As a result, every school district in Texas is having to raise property taxes several hundred percent--some even more than 1,000 percent--even though a good many are not raising the overall tax rate at all.

And, because Texas law requires that any property tax increases over 3 percent be subject to a public hearing before it can be approved by school trustees.

Now, the HISD and Walcott ISD--as well as every other district in Texas--has to spend district resources to publish legal notices about these public hearings. They also need to expend employee time and effort to write agendas, make copies of the agendas and notify the news media before such a hearing can be held.

Just think how much time and bother would have been avoided had the legislature used some common sense and included one simple sentence into the finance bill.

Well, enough of that stuff. Let's look at what I found this past week.

President Clinton certainly has been quiet recently. Of course, he was on vacation and has been preparing for the much-anticipated release of his health care reform package and the equally-anticipated firestorm of protest that will follow its unveiling.

In fact, Billary herself actually took some time off from the hectic pace of Washington life to enjoy a little R&R at the prestigious island of Martha's Vineyard, Mass.

(You notice that, the first vacation they have, the Presidents Clinton head in the OPPOSITE direction from Arkansas? I wonder why that is?)

Just so that all us Americans would be able to share in the merriment, the Associated Press last week released a day-by-day summary of Clinton's 11-day vacation.

I'll give you some highlights, just so you can say you experienced it with the president.

DAY ONE: Air Force One sits on the tarmac for hours, waiting to carry the perennially-non-punctual president and his family to Martha's Vineyard. (A great waste of taxpayer

An AP analysis

Clinton, Greenspan are D.C. odd couple

By DAVE SKIDMORE, Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - By just about any measure, they are polar opposites: from different generations, regions, and political parties, and possessing different temperaments and philosophies.

So the harmonious public relationship between President Clinton and Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan, often characterized as the second-most powerful person in government--couldn't be more surprising.

Clinton, 47, the first Democrat in the White House since Jimmy Carter, believes in an activist government, one that intervenes to help people and the economy. Greenspan, 67, an adviser to Republican presidents for 20 years, is a champion of individual initiative and free-market capitalism.

Yet Clinton, at least so far, has scrupulously deferred to the central bank's power to determine monetary policy independently. And Greenspan, for his part, provided crucial early support for the administration's budget deficit reduction package.

"I call them the odd couple," said economist David M. Jones of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co. "Greenspan is an intense, self-conscious, urbane, introverted New Yorker in contrast with Clinton, an outgoing, back-slapping, Elvis Presley-loving politician. They're strange bedfellows."

Traditionally, administrations and the Federal Reserve are at odds over the central bank's management of the money supply. If the Fed allows the money supply to grow too fast and interest rates to fall too far, the economy can overheat and inflation can rear up.

If the Fed is too stingy, the economy can languish in stagnation,

Here is a sampling of editorial opinion from Texas newspapers:

Waco Tribune-Herald on New Trial Evidence:

All the national, and even international, media exposure Texas has received as a result of the attempt by the state to execute Gary Graham has understandably aggravated a lot of Texans.

Still, the Graham case has pointed out several major flaws in the way Texas handles the death penalty. The Texas law that says a person given a death sentence has only 30 days to introduce new evidence of innocence means a truly innocent person could be put to death if exonerating evidence is discovered on the 31st day after conviction.

No one, not even the strongest law-and-order advocate, should want to put an innocent person to death while allowing the guilty to remain untouched and unsought in society simply due to an arbitrary time limit on the discovery of new evidence.

The Dallas Morning News on Iraqi refugees:

The U.S. veterans of the Persian Gulf war did not go to help throw the Iraqi army out of Kuwait only to have 4,000 members of that army become their neighbors. Yet that is what the U.S. government has been doing by accepting the Iraqi soldiers as refugees. The policy should be stopped.

The State Department argues that many of these Iraqi soldiers surrendered after reading leaflets dropped by U.S. planes promising that they would be taken care of if they surrendered. The State Department contends that because the surrendering Iraqis aided the coalition, they legitimately fear what will happen to them if they are sent back to Iraq. So our government is offering the soldiers refugee status and the benefits that go along with it.

That means to the tune of $4,000 to $7,000 each, the U.S. has gone about the business of resettling Iraqi soldiers, and their families, in communities in California, Florida and other states where they can find jobs and affordable housing, as well as take advantage of federal social service assistance programs. About 50 have been settled in the Dallas area.

That generous assistance is an affront to the men and women who fought in the war, many of whom did not receive assistance when requested for the hardship imposed on their families. Some veterans were even denied benefits, including health care for illnesses believed to be related to their duty in the Persian Gulf.

The 1,100 or so Iraqi soldiers who have been brought into the U.S. should be the end of the line. The Iraqi soldiers might deserve some consideration, but their resettlement should not be here. The U.S. is the only major coalition country taking them in. Only Sweden, Denmark and Norway have taken some of them. Strangely enough, none have been accepted by other Arab countries.

The delegates at the 94th National Convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars being held in Dallas this week probably have a full agenda to discuss. They should make room for this one and join congressional efforts to stop the wrongheaded resettling of Iraqi soldiers.

Aug. 26

El Paso Times on U.S. Rep. Ron Coleman's NAFTA summit: Congressman Ron Coleman and the El Paso chapter of the Foreign Trade Alliance conducted what they called a summit meeting (Aug. 24) ... on the North American Free Trade Agreement.

... Coleman and the alliance were wrong in closing that meeting to the public.

That is especially true in light of who attended: U.S. Treasury Department officials, business leaders, mayors from other border communities as well as representatives of the Texas and California governors.

That meeting resulted in a resolution against taxing border businesses and residents to pay for environmental improvement projects--a resolution that will go to President Clinton.

People had a right to hear those discussions. ... The six-term Democratic congressman contends that he did not invite the public because the meeting was organized on such short notice and it was to gather ideas from business leaders on funding for the border projects.

The secrecy of this meeting is reminiscent of the old smoke-filled rooms in which the business of government was conducted out of public view. But that practice no longer has a place in the decision-making process.

Area woman recalls life as tattoo artist

By ELLEN SWEETS
The Dallas Morning News
PLAINVIEW, Texas (AP) - For 83-year-old Lotteva Wagner Davis, women with tattoos are not necessarily news.

After all, by 1910, her mother was enveloped in body ink: hundreds of tattoos covered her, mostly reflecting carnival or Western themes. "Mama had a tiger's head, a cowboy chasing a steer, and she sat on two baby elephants," Ms. Davis says.

Yet, though her parents, Maud and Augustus Wagner, were tattooed from neck to toe, Ms. Davis has not one tattoo.

"Family feud," she says cryptically.

"Although we all knew how to tattoo - Papa taught her and me - Mama wouldn't let Papa tattoo me. I never understood why. She relented after he died and said I could get tattoos then, but I said that if Papa couldn't do them like he had done hers, then nobody would. And that was that. End of story."

Not quite. What Ms. Davis couldn't have herself, she did for others, thousands, in a painting and tattooing career that has spanned seven decades.

Three years ago, she did her last tattoo. But it wasn't the last her fans heard of her. In the underground subculture of true tattoo aficionados, Lotteva Wagner Davis' name is known from coast to coast.

San Francisco-based tattoo artist Don Ed Hardy, for example, says: "You just don't find anyone doing work by hand any more."

"She is the last of her kind," he says. "When we had our national convention in Arlington (Texas) in 1989, they honored her for her life's work and gave her a standing ovation. People were there from England and Australia. Everybody knew about her ..."

He's so interested in Ms. Davis that he's made a book agreement with her. And Hardy even traveled to Plainview to have her tattoo him. "One of the key things about her is there were so few women doing tattoos in that part of the 20th century," he says. "I just wanted to be part of that piece of history."

Ms. Davis' lifelong link with tattoo artistry began at age nine, when she learned the craft from her father. Although she had her own tattooing business when she was 12, Ms. Davis focused on another love, painting.

She painted colorful circus and carnival signs and banners with scrollwork and flowing script themes that would also serve her well in tattooing.

She did not have far to look for inspiration. The offspring of circus gypsies - her mother was a contortionist and aerial artist; her father, an established tattoo artist and owner of a small circus - she lived a life in which, as a rule, there were no rules.

But the colorful lifestyle that permeated so much of Ms. Davis' daily existence is gone, save for the samples of tattoo art and prices in her front room and the antiquated tattooing machine built for her by her father that sits covered in a corner, a dusty reminder of better days.

What remains now are the vivid memories: of an aviation show that her mother promoted that featured Wilbur and Orville Wright; of her father tattooing a man named George Gobel ("I never was sure if he was related to the comedian or not," she says); of her own paintings done while working with famed clown Emmett Kelly.

"Between train wrecks, windstorms, bad business deals and the Depression, I don't know how much money we made and lost," Ms. Davis says.

"But I have my memories, and no one can take those away. I remember Pancho Villa used to cross over into Laredo (Texas) for the bullfights when we were there doing a show. Villa's nephew and I grew up together. And Jimmy Durante he used to make jokes about his nose back in '20 when he was doing dime-a-dance railroad shows."

As much as her environment, though, it was "puny" health that shaped her life's work, she says.

At one time or another, she suffered bouts with typhoid fever, whooping cough, scarlet fever, pneumonia and measles. It was being stricken with measles at age four that led her to drawing.

"All I did was lie in bed," she says. "We were with Papa's circus, somewhere in South Dakota in a hotel, when I saw this horse across the street. I grabbed up a pad of paper and started drawing as fast as I could. It looked like an elephant with overalls on, but I knew from then on I would learn to draw horses."

And she did. Following in the footsteps of her parents, who were as well-known for their sign painting as for their tattooing ability, Ms. Davis carved out a niche for herself. By the time she was 14 she was shipping custom-ordered paintings of lions and tigers and bears. She used only her first initial, "L," because she feared people wouldn't want to do business with a female, much less a 14-year-old one.

She parlayed her painting skill into a career restoring and painting carousel horses. Yellowed newspaper clippings in her scrapbook recall the work for which she became nationally known.

Nearly seven decades later, diminished eyesight, an injured hip and a bothersome knee problem slow her down, but can't take away her presence. She stands barely five feet tall. Her back is slightly hunched, and leathery, suntanned skin covers elongated fingers that have been cruelly gnarled by arthritis. She lives on a fixed income and tends her modest house. And she still paints Indians and her beloved horses.

Even today, a damaged carousel horse sits belly-up in her kitchen awaiting attention. In her yard, a rusting carnival ride rests behind the trailer that has seen carny shows four states.

In many ways, Ms. Davis, who has survived three husbands - a Cheyenne, a Chippewa and a Cherokee - represents the last of a breed: a free spirit who says what she thinks.

"At my age, I don't see why I have to do anything I don't want to do or bite my tongue for anyone," she says. "Anyone who don't like it can, well, they know where they can go."

That bravado has sustained her through trying times, not the least of which was a serious fall last year. The resulting injury required a four-month hospitalization following surgery to place a metal brace in her hip.

Ms. Davis' feistiness stems from a freewheeling, often nomadic childhood existence. Her father generally known as a world traveler, tattoo artist and taxidermist earned a small fortune doing tattoos at St. Louis' 1904 World's Fair.

"My father probably earned as much as a bank president at the fair," Ms. Davis says. An account in a September 1904 issue of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch backs her up: "Among the 1,900 people that (Gus Wagner) tattooed up to the time this article was written, there were 31 society women," the article says. "They wanted tattoos of their pet dogs, cats, lovers' hearts, butterflies and birds. How they do love butterflies."

Like her father, Ms. Davis has generated a legacy as a tattoo artist. On a recent Saturday morning, for example, she receives an early morning visitor, Eddie Pitts, known around town by his nickname, "Skinny."

Pitts, a tattoo artist, has dropped in partly to check on her, but mainly to listen as she explains which needles are best for outlining, which are best for shading and how to tattoo without leaving a scab.

"I only had one bleeder," she says.

She stops to describe how her father used to tattoo.

"He could work as fast as any machine, and so could I. He always thought my hands would go bad. We never thought about my eyes," she says.

Then she returns to the business at hand. Skinny is clearly impressed. He thanks her for her time and stands to leave.

"I got people come in that had her do tattoos 20 years ago, and her work still looks good as new," he says.

Ms. Davis offers to share some more of her father's memorabilia. First is a small leather-bound book with linen pages that contains original designs from World Wars I and II. There are flags, roses and ships, all with space for a person's name at the bottom.

And the prices are steep for the late '30s and early '40s -- $3.50 for a rose, $2 for a beetle, $5 for crossed flags and $18 for a South Pacific image with palm trees, a flag and ship masts.

Finally, Ms. Davis presents the thick, leather-bound chronicle of her father's worldwide wanderings. "Papa traveled to every country that had a flag, and some that didn't," Ms. Davis says affectionately.

Ms. Davis' only living relatives are her son, Rocky Reisner, who lives in Sipe Springs in west central Texas, and a cousin, Pat Hook, in Manhattan,

Kan. "I'm scared to make friends with anyone," she says wistfully. As she speaks, her eyes tear up again. "At my age, death is a next-door neighbor."

But there are people who still care about her, and they are near and far people like Hardy, who traveled to Plainview in 1990 to have her do the red rose tattoo marking the end of her career.

"I really was honored that he was willing to trust me to do it," Ms. Davis says. "It brought back the old days, if only for a little while."

Herd falls one point short in season opener

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

The Hereford High School football team came within a two-point conversion of a win over Tascosa Friday night in Whiteface Stadium.

Instead, the pass for two failed, and the Herd had to take a 21-20 loss and settle for signs of hope for the just-started season.

"There were some redeeming things about this game," Coach Danny Haney said. "We kept battling and kept battling and never gave up."

Tascosa jumped out to a 14-0 lead, scoring on its first possession and on its fourth. The young Hereford team took a while to get together; it got its initial first down of the season on the third possession and scored its first touchdown of the season just before halftime. Sophomore tailback Marquise Brown shook off a hit at the goal line for a 1-yard TD run, capping a 74-yard drive.

Hereford had several other chances to score because Tascosa lost three fumbles and threw an interception, but the Herd answered the turnovers with three of its own: two interceptions and a fumble.

"We played dead even with them. We beat their rears," Haney said. "I told the kids we let this one get away. We spotted them 14 points, and we didn't take advantage of the chances when we had them."

Hereford took advantage of one of the fumbles for its second touchdown, and it came early in the second half. Hereford kicked off to start the second half. Hereford's Michael Brown forced return man Fredrick Ramzy to fumble, and Brown didn't hide his frustration when a Tascosa player fell on the ball before he could. On the next play, though, Tascosa's Ricky Cantu coughed up the ball, and Brown got there first.

Hereford took over at the 20, and after a short running play, Elias Reyna hit tight end Mark Kuper over the middle. Kuper shed one defender and squeezed between two others for a 16-yard touchdown reception.

"I didn't expect that to be a touchdown," Kuper said. "As soon as I caught the pass I felt one guy hit me, and I thought it was over right there. I just kept running."

Then speaking as a captain, Kuper said: "I think that touchdown is what helped everybody keep their mind focused on the game."

Terance High's extra point kick made it a tie game, 14-14, with 11:09 left in the third quarter.

Tascosa's scores came on a 20-yard run by Clint Falk in the first quarter, and on a nine-yard run by Ramzy in the second. Falk's touchdown capped a five-play, 76-yard drive on Tascosa's first possession of the game, following a Hereford punt. Ramzy's touchdown came after Falk picked up 68 yards off a screen pass.

Tascosa nearly scored a third time before halftime. Tascosa receiver Damon Vinyard got behind Chad Carlile and quarterback B.D. Ware hit him in stride. Carlile tackled Vinyard at the Hereford eight-yard line. Tascosa called a timeout with one second left in the half, but Matt Sticksel's field goal try was wide left.

After Kuper's touchdown tied the game, both teams built drives into the other's territory and both were stopped on fourth down.

One of Tascosa's fumbles came on the third play of the fourth quarter and gave Hereford the ball at the Tascosa 13. The offense couldn't punch it into the end zone, though, and High's 23-yard field goal attempt was low and was blocked at the line of scrimmage.

Tascosa took over at their own 20 and mounted a 14-play scoring drive, capped by Jason Garcia's 11-yard run to a wide-open left side of the end zone. Sticksel's kick made it 21-14 with 4:17 left in the game.

Hereford didn't quit, though. On third-and-six at the Herd's own 31, Reyna found Marquise Brown for a 14-yard completion. Reyna then rolled out and hit Marc Haney for 13 yards at the Tascosa 42.

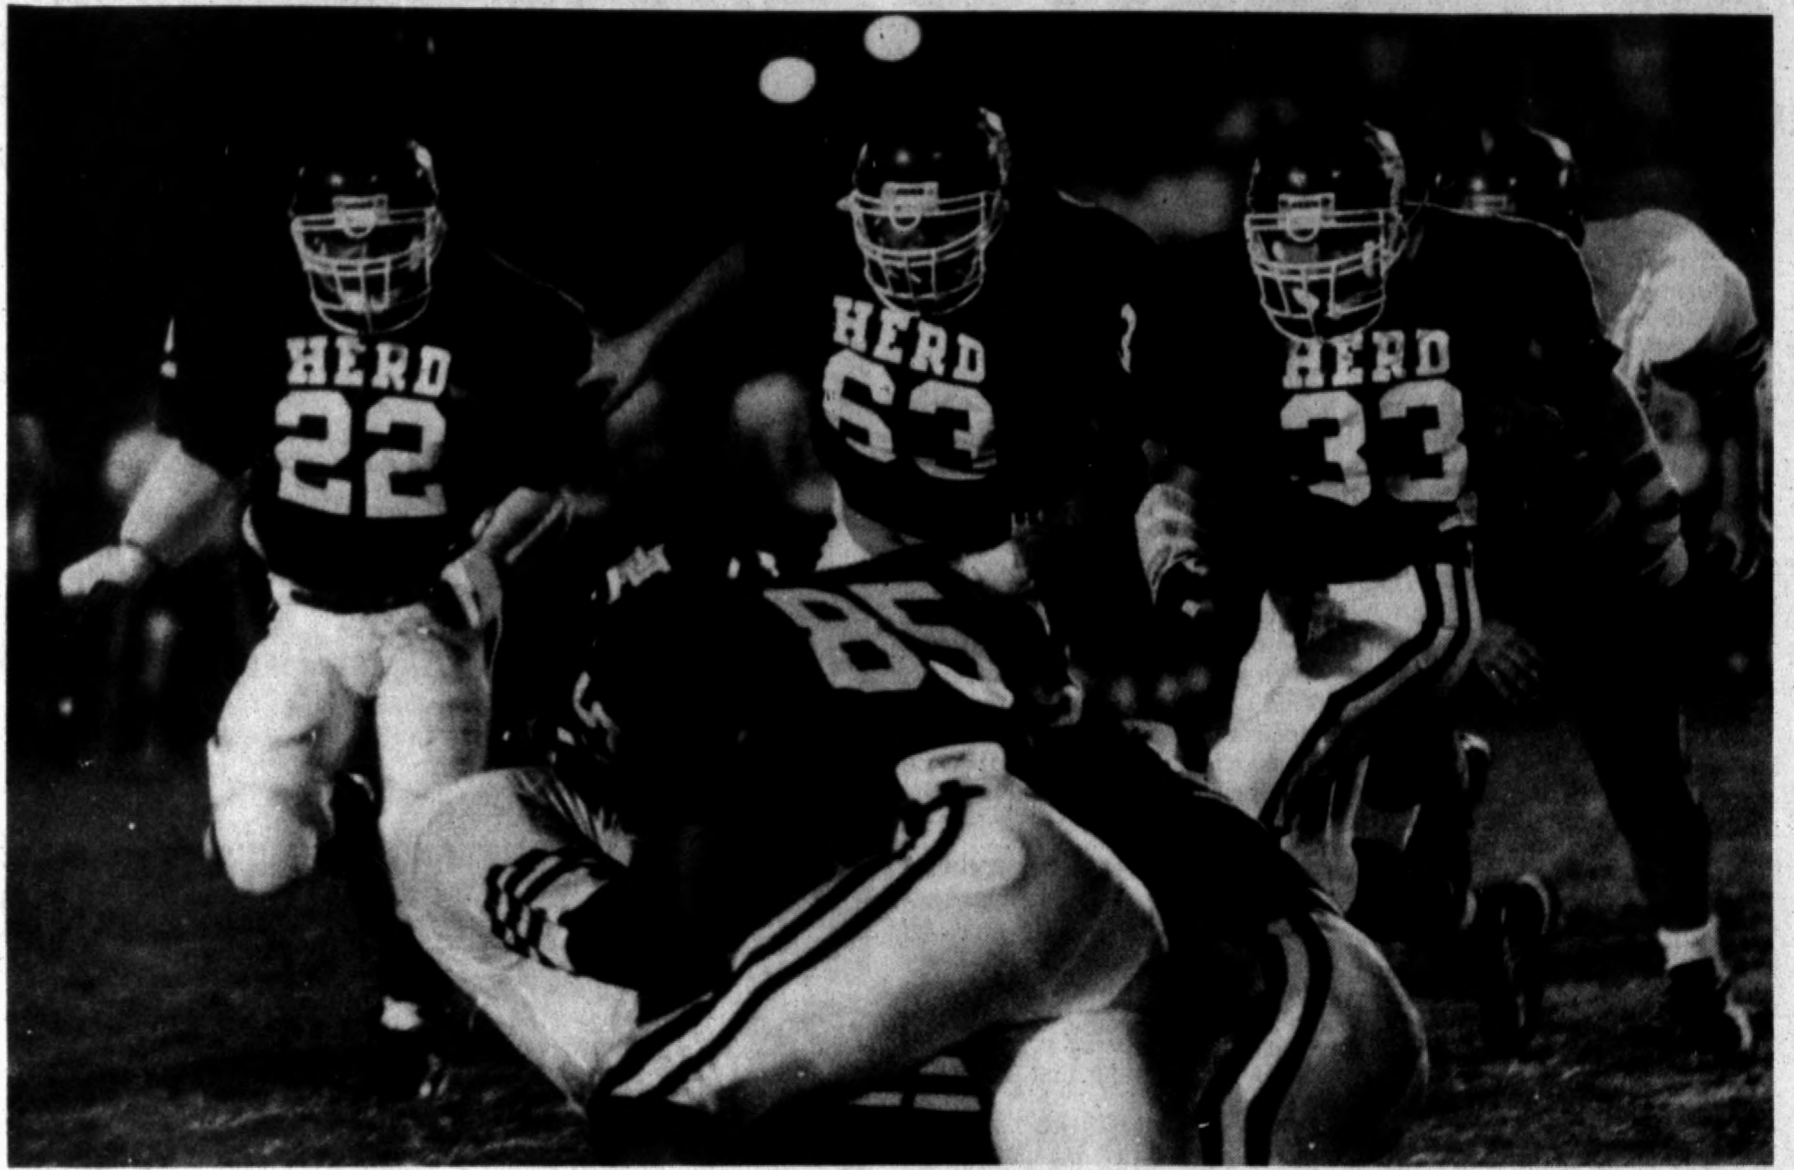

On the next play, Brown went around the right side and went nearly untouched 42 yards into the end zone. A Tascosa defender with an angle grabbed Brown inside the five-yard line, but Brown stretched forward and hit the pylon with the football with 2:59 left in the game.

There was no thought in Coach Haney's mind of going for a tie.

"That's a chance to win the game right there; Tascosa didn't have enough time to take it down," he said. "Ties aren't any good unless you're in the playoff. We're going to play for the win."

Hereford tried the same play that went for the touchdown to Kuper.

"I read the strongside linebacker," Reyna said, explaining what happened on the play. "They had the safeties up acting as linebackers, too. (The throw is supposed to go to) whatever they didn't cover, the tight end or the fullback. The best choice was (tight end) Kuper, so I threw it to Kuper."

Wall of defenders

Hereford's Mark Kuper (85) and Robert Jimenez (55, hidden) fold over a Tascosa running back as three Hereford teammates close in: Chris Vallejo (22), Shawn Malone (63) and Russ Watts (33). The Herd lost 21-20 to Tascosa Friday at Whiteface Stadium.

"As soon as Elias threw the ball, I was covered by three guys," Kuper said. Tascosa's John David Kritzer got credit for the defensive play.

Hereford had another chance after stopping Tascosa's next possession and forcing a punt, but on the first play, Reyna threw a long pass intended for Hayden Andrews, and Tascosa safety Joel Hill intercepted. Tascosa ran out the clock for the win.

Despite the two interceptions, Hereford's passing attack looked good at times. Reyna completed 8-of-19 for 114 yards to six different receivers.

"I didn't have too much pressure," Reyna said. "The line gave me plenty of time. It was just like in practice. I relaxed. The receivers ran good routes and caught it."

An 18-yard reception by Andrews came on fourth down and five to keep the first scoring drive alive, and each of Marc Haney's two receptions went for a first down on a Hereford scoring drive. Stacey Sanders made the highlight reel with a beautiful diving catch for a 27-yard gain.

"I felt good about the throwing game," Danny Haney said. "We executed well; made tough catches; the quarterback read well. The only thing we need to do is not turn the ball over. The more experience you have, the better you get at knowing where to throw the ball."

The ground game was there, too; Hereford gained 183 yards there. Marquise Brown had 100 yards rushing before the long TD run. He finished with 142 yards on 22 carries.

It was a game for gaining experience, and, as Carlile said earlier this week, experience is easy to get. The Whitefaces went into the game with only two returning starters, but when they go to Amarillo Saturday to face Palo Duro, they'll have 22 returning starters.

"We had a chance to win with a two-point conversion and you've got to feel good about that, but losing always leaves you with an empty feeling," Haney said. "I know these boys, and I know they'll come back after this. There were lots of redeeming qualities about this game. We'll line up in practice and get ready for the Dons."

Carroll squeaks by Coppell

By JAIME ARON
Associated Press Writer
DALLAS (AP) - Losses by two defending champions and impressive victories by two more highlighted the opening weekend of the 1993 high school football season in Texas.

But the year's most exciting debut likely belongs to Southlake Carroll, which needed a 27-yard field goal with no time left Friday night for a 15-13 victory over Coppell.

The Dragons, ranked No. 1 in Class 3A, seemed likely to end their state-record regular-season winning streak at 61 when Coppell's Cowboys, leading 13-6, moved to a first down on Carroll's 15 with about six minutes left.

But two plays later, a ball squirted loose into the arms of Carroll's Dane

Johnson, who ran 80 yards for a touchdown that pulled the Dragons within a point at 13-12. Disdaining a tie, Carroll went for the victory with a two-point conversion attempt, but it failed.

Coppell took over, gained a first down and ran the clock down to 1:34 remaining before Carroll regained possession. The Dragons hit three straight passes for 45 yards, the final

Boosters won't meet Monday

Due to the Labor Day holiday, the first meeting of the Whiteface Booster Club will not be Monday as originally planned.

The first meeting now will be Sept. 13, at 7 p.m. in the HHS cafeteria, and meetings will continue each Monday throughout the football season. Coach Danny Haney will go over the game film of the previous week's game, and he'll introduce the players of the week for the varsity and each sub-varsity team.

Pampa gets 1-4A's only win

The first Friday night of the 1993 football season wasn't a very good one for District 1-4A teams, as four of the five district members lost.

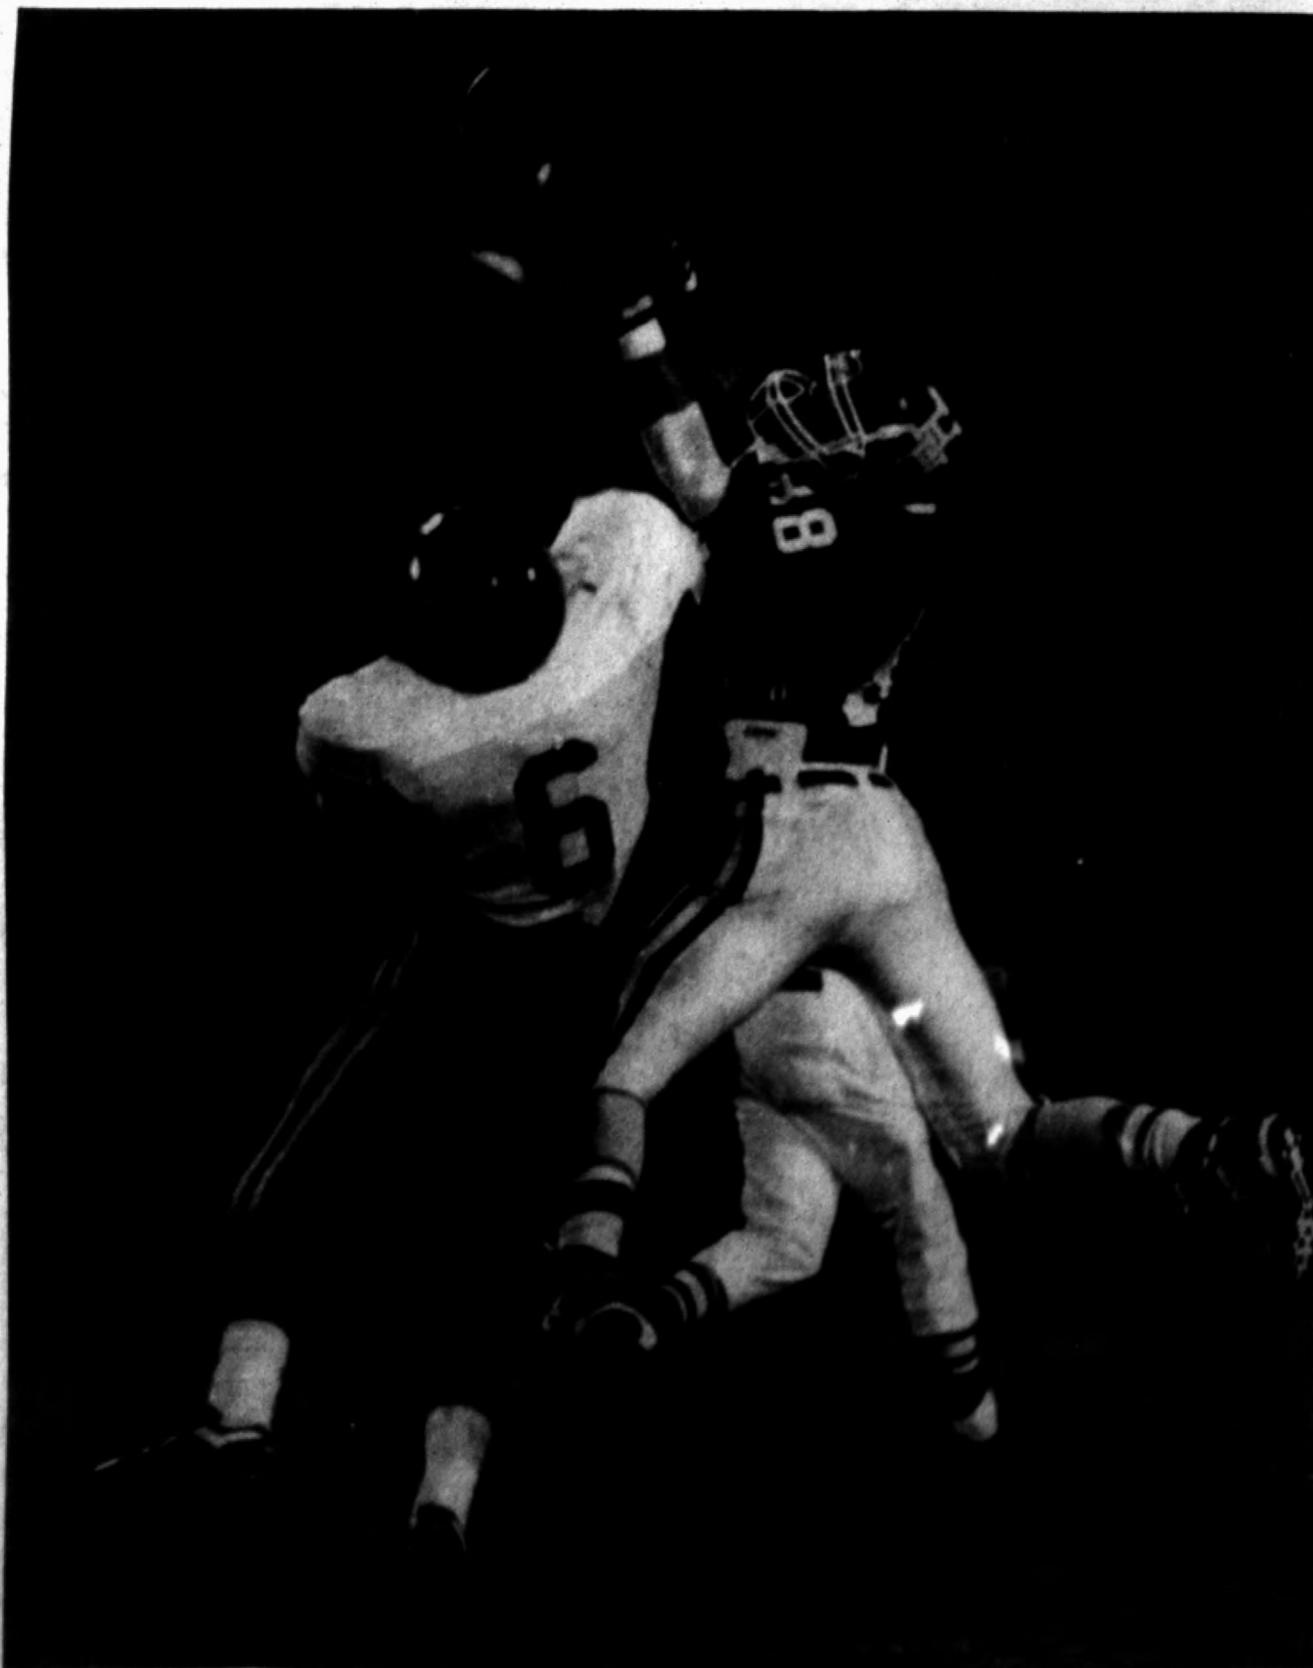

Pampa got the lone victory but had to leave Texas to do it. The Harvesters beat Garden City, Kan., 21-0.

The losses, besides Hereford's 21-20 loss to Tascosa, were by Dumas, 48-11 to Plainview; Borger, 23-10 to Perryton; and Caprock, 34-20 to Sanford Fritch.

Randall started early, picking up a 14-12 win at Portales, N.M., on Thursday.

For all the scores of all the high school football games played anywhere in Texas Thursday or Friday, look for the Beef 'n More Scoreboard on Page 10A.

Deshaies gets win for Giants

By The Associated Press

The Atlanta Braves got an expected strong performance from Tom Glavine. The San Francisco Giants didn't know what to expect from Jim Deshaies.

Glavine (17-5) gave up three runs on seven hits, struck out seven and walked none in eight-plus innings as Atlanta beat visiting San Diego 7-3 Friday night to stay 3 1/2 games behind San Francisco in the NL West.

At St. Louis, Deshaies pitched six strong innings to help the Giants beat the Cardinals 6-1.

The Braves won for the ninth time in 11 games, and 19th in 23 to keep the pressure on.

Atlanta scored four runs in the first inning off Andy Ashby (2-9), and had all of their 13 hits in the opening five innings.

Mark Carreon and Matt Williams homered and the Giants benefited from a rare two-error game by St. Louis shortstop Ozzie Smith for two unearned runs.

Deshaies was 11-13 with the Minnesota Twins, going winless in his last six starts, before being acquired by San Francisco last Saturday.

Rookie Allen Watson (6-3) lost his third straight decision for the Cardinals.

Elsewhere in the NL, it was Philadelphia 14, Cincinnati 2; Montreal 3; Houston 0; Colorado 7, Pittsburgh 6; and Los Angeles 5, Florida 4 in 13 innings.

Philadelphia scored eight runs in the fifth inning and hit three homers, including one by winner Tommy Greene, to rout Cincinnati at Riverfront Stadium.

It was the 150th consecutive game in which the Phillies have scored, tying the modern-day league record.

The NL's most productive offense scored a season-high eight runs in the fifth, highlighted by homers from Dave Hollins and Greene. Greene (13-3) gave up three hits, two runs and struck out a career-high 11.

Bobby Ayala fell to 5-7.

Expos 3, Astros 0

Rookie Kirk Rueter (6-0) pitched three-hit ball in seven innings, leading visiting Montreal over Houston for the Expos' eighth straight victory. John Wetteland, the third Montreal pitcher, worked 1 2-3 innings for his 32nd save, and Montreal finished with a combined five-hitter.

White Sox start to pull away from rest of West

By The Associated Press

They're starting to separate the best from the rest in the AL West.

With an 8-6 victory at Detroit on Friday night, the front-running Chicago White Sox opened their biggest lead of the season, six games over the Texas Rangers.

The White Sox have been in undisputed possession of first since July 7, but not until recently have they started to move away from the field. Their seventh victory in nine games came at an opportune time, on a night when the Rangers lost 9-5 at Minnesota.

Once again, surging Frank Thomas led the offense for the White Sox, driving in four runs to spoil Eric Davis' AL debut. Thomas improved his AL-leading RBI total to 117.

In the AL East, Toronto and New York both lost as the Blue Jays remained two games up on the Yankees.

PREP ROUNDUP

one a 24-yard completion to Eric Reed that put Carroll on Coppell's 18-yard line.

Several useless running plays later, the Dragons had one second left to avoid the embarrassment of losing on their turf. Likely hoping to unnerve the young kicker, Coppell called a timeout.

Instead, Brown was given plenty of time to get set and he made the Cowboys pay by booting the game-winner.

Carroll wasn't the only ranked 3A team to struggle Friday.

Third-ranked Sweeny beat Galena Park 7-6 and No. 6 Van beat No. 8 Commerce 10-8.

No. 5 Coldspring, which lost to Carroll in last year's 3A title game, dropped its season opener 13-10 to Port Arthur Austin. Seventh-ranked Fairfield lost to Athens, 14-0, and No. 10 Waco Robinson fell 9-7 to Rockdale.

Bartlett, beginning the season atop 1A as the defending champion, will fall from that perch after falling 14-7 to 2A's Rogers. The Bulldogs had won 15 straight games and had a five-year winning streak against the Eagles.

Coach Terry Cron had feared that inexperience would slow his team this season and it apparently did as Rogers quarterback Kyle Letbetter got the best of Bartlett.

Letbetter completed touchdown passes of 69 and 79 yards, plus added a two-point conversion in a game marred by 15 fumbles.

Second-ranked Tenaha, a 10-6 winner over Shelbyville, looks like a lock to become No. 1 because No. 3 Runge also lost, falling 16-6 to Nixon. All other ranked 1A teams won.

Goldthwaite, ranked No. 1 in 2A, cruised to a 40-0 victory over Early, and Omaha Paul Pewitt defeated Mount Vernon 41-22.

But the big news in 2A was Schulenburg's 27-16 loss to Hallettsville. Hallettsville's Brahmas went 3-7 last year, and Schulenburg's Shorthorns ended 1992 with 13 straight victories, including their second consecutive state title.

Schulenburg sophomore quarterback Jamie Jackson struggled in his first start, completing only one of 16 passes, with two interceptions.

The Shorthorns led 10-6 at halftime, but couldn't contain Brahmas' running back Darrell Herring, who finished with 194 yards and three touchdowns on 28 carries.

Fourth-ranked Boling also lost, falling 34-12 to Needsville. The rest of the ranked 2A teams won, except for No. 10 Refugio which tied Sinton 14-14.

The higher classes went pretty much as planned, with two of the most impressive victories coming from last year's state champs. One nailbiter was a 34-31 victory by Class 4A's A&M Consolidated over Belton.

Although A&M won the state title in 1991 and was a runner-up last year, it lost to Belton both seasons.

Class 5A Division I defending champ Converse Judson, ranked No. 1, smashed San Antonio Highlands 43-0 even with star running back Jerod Douglas out of action.

Division II champ Temple, ranked No. 5, crushed Austin Johnston 63-0, and No. 3 Dallas Kimball also cruised, shutting out Fort Worth Trimble Tech 33-0.

The only upsets suffered by ranked 5A teams were a 20-17 Longview victory over No. 8 Waco and a 7-0 loss by No. 9 Galveston Ball to La Marque, the No. 6 team in 4A.

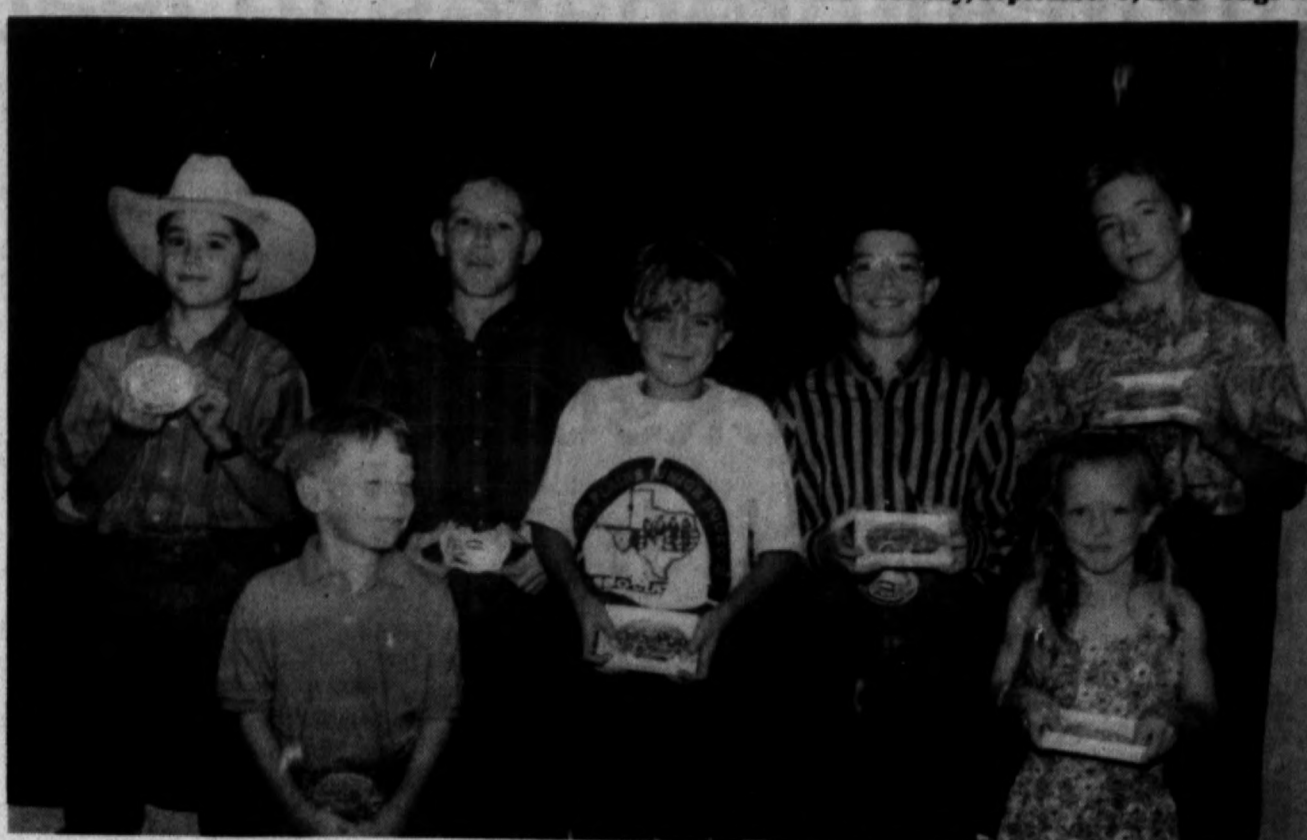

The Houston-area rivals were shutting each other out when Byron Evans ran for an 85-yard touchdown run in the fourth-quarter to give the Cougars their 18th straight regular-season victory.

The Tors were limited to 30 yards rushing on 30 carries and 75 yards overall.

Henderson, No. 10 in 4A, was upset 10-6 by Jacksonville.

Several games involving ranked teams were scheduled for Saturday, including the big battle between perennial Class 5A powers Dallas Carter, ranked No. 2, and No. 10 Houston Yates.

In Class 4A, No. 8 West Orange-Stark was paired against No. 9 Bay City.

Aikman prepares to lead Emmitt-less Cowboys

DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
IRVING, Texas (AP) - Troy Aikman knows what no Emmitt Smith means to him personally against the Washington Redskins on Monday night. The heat is on to pass the defending world champions to clicking you get a lot of third-and-1s, third-and-2s."

Aikman, who had a back operation on June 19 but healed so fast he played in two preseason games, said the lack of playing time shouldn't hurt him.

"It's true I only played half the amount of time I would normally get in the preseason," he said. "But I feel confident. I wouldn't have felt comfortable at all if I hadn't played in at least two games. I was very rusty in the first game. In the second one, I started to see things better. The game slowed down a little."
Then Aikman made a prediction that should give the Redskins shivers: "I'm feeling as good or better than I ever have for the season opener."

The Redskins recovered the ball for what proved to be the game-deciding touchdown.
There was controversy whether Aikman's arm was moving forward. Later, coach Jimmy Johnson went on a tirade on the team plane, accusing some players of not taking the loss hard enough.
The Cowboys then proceeded to win their next five games, culminating with the 52-17 Super Bowl victory over Buffalo.

"It has been a big adjustment, going from the 45-second clock," Aikman said. "It still seems very rushed trying to get off plays. You've seen a lot of delay-of-game in the preseason. Sometimes it can be like a track meet. We've just got to get the plays in a little faster. Nobody I've talked to likes the rule."
Aikman said he's ready to end all the questions about the Cowboys' ability to repeat.
"There's a lot of speculation about what kind of team we will have," Aikman said. "It will be tough. We'll be on everyone's hit list. Teams that are just average will probably play us close because they will be so pumped up. Of course, the Redskins game is big because it could set the tempo for the season."
"I'm real curious what we'll look like."

The last time Aikman played in RFK Stadium he was involved in one of the craziest plays of the year, one that contributed to a Dallas defeat.
Aikman was hit as he tried to free from his end zone. The ball fell through and Smith picked it up. Then Smith was tackled and unsuccessfully tried to pitch the ball out of the end

Saints' Jackson, Oilers' Moon clash in Louisiana

MARY FOSTER
AP Sports Writer
NEW ORLEANS (AP) - Every play counts for New Orleans Saints linebacker Rickey Jackson.
Houston Oilers quarterback Warren Moon feels the same way.
So something has to give.
Moon, the all-time everything at quarterback, squares off Sunday night against the Saints and Jackson, who has been defining defensive standards for over a decade.

as a passer, the Oilers have not been able to win big with him. He has taken them to the playoffs six straight times, but Houston has never reached the conference title game. In four of those post-season games, the Oilers were eliminated in the opening round.
At 36, more than the game clock is ticking for Moon.
"I'm winding down," Moon said. "I really want it. We've come so close so many times, it gets frustrating."
How good is Moon? Last season, he missed five games with a broken arm and still earned a fifth straight Pro Bowl berth. He ranks 16th all-time in NFL yardage. Moon is the only quarterback in NFL history to complete 400 passes in a season.
"When he is on top of his game, we can play great pass defense and he can still pass for 300 yards," coach Jim Mora said of Moon. "We could really be playing our heads off and he could scar us."
Even Moon acknowledges Houston's run-and-shoot offense can hurt anyone if given half a chance.
"I wouldn't say we're unstoppable, but I feel we're very tough to stop when we get into a rhythm," Moon said Wednesday.
The Saints defense hopes to prevent him from hitting that rhythm.
The Oilers allowed only 32 sacks last season. In the 11 games he played, Moon was sacked 16 times. Stopping the run-and-shoot requires pressure. Applying it will fall to Jackson and his defensive teammates.

Moon admits he's worried about seeing too much of the Saints' sack attack.
"We've had some trouble we hope we've worked out," Moon said. "I think much of it was because we had shifted our line around trying to do some different things. We've pretty much put those guys back where they were last year."
Holding off the Saints defense, which led the league in fewest points allowed for the past two seasons and had an NFL-high 57 sacks, won't be any easier, even without All Pro linebacker Pat Swilling, Moon said.
"I see them being just as strong without Swilling," Moon said. "Turnbull may even play better than Swilling against the run. They're strong and very aggressive. Rickey Jackson is Mr. Reliable for them. He's always going to be after you."
In the preseason meeting, Moon played just one quarter and finished 6-of-9 for 92 yards and a touchdown.
"He's not one to stand around and hold onto the football," Jackson said. "But if you don't keep some pressure on him, it will be a very long game. He can sit back there and kill you long-distance."
So who will come out on top.
"Who knows?" Jackson said. "I can tell you this, it'll be a hell of a show."

Both men see it as a "must" win. But then, when you're entering your late 30s, as both men are, every NFL game is a "must" win.
"I'd like to think this is the year this team will make the big move," Jackson said. "I've done a lot during my career, but it's all been during the regular season. This year, I'd like to make some noise after they narrow it down."
The Saints and Jackson, a 13-year veteran and five-time Pro Bowl player, have never made it past the first post-season game. Jackson and the Saints have had five winning seasons and four trips to the playoffs since 1987.
At 35, Jackson hungers for a championship before he bows out.
"I think about it a lot," Jackson said. "I never know but what a play could be my last and I'd sure like to go a little further before that happens."
As productive as Moon has been

Montana, DeBerg meet in reunion of old 49ers

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

Think of it as homecoming week in Tampa.

Joe Montana, in his first game with the Chiefs, against Sam Wyche, his first quarterback coach in San Francisco, and Steve DeBerg, the quarterback who preceded him with the 49ers.

That was 15 seasons ago, when DeBerg was 25 and Montana 23, without elbow damage, back damage, the other bruises that finally led to his being shipped off for a stop in Kansas City en route to Canton.

DeBerg's been a Chief too, as recently as two years ago. It's stop No. 5 in a career in which he ranks 11th overall in passing yardage. Joe's had a decent summer, meaning he hasn't gotten hurt. He hasn't played much, but he's had what's known as "a lot of reps," meaning he's practiced a lot.

Against the Bucs, that's probably all you need - the Chiefs are 7-point favorites and probably should be favored by more.

The Chiefs have one other reason to be grateful.

Their franchise player, defensive right end Neil Smith, hadn't signed by the start of the week. But neither had the man he would have gone against, Paul Gruber, Tampa's offensive left tackle and the Bucs' franchise player.

That translates to ... CHIEFS, 20-7

Dallas (pick 'em) at Washington (Monday night)

The traditional opening Monday night game - "Let's get the last two Super Bowl winners together." These two were the night time opener last year too, and the Cowboys won 23-10 in Irving.

But the 'Skins were the defending champs then. Now it's the Cowboys.

REDSKINS, 23-10

San Francisco (minus 5 1/2) at Pittsburgh

Steve Young is expected to test his injured thumb against a defense that can run almost as fast as he can. The 49ers, who almost never lose on the road, can stop the run, which means they should be able to handle Barry Foster.

49ers, 22-14

Miami (minus 6) at Indianapolis

If Duane Bickett had signed earlier, Jeff Herrod wasn't hurt, Jeff George wasn't a holdout, if Roosevelt Potts was a proven runner ... the Colts might win this game.

But ... DOLPHINS, 24-10

Houston (plus 3) at New Orleans

The line means the teams are even. No they're not. Buddy's blitzes against an aching offensive line.

OILERS 27-20

Minnesota (minus 3) at Raiders

The Missile meets the Rocket; Jim McMahon and Jeff Hostetler renew acquaintances, and Dennis Green and Art Shell meet in the first matchup ever of black coaches. What matters is ...

RAIDERS, 17-13

Atlanta (plus 6) at Detroit

Who gets hurt first? Chris Miller or Rodney Peete?

LIONS, 27-9

New England (plus 13 1/2) at Buffalo

Has Bill Parcells warned Drew Bledsoe that things happen faster in the regular season?

BILLS, 34-6

Seattle (plus 12) at San Diego

Has Tom Flores warned Rick Mirer?

CHARGERS, 24-3

Rams (plus 6 1/2) at Green Bay

Jim Everett meets Reggie White

PACKERS, 27-7

Giants (plus 1) at Chicago

The Giants won 27-14 last year. Will the New Jersey Broncos do the same?

BRON--., er, GIANTS, 27-24

Phoenix (plus 6) at Philadelphia

Will the Cards go 4-12 or 5-11 this year?

EAGLES, 20-13

Denver (pick 'em) at New York Jets

Alas, poor Boomer, we knew you well.

BRONCOS, 20-10

Cincinnati (plus 8) at Cleveland

Boomer knew the Bengals pretty well. That's why he left.

BROWNS, 19-3

Last season: 116-113-4 (spread).

162-71 (straight up)

Kennedy has shown mettle in first season as manager

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - For a rookie, Kevin Kennedy got the hang of major league baseball pretty quick.

Of course he spent some time as bench coach for the Montreal Expos, but that's not like being in charge of the day-to-day dealings with overpriced baseball players. The grind of spring training and a 162-game season and the pressure to produce a winner has caused many a rookie manager to look into the insurance business.

Remarkably, Kennedy has kept the Texas Rangers in the thick of the American League West pennant race. It really might be a September to remember for Rangers fans who have never seen a pennant flag fly from the centerfield pole.

Chances are the Rangers won't make it. The Chicago White Sox have deep pitching and talent galore. Also, there's a third team in the mix, the Kansas City Royals, who have steadied after a stumbling start to make a legitimate pennant run.

Kennedy has dealt with more injuries than the average skipper and somehow has kept the club productive.

He's had seven different shortstops and five different second basemen yet the Rangers have survived. Kennedy plugged in Doug Strange who has been tremendous defensively at second base and has some pop in his bat.

Mario Diaz has played adequate defense and produced solid offense at shortstop while Manny Lee overcame a number of injuries.

As luck would have it, Diaz went down with the chicken pox the other day. A childhood disease, no less, and Kennedy has to deal with it.

Nolan Ryan's triple visit to the disabled list, nagging injuries to Charlie Leibrandt, and Kevin Brown's off-year have kept Kennedy and pitching coach Claude Osteen searching high and low for available pitching arms.

Not to be overlooked was Jose Canseco's pitching arm which nearly fell off after he hounded Kennedy into a pitching effort. Not soon after, Canseco was hit in the head by a fly ball that became a homer because he couldn't lift his arm to catch it.

An operation sidelined Canseco for the year.

Kennedy hasn't used the injuries for a crutch and hasn't let the team use them as an excuse. He also didn't make excuses in the Canseco affair, saying it was poor judgment on his part to let his high-priced slugger be so foolish.

Kennedy also won't cotton less than spirited play.

He told Julio Franco to play hard or get on the injury list for the rest of the season.

Francisco decided his gimpy knee felt better and has played hard and recently went on a long hitting streak out of his DH spot.

Kennedy has shown the same leadership skills he had at Albuquerque when his teams were the terror of minor league baseball.

The only problem is these skills hadn't been showcased until this year. General manager Tom Grieve can be proud of the man he picked to replace the fired Bobby Valentine.

This year was a good learning experience for Kennedy.

If the Rangers can't pull off a pennant this year, maybe at least Kennedy, who has a two-year contract, will know how he can do it next season.

Couple united in marriage Saturday

Former Hereford resident, Peggy LaVern Miller of Allen, and Michael Anthony Mayer, also of Allen, were united in marriage Saturday afternoon in St. Anthony's Catholic Church of Hereford.

The Rev. Orville Blume of the church officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Leona Schilling and Buster Miller, both of Hereford.

The church was decorated with two large arrangements of dusty rose and white flowers entwined with greenery and two heart candelabra adorned by roses and greenery. The unity candle rested on a bed of greenery and the pews were marked by white bows with accents of greenery.

The bride's sister-in-law, Pam Nixon Miller, was matron of honor and the bride's brother, Rodney Miller, was best man.

Carey Sampey of Arlington was bridesmaid and Darius Sampey of Arlington was groomsmen.

Ushers were the bride's brother, Burl Miller, and her stepbrother, Matt Schilling.

Wayne and Mary Schilling served as readers and also led the dance for the Grand March.

Flower girl was Sarah Miller, daughter of Rodney and Pam Miller, and ring bearer was Jacob Miller, son of Burl and Paula Miller.

Candles were lit by Holly Schilling, daughter of Dennis and Shelly Schilling, and James Miller, son of Burl and Paula Miller.

Carmen Flood, accompanied by Carolyn Evers, sang "Ave Maria," "His and Hers," "That's the Way" and "There Is Love."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white floor-length bridal gown of satin. It was fashioned with a sweetheart neckline which was adorned with re-embroidered lace, pearls and iridescents, and long tapered sleeves accented with lace and pearls. The fitted princess line bodice, trimmed with matching accents, was marked at the back with a designer's bow. The full skirt, attached to a basque waistline, was edged with delicate scalloped lace and formed a cathedral-length train created by satin, lace appliques and pearls.

The cathedral-length bridal veil of illusion created a pouf at the back of a band of pearls and beads.

She carried a floral arrangement of dusty rose and white roses accented with ribbon and greenery adorned with dusty rose and white ribbon.

Observing bridal tradition, the bride carried a family keepsake, a rosary which belonged to Mrs. Herman Schilling. It was entwined in the bridal bouquet. The bride also wore a garter which was made by the bride's cousin, Mary Jo Cramer. The garter was accented with pearls which belonged to the bride's great-grandmother, Charlotte Meller.

Bridal attendants wore designer tea-length dusty rose satin dresses fashioned with sweetheart necklines, overlays of lace on the bodices, lace bustles and matching dusty rose satin shoes. They carried smaller versions of the bride's bouquet.

Paula Miller invited wedding guests to the reception/dinner/dance held in the school gym.

Refreshments were served by Amy Schilling of Slaton, Shelley Schilling of Hereford, and the bride's cousins, Becky Stewart of Amarillo and Carey Bradford of Austin. Others assisting were Mary Dee Hoelscher, Annette Albracht, Elizabeth Vogel, Charlotte Paetzold and Ida Schumacher.

The main refreshment table was covered with a white skirt with mauve netting gathered with bows and ivy. The bride's bouquet, placed in a crystal vase, decorated the table which held the three-tiered bride's cake. It was designed with steps leading from the main layer to the lower cake. The first layer was placed on pedestals and was centered with a dusty rose arrangement. The cake was topped with doves.

The groom's German chocolate cake was topped with golfing figurines. Refreshments included punch from a flowing fountain and champagne.

Mauve rice roses in rice bags were distributed to wedding guests. They were made by Mary Jo Cramer.

Following a wedding trip to Puerto Vallarta, Mexico, the couple will make their home in Allen.

The bride is a 1982 graduate of Hereford High School. She received a degree in electronic engineering technology from DeVry in Irving. She is currently employed by MCI as a database administrator.

The groom is currently employed by MCI as a senior engineer. He served overseas in the Military Army Signal Corp.

Wedding guests represented Florence, Ala., Garden City, Kan., Arlington, Austin and San Antonio.

Klondike National Historical Park is set in two states, Washington and Alaska--divided by thousands of miles of Canada.

Hints from Heloise

STOLEN PURSE

Dear Heloise: Your subject this morning concerning stolen purses reminds me that the police in our neighborhood meetings suggested we carry our shoulder purses around our necks instead of on our shoulders.

With the opening at chest level, it is harder for pickpockets or others to grab our purses. — Bertha Meek, Tularosa, N.M.

STAMPS

Dear Heloise: My husband passed away a week ago and my niece from out of state sent a sympathy card with a roll of postage stamps (100 stamps — $29) instead of flowers.

This came in so handy when sending out thank-you cards. — Mae Moelhaman, Cedar Lake, Ind.

My thoughts are with you on the loss of your husband, and a Heloise hug to your niece. — Heloise

Send a money- or time-saving hint to Heloise, PO Box 795000, San Antonio TX 78279-5000 or fax it to 210-HELOISE. I can't answer your letter personally but will use the best hints received in my column.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Garth Brooks isn't happy about some of the places his newest album is being sold.

Brooks' record distributor, CEMA, initially said it wouldn't ship "In Pieces" to stores that sell used CDs. But it made an about-face in mid-August.

"When my distributor reversed its decision, I crawled on my hands and knees to my label to ask them to stop making CDs," Brooks said Tuesday. "They turned me down."

Distributors say the sale of used CDs is an infringement of copyright laws. Stores claim distributors are trying to keep the price of CDs artificially high.

DOG AND FLEA ECONOMICS

The best aspect of having a post office box is the pleasant surprises you find in it. Such was the case a few weeks ago when I found a letter from Phil Schlarb, an old friend who lives near Trenton, Missouri.

Schlarb is a professor and part-time dean at North Central Missouri College. He is also a successful entrepreneur. His approach to teaching business and economics courses is an appropriate and interesting blend of common sense and classic business theory. Schlarb exposes students to a hearty dose of the way the world really works.

Therefore, it was with great interest that I read the five-page essay he included with his letter. Schlarb wrote the piece, titled "Dog and Flea Economics," to show students the importance of studying economics.

Schlarb contends in his essay that those who learn how our economic system works can raise their standard of living, increase their income and enjoy greater job stability. I agree, and felt that many of you would enjoy his creative way of looking at economics.

Of dogs and fleas

Schlarb compares our economy to the relationship of a dog and its fleas. We are all economic fleas, he contends, who share our dog's fortune. The good news is you get to pick up your own dog. The bad news is you have little or no control over your dog.

Economic dogs include your profession, your education, your employer and the world economy. You may have to change dogs from time-to-time to maintain your economic prosperity.

Schlarb points to several cases from our nation's history economic change made some of us find a new dog. For example, the development of "double-knit" fabric resulted in the closing of 50% of our nation's dry cleaners. The employees - economic fleas - didn't do anything wrong, but were still in trouble when their dog died.

Refrigeration killed the ice box and block ice industries, but generated great employment in manufacturing and servicing refrigerators and freezers. The electronic calculator retired the slide rule, but increased the number of people working in the electronics industry. The point: Old dogs die and new ones are born. It is as natural in economics as it is in dogdom.

Points to ponder

Schlarb ends his essay with some thought-provoking concepts:

- Only people have expenses. Neither businesses nor governments have expenses. These institutions simply pass costs on to the consumer or taxpayer.

consumer or taxpayer.

- Only people cause businesses. Schlarb points to the vacant buildings in many rural towns with declining populations as an example. The businesses previously housed in those now empty buildings are dead because when people move away they take their dollars with them.

- Risk and profit travel together. The willingness to accept risk separates the entrepreneur from the spectators. Many people have good ideas, but few are willing to risk time, money and their reputation. Respect those who accept risk - without them there would be little progress.

- What's good for one may be bad for others. A snow storm may slow traffic for many retailers, but will spur sales of tire chains, snow blowers and insulated boots. Consumers will welcome a new Wal-Mart store, but other business owners may greet it with fear and hate.

- There ain't no free lunch. Everything costs something and there are both direct costs and opportunity costs. Economics is basically a study of how people, companies and countries decide to spend their money and time.

If you enjoyed these brief "Dog and Flea" highlights, I'd like to send you a free copy of Schlarb's entire essay. Please send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Dogs and Fleas, c/o Minding Your Own Business, PO Box 67, Amarillo, Texas 79105.

September is here, and the Deaf Smith County Library is looking forward to a full schedule! We have a full slate of fun Family Films, with a special or two thrown in. To kick things off this month is The Love Bug, starring Dean Jones and Michelle Lee. Film day is September 16. As usual, the film is free, and popcorn will be on sale for a quarter. (We may even have some popcorn balls!)

October is a full month. In addition to the regular Family Film we will have Halloween Special on the 28th. October also brings the annual Friends of the Library Book Sale! We will have as good a selection of books as I have seen, thanks in a large part to several patrons who regularly donate books. Also, we have done some intensive weeding here at the library, so mark your calendar now for October 15 and 16, and come pick up some bargains. As an added attraction, the Friends will be raffling some really nice books.

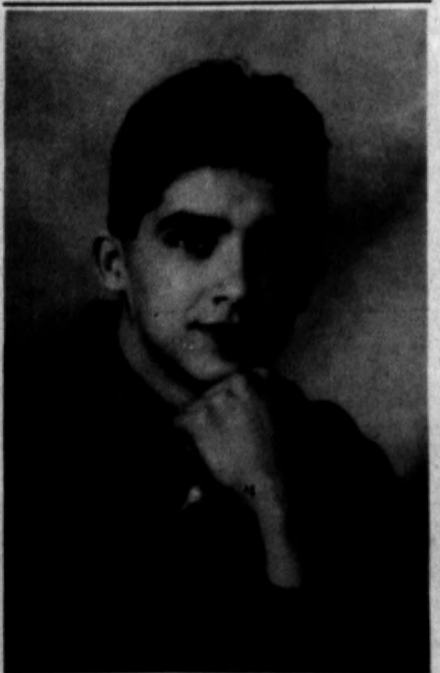

National Children's Book Week is in November, and we are making plans for some special activities then.

Speaking of weeding...We can't keep everything forever, but it's a tough job to decide what should go. Generally I look for books that are in a very bad shape or books in very good shape. The former because they are apt to fall apart on a patron, the latter because they are not being read. Actually it goes a little deeper than that, but that's a starting point. The other day I was weeding, and happened to ask a patron if she was familiar with Christopher Morley's works. She replied that he was a good author of "sophisticated" humor novels and a number of years ago had been quite popular. When I told her that I was weeding, she commented how sad it was that so many good books are ignored, just because the authors are no longer writing. She has a point. The next time you're looking for something new, try something old. Just because it isn't fresh doesn't mean it's stale. Cheaper by the Dozen and The Silver Chalice are just as good today as when they were released.

Special thanks from the Friends to the Hereford Rotary Club. They raffled off a computer and raised $600.00, toward the purchase of a video projector for the library (and congrats to Jackie Andrews, winner of the PC!). This puts us very near having enough, but we still need a little more. If your business ever shows training or safety videos, consider making a donation to this project. The projector will be available for checkout to businesses and organizations, and that will be a lot cheaper than purchasing one yourself.

We have a couple of new displayers this month, but we didn't have any information at press time. Thanks to David Kaesheimer, Victoria Perez, and Bobby Villarreal for displaying in October. And welcome to Amy Bradley, our new student employee. A senior at HHS, Amy is working through the VOE Program, and we look for good things from her. In the same vein, we wish Veronica Gallegos as she starts college. We will miss her.

Remember that the library will be closed this Saturday through Monday in observance of the Labor Day holiday. Also, we are back on our regular schedule of opening at 9:00 each morning.

BY BEVERLY HARDER

Researchers are finding that inactivity and not aging is to blame for middle-age spread--shriveled muscles, clogged arteries and frail bones.

"Nobody really lives long enough to die of old age. We die from accidents, disease and, most of all, disuse," says Walter M. Bortz II, M.D., an expert on aging at Stanford University. Regular exercise which helps maintain muscle strength and flexibility can allow people to remain independent and active no matter what their age.

In one study, women who exercised for at least 30 minutes three times a week showed no changes in fitness levels until age 50 or over. After 50, fitness levels declined more slowly in exercisers than in less active women. An active 50-year-old typically had the heart and lungs of a sedentary woman in her 30s or even 20s, according to Barbara L. Drinkwater, who conducted the research at the Pacific Medical Center in Seattle, Wash.

In Dallas, researchers at the Institute for Aerobics found that the better aerobic fitness program people have, the longer they are likely to live. They found that people did not have to engage in such strenuous exercises as marathon runners. A simple 30-minute walk each day was believed to be enough to give a person's longevity a boost.

A Johns Hopkins University study found that exercise also lowers blood pressure, reduces cholesterol levels and improves heart function at least as effectively--and in some cases more so--than exercise combined with drugs. Also, numerous studies have shown that regular workouts reduce the risk of bone fractures associated with osteoporosis.

Staying active helps maintain a healthy weight, which reduces the risk of numerous diseases such as heart disease, cancer and diabetes. This is because muscle is "metabolically active." It consumes fuel even when people are at rest, said William J. Evans, chief of the physiology lab at Tufts' Human Nutrition Research Center on Aging. On the other hand, fat just sits there hoarding energy. The more muscle people have, the faster they burn body fat and food. They have less worry about gaining excess weight.

To achieve and maintain physical fitness, the American College of Sports Medicine recommends the following:

-Twenty to 60 minutes of aerobic exercise three to five times a week. Any activity that is continuous, rhythmic and uses large muscle groups, such as the muscles in your legs and upper body will improve your aerobic fitness, strengthening your heart and lungs and improving your muscles' ability to use oxygen efficiently. Walking, jogging, dancing, bicycling and swimming are all good choices. When exercising, you should feel as if you are exerting yourself but you should never be out of breath, dizzy or faint, your muscles should not burn and you should never experience actual pain.

-Five to 10 minutes of warming up and cooling down, including flexibility exercises, before and after an aerobic workout. By taking your body through a full range of motion, stretching can improve flexibility and help you stay mobile as you grow older. Many people also find stretching helps them to relax. Keep movements slow and gentle. Avoid bouncing or jerking and stretch only as far as is comfortable.

-About 20 minutes of strength training two or three times a week, in addition to regular aerobics and stretching.

Law requires organic certification

Producers, processors, retailers must be approved

AUSTIN -- A law enacted by the Texas Legislature last spring ensures consumers that organic produce and other organic goods have been produced by organic methods.

The legislative action became effective Sept. 1 and requires all organic goods to be certified, said Rick Perry, Texas commissioner of Agriculture.

"Prior to our law change, consumers had to assume everything labeled organic was in fact organic," said Perry. "With these new requirements, producers claiming to be organic will have to meet our strict requirements of proof showing they did use organic production methods."

"When the federal government was looking for a model to base its new national organic standards on, they came to Texas," Perry said.

Whether people are seeking conventionally or organically grown food, Texas farmers and TDA are guaranteeing that consumers have plenty of access to both, said the commissioner.

"Organic farming and the consumption of organic foods is a matter of taste," Perry continued. "We've got folks who want to consumer organic produce and others who prefer traditionally grown produce. The bottom line is that our food, no matter what growing methods are used, is safe."

"The National Academy of Sciences report has given us another step in the right direction to determine what negligible effects minute pesticide residue levels might have on children. This report is no making the statement that our food supply is unsafe."

Perry pointed out that organic agriculture also uses chemicals, but chemicals that occur naturally, not synthetically. One example is pyrethrum, a chrysanthemum plant extract that is so effective that scientists developed a synthetic copy called pyrethroid. Pyrethroids are used in conventional agriculture.

"Certified organic doesn't mean Mother Nature, manure and sunshine," he said. "There are some chemicals that can still be used to control pests. Mother Nature's got a lot of her own chemicals."

Perry and Senators Teel Bivins of Amarillo and Eddie Lucio of Brownsville and Representative Debra Danburg of Houston pushed for passage of the law which is designed to strengthen the TDA organics program.

Under the law which takes effect Sept. 1, all producers, processors, distributors and retailers who sell organic products must be certified by TDA. Currently, organic certification is voluntary.

Certification fees will be based on gross dollars earned through sales, processing or products handled. The program also will begin accrediting private third parties to conduct inspections and certify producers and businesses.

In addition, the legislation allows TDA to levy fines and penalties or stop sales for non-compliance with its Organic Standards and Certification Program.

With more consumers perhaps interested in organic produce following a recent National Academy of Sciences report on pesticides and children's diets, Perry also pointed out that Texas is not only at the forefront in conventional agricultural practices, but also in organic methods.

In fact, TDA is a recognized national and historic leader in assisting the state's farmers who choose to produce organic food and organic cotton, Perry said.

Fake fat given high rating

WASHINGTON (AP) - Fake fat finishes first.

Or among the first, anyway. Oatrim, a fat substitute created at an Agriculture Department laboratory, was named one of the 100 most significant technologies of 1993 in a science magazine survey.

Developed for health-conscious consumers, Oatrim is used in many foods already on the market, including cookies, muffins, no-fat cheese, extra-lean ground beef, bologna and franks.

A panel of 75 scientific experts and editors chose Oatrim as one of 100 award winners for Research and Development magazine. Entries were judged on novelty as well as lasting contribution to technology and science. Winners were not ranked.

TAES research keys on dual problem

LUBBOCK -- Protecting the environment and safeguarding crops against pests are two equally important viewpoints that are often in conflict.

Researchers at the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station in Lubbock are finding ways to accomplish both objectives through the use of an advanced chemigation system.

Such a system being developed at TAES aims to combine a high-speed low energy precision application center pivot with a low volume nozzle system.

This combination would allow farmers to apply a broad range of chemicals to their crops through the irrigation system in much lower water volumes, said Dr. William Lyle, professor of irrigation engineering at TAES. It also would aid in decreasing chemical wash-off and thus increase the effectiveness of the system.

Most current irrigation and chemigation systems being used involve a noncontinuous (start-stop) movement that could cause uneven coverage if applying chemicals with the new nozzle system, Lyle said.

The new nozzles have a smaller coverage area so when the system stops, the majority of the pesticide would be applied in one area, resulting in an overdose. When the system starts again, an inadequate amount of chemical may end up being applied in other areas.

Commercial systems now being used have the capacity of running about six to 12 feet per minute. The new system being developed has the ability to run six to eight times faster, at 60 feet per minute, said Lyle.

The developing auxiliary nozzle system also used about a third to a fourth the volume of water compared to the commercial system, he continued. Using less water eliminates a lot of the wash-off problems that occur with traditional chemigation.

Lyle said the advanced system will get three times as much of the chemical to the target area. More of the chemical being applied at a lower dispersion rate is the objective both researchers and environmentalists are aiming for.

To help accomplish this, the system delivers water from a LEPA-type nozzle arrangements. The water is supplied upward to reach the underside of the leaves where the majority of the insects are.

Research with tracers in corn in cotton has shown good results with the new system so far, said Lyle.

He said that although the new system is more expensive initially, it should prove itself to be economically feasible because of its effects in decreasing the quantity and rate of chemicals in application.

Adoption of this advanced chemigation system should provide for the uniform application of a wide variety of agricultural chemicals through irrigation systems, Lyle said. In the future this should help protect the environment as well as save money for the farmer who implements the system.

It's official: state fruit is Texas red grapefruit

AUSTIN -- Texans like to brag but usually back up their claims with proof -- and the Texas red grapefruit is another example of that spirit.

Texas Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry noted that Governor Ann Richards signed a proclamation designating the "State Fruit of Texas."

A resolution to recognize the grapefruit with the special designation was passed unanimously by the 73rd Legislature.

Production of feed grain to be lower

WASHINGTON (AP) - Once again, farmers can blame the rain - or the lack of it.

Economists at the Agriculture Department are predicting that feed grain production in 1993 will be down 21 percent from last year to 218.7 million tons.

It's the crop forecaster's mantra: "Excessive rain in states along the upper Mississippi and lower Missouri rivers and drought in the mid-Atlantic and southeastern states"

Surplus grain from 1992 offset some of the losses, putting total feed grain available this year at 284.4 million tons, 9 percent fewer tons than the year before.

Use of feed grain is expected to decline 3 percent and exports will be down as well to their lowest levels since 1986, USDA said. However, the use of grain for food, seed and industrial purposes will rise with higher production of ethanol and corn sweeteners, it said.

Production of corn is forecast to decline 22 percent, to 7.4 billion bushels. Farmers are expected to abandon crops hurt by the bad weather and didn't plant as much land as intended, USDA said.

Supplies of hay should be down 3 percent from last year, a combination of a 1 percent increase in production and a 7 million-ton drop in surplus stocks from last year. Alfalfa hay quality has also been damaged by the flooding.

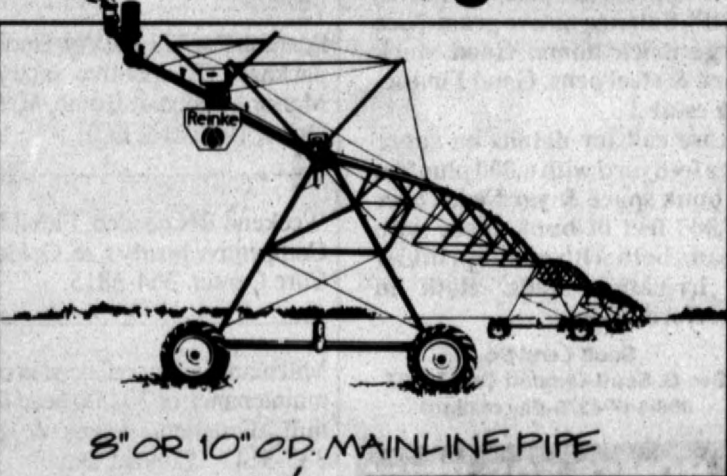

"We all know that the Texas red grapefruit is the sweetest around," said Perry. "Growers in the Rio Grande Valley developed that rich red interior, and the popularity of the fruit continues to increase. We're very proud of the citrus industry. We can talk economic impact, but to most of us, this Texas ingenuity and pride in producing the best, means a delicious red grapefruit on our table."

Nearly 20,000 acres of grapefruit trees are planted in Texas, and the Texas red grapefruit generates more revenue than any other tree fruit produced in the state. The Rio Star makes up 62 percent of the red grapefruit while the Ruby-Sweet accounts for 30 percent.

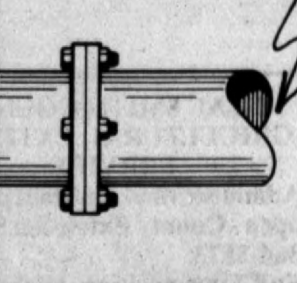

"Our growers are rebounding very well from the 1989 freeze and expect to have a great harvest this year," Perry said. "We are proud of all our agricultural products, but we're proud when Texas growers are recognized for developing a great product."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - Country singer-actress K.T. Oslin said she went through menapausal depression last year that curtailed her career.

"I found out that I was completely disinterested in everything," Oslin, 51, said in an interview published Saturday in The Tennessean.

"Writing (songs) became something that I didn't even think about. I wasn't interested enough to even think of anything to write. I wouldn't take my mail. I wasn't interested in going to the movies.

"I wouldn't check my phone messages for a week. Oh, maybe I checked them and maybe I heard them; and maybe I just sat there and stared into space. I just couldn't take care of business."

She said she "joined the human race again" after she stopped taking doctor-prescribed hormones.

Now in stores is her "Songs from an Aging Sex Bomb: Greatest Hits CD." Past hit records include "80's Ladies" and "Come Next Monday."

Oslin recently appeared in the made-for-TV movie "Poisoned by Love" and the film "The Thing Called Love."

False starts, broken strings: Long-delayed 'Band' debuts

Saturday on HBO, Matthew Modine portrays Dr. Don Francis in HBO's adaptation of "And the Band Played On," Randy Shilts' best seller investigating the early years of the AIDS epidemic. The film's all-star supporting cast includes Richard Gere, Lily Tomlin, Steve Martin, Alan Alda, Ian McKellen and Anjelica Huston.

BY STEVEN ALAN MCGAW

Writer Randy Shilts completed his manuscript of "And the Band Played On," a carefully researched chronicle of the AIDS epidemic, on March 15, 1986. At 600 pages, the detailed history spared no one from the journalistic microscope, from indifferent government officials and health agencies plagued by egos and one-upmanship to gay politicians more concerned with image than saving lives. The following year, to the surprise of many in the media both gay and straight, it became a much-talked-about best seller.

One day after completing his book, Shilts was diagnosed as being HIV-positive. True to the warnings he had heard and recorded, AIDS proved it would spare no one.

Once again Shilts has surprised onlookers, this time by so far surviving the disease, and on Saturday, Sept. 11, he will see his work in a new form. Matthew Modine ("Birdy," "Full Metal Jacket") heads the cast of HBO's three-hour adaptation of "And the Band Played On."

Ironically, the process of bringing Shilts' book to the screen has been hampered by the same timidity and fence-straddling depicted in his book. Shilts says, "I'm glad it's over."

Within days of its publication, film rights to the book were snapped up by NBC, with loudly trumpeted plans for a four-hour miniseries. Emmy winner John Gay was hired to write the script.

Two years later, however, after twice renewing the option on the book, NBC quietly relinquished its hold on Shilts' story amid rumors that the network had corporate cold feet about a project necessarily sympathetic to homosexuals and critical of the Reagan administration. The same day, rights to the property were obtained by cable powerhouse HBO, led by producer Aaron Spelling.

With typical breast-beating, HBO press releases made much of the network's "courage and commitment" in bringing Shilts' book to television. HBO's original films have frequently tackled difficult topics such as thalidomide babies, abortion and negligent military contractors.

But the path to getting "Band" started was still far from level. In 1991, the project was revived, with Joel Schumacher slated to direct. He left a year later, citing "creative differences." Dick Pearce was named as his replacement but departed after only a few months. All the while, writer Arnold Schulman was working his way through 17 drafts of the script.

Casting the film proved difficult, with high-profile actors apparently terrified to take on a gay role. Richard Gere broke the deadlock.

In October 1992, cameras started rolling. Roger Spottiswoode was in as

Spielberg to set a 'seaQuest' on NBC

AT A GLANCE

By LYNN ELBER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Steven Spielberg turned the ocean into a realm of murky danger and mayhem in "Jaws," which made 1970s filmmakers very uneasy about getting wet.

Now Spielberg is making amends with "seaQuest DSV," an NBC television series that celebrates the wonder and excitement of deep-sea exploration in the world of the future.

The drama stars "Jaws" alumnus Roy Scheider as captain of the 1,000-foot-long seaQuest DSV (deep submergence vehicle). It debuts 8 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 12, with a special two-hour episode.

"SeaQuest" is part science, it's part fiction and it's part complete and pure fantasy," Spielberg says. But the skittish need not worry about scare tactics.

"Our show is aimed at the family audience, my own included," Spielberg said in videotaped remarks for reporters. "Anybody who couldn't see 'Jurassic Park' can certainly feel safe watching an episode of 'seaQuest.'"

David J. Burke, co-executive producer with Spielberg, agrees. He reminisces fondly about shows in the early years of television that drew families together.

"Everybody sat in the room and watched 'Roy Rogers' and 'Sky King' and 'Bonanza,'" he said. Does he have a show like that? "We'll get to it," he says.

NBC has approved 22 episodes, a vote of confidence in a time when network orders are shrinking to as few as six episodes.

Set in the year 2018, "seaQuest" concocts a world in which multinational confederations have begun to set up shop overseas with huge colonies and mining concerns.

Nathan Bridger (Scheider), a former military man who turned to scientific research after personal tragedy, is lured back into service to take command of the seaQuest, the vessel he designed.

Stephanie Beacham, veering away from her "Dynasty" glamour, plays the chief of the ship's scientific contingent. Also on hand is Bridger's buddy Ensign Darwin - a bottlenose dolphin trained for reconnaissance.

The ship's mission: to explore the undersea universe and protect vulnerable colonies.

That sounds like a watery "Star Trek." But the show's creators insist the likeness is only superficial.

"I love 'Star Trek,'" says Phil Segal, vice president of Spielberg's production company, Amblin, which is co-producing the series with Universal Television. "But I think 'Star Trek' is a very different show."

"SeaQuest" is set in the relatively near future and in an environment that, unlike space, is accessible to all, Segal says.

"It's a frontier we can get very close to. We can touch it, we can taste it, and we can swim in it. I think it's very intriguing."

Segal's voice becomes pitched with excitement when he talks about the promise of the sea, and how "seaQuest" intends to explore it.

"It's a show about our future," he says. Earth's exploding population uses only 28 percent of the planet. When it looks to new areas to settle, the sea is more practical than outer space, Segal argues.

With famed underwater explorer Robert D. Ballard as consultant, the series aims at introducing viewers to the ocean's real (and imagined) wonders.

Computer-generated special effects will send bioluminescent creatures scurrying across TV screens. The seaQuest will cruise to undersea ports and even, in one episode, the ancient, rediscovered library of Alexandria.

There are traditional sets: about 20 percent of the sub has been built on five soundstages at Universal, including the helm, crew quarters and a pool that serves as an entry-exit point to the sea.

But computer images, created by more than a dozen people using a special software package, are key, said production designer Richard Lewis.

"They allow us to give a sense of scale, of epicness," he said. "It will give us those great Spielbergian moments - like 'Close Encounters' or 'Jurassic.'"

"It simply allows us to have a huge, huge moment in the show."

That doesn't necessarily mean a huge budget, Segal says. He insists that, despite reports, "seaQuest" costs no more than the $1 million-per-episode TV average.

"We have been beaten senselessly about this," he says, clearly frustrated. "Unfortunately, it's because of the man we work for," a reference to Spielberg.

"We're very proud of our special effects, and we do think the audience is going to be wowed by them," Segal says. "But they are not the end all, be all for the show."

"The idea is that this is a character-driven piece. It is not a hardware show."

That is why Spielberg and Amblin went after Scheider, whose is taking on his first TV series. They wanted someone who could give Bridger authority and portray his complexity, Segal says.

It was the character and the show's intriguing premise that convinced him to do the series, says Scheider, not just the Spielberg connection.

"It's nice to have his name up there, and he's an old pal, but he's not going to keep them in their seat every Sunday night," said the actor, relaxing briefly during rehearsals.

The show is smart and ambitious, he says.

"We've got such a window of science and discovery, it's going to give an audience a lot to talk about Monday morning."

SUNDAY:

Animated fun abounds as Fox presents "Tiny Toons: How I Spent My Summer Vacation," and TBS offers "The Jetsons Meet the Flintstones." A woman (Jill Eikenberry) becomes suspicious of her husband's true intentions in "Living a Lie" on NBC. Peter Coyote co-stars. Don Rickles and Richard Lewis play father-and-son roommates in the Fox sitcom "Daddy Dearest."

"Tiny Toons"

MONDAY: The Super Bowl champion Dallas Cowboys take on the Washington Redskins in the first "ABC Monday Night Football" game of the season. PBS offers a two-hour "Ghostwriter Special" as part of its back-to-school week. A&E marks Labor Day with an all-day "Home Again" marathon.

TUESDAY: The entertainment special "Readers Digest: On Television" airs on ABC. John Mendoza stars in the starting-over sitcom "The Second Half" on NBC. "The Chevy Chase Show" takes its place as Fox's late-night entry. James Earl Jones and Billy Dee Williams star in the boxing drama "Percy and Thunder" on TNT.

WEDNESDAY: Season premieres of "Beverly Hills, 90210" and "Melrose Place" grace Fox. The Discovery Channel takes a look at the Australian monsoon season in "The Big Wet." A south Bronx, N.Y., arts school is examined in "Something Within Me" on PBS.

THURSDAY: A payola scam is uncovered in a special episode of PBS' innovative "Mathnet."

FRIDAY: David Duchovny stars in the Fox drama "The X-Files," in which the FBI meets the paranormal. PBS presents "Gangs: Dreams Under Fire." Showtime takes a satirical look at the entertainment industry in "Sex, Shock & Censorship in the '90s." A&E offers part one of the two-part "Ancient Mysteries" episode "Mysteries of the Bible." The conclusion airs Friday, Sept. 17.

SATURDAY: Matthew Modine, Alan Alda and Richard Gere star in the "And the Band Played On," an HBO drama chronicling the early years of the AIDS epidemic. Robert Foxworth and Kate Mulgrew star in the CBS Civil War tale "Shenandoah."

director, with an impressive cast including Ian McKellen, Lily Tomlin, Steve Martin, Alan Alda, Phil Collins and Anjelica Huston, some of whom eventually asked for a part, any part, in the project.

But the story doesn't end there. Since the filming ended, Spottiswoode has found himself at war with HBO over the film's final edit. A fiery gay rights speech was in, then out, then in again. Ditto for a male-to-male kiss. The director himself quit the project, then returned a short time later.

"I'm proud to be associated with this project," says Modine, who portrays research scientist Dr. Don Francis. "More people than I care to count have died (from the disease)."

'NFL Prime Monday' premieres on ESPN

BY MICHAEL SCOGIN

ESPN launches a revamped version of its "Monday Night Matchup" program on Sept. 6, when it debuts "NFL Prime Monday," a 90-minute program that promises much more than just an analysis of that week's ABC "Monday Night Football" game.

Host Mike Tirico is joined by ESPN analysts Joe Theisman and Craig James, while former NFL quarterback

Ron Jaworski contributes scouting reports for that evening's game. An ESPN commentator and an ABC "Monday Night Football" analyst join the group from the site of the game. Chris Mortensen updates viewers on the latest NFL news and notes.

Other new wrinkles include a live interview with a standout from Sunday's NFL action, a reporters' roundtable featuring the country's top sports journalists, NFL Playbook (an X's and O's look at the game) and an NFL Soundtracks segment that microphones players. Distant Replay uses NFL Films footage to provide a "Monday Night Football" history of the two teams.

Former MTV personality "Downtown" Julie Brown checks in with an interview with an NFL player that focuses on lifestyle and personalities.

"I'm going to be the E in ESPN -- entertainment," says Brown. "This is right up my alley. No matter how much you know about someone, you can always learn more."

Beloved performer recovering; Bakula moves to 'Murphy Brown'

BY TAYLOR MICHAELS

Q: What has happened to Minnie Pearl? I listen to "Nashville Now" and all the western shows, but nobody mentions her name. Is she still alive? --Clara M. Andersen, Fortuna, Calif.

A: Sarah Ophelia Colley, who has played Minnie Pearl for half a century, is recovering from a stroke she suffered more than a year ago. Happily, though, the beloved entertainer is making progress.

Born in Centerville, Tenn., in 1912, Colley was a fan of the fine arts from her childhood and studied acting at Nashville's Ward Belmont College (now Belmont University). A job with a touring theater company led Colley to the development of her simple but insightful country-girl character, Minnie Pearl. Encouraged by her friends to audition for the Grand Ole Opry, she landed a spot as a cast regular in 1940. She moved into television when the Opry did in ABC's 1955 favorite "Grand Ole Opry." Her other television credits include "Jubilee" and, of course, "Hee Haw." A bold and charitable figure off the stage, Colley beat breast cancer and was presented the American Cancer Society's Courage Award by President Ronald Reagan for her work as an ACS volunteer. Humble despite her worldwide stardom, she once said, "The price tag on (Minnie Pearl's) hat seems to be symbolic of all human frailty. There's old Minnie standing on stage in her best dress, telling everybody how proud she is to be there, and she's forgotten to take the $1.98 price tag off her hat."

Q: I saw the 1955 movie "The Spiral Staircase" on public television and thought it was great. Is it available on video? --A.S. Wiscasset, Portland, Maine.

A: The film, made in 1946, stars Dorothy McGuire as a mute servant in an eerie Gothic mansion. It is available on both videotape and laserdisc. Ask your local video store for ordering information. A lukewarm 1975 television version, starring Jacqueline Bisset and Christopher Plummer, has also been released on video.

Q: I am a big fan of "Quantum Leap" star Scott Bakula. Can you give me some biographical information about him? Has he studied music? --Ann Warren, Cookeville, Tenn.

A: Bakula's vocal talents, which shone at the age of 13 when he sang with the St. Louis Symphony, earned him a 1988 Tony nomination for his performance in the musical "Romance, Romance." As a young man in St. Louis, he enjoyed soccer and tennis and performed in amateur musical productions of "Godspell," "Fiddler on the Roof" and "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat." After a year at the University of Kansas, he returned to St. Louis to work in community theater. Bakula moved to New York in 1976 and landed roles in the stage productions of "Shenandoah," "Three Guys Naked from the Waist Down" and "Accentuate the Positive." He made his Broadway debut as Joe DiMaggio in "Marilyn: An American Fable." His film credits include "The Last Fling," "Necessary Roughness" and "Sibling Rivalry." Bakula has appeared on the TV series "My Sister Sam," "Designing Women" and "Matlock." Look for him as a regular on "Murphy Brown" in the fall.

Gibbons co-host of telethon for fourth consecutive year

BY SCOTT WHITE

Leeza Gibbons, co-host of the "MDA Jerry Lewis Telethon" for four years, believes she has found the common thread that makes the Muscular Dystrophy Association such an attractive cause for celebrities to support.

"So many people tell me that they are involved because of Jerry (Lewis)," says Gibbons. "He is a walking piece of history, and his dedication and singular focus have been so instrumental in getting a lot of people on line to support his cause."

The 28th annual telethon is a 22-hour live telecast airing in syndication (check local listings) Sunday, Sept. 5, through Monday, Sept. 6. Gibbons says that Lewis brings an intensity to the set that keeps the participants energized during the lengthy event.

"Watching him astounds me every time I do his event. ... I always thought it was just myth that the guy never creased his pants. But he has a 'lean board,' and he will rest against it, but he won't sit down."

Even so, Gibbons is still looking for the perfect method of pacing herself during the marathon.

"I remember the first year I sort of scientifically approached it and had this high carbohydrate refueling schedule. And that worked fine, but the next year I just threw that out the window and drank a lot of coffee, and that worked, too."

According to Gibbons, viewers who stay with the telethon into the wee hours may be rewarded with zany celebrity antics.

"Your internal governing monitor is just turned off for those hours," she notes. "and it's, like, anything goes, which makes it more fun."

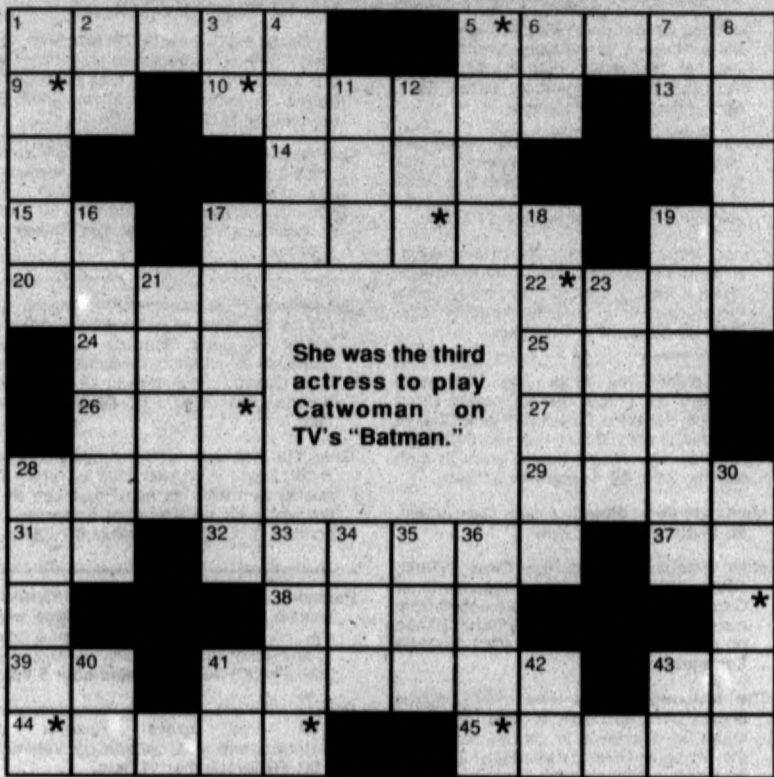

"My lowest moment in television throughout my entire career happened on the telethon. I was cutting up, and it was the middle of the night, and I figured, OK, here's the chance to do something risky. So I wrote a telethon rap, and I went out and tried to sing it. Let me tell you, it was not a pretty sight. I looked like a Barbie doll with no rhythm trying to be hip. ... You won't be seeing that this year, I can promise you that."

Comic and humanitarian Jerry Lewis will be joined once again by co-host Leeza Gibbons in "The 1993 MDA Jerry Lewis Labor Day Telethon," airing Sunday and Monday in syndication (check local listings).

SOAP WORLD

CBS has high hopes for 'Angel Falls'

BY CANDACE HAVENS

It looked as though there was going to be a void in the world of prime time after CBS canceled 'Knots Landing' last season. It was the end of an era for nighttime soaps. But this season CBS has come to the rescue with a new soap based on a small town in Montana, called 'Angel Falls.'

Will it have the glitz and glamour of 'Knots Landing'? Probably not, but it does promise passion and reality.

'Angel Falls,' which debuted Aug. 26, is the story of a woman, Rae Dawn Show (Chelsea Fields). After her father dies, Rae Dawn goes home to the small town where she was raised. Once there, her life becomes intertwined with the lives of those who never left. She meets the man she was in love with years ago and realizes she still has the same passion for him.

The show's writer and co-executive producer, Joyce Eliason, knows her material. She is from a small town in Utah, and many of the things she writes about are culled from her own experiences -- although she is quick to point out that the show is not based on any one particular town or person.

"When you are from a small town, you make these lifetime friendships because you know these people from the time you are a little child until you grow up and leave," says Eliason. "Then you go away, but you still have these dreams from when you were a child, and they are connected to this place. Whenever I go home, it is like I never left because I always have that connection. It is strange but comforting."

Eliason says there is a reason for placing 'Angel Falls' in Montana. "There is kind of a mythical feeling about the American West. There are still things that are open and free there, and there is still good air to breathe and clear streams. In a way it is a little bit of a fantasy that you can go back there, find love and be a part of the wild frontier."

'Angel Falls' has an impressive cast, including Peggy Lipton, Kim Cattrall, James Brolin, Brian Kerwin and Cassidy Rae. But only time and ratings will tell if the show is a success.

Brian Kerwin portrays a man torn between two beautiful women, his former lover and his restless wife (Kim Cattrall), in "Angel Falls," airing Thursdays on CBS.
