Combined tax rates lower than projections

By SPEEDY NIEMAN Editor-Publisher

The effective tax rates for local taxing entities have been certified by the Deaf Smith Tax Appraisal District, and the good news is that th combined rates are lower than the projections mailed to taxpayers in June, chief appraiser Fred Fox reported today.

For a taxpayer residing in the city, the combined rate sent out with reappraisal notices in June amounted to $1.66 per $100 valuation. That includes city, county, school district, hospital district and water district.

The combined rate, according to the effective rates published as public notices in today's Brand, for a city taxpayer adds up to $1.597 per $100 valuation. Don't count your rate of .7 cent per $100 value. The City of Hereford and the Deaf figures, and the city is expected to do the same.

Fox said he expects the rates to settle at around $1.62, which would still be four cents lower than the projections. The school district shows an effective rate of 68.499 and trustees rounded off the actual rate of 69 cents per $100 value. The county shows an effective rate of 40.045, and commissioners adopted a rate of 40.99. The High Plains Underground Water District remains at the projected 6.3-cent-saving yet, however, because there's a difference between effective rate and actual rate.

The taxing units can increase the effective rate up to 3 percent without public notice or public hearing. The To settle near $1.62 school district and county have already adopted slightly higher Smith Hospital District have yet to formally adopt their rates. Fox expects the city to increase its rate slightly over the effective rate of 40.744 while he is not certain what the hospital board of directors will do with their effective rate of 9.733 cents per $100 valuation.

For a county resident, who is outside the city limits but in the Hereford school district and the water district, the combined effective rate adds up to $1.204. A taxpayer in the Walcott district is looking at a combined rate of $1.272 per $100 valuation.

If all those figures make it confusing, let's try an example:

A taxpayer with a $50,000 house saw his valuation go to $100,000 with the revaluation. His tax rate dropped from $2.23 per $100 to $1.66 under the projections in June. His taxes would om $1,115 to $1,660-an increase of 49 percent. If the actual rate setties at $1.62, his taxes would be $1,620-an increase of "only" 45 per-

Hard-hit city dwellers may not think of that as a saving, however, because they're still reeling from the big increase in values. What the

Few local stores plan to open Sunday under Blue Law repeal

By GINDY SMITH Staff Writer

Only about a half dozen stores in Hereford will be open on Sunday under repeal of the Texas Blue Law unless other businesses are economically threatened by and opt to open also.

"We will open up if we are forced to by the other stores," stated one store owner.

Can Hereford expect more business or will business be spread out over seven days instead of six? customers. Will the opening of the stores keep more people in Hereford to shop? One of the more vocal managers was Raymond DeIorio, manager of M.E. Moses at Sugarland Mall. "We'll have new help on Sunday's and I don't think it (the repeal) will help. Business will just be spread out over seven days instead of six," said Delorio. "My regular employees won't be working on Sundays, they work enough hours during the week, not to mention seeing their families," said DeIorio.

About the sabbath, Deloroio speculates, "We are made in His image ... why should we be better than him?" He went on to say we should be in church worshipping like we always do on Sundays. "Why should we overide his laws?'

And on another level, DeIorio explained that in 1962 when the law went into effect, he had been with

Under mandantory evacuation

Half-million people flee hurricane

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) -Hurricane Elena doubled its pace toward Florida's Gulf Coast Saturday morning, summoning flooding tides, heavy rain and gales as a halfmillion people fled what authorities called "certain injury or death."

Gov. Bob Graham ordered the mandatory evacuation of about 573,000 people from low-lying coastal areas in 10 counties from just southeast of Tallahassee to south of St. Petersburg.

Thousands of coastal residents fled the approaching storm, which packed sustained winds of 100 mph, clogged the main highway out of the Pinellas County peninsula, where St. Petersburg and Clearwater are

At least 264,000 coastal residents must be evacuated from their homes in the county, which has shelter for only 158,000, said Joy McIlwain, spokeswoman for the state emergency management office.

"We've got the dilemma of trying to get those people off the islands around the Tampa Bay area and it'll take a long time to do it, and I'm not really sure if the storm is going to give us that much time," Neil Frank, director of the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables, said Satur-

Meanwhile, four confirmed tornadoes spawned by the hurricane touched down in Pasco County, just to the north, where Graham sent about 30 National Guardsmen, extra state police officers and equipment to assist with evacuation, Ms. McIlwain said.

"It's a madhouse," said a sheriff's deputy in Pasco County, where authorities reported many traffic accidents, along with sporadic power outages and some damage to homes and a government center due to high

Some people refused to leave their homes in Bronson, where 50 mph winds were blowing, said Civil Defense spokesman Perry Geiger, who added, "We've had a little bit of evidence of looting." He would not elaborate. Elena's winds reached 100 mph, with gusts to 110 mph.

By Saturday morning the storm center was more than 100 miles offshore and the gale-force winds were already affecting portions of the Florida coast, according to hurricane forecaster Miles Lawrence.

At 9 a.m. Saturday, the storm's center was near latitude 28.8 north and longitude 84.4 west, about 80 miles west-southwest of Cedar Key. Elena headed east-northeast at 10 mph after wandering at 5 mph or less for much of Friday.

The hurricane center on Saturday predicted a 42 percent chance that Elena's center would pass within 65 miles of Cedar Key, about 80 miles north of the Tampa-St. Petersburg area, within 24 hours, hurricane forecaster Bob Case said.

Extremely heavy traffic was reported Saturday on all major arteries from St. Petersburg Beach as people, some on foot and carrying bags, canteens and coolers, fled, authorities said. Nearly 350 National Guard troops were called up to hasten evacuations and oppose looters.

"There are rains, heavy squalls and showers moving into the areas north of Tampa," said forecaster Mark Zimmer at the Hurricane Center. Up to 10 inches of rain was possible from north of Tampa to Apalachicola, he said.

Winds to 55 mph were reported at Sarasota while St. Petersburg recorded some at 40 mph as Elena approached. Hurricane warnings were posted from Panama City to Sarasota, with gale warnings south to Fort Myers.

Forecasters ended hurricane warnings in Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and the westernmost Florida Panhandle, and extended them south as Elena shifted.

Before the storm changed course, 145,000 people had fled homes and of-

She started her diet when she got home from the doctor's office.

Reading calorie books, she realized that if eating the right foods she would still get the nutrition she needed. Right foods are meats, vegetables and fruits without dressings, gravy, grease and oils.

She says summer is an excellent time to diet because all the vegetable and fruits are fresh.

She has acquired a taste for plain food and says the flavor is really better. Greasy fried foods make her almost sick now.

Her husband, Lewis, is enviously thin. However he has joined her on the diet and enjoys it. He is eating less indigestion tablets, too.

"You're used to pigging out. You know, a diet just scares a fat person to death. I was paranoid about them. I just hated them. By CANDICE HUGHES Associated Press Writer DALLAS (AP) - As much as anything, the sound stages at Las Colinas are a symbol of the Texas film business.

The studio, part of mega-developer Trammell S. Crow's lavish planned community just outside Dallas, opened with a bang in 1982 when the hit film "Silkwood" was shot there.

It turned out to be a hard act to follow. Since "Silkwood," only a handful of feature films have been made at the Dallas Communications Complex.

But Joe Pope, president of the Bag limits under the 100-point system were reduced to five birds a day, compared with a maximum of about 10 last year. The season for duck and coot in the eastern part of the state would be Nov. 2-5, Nov. 23-Dec. 8 and Dec. 14 days, the same as last year. For dark geese, the season is Nov. 2-Dec. 8 and Dec. 16-Jan. 19, the same 72 days as last year.

In the western portion of the state, the season for geese is Nov. 29-Jan.

The bag limit for quail was set at 12 with 36 in possession, the same as last year.

complex, rejects the notion that the studio has been a disappointment, despite the fact that it has yet to turn

"It basically was developed to be part of the local industry, not for Hollywood," Pope says. "It's symbolic to what the industry in Texas is going to be."

The Studio at Las Colinas, which has three sound stages, stays fairly. busy with commercials, industrial films, some music video work and as a rehearsal site for rock stars preparing for tours.

"If we could keep the stages filled with commercials and industrial production, I'd probably prefer that," Pope says. "It's easier."

Pope says he mainly tries to attract the high-profile film work to "keep the Dallas image up" and keep busy the complex tenants, who range from caterers and talent agencies to recording studios and film

"Clearly Las Colinas has become a highly visible symbol of the Texas film industry, probably more than it is due," says Joel Smith, head of the Texas Film Commission.

Smith also points out that even though Las Colinas has failed to attract many feature films, the movie business is flourishing on the socalled Third Coast. In 1983 and 1984. 60 features were shot on location in Texas, including three of the five Academy Award nominees for Best Picture in 1984.

Meanwhile, the Studio at Las Colinas lost about $1 million last year and it probably will continue to lose money over the next five years or so,

"A development like this, by its nature, would incur some loss in a five-to seven-year term," he says.

The first phase of the Dallas Communications Complex, which now has about 100 tenants, cost $35 million, including the $10 million

An ambitious, long-range plan forsees vast additions that eventually will cover more than 100 acres.

"As the need arises, we will be build more stages," Pope says. "It will probably be less high tech and more geared to a specific type of use such as video or theatrical or commercial."

In addition to "Silkwood," the studio was used in the Robert Altman film "Streamers," Universal Productions' "Time Bomb," "Trip to Bountiful," "Voyeur" and "Ellie."

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) - Sunny Allen sat in the cavernous room. thinking about the burned-out cop and the trembling junkie caught between '60s "flower power" and '80s "yuppie-dom."

If that weren't enough, she still had to deal with a mercenary running a survival school and a bisexual protennis player.

Ms. Allen is the creator of "The Room," a low-budget cable television soap opera airing on Galveston's Group W Cable three times a week. The soap is taped on Fridays along with Ms. Allen's local "Galveston Magazine."

"Fridays are no fun sometimes," said Ms. Allen, who commutes between homes in Houston and Galveston. "But in this business, it

The "business" is nothing new to Ms. Allen, a Galveston native who has appeared in numerous commericals and several Hollywood features filmed in Houston. She came up with the idea for the soap about 18 months ago while hosting a talk show.

"For about a year, I told people talk shows are getting old and need some new slant," Ms. Allen said. "I told them we could put a mini-soap on a talk show where a lot of things could be done in 10 to 15 minutes."

"The Room" was born. Since its debut earlier this summer, the soap is catching on with Galveston viewers. Ms. Allen said two Houston talk shows are interested in the format and the show could move to the mainland in the near future.

The setting is a single, four-walled soundstage located inside Group W offices. It serves as the soap set and the room for Ms. Allen's talk show.

In true soap style, everyone has problems.

Based on a group therapy session, "The Room" has a cast of characters that make the patients on the old "Bob Newhart Show" look normal.

There's a high-class hooker, a redneck, a child-woman abused by her husband and a college professor looking for the baby she gave up for adoption.

Even "Dr. Paul," the therapist, has a problem. His is Nancy, an escaped mental patient who happens to be his girlfriend.

The diversified cast revolves in and out of the room in different episodes. Most shows have eight characters, though some have 10, Ms. Allen said.

Operating with a tiny budget, Ms. Allen also serves as writer, producer, director and casting agent. Her actors, students in her Houston acting class, work for free.

Kevin Reid, a La Marque native cast as a tennis player, serves as Ms. Allen's assistant for no pay. He's in it for the experience.

'Most people are like Kevein," said Ms. Allen, who also works for no wages. "They donate their time for" the experience and it pays off for some of them."

Even though it's shot less than a mile from the Gulf of Mexico, no setting suns are seen on this soap. There's no money in the budget for such a venture, Ms. Allen said.

"For us to go outside, it would cost about $400 a week that we don't have. I have a condo here that we could shoot at for $250 a week, but that's still too expensive," Ms. Allen said.

"My original idea was a 13-week season to see how things went," she said. "I thought I would be tired of the format after that length, but I'm really not."

If the deal with the Houston stations doesn't pan out, Allen said the show could be put on other cable systems with three solid sponsors.

"The first five shows we did were 10 minutes and they worked really well," she said. "I feel we could work it up to 24 minutes and (with 6 minutes for commercials) make it a good half-hour show.

"Whatever happens, I plan to keep a firm hold on this. I don't want to give up the quality just because of the good price," she said. "That's why I like cable. You can do anything you want."

Hard luck? Sue!

In this democratic society of ours, we seem to be looking at a situation which poses more of a threat than Russia or a nuclear repository dump-it's the growing tendency to "sue somebody."

The tendency has gotten to the point that we seem to have some people moving through life hoping that misfortune strikes them in such a way that they have the basis for a suit against somebody for damages.

Some folks lay the blame at the feet of plaintiff. lawyers, but much of it can be attributed to judges and juries who are generous in their verdicts because of the myth that the money comes from the big insurance companies.

Just as Uncle Sam must first get his money from taxpayers before he freely doles out welfare funds, insurance companies cannot pay claims without first taking the money from employers, institutions, or individuals-and ultimately, the money comes from my pocket and yours.

Life is full of problems, hard luck, misfortunes and tragedies. We doubt the good Lord expected us to blame them all on someone else, and sue for a windfall.

We're not guilty for dropping bomb

Those television networks are gonna have to find someone else to feel guilty about past deeds of this na-

They got the wrong coon up the wrong tree by the wrong dogs if they expect us to feel guilty about the dropping of the atomic bomb on Hiroshima.

The vast outpourings by the networks on the anniversary of that war-ending event left our milk clabbered.

Once upon a time, in the dog days of August in Andrews, we recall that brother Wesley had a hot "shooter" marble and a swollen right thumb to match up with our "taw" agate; and we proceeded to clean up in the marble business.

On a sandy stretch near the old Commercial State building, on a lazy, hot afternoon, we won all the marbles from the two Grissom boys, Preston and Mark, and wiped out the hoard maintained by Byford

We went home in triumph, laden with two heavy sacks of marbles-and immediately ran into disaster. Momma insisted that the marbles be returned to their rightful owners-boys simply didn't play for "keeps."

Over our protests-and Mark's smirking-we gave all the marbles back. Despite all the preachin' and sermonizin' by the folks, we never did feel guilty about our deeds.

To this day, we feel we won those marbles "f'ar and sq'uar" and that the Grissom boys still owe us.

And that's exactly the way we feel about the dropping of the bomb on Hiroshima-we have never felt any guilt about it. At that particular time in history, it was the right decision with the right weapon for the right

Japanese historians, along with American counterparts, agree today that the bomb saved over a million lives as against the 140,000 who died in the blast.

Unless they participated in the World War II effort, peace activities today have no right to second-guess the decisions made 40 years ago.

To go a step further-we don't feel any guilt over the treatment of the Indians by early day settlers in this

The wars with the Indians were rendered by generations at that particular time in history and any guilt belongs to them-not us. The same thing is true of slavery. We don't feel any guilt because of something that happened between generations of another age, another time. We feel compassion-but not guilt-over the poverty conditions in Africa. We feel compassion-but not guilt-over the wretched conditions in old Mexico that forces laborers to seek gainful employment within the confines of their northern neighbors.

And if at some future date, that country turns to a communist dictatorship and eventually starts pouring across the Texas border to subjugate the southern tier of states of this nation, decisions will have to be made.

If through peace protests and weak, ineffectual leadership, this nation does not use every weapon at its command in order to maintain the integrity of its borders against invading forces, then the guilt belongs to the Ed Asners of this generation-not ours.

Our generation stopped Hitler, Mussolini, and Hirohito and preserved the borders not only of this nation but those of England, Australia, France, the Philippines, and others.

If misguided future generations are not willing to shoulder arms in defense of their freedom, the guilt is theirs-not ours. Freedom, as in marbles, is for keeps.

The Penultimate Word

WHAT'S THE RUSH?

There was a day when a cowboy would ride into town to catch a stage coach. If he arrived too late it was no big deal-there would be another stage in about a month. Now we get upset if we miss one section of a revolving door.

Food is now judged more by how fast we can get it than how good it tastes. No one wants to wait for anything. Everything must be instant. Some wag said that the crematories are selling their ashes to cannibals-instant people.

The latest thing is 1-hour film developing. If there is such a rush, why not buy a Polaroid. There are 1-hour dry cleaners and eye glasses in two hours.

What ever happened to patience? Since everything is instant, we are losing the ability to wait for anything. One lady prayed, "Lord, give me patience and give it to me right now."

The result of all of this is we get caught up in the rush of things and suddenly we all feel frazzled and under the gun.

I was in Carrollton, Ohio a few years ago. On the outskirts of town there was a sign announcing Carrollton as the home of the fighting McCooks of Civil War fame. I found out the McCooks were a family of physicians who were nearly all killed in the Civil War. I also discovered that the McCook home had become a museum. I decided to visit the place.

Now, Carrollton is not on the way to anywhere. There are no tourists. The locals have already been through the museum. The result of these facts means there are about three visitors a week at the museum.

I went into that place, signed the book, and paid my quarter. I asked the lady at the desk how she was. She said, "I am just rushed to death." I thought she was kidding. All she had to do was sit there and sign in a rare visitor. I saw the frazzled look on her face and realized she was serious. I said, "Really?" She said, "I don't think I will ever get caught up."

If that lady feels rushed we are in too big of a hurry. I am going to work on it. If I try real hard maybe I can be content with the second section of a revolving door.

Dear editor: A reader has sent me a want Ad he ran across and wants to know what my reactions are to it.

The ad is seeking specialists "to conduct an employee health maintenance & fitness program for IRS employees in Boston." To qualify, you have to have a college degree with emphasis in exercise Physiology and be willing to work 40 hours a week.

I know that the IRS is having trouble keeping up with its tax work, being behind with several million refund payments and occasionally billing some businesses for taxes they've already paid, but I didn't know this was due to poor health. They said it was computer trouble.

You'd think employees smart enough to handle tax returns and interpret the complicated tax rules would be smart enough to get a little exercise without having to be made to. There are kindergarteners and first graders who'll get all the exercise the body needs if you'll leave them alone and make recess a little longer.

The ad didn't say whether the employees would be instructed in physical fitness during or after working hours, and it didn't say what the instructors' salaries will be, but whatever it is, you and I know who'll be footing the bill.

Of course, this program may work. The employees may come to work eager to tackle their jobs with more zest and fewer coffee breaks. If it does and it improves their efficiency in collecting more taxes, I'm oppos-

Tax reform: How to get there from here

By RICHARD L. LESHER President

WASHINGTON -- Remember when, as a kid, you and a buddy agreed to swap treasured artifacts? Both parties grabbed both items and on "three" each took the coveted new belonging.

Imagine the same ritual with hundreds of millions of private and public sector participants-and you have a taste of tax reform. Just about everyone wants reform-but no one wants to let go of comfortable arrangements or pet notions until everyone else does.

Foremost among the bugaboos is the idea that losing a cherished tax break will visit disaster. The Wall Street Journal reports that Congress is buried in dubious "studies" allegedly showing that proposed changes would put alegion of entire industries out of business.

But an even bigger stumbling block has been the search for "revenue neutrality"--keeping revenues after tax reform roughly the same as before. Neutrality is essential to keep tax reform from becoming a hidden tax hike, but the problem is that "revenue neutrality" has come to mean "static

Static neutrality works like this: if you reduce rates one percent, then figure on losing one percent of revenues. If you repeal a deduction, add back the amount taxpayers would have "saved" from that

This mechanical methodology has two ominous implications for tax reform. First, it mows down its very underpinnings: that reform will produce growth. Refusing to recognize the benefits of new growth dooms tax reformers which takes into account the effects of growth, however, shows that the committee overestimated losses by 50 percent!

In fact, the hardest blow to reform has been a congressional committee finding that the Reagan plan would "cost" the Treasury $305 billion in taxes on individuals over five years.

Such underestimates give rise to wrinkles must be found-or worse, rates raised. This process is even discredited deductions.

If we start creating new taxes, like the confusing "windfall" tax on corporations proposed in the Reagan plan, or if rates are raised, then tax reform ceases to be tax reform. We are merely reshuffling the chairs on the deck-and the economic efficiency of lower rates and fewer deductions is lost.

And the most likely targets of new revenues-as the windfall tax indicates - are corporations. According to an Epcot Poll, 51 percent of Americans want to see corporate taxes hiked. Part of this is disinformation about low tax bills for big corporations (itself a subject for another column). But an even bigger reason can be found in a New York Times poll. Dispirited by interest group niggling and the handwringing of the static revenue estimaters, half of all Americans now believe that taxes on middleincome earners would be increased by tax reform. So how better to prevent that than to sock it to the "big guys"-corporations? But doing that

The ancient Greeks believed that rubbing half a lemon under the arm would relieve the pain of a hangover.

A Chamber of Commerce estimate would even further undermine the growth-creating benefits of tax reform.

We do need to spend some time working on the tax reform proposals forwarded to date to ensure that the the second implication: if revenue is final package aids in the formation of lost, then new revenue-raising growth-producing capital, promotes technological advancement, improves our competitive posture intermore pronounced if interest group nationally and most important, spurs pressure salvages a host of further job creation. But to accomplish those goals, we're going to have to get some folks to let go of their cherished assumption that lower rates mean lower revenuesand to let go of their bias against incentives for productive investment.

Perhaps the best way is to accept the advice of a taxpayer who answered the call of House Ways and Means Chairman Dan Rostenkowski (D-III.) to "write Rosty." He reportedly enclosed a two-by-four-and urged the Chairmanto "use this if you have to."

Texas film industry more than just a backdrop

DALLAS (AP) — The Academy Award winner for Best Picture of 1927-1928, "Wings," was shot in Texas, and Hollywood has been going on location here ever since.

Filmmakers in ever-increasing numbers are drawn by a rich mystique, lower production costs and backdrops ranging from slick cityscapes to quaint country towns, from stark desert to steamy coast.

For the most part, moviemakers packed up their gear and headed home to Tinseltown once location shooting was over. But in the past few years, Texas has begun evolving into more than just a pretty face in the movie business.

A home-grown film industry is putting down slender roots on what has been grandly touted as the Third Coast. Scores of producers, writers, directors, performers and technicians now call Texas home.

"Illinois, Florida and Texas all do roughly the same amount of produc-ferent styles, experimenting. That's the trend in furniture styles today, according to many interior designers.

"People are more open to experimentation than they were years ago and they're mixing different styles and periods," says Lee Mills, director of design for Naugahyde brand fabrics.

"Today, it's not unusual to see antique furniture re-covered in trendy colors or contemporary wall units filled with a hodgepodge of collectibles. People want to offset the indifference of a highly technical society by firmly stressing individuality," the says.

Interior designers Betram Laundenslager and Arthur L'Esperance agree. "There's no reason to conform to any one style or fashion," they say. "There's no right or wrong way of decorating; there's only your way."

tion work, but a substantial amount of ours is done by producers who are making their base in Texas," says Joel Smith, executive director of the Texas Film Commission. "Really, Texas is the only place where that is

While the indigenous film industry is still quite modest, it boasts such Oscar-winners as producer Martin Jurow ("Terms of Endearment," "Pink Panther," "Breakfast at Tiffany's"), and writer Horton Foote ("Tender Mercies," "To Kill a Mockingbird").

Texas also is home to screenwriter William Wittliff ("Raggedy Man," "Country," "Black Stallion" and "Barbarosa"), director Ken Harrison ("Valentine's Day," "1918"), producer Ross Milloy ("1918," "Alamo Bay") and many others.

The roster includes such independent production companies as Fort Worth Productions, H.I.T. Films in Houston and Milloy's Guadalupe Productions in Austin.

"When I think about the Texas business, I think of individuals. I don't think of institutions," says Warren Skaaren, who helped found the film commission and now is busy on four screenplays for major studios. "I think we're just at the stage before the industry becomes consolidated around the gains made by individuals."

Unorthodox financing and distribution arrangements have been critical to many independent Texas produc-

"Any time you get out of the mainstream, you've got to be more innovative," say Joe Camp of Dallas, who produced the hit film "Benji."

Milloy negotiated videocassette rights and public broadcast rights for '1918" and "Valentines' Day." The money for Jurow's latest film, "Poppa Was a Preacher," was raised by the wife of a Dallas minister.

After "Benji" was turned down by every major distributor who saw it, Camp learned the distribution business from the ground up and handled the film himself. It grossed $31 million in 1975 alone.

"As long as production in Texas is tied to Hollywood distribution, the Texas film industry is not going to be really independent," Camp says

The emergence of a fledgling native Texas film industry has made it possible for many people to live and work in the state where they have deep ties, instead of Los Angeles or New York.

HARDWARD

State called 'Third Coast'

"I like it here," says Milloy, who grew up in Corpus Christi.

"I spent a lot fo time paying dues here and I would sure hate to have to start paying dues somewhere else," says "1918" director Harrison.

Other filmmakers find Texas congenial because there is less competi-

"At the moment, there's a strategic advantage to being in Texas," Milloy says. "If you're in New York or L.A., you're just another storefront."

Mitchell Johnson, president of Fort Worth Productions, agrees.

"Some people would rather be a big fish in a small pond. Some people like to be pioneers," he says: "There is less competition for funds and glory in Texas."

Texas not only has the scenery, the facilities and the talent, it has the raw stuff of drama, many filmnakers sav.

W think what makes Texas interesting to any sort of storyteller is its very rich mythological tradition," Millov says.

Texas also has undergone a rapid metamorphosis from a rural to an urban society, and now boasts three of the nation's 10 largest cities in Houston, Dallas and San Antonio.

"With this tradition, on top of what is the most spectacular sociologial changes of any state in America, that creates all sorts of friction," Milloy

Jurow, who left Hollywood for Dallas 14 years ago, sees Texas as an "area of venture capitalists" where movies can be made with first-rate technical crews and without the bloated budgets common in Hollywood and New York.

But Jurow, Milloy, Skaaren and others also say the indigenous Texas film business has a lot of growing up to do. "I don't think anyone should get too heady," Milloy says. "It's still very minor. There is no reason why we should replace New York or Los Angeles or Paris."

Texas filmmakers say the state is rich in technical talent but still lacks depth in writing, producing, directing and in the business end of the movie business.

A major impetus to the growth of the Texas film business has been the state's popularity as a shooting location, which has grown dramatically since the mid-1970s.

In the past five years, more than 130 major projects have been shot in Texas. Last year, 30 films, including three of the five Best Picture nominees, were shot in Texas.

According to the state comptroller, 247 corporations involved in filmrelated companies with gross receipts of more than $120 million were registered in Texas last year.

The Texas Film Commission's official production manual lists more than 700 companies.

This booming and lucrative business has nourished a large pool of technicians and support person-

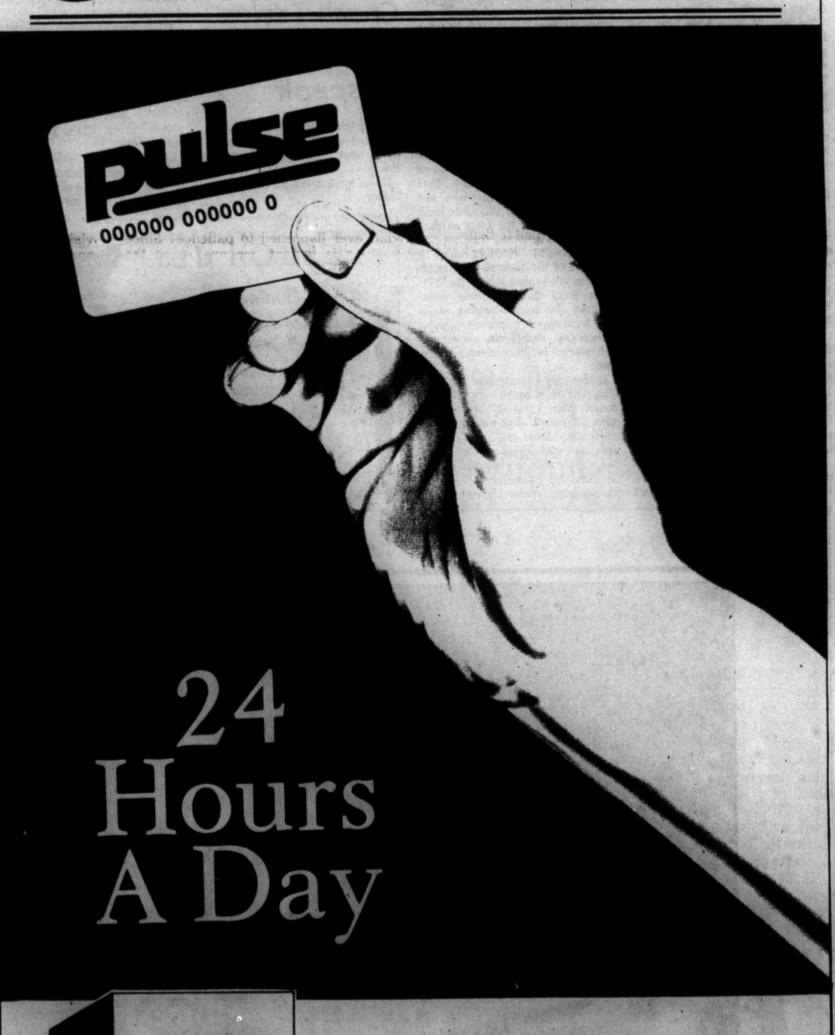

"You can do a film top to bottom here as long as it doesn't require lots of special effects," Jurow says.

"Tender Mercies,' for example, was filmed entirely in the Waxahachie area, using Dallas crews and supporting actors.

The state also boasts several sound stages, including the huge Dallas Communications Complex at Las Colinas, the creation of billionaire developer Trammell S. Crow.

"It basically was developed to be part of the local industry, not for Hollywood," says Joe Pope, president of the complex. "It's symbolic to what the industry in Texas is going to be."

Whooping cough cases increasing

More cases of whooping cough were reported to the Texas Department of Health during the first seven months of 1985 than were reported during all of 1984.

To date, 70 cases have been confirmed this year compared to 60 last year. Another 84 possible cases are still being investigated said Ronald Moellenberg, technical programs administrator in the Immunization Division at TDH.

"The increasing number of reported cases shows that there is still a good deal of whooping cough (pertussis) out there," Moellenberg said. "We are concerned that parents don't realize the protective value of the vaccine against per-

"The benefits of getting the vaccine, which is combined in a shot that also protects against diphtheria and tetanus, far outweigh the risks," said Dr. Thomas Betz, Chief of the Services at TDH. He said that one of every 310,000 doses of vaccine produces neurological complications in the child who gets it. But four of every 1,000 children who get the disease whooping cough suffer permanent brain damage, and about five of every 1,000 children who get whooping cough die.

"The chances of an infant suffering neurological complications are 1,240 times higher if a child doesn't get the shot and later develops pertussis," Betz said.

"Whooping cough is a serious disease, and the most vulnerable people are very young infants and small children," said Robert Crider, Director of the Immunization Division at TDH. "For that reason, we recommend that a child be immunized with DTP at two, four and six months followed by boosters at 12 to 18 months and four to six years of Many physicians think that the number of reported pertussis cases is likely to increase because of recent publicity about the vaccine. Betz said he thinks parents who are deciding whether to vaccinate their children need all the facts so they can make an informed decision.

"It is possible we could return to the days of the 1940s if not enough children are protected with the DTP shots. Back then, 2.5 times more children died from whoming cou than from measles, mumps, rubella, chickenpox, diphtheria, meningitis and scarlet fever combined," Betz

Crider said parents who get their offspring vaccinated are told to watch them carefully for several days afterward. Common reactions are a slight fever and a red swollen area here the injection was given. But, Crider said, a physician should be contacted immediately if a child has seizures, a fever higher than 105 degrees or spends more than two nours crying/screaming persistent-

Tom Landry is good amateur psychologist for his Cowboys

By DENNE H. FREEMAN AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) - Besides being the second winningest coach in National Football League history, Tom Landry is an excellent amateur psychologist.

Recently, he applied a hot brand to his Dallas Cowboys for the 1985 season. He said they'd likely be picked to finish fourth in the National Conference Eastern Division, ahead of only Philadelphia.

"Our work is going to be cut out for us to make it back to the playoffs,"

The Cowboys' 9-7 record last eason kept them out of the NFL playoffs for the first time in a decade, and Landry isn't letting his

"At our welcome to camp meeting the coach stressed team unity," said defensive end Ed "Too Tall" Jones. That was o last year."

The team was divided over which quarterback should be starting, Danny White or Gary Hogeboom.

"It was a definite distraction," said Jones.

Whereas the Cowboys'-defense was one of the best in the NFL, the offense resembled an automobile with three spark plugs missing.

Injuries decimated the offensive line to the point where Landry had to field an all-guard lineup. Pass pro-tection was miserable and the Cowboys dropped from 31 touchdowns in 1983 to only 19 last

That's where the 1985 season picks up - with White as No. 1 quarterback and Hogeboom in hot pursuit.

"Anytime you have a team that reaches a low point like we did last year, either you have sufficient character to pull out of those bottoms or you don't," said Landry. "If you don't pull yourself out, then you end up with one of those dismal years of a

In fact, Tony Dorsett's holdout and financial problems had focused media attention on the unhappy star running back and off the White-Hogeboom duel. Dorsett has since something that takes place as the passing game works.

"We're not a team that dominates on the ground without a good passing game," he said. "Without the passing game, naturally our running game suffered some.'

Defensively, the Cowboys should be even stronger in 1985.

Jim Jeffcoat, who plays alongside All-Pro tackle Randy White at defensive right end, looked awesome during the preseason.

So do the Cowboys have a shot at the playoffs?

"Of course we do," said Landry. "We could be a Super Bowl-caliber team if everyone works hard."

And he won't mind at all if his preseason assessment is a bust. "If you would pry his (Landry's) heart open, I don't think you'd find any fourth-place finishes in there,"

Whitefaces ranked 89th in preseason Harris ratings

Odessa Permian is the top-rated class 5A team in the state and Hereford's Whitefaces rank 89th, according to a preseason survey by the well-known Harris Rating System. Harris ranks all the teams in the state and gives them a "power rating," which provides a com-parative point difference. Permian has a power rating of 192; Hereford's rating of 163 puts the Herd four touchdowns away from the top.

Amarillo Palo Duro is the toprated team among 3-5A members, followed by Plainview, Amarillo and Hereford. The power ratings have Hereford 10 points behind Palo Duro. six behind Plainview and one behind Amarillo. Lubbock Coronado, Lubbock Monterey, Caprock, Tascosa and Lubbock High follow in the district rankings.

The San Angelo Central Bobcats. Hereford's first foe in the Sept. 6 opener, are ranked third in the state. Harris picks the Bobcats to win by at least 16 points.

In other games involving District 3-5A teams, here's how Harris picks

Odessa over Amarillo by 4, Caprock over Dumas by 8, Tascosa over Canyon by 1, Midland Lee over Coronado by 22, Dunbar over Lubbock by 11, Midland over Monterey by 12, Plainview over Estacado by 6, and Palo Duro over Clovis, N.M., not rated.

Brand football contest to debut on Tuesday

The Hereford Brand's annual football contest, sponsored by leading business firms and institutions, makes its debut in the Tuesday issue of the newspaper.

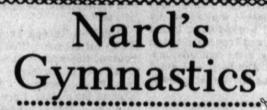

You don't have to be a football "expert" to have a chance at winning one of the weekly prizes or to have a shot at the season's grand prizes! Simply follow the easy rules on the contest page, mark the teams you think will win and get the entry in by 5 p.m. on Fridays.

The top three winners each week

Pete Rose says:

'This is how I got my base hits'

By Howard Siner

NEW YORK (NEA) - Pete Rose believes his rise to the top as a hitter simply means he's done a good job from game to game since 1963.

"To help the team, I'm supposed to get base hits," Rose points out. "I'm paid to get base hits. By breaking Ty Cobb's record (of 4,191 career hits), I'm doing nothing more than what I'm supposed to be doing." During 23 seasons, Rose, 44, has developed his own "Charlie Hustle" philosophy of hitting, based on hard work, concentration and aggressiveness.

In his new book, "Pete Rose on Hitting" (Perigee), the player-manager of the Cincinnati Reds elaborates on his skills with a bat. A 5-foot-11, 190pound switch hitter, he also details how he built his career batting totals.

Some people tell me I've been lucky because I have 4,000 hits," Rose says. "I don't agree. My only luck was that I was born with a healthy body. But I am not lucky that I have 4,000 hits. That's baloney. I worked for my 4,000 hits, and I worked hard. I kept myself in shape, and I concentrated on what I was doing, and I dedicated myself to baseball. And because I did, I have played more than 20 seasons and have those hits."

What's the secret to getting a lot of

"The secret to hitting for a high average is to hit the ball hard wherever it is pitched," says Rose. "You never consciously say to yourself, 'I'm going to right field.' You never try to hit to left or up the middle. All you are trying to do is hit the ball hard The object is to get on base. Hitting the ball hard anyplace gives you your best chance of getting on base."

Rose says there are only two exceptions, situations in which you have to think as a hitter. No. 1 is: No outs, runner on second - you have to get runner to third by hitting the ball hard to thing he can't with a bat. the right side. No. 2 is: I sess than two "I know what kind of outs, man on third, early in the game, the infield is playing back — you have to hit fly ball to score the runner. "When I go up to the plate, I know won't go up there swinging for the there isn't a pitcher alive I can't hit," fence, because chances are I'll strike says Rose. He adds: "When you go up out instead. I'm not a Punch and Judy I'm up at the plate."

Does Rose look for certain kinds of pitches?

When I go up to the plate," he says, "I am looking for the pitcher's fastest pitch. Why? Because if you stand in the batter's box expecting a curve, even a 10-year-old can thrown a fastball by you.

To be a consistent hitter, Rose says, you have to concentrate on the ball and hit it hard, without trying to guess what will be thrown or where.

"My own hitting is evidence that this is true," he says. "More than any other aspect of my career, I am most proud of my consistency. I have the record for the most 20-game hitting streaks, seven. My 44-game hitting streak tied me for second all-time with Willie Keeler, behind Joe DiMag-

Even Rose, though, knows what it's like to fail. He says: "I've struck out a thousand times in my career. Striking out is part of the game. But I don't miss the ball because I'm trying to outguess the pitcher. I don't even look for areas - high or low, inside or outside - like some hitters do."

Knowing your own limitations is a key part of Rose's hitting. He says: "A key to successful hitting is to wait for - and then get - your pitch. And by that I don't mean a pitch that is in any particular location. I mean a pitch that you see well and that you can handle with your bat. A successful batter hits a pitch he can handle. Successful pitchers get you out with pitches you can't handle.

"A hitter's impatience gives the pitcher his biggest advantage. And Rose doesn't try to do some-

"I know what kind of hits I'm supposed to get," he says. "I learned at an early age that I wasn't a home run hitter. Even if we're one run down: I

What about hitters who like to draw a lot of walks, or those with sharp eyes who refuse to swing at pitches that just miss the strike zone? "Most of the time," Rose says, "a walk is not as good as a hit. A hit is better.... Hitters who wait for a base on balls become defensive hitters. His brand of aggressive hitting is what led Rose to Cobb.

Says Rose: "A lot of people ask me about breaking Ty Cobb's record, how much it means to me. Well, financially it's important, of course. It's also important because of the fans. When the fans began to feel I had a shot at the record, that's when I began to care. "Heck, when I was a kid, I didn't know anything about Ty Cobb. It was all Babe Ruth. I didn't start thinking about Cobb until I was the fastest guy to get 3,000 hits. I'll let the fans do the counting. I'll just do the hitting." 1985, NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN

SWC point spreads to continue to be published

DALLAS (AP) - Several Texas newspaper executives have indicated they plan to continue publishing point spreads on Southwest Conference football and basketball games despite an appeal from SWC Commissioner Fred Jacoby that they stop the practice.

"If people are going to gamble, they will do it whether we run odds or not," said Dave Smith, managing editor and executive sports editor of The Dallas Morning News.

Dave Campbell, sports editor of the Waco Tribune-Herald, which regularly publishes a syndicated line, echoed that thought.

"People who bet would get their information somewhere," Campbell said. "If papers got together and banned the line from publication, it would not have one ripple of effect." Jacoby's request came in a letter dated Tuesday.

The publishing of odds, point spreads "and other gambling information," Jacoby wrote, "further enhances the opportunity for exploitation by gambling interests."

The letter cited the Tulane pointshaving scandal, without mentioning the New Orleans school by name, as a recent result of "undue pressure on student-athletes to succumb to illegal enticements."

The Morning News said its reporters contacted several continue to publish the data and expressed doubt their policy would, have any effect, the News said.

Rick Hinton, sports editor of the Houston Post, said the line is for the fans, not for bettors.

"They (fans) want to know who's favored and by how much. The sophisticated gambler is going to get his information from other sources," Hinton said.

Smith said the numbers carried in the News "are not true gambling odds. If you call a bookie, he will quote a different spread or odds. Those things change almost hourly."

Austin American-Statesman editor Arnold Rosenfeld said Jacoby's concern is misplaced.

"I'm not convinced this (publishing point spreads) is a problem," Rosenfeld said. "The real issue of gambling (abuse) lies elsewhere. I'd like to know what else the SWC schools have on their agenda to protect their athletes."

Bill Hart, sports editor of the Abilene Reporter-News, said his newspaper hasn't been carrying college point spreads because "it is supposed to be pure, amateur sport," but said the Reporter-News has no firm policy on the matter.

Mike Haynes of the Los Angeles Raiders only made six pass interceptions in the 1984 NFL season, but he newspaper editors Thursday. The returned them for 220 yards, the most, editors responded that they would in the league.

Sports, not seasons, give impact on lifestyle

LUBBOCK - The sport of the season, not the season of the year, is what produces the most profound impact on the contemporary American family's lifestyle, according to a Texas Tech University sports historian.

James W. Harper notes that during the autumn months when the leaves are dropping their leaves, Americans are dropping their other activities in favor of leisure time devoted to football.

"Football has made Sept. 1 more important than the start of a new year or the change of the seasons when it comes to the lifestyle of the typical American household," Harper said.

From then until the Super Bowl in January, the schedules of many families are juggled around the broadcasts of collegiate and professional games and around organized games involving children, Harper notes.

"The 20th century stress on education causes many families to of the school year," he continues.

"Football's position as the first sport on the educational calendar has helped its appeal," he said. "With the possible exception of basketball in Indiana, football is the major sport of the schools from the seventh grade through college."

Harper notes that the family lifestyle is less dictated by weather today than when the U.S. was an agrarian society. In modern society, the school-year calendar is a greater determinant of lifestyle.

In addition to benefitting from the school calendar, football is also a sport that fits well with its time, Harper adds.

"Many would argue that football mirrors post World War II American society better than any other sport because of its violent, clock-oriented style," Harper said.

The sports historian said that another advantage football has is that it televises well and can keep millions glued to their television sets.

"Viewers often miss when summer becomes fall or autumn turns to winter, but they seldom miss the organize their activities to the start start or end of football season," he

Texas Most Wanted Fugitive

COAHOMA, Texas - Terrylee Payment" placed on them. Prero didn't make it to his high school reunion in California last bably disappointed. But they were not nearly as disappointed as state and federal law enforcement officials, who had hoped to make Prero's 20-year reunion, his last for at least another 20 years.

Prero, who also goes by the name Anthony Ginnetti, is wanted by the FBI and Texas law enforcement officials on charges of defrauding the Coahoma State Bank out of $260,000 and a private individual out of almost $150,000. The Justice Department has a federal Flight to Avoid Prosecution warrant on him. He also is wanted for theft of a National Rentacar vehicle and for making false statements to a bank.

The dapper-looking 37-year-old fugitive's legal problems began in October, 1982, when he began negotiating with Coahoma State Bank to secure a loan for his Car City Auto sales and Service business.

Investigators say the original agreement provided for $38,000 worth of automobile purchases. A total of $20,000 was to be secured by a Certificate of Deposit held by the bank. The rest of the loan was to be secured by automobile titles held by the bank as collateral.

But detectives say that between October, 1982, and April, 1984, Prero/Ginnetti was able to get the loan aised to $80,000, with $30,000 in CD's and the remainder in automobile titles used for collateral.

Little did bank officials know that they were being drawn into a fancy version of the old "shell game". Investigators say the bank was defrauded in the following manner:

-all good automobile titles were slowly replaced with illegallyacquired titles, thus reducing a portion of the collateral held by the bank.

-the bank released liens on automobiles after it was told by Prero/Ginnetti that he had sold the vehicles and would return with the money. The money was rarely deposited.

-a large number of automobiles were purchased and customer drafts were honored by the bank, despite the fact there was not sufficient funds ond eposit at the time.

-the bank honored a number of insufficient fund checks.

However, since that original press release, additional information has been discovered about Prero/Ginnet-

He uses a variety of aliases, including the names Terry Argus and Tony Culpert.

Investigators say the fugitive also is known as an habitual gambler, frequenting gambling resorts in Nevada. Ironically, one of the many

There is a strong possibility that Prero/ginnetti has left the state. However, investigators say he still has a number of personal ties in Texas that might prompt his return.

A $1,000 reward is being offered for information leading to Prero/Ginnetti's capture. Anyone who might have details of the fugitive's possible location is asked to call the Texas Crime Stoppers Advisory Council toll-free at 1-800-252-8477 or their local Crime Stoppers program. Young owners are refurbishing old city homes

Bachelor gives spinsters' old home a dramatic facelift

By MARGARET BELL Staff Writer

Seen through the sheltering branches of both recently planted and older trees, the 1913 vintage farm house located at 801 North Lee was. built by the Malone family, and the spinster sisters, Maude and Jessie, lived there for many years after the death of their parents. Presently owned by Mauri Montgomery, the residence has undergone a major face lift with new masonite siding with the "country" tone of leavenworth gold. The interior has a "new but old" look as well. The work involved, says Montgomery, has been long and arduous, but adds that his sense of satisfaction with the results far outweighs the work.

A young bachelor who considers Hereford his hometown-to-stay, Montgomery bought the old house in March of 1983 and immediately set out on the long renovation process. Taking advantage of the warm spring days, Mauri first tackled the neglected yard by scraping the entire lot surrounding the house in order to remove all existing grass and shrubbery.

Then, the process of landscaping began anew with grass, 30 new trees and shrubs, flowers in several garden areas, as well as a vegetable garden in the back area.

Other effective details of the outer improvement scheme have included a split-rail cedar fence, and an oldfashioned bucket well constructed to hide a faucet made necessary by the care of the front yard plantings. Bar- Because the old porch was not rels filled with colorful geraniums square with the existing roof line, add attractive sparkle to the front area, and the home owner says he plans to add to these from time to

Mauri says that he bought the house because he had grown up in several houses that were decorated with country decor, planned and executed by his father Dick Montgomery, and he knew that this was the kind of house he wanted for himself. Considering a comfortable and pleasant home to be of ultimate importance to a person's well-being. Mauri realized that the Malone house would be his chance to have such a home and would also give his dad the opportunity to develop a real country decor in a real country house.

"When my dad was a young man, he earned his first money as a carpenter's assistant to his uncle so that he has always had the skills to build and decorate. He has been my right-hand helper and inspiration from the very first day. We haven't always agreed on how the work should be done, but we have worked together as a real team and the finished product deserves credit from both our labors," Montgomery

The new outside has a major impact on the senses of all who see it in passing, but the real phenomena of improvement comes when the visitor steps through the front door. Although Mauri has created the illusion of having recycled the past and made it live again. the new conveniences make it a house of today as well as of the 1913 era in which it was

The Malone house appealed to Mauri from the time he first saw it because he recognized the quality of the craftsmanship of many of its features. The woodwork, for example, is made of ash and was fashioned with an ax (no electric saws in 1913). The wiring, when he took possession, had been recently updated. The plumbing is an improvement yet to be completed as a new bathroom takes shape as an addition on the back of the house.

Once the yard work was done, the Montgomery team of carpenters began by tearing off the old front porch and building a new one this involved a re-designing of the roof so that the porch columns could be aligned with the needed support. Next, off came the old back porch and the added space became a sunny

Young couple's dream has 'always' been to redecorate an older home

By MARGARET BELL Staff Writer

Standing at the corner of Lawton and East Fifth is a yellow chiffon colored residence, described by its new owners, Terry and Lisa Huffaker, as "a dream come true." "We've always wanted to do something like this, and now our dream has come true," they both comment. "Always" seems like a rather generous word to their audience since both are very young, both in appearance and in spirit.

After purchasing the house, built in 1910, from its former owners, the Huffakers began renovating by having licensed electricians and plumbers put its wiring and pipes into top condition. Next, they hired workmen to sheetrock all interior were to be painted. With the advice toned tile. of decorators from Accents Unlimited, they chose paints and wallpapers with the country tones which both Lisa and Terry like best. Their color scheme features such rich colors as navy blue, rust, kidskin, and emerald green. Colors in the country-patterned wallpaper pick up and complement the dark colors of the woodwork and cabinets.

A woodburning fireplace is the focal point of the large, formal dining area, and the couple has worked diligently to remove layers of old paint to bring it back to its natural oak state. All floors in the downstairs rooms will be sanded to re-new their former hardwood beauty except those in the kitchen and bath, and walls and texture the surfaces that those will be covered with wood-

Also included in the spaciousness of the lower floor is a game room, for which the Huffakers are hoping to acquire an antique pool table, and a guest bedroom. All of the fixtures of the original bathroom have been kept, with new paint and attractive wallpaper giving the room a "turnof-the-century" look that new furnishings would have destroyed.

Presently leaning against other soon-to-be-used furniture is an iron bedstead which Lisa has recently redone for use in two-year-old Kristin's room upstairs. In fact, the whole house is now a melange of antique furniture which the Huffakers are anxiously waiting to place in all the rooms as the floor treatments are completed.

Because of the condition of the upstairs bedroom floors, they will be painted with deck paint to cover the effects of 75 years of wear. The only exception is the master bedroom which will be given a new hardwood finish to highlight its beauty. Bright area rugs will be used throughout the house to add color and warmth to these surfaces. Other than a runner for the stairway which winds upwards from the front entry hall, no carpet will be used to cover the hardwood and its country charm. Estate and garage sales have been very important in their acquisition of many interesting pieces of antique furniture.

"We paid $5 for that chair in the corner, and we had to give only $5 for this library table," says Terry, but his pride in the quality and usefulness in each piece is very much in evidence.

One of their real treasures is a 75-year old wheelchair, a gift from Mrs. Agnes Hicks. Plans for the wheelchair are to make it a conversation piece in their final arrangement of accessory items.

Especially functional and attractive is the large kitchen which would be the envy of any homemaker because of its spaciousness and generous cabinet space. The Huffakers have installed a new Formica cabinet top, a stainless steel sink and a brick-type backsplash. Another major improvement to the kitchen's utility has been the closing of a back hallway in order to create a large walk-in pantry. Off-white woodwork and a navy blue patterned wallpaper complete the attractiveness of this kitchen area.

Upstairs rooms include a dovegrey nursery to be occupied by a new baby expected by the young family, a beautiful room finished with a rose-accented border which is Kristin's new bedroom, an upstairs laundry

Kitchen renovations becoming very popular

Redesigning a kitchen may be the single most popular home project in the United States.

Jan Cooper, a home economist and manager of consumer education for the Maytag Co., and her husband recently reworked the kitchen in their 1960s split-level home near Newton, Iowa, where Maytag has its remodeling was the introduction by Maytag of a new grill range, which she coveted. However, she had been dissatisfied with the room for the entire 11 years they'd been living in the

The immediate impetus for the

In many ways, the flaws in the Cooper kitchen were typical. "The kitchen was dark; there was wasted space; it had poor lighting; and it was depressing," Mrs. Cooper says.

As a trained home economist, she felt she had the expertise to redesign the kitchen herself. However, she and her husband began by shopping a number of remodeling showrooms to see what was available in kitchen cabinets. They had already decided to gut their own kitchen, get rid of the dark wooden cabinets and rearrange the appliances for a better working

After thinking carefully about her needs, Mrs. Cooper decided to keep the best features of the room, such as a large pantry and the refrigerator, still in good condition.

The Coopers hired a carpenter who installed the kitchen for them, based on her rough plans. She chose almond-colored cabinets with a plastic laminate surface for ease of care. The light colors were designed to make the room look bigger and to present a more cheerful appearance.

The new cabinets enlarge the storage capacity since they are fitted with specialized storage shelves and racks. A floor-to-ceiling cabinet and several others all have pull-out shelves. She finds these especially convenient for storing pots and pans and other items. Another cabinet features vertical dividers and neatly accommodates cookie sheets and

At counter height, a kind of appliance garage has beeen created by installing doors to partition the space at the back of part of the counter. Behind closed doors she stores frequently-used appliances such as a can opener and a food processor. A toaster that is used daily stands out on the counter.

A new peninsula cook center houses the grill range. By moving the range from its former location next to the refrigerator, she has beeen able to improve the work triangle so that each of the major appliances sink, dishwasher, stove and refrigerator - is better located for efficient cooking. It is generally considered that the most advantageous arrangement provides for appliances between three and five feet apart. Each one thus forms one leg of the so-called work triangle.

The Coopers added fluorescent lighting to remedy the too-dark condition of the former space. They also lightened the room considerably by substituting almond-colored cabinetry for the dark wood-grained cabinets that had formerly been in

All in all, the kitchen renovation cost the Coopers between $5,000 and $6,000. They were able to save money in several ways that might not be available to others. They obtained the new stove from Maytag, and the carpenter who installed the kitchen is a good friend who got the kitchen cabinets at cost.

Mrs. Cooper estimates that without any of these cost savings, a similar renovation might cost

Decorating costs can be cut

By The Associated Press

If there is a single decorating question that gets asked more than any other, it is: "How can I have a great looking room that is still within my budget?"

For those who are cash-poor, but still interested in making their homes attractive, there are plenty of good ideas to be found in a variety of places. Among them, authorities suggest that you include decorating magazines, department store and furniture store model rooms and decorator show houses that are held in the warm-weather months in many localities. Recently, home centers have also been getting into the act.

Regardless of where you get your ideas, the chances are that they will rely heavily on the three cheapest and most effective methods of making a big splash with a little bit of cash: paint, wallpaper and fabric.

The common denominator in all three products is color. Putting the power of color to work can overcome pretty unatisfactory surroundings, as one intereior designer put it.

This lesson was illustrated not too long ago in a manufacturer's showroom. The showroom in High Point, N.C., is Dapha, Inc., a small company that sells furniture frames on which a customer puts her own

The light neutral white was not only fresh and a welcome relief after the multiplicity of styles, colors and designs in other furdzh e showrooms, but it als helped to show off the special attractiveness of the upholstered furniture frames. Some of the white sailcloth was embroidered in machine-made crewel embroidery also in white for a kind of baroque white on white effect that managed to be rustic and formal at the same time.

Another clever and potentially lowcost idea used in the tiny showroom featured an artist's canvas as a backdrop. The designer pointed out that artist's canvas is inexpensive and sturdy and can easily be used for with washer and dryer (the border in this room is of clothes hanging on the line), an office for Terry, and the large master bedroom.

'We are anxious to move and get settled even though we know there's lots to do before the house is finished," says Lisa. After selling their own home several months ago, they have been living with Terry's parents, Bob and Libby Huffaker. Even though they have felt very welcome there, the young family can hardly wait to be living in their own house again.

Why did they choose to do major renovations on an old house rather than buying a new one that was ready to move into? Terry is quick to reply, "Twice as much house for half as much money."

In explaining the process of buying a house under these conditions, Terry said that they first had a mortgage just for the purchase price of the house, but when they applied for renovations that they had in mind, the lenders advised them to refinance the house with the improvements included. When all additions and repairs are complete, the lending agency will re-appraise the finished residence, and they will then know what their total mortgage obligation will be. Their present estimate is that the improvements will double the appraised value of the property.

The new yellow chiffon exterior catches the attention at once, but other exterior improvements are also evident at every turn of the gaze. A split-rail cedar fence separates the front yard area from the surrounding sidewalk, for example. Old trees and shrubs have been replaced with new. A new roof was necessary, and present plans are to re-paint and generally renovate the, large garage sitting on the north side of the property. "We hope some day a home improvement loan to do the to tear down the old garage and build a new, more modern one, but for now we'll just fix up the old one and make it do," Terry says.

An obvious sense of satisfaction and well-being fills not only the Huffakers' conversation but their demeanors as well. "This house is basically sound and, after a routine termite inspection of the pier-andbeam construction, we decided that this was the house for us with plenty of room to grow and share our lifestyle with friends and family," they smilingly conclude.

The house at 603 East Fifth does seem like the right house for this happy young couple who have created a "country" look that reflects their appreciation for the simple, unpretentious objects and attitudes of the past. Not only will the new-old house be ample for their growing family but will be a happy haven for their many friends who come to visit.

breakfast nook attached to the existing kitchen. With the breakfast area ready for use, the next step of renovation was the removal and reconstruction of the brick chimney that sat on top of the house. This one chimney originally served three fireplaces, and the one in the front entryway has been removed in order to make room for more important

With a sparkle in his eye, Mauri exclaims, "The kitchen is the real showplace of the whole house!" The bld, outdated cabinets were removed, and George Bullard, a fellow employee of Dick Montgomery's at REC, came in to build the new ones. A special feature of the cabinets' design is a furdown to fill the space between the seven foot tall cabinets and the 12 foot ceiling. Butcherblock Formica tops the cabinet counters and was chosen for its attractive but utile working surface. Porcelain knobs complete the cabinet's good looks. The floor is a brick patterned vinyl that is both easy-to-keep and complementary to the country mood of the kitchen area.

A major decision that challenged both Mauri and Dick was the floor covering for the living and bedroom areas of the house. Beautifully finished hardwood floors would have been the touch both preferred, but the existing floors were not made of hardwoods. In fact, they were badly splintered and were not even suitable for a refinishing. Carpet, then, became the logical solution of covering up the much-abused wood as well as providing needed insulation because the house structure sits three feet off the ground on a brick pier-and-beam foundation. When purchased, the house had no insulation in any of its walls so that was a necessary addition, both for warmth and conservation of utility costs.

When asked about the decisions made in the house's general decorating scheme, Mauri gives credit to Better Homes and Gardens for many of the ideas he has used. "We have looked at dozens of magazines to get suggestions for colors, structural changes, and other ways we have changed the house,"

Gold-painted woods are used throughout the house, including all of the woodwork and the kitchen cabinets. The woodwork, though of quality wood, had been so abused by renters who had lived in the house in recent years, that it has been covered up with beautiful gold paint so that the nailholes and other damage are no longer visible. Wallpaper, chosen in small country patterns, varies from room-to-room, but in every instance, the basic gold can be found in each design. So, from exterior siding to indoor woods and papers, the house has a basic gold

Although still in the process of being built, the bathroom will retain the early day fixtures used in the original bathroom (which was nothing more than a portion of the former backporch). A pedestal sink and footed bathtub are included. Mexican tile will cover a portion of the bathroom's floor with some carpet included as spot color."

Present plans call for the renovation process to come to an intial stage of completion some time this fall, but the young homeowner is already planning far ahead for other additions and improvements. For example, he hopes to raze the present garage and to build a two-car structure which will include a loft area for storage and even a darkroom where he can pursue his avid interest in photography. The garage will have the appearance of a backyard barn.

The backyard now contains an arbor which is the scene of outdoor entertaining, but this area may some day become the breezeway that connects the main house with a large master bedroom and bath. "A house is a home only when the owner continues to add and improve " Mauri believes. He cannot envision a time when he will not be wanting to make his new-old house more comfortable and liveable.

Part of the decorating scheme of the house's interior includes the use of a handpainted stenciled border of the pineapple and scroll, a traditional symbol of welcome and hospitality.

"I've always dreamed of having a home that emanated warmth even before the front door was entered. and my plan is to make this house a permanent residence that reflects country hospitality and comfort," Mauri concludes.

SMALL LEAKS CAUSE
BIG WATER WASTE
DENVER (AP) — A slow drip can waste 15 to 20 gallons of water a day, and a toilet-tank leak up to 100 gallons

To conserve water, the American Water Works Association suggests a close check for leaks at faucets and toilets. Most leaks result from worn washers in household faucets.

To repair them, turn off the water supply line to the leaky faucet, replace the washer, then turn on the line again. A few drops of food coloring in the toilet tank will detect invisible leaks.

Numerous family members from Hereford attend recent reunion the 17th annual Urbanczyk Reunion held recently in Thompson Park in Amarillo.

There were 165 family members who registered for the day's activities. The families are descendants of Anton Urbanczyk, who with his parents, came to the United States from Silesia, Poland in 1854 when he was three years old.

One hundred families landed in Galveston after a nine week voyage and sailed by boat to Indianola. They were the first large group of Polish farmers to come to the U.S.

Five weeks later the Polish wagon train made its way to a tract of land southeast of San Antonio. It was Christmas Eve and that night several hundred people crowded around a massive oak tree for the first Polish midnight Mass to be celebrated on American soil. The historic tree still stands in the church yard and on occasion Mass is still celebrated underneath it.

They named the first Polish settlement Panna Maria, meaning Virgin

In the early part of the 20th century, Anton moved his family to Rhineland, Tx. Three brothers moved to White Deer, John in 1910, and Ben and Felix in 1911. A sister, Adela Bichsel, came in 1921 and is the only surviving member of Anton's family. She resides in St. Ann's Home in Panhandle. Felix, moved to Hereford in 1937.

A gift, a Polish blessing, was given to Arnie Urbanczyk of White Deer, who guessed the closed number of

The largest number of 100 percent Polish descendants were from Felix's family since three of his daughters married Polish men. Theresa married John Kotara Jr. and they live in White Deer; Irene married Ed Dzuik; and Leona married Sam Mazurek. They reside in Hereford.

Their children attending were Alfred and David Dzuik; Bridget Mazurek Williams; Pam Mazurek Shepic; Tori, Scott, Lesa and Mandy

Edna Reinart, Rosalie Stengel and Tony Urbanczyk were Felix's other children who attended.

Also, from Hereford were Arhart Reinart; Aurelia Urbanczyk; Vicky and Bob Schmucker: Sid and Nancy Urbanczyk, Christy, Casie and Seth; Mike and Evelyn Morrison, Melanie and Michael; Randy Williams, Angela and Katie; Jerry Dzuik; Loretta Urbanczyk, Brian, Chris, Greg and Lori; and Tony and Loretta's guests, Davy and LaChelle

Doug, Penny and Brittany Reinart from Georgetown, and Jeff Shepic of Amarillo were also in attendance.

Adela Bichsel's children will host the 1986 reunion.

DECORATE FOR YOUR LIFE STYLE

Whether one lives in a house, an apartment or a loft, one area undoubtedly will be designated as a living room. Faced with decisions about what furnishings to buy and how to arrange them, it is wise to plan the space with care. A good decorator or designer will recognize that every part of the home should be able to be comfortably used. Having a "front parlor" only for show is an old-fashioned concept. Yet, many people still seem to feel that some unwritten rule obliges them to purchase "sets" of furniture or other "time honored" styles. It is much more interesting to put together a personal life-style environment than to simply transpose a group assembled by a manufacturer of furniture store.

By LOUISE WALKER County Extension Agent Canning Tomatoes

Tomatoes are produced at home by more people than any other one vegetable. A few tomato plants in the backyard will provide a fresh supply for table use and maybe even some for preserving.

Tomatoes and many tomato products can be safety processed in a water bath canner.

The addition of low-acid vegetables such as pappers, onions, and celery may lower the acid level to the point that processing the food in a pressure canner is necessary. When vinegar and small amounts of these vegetables are added in a recipe, processing in a boiling water bath may be safe. Always follow a recommended recipe carefully. The addition of low-acid foods such as pasta, meat and fish, regardless of the amount, requires that the product be processed ina pressure can-

Allow tomatoes to ripen on the plants, if possible. Use tomatoes that are firm ripe but not overripe. Discard tomatoes with broken skins. soft spots, or other signs of decay.

Wash tomatoes carefully before peeling. To loosen the skins, put five or six tomatoes in a thin cloth in a steamer or wire basket and dip into boiling water. Leave about one-half minute. Lift the tomatoes out of the boiling water and dip them quickly into cold water. Cut the core out of the stem end and pull off the skins.

USDA recommends that tomatoes be heated and placed in hot jars. Placing cold tomatoes in jars is no longer recommended.

Quarter the peeled and cored tomatoes. Put them in a pan. When the pan is about two-thirds full, put the lid on the pan. Heat the tomatoes, slowly at first until some of the juice is drawn out. When there is enough juice to keep 'the tomatoes from sticking, increase the heat. Let tomatoes come to a boil. While tomatoes are heating, get the jars ready to pack.

Measure salt and put in the jars - 1/2 teaspoon for each pint and 1 teaspoon for each quart if desired.

As soon as the tomatoes reach a boil, they are ready to pack. Use a large spoon or cup to dip up tomatoes. Work fast.

If the juice does not cover the tomatoes, take a spoon and press them down. Add more tomatoes and juice if needed. Fill the jar to within 1/2 inch of the top.

Remove air bubbles by running a table knife or spatula down the inside of the jar in three or four places.

Clean the rim of the jar to remove food or liquid which could prevent sealing. Adjust the lid.

Process tomatoes, pints (43 minutes) and quarts 54 minutes), in a boiling water bath. TOMATO KATCHUP

Homemade ketchup has an incomparable flavor. 12 lbs. firm ripe tomatoes 11/2 cups chopped onions

1/2 cup chopped red or green bell pep-

1/4 teaspoon red (cayenne) pepper 1½ cups cider vinegar

4 teaspoons salt 41/2 teaspoons paprika

34 cup sugar

11/2 teaspoons mustard seeds 11/2 teaspoons black peppercorns

34 teaspoon whole allspice 1 (2-inch) cinnamon stick

Wash tomatoes. Cut out cores; cut tomatoes into quarters. Cover bottom of a 6-quart pot with tomato pieces. Crush with a potato masher. Add remaining tomato pieces, onions, bell pepper and red pepper. Bring to a boil over medium-high heat; reduce heat to low. Cover: simmer until vegetables are soft, about 45 minutes. Press tomato mixture through a food mill or sieve. Discard seeds and skins. Return puree to pot. Stir in vinegar, salt, paprika and sugar. Tie mustard seeds, peppercorns, allspice and cinnamon in a 6-inch square of cheesecloth. Add to tomato mixture. Bring back to a boil; reduce heat to low. Stirring frequently, simmer, uncovered, until volume is reduced by half, about 11/2

Wash 3 pint jars in hot soapy water; rinse. Keep hot until needed. Prepare lids as manufacturer directs. Remove spice bag from tomato mixture; discard. Puree tomato mixture, 2 or 3 cups at a time. in blender or food processor. Return to pot. Stirring occasionally, simmer until ketchup mounds slightly on a spoon. Test doneness with plate test, page 58. Ladle hot ketchup into 1 hot jar at a time, leaving ¼ inch headspace. Release trapped air. Wipe rim of jar with a clean damp cloth. Attach lid. Place in canner. Fill and close remaining jars. Process in a boiling-water bath.

Behrends, Turmel exchange nuptials Saturday evening

Nuptials were spoken by Tammy his brother as best man. Tyise Behrends of Hereford and William Alexander Turmel of Austin during a candlelight ceremony Saturday evening in Fourth and Bedford Church of Christ in Dimmitt. Dale Wells of the church officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Behrends of Route 2 and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Turmel Sr. of Austin.

Four candelabra, holding 28 tapers, and a three candle unity candelabra entwined with greenery decorated the front church altar. Pews were marked with blue bows.

Kylene Thomas of Clarksville, Tx., served her sister as matron of honor and John Turmel Jr. of Austin served

The groom's sisters. Yvette Hernandez and Yvonne Deason, both of Austin, were bridesmaids. The bride's brothers, Bob Behrends and Earl Behrends, were groomsmen. Escorting guests was the groom's brother, Lawrence Turmel of Austin.

Honorary flower girls included the bride's nieces, Cori Dawn Thomas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gary Thomas of Clarksville, and Lynndee Inez Behrends, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Behrends.

Ring bearer was Jason Turmel, the groom's nephew and son of Mr. and Mrs. John Turmel Jr.

Musical selections were vocalized by the Fourth and Bedford Church of Christ Singers and soloists, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Behrends. Songs included "The Lord Bless You and Keep You", "Whither Thou Goest", "The Wedding Song" and "Faithful and True."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white organza gown featuring an empire waist, and wide lace collar flowing to the back with the overlay of lace cascading into four tiers. The leg-of-mutton bouffant sleves, with an overlay of organza and lace, gathered at deep lace cuffs. The full-skirt was edged in matching lace and swept into a chapel-length train.

The three-tiered veil and blusher of bridal illusion gathered at the back of a wreath consisting of white rose buds, carnations and greenery.

She carried a cascading bouquet of blue rose buds, white roses, embellished with ribbon streamers, and pearl trailing.

Attendants were attired in powder blue taffeta gowns fashioned with fitted bodices and deep flounces. They also wore blue flower wreaths, trim-med with pink ribbons, in their hair and carried pink candles surrounded by blue and pink mixed nosegays.

The bride's sister-in-law, Mrs. Earl Behrends, invited guests to register at the reception held in the church fellowship hall.

Presiding at the bride's table were Melodi Moore and Susanne Baxter of San Angelo. Serving from the groom's table were the bride's cousins, Jody Watts and Beth Miller, both of Dimmitt.

The three-tiered bride's cake designed with a flowing fountain was placed on a table centered by the bride's bouquet and bridal attendants' candles.

Red Cross Update

A program on breast cancer will be presented Friday, Sept. 20, by Kee Ruland. The Uniformed Volunteers will host the covered dish luncheon which will precede the program.

All women of the community are invited. The meeting will be held in the banquet room of the Community Center. Those attending are asked to bring a covered dish. For further information, call the Red Cross office at 364-3761.

The Chapter is in the process of renting car seats for children. Come by the office if you are in need of a child's safety seat. When children are small, they need a little extra love and protection, like a specially designed car seat.

Crashes at even 10 to 30 per hour can expose children to instant injury and pain. Putting your child in safety seats will give them the security and protection that they need.

By DIANNE PIERSON Library Director

Novels of love and adventure are featured this week at the Deaf Smith County Library. "Seize The Wind" by John Gordon Davis and "Rich Is Best" by Julie Ellis are the two books featured this week.

"Seize The Wind" is the story of a man who has an idea that could change the world. Some women, like Tana Hutton, are attracted to men who try to achieve what almost everyone else thinks is impossible. Joe Mahoney is a man like that. Trained as a lawyer, his mind is not in the law courts but in the air that was conquered first by the Wright brothers and by men of imagination since. Joe Mahoney sees that one of the great problems of the modern age is that there is a surplus of food in many of the developed countries and millions near starvation in the underdeveloped countries, and the solution lies in cheap transportation for massive amounts of food. He has the answer...bring airships back.

A determined entrepreneur, Joe Mahoney joins forces with the aeronautical genius Malcolm Todd to set up an airship company. They think they can pull it off. Most people think they're crazy-except an American named Tex Weston, who decides he'll steel their company from them once the airship is perfected. When Tana Hutton meets Joe Mahoney her instinct tells her to run. She can stand on her own feet, she has her own business empire in Australia. But Mahoney has fallen for her and their affair sustains and fires him as his airships are built.

Then the airplane that Tana is in crashes in Antartica, and nobody can figure out how to get to the crash site, where there may be living survivors, except Joe Mahoney and he's off. "Seize the Wind" is a magnificent, panoramic novel of love and ambition and the highest adventure left to

"Rich Is Best" is the powerful tale of a beautiful young heiress's search for the kind of fulfillment that riches beyond imagination cannot buy. As a young girl, Diane Carstairs knows that she doesn't want the life that her flightly mother leads. Desperate to leave her family and its responsibilities, she marries a handsome Hollywood actor whose dark secrets make themselves known very early in the marriage. She begins her

Ira Ross, a brilliant young playwright who is intensely committed by his Jewish faith, fights against the values of Diane's superficial life. Yet, despite the parities between them, there is an immediate attraction, an unspoken understanding. Gradually, Ira shows Diane just what it means to believe in one's religion, and ultimately they forge the kind of relationship that endures, one based on love, passion, loyalty, Preschool public story hour -

Screening required for school children

Most parents don't question that children need all the help they can get in starting school and joining classmates in activities that can influence the rest of their lives.

But possible impairments in their children's hearing and vision can hamper a child's early progress. And many parents may not know that state law requires that children four years of age or older have to be screened for certain vision or hearing problems before they can enroll in school or preschool.

A 1983 law specifies that Texas schools and preschools must determine that children enrolling in September 1985 are screened for possible impairments. The children required to be screened include those entering preschools, kindergarten or first grade. Additionally, during the 1985 school year all third and fifth grade students are to be screened.

A screening is a brief test or series of tests to show whether a child needs closer examination by a specialist.

Screening may be done by: (1) a physician licensed to practice in Texas; (2) a professionallicensed to assess vision or hering; (3) a Texas Department of Health (TDH) approved vision or hering screener. Simple and painless screening for early discovery of vision or hearing problems can safeguard against later difficulties in learning.

If the child fails the vision or hearing screen, parents are notified and should seek help from a specialist. For families with low income, vision and hearing services are available through Medicaid, the Texas Commission for the Blind for severe vision problems, and the Texas Department of Health for hearing aid placement.

Chapter meets for salad supper

Members of Xi Epsilon Alpha Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority met Monday evening in Southwestern Public Service Reddy Room. Margie Waddell, incoming president, welcomed members to a 'beginning night" salad supper.

Following the meal, members stood for the opening ritual and roll call was answered by 11 members. It was noted that nine were absent.

The president reported that Brenda Thomas had volunteered to fill in temporarily as treasurer for Ronna

Jimmy Middleton, corresponding secretary, read thank you notes received by the chapter during the summer months. Correspondence was received from Charla Edwards. Rose Marie Robinson and family, JoAnn Richburg, Billie Brown, Debbie Walker and the Life Line program at Deaf Smith General Hospital.

Other thank yous from members present were extended from Susan Shaw, Donna Grady and Robinson to their secret sisters. Waddell extended her appreciation for those who furnished cookies and kool-aid to the chapter's booth at the recent Town 'n' Country Jubilee.

An invitation was received to the chapter to have a booth at the Rotary Club Halloween Carnival at the Bull Barn on Halloween night.

A treasurer's report was presented by Waddell. She also reported that the yearbooks are being put on computer by Kay Williams, program chairman, and will be ready for the first meeting in September.

Hostesses for the Sept. 3 meeting will be Sharon Bodner and Mary Brinkman with Jody Blackwell presenting the program entitled "Photography and Art."

The Sept. 17 meeting was also announced as having Donna Grady and Charla Edwards as hostesses. Lynda Brown will present the program on home planning and finance. It was also reported that several specific programs on Beta Sigma Phi were ordered along with the regular program selection.

A letter received from the Golden Spread Portrait Shoppe was read by Waddell. The business is operated by the same couple who took the family portraits for the Statue of Liberty service project. A price list was read and information given for a future ways and means project.

schedule of social events. She also requested that the group meet at 7 p.m. Sept. 3 instead of 7:30 p.m.

Waddell expressed an important point concerning courtesy to the chapter hostesses during the year. If unable to attend a meeting, contact the hostess or an executive officer and inform them. This is essential in helping the hostess know how many to prepare for that evening.

Last year's scrapbook chairman, Susan Shaw, presented outgoing president Sharon Bodner with her own scrapbook of 1984's activities.

Humorists to appear at Ranch Days

Two western humorists will share stories and autograph their books during Livestock and Ranch Days Sept. 20-21 at Texas Tech University.

Ace Reid, famed for his Cowpoke cartoons, and John R. Erickson, creator of Hank and the Cowdog, will participate in the National Golden Spur Award weekend activities.

Reid, noted for creating Jake, Maw and the other Cowpoke characters appearing in numerous newspapers, magazines, calendars and books, will be the featured speaker during the Livestock Day luncheon Sept. 20 at the Texas Tech Livestock Arena. Tickets are $7.50 and are available by calling the Saddle and Sirloin Club at (806)742-2825 or the Ranching Heritage Association at (806)742-2498.

Erickson, a former ranch cowboy, is the biographer of Reid and the author of 14 books, including five in a series on Hank the Cowdog, the canine head of ranch security that has appeared as a Saturday morning cartoon special on CBS television.

Both Reid and Erickson will autograph their books, including Erickson's biography "Ace Reid: Cowpoke," during an autograph session 1-4:30 p.m. Sept. 21 in Codgell' Store at the Ranching Heritage Center. The biography includes photographs of Reid and examples of his cartoons. Reid's and Erickson's other works will also be available during the autograph party.

"Panhandle Cowboy" and "Modern Cowboy," both covering his experiences as a working cowboy; "Cowboys Are Partly Human," book of humor; and "The Hunter," a western novel.

Reid has published 11 books of his 'Cowpokes" humor.

Livestock and Ranch Days are held in conjunction with the National Golden Spur Award and Prairie Party Sept. 20 in Lubbock Memorial Civic Center.

The Golden Spur Award, this year given to North Dakota livestock leader Marie Tyler, is presented for lifetime contributions to the ranching and livestock industries.

Scheduled during Livestock Day is a demonstration by noted sheepdog trainer Arthur Allen. A "Make it with Wool" style show and a livetock judging contest will also be part of the activities. All Livestock Day activities, except the luncheon, are Livestock Day registration begins at 9 a.m. at the Texas Tech Livestock Arena, Indiana Avenue and Brownfield Highway. Livestock Day is sponsored at Texas Tech by the College of Agricultural Sciences, the College of Home Economics and the Ranching Heritage Association.

-Texas University takes lead in filed of veterinary science

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) - Texas A&M University, a school that prides itself in training warriors and engineers, also is part of an explosion in animal medicine that makes the one-stop family veterinarian seem almost quaint.

A movement toward specialization in veterinary medicine that would surprise even most pet owners has been taking place over the past 20 years. The friendly neighborhood vet, from all accounts, is not an endangered species, but veterinary medicine never will be the same.

Veterinary specialization "is here to stay and will continue to grow in all dimensions," said Dr. E. Dean Gage, associate dean at the A&M College of Veterinary Medicine.

National boards certify veterinary specialists in 14 categories, including cardiology, anesthesiology, radiology, dermatology, internal medicine and neurosurgery.

"There is simply too much to know, and the complexity of things about us is beyond the grasp or capability of any one person," said Gage, who practiced neurosurgery before becoming an administrator.

Gage said he knows of a Houston vet who performs only animal dentistry and that some people at A&M have expressed interest in animal acupuncture, even though there is no board specialty in the field and the university does not teach it.

The commitment to animal specialties rivals that of the human medical profession, with doctors of veterinary medicine spending a minimum of 12 years from the freshman year in college to reach the rank of certified specialist. And although medical doctors make more money, Gage said a veterinary specialist can expect to start at $45,000 to $55,000 and move up to an income of $65,000 to $80,000-plus a

Family Service withdraws

The Board of Directors of Catholic Family Service of Amarillo voted in two related decisions, to withdraw the Agency from membership in the United Way, and to establish a regional annual fund-raising campaign on behalf of the unique services provided by the agency. These actions were taken in the regular monthly meeting of the CFS Board Tuesday.

In explanation of the board's decision, CFS Board President Mike Matteo stated, "In light of United Way's recent decision not to fund CFS programs for children and youth, our Board felt we must find alternative sources of funding. Because the need is so great for the services provided by the programs affected, our Board felt strongly that its responsibility to these children was to find new support for our services."

The children and youth service programs of Catholic Family Service include O'Brien House - an emergency shelter for abused, neglected, and runaway children; team resources for youth (TRY) and the Adolescent Pregnancy Program.

Catholic Family Service is a multiservice social work agency with 10 program divisions which will serve an estimated 5500 families (representing nearly 18,000 individuals) in 1986.

those who become doctors of veterinary medicine pursue advanced specialties, Gage said.

A&M began teaching veterinary science in 1876, and in 1916 established the School of Veterinary Medicine. It became the College of Veterinary Medicine in 1963, and is the only one in Texas.

The college has seven departments, and the total enrollment of 552 students is the largest of any veterinary institution in the United

Veterinary applicants take the same aptitude test as that given to students trying to get into human medical schools, and each year 138 students are selected from some 300 qualified applicants.

Gage said A&M undergraduates are not given preference, but for the past 20 years, all freshmen vet students have been Texas residents. This year's freshman class includes 67 males and 71 females, and history indicates that 98 percent of them will graduate.

Among the 200 A&M veterinary faculty members is one professor who teaches a class in the importance of animals to human mental health and also is available to console people who are distraught over the loss of a pet, Gage said.

The veterinary college centers on the Veterinary Teaching Hospital, which has 50 or 60 interns and residents in clinical specialties.

"One factor that has driven specialization for us - and it is also an enormous difference from human medicine, which has one species - is that we have all the species, and there's too much to know about the differences between the dog, the cat, the horse, the cow," Gage said.

"We have all the same cancers in animals that you see in man, the same kinds of injuries to the knees that you see in football players, and all of the congenital anomalies birth defects, heart defects," he said.

The hospital covers 174,000 square feet and includes small and large animal clinics, which treat 22,000 animals a year. Mobile vet units treat an additional 25,000 animals a

There are 350 cages, wards for intermediate and intensive care, dog runs, an oxygen chamber, operating microscopes, automatic clinical analyzers, and a clinical pathology lab "that is the same as you would find in a human hospital," Gage said.

A&M also obtained a $150,000 loan to buy a 40-meter track that has sensors to measure the pressure of a horse's hoofs as it trots or walks

Gage said the procedure was developed in Switzerland, and that there are only two other such tracks in the world, in England and Germany. Diagnostic fees for use of the track will pay off the loan, he said.

Another coup for the A&M veterinary college will be a wildlife and exotic animal center, which now is being developed.

"Particularly in the southwestern part of this state many of the ranchers make more money off their exotic animal hunting and reserves than they now do off their cattle industry," Gage said.

And along with the special animal treatment goes increased vet costs.

"Horse abdominal surgery that 20 years ago we wouldn't have thought of doing, now we open them up quite routinely with great success, with a total bill of $2,500 to $4,000," Gage

"We buy our supplies and reagents and medications and pharmaceuticals and bone plates from the same suppliers at the same cost, and we have a great disadvantage we have not developed to a high degree yet the third-party insurance payer," Gage said. "Our clients have to foot a major part of the bill. In human medicine, most people have insurance that pays the bulk of the enormous cost." Pet insurance is becoming "quite the vogue" across the country and there should be an increased demand for veterinary specialization once it becomes commonplace, Gage said. "I am absolutely convinced that veterinary specialization has a great future and will continue to grow and expand," he said.

You are right, I didn't exactly cover myself with glory when I wrote that answer. Thanks for calling me on the carpet. You weren't the only reader who let me know I bombed.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You have published many worthwhile letters about reckless drivers and drunken drivers. Now will you please publicize the need to rid our highways and streets of careless and drunken pedestrians, negligent and stoned bike and motorcycle riders, and irresponsible, daredevil lunatics who are angry at life?

I was the driver of a car that struck and killed a pedestrian. I cannot begin to describe the anguish I suffered as a result of that incident. I did not, thank God, suffer from guilt. The person who lost his life was walking after dark where there was no sidewalk. He was wearing dark clothing and moving with the traffic. The man was elderly. He stepped or stumbled into my vehicle's path. I didn't see him until I heard that awful thud and his body went flying through the air.

My message to pedestrians, bike and motorcycle riders is this: Please remember that the rules of the road apply to you, too. Parents: Supervise your young children and keep them out of the streets. Instruct your school-agers that the roadway is no place to walk or stand to wait for the school bus.

A pedestrian or bike rider may be permanently disabled or lose his life in an accident that could have been avoided with just a little caution. In addition, the accident almost always changes the life of a blameless driver in ways that are impossible to describe.

If traffic tickets were issued and fines or sentences imposed on careless pedestrians, parents, bike and motorcycle riders as well as on careless motorists, the accident rate in this country could be reduced greatly.—BEEN THERE AND HUR-TING IN GAINESVILLE, FLA.

DEAR BEEN THERE: Thanks for giving my readers something of value today. Too little attention has been paid to the careless victim. Your letter may save some lives.

Don't flunk your chemistry test. Love is more than one set of glands calling to another. If you have trouble making a distinction you need Ann's booket, "Love or Sex and How to Tell the Difference." Send a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request and 50 cents to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Accent on Health

Sending measles the way of dinosaurs and the dodo bird would give Texas Department of Health (TDH) officials great satisfaction, because the disease should have been extinct three years ago.

Measles, a highly contagious viral disease of childhood, is on the endangered list and near extinction with reports of new cases at an alltime low. The number of new measles cases has declined by tenfold in the United States during the last decade, largely because of increased vaccination efforts.

But pockets of susceptible populations, notably among middle school and high school students, keep the virus hanging on at the edge of the

Dr. Tracy L. Gustafson, a TDH epidemiologist, hopes a study of 1,800 young students in Corpus Christi will help give measles a final, fatal push in Texas. He headed a team of TDH epidemiologists, physicians, nurses, and technicians who drew blood from the students this past spring.

That blood is being used in a serological survey, a study that will

Triticale bake-off scheduled

Two Hereford firms, George Warner Seed Company and Arrowhead Mills, will sponsor a triticale baking contest at this year's Tri-State Fair in September it was recently announced.

According to Warner Seed spokesman Ron Kershen, the event will offer cash prizes of $40 for first place winners in each of three classes as well as a $60 award for grand champion, $40 for reserve champion and $40 for most original recipe. He said the three classes of competition are (1) Breads, (2) Cookies and (3) Cakes.

Triticale (pronounced trit-e-kaylee) is a cross of wheat and rye. The name derives from the Latin words triticum (wheat) and secale (rye).

Kershen said triticale has proved to be a superior small grain for the production of forage for livestock and is used for grazing, hay and

However, he said both Warner Seed Company and Arrowhead Mills believe it has an even greater future as a food grain. The Tri-State Fair Bake-off is intended to acquaint people with the merits of triticale flour, which is available in many local stores, he said.

Anyone interested in entering the bake-off should contact Brown at the Tri-State Fair office in Amarillo or the local Home Demonstration Agent for more information. Information on triticale can be obtained from Kershen at George Warner Seed Company in Hereford.

in the fight against meales and develop a better strategy to defeat it. TDH workers are now determining how many students in junior and senior high schools got measles in the Corpus Christi outbreak and why they lacked protection. Gustafson said he hopes the study will help ex-plain if the vaccine's protection wanes with time or if some children just slipped through the cracks and didn't get vaccinated when they were

The team effort among TDH, the Corpus Christi-Nueces Department of Public Health, and the public schools began as local doctors reported the first case in an outbreak last spring. Measles outbreaks occur most often in March and April, but the age groups of people who become sick have changed in the last decade, Gustafson said.

"Before Texas and other states had mandatory vaccination laws, most cases (in the 1960s and early 1970s) were reported among younger children. Since schools have required proof of vaccination for measles and other diseases before a child could enroll, we've started seeing more cases in adolescents and young adults. We hope the project in

According the said of the country's goal of wiping out measles within its borders, he said. ding to the timetable established by the federal government in 1977, U.S. measles were to be gone by 1982.

The assumption was that measles would be eradicated if 90 percent of the nation's children were vaccinated and those immunization levels could be maintained. But outbreaks of measles on college campuses throughout the country, including Baylor, in Waco, and the University of Houston, kept measles alive and infective.

Vaccination of children for measles, which should be done at or after 15 months of age, will remain a high proprity, said Cynthia Banister of TDH's immunization project. She said the number of measles cases would increase dramatically if vaccination levels were permitted to

Vega woman pays off loan ahead of schedule

Nola E. Hart of Vega made her final payment on her Farmers Home Administration housing loan Aug. 26, 1985 in the amount of $12.20, eight months ahead of schedule.

Hart obtained her $4,000 FmHA loan on April 28, 1966 to purchase and improve the small two bedroom, 600 square foot house, including three lots. She purchased the dwelling from the Vega Independent School District, who ceased to use the property for school purposes for $2,000.

An additional $2,000 was borrowed for home improvements and fees, consisting of $1,250 for adding a 12'x20' room, floor covering, new roof, two wall heaters, paint, wiring, plumbing, $700 for labor and $50 for attorney fees. Hart agreed to furnish 80 hours of her labor to paint the interior of the house. The payments on her loan was $27 per month amortized over a 20-year period at a 5 percent interest rate. There was no subsidy involved in this loan. The FmHA loan was made to provide Hart and her 73-year-old mother with safe and decent housing with payments within her ability to repay. At the time she obtained her loan, the total family income was $4,400 per year. Her mother received $70 per month in old age pension assistance and Hart earned $300 per month from d as a cafe

Hart is now 70 years of age and works parttime at a local cafe in Home ownership loans are still available through the Farmers Home Administration to eligible applicants to buy, build, improve, repair or rehabilitate homes and related facilities in rural areas.

Price index shows sharp decline

WASHINGTON (AP) - Prospects for a huge corn harvest this fall have helped push the government's farm commodity price index to its lowest level in almost seven years.

In August, the Agriculture Department said Friday, prices farmers get for raw products dropped 3.2 percent, marking the sixth consecutive monthly decline. The index was also 15 percent below the year-earlier

According to department records, the August index was the lowest monthly reading since December

Officials also said that preliminary figures for July, which were announced a month ago, were revised to show a sharper price decline than initially reported, down 1.6 percent from June instead of 0.8 percent.

The report said lower prices for corn, hogs, potatoes, soybeans and oranges were mainly responsible for the August drop in the index. Higher prices for lettuce, eggs, lemons, cattle and peaches partly offset the declines for the other commodities.

Meanwhile, prices farmers paid in August were unchanged from July but averaged 0.6 percent below the year-earlier level. Feed prices continued to decline, the report said.

The August report showed that prices of livestock and livestock products were unchanged from July's index but still averaged 9.1 percent below a year ago. Crop prices were down 5 percent from July and 20 percent from the year-earlier level.

According to the preliminary July figures, based primarily on midmonth averages, the price index for meat animals was down 0.7 percent from July and 11 percent from a year

Vegetable prices were up 5.5 percent from July but still 3.6 percent less than a year ago. Higher prices for lettuce, tomatoes and carrots were mostly responsible for the August increase.

The price index for potatoes, sweet potatoes and dry beans plummeted 24 percent from July, averaging 43 percent below the August 1984

Overall, August farm commodity prices averaged 122 percent of a 1977 base used for comparison, according from $2.60 in July and $3.13 a year to the preliminary figures. That was down four percentage points from the revised July average. In August ding to preliminary figureds, 1984, the index was 143 percent.

Department records show that the the lowest since it also averaged 122 percent in December 1978.

The August parity ratio was 50 percent, down from a revised July reading of 51 percent. A year ago, it was 58 percent.

Many economists say the old parity standard is outmoded because it doesn't take into full account changes in farm productivity. But others contend the ratio is still valid and is useful in comparing year-toyear changes.

The report also said:

-Cattle averaged $50.50 per 100 pounds of live weight nationally, compared with $50.20 in July and $56.60 a year earlier. These are averages for all types of cattle sold as beef.

-Hogs, averaged $43.40 pep 100 pounds, compared with $45.80 in July and $50.50 a year earlier.

-Corn, at $2.39 a bushel, was down

It's been estimated that one less below 20%. It's been estimated that one less tillage operation would result in direct fuel savings of over $250 million dollars. Farmers practicing no-till say chemical management is the key. Also, when certain plants like annuals become a problem, crop rotating may help. They also warn a problem field will remain a problem field even after no-till. However, the survey indicated returning to tillage after no-till makes fields easier to work, usually with better yields. Survey participants offer this advice: Use the right chemical for the right weeds. Select seed carefully. Get an even weeds. Select seed carefully. Get an even spray pattern. Bountiful corn crop netting little profit

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) Texas farmers continued to harvest bountiful crops of corn, sorghum and cotton under ideal weather conditions this week.

A lot of counties are boasting good crop yields because of generally good weather this year and the absence of major insect and plant disease problems, said Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

Many farmers are producing 90 to 100 bushels of corn, 4,000 to 5,000 pounds of sorghum and 1-1-4 to 1-1-2 bales of cotton per acre. Irrigated crop yields have surpassed these figures, with some cotton in Southwest Texas (west of San Antonio) producing three bales an acre.

Despite the good harvests, farmers are making little profit off their crops, Carpenter said. Due to extremely low prices, many farmers are putting their crops in the government loan program.

Most of the corn and sorghum have been harvested in southern and central areas of the state, but sorghum harvesting remains active in the Rolling Plains and West Central Texas. Some corn harvesting has started in the Panhandle and South Plains, and sorghum in those areas is starting to turn color.

Cotton harvesting is about complete in the Rio Grande Valley, remains active in the Coastal Bend and is increasing in central areas, Carpenter noted. The developing crop in western areas has been hurt by bollworms and moisture stress.

Vegetable growers in the Winter Garden of Southwest Texas and in the Rio Grande Valley are having to irrigate fall crops due to the hot, dry weather. Fall gardeners also are struggling with fall plantings. Sweet potato harvesting is under way in eastern counties.

Grazing conditions are continuing to decline throughout the state, Carpenter said, and some ranchers are feeding hay to livestock. Water supplies also are declining rapidly under the relentless hot, dry weather. Cattle marketings are increasing in some locations as ranchers are culling herds.

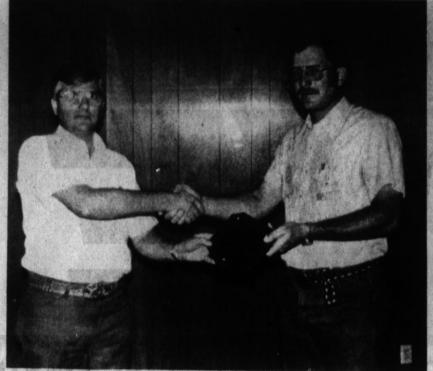

Reports from district Extension directors showed these conditions.

PANHANDLE: Farmers have started harvesting some corn for silage, and sorghum is starting to turn color. Cotton is fruiting well and above yields are expected. However, some 5,000 acres of cotton in Collingsworth County were damaged last week by hail. Wheat is being seeded for early grazing.

SOUTH PLAINS: Cotton is suffering from moisture stress, and bollworms are still a problem in some fields. Corn harvesting is getting under way, with good yield prospects. Range and pasture conditions are declining.

ROLLING PLAINS: Some cotton is under moisture stress and plants are shedding bolls. Sorghum harvesting continues active, with yields of 2,300 to 2,600 pounds per acre in Young County. Farmers are getting land ready to plant, and some light stocker cattle are already moving into the area in anticipation of wheat grazing.

NORTH CENTRAL: A little corn and sorghum remains to be harvested, and the cotton harvest will start soon as bolls are opening. Farmers are having to irrigate peanuts due to hot, dry conditions. Land preparation for small grains continues. Pastures and hay crops need rain.

Schlabs Honored

Hereford Young Farmers president Bill Caraway, left, accepts the congratulations of Area I president Ray Schlabs of Hereford upon the Hereford chapter being named the Outstanding Chapter for the area for the second consecutive year. The honor was granted to the chapter at the recent Area I convention where Schlabs was named Outstanding Area Officer and elected state vice president for Area I for the coming year.

HYF again named as outstanding chapter

For the second consecutive year, the Hereford Young Farmers have been named the Outstanding Young Farmer chapter for Area I, which encompasses an area from the tip of the Panhandle to Lubbock.

Hereford was named the top chapter during the annual Area I Young Farmers of Texas convention held recently.

The local chapter also copped the Area I Radio and Television Award for the fifth time in the past six years on the strength of coverage of Hereford chapter activities by KPAN radio.

Ray Schlabs, who recently completed a term as Area I president, was named Outstanding Area officer, and was elected state vice president for Area I for the coming

Shan Donaldson, a student of Herbert Washington, who left death row and prison after his case was overturned.

Hugh Callaway who was just released - he is a "jailhouse lawyer" who has helped several inmates at various stages of their appeal proceedings.

And Ethel Hodges, an octogenarian who travels to different prisons, "adopts" prisoners, then writes them.

Aside from these regulars, anyone who wants to stop in at the station including relatives of prisoners and ex-convicts - is welcome to join Hill under a big cardboard sign in the studio that reads: "No Eating, No Smoking, No Drinking, No Incense."

The show begins with a C&W song by Bobby Bare, Back Home in Huntsville Again. "Hello warden, I'm back home in Huntsville again," the song goes. "It's time for you to rattle down the bars, the Prison Show is on the air," Shan announces. She does a mail call, announcing to the prisoners what letters she has received.

"Here's one from Billy Hughes. It's sealed," she says. She sounds younger than her age - 55. She goes through 30 letters, announcing which ones arrived at the station sealed and which ones arrived already opened by some third party. Some are read on the air; the rest will be answered later by mail.

"Hey, before we go any further," Hill says, "I received one letter about a musical debate. All I can say is that it was not the Rolling Stones who sang 'Brown-Eyed Girl.' I'm sorry for the prisoner who voted for

"Let's take a little poll here," Hill says in his down-home voice. "Say, Bobby, did you keep a shank (knife) in the joint?"

Bobby (another ex-con at the studio for the afternoon): "No way." Hill: "Hugh, how about you?"

Hugh: "I did. For a little while, everyone else had one." Bobby: "It didn't make sense to me. Most of your prison stabbings are from behind. You can't use a shank to protect yourself."

Hugh: "Well, you are in a real perplexing situation when the guy right next to you says he is going to kill you and he outweighs you by 45 pounds. What are you going to do? You got to carry one."

Hill: "Yeah, but then the problem is, what do you do with it when you don't want it anymore?"

CHANGES TAKING PLACE IN BANKING

Check truncation is a method for reducing the cost of processing and handling checks by centralizing check information at a certain point and transmitting the data electronically to the appropriate financial institution. Bank customers would then receive a monthly statement which would not include the usual and customary cancelled checks. Bank customers are unaware of the high cost of bank maintenance on an account. That maintenance includes computer input, mail items and administrative costs. It costs a bank an average of $17.88 to service one account monthly.

Despite the emergence of ATMs and direct deposit, the anticipated "death of checks" and prediction of a checkless society has failed to materialize. Hereford State Bank furnishes cancelled checks which are enclosed in a monthly detailed statement. No charge is assessed for this convenience. Many banks in the large metroplex areas are no longer furnishing customer's cancelled checks as they have adopted the practice of truncating and also assessing a fee for any requested cancelled

Many financial institutions are now assessing fees for bank services that were once free. Son banks are now charging noncustomers a $2.00 service fee for cashing Social Security checks. Hereford State bank exempts this service charge for senior citizens.

A survey recently conducted revealed that 25 out of 50 banks queried, now have service charges for small savings accounts. The accepted quideline for small saver passbook accounts is limited withdrawals per quarter with a fee assesed for excessive withdrawls.

Hereford State Bank will endeavor to keep account costs as reasonable as possible and will continue to offer the highest yield possible on interest bearing transaction accounts.

The service charges that banks are now charging are entirely reasonable as the cost of bank deposits, banking facilities, and pay-roll costs increase. The consumer realizes these facts and appears to be satisfied that quality banking is better preferred rather than reduced services.

Deregulation has benefitted consumers immensely in the form of higher earnings on interest bearing transaction accounts. If the United States Legislature will allow banks to offer new and innovative services, then the competition will be increased and better quality service and lower priced fee schedules will result for the consumer.

A new 'middle class' stereotype

by Cy Brickfield

Hardly a day goes by that some flint-eyed pundit doesn't gain enormous delight from branding Social Security and Medicare as primarily "middle-class entitlements."

One day it's the Christian Science Monitor blithely assuming that these two programs "benefit largely the middle class." The next day it's former Commerce Secretary Peter G. Peterson lumping them among "non-need-related" programs-programs which, in his view, go mainly to middle- and upper-income groups.

Ultimately, the middle-class issue is beside the point. These programs are a form of social insurance, and when people pay premiums for insurance they expect that contract to be honored. Otherwise, the programs would be welfare, which they are not. In short, they are supposed to be a middle-class entitlement - as well as an entitlement for all Americans who qualify.

Nevertheless, critics' insistence that Social Security and Medicare benefit primarily the middle class certainly reflects a new stereotype of America's elderly. Once portrayed as frail, helpless individuals who couldn't take care of themselves, they are now depicted almost routinely as healthy, highliving "fat cats."

With no end in sight to the staggering federal deficits, some lawmakers are seizing upon this new picture of the elderly to justify huge cuts in both Social Security and Medicare. Already the Senate Republican leadership has called for a reduction in the Social Security cost-of-living adjustment (COLA), and Congress is now debating whether to do just that.

Bolstering Congressional resolve to take such a step have been a number of new claims about the sudden affluence that allegedly has been achieved by older Americans.

To begin with, such individuals derive only a small portion of their income from Social Security. On the average, a recent AARP study found that households which had annual incomes of $26,000 or more in 1981 depended on Social Security of less than 18 percent of their total income that year.

Social Security's own figures show that the oldest and poorest segment of the elderly (particularly groups that include minorities and women) depend on the program for almost their entire income. For example, those with incomes below the 1981 poverty level relied on Social Security for more than 90 percent of their income.

Also, the large percentage of older persons who were in the income ranges from $4,400 to $25,999 in 1981 had a heavy dependence upon Social Security for the bulk of their income.

The story is much the same for Medicare. From a new AARP analysis of Medicare dependency, covering those persons age 65 and over who are not in hospitals or nursing homes, we now know that no more than 11.3 percent of Medicare payments in 1980 went to families with annual incomes of $30,000
