Farm leader criticizes Lujan over free trade

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - Secretary of the Interior Manuel Lujan's assurance to farmers that "there is nothing to worry about" in passing the North American Free Trade Agreement was rebuked by Texas growers opposing the treaty. Lujan, stumping for the Republican party Tuesday, touted ratification of a free trade pact with Mexico as a means of economic recovery. Carl King, president of the American Corn Growers Assoc. based in Dimmitt, said, "Lujan is completely ignorant of the facts." King, who grows corn, cotton, sugar beets and wheat on 1,500 acres in the Panhandle, says farmers have not been assured that crops grown in Mexico won't flood the U.S. market, driving prices down. "Mexico grows corn the way Japan does rice," said King, one of the country's most outspoken farmers against the free trade agreement. "We could lose a lot of our market." When asked about several Texas farm groups' opposition to the trade pact, Lujan said, "There is nothing to worry about" and "I don't think there is a concern." "In the whole United States about 600,000 jobs are related to exports to Mexico," Lujan said. "If the North American Free Trade Agreement passes that will be an additional 130,000 jobs. So it is very important that we get it passed." The Bush administration is currently negotiating the trade agreement. The treaty will ultimately go before Congress for approval. "The government has not given growers any assurances that other countries won't be able to backdoor crops through Mexico," King said. "There is nothing to keep Mexico from buying sugar from Cuba and sending it straight into the United States. Prices would crash," King said. Others fear substandard produce coming across the border, King said. "Our biggest fear is that we would have to lower our standards to Mexico's rather than them raising to ours," he said. Lujan defended the agreement as an answer to economic recovery and said environmental safeguards would be installed to ensure product safety. "When you talk about farm exports, farm exports have risen while the president has been in office from $22 billion to $37 billion," Lujan said. "And that is because we have not been protectionists. We allow for the expansion of trade." King said Lujan's figures are deceiving. "Trade exports are not up," King said. "They have been down for the last three months in a row." "And if exports are below the cost of production, why export it?" In closing, Lujan said the recession is over and that "the economy is not in bad shape."

Baker meets Iraqi dissidents

WASHINGTON (AP) - Secretary of State James A. Baker III is holding an unprecedented meeting with a delegation of Iraqi dissidents who are seeking U.S. support for their efforts to bring down President Saddam Hussein. The six-member delegation, comprising Kurds, Sunnis and Shites, planned an afternoon meeting today with Baker amid growing administration frustration with Saddam's refusal to abide by U.N. Security Council resolutions nearly 500 days after they were approved. Officials have not ruled out use of military force against Iraq but they insist that option is not likely over the short term. Jalal Talabani, secretary general of the anti-Saddam Patriotic Union of Kurdistan, said in an interview Tuesday he was seeking U.S.

"military, financial, moral and political support - all kinds of support." It was not clear whether all six dissidents have a uniform strategy as they conduct their meetings with top administration officials and congressional leaders. The meeting with Baker was to take place after a morning House Foreign Affairs subcommittee hearing on the Iraqi situation. Accompanying Talabani to the meetings will be Massoud Barzani, a political rival who is president of the Kurdistan Democratic Party. Also in attendance will be two representatives of the southern-based Shiite population and two Sunni opposition leaders.

Speaking for the Patriotic Union, Talabani said in the interview he placed high priority on gaining an exemption for the Kurds from U.N. sanctions against Iraq. He also said the delegation planned to sound out officials here about the possibility of setting up a broad-based provisional government in exile. State Department deputy spokesman Richard Boucher downplayed the significance of Baker's decision to meet Iraqi opposition leaders in Washington for the first time.

He said lower level meetings had been held and added that it was logical for the higher level delegation now here to be received by Baker. Another plus for the delegation, in the U.S. view, is that all members support a shift to free elections in Iraq, Boucher said.

Race leader visits with Billingsley

Debbie Turner, right, of Mobile, Ala., visits with Hereford volunteer Gary Billingsley at the timing stop at Town and Country on Tuesday. Turner is the leading woman rider in the race and checked on her times with Billingsley. Volunteers will man the stop through today.

RAAM cyclists pedal through

Bicycle riders from around the world have been pedaling through Hereford the last two days, en route from Irvine, Calif., to Savannah, Ga. It's part of the Race Across America (RAAM), a grueling 7-to-10-day torture run from coast to coast. The first riders, averaging over 15 miles per hour, came through Hereford on Monday evening. Many of the riders passed through town on Tuesday. Some weren't scheduled to wander through until this afternoon. Wayne Pakulis, a message therapist for 43-year-old RAAM rookie Paul Blair, said his rider and others had encountered few problems. "Paul is the leading rookie and everything has gone smooth so far," said Pakulis. "We hit one little storm but nothing too serious. His muscles are in good shape and I think we'll reach our goal of finishing in the Top 10 and being the top rookie." Debbie Turner, the leader among all women in the race, said things were going well for her. "Well, I've built up a pretty big lead and I really feel good," she said Tuesday afternoon at the timing stop at Town and Country Convenience Store. She led her closest competitor by almost three hours. The top tandem team, Bob Breedlove and Lon Haldeman, came through Tuesday. Canyon riders Nick Gerlich and Roger Mankus hit some bad luck but were expected to come through Hereford today. They were given wrong information about a turn in Arizona and went about three hours, 45 miles, out of their way before finding out they had taken a wrong turn. They rode back the three hours and are trying to make up the time.

Clinton hits on 'trust' issue

LAKE CHARLES, La. (AP) - Bill Clinton, having recovered from questions of credibility and character, is painting himself as the candidate to trust, running against a man he says has a long record of broken promises. Both President Bush and Clinton have turned, at least temporarily, away from their arguments that they are the presidential candidates of change. Now both are insisting they are the most trustworthy when it comes to domestic or foreign policy. "The flip side of change is trust," Bush said Monday in arguing that voters should rely on his experience to guide the nation's dealings with other countries. Such comments have given Clinton his ammunition for the week. "Trust? This is a guy who said 'read my lips' four years ago and he wants to be trusted," Clinton said Tuesday while campaigning in Chicago. Today the Democratic candidate was campaigning in Louisiana and booked a rally at the Superdome in New Orleans - site of the Republican National Convention in 1988 where Bush said, "Read my lips: No new taxes," a pledge he later abandoned. Even before the Superdome visit, Clinton was painting Bush as someone who couldn't be trusted. "This is a guy who said he would stick up for the forgotten America, and as soon as he was elected, he forgot them again," Clinton said. "He ran on a kinder, gentler nation, and we got a meaner, more divided nation." Clinton cited Bush's veto of a bill that would have made it easier to register to vote. The White House said decisions on where to hold voter registration should be left up to the states. Dogged by questions of character throughout a brutal primary season, Clinton appeared to be issuing a pre-emptive strike against the Republicans for any coming assaults on questions of trust or character. In Illinois, Clinton mixed campaigning with fund raising. He attended a $1,000-a-person event in Chicago on Tuesday evening that was expected to net $1 million. Clinton can't use that money - he got $55 million for the general election from the taxpayer-financed fund - but the Democratic National Committee can use it for organizing, phone banks and other related efforts. Earlier, at a Chicago-area hospital, Clinton called exploding health costs "the core of our national economic discontent" and said a national health care plan was essential to turning the economy around.

UN team finds no evidence

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) - U.N. experts found no evidence of weapons programs in Iraq's Agriculture Ministry, and Baghdad boasted today that Saddam Hussein's dignity had been restored during his standoff with the West. Iraqi television showed Saddam taking a symbolic victory swim in a river near his hometown. There also was footage of a bare-chested Saddam driving a speedboat. Iraqi news reports said Western leaders were losing sleep over Tuesday's pro-Saddam and anti-U.N. demonstrations in Baghdad. U.N. inspectors said they had completed a systematic search of the agriculture ministry today. Achim Biermann, the German head of the team, told reporters in Baghdad that they found no materials covered under the Persian Gulf War cease-fire.

Hoover bashing riles Iowans

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) - The Great Depression may have started on Herbert Hoover's watch, but some Iowans are getting a little tired of all the Hoover-bashing going on in this year's presidential campaign. After all, the man invented Girl Scout cookies. "Not since Herbert Hoover," Democrats say as they tick off what they consider the economic ills resulting from 12 years of Republican presidents. Even Republicans are joining in. Jack Kemp, secretary of housing and urban development, argued for a new definition for the Republican Party. "I want to see the party of Lincoln be the party of Abraham Lincoln, not the party of Herbert Hoover," Kemp said.

Then there's fellow Iowan Tom Harkin, who tried unsuccessfully for the Democratic presidential nomination this year. "George Herbert Hoover Bush," is how he often referred to George Herbert Walker Bush on the stump and at the Democratic National Convention earlier this month. All this has set off a tempest among Hoover enthusiasts, a sizable number in the 31st president's home state, even more in his home town of West Branch, site of The Herbert Hoover Presidential Library. "What Senator Harkin and many other politicians need is a good lesson in history, and I'm just the person to see that they get it," West Branch Mayor Richard L. Rex wrote in a letter published by The Des Moines Register.

"The point we're making up front is Hoover is someone who deserves to be remembered not only for the four years he was president, but by the 50 years of service," said Richard Smith, who runs the Hoover library. Elected in 1928, Hoover watched the stock market crash before he'd been in office a full year. He was defeated by Franklin D. Roosevelt as the Great Depression spread across the nation in 1932. He was forever linked to - and usually blamed for - the decade of hard times. But early next month, Hoover library officials will open a renovated museum, hoping to highlight the other 46 years Hoover served the public. But some worry Kemp, Harkin and others like them have made a bigger impression.

"The problem is, we're a society of sound bites," Smith said. "We're a society that wants to reduce everything to two or three words." The high-tech museum will let visitors play a "Hoover Quote Game" and vote on how well he handled the Great Depression. "Hoover sounded more like Karl Marx," Smith said. "People walk through this museum, and universally say 'I had no idea this man did so much,'" Smith said. Hoover, who died in 1964, founded the United States Food Administration, North American Relief Fund and European Children's Fund Hoover's wife, Lou Henry Hoover, spent 12 years as head of the Girl Scouts. "He also invented Girl Scout cookies," Smith said.

Safety will be key as 70 linemen take to the poles in the second annual Southwestern Public Service Company Lineman's Rodeo, August 1, in Lubbock. The rodeo will pit SPS teams from west Texas and eastern New Mexico in a competition intended to promote good, safe working habits.

Competing from Hereford area Don Parr and Bob Avery, who will join a Canyon employee on a three-man team, and apprentice David Bridges.

There are seven events for each linemen team, each event representing a task that linemen could perform at any time.

"They will be competing for speed, but safety is the major factor in this contest," said Don Taylor, SPS training coordinator. "The judges are really going to be looking at correct working procedures," he said.

Journeyman linemen teams consist of three competitors--two climbing journeymen and a groundman. Apprentice linemen will be competing as individuals in three events.

The three teams with the highest scores--and the winning apprentice--will represent the company at the International Lineman's Rodeo, August 29, in Kansas City, Missouri.

A lineman team from Lubbock and an apprentice from Artesia, N.M., won the rodeo last year.

"This is really something to see," Taylor said. "It's work that these guys do every day, maintaining reliable electric service for the area," he said. "But during the rodeo, we get to see that work first hand."

Two of the most popular events are the "hurt man rescue" and the "pole climbing."

The "hurt man rescue" calls for contestants to climb a pole and "rescue" a dummy that has been perched near the top. In the "pole climbing" event, a participant must quickly and carefully climb a pole, while carrying a small bucket containing a raw egg. As he descends, the lineman must carry the egg in his mouth.

The event will be held August 1, at 8 a.m. at the SPS "rodeo grounds" in Lubbock. The local lineman's rodeo is sponsored by SPS, in cooperation with the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

Farm strike puts peppers in big pickle

EL PASO, Texas (AP) - Striking farm workers say the pay for picking peppers isn't that hot.

The farm workers went on strike before dawn Monday to persuade labor contractor Jesus Olmos to raise his 85 cents-a-bucket wage for harvesting New Mexico jalapenos to $1.25 a bucket. That would be minimum wage over a regular day.

The workers say their ultimate goal is to eliminate contractors from the agricultural industry.

Carlos Marentes, Border Agricultural Workers Union leader, said Olmos is one of the first contractors to hire chili workers this season. How much Olmos pays will set a wage standard for other contractors, Marentes said.

Chili is New Mexico's biggest cash food crop. Harvesting increases in mid-August.

The strike began at the foot of the Paso del Norte Bridge. Workers gather there every growing season to be recruited and bused to work in New Mexico fields. About 50 workers left Olmos' bus and joined the strike, Olmos said.

"I think there is a general discontent among workers," Marentes said Monday.

The field where workers had been picking jalapenos belongs to New Mexico rancher Loyad Anderson. Anderson last year had voluntarily contracted directly with workers, Marentes said. The contract guaranteed minimum wage, water and bathrooms at the fields.

But Marentes said the contract expired in February and with it went the guarantees.

Anderson was not at home when called for comment. Jesus Olmos of El Paso was not listed.

The New Mexico chili industry was worth about $59.2 million last year, up from about $54 million in 1990, a Department of Agriculture report said. The record output came despite heavy rains that ruined some of the crop.

Under federal labor laws workers must be paid minimum wage, but some workers can earn more than minimum when paid by the bucket because they are faster pickers. Workers say that at 85 cents a bucket, even the best pickers wouldn't earn minimum wage.

"Eighty-five cents an hour! That's a wage they were paying 10 years ago," said a worker who would not give his name, but is supporting the strike. Many workers say contractors blacklist them when their names appear in print or they appear on television criticizing the industry.

"How is it that the price of household goods is rising, but salaries are going down?" the worker said in Spanish. He said he and his wife earned a total of $3,800 to support their three children last year.

The worker said he would survive on food from neighbors and family and donations from the union while he is on strike.

Congress investigates Blue Cross

WASHINGTON (AP) - Congress is taking a look at Blue Cross-Blue Shield plans that provide medical coverage for nearly 95 million Americans amid charges of mismanagement and insider dealing.

Four of the 73 local plans are "experiencing serious fiscal problems," according to a private Florida rating firm. Senate investigators have identified six other plans whose cash on hand could provide less than four weeks claim coverage.

The 1990 failure of the West Virginia Blue Cross-Blue Shield plan sent shock waves through the $100 billion, non-profit system and awakened concerns of state regulators and Congress about the nation's largest health care provider.

The Blue Cross and Blue Shield Association, the self-regulating trade group for the 73 member plans, says the West Virginia situation is unique and that its recurrence elsewhere is unlikely.

While most state and local Blue Cross-Blue Shield plans are viewed as financially healthy and well managed, the parent association itself has placed 15 of them on a "watch list."

"The problems that we have are generally in the most highly regulated environments - they're mainly in the Northeast corridor," the association's president, Bernard Tresnowski, said in an interview.

The Senate Governmental Affairs Committee's permanent subcommittee on investigations is holding two days of hearings beginning today to look into what its chairman, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., called a "series of questionable actions" that led to the West Virginia plan's demise.

In a report earlier this month, the subcommittee's staff identified several alleged management and regulatory "improprieties" surrounding the West Virginia plan's failure.

Among them:

- The plan hired at least one prominent elected state official as a consultant to insure political support in dealing with state regulators.
- An unfavorable audit by the state insurance department's staff in 1985 was "altered" and a 1986 audit that was "extremely critical" of the Blue Cross-Blue Shield plan's management "was apparently never officially filed."
- There were questionable dealings between the parent West Virginia plan and a computer subsidiary that, in actuality, appeared to have been owned by the officers.
- The national association assured state regulators in 1988 that the West Virginia plan's financial problems were related to national trends and would soon improve, even though the association had put it on a "conditional status."
- Regulators from other states tell of similar experiences.
- The nation's largest "Blues," Empire Blue Cross and Blue Shield in New York, reported Tuesday that its reserves would run out by the end of the year without another rate increase.
- In Maryland, Insurance Commissioner John A. Donoho said: "Far from being the Depression-era organization that provided health care to subscribers at the lowest price, Maryland Blues have ventured into purported profit-making schemes without my regulatory approval or knowledge. Most of these have failed abysmally."

Maryland plan President Carl Sardegna told state lawmakers Tuesday that he had signed an agreement with Donoho promising to provide much of the financial information he had requested.

Since 1981, more than 25 financially troubled Blue Cross-Blue Shield plans have been merged into more solvent ones.

Systemwide, the Blue Cross-Blue Shield plans appear to be healthy, with assets of $30.1 billion and reserves of $9.8 billion at the end of 1991. But those figures say nothing about the solvency of the individual plans.

Last month, a West Palm Beach, Fla., financial consultant, Martin Weiss, issued his own private financial ratings of the 73 Blue Cross-Blue Shield plans.

Weiss listed just two of the 73 plans as being in excellent shape and 24 as being in good condition. He described 32 of them as in fair condition, 16 as being weak and four as being extremely weak.

The four teetering on being placed under state supervision, under Weiss' ratings, were the Blue Cross-Blue Shield plans in New Jersey, New Hampshire and Vermont and the Wholehealth Insurance Network serving western New York.

Opera to be performed in Palo Duro Canyon

"The Legend of Columbus," an opera written by Gene Murray, should help dispel the public's misconceptions about opera, according to Mila Gibson, founder and director of the Amarillo Opera Company.

Written in the pageant style of a street opera, this production should have widespread appeal both to aficionados of opera and to those who have never seen an opera.

The performance is scheduled for Sunday, August 2 at 8:30 p.m. in the casual atmosphere of the Pioneer Amphitheater in Palo Duro Canyon State Park. It is the same theater where the musical drama "TEXAS" is performed each summer.

"People can get a touch of history and a touch of culture at the same time," Gibson said. "Better yet, though, they'll get a wonderful evening of entertainment that we think both young and old will enjoy."

Murray, a regular in the "TEXAS" cast as "Uncle Henry" for the past several years, is a native of Childress, Texas. He is working with the Amarillo Opera Company under a grant from the Britain Fund, administered by the Amarillo Area Foundation. The purpose of the grant is to increase the opera company's outreach program.

"More than 30 one-act operas have been presented throughout the Panhandle during the last year as part of our outreach efforts," Gibson said.

"People who never believed they would appreciate this particular art form have been entertained and surprised by their enjoyment. We hope our presentation of Gene's work will expand that sense of appreciation," she added.

Murray originally began the work at the urging of Margaret Harper, one of the founders of both "TEXAS" and of the Amarillo Opera Company. The outdoor musical drama has made entertainment history and own international recognition. "The Legend of Columbus" will similarly make history as the first opera performed in Palo Duro Canyon.

It is also remarkable in its use of local talent and in the combined efforts of several entities who have helped make the production possible. The talents of the Amarillo Opera will be augmented by performers from the Lone Star Ballet and cast members of "TEXAS." The show also has received support from Amarillo College and assistance from the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce.

General admission tickets for "The Legend of Columbus" are 12. They are available at the "TEXAS" Box office, 2010 4th Avenue in Canyon. They also may be purchased at the Amarillo College Concert Hall Theater at 22nd and Jackson in Amarillo. For additional information, call (806) 655-2181 or (806) 371-6359.

Jennifer Hicks earns special scholarship

Jennifer Hicks was awarded the Edith Lois Wilson Scholarship at the recent District I 4-H Fashion Show.

Karen Babitzke, scholarship chairman for the district I Texas Association of Extension Home Economist, cited Jennifer as an "outstanding 4-H'er with a bright future ahead of her as she chose to serve people and enhance their quality of life."

The scholarship, given in honor of former District I Extension Director Edith Lois Wilson, is awarded annually to a 4-H'er that will be majoring in home economics and is determined on the basis of service to others through 4-H leadership and community service and to a youth with high academic standing.

Hicks responded with her appreciation to Wilson who was in attendance and the district home economist. The youth will be attending Texas Tech University in the fall and will be majoring in dietetic.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, religion, handicap or national origin.

Concert, dance set Saturday in Clarendon

It'll be a night to tap your toes, swing your partner, or just lean back and listen to good ol' West Texas "swing" music on Saturday, August 1, at a concert and dance to benefit Yesterday's Children and its proposed Old West park, Thunder Junction.

Jay Riley will bring his band of former "Texas Playboys" and their special brand of music known as "West Texas swing" to perform for the event which will be held at the Rodeo Grounds in Clarendon.

The Champion Texas Thunder Coggers will kick off the evening's entertainment at 8 p.m. with exhibition dancing, taking time out to teach the crowd the popular new "Achy Breaky" dance. The band will begin at 8:30. The Big Texan Dancers, led by Margaret Naden, will perform at intermission.

Hamburgers, hot dogs, nachos, soft drinks and other food items will be for sale starting at 7 p.m., said Dorothy McNutt, Clarendon volunteer and benefit chairman. "We invite everyone in the Panhandle to join us for a great evening! Come on down before the music and entertainment start and have a picnic with us."

Tickets are $10 each and entitle the purchaser to a chance at several door prizes, including a 1966 vintage Baby Blue Cadillac donated for the occasion by a volunteer. A person must be present to win, and the lucky winner of the car must be at least 18 years old.

For tickets, check with your senior citizen organization or call Yesterday's Children, 806-371-8468. Tickets may also be purchased at the door.

"We'll have hay bales--or you can bring your own lawn chair," said Susie Montgomery, Pampa volunteer and benefit co-chairman. "There'll be dance contests and more, so come on down to Clarendon and dance under the stars August 1st!"

Riley, a native of Amarillo now operating Buck Creek Productions out of Pampa, has written such songs as "I Just Can't Forget You," "The Big Bar-B-Que" and "Aces and Eights." The former Texas Playboy has been active on the Country Western music scene for many years--as a songwriter, performer and radio personality.

Yesterday's Children, a non-profit organization, is working to develop Thunder Junction as an ongoing, self-generation source of funding for senior citizen programs throughout the Panhandle, said Pat Kaiser, President.

Planned for a scenic bluff near Greenbelt lake north of Clarendon, the park will feature a turn-of-the-century Western town with live demonstration of frontier crafts, industries and activities. Art work, crafts and other merchandise made in Texas, both on and off site, will also be available at the park.

LONDON (AP) - A London tabloid has been ordered not to reprint a concert photo of Michael Jackson until mid-August at the earliest.

Jackson won the 15-day injunction Tuesday against the Daily Mirror in his complaint that a photographer violated an agreement not to sell any photographs taken during the show last month and not to publish them more than once.

The Daily Mirror reprinted the photo on Tuesday along with its story on two lawsuits filed by Jackson against the newspaper.

In addition to the lawsuit over the photographs, Jackson is suing the Mirror for libel for saying he has been left severely disfigured by plastic surgery.

His lawyers said he is prepared to take the witness stand to let a jury decide for itself.

Solutions to swimwear purchasing dilemmas

Buying a swimsuit is a dreaded task for many women across the country. Combing through pawed-over swimsuit racks, they agonize over the right style, color, price and size of a suit even before trying it on in a cramped dressing room with unforgiving fluorescent light that seems to magnify every physical flaw.

Lands' End, Inc., a direct merchant of traditionally styled clothing, has a cure for the swimwear-buying blues. The company's new Kindest Cut line of swimwear fits and flatters real women - not just models and mannequins. The suits are designed to accentuate the positive, while helping to eliminate the negative. They make women feel confident. The suits are ordered over the phone and tried on in the privacy of a woman's home. And, in a swimwear retailing breakthrough, they are returnable - no questions asked.

The company developed the swimwear line through eight years of fit testing using real people and listening to customers comments.

Andrews knocks Hereford out of tourney

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

Errors proved costly for the Hereford All-Stars in the West Texas 13-year-old Babe Ruth State Tournament. The Hereford team was eliminated by Andrews 13-3 in the early game Tuesday at the Kid Inc. Complex. The game was ended by the 10-run rule in the bottom of the sixth. Eric Ambold pitched for Hereford and had two remarkable statistics. One was that he walked only one Andrews batter. The other was that of the 13 runs he gave up, only seven were earned runs. Hereford committed eight errors.

Andrews scored in every inning but the fourth, and that was the only inning in which Hereford didn't commit an error. Andrews scored two runs in each of the first three innings. They didn't score in the fourth, but made up for it with four in the fifth. Three runs in the sixth ended the game early.

On offense, Hereford's problem was clutch-hitting; they left 12 men on base. In the fourth, they loaded the bases with no outs and couldn't score.

They did score two in the third. Stephen Cloud and Pete Vargas started off the inning with singles. Dustin Hill reached when he grounded to third, forcing out Cloud. After John Marty Galan walked to load the bases, the Andrews catcher's pick-off throw went past third and into the outfield, and Vargas scored. Arturo Nava and George Pacheco followed with walks, with Pacheco forcing in Hill. That made it 4-2 in the top of the third, but Andrews--the home team by a coin flip--answered with two in the bottom of the inning.

Hereford's third run came in the sixth. Vargas walked with one out. Brant Busby, up next, struck out on a pitch in the dirt. Since first base was occupied, Busby was out immediately, but none of the people involved realized it at first. Busby and Vargas ran, and the catcher threw the ball into right field. Vargas made it to third and later scored when the catcher threw the ball into the outfield again.

Hereford got three hits: Hill in the first, and Vargas and Cloud in the third. Hereford got its baserunners on 13 walks.

Andrews got a few minutes rest before facing Tri-City in the night's second game. They started slowly, and Tri-City took a 6-1 lead on Josh Smith's two-run home run and Johnny Nelson's three-run homer. Tri-City fell apart in the sixth, though. Andrews scored seven runs on two lead-off walks, two singles, a double, two errors and a hit batsman. Andrews pitcher Eli Emiliano shut down Tri-City over the final three innings, facing only one over the minimum.

Today's first game, at 6 p.m., features Graham and Plainview in a battle of undefeated teams. In the second game, the loser of that game will meet Andrews in an elimination game. Andrews has already lost to Plainview, 7-5.

HWBA to install officers

The Hereford Women's Bowling Association will install new officers at a meeting at 7 p.m. Thursday in the Reddy Room at the Southwestern Public Services office. All secretaries of fall and summer leagues should bring final standing sheets to the meeting.

Caught in a rundown

Hereford pitcher Eric Ambold puts the tag on an Andrews runner who got caught in a rundown between third base and home. Third baseman Joseph Artho (7) and catcher John Marty Galan

(16) assisted on the play. The Hereford All-Stars were eliminated from the tournament after the 13-3 loss.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a male who has been in the work force for 13 years, has been married for 10, and has three children. I will probably have to work until retirement age, which means another 34 years. Allow me to let you in on a little secret—homemakers have it made.

What other job allows you to have the TV on all day while you're working, and if something interesting some on you can watch it and do the household chores later. Homemakers wish they were compensated for the true value of their services. Well, so do police, nurses, fire fighters and teachers. Like most everyone else, they get the going rate and it's never enough.

I was programmed at an early age to believe that being a homemaker was unrewarding, dull and dreary—something to be avoided. Now I can't think of any profession that allows a woman as much freedom as being a stay-at-home mother. Certainly the work I do isn't very rewarding, except for a paycheck that vanishes before my eyes.

Homemakers are the backbone of our society, and most of them work hard and are on call 24 hours a day, but they will never get the respect they deserve until they stop pretending that their lives are so much more miserable than everyone else's.

I would be forever grateful if I could stay at home with my boys and opt out of this stinking rat race called "the world of commerce." No signature, please, just—Take This Career and Shove It (Chicago).

DEAR SHOVE: Well, well, well, there you are. I thought your brand of male chauvinism was dead and buried. I didn't realize there were any men left who actually believe that homemakers sit around all day watching T.V.

Granted, the woman at home does have more options—for example, whether she should do the laundry first or mop the floors or go to the market. But her work is really never done. There's always something waiting.

Methinks your basic problem is that you are unhappy with your own job and perhaps that's what needs fixing in your life. I wonder how many men who think the stay-at-home wife and mother has it easy would change places with her if he could? After a week I'll bet they would be screaming—"Take this job and shove it!"

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I just read the letter from the woman who is swallowing two to three packs of gum a day. I hope she sees this.

In 1974, I began having problems keeping food down. I went to the doctor who felt a large mass in my stomach. He suspected cancer. A biopsy was done. I was shocked when the doctor said I had a wad of gum in my stomach which had hardened into a mass. Surgery was performed and a 2 1/2 pound wad of gum removed.

I had been swallowing gum all my life, thinking it was of no consequence. My friends find this story amusing when I tell it, but actually it was no joke. Please inform your readers that gum is not meant to be swallowed and the possible consequences aren't worth the risk.—L.L.K., Columbia, Tenn.

DEAR TENN.: When I read your harrowing story, I nearly swallowed my gum. Thanks for sharing.

DEAR READERS: I have just learned the identity of the author of "Remember Me," that splendid tribute to the flag. He is David C. Graham of San Diego.

Feeling pressured to have sex? How well-informed are you? Write for Ann Landers' booklet "Sex and the Teenager." Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.65 (this includes postage and handling) to: Teens, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

NORTH BERGEN, N.J. (AP)—Water damage to Whitney Houston's condominium has the singer steamed and the condo association in hot water.

Houston is suing the Roc Harbour Condominium Association for $248,000 in compensatory and punitive damages.

The singer said she first complained in 1991 that water was leaking into her apartment through faulty siding. Since then, she has gotten a lot of promises about having the problem fixed, but no results, the lawsuit said.

Gary Provenzano, director of the condo association, has an unlisted number and couldn't be reached for comment Tuesday.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: This morning I had to use pest control for sugar ants, and the smell is awful.

I'm expecting company this afternoon and wanted the house to look and smell nice. I don't like carpet deodorizers because most are too sweet-smelling, and air fresheners don't last long.

So I put about 2 ounces of my favorite potpourri and 1 tablespoon baking soda into the blender on High for about 2 minutes and, voila, my favorite potpourri carpet deodorizer.

Anyone else interested in receiving a copy, please send $2 and a stamped (52 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Heloise/Baking Soda #2, PO Box 795001, San Antonio TX 78279-5001. — Heloise

Two drinks a day boosts chances for breast cancer

Women over 40 who consume more than two alcoholic drinks a day have a more than 50 percent increase in breast cancer risk, a prominent cancer scientist revealed today at a press conference, as he was named a winner of one of the most prestigious prizes in medicine.

"While an increase in risk of 50 percent may appear small, the number of American women who are likely to get breast cancer is very large," said Dr. Brian MacMahon, M.D., Ph.D., who was named winner of the $130,000 1992 Charles S. Mott Prize of the General Motors Cancer Research Foundation for his work in cancer. A professor at the Harvard School for Public Health, Dr. MacMahon is one of the world's leading cancer epidemiologists.

His new study on alcohol, presented at a recent meeting of the Society for Epidemiologic Research, also reveals that breast cancer risk doubles for women over 40 who consume three or more drinks a day. In younger women, between the ages of 16 and 29, the study suggests there was little increase.

"Recent alcohol consumption seems to be related to increasing one's odds of getting breast cancer," said Dr. MacMahon. "The study suggests that the effects of alcohol on breast tissue may be fairly short-term."

Dr. MacMahon won the prize for his ground-breaking research showing that age of first pregnancy is directly related to risk for breast cancer. His work revolutionized the understanding of breast cancer risk factors, and provided the impetus for major new efforts to prevent this disease, such as the National Cancer Institute-sponsored trial of the drug tamoxifen, in 16,000 women.

Two other leading researchers also have been named for 1992 GM Cancer Research Prizes, Dr. Lawrence Einhorn, of the Indiana University Medical Center, was named the 1992 Charles F. Kettering Prize winner for developing a treatment that turned advanced testicular cancer, once 90 percent fatal in young men, into the most curable of all cancers. He now is studying the newest weapons in the cancer arsenal: taxol, retinoids, and bone marrow transplants in testicular cancer.

Dr. Christiane Nusslein-Volhard, of Max Planck Institute, Germany, was named this year's Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., Prize winner for her landmark genetic studies in fruit flies. She is studying nature's plan for development of an embryo, asking, for example, how eye cells "know" to grow on one's head and not on one's kneecaps. She now is moving her research up the evolutionary ladder, using petshop favorite, the zebrafish.

Each General Motors prize includes a $100,000 award, as well as $30,000 to hold a scientific workshop or conference to share the honor's work with other research with other research scientists.

AMAGANSETT, N.Y. (AP)—Billy Joel went fishing to protest state regulations against taking striped bass and wound up with a $250 ticket.

The singer and almost 30 other people were ticketed Tuesday for collecting striped bass in nets attached to pickup trucks on shore.

State regulations require the fishermen to sort through the nets and throw back the smaller fish—a procedure they say is time-consuming and costly.

The protesters say the size limits discriminate against commercial fishermen in favor of sport fishermen.

The protest by the East Hampton Baymen's Association was at Amagansett, the eastern Long Island town where Joel lives with his wife, Christie Brinkley.

Forgetfulness is a form of freedom.

Accent on Health

For the vast majority of women, oral contraceptives provide a highly effective and very safe form of protection against unwanted pregnancies. Sometimes, however, certain medical conditions make it unwise, or even dangerous, to take the Pill. Your doctor will carefully evaluate your health and medical background before prescribing oral contraceptives to make sure they are safe for you.

Here are 10 reasons your doctor might not prescribe the Pill:
1) Blood Clots-Oral contraceptives may increase the risk of blood clots which can cause heart attacks and strokes. If you previously had blood clots in the leg, lung, brain, or heart or have had a heart attack or stroke, you should not use the Pill. Other types of heart disease may also rule out Pill use.

2) Liver Disease-People with liver disorders, such as hepatitis or cirrhosis, do not metabolize hormones containing birth control pills can increase the risks for a woman with liver disease.

3) Breast-Women who have had breast cancer should not be on birth control pills. However, the Pill is considered safe for women with family history of breast cancer.

4) Abnormal Vaginal Bleeding-Unusual vaginal bleeding may be caused by uterine cancer or to her serous conditions. If you have a bleeding problem, our doctor will find out the cause of their irregularity before prescribing the Pill.

5) Suspected Pregnancy-Some hormones in birth control pills can have a masculinizing effect on the fetus after the seventh week of gestation.

6) Uncontrolled High Blood Pressure-Elevated blood pressure can be a side effect of the Pill. Women who already have abnormally high blood pressure should avoid this method of contraception.

7) Diabetes-Some oral contraceptives cause changes in blood sugar levels.

Women with diabetes, a disease in which the body doesn't use sugars properly, may be at risk of problems if they use the Pill. Doctors can do test to help determine a diabetic woman's personal risk.

8) Migraine Headaches-Use of the Pill can make migraine headache more severe.

9) Depression-Studies have shown that women with a history of depression or mental illness may experience intensified symptoms while using birth control pills. Doctors may advise the women to try other methods of contraception.

10) Smokers over 35-Pill users who are over age 35 and smoke have an increased risk of heart attack and stroke.

Even though these ten factors may make Pill use risky for some women, the chances are that birth control pills are perfectly safe for you.

By the time a child is three, he or she will probably have a full set of 20 baby teeth.

Cowboys' trip to Japan won't be vacation

By MIKE FISHER
Fort Worth Star-Telegram
IRVING, Texas (AP) - The Japanese call it "karoshi," and it is a phenomenon that contributes to the death rate in Japan. It means, "literally killing oneself with overwork."

The Dallas Cowboys left home Tuesday and - after losing a day in transit - arrive in Tokyo a day-and-a-half later. So in their preparation for this weekend's game with the Houston Oilers, the Cowboys are about to learn about "Karoshi."
"We're trying to keep it as light as possible, because of the 14-hour time change, the jet lag, and everything else," coach Jimmy Johnson said. "But we've still got to get some work done. So, add everything up, it will be demanding."

The American Bowl contest (which starts at 9 p.m. CDT Saturday, but is an 11 a.m. Sunday kickoff in Japan) is the least of the Cowboys' worries, especially because Johnson plans to deemphasize the importance of the final score.

"When we get back home is when our camp will really kick in gear," Johnson said. "That will be the most important time for us."

While in the Orient, the Cowboys will practice just once daily at Oda Field, a change from the arduous of Austin, where two-a-days at St. Edwards University have been the norm. But that doesn't mean there won't be demands.

After Wednesday night's practice, there is a function with U.S. Embassy representatives. After Thursday morning's workout, there is a 2 p.m. news conference, a 4:30 p.m. reception at the American Embassy, and a 7 p.m. "Welcome to Tokyo Party."

Friday, there is another news conference and another function. And on Saturday, the day before the game, players will be subject to "Fan Day," and will face a mob of Japanese youngsters whose enthusiasm for large football heroes rivals that of the kids who populate Autograph Alley back home in Austin.

And then of course there is the game at the Tokyo Dome, pitting two teams from Texas, two teams that conduct their training camps within a bus ride of each other, two teams that meet again in less than three weeks when the Oilers come to Texas Stadium for another preseason game.

"It's strange that we train 90 minutes apart, but we are going halfway around the world to play a game," quarterback Troy Aikman said. "If we had our choice, we'd just play them here."

At the introductory press conference, the featured Cowboys - owner Jerry Jones, Johnson, running back Emmitt Smith and Aikman - should be instructed to bow to their audience when their name is called. Many of the Cowboys have made this trip before. Johnson will make his fifth visit to Japan. Aikman played in a game there for UCLA, participated in the college all-star Japan Bowl, and made a promotional appearance there in the spring. But none of the Dallas players is familiar enough with life on the Pacific Rim to prevent cultural differences, the language differences and the dietary differences from providing a week full of obstacles.

"I ain't touching any of that food," offensive lineman Nate Newton said. "If it's not American, I ain't touching it. They can keep their raw fish."

When asked about his proficiency handling chopsticks, Johnson said, "Somehow, I expect I'll find a knife, fork and spoon somewhere."

The Japanese language has a number of ways to say, "Thank you." A profuse "thank you" is "arigato." For more effect, there is "makotoni go shinsetsu de gozaimasu," which means, "what you have done or proposed to do is truly and genuinely a kind and generous deed."

By the time this journey is over, the Cowboys will indeed feel deserving of a "makotoni go shinsetsu de gozaimasu" or two.

"Nobody wants to go," Newton said. "But nobody wants to be fined, either."

This trip was not the brainchild of Jones, who believes the marketing advantages it provides should offset the temporary damage all the travel could cause. "Commissioner Paul Tagliabue personally urged us to be involved," Jones said. "It should be taken as a compliment to the Dallas Cowboys."

It was not supported by Johnson, who said, "I live three blocks from Valley Ranch. I wish all 16 of our games were at Texas Stadium. I don't like to travel."

And it certainly wasn't put to a vote of the players.

"We need to understand our popularity over there, and the growing popularity of our league," Aikman said. "In that respect, we'll be serving a good purpose. But because of the work and the travel, I can't really say I'm looking forward to it."

Not even defensive end Chad Hennings, whose travels stuffed into an Air Force cockpit have been all-too-well chronicled, is completely comfortable with the trip.

"I once spent eight hours in a plane for a mission," Hennings said. "I've never spent 16 hours in a 747 on a mission."

Colts notice undersized McCoy

By The Associated Press

At a mere 6 feet in height, Indianapolis Colts nose tackle Tony McCoy has become an imposing figure to teammates and coaches alike.

"I like him. He reminds me of myself," linebacker Jeff Herrod said of the 279-pound rookie. "Because of his size, people look over him and think he's not tough, like some people looked at me."

"He's intense, hyper," Herrod added. "He does a good job of being an over-achiever."

The Colts began practicing their goal-line defense Tuesday and McCoy caught coach Ted Marchibroda's eye.

"Tony made a nice play," Marchibroda said. "He made penetration so that the back couldn't cut into the hole, and basically stopped the play."

McCoy arrived in camp at Anderson University with a reputation of being relentless in pursuit of the football.

"There were three or four of our scouts who felt that way about him," Marchibroda said. "This is what we were looking forward to seeing when he came here and that's exactly the way he's been playing."

"I only know one way to play football, and that's hard," McCoy said. "I want to help this football team. I've got the confidence that I can and I don't look at myself as a second-stringer."

Cardinals

At Flagstaff, Ariz., the Phoenix Cardinals got some bad news on Tuesday when quarterback Timm Rosenbach, out all last year with a right knee injury, jammed the thumb on his right hand. Also, tackle Joe Wolf strained a pectoral muscle and inside linebacker Eric Hill pulled his right hamstring.

Chargers

The San Diego Chargers signed guard David Richards to a one-year contract, leaving only nose tackle Joe Phillips among the holdouts.

Rams

At Irvine, Calif., 17-year veteran tackle Jackie Slater is back at work after a bout with the flu. Slater signed a contract Friday and got in only one day of practice before getting sick.

Steelers

Levon Kirkland, a second-round draft choice at linebacker, and Joel

Steed, a third-round choice at nose tackle, gave the Steelers a look at the future of the defense on Tuesday when they practiced together for the first time.

Raiders

At Oxnard, Calif., Greg Harrell was given to opportunity to devote all of his energy to the U.S. bobsled team when the Los Angeles Raiders released the former Maryland wide receiver.

Browns

Defensive lineman Michael Dean Perry underwent surgery to repair a torn cartilage in his right knee and will be out for three weeks, a team spokesman said.

Falcons

Joey Browner, released by Minnesota last week, continued his tour of camps by completing a two-day physical with Atlanta. He then left for Indianapolis and a workout today with the Colts.

Jets

Jim Sweeney, New York's starting center for the last 110 games, will miss three to four weeks following arthroscopic surgery to remove floating debris from his elbow.

Packers

The Green Bay Packers held their first scrimmage without wide receiver Sterling Sharpe and linebacker Tony Bennett, both nursing ankle injuries, and offensive lineman Tony Mandarich, who has a bone bruise on his left knee.

Eagles

Lions

All-Pro nose tackle Jerry Ball sat out practice Monday and Tuesday, and he's not too happy about that. He says he's coming back well from knee surgery and should be allowed to do more in practice.

Saints

New Orleans is down to three tight ends after George Deveney walked out of camp and Frank Wainright went down with an injury to his left knee.

Bengals

Tackle Anthony Munoz missed Tuesday's workouts with a strained calf muscle and linebacker Kevin Walker was given the day off because of soreness in his surgically repaired knee.

Montana out with tired arm

ROCKLIN, Calif. (AP) - San Francisco quarterback Joe Montana says his arm isn't getting worse. But it isn't getting better, either.

Montana, who had surgery in October to repair a torn tendon in his right shoulder, sat out all of last season. Now the tired arm is preventing him from throwing at 49ers training camp today and Thursday.

"The throwing is not helping it any," Montana said after skipping practice Tuesday. "I can go out there and throw, but what's the use if it doesn't get any better. I just want it to go one way or the other. Just to get worse or get better."

On Tuesday, while the team went through passing drills with quarterback Steve Young, Montana was working out on a stairmaster in the team's weight room. He said his arm was still "tired."

"It's not getting any worse, but it's not getting any better, either," said Montana. "So the best thing to do is try to let it get 100 percent healthy."

Montana took Tuesday off after discussing his arm with trainer Lindsay McLean. Later Tuesday evening, he announced plans to sit out the next two days.

Montana would not rule out a start in Monday night's exhibition game against the Denver Broncos at Candlestick Park.

"I don't know," said Montana. "I just have to see how it goes. I could easily (start). But I don't want to press it, I have five weeks. The elbow is really tight."

Meanwhile, coach George Seifert said he wouldn't make any decision about his star's status now.

Cassius Clay, now Muhammad Ali, was 18 when he won the light-heavyweight gold medal in boxing in the 1960 Olympics.
