Bovina woman claims occult caused deaths

DALLAS (AP) - A 32-year-old woman blames an occult curse - not herself - for the deaths of her six young children and a niece, the police chief of Bovina said.

But a keen-eyed pathologist noticed signs of smothering in the last death, and all seven of the deaths, six of which occurred in West Texas, now are being scrutinized.

Diane Lumbra, who moved to Garden City, Kan., in 1985, will stand trial in Kansas next month on a first-degree murder charge in the May 1 smothering death of her seventh child, 4-year-old Jose.

In Texas, Parmer County officials now are investigating the six other deaths. Ms. Lumbra is free on $50,000 bail while four West Texas grand juries investigate the deaths.

Five of the children born to Ms. Lumbra, a meatpacker, died in Texas between 1976 and 1984 before their fourth birthdays. But doctors had ruled the deaths natural and police and child protection authorities apparently failed to become suspicious.

Her first child died of choking, as did the third. The second was a crib death, while no cause was ever determined for the fourth child, her niece. The fifth died of heart failure, the sixth of a blood disease, authorities said.

The deaths might never have been scrutinized had a group of pathologists not held a seminar at St. Catherine Hospital in Garden City.

Jose Lumbra was carried unconscious into the hospital emergency room by his mother. Doctors were unable to revive him, but the staff didn't suspect foul play at first, said Parmer County Sheriff's Deputy Richard Bonham.

"They were having a pathologist's seminar at the hospital, and one of the doctors saw the child," Bonham said. "He noticed pinkness around the eyes and ordered an autopsy."

The pinkness, Bonham said, is a sign of smothering.

When questioned, Ms. Lumbra told hospital employees that five of her other children had died the same way because of a curse placed upon them by her former mother-in-law, said Bovina's police chief Gary Coleman.

Coleman said Ms. Lumbra told Kansas authorities that the curse damned all of her children to early death.

Texas authorities were notified and they began searching for records of the other deaths in and around Bovina, a town of about 1,400 located 70 miles southwest of Amarillo.

"I feel as if I failed," said Dr. H.M. McClintock, a Clovis, N.M., pediatrician who reported Ms. Lumbra to Texas Children's Protective Services shortly after she gave birth in 1983.

The woman had told McClintock, whose practice was just across the Texas border from Bovina, that several of her previous children had died.

"I made an effort to keep the child alive and I was not successful in doing so," McClintock told the Dallas Times Herald.

About 5 months later, Christopher Daniel Lumbra became the last of the children to die in Texas.

Bonham said he discovered the woman had attached to her life insurance policy riders for each of her children and had collected about $15,000 total for their deaths.

Langgood takes Littlefield job

Hereford Police Capt. Ted Langgood has been named as the new police chief in Littlefield.

Langgood, 34, had been with the Hereford Police Department for 13 years, rising through the ranks to become second in command.

Langgood is expected to assume his duties in Littlefield on August 6. He will replace Jim Bowland, who had been chief in Littlefield for six years before resigning in June to move to Dallas.

"The way they talked to me I was very impressed," said Langgood, who said Littlefield city officials were helping him find housing and help with other needs.

"I hope I live up to their expectations. This is what you work for...I have mixed emotions about leaving."

Langgood said he submitted his name when the job came open but "didn't expect to go down there. I love a challenge, and they need a leader. I love a challenge and it will be a challenge."

"I have lived 17 years in Hereford, and I'm not overjoyed about leaving town. I have a lot of deep memories, my wife and kids were born here. We're not running out, we're just walking out so we can come back."

Police Chief Caydon Brush said Langgood had "contributed a lot to the department" during his 12 years on the force. "He has done a lot of good things," Brush said. "He has been a lot of help to me...He will be pretty hard to replace."

The Hereford Police Department now has four vacancies with Langgood leaving, but Brush said he hopes to have the other three positions filled perhaps as early as this weekend. After those persons are hired, Brush said he would then look at promotions within the department and might fill the captain's position from inside the present force.

"At that time I want to look at promotions and visit with some possibilities," Brush said. "I would like to wait (until after Langgood leaves to fill his position) out of respect for Ted."

"We have some good applicants and hopefully they will be looking for a place to settle down for awhile."

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says the reward in life will always be in proportion to the risk.

Everything comes to those who wait - if they work while they wait.

The lady was at an auto agency, waiting for an inspection sticker to be put on her car. "I've been watching that mechanic for 15 minutes," she remarked to the service manager, "and I admire the care he takes with his work. He spread a clean cover over the upholstery before working under the dash; he wiped his hands clean before closing the door; he put the hood down gently, leaving no fingerprints, then cautiously pulled out of the garage and left the car in the parking lot."

"Yeah, that's his own car," said the service manager.

"King of the Panhandle beef belt" is the title of an article in a recent Cattle Feeders Annual publication put out by The Record Stockman/Southwest Stockman. "Hereford, Texas, has once again set international records in concentration of fed cattle, making this Panhandle agri-business center the Cattle Feeding Capital of the World," begins the article, written by Orville Howard, who also writes for The Hereford Brand.

Hereford has been mentioned in a number of state and national publications over the past year, and some of the articles originated from the "Hustle Hereford" series which Howard has been writing for The Brand.

A reader also brought to our attention a listing of "The 400 Largest Farms in the United States," a special report in Successful Farming magazine. That list included feedyards in Hereford, some with facilities elsewhere, along with Frito Lay and Griffin & Brand.

The magazine reported that some readers argued last year that many on the list are not really farms. Yet, says the magazine, "the operations cause food and fiber to be produced, using the knowledge of their managers to accomplish the basic goals of agriculture."

The list was topped by Tyson's Arkansas poultry and swine operations with sales of about $1.5 billion. ConAgra was second at slightly over a billion. Cactus Feeders at Dumas was 15th, Barrett & Crofoot 27th and Frito Lay at 29.

Seven of the top 10 firms on the list include some poultry operations but still, the poultry and egg industries account for less than $12 billion of farm income while meat animals produce $45 billion. Of the 400 farms listed, 127 have beef as a primary enterprise.

Others in the 400 listing include AZTX Cattle Co., Bar G Feedyards, Cattle Town Inc., Champion Feeders, Seven X Feedyard and Sugarland Feedyards.

New shuttle leak found

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) - NASA detected a hydrogen leak during testing today of Atlantis' fuel tank, which could mean a trip back to the hangar for the shuttle and further reduction of NASA's 1990 flight plans.

This morning's test was the third filling of Atlantis' external fuel tank in hopes of pinpointing the leak's source. The shuttle had been scheduled to blast off on a classified Pentagon flight in mid-July.

There was no immediate indication how much fuel escaped during today's testing, but it appeared to exceed allowed amounts.

"It is currently unclear where the leaks were originating from," said NASA spokesman Bruce Buckingham. "We are analyzing the situation."

Space agency workers had tightened bolts in Atlantis' porous fuel line, but officials doubted that would be enough to correct the problem.

The space shuttle Columbia also is crippled by a hydrogen leak and is being fixed. If no leaks had occurred in Atlantis today, NASA would have tried to launch it in mid-August and Columbia in September. The possibility of launching both shuttles in the next two months was uncertain after the leak reappeared.

Judge undecided on new law

AUSTIN (AP) - Texas' new school funding plan is in the hands of a state judge, who called the law an important step for poor schools but said he doesn't know if he will rule it constitutional.

State District Judge Scott McCown said he hopes to make a decision on poor school districts' challenge to the plan by October.

"I obviously don't know what I'm going to decide," he said Tuesday. "I think it (the new law) was a very significant step."

He made his comments after closing arguments in a trial that began July 9.

Poor school districts say the school funding plan doesn't make meaningful changes in the finance system declared unconstitutional last year by the Texas Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court told the state to even out funding available to rich and poor school districts. But poor districts say the new law doesn't put them on equal footing with rich districts that can raise more local tax money.

The state "simply put more money into the broke system," said Dave Richards, an attorney for poor school districts.

Another lawyer for the poor districts, Al Kauffman, said, "The rich districts will still be in the game to compete. The poor districts will not, and never have been."

State leaders defend the new law, which would pump $528 million more state aid into schools in 1990-91.

They say it would phase in an equitable finance system for 95 percent of students over several years. The other students are in the wealthiest school districts.

The law guarantees school districts a certain amount of money if they impose local taxes at a particular level. It does not prevent rich school districts from raising additional funds.

The Supreme Court told lawmakers to bring poor districts up, not push down rich districts, said Assistant Attorney General Kevin O'Hanlon.

"That's what the system is designed to do," he said.

The school system relies on state aid, local property taxes and some federal money. School district budgets last year totaled $14.25 billion, according to the Texas Research League.

McCown has said he probably will allow the new plan to be used this school year even if he ultimately overrules it. He said halting the measure immediately could disrupt school budgets.

Of the 68 poor school districts challenging the new law, only the 13 represented by Kauffman want McCown to immediately halt it.

Kauffman suggested that McCown implement a plan drawn by a court master for 1990-91. The plan would give less state money to rich school districts and those with low tax effort, and more to poor ones with high local tax effort.

He also said the judge should set out a different plan for the next two school years, but allow lawmakers to substitute their own if it's equitable.

To be constitutional, Kauffman said, a plan must include all school districts and must not allow some to raise more money than others.

O'Hanlon said capping local spending would hurt some school districts and take away local control.

The state cannot combine school district tax bases without the unpopular move of also consolidating the school districts, he said. Setting a statewide property tax rate also would be unconstitutional, he said.

McCown asked whether he as a state judge has the power to impose a specific plan. He wondered whether it would be "incredibly disruptive" for school districts to face a possibly temporary court-imposed plan.

The judge also asked whether the only real alternative to the new law is school district consolidation.

Groups say pay raises needed for ethics reform

AUSTIN (AP) - If Texans want "fair play" from their legislators, they should raise lawmakers' salaries and insist that ethics and campaign finance reform be campaign issues this fall, two public interest groups say.

The groups Common Cause and Public Citizen said voter pressure may be the only thing that forces the Texas Legislature to clean up a system which limits neither campaign contributions nor how much lobbyists may spend on lawmakers.

"The public needs to pressure their candidates about this," said Pam Fridrich, executive director of Common Cause-Texas.

"I don't want to wait for a bigger and better scandal to see if that works. We're trying to take it from the grassroots level and work our way up. It is an election year, and it is a time for voters to tell the candidates we're interested in these issues," she said.

Since 1989, dozens of news reports have focused on lavish gifts given to legislators by special interest lobbyists. Lobbyists spent more than $2.2 million on entertainment and gifts for lawmakers in 1989.

In addition, experts estimate that spending by Texas political candidates, who may accept unlimited campaign contributions, could set records this year.

The Legislature considered both campaign finance reform and ethics revisions. But no bill on either subject was passed in the 1989 regular session or in the six special sessions held since.

Ms. Fridrich and Tom Smith, Texas director of Public Citizen, said their groups will survey candidates on their attitudes and encourage citizens to make ethics and campaign reforms major issues this fall.

"We're hoping that kind of contact, that kind of constituent pressure, will get the members (of the Legislature) aware that there is a real move among the folks back home to see these kinds of reforms occur," Smith said.

The two groups called for a four-point plan they said could overhaul the current system:

- Raise legislative salaries from the $7,200 a year now paid so lawmakers wouldn't need money from lobbyists to live in Austin.

- Create an independent ethics enforcement agency to make sure public officials follow the rules. The Legislature hasn't funded the current state ethics commission since 1987.

- Begin public financing of campaigns and limit campaign expenditures.

- Require detailed reports on how much lobbyists spend on individual lawmakers. Current law doesn't require legislators to say what they took or from whom.

Souter armed with advice for confirmation process

WASHINGTON (AP) - David H. Souter, the reserved New Hampshire judge picked by President Bush for the Supreme Court, is armed with White House advice as he sets out to press the flesh with the politicians who are key to his confirmation.

Souter was attending get-acquainted meeting with Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., and Republican members of the Senate Judiciary Committee this afternoon.

The committee will conduct Souter's confirmation hearing, expected to begin in September. The president said he hopes the full Senate will confirm Souter before the high court's next term begins Oct. 1.

Souter was paying a similar courtesy call on Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, and possibly other Democrats later in the day.

Fred McClure, the White House's liaison with Congress, and Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., an old friend, are Souter's guides at the Capitol. And the nominee has been told by Bush aides to expect a strong spotlight to be shined on his personal and professional life.

Souter, appearing more relaxed than he did when his intended nomination was announced by Bush on Monday, told reporters Tuesday he was getting used to his new celebrity.

"The blood is circulating a little bit better than it was yesterday afternoon at five o'clock," he said. "I didn't think it was going to happen. I was astonished."

Many senators and special interest groups were surprised as well, and the divisive rhetoric that immediately accompanied President Reagan's nomination of Robert H. Bork in 1987 was not resurfaced.

Bush lavished praise on Souter at fund-raising events Tuesday in Philadelphia and New York.

"I look forward to the Senate hearings of David Souter; I am sure they will find him to be tough but fair," the president said. "He's a first-rate appellate judge, an outstanding jurist and a great legal mind."

"In my nomination of Judge David Souter for Senate confirmation ... there was no single issue, no litmus test or standard dominating my decision," Bush said. "And I will add there should be no litmus test in the process of confirmation."

Conservative and liberal activists alike were taking a wait-and-see attitude, acknowledging that the president's swift action in choosing Souter had caught them a little off guard.

Little is known about Souter's views on the vexing social issues - abortion, civil rights and church-state relations - he would confront if confirmed to replace Justice William J. Brennan, who retired Friday because of poor health.

The Union Leader in Manchester, N.H., reported today that in a 1976 college commencement speech, Souter, then state attorney general, attacked rigid federal affirmative action guidelines as "affirmative discrimination" and added, "There are some things government cannot do."

Souter is "clearly not like Bork," said Elliot Mincberg of People for the American Way, a liberal group. "He doesn't have much of a track record."

The United Conservatives of America gave Souter "a cautious thumbs-up." Richard A. Viguerie, the group's chairman, said, "Most conservatives today have nervous smiles."

Souter brushed aside reporters' questions Tuesday about his views on abortion, one of the sure focal points of the confirmation hearings.

Several senators said it would be inappropriate for the Judiciary Committee to obtain from Souter his opinion on specific issues before the court, but one committee member - Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass. - suggested that general topics could be broached.

"I think there is a desire to have full and complete hearings - fair," Kennedy said.

USDA seeks to improve scarecrow

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Agriculture Department is looking for a better scarecrow and is ready to hire a top scientist to help design one.

That's not the exact reason, but it's close. The project is one of six new post-doctoral research jobs USDA has created for studies in plant and animal science.

James W. Glosser, administrator of the department's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, said the six scientists selected will be able to work for two to four years. He said the salaries range from $24,705 to $42,601 per year.

Glosser said the objective is to obtain needed research in support of the agency's regulatory programs. Another goal is to attract first-rate scientific talent to the field of plant and animal health.

"Contact with participants will continue to benefit us long after the post-doctoral projects have been completed," he said.

Richards complains of 'right-wing issues'

AUSTIN (AP) - Democratic gubernatorial nominee Ann Richards, under attack in recent weeks from her Republican opponent Clayton Williams, struck back saying Williams was concentrating on "right-wing" issues.

"It takes a whole lot more than a swagger and a big hat to make government do what it should do," Ms. Richards said Tuesday after delivering a speech to the Sheriffs Association of Texas.

She accused Williams of ignoring issues such as education and economic development while focusing on sodomy and gun control. Ms. Richards said she supports a law-abiding citizen's right to own a gun.

She said Williams "in a backhanded way" has accused her of being soft on crime because she is a woman, which she said is an insult to all women because they are more likely to be victims of crime.

"I don't think that this office is for sale and I think that before this election is over we will all know the real Clayton Williams," she said.

Responding, Williams' campaign said the Democrat was off-base.

"Clayton Williams has a stand on a whole variety of issues that Ann Richards is talking about and they're more popular than Ann's liberal stands," said Gordon Hensley, Williams' spokesman.

"Clayton Williams is the only candidate for governor that has a 25-point drug plan," Hensley said. He said Williams' education proposal would give parents and schools more local control, while "Ann Richards simply wants more money thrown at the problem."

Hensley said most of Williams' campaign money has been raised in Texas, while Ms. Richards has received more than 20 percent from out of state.

Both Ms. Richards and Williams spoke to the sheriffs' association. Williams called for doubling the number of prisons, the death penalty for child killers and reducing the number of appeals for death row inmates.

He said he would pay for the new prisons and increased law enforcement by cutting the state's operating budget by 7 percent.

Mesa Redondo Cowboy Camp set

The 13th Annual Mesa Redondo Cowboy Camp Meeting is scheduled for Thursday, July 26 through Sunday noon, July 29. Final plans are being made by the various committees under the leadership of President Wesley Grau of Grady.

The campsite is located on the Bowe-Farmer Ranch near Tucumcari, N.M. From Tucumcari, go 11 miles south on Highway 109, or from Ragland, go 14 miles north. Turn east at the big sign and travel two and one-half miles southeast to the camp. It sets at the foot of the historic and majestic Mesa Redondo in a secluded canyon.

Camp pastors for this year are Arnold Leidy of Moriarity, N.M. and Edmund Robb of Marshall. Jim Fullingim of Lubbock will serve as music minister; Jonathan Stockstill of Ventura, Calif. will return as youth minister for the third year.

All ministers will be staying on the camp grounds and will be available for counseling as well as preaching, teaching and singing. Bible classes are taught and activities planned for the various age groups. Mary Ann Cortese of Fort Sumner is youth coordinator. A 'Kiddie Korral' nursery will be available during all worship services.

The first activities of the camp will begin a 5 p.m. on Thursday, July 26, with prayer meeting. Men and boys meet under the prayer tree, women and girls meet separately. Supper will be served a 6:30 with the evening worship service to follow at 8. A campfire fellowship under the leadership of C.L. Bowe of San Jon will follow the evening services each night. Three meals a day are served 'chuckwagon style' on Friday and Saturday, with breakfast and dinner on Sunday.

Mesa Redondo is a member of the Ranchmen's Camp Meeting Association of the southwest. The association now has ten camps in five states during the summer circuit. It is an interdenominational outreach and provides a christian camping experience for all ages.

Hereford falls, 5-4, to Andrews in 8th

By SAM W. WALLER
Sports Editor

John Matthews scored the winning run Tuesday on a wild pitch in the eighth inning to give the Andrews All-Stars a 5-4 win over Hereford in the West Texas State Babe Ruth Tournament at Kids Inc. Park.

Andrews and Hereford played nip-and-tuck the whole way and the score was tied three times in the game. The biggest margin in the contest was when Andrews went up 4-2 in the fifth before Hereford came back to force the game into extra innings.

It was a game of missed opportunities for Hereford, who had the bases loaded in the first and fourth innings and managed only one run. With none out in the first, Ruben Ramos hit into a 1-2-3 double play and Michael Campos struck out to kill the rally without a run.

In the tourney's other game, Graham eliminated Brownfield 23-11 to advance in the losers' bracket. Graham will face Hereford at 7 p.m. today to determine Andrews' opponent in Thursday's finals.

Andrews drew first blood in the second inning when Matthews lifted a sacrifice fly to right scoring Heath McBeth.

Hereford came right back to tie the third as Rene Cano got hold of a fastball off Andrews starter Rene Barrientes for a home run to dead center.

Barrientes put himself back in the lead in Andrews half of the inning, scoring from second on Rudy Madriles' single to right, the gave the run right back in the fourth when Campos singled and scored without benefit of another hit. Vince Castillo was hit by a pitch and Richard Sanderson and Ray Hastings walked to force in the score.

Andrews looked to take control of the game with two runs in the fifth off Fonzie Enriquez, who came on in relief of Ramos. Scott Villareal doubled off the wall in right-center with one out and Jaime Emiliano and McBeth followed with RBI singles to give Andrews a 4-2 advantage.

Hereford got one of the runs back in the sixth when Barrientes was called for a balk with the runners on first and third forcing Castillo across the plate.

Shama Hernandez drew Hereford even in the seventh when he slashed a triple down the right-field line. With two outs and batter Sammy Casarez facing a 1-2 count, Barrientes uncorked a wild pitch to allow Hernandez to score the tying run.

Andrews got the winning run off Casarez, who came on in the sixth, by loading the bases with an error, a walk and a sacrifice bunt on which Casarez tried to get the out at second. He set up the wild pitch.

Emiliano picked up the win for Andrews with an inning in relief of Barrientes, striking out the side in order the eighth.

Casarez took the loss, allowing only the winning run on one hit and two walks.

Graham 23, Brownfield 11
Graham sent 15 batters to the plate in the top of the first and came away with 10 runs on only four hits.

Brownfield starter Chuck Butler lasted only four batters, all of whom scored, and reliever David Perez allowed six more runs before recording the first out of the game.

The inning ended with Brownfield pitchers giving up a total of eight walks.

Brownfield came up with three runs in the second but Graham answered with a solo homer from Michael Whitfill and a two-run shot by Brad Ribble in the third to maintain the 10-run margin.

Brownfield rallied in the fourth with a seven-run outburst to make the score 13-10, but Graham woke up in time to stop the scoring.

Graham picked up another two-run homer from Ribble in the fifth before scoring eight times in the fifth to put the game back out of reach.

Whitfill picked up the win for Graham, pitching the final 2-3 innings and allowing six runs.

Ready to gun

Hereford All-Star third baseman Tab Hathaway readies for a throw to first during action from the West Texas State Babe Ruth Tournament at Kids Inc. Park. Hereford lost 5-4 to Andrews in eight innings Tuesday and will have a rematch with Graham in tonight's elimination game. Hereford opened the tourney by beating Graham 7-6.

Coleman, Martinez, Bonds highlight NL

By RICK WARNER
AP Sports Writer

It was a great night for Vince Coleman, Barry Bonds and Ramon Martinez. And a horrible one for the Houston Astros.

Coleman went 4-for-4 with a homer and triple, scored four runs and stole four bases - including home - as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Chicago Cubs 9-4.

"I just do the best I can and let you guys clap for me," Coleman told reporters. "I've gone 5-for-5 before, but I've never done anything like this. This is the best game of my career."

Bonds celebrated his 26th birthday with three hits and three stolen bases to lead Pittsburgh over Montreal 5-3. He is batting .464 (13-for-28) against the Expos this year.

"I don't really want to talk about my hitting," Bonds said. "I think quiet horses are successful horses."

Bonds hurt his right shoulder in the second inning when he ran into the left-field fence at Olympic Stadium while catching a fly ball. But he refused to leave the game.

"We're in a pennant race," Bonds said. "As long as my arm wasn't broken, I was going to stay in there."

Martinez tossed a two-hitter and struck out eight as the Los Angeles

Dodgers beat the San Francisco Giants 9-2. The second-year pitcher improved his record to 12-4 and increased his strikeout total to 150, tops in the majors.

"He's been tough since he first came up," said Kevin Mitchell, who got one of the Giants' hits. "He's one of the toughest pitchers in the National League."

The Astros continued their wretched road play by dropping a doubleheader at Atlanta. They lost the opener 9-3 and the nightcap 9-8 in 10

Bronco stars open with 11-5 win at sectional

The Hereford All-Stars on Tuesday opened the Bronco Sectional Tournament in Amarillo with an 11-5 win over Amarillo National.

Sonny Perez picked up the win for Hereford, giving up four runs in six innings while striking out 11 while Tanner Murphey sparked the offense with a two-run homer in the sixth.

Hereford took a 3-1 lead in the first as Tanner Murphey and Wade McPherson led off with walks and Kip Smith doubled.

Hereford added three more markers in the second when Raymond Gonzales and Eric Ambold drew bases on balls and McPherson followed with a single.

After Amarillo cut the lead to 6-3, Gonzales led off the fourth with a double and scored.

Joseph Artho added another run in the fifth when he started the inning with a single and scored to give Hereford an 8-3 advantage.

Hereford put the game away in the sixth when Ambold led off with a single to set up Murphey's homer and McPherson singled and scored.

Gonzales pitched the final inning for Hereford, allowing one unearned run on a hit with two strikeouts.

Hereford advances to face Amarillo American at 8:30 p.m. today. The tournament is being held at Southwest Park on Bell Street in Amarillo.

Brett beats Toronto with late home run

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The Kansas City Royals are going no place this year, but that hasn't stopped George Brett from moving right along.

"He's been beating people up in the this league for years," Toronto Blue Jays manager Cito Gaston said after watching Brett beat his team with a 13th-inning homer Tuesday night.

The two-run shot gave the lowly Royals a 5-3 victory over the high-riding Blue Jays and gave Brett a 14-game hitting streak. In that streak, Brett has batted .431 with 25 hits in 58 at-bats.

Brett, the American League Player of the Week last week, is 25 for 58 for a .431 average.

"I have fun playing, it's fun to do stuff like that (hit the home run)," Brett said. "I don't feel like I'm 37. I feel like a kid and I think I'm playing like a kid."

With the loss, the Blue Jays lost a chance to improve their first-place lead on Boston in the AL East. The Red Sox were beaten 6-5 in 10 innings at Milwaukee.

Elsewhere in the AL, it was Detroit 8, Baltimore 2; Seattle 8, Minnesota 2; Oakland 5, California 3; Chicago 8, Cleveland 3, and Texas

4, New York 1. Jim Eisenreich singled with one out off loser Duane Ward (1-6) before Brett followed with his fifth homer, over the center field wall at the Toronto Skydome.

Steve Farr (8-4) pitched the last three innings, allowing one hit.

Toronto took a 2-0 lead into the ninth, but Mike Macfarlane's two-out, two-run homer keyed a three-run rally for the Royals. Toronto forced extra innings when Tony Fernandez tripled and scored on George Bell's single.

Brewers 6, Red Sox 5
Mike Felder singled in the winning run in the 10th inning for Milwaukee.

Ryan goes for career victory No. 300 tonight

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - Nolan Ryan can reserve a ticket for Cooperstown sometime in the 1990s if he can defeat baseball's worst team.

Ryan has a bad back, a bad Achilles tendon and a bad bullpen, but what better opponent for milestone victory 300 tonight than the New York Yankees?

Ryan has been maligned by some critics during his 23-year career because of his less-than-dominating 299-267 record.

But baseball's strikeout king can end any arguments with 300 victories to go with his 5,000 strikeouts and six no-hitters.

Ryan said he won't be thinking Hall of Fame if he wins.

"When I walk out of this game that (the Hall of Fame) will be the farthest thing from my mind," he said. "Maybe it will cross my mind when the time to elect people gets closer, I don't know."

The Yankees could be the perfect foils for Ryan to get his 300th on the first try.

Grover Alexander, Warren Spahn, Gaylord Perry, Steve Carlton and Tom Seaver were successful on their first shot at 300.

Ryan, hoping to become 300 winner No. 20, hasn't lost to the Yankees in 13 years.

He is 3-0 against them as a member of the Texas Rangers.

The Yankees have the worst record in baseball and are the lowest-scoring team in the American League. Ryan has already beaten them twice this season.

History indicates that to win the 300th game you have to go all the way. Only Early Wynn and Carlton failed to go the distance. Wynn lasted five innings and Carlton pitched eight.

Don Sutton was the last to win 300, in 1986.

Ryan's bad back could be his toughest opponent.

"You just never know when it's going to flare up," he said. "It won't be perfectly healed until after the season when I can rest it five weeks or so."

Ryan used only 77 pitches in winning 299 with a 5-3 victory over Detroit, but pulled himself out of the game because the stress fracture in his back flared up again.

Scramble canceled

The four-man scramble scheduled for Saturday and Sunday at Pitman Municipal Golf Course has been canceled, head pro Brent Warner announced.

Warner said lack of entries was the reason for the move. The tourney had about eight teams entered as of Tuesday evening and Warner said at least 15 teams were needed to fill the field.

Finishing up

AL ROUNDUP

Darryl Hamilton opened the 10th with a single off Jerry Reed (2-2) and moved to second on a sacrifice by Greg Brock before scoring on Felder's single to center.

NL ROUNDUP

Ryan altered his routine this week because of the back and Achilles problem.

"I didn't push it when I threw on the side," he said. "The way my back has been acting I decided not to throw as long as I normally do. I don't want to aggravate anything."

Ryan will have his immediate family in the stands and a lot of friends. His pass list was at 60 and climbing.

The 43-year-old Ryan will go against Dave LaPoint who joked, "I don't understand all this fuss over my 79th victory."

If Ryan doesn't win, he will try again next Monday in Milwaukee after four days rest.

The next scheduled start would be Aug. 5 against Toronto at Arlington Stadium.

Box seats are being scalped for as high as $175.

Ryan said he hoped the fans get their money's worth.

"When they walk out of the stadium I want them to be glad they paid to see me pitch," Ryan said.

Loerwald Welding: rugged remnant of Industrial Age

Family business here more than 50 years, keeping alive the legend of the blacksmith

By ORVILLE HOWARD
Special Feature Writer

Longfellow told it in verse in another time in another place but the living legend of the blacksmith is alive and well along a shaded nook over on Second Street.

Located only about a block off Main, Loerwald Brothers Welding and Blacksmith Shop stands today as the last cornerstone to Hereford's original industrial center where roar of the forge and ring of the anvil once echoed to the turnrows.

But despite a shift from coal-fired grates to the electronic arc, not much has changed within the walls of this Deaf Smith County landmark since its beginning back at the turn of the century. Even the walls of the original building at Loerwald Brothers are pioneerish--built entirely of crushed caliche.

It appears the caliche may have been blended with some sort of binding agent, such as cement, but this theory has not been established for certain...sand and gravel commonly used in concrete is conspicuously absent. Only pure caliche evidently taken from the banks of the Tierra Blanca pack the shop walls that rise some 12 feet above curb and gutter and no exact date of construction has been found.

Though the antique walls are bearing well with age, they seem to symbolize a time-barrier--refusing to give up its rugged remnants of an Industrial Age to the delicate touch of a Space Age.

George Loerwald and Raymond Lueb are now the ramrods of this Hereford welding shop which began as a family business more than 50 years ago. And despite its unpretentious setting, the caliche building was once headquarters for more than a dozen welders and blacksmith workers who served the vast agricultural industry of Deaf Smith County. At various points in time, six members of the Loerwald family worked from this shop, along with a host of friends and cousins.

But in recent years George Loerwald and Raymond Lueb have operated the welding shop as a partnership. And as agriculture moved with the times of the push-button world, so moved the industrial side of Hereford business...almost.

The Loerwalds moved, but not much. They followed the high-tech trends in metal work but shied from the computerized fact-finders of the automotive world--they stuck with the mending of metal on metal--the real gridiron of industrial America.

Lueb pointed to a single set of sweep points, edged with studite and honed to the hilt, as he paused for a moment before speaking:

"There's a set of sweeps which George has just finished. I seriously doubt if there's another person in the entire Panhandle who can put an edge on a lister share or plow point as good as George Loerwald. He's a real perfectionist when it comes to that kind of work...or any type of welding, for that matter."

Acting as a spokesman for the partnership, Lueb pointed to a massive steel blade cutter, sort of a jumbo hacksaw on wheels that dates back to the single-piston days of the steam engines--"I don't think they've even made any of those in more than 50 years...it's getting to be one of those one-of-a-kind things. But we use it about every day...one of the handiest things in the shop."

The smell of dawn was still in the air as Lueb gave the overhead door a push, allowing a surge of freshness replace that of molten metal. But the distinct smell of fabricated steel remained. And the only sound came from a mockingbird perched in the big Elm at the edge of the door.

"It hasn't been too long ago when we'd have folks lined up out there waiting for us to open for work," recalled Lueb, as he opened another door. "We'd have stacks of discs awaiting to be rolled and I've seen lister shares stacked nearly waist-high awaiting to be sharpened or edged with studite."

But only a single set of plow points were visible on this particular day.

Lueb pointed out that the farmers still use plows and they still use listers, but all too frequently, the modern-day farmer may run the points to a nubbin without sharpening due to the immense horse power just a throule away.

"There's no telling how much fuel a farmer would save if plow points were kept sharpened," said Lueb. "But who knows...maybe I'm old-fashioned. Maybe they wouldn't save all that much. You know, these farmers are pretty smart and they probably know what they're doing."

But regardless of the "yeahs" or "neahs," Lueb believes that furrows should be made with sharp points and that one-way discs should move with a thin edge. He pointed out that the modern-day three-point drawbars and the tandem discs require much less shop maintenance than the old drag-type farming implements, thus slashing the frequency of visits to the welding shop.

Then, Lueb paused for a moment as he came face-to-face with one of his two disc rollers--"See that rig...that's what you use to roll out an edge on a one-way disc. I've sat at that thing for days upon days rolling discs. It wasn't really hard work but it was of such monotonous nature that you'd have trouble sometimes trying to stay awake. But that is when it got dangerous...one little slip on that pressure arm and the thing could jump out and cut your hand off...pretty tricky if you didn't know what you were doing."

But then came a day, as Lueb reflected, when farmers swapped their one-ways for tandems discs, offsets and a simple implement called the "sweep." And that's when Lueb's disc rolling business bottomed out. However, in recent times, farmers have found that the one-way is one of the most effective implements in the business in the control of bindweed--herbicides, of course, being number one.

However, with state and federal residue specialists now walking the turnrows, a return to the one-way may be closer than most folks think, along with the return of the multi-bottom moldboard. And this would mean more business for Loerwald and Lueb. The two stay pretty well booked up with their present run of business, but an additional surge from the turnrows would possibly call for additional help at the welding tables, if not the trip-hammer stands.

Lueb showed how the original caliche-walled building had been enlarged with an expansion or two through the years, pointing to a drive-through welding shop at the rear. But before leaving the anvil and forage area of the shop, the seasoned welder stooped in front of a massive drill-press, towering some 6 to 8 feet high and weighing tons. In a slight move of the hand, that was almost a caress across the cast-iron frame, Lueb explained how the belt-driven rig could easily handle drill bits of more than an inch in diameter while punching through hardened steel.

"There's a drill press just like this on display in the Smithsonian in New York," said Lueb, as he noted how the giant machine was still in excellent repair. "We have no idea how old it is, but I guess there's a catalogue around somewhere that could tell us that if we really wanted to know... guess it will be around here for a long time since we don't have anything strong enough to move it."

The welding end of the machine shop is where signs of modern times begin to creep into the Hereford Shop. Arc welders strategically placed alongside steel welding tables and electrically-powered drill presses reveal the current role of the welders. And the oxygen/acetylene torches depict the move from the old carbide gas generators. But the past, even here, is still not too far away. An antique arc welder, possibly one of the first ever made, still stands ready for use besides its bright red counterpart.

"It was still welding when we stopped using it," said Lueb. "But the stuff on the wires had gotten so old it was dropping off and we were losing too much electricity going to the arc."

Off to one side of the welding room, Lueb revealed much pride in a shop-made gas space heater which he believed may date back to the 1930s.

"You see, it's made out of old stove pipe which I doubt if one can still find in these parts," he added. "Those holes you see burned through don't hurt nothing cause that lets the heat get out even a little faster."

But the cream of the crop in the welding shop antiques was found in a corner toilet where an automatic flusher catches a newcomer by surprise. Mechanically, the comfort-corner device is rather simple, but to put it in words is a different situation. So, here is kinda how it works:

The stool lid stays in an "up" position at all times when not in use--not all the way up, mind you, but at about a 45-degree angle where one can sort of "hook it" with his hips on the way down. Once in a "down" position, the sound of water can be heard filling a porcelain-covered cast-iron tank at the back of the stool, a circular innovation created long, long ago.

But at this point in the game is where the rub comes in--rise in the stool lid sets the stool flushing...an it quickly brings a flush of questions to mind.

Since Lueb is a professional welder and not a historian, he doesn't have the vintage date of the contraption, but one thing is for certain, there's been a basic correction since its initial development. It truly may be one-of-a-kind in daily operation in America.

Having a great sense of humor, Lueb frequently grinned or chuckled as he touched on the many remnants of the past, but on a more somber note, he showed how all too frequently repairs on the trendy three-points may be done more efficiently and more effectively with the older shop equipment.

Before moving back into the anvil and forge area of the shop, Lueb noted how the "open-door" system of the business created a tunnel-effect on movement of air--

Loerwald Brothers Welding and Blacksmith Shop

"This is the only air-conditioning we've ever had, but you see with the doors open at the right places, it creates a draft even though the wind may not be blowing outside...pretty comfortable, isn't it?"

But on the other, he pointed out that on a real hot day it gets real hot and on a real cold day it gets real cold... "We have the space heater--you go warm awhile and then you go weld awhile."

Back through a caftched doorway, Lueb paused between two trip-hammers standing a couple steps from a gas-fired forge--one built of concrete and fired with natural gas. And it was these innovations that put the coal-fired forge and the flat-top anvil on the back shelf at metal business. With just a twist of a lever, a gas burner in a matter of moments can turn rolled steel into soft stuff--and a foot-controlled trip-hammer can pounce a lister share many times a second, somewhat removed from sledge hammers and anvils of Longfellow's day.

The coal-fired forge remains ready for use year after year, but most of the time it stands as a mute reminder of earlier times. Wooden pulleys running on wooden bearings and flat belts stand ready for use with just the flip of a switch, allowing a single overhead shaft serve a half dozen shop tools with one motor. But there was a time when this shaft of wooden pulleys was powered by a water-cooled, single-stroke gasoline engine--things moved slowly in the olden days, but they moved.

In a corner office, Lueb sat before a business desk that was much older than he. And on top of the desk were office remnants of the past--a handcranked adding machine and a hand-operated cash register--"We still use them both every day...melted some of the keys of the cash register once with a light bulb when it was frozen up in the middle of the winter, but it still works."

Though a business sign depicting "Loerwald Brothers Welding" has begun to fade, the heritage of this business dates directly to the first industrial center of Hereford, back to the turn of the century.

The first blacksmith shop in Hereford remains relatively obscure, but it is recorded that the John E. Jacobsen, Sr. family arrived in Hereford from Lewisville, Tx., on June 7, 1903, and before Christmas, he had built a blacksmith and woodworking shop at the corner of Second and Miles. The business thrived, serving the frontier farming developments, and in a short time he brought in a partner.

At some point in time during the first decade of the century, the Barnhart and Shreve Blacksmith and Tin Shop was built just across the alley to the west, fronting on Second Street, the original building of the present-day Loerwald shop.

In 1928, Jacobsen built a new brick building at Second and Miles and in 1934, he turned the business over to his three sons, John, Jr., Chris and Berry. This building was located on the present site of Stagner's Truck Service Center.

Meanwhile, the J.A. Loerwald family arrived in Hereford from Wichita Falls in 1929 and took up farming southeast of town. But hard times fell on the Loerwald move into farming--a total hail-out on one wheat crop and another burned to the ground after it had been stacked awaiting for the threshing crew. So, they looked for work elsewhere and found it in the Jacobsen Blacksmith Shop at Second and Miles.

Ed and Gene Loerwald had worked for the Jacobsens for a number of years during the Great Depression of the 1930s when the old Barnhart blacksmith shop across the alley became vacant. Thus, came the opportunity for them to go into business for themselves and they took it. In December of 1937, the Loerwald Brothers opened for business on Second Street.

By this point in time, irrigation had started to boom around Deaf Smith County and by the early 1940s, the production of irrigated potatoes was enticing spud farmers from such distant points as Idaho. The demand for well casing welders spawned across the Greater Hereford area where the Loerwald brothers were on call day and night as farmers punched holes into the Ogallala formations. By this time J.A. Loerwald and his six sons were all working from the family shop. Ed, Gene, George, Larry, Harold and Tup.

Each new crop had its impact on the family business during those boom years of the 1940s, a time when a global war called for expansion of domestic petroleum production and the charting of underground formations across the Southwest. And right in the middle of it all were the Loerwald brothers who built an entire seismographic rig for a crew of geologists.

Those were the boom years in disc rolling, shop-built land floats for the ditch irrigators, onion hoers, repairs on homespun potato diggers, pickup fingers for fallen wheat or row crops, branding irons and tractor guides.

Tractor guides? Tractor guides were ingenious devices which when attached to the steering rods of the old wheatland tractors eliminated the need for a driver...almost. Since help was hard to come by during those war years of the 1940s, tractor guides became quite popular in the Hereford area where the soil was of a compact nature...the guides wouldn't work in sandy soil. And sometimes they failed in the Pullman Clay soils of Deaf Smith County.

Simply put, the shop-made tractor guides consisted of little more than a couple of discs mounted together with a couler, all of which was designed to follow a one-way furrow while attached to a tractor's steering rods. In the event of a guide jump-out, the designers recommended farmers use cutoff switches rigged between the steering rods and the magneto. Some farmers used the safety measure and some didn't--two in particular did not. One farmer found his tractor and one-way plow in a playa lake and another was crushed to death by his driverless tractor as he dozed in the shade of a truck at the end of the field.

At one point in time, there were 14 welders and blacksmiths working from the Loerwald shop. But as World War II escalated, the younger Loerwalds went into service, leaving J.A., Ed, Gene and B. Bundy, the blacksmith, to take care of the home-front in Hereford. For a number of years, Ed Loerwald handled all of the gas line welding for the city of Hereford.

When Bundy retired in the early 1950s, Tom McClung took his place at the forge and remained with the Loerwalds for the next 10 years. Ben J. Lueb, an uncle of the Loerwald brothers, came to work about that time at the family shop and a little later, his son, Raymond Lueb came into the family business.

When the Loerwald brothers returned home from military service, the family business didn't hold the attraction as it had in earlier years, except for George who later took over his father's interests in the business in 1990s. Gene Loerwald retired in 1978 and Ed retired in 1981, selling their interests to their brother, George, and their cousin, Raymond Lueb.

Lueb pointed out during his recollection of the family business that his parents, Ben and Amelia Lueb, came to Hereford from Cooke County, Tx., in 1932 when he was 3, and his parents, as the Loerwalds, fell on hard times when they tried their hand at farming during those early years of the 1930s.

The two Hereford welders, blacksmiths, if you please, readily admit that their business is not as brisk as in earlier times, but regardless of the business pace, they open every day at 8 a.m. five days a week, sometimes earlier and sometimes on Saturdays.

Perhaps it should be pointed out that in 1947, the Poarch Brothers opened for business in steel fabrication just across the street to the west from the Loerwald Brothers. Thus, for a number of years, the Jacobsen Brothers, the Loerwald Brothers and the Poarch Brothers were all aligned in a two-block area of Hereford's first industrial center.

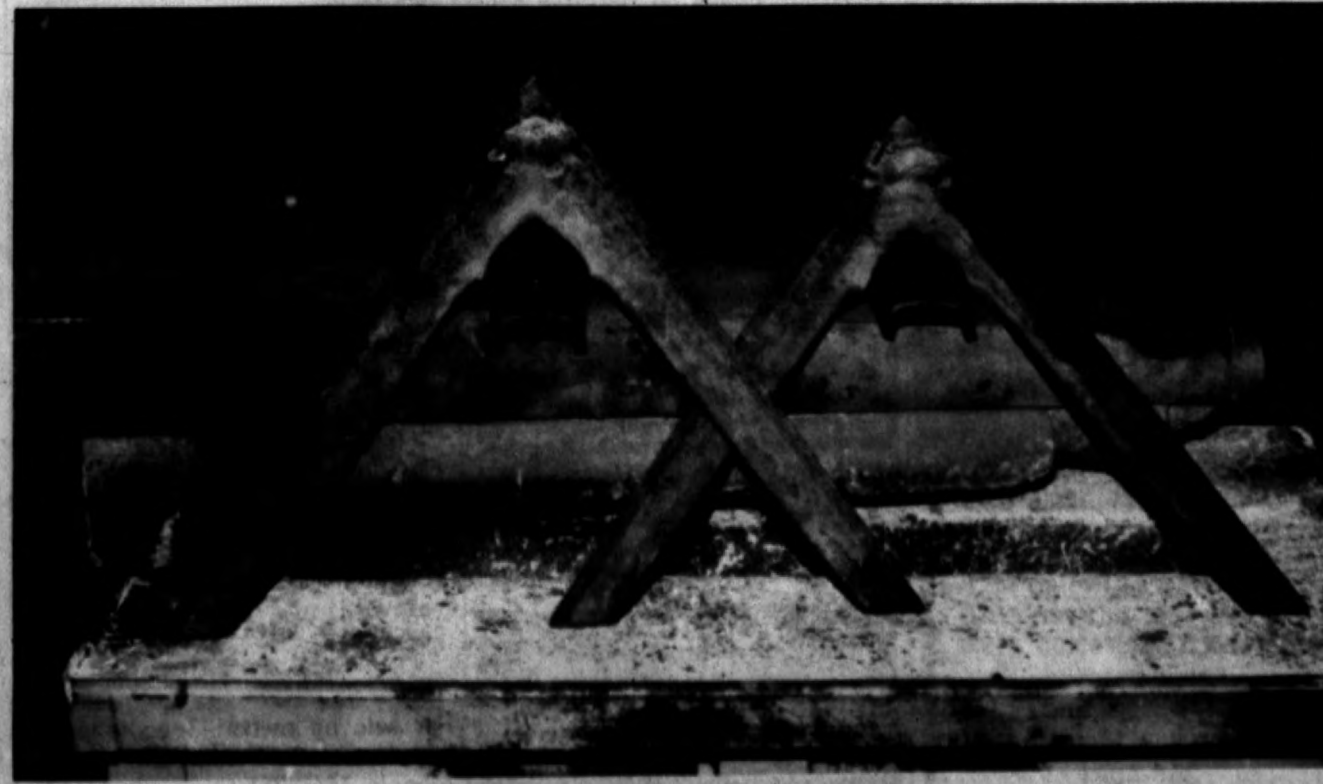

Pauline Loerwald, a sister of the Loerwald brothers, was never active in the family welding and blacksmith shop, but her husband, a Hereford accountant by the name of Bill Howard, has been regarded by many as the one who guided the original Poarch brothers partnership to becoming one of the area's leading manufacturing firms.

Lueb searched for words when asked about the future of the business since he and Loerwald are approaching retirement age:

"I don't know...I really don't know...it's awful hard to find someone who wants to really work for a living."

WASHINGTON (AP) - Fastball - not the farm bill - was on the minds of the more athletic members of the House, who split along party lines for their annual confrontation on the baseball field. The Republicans beat the Democrats 9-6 on Tuesday. Rep. Joe Barton, R-Texas, handcuffed Democratic batters with a fastball and drove in the winning run.

"It was a great game. It just goes to demonstrate that when Republicans and Democrats meet on equal terms, the Republicans will always win," said Rep. Jack Fields, another Texas Republican. "We made the Democrats realize what a deficit really is."

Eat cake without guilt

Yes, you can have your zucchini carrot cake and eat it without guilt when it's prepared with Spanish olive oil, which is naturally nutritious and healthful.

Unlike other vegetable oils, Spanish Olive Oil enhances the taste of food. It gives character without ever overwhelming and will keep the cake moist and practically cholesterol free.

This tasty recipe is from Penelope Casas, a leading authority on Spanish cuisine and author of Foods and Wines of Spain.

ZUCCHINI CARROT CAKE

1 cup flour
1 1/2 teaspoons cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon ground nutmeg
1 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon baking powder
1 large egg
1 1/4 cup white sugar
1/2 cup light brown sugar
1/2 cup Spanish pure olive oil
1/2 teaspoon vanilla
1/2 cup coarsely grated carrot (about 1 medium carrot)
1 1/2 cups coarsely grated zucchini (about 1 medium zucchini, unpeeled)
1/2 cup chopped Spanish hazelnuts or walnuts

Preheat oven to 350 degrees F. Sift together in bowl the flour, cinnamon, nutmeg, baking soda, salt and baking powder.

In another bowl, beat the egg until frothy. Mix in the white and brown sugars, the Spanish olive oil and the vanilla. Continue beating until thick and smooth. Stir in the grated carrot and zucchini, then mix in the sifted dry ingredients. Add the nuts.

Grease well a loaf pan or square cake pan. Pour the mixture into the greased pan and bake for 45-55 minutes, or until the cake springs back to the touch. Cool and turn out of the pan. When thoroughly cooled, wrap in foil and leave at room temperature. The cake gains flavor after one day and will keep for several days.

NEW YORK (AP) - Maria Maples still dreams of a future with Donald Trump.

Asked if she'd consider marrying the flamboyant real estate mogul with whom she has been romantically linked for eight months, Maples said, "Of course I would think about it, of course." Tuesday's Daily News reported.

"This could be a story with a very beautiful ending," she said.

Maples is fighting a subpoena to testify about Trump's prenuptial agreement with Ivana Trump, said Chuck Jones, a spokesman for Maples. A hearing on the prenuptial agreement is scheduled for Aug. 20.

The News said Maples described Mrs. Trump as a "cold" woman who is neglecting her children.

Consumer Groups Storm Local Grocery Stores!

Stores point finger at newspaper

Today saw one of the largest consumer responses of the week to offers made by local grocery stores for discounted prices. Across the city, shoppers were redeeming coupons cut from the local paper in record numbers.

"We know any offer we make will be highlighted most by the newspaper," commented a grocery store spokesman. "Our goal is simply to inform the consumers that these discounts are available. We are confident they will respond if they see it in the paper." His statement was backed by recent Consumer Data Service reports that indicated grocery store ads triple volume on discounted items and double volume on regularly priced items. It also revealed grocery ads are read by well over 70% of newspaper readers.

Grocery store representatives unanimously agreed that newspaper advertising was the only way to get immediate consumer response. One grocer remarked, "Most people read the paper, and a bunch of those readers clip our coupons. It's that simple." His comments reflect the well-known Manufacturer's Coupon Center report which stated that over 80% of all families use coupons.

"When consumers want more for their money, they always go to the newspaper," a grocery official said. When pressed by reporters for the best offer he could make to the consumers he replied, "Look in the paper, it's all right there. Green leaf lettuce, two heads for 79¢... with a coupon of course."

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The letters and responses from women who despised their mothers really hit home. I saw myself in almost every paragraph.

My mother was a hate-filled, abusive person. She held grudges against members of the family that went back 50 years. She was miserable to my father, who was gentle and kind. He did his best to protect my sister and me from her violent temper and irrational outbursts.

The light of my mother's life was her firstborn, a son. He was so much like her that it was frightening. He looked like her, had her same vicious temper and was cruel and abusive to my sister and me. When I was 10 years old, he tried to attack me sexually. When I told my mother she said, "So what? My brother tried that on me, too. It's no big deal."

When my brother was 19, he ran off with the town tramp and married her. After a few weeks they both moved into our home and my mother gave them the big bedroom that had been hers and Dad's. Three weeks later, when the tramp made a play for my dad, Mom told my brother that they'd have to live somewhere else. She continued to give him money, however, and came to his rescue whenever he was in trouble, which was often.

When my mother became old and sick, I took care of her until she died. I made a conscious decision early in life not to let her abusiveness and cruelty make me like she was. I raised my five children with love and kindness and the rewards have been tremendous. They are wonderful adults now and my grandchildren are the joy of my life.

I know this letter is long, but I am living proof that it is possible to survive a nightmarish childhood. Maybe my letter will give hope to others. -- North Carolina

DEAR N. CAROLINA: You beat the odds and I salute you. Thanks for an inspiring letter.
