King's Manor revamps campus servicesBy GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

Since King's Manor was established in 1960, the facility has not backed off from providing new services to meet needs of older citizens, even now adding two services to benefit residents.

Physical therapy and homemaker services are the latest additions to the list.

Crystal Backus, a licensed physical therapist, joined the King's Manor staff last Monday and will direct that new service, assisted by an aide, Angela Duggan.

Coordinating the homemaker service is a veteran King's Manor staff member, Sherrie Satterfield, who has five persons in place, with more to be added as the need arises.

Availability of these new services, said Joyce Lyons, King's Manor administrator, may make the difference between an individual having to enter a nursing home and maintaining a more independent lifestyle.

King's Manor is a multi-faceted facility, offering living quarters in cottages or single rooms as well as the Westgate nursing home.

And, a need in the community was answered a couple years ago when a child care center was opened.

The latest additions to the program respond to the needs perceived for residents now and in the future, said Lyons.

"The needs of the retirement community are much different in the '90s than they were when King's Manor opened 30 years ago," she added.

"In the '60s, residents were in their 70s when they came here... today the average age is 89," continued the administrator.

Homemaker services, such as cleaning, doing laundry, preparing some meals, will provide manor and cottage residents with assistance most needed. Nursing home residents may benefit from similar services as well as companionship of a homemaker.

The physical therapist and her aide will help residents keep their bodies tuned with exercises and other activities prescribed by a physician.

Angela Duggan joined the King's Manor staff some weeks ago. The administrator said the search was underway for a licensed physical therapist when Crystal Backus arrived.

"I was looking for a job in Hereford, because my husband, Ricky, is employed at Holly Sugar," said the newest staff member. A graduate of Texas Tech University, she completed the required internship in the field and had worked at an Amarillo facility.

Besides the typical exercise program and therapy for older persons, she intends to provide rehabilitation services for patients who have undergone certain surgical procedures.

The King's Manor complex represents an investment of approximately $4 million in Hereford.

The nursing home opened in 1964 and was enlarged in 1969 and 1971. Cottages were built in the '60s and '70s, to complement the original manor.

In general, the facility is at capacity with 70 in the manor and cottages and 74 in the nursing home.

An administrative wing was built in 1986, joining buildings of the facility and putting a central kitchen in service for meal preparation for all residents. At that time, Joyce Lyons saw the opportunity to realize a dream.

"I'd always wanted to have a child care center and we had the space with the new addition," she said. Licensed for 50 children, the center usually operates at capacity. The central kitchen also prepares meals for the children enrolled.

Opening the child care center not only answered some needs of employees of King's Manor, but of the community at large, Lyons added.

Right now, there is no separate physical therapy room set aside. Equipment for specialized treatment must be acquired, said the administrator. At some time in the future, a fund

United Way of Deaf Smith County: Who gets what in 1992

Here is a percentage breakdown of which agencies get what percentage of United Way money this year. These percentages are expected to be the same next year, but could be different.

UWDSC sets kickoff lunch

United Way of Deaf Smith County has big plans to meet this year's $150,000 goal, and will discuss its plans and the importance of the agencies it serves at a kick off luncheon Sept. 9 at the Hereford Community Center.

The theme for the campaign is particularly appropriate: "Take Time to Care." In a world that has become increasingly complex, residents are urged to stop and remember those who need a little additional help from time to time.

The guest speaker at the luncheon will be William D. Poteet III, president and chief executive officer of Lubbock Methodist Hospital System. Poteet has spent his entire career working in hospitals and health-related facilities in Texas. He served as chairman of Lubbock's United Way campaign in 1987 and was president of the Lubbock board in 1988.

"The $150,000 goal is divided among 12 agencies which serve all age and socio-economic groups in the county," said John Sherrod, president of United Way of Deaf Smith County.

Billy the Kid living large in New MexicoBilly The Kid makes a pact

Tom O'Folliard (Cliff Webber) listens to a deal being struck by Billy The Kid (Graeme L. Lowry) in a scene in "The Real Billy The Kid." the play ended its summer run last weekend at Caprock Amphitheater near San Jon, N.M. See related story, Page 12A.

LINCOLN, N.M. (AP) - Tucked into a colorful valley in the foothills of the Capitan Mountains, Lincoln retains the charming feel of its Old West roots. But behind that rustic setting is a dark history of murder and lawlessness.

This is the town that nurtures the legend of Billy the Kid, notorious gunfighter in the bloody Lincoln County War of 1878-79.

Another contrast: The Old West in Lincoln is linked to the computer age of modern historians by the Lincoln County Heritage Trust Museum.

Staff members at the museum dress in period costumes, and lead tours to historic sites along a one-mile stretch of U.S. 380, Lincoln's Main Street. Museum director Bob Hart, wearing a straw hat, corduroy knickers and Western vest, has adopted the look of a frontier clerk as he strolls about town.

But back at the museum office, he keeps the books straight and publishes the trust's newsletter with a Macintosh computer.

"Modern historians employ lots of techniques," Hart explained.

The biggest draw for the museum - and the town - is folklore and items relating to the life of Billy the Kid, Hart said. In an article written for the trust, author Robert Utley called Lincoln the most important stop on the Billy the Kid trail.

The Kid was born in New York City in 1859, but was living in New Mexico with his family by the time he was 12 years old. He was only 21 when he was shot by Sheriff Pat Garrett for a $500 reward in 1881.

His short life included stints as a cowboy, and exploits as gambler and gunman around Lincoln. One lurid version of his life story has it that he

San Jon theater features Billy

By JOHN BROOKS

Another group making a place for Billy The Kid in the heritage of this region is the New Mexico Outdoor Drama Association.

Just as the Caprock drops 3,000 feet in less than a mile, an amphitheater has been carved 11 miles north of San Jon, N.M. The theater, less than 90 minutes from Hereford, hosts "The Real Billy The Kid" each summer.

The play, rewritten this year by historian Don McAlavy of Clovis, hits on the strange relationship of the "Santa Fe Gang," Pat Garrett and Billy The Kid.

The productions in 1987-91 were popular with the audiences, said Betty Phillely of San Jon, president and founder of NMODA.

"For 1992 the playwright chose to present a new drama about the kid, based on a better knowledge of that period of our history," said Phillely.

Billy The Kid may have known the area of the Caprock Escarpment well. His haunts in Fort Sumner were 100 miles away by today's roads, and closer as the crow flies.

Billy's legacy, though, was created in Fort Sumner and further south. Here's how McAlavy, in the program from "The Real Billy The Kid," tells the story:

"He was born Henry McCarty, Nov. 20, 1859 in New York City. Parents: Catherine McCarty, unmarried some say, and father thought to be Edward McCarty. All historians do not agree on the particulars about Billy's birth.

"In 1870 Catherine McCarty, her sons, Joe and Henry, came to Wichita, Kan., from Indianapolis, where she had met William Antrim in 1865. They met up in Wichita; soon all departed for Colorado and then to Santa Fe. Catherine was seeking a higher, drier climate for her tuberculosis. They married in Santa Fe on March 1, 1873; Henry was 13. They soon moved to Silver City.

Catherine died in 1874 at age 45. Henry was dschool and learned to read and write, but often got into trouble since his stepfather imposed very little authority and was gone most of the time working in a mine.

"Henry by now was on his own and while in Arizona in 1877 shot to death one Frank P. Cahill. He picked up the name "Kid Antrim" or just plain "Kid." Back in New Mexico, he got in with a bad bunch of cow thieves and cutthroats and was known to have participated in many illegal activities here and in Old Mexico.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

Those back-to-school ads you've been reading for the past month or so are now old news. We're back in business! Another year, another new group--and once again, many new opportunities are awaiting teachers and students during the next nine months.

Like all wonderful teachers, we each have some "devine plans" for everything we want our Hereford Junior High students to learn this year. However, we must remember that the best laid plans of mice and men don't always transpire in the classroom, and we should be thankful for that!!

The responses from students and the exchanges of ideas and thoughts with students and parents could help to make this a worthwhile and memorable one for all of us. Sometimes those unexpected remarks and situations that occur inside or outside the classroom can be some of the best learning experiences a child can have.

Jana Rudd, eighth grade reading and English teacher, will have reading classes focusing on current events rather than the traditional basal reader this year. Comprehension and vocabulary expansion will still be stressed, but this focus will, hopefully, make reading more interesting and enjoyable for the students.

Many classes are stressing organization this year and a part of that plan includes color coding textbooks and having folders of matching color. Mr. Chand reports that his science classes will use the color red for their eighth grade science books and folders.

Seventh and eighth grade history students have a variety of opportunities for extra credit, fun and experience. They will have both Texas and American history UIL contests; DAR, Conservation, and seventh grade Panhandle History essay contests; History Fair and Geography Bee from which to choose. Mr. Garza plans to work with Texas History UIL and Mrs. Waters will work with Geography Bee and History Fair. Other sponsors are yet to be named.

As of August 26, a total of 769 students have enrolled with 415 in seventh grade and 354 in eighth grade. Although perfect attendance is being stressed, we have already had a number of absences. With encouragement from teachers and help from parents, perhaps this situation will improve.

Channel One viewing began this week. This 12 minute slot in the school day helps to keep students up-to-date on world and national events. This has been beneficial as it is the only time, for many students, that they see a news broadcast. Many teachers and students refer to the broadcast during the day.

LINCOLN

killed 21 men in those 21 years of his, not counting American Indians and Mexicans. And he rode with an informal posse known as the Regulators, taking an active part in the Lincoln County War that was spawned by a bitter local feud.

The museum has exhibits on the war, and on the Mesquero Apache Indians who battled Army forces based at nearby Fort Stanton. Visitors also learn about the fort's famous Buffalo Soldiers, blacks enlisted in the 9th Cavalry and 24th Infantry and respected by the Mesqueros as formidable enemies.

The materials on display include Apache bow and arrows; life-size models in full-dress Buffalo uniform and in Apache scout's dress; the saber of Civil War hero Saturnino Baca and Garrett's branding iron.

The museum's exhibits often are donated by families claiming ties to the area's frontier days, Hart said. One of the most recent contributions is a Colt .45 "Peacemaker" revolver, loaned to the museum by a California family and believed to have been carried by the Kid.

"We've been surprised by the number of people out there with artifacts relating to this area and the period of the Old West," said Hart.

"Many of these people thought their items had historical value and wanted to place them on display somewhere, but they weren't sure where they could do that."

Lincoln County 110 years ago was a vast rangeland, encompassing a quarter of present-day New Mexico, with the Texas line forming the county's eastern and southern boundaries.

"In the 1870s and 1880s, Lincoln County was bigger than the state of South Carolina," Hart said.

The non-profit Heritage Trust is interested in the historical, cultural and environmental preservation of Lincoln County as it existed in the late 19th century - U.S. flags flying in Lincoln have 38 stars, representative of the region's heyday from 1876-1889. The privately funded trust was founded in 1976, and the museum opened in 1983.

The museum is open 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily. After Sept. 16, it will close at 5 p.m., and after October it will close Mondays. The telephone number is 505-653-4838. Admission is $4.50 and includes visits to three other historic buildings: the Lincoln County Court House, the Tunstall Store and Dr. Wood's House.

Meeting townspeople

SAN JON

"The 'Kid,' sometime in 1877, showed up on the Pecos River alone, ragged and worn out. Befriended by the Heiskell Jones family, he soon signed on with a wealthy 24-year-old Englishman named John H. Tunstall who ranched southeast of Lincoln N.M. The Kid was now going by William H. Bonney."

That is where McAlavy's story begins. He says his production follows "the historical record except for using poetic license for the sake of continuity where I have changed a few things."

That record is told by a cast of 12 persons who play the townspeople of Fort Sumner, residents of the Lincoln area and political officials in Lincoln County and the territorial capital of Santa Fe.

McAlavy follows the twists and turns of the relationship between Billy The Kid and Pat Garrett. Were they in cahoots? Who knows? Did Garrett really mean to kill The Kid? According to McAlavy's story, definitely not.

"Billy The Kid became bigger than life and thus today we are faced with fact mixed with legend," McAlavy said. "No matter if you condemn him or praise him, the fact that he bucked the establishment made him a folk hero to many."

'English Only' rules getting stern test

By DAVID FOSTER
Associated Press Writer

Nurse's aide Jordania Reed didn't take it seriously when her nursing home imposed an English-only policy last summer.

After all, most of the aides at Driftwood Convalescent Hospital in Gilroy, Calif., spoke Spanish as their native tongue, and Reed's bilingual skills had helped her land the job.

It was common sense, Reed thought, to address English-speaking patients in English. But the English-only rule also covered employees' private conversations in hallways, common areas - wherever patients might overhear.

Reed recalls thinking: "This is a stupid policy. They couldn't fire me for speaking Spanish."

Oh yes, they could. Reed got the axe Jan. 3, three days after being caught, for the second time, speaking Spanish to co-workers.

With a few carelessly spoken words, Reed found herself in the thick of a linguistic battle brewing in factories and offices nationwide.

As immigrants bring a growing variety of languages to the American work force, many employers say they need English-only policies to prevent the workplace from becoming a Tower of Babel in which safety, productivity and worker harmony are threatened.

But civil-rights groups say such policies are discriminatory, reflecting the racist fears of an Anglo-dominated society grappling with an influx of Hispanic and Asian immigrants.

No firm statistics exist, but civil libertarians say the number of language-rights complaints they receive has grown since the mid-1980s. It's a legacy, they say, of the "official English" movement, in which more than a dozen states have made English the official language of government.

While the laws are largely symbolic, "they give people reassurance in their view that English is the only way to go," said Edward Chen, attorney for the American Civil Liberties Union in San Francisco.

Chen does not argue that immigrants shouldn't learn English. The challenge, he says, is encouraging immigrants to learn English without trampling their rights to express their cultural heritage.

That's largely uncharted territory. Guidelines published in 1980 by the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission say English-only rules cannot be imposed except in cases of "business necessity." But those guidelines are not legally binding, and a mixed bag of court decisions has done little to clarify what constitutes "necessity."

Employers and workers are left to muddle through, case by case:

- A Puerto Rican warehouse worker in New York City was fired after his supervisor overheard him talking in Spanish about a pizza he'd ordered for lunch. The worker ultimately won: His complaint to the EEOC forced the company to abandon its English-only policy.

- In California, a federal judge sided with an English-language radio station that told its disk jockey to stop his occasional use of Spanish on the air. The judge's rationale: Words were the company's product, and it had a right to control those words.

Two California cases with conflicting decisions are now on appeal before the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

One involves Aida Dimaranan, a Filipino nurse who challenged an English-only rule at the Pomona Valley Hospital Medical Center. The judge did not find the hospital's policy discriminatory, but he did say supervisors retaliated against the nurse after her initial complaint.

In the other case, a federal judge sided with Priscilla Garcia, who challenged the English-only policy of Spun Steak Co., a meat-packing plant in South San Francisco where Garcia had worked on the assembly line for 18 years.

Garcia recalls her boss telling a co-worker: "If you want to speak Spanish, you should go back to your own country."

The company claims it was trying to prevent discrimination, not encourage it. Spun Steak attorney James Carter said Garcia and her co-worker had been making fun of a black employee in Spanish.

"He knew he was being ridiculed, but he didn't know what they were saying," Carter said.

Other companies cite safety or productivity reasons for imposing English-only rules.

"We work very closely in a team environment," said Elizabeth Peo, personnel director at Puritan-Bennett Corp. a maker of hospital respirators that imposed an English-only rule at its plant in Carlsbad, Calif.

"Communication with your fellow employees is very important, and to have multiple languages makes it difficult at best," Peo said. "We need to do everything we can to ensure the integrity of our product. If we don't do our job, a person could die."

In Jordania Reed's case, nursing-home director Michael Dunn said he was simply following federal health regulations that say patients should be cared for in their own language. He said some of his elderly residents have complained of being surrounded by foreign-speaking staff; a few senile residents have even asked, "What country am I in?"

In weighing the rights of workers against those of his residents, "I always err on the side of the residents," Dunn said.

Chen's reply: "You can't cater to people's prejudices and stereotypes. That goes back to the '60s, when businessmen said they couldn't hire blacks because customers would be uncomfortable."

English-only rules in the workplace have the support of English First, a Virginia-based group that is a key player in the "official English" movement.

Employers should be able to impose language rules just as they impose dress codes, said George Tryfiates, the group's executive director.

"Individuals are not entirely free in the workplace to express themselves in every imaginable way possible," he said. "In some cases we agree to abide by certain rules."

Jordania Reed doesn't buy that argument. While a suit and tie can be taken off at will, language goes much deeper, she said.

"I don't think anybody should tell anybody when or where they can speak their language," said Reed, 27, who immigrated from the Dominican Republic eight years ago. "Spanish is the language I was born with. It makes me feel close to my heritage."

A few English-only disputes have had happy endings. In July, Puritan-Bennett settled out of court with the ACLU, agreeing to limit its English-only policy to specific circumstances. Workers no longer have to speak English except during group meetings, while working in teams where English is the only common language, or when asked by a supervisor to conduct a specific, work-related conversation in English.

Reed's case seems unlikely to be resolved so easily. Her complaint is now before the EEOC; she's ready to pursue it to the Supreme Court if necessary.

IS IT A GOOD TIME TO REFINANCE?

When interest rates drop many homeowner's with higher interest-rate loans consider refinancing. But is refinancing worth it? For some it's not! As a general rule, refinancing is worth your while if the current interest rate on your mortgage is at least 2 percentage points higher than the prevailing market rate. This figure is considered a safe margin when balancing the costs of refinancing a mortgage against savings. There are other factors to consider, for example how long do you plan to stay in your home. Refinancing should be considered for homeowner's that meet one or more of the following criterion: You want out of a high interest rate loan to take advantage of lower rates and plan to stay in the home for 3 or more years or you have an adjustable rate mortgage and want a fixed rate loan so you know exactly what the mortgage rate will be for the duration of the mortgage.

Family values

What is the concept of family values? Ever since VP Dan Quayle made the remark about values portrayed on a television show, the media elite has been talking about family values as though it were some new and undefinable issue.

We heard a comic and his guests on a popular tv late-night show talking about family values. They had no clue as to what the concept meant, possibly because they have no concept of God and love.

The Republicans made use of the issue, as if it were their very own, during their convention, and the Democrats retaliated by explaining the concept (although not labeled as "family values") in their platform.

Actually, the Demo platform language sounds pretty good: "Governments don't raise children, people do. People who bring children into this world have a responsibility to care for them and give them values, motivation and discipline." It goes on to say: "Our future as a nation depends upon the daily assumption of personal responsibility by millions of Americans from all walks of life--for the religious faiths they follow, the ethics they practice, the values they instill, and the pride they take in their work."

The silent majority in America is sick of the "do-whatever-makes-you-feel-good philosophy" that has no right or wrong. They are sick of sleaze and pornography, and they are worried about the depths to which morality has plunged.

Politicians are getting the message and, thank God, there are plenty of people around who haven't surrendered their family values. Maybe there is still hope that the media elite and others will discover the Ten Commandments and the Golden Rule.

An AP News Analysis

Abortion-rights group looks to '96

By JILL LAWRENCE
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - There's no shortage of recriminations among the abortion-rights advocates crushed by the combined weight of an incumbent president and the religious right.

But there won't be an incumbent in 1996. And there will be an older, wiser and possibly larger cadre of moderates determined to pierce the Republican Party's airtight opposition to abortion.

The party's Houston convention was bittersweet for those fighting the official call for an abortion ban. They broke into factions and tirades against one another.

Yet some remember when the only abortion-rights activity at a GOP convention was a surreptitious 1984 meeting between Maureen Reagan and Rep. Olympia Snowe of Maine, the two of them alone in a room. By that standard, 1992 was a triumph and a beacon for the road ahead.

"1996 will be different," says Maine Gov. John McKernan, Snowe's husband, echoing the hopes of many in his corner. "I can't tell you how many people have said to me, 'We will never again support anybody who thinks this plank ought to be in our platform.' I've heard that from people on both sides."

Polls suggest a majority of Republicans and indeed a majority of 1992 convention delegates support keeping abortion legal. They were thwarted this year by twin juggernauts: a campaign staff intent on protecting a weakened president, and social conservatives who hijacked the convention with the consent and, some say, encouragement of that campaign.

Could any dissident group have prevailed under such circumstances?

Some say yes, that moderate Republicans simply haven't been as active as they should be. "The party has abandoned them and they saw no real purpose in making waves," says Kate Michelman, president of the National Abortion Rights Action League.

Other interested parties saw action - but grumbled it wasn't the right kind. Too much time and money for public relations. Not enough attention to nuts and bolts like electing dedicated abortion-rights convention delegates.

"We did not do the political work which had to be done," said Pennsylvania delegate Elsie Hillman, a longtime party activist who vows that won't happen again.

The chief champions of the cause declined to take responsibility for its failure. They blamed relentless pressure from the Bush camp.

"It really wasn't that we were politically inept," said Mary Dent Crisp, chairwoman of the National Republican Coalition for Choice.

McKernan and Massachusetts Gov. William Weld, pivotal in the unsuccessful push for a floor debate, thought airing the issue would be good for Bush. But the Bush campaign team thought differently "and they just clamped down on these delegations," McKernan said.

The trying week ended with a deepening rift between Crisp, a 60-ish former party co-chairman, and Ann Stone, a brash young direct-mail entrepreneur. For months of uneasy alliance, they stood side by side and slammed the party hierarchy; after the Houston defeat, they wouldn't even appear at the same news conference.

The sticking point was that Stone, founder of a political action committee called Republicans for Choice, announced publicly that she personally was going to vote for Bush and try to change her party.

"My goal is larger than (abortion) choice," Stone said later. "My goal is to stop the religious right from having a stranglehold on any political party. My priority is making sure Phyllis Schlafly and Pat Robertson do not have a political vehicle."

Crisp remains officially neutral but calls herself a one-issue voter. She couldn't swallow the Stone rationale. "That's a conflict for me," she said. "There's a certain integrity we're trying to foster."

Michelman, whose abortion-rights group has spent two-thirds of its money this year on like-minded Republican candidates, was less restrained.

"She led such a strong fight within the party and seemed so uncompromising on it," Michelman said of Stone. "Now she will work to elect the very president who is going to take away this freedom and send women to back alleys and women and doctors to jail. I don't understand it."

THE VOICE OF BUSINESS

CRISIS IN WORKERS' COMPENSATION

by Dr. Richard L. Leshar, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

WASHINGTON—State workers' compensation programs, long a mainstay of labor relations in this country, have reached a fiscal flashpoint that threatens to destroy millions of jobs.

The concept of compensating workers for injuries they incur on the job, without regard to responsibility, dates back to the early part of this century. Prior to that, an injured worker had to prove his employer negligent. Workers' compensation laws were designed to assure that injured workers were compensated for medical costs and lost work time, alleviate the inequities of the fault-based system and reduce the liability of employers through legal action.

Unfortunately, the latter objective has not been met. In California alone last year, nearly $1.5 billion was spent on litigation over workers' comp claims—more than $7,000 per claim. The total annual bill for workers' comp in California is $10 billion.

California's dismal experience is reflected elsewhere in the nation. In 1972, the total cost of workers' comp was $6 billion. By 1990, it had soared to $55 billion. According to the Social Security Administration, a typical employer pays 2.15 percent of payroll for workers' compensation—an average of $449 per employee.

Though insurers have been hiking workers' compensation insurance premiums, they have been unable to keep pace with rising costs. In each of the last six years, insurance firms have paid about 20 percent more in losses and expenses than they have collected in premiums. Not surprisingly, insurance firms are dropping workers' comp insurance left and right, making it difficult for small firms to acquire coverage.

Of course, rising medical costs aggravate the workers' comp crisis. Since 1980, medical costs have risen 90 percent and now account for 43 percent of workers' comp losses.

Another contributing factor is an ever expanding definition of compensable injuries, especially those related to mental stress, a vague category that invites creative claims. In 1990, mental stress accounted for $380 million in California workers' comp claims.

Employers can help bring workers' comp costs under control by focusing more on safe work practices, and also by cracking down on drug abuse in the workplace. Substance abusers are five times more likely to file workers' comp claims than others.

But responsibility for curbing excessive litigation, tightening up definitions of compensable injuries and putting a lid on fraud lies with state legislatures. It is imperative that lawmakers on the state level acknowledge this crisis and address its primary causes. Until they do, the costs will continue their upward spiral, strangling employment opportunities, and undercutting our best efforts to compete in the international marketplace.

The United Way kickoff luncheon is set Wednesday, and the slogan of "Take Time to Care" is very appropriate for this worthwhile campaign. If we can get enough folks to take time to care, we should reach our United Way goal this year!

These volunteers, as well as chairmen of committees, workers in community projects and non-profit organizations have probably paused to wonder why more folks are not participating. Along with many others, we like President Bush's proposal to allow taxpayers to check off a box on their income tax form to dedicate up to 10 percent of their taxes to go into a trust to reduce the federal deficit...and spending would be automatically reduced by the amount in the trust.

It seems to be a sure way to make lawmakers do something about the deficit. As expected, most media types immediately wrote off the proposal as a GOP gimmick impossible to achieve and politically naive.

But some people in the IRS and the Congressional Budget Office say the plan could curtail the growth of federal spending--on a scale not seen since Gramm-Rudman was enacted in 1985. A bill by Rep. Robert Walker of Pennsylvania and Sen. Robert Smith of New Hampshire has been introduced to enact the plan. Experts say the proposal could balance the budget in four years. We believe taxpayers all across the nation ought to insist on their representatives in Washington supporting the bills in the House and Senate--regardless of who is in the White House come November.

Sometimes, even with the best intentions, it's easy for a husband to give the wrong response. A wife asked one of those questions that seemingly had an obvious answer: "If you had it to do all over again, who would you marry?"

"I'd marry you, of course." After a little silence, the wife responded, "That's what you think!" You've probably heard some of those "Dumb Blonde Jokes" that have been making the rounds. Now, the women have their say with "Dumb Men Jokes." Here are some samples:

--Why are the dumb blonde jokes one-liners? So men can understand them.

--What is the difference between government bonds and men? Government bonds mature.

--What's a man idea of helping with the housework? Lifting his legs so you can vacuum.

--What did God say after he created man? "I can do better than this."

--What's the best way to get a man to do sit-ups? Put the TV remote control between his toes.

--Why is it good that there are female astronauts? So when the crew gets lost in space, at least the woman will stop and ask for directions.

--Why is psychoanalysis a lot quicker for men than for women? When it's time to go back to his childhood, he's already there.

--What is the difference between a man and E.T.? E.T. phoned home.

--What does a man consider to be a seven-course meal? A hot dog and a six-pack.

--How are men like noodles? They are always in hot water, they lack taste and they need dough.

Notes on the law

Persons working out of their homes or who have an office in their homes should be aware of a possible significant change in the rules governing home office deductions.

Soliman v. Commissioner is presently pending before the United States Supreme Court. In Soliman, Dr. Soliman is an anesthesiologist who maintains an office in his home but who primarily generates income by administering anesthesia in three separate hospitals.

In the past, the IRS has used the "focal point test" to determine if a taxpayer is entitled to a home office deduction. Under the focal point test, there are two basic issues. One is whether the home office is the place where goods and services are provided to customers. The second is whether the home office is the place where revenues are generated.

Under the focal point test, Dr. Soliman's home office did not qualify for a deduction even though the Court found that he spent 30% of his working hours in the home office. Therefore, Dr. Soliman brought suit to challenge the validity of the "focal point test."

In the trial court, Dr. Soliman was successful in convincing the court to adopt a "facts and circumstances" test. Under the "facts and circumstances" test, a home office can qualify for a deduction if it is used for management or administrative activities essential to the taxpayer's business and it is the only office space available to the taxpayer in which he can conduct the management or administrative activities.

Soliman is not controlling caselaw at this time. It was decided by the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit. It has, however, been appealed to the United States Supreme Court and should be decided in the next term.

The decision rendered by the United States Supreme Court will be applicable to persons in all states. Thus, if Soliman is affirmed, then persons with home offices will need to reconsider whether they are entitled to a deduction for the expenses of running the home office.

US drops leaflets to warn Iraqis

BAGHDAD, Iraq - U.S. warplanes dropped leaflets over southern Iraq, warning Saddam Hussein's pilots not to resist the allied air umbrella protecting Shiite rebels. But while Baghdad didn't challenge the "no-fly" zone, there were signs President Saddam Hussein was retaliating in other ways.

State-run Iraqi television showed footage Friday of anti-U.S. demonstrations it said were held in Babylon and Karbala, Shiite cities north of the "no-fly" zone that took effect a day earlier.

"(President) Bush, you try to protect Shiites, but during the mother of battles you strafed our homes!" the demonstrators shouted, waving large portraits of Saddam.

"We love Saddam!" they shouted. "We don't want another leader and we are not afraid to die. Do not divide our country."

Baghdad has condemned the zone south of the 32nd parallel - the southern third of the country - as an act of aggression that could lead to war.

Along with a haven established in the north for ethnic Kurds since last year's Persian Gulf War, the allies now control about half of Iraq's airspace, posing further pressure on Saddam.

Threatening unspecified consequences, the Iraqi government has hinted it wouldn't cooperate with U.N. weapons inspections, U.N. humanitarian efforts and the presence of U.N. guards for relief work. These operations are called for under agreements Baghdad signed after the Iraqi army was routed from Kuwait in the Gulf War.

In New York, Jan Eliasson, the U.N. Undersecretary General for Humanitarian Affairs, said Friday that he was "extremely concerned" about the future of U.N. operations in Iraq.

"The (aid) program is more or less grinding to a halt... and we have little personnel still in Baghdad to carry out the work," Eliasson said. "It's a very serious situation and I hope that it doesn't get worse."

Kurdish sources in Iraq, meanwhile, said that Iraqi authorities rounded up thousands of Shiites before the haven in the south went into effect Thursday. There was no way to independently confirm the reports, and the purpose of the Aug. 20-24 roundup was unclear.

The Shiites - whose numbers were estimated at anywhere from 2,000 to more than 16,000 - reportedly were taken to the village of Tob Zawa, six miles northwest of Kirkuk, a major oil-producing center in the mostly Kurdish north.

U.S., British and French pilots patrolling Iraq's southern third said Friday that they encountered no resistance on dozens of sorties that were launched from the Persian Gulf and from Saudi Arabia.

As soon as possible, King's Manor will seek certification of the physical therapy department. Backus will perform her services by direction of personal physicians of residents. Dr. Jesse I. Perales is medical director.

Lyons pointed out that personal physicians are being advised by letter that the physical therapy department is operational.

"We've wanted to do this for a long time," she said. "Deaf Smith General Hospital physical therapy has cooperated with us but it will benefit residents to have a physical therapist on staff."

By the same token, the homemaker service will bring a new dimension to the lives of some residents in King's Manor, wherever they live.

"The homemaker may take a resident for a ride, just to get out for a while, or prepare a meal, do the laundry, whatever is needed," Lyons continued. Not to be overlooked, too, is the companionship offered by the homemaker during visits.

Lyons expects homemakers will spend on average about two hours each day with a resident.

She sees the new services as the response King's Manor can make to improve the quality of life of residents and help them be as comfortable as possible.

"I really think that many residents will be able to delay entering a nursing facility by using these services," she said.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - Country musician John McEuen says he was looking for realism when he picked the historic mining town of Deadwood, S.D., to film a video for his song "Miner's Night Out."

"I tried to imagine what might have happened in a gold camp when the miners got together on Saturday night," he said in a statement week.

"I think this video captures the feel of one of those Saturday nights."

Haney disappointed, not worried by scrimmage

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

Hereford football coach Danny Haney was disappointed in the Herd's showing in Friday's scrimmage, but he said it's too early to be worried. For much of the scrimmage, Hereford's first-team offense had trouble moving the ball against Amarillo High, whom the Herd met in Canyon in the final tuneup before the regular season.

"I was a little disappointed overall in the way we played," Haney said. "We didn't execute like we had been in practice, and we didn't play as hard as we have to to compete with these guys."

The Herd was outscored slightly overall, but the format of the scrimmage made any overall score almost meaningless. The format of the scrimmage was like this: 20 plays for AHS' offense (starting at their own 30-yard line); 20 plays for Hereford's offense; 20 more for AHS; 20 more for Hereford; 10 plays each using goal line offenses and defenses; and 15 more plays for each offense from the 30. Last on the schedule for the night was a complete quarter, played just like in a real game, except there were no kickoffs.

"We played 'em even, but we're going to have to raise our level of play to get to where we want to be," Haney said.

"You're always concerned when you don't move the ball. We've got to block better, to find the hole better, but it's still early. The defense played pretty good. We still have to be more aggressive and run to the football a little better."

During AHS' first two offensive series, the Herd defense played well except on a few long plays. The Sandies scored on a 40-yard bomb in the first series and on a 69-yard pass-play on a slant pattern in the second series. On the play after the 69-yarder, a Sandie running back went up the middle for an apparent 70-yard touchdown, but it was called back on a penalty.

After the consecutive long plays, AHS pulled off a 30-yard run followed by a 20-yard pass play, but the Herd regrouped and held. AHS missed a 37-yard field goal.

Hereford's first offensive series started badly, and just when it got good, it was over. Quarterback Richard Sanderson was sacked on the first play. In the next few plays, Hereford turned the ball over twice: AHS came up with a tipped pass, and Sanderson was sacked again and fumbled. (The Sandie line spent much of the first series in the Hereford backfield.)

Tailback Petey Colvin jumpstarted the offense by turning a short pass into a 74-yard touchdown. Colvin took the pass from Sanderson and had room to run. He broke a couple of tackles, ran around a few others, and was past all defenders at the AHS 40-yard line.

On the next play, from the Hereford 30, Sanderson reversed his field on an option run and gained 15 yards, and Chris Brummett ran for 27 yards on the next play. There was only one play left in the series, so Hereford went for the end zone, but Sanderson was intercepted.

In the next offensive series, tailback Shawn Fogo ran for some (See HERD, Page 7A)

Spikers struggle in tourney

The Amarillo High volleyball team beat Hereford Friday in the first round of winner's bracket competition in the Amarillo Invitational.

It wasn't a good Friday for the Lady Whitefaces, now 4-2. Besides the 15-5, 15-4 drubbing at the hands of the Sandies, they split all three of their earlier pool matches. The Herd went 15-7, 13-15 with Perryton; 6-15, 15-6 with San Angelo Central; and 15-8, 9-15 with El Paso Hanks.

Hereford was to play Abilene Saturday morning.

Bears get win over Cowboys

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
IRVING, Texas (AP) - The Chicago Bears finally got an exhibition victory and the Dallas Cowboys lost more than a meaningless preseason game.

Chicago avoided its first winless preseason since 1978 with a 20-13 victory Friday night over the Cowboys.

The player the Cowboys lost was starting defensive tackle Tony Casillas, who suffered a knee injury and could be out for more than a month.

Chicago ran its exhibition record to 4-3 against Dallas and Bears coach Mike Ditka said it didn't matter much that the Cowboys rested many of their regulars.

"It was nice to win if you haven't won," Ditka said. "We played a very good team which didn't play all of its people. We're not kidding ourselves. They are a good football team."

"I wasn't worried about the score. I just wanted us to play with some continuity. It was an encouraging game."

Chicago, which opens the regular season against the Detroit Lions at Soldier Field, finished the preseason at 1-3. The Cowboys, who open with Washington, were 2-3.

"I thought we made some improvement over what we have done the past three weeks. There were some encouraging things out there but we still have to get better. I thought all of our running backs ran the ball well," said Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson.

"I feel good about our team. I think we've come together in the last two weeks. We have some pieces of the puzzle to put together but I think we'll be fine."

Johnson said he was concerned about the right knee of Casillas, his starting defensive tackle.

"We'll keep our fingers crossed on him. We'll have it examined and see what the problem is. He might be out four weeks or so," said Johnson.

"It's a real blow to our team. It looks like a severely sprained knee. It looks 99.9 percent sure that he will be out next week. It's rough because he had a great camp and is a big part of our defense."

Casillas said, "It's not good and I could be out four weeks."

Chicago led 10-3 at halftime on a 37-yard field goal by Kevin Butler and Jim Harbaugh's seven-yard scoring pass to tight end Keith Jennings, who was a fifth round draft pick of the Cowboys in 1989.

Harbaugh hit 8 of 11 passes for 95 yards in his first half of action.

"It was a good note to finish on," Harbaugh said. "Now we can get into the regular season."

Chicago scored in the second half on a 32-yard field goal by Butler and Mark Green's 1-yard run.

Third-string quarterback Jason Garrett got the Cowboys' only touchdown before the Texas Stadium crowd of 60,218 on a 3-yard scoring pass to fullback Tommie Agee in the fourth period.

Steve Beuerlein completed passes of 21 yards to Darryl Johnston and 20 yards to Kelvin Martin to set up Lin Elliott's 33-yard field goal for the Cowboys in the second period. Beuerlein completed 7 of 11 passes for 80 yards in his one quarter of play.

Elliott, a rookie from Texas Tech, also hit a 28-yard field goal.

"I don't have a clue whether I made the team," said Elliott, who is battling Brad Daluiso for a job. "I definitely didn't hurt myself."

Emmitt Smith, the NFL's leading rusher, did not play as Johnson saved him for the Cowboys' Sept. 7 opener against the Redskins.

Starting quarterback Troy Aikman only played the first quarter for Dallas, hitting four of seven passes for 18 yards.

"For me it was a meaningless game," Aikman said. "I didn't get a lot out of it. I'm looking forward to getting after Washington. I didn't realize how long the off-season was."

Unstoppable

The Sandies tried everything to bring down Hereford's Shawn Fogo. On this play, Fogo kept his pants on and gained a few more yards.

Rangers' Brown dominates

By The Associated Press
Kevin Brown has watched Nolan Ryan pitch two no-hitters and several low-hit games since the two became Texas Rangers teammates in 1988.

So when Brown hadn't allowed a hit through the middle of the seventh inning Friday night, he hardly noticed.

"I didn't think that much about it," said Brown (17-8), who finally gave up a hit with two outs in the seventh and finished with a five-hitter in Texas' 4-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

"I was trying to go out and get the ball to the plate and have them put it in play. I was thinking more about winning the game," he said.

Brown, a perfectionist, didn't even think he was on top of his game.

"I didn't feel I had overpowering stuff; more mediocre than anything," said Brown.

Chicago manager Gene Lamont agreed.

"Not to take anything away from tonight's performance, but I thought Brown threw just as well last time we faced him," said Lamont, whose team has beat Brown twice this year, including on Aug. 18.

Brown's bid was broken up when Robin Ventura slapped a double down the right field line. Brown threw him a meaty fastball after falling behind in the count 2-0.

"I may look back at it with regret now, but at the time I didn't want to give up the walk," said Brown, who struck out four and walked two.

Ventura again doubled in the ninth, this time scoring Frank Thomas. It was the sixth time this year Brown has lost a shutout in the last inning.

"The surprising thing about this outing was how few off-speed pitches he was throwing. It was mostly sinkers and sliders," said Texas manager Toby Harrah.

Brown's four strikeouts give him 136 on the year, among the AL's top 10. He lowered his ERA to 3.31.

Brown has made a dramatic turnaround to become one of baseball's most dominating pitchers.

Part of the change could be as a result of an off-season session with a sports psychologist to combat his lack of confidence on the mound.

"When you think you have this game figured out, it reaches back and proves you don't know a thing," said Brown, who is tied for the league lead in victories and leads the AL in innings.

He has also completed nine games after not finishing any of 33 starts last year.

Texas' scoring came in the first, with RBI singles by Monty Farris and Rafael Palmeiro. The Rangers added two in the fourth on a single by Brian Downing.

All four Texas runs came on two-out rallies against Chicago starter Greg Hibbard (9-6).

Elsewhere in the AL, it was Milwaukee 22, Toronto 2; Boston 7, California 1; Detroit 4, Kansas City 2; Minnesota 4, New York 3 in 14 innings; Oakland 7, Cleveland 6; and Seattle 6, Baltimore 4.

Boston 7, California 1
Buck Rodgers took charge of the Angels' dugout Friday night for the first time since a bus accident May 21 that left him with fractures in his right elbow and left knee.

Roger Clemens (16-8) scattered eight hits in seven innings and didn't allow an earned run. He had seven strikeouts and a walk and went to 9-0 in his last nine starts against the Angels.

The Red Sox got all the runs they'd need in the third on John Valentin's leadoff homer, his second of the year, and Billy Hatcher's RBI single, one of his three singles.

Chuck Finley (4-11), a 19-game winner for California last year, took the loss.

Brewers 22, Blue Jays 2
Milwaukee set an American League record with 31 hits, the most in a nine-inning game in the majors in 91 years.

Jim Gantner's infield single in the ninth broke the previous AL mark set by the New York Yankees against the Boston Red Sox on Sept. 28, 1923.

Milwaukee set a team-record with 22 runs.

Kevin Seitzer and Scott Fletcher had five hits each for the Brewers, while Pat Listach and Darryl Hamilton had four apiece. Fletcher and Hamilton drove in five runs apiece.

went to third on Moises Alou's single and scored on a groundout by Larry Walker. Rob Murphy pitched the ninth.

Gardner had won three straight decisions before facing the Astros. He allowed three runs in the first and left after a two-run double by Luis Gonzalez in the fourth.

In other NL action, it was Philadelphia 7, Atlanta 3; San Diego 11, Pittsburgh 6; St. Louis 1, Los Angeles 0; Chicago 3, San Francisco 2; and New York swept a double header from Cincinnati 4-3 and 12-1.

Harnisch, Finley lift Astros

By The Associated Press
Houston's Pete Harnisch and Steve Finley were an unbeatable combination against the Montreal Expos.

Harnisch struck out a season-high 10 batters and allowed four hits over eight innings Friday night and Finley got four hits and drove in three runs as the Astros beat the Expos 8-1.

"Everything goes in cycles and we're getting great hitting and pitching," Finley said. "It's enabled us to get into fourth place instead of last place."

Houston snapped Montreal's seven-game road winning streak and overcame the domination of pitcher Mark Gardner (11-9), who had been 5-0 lifetime against the Astros.

"The only pitch I had was my curveball and it didn't get me very far," Gardner said. "I couldn't get anything over. I plain stunk it up. I just wasn't on. It's bound to happen, they just got to me."

While Gardner was having an off performance, Harnisch was enjoying one of his best outings.

"It's been peaks and valleys for me this season and no in-between," Harnisch said. "I hope this will be the start of a great final month of the season."

Harnisch (5-9) struck out five in a row at one stretch and didn't allow a run until the sixth. It was his first victory since July 28 and his first in the Astrodome since June 3.

"Pete was outstanding," Astros manager Art Howe said. "He really dominated the game and the run support was good just like last night."

Harnisch struck out Tim Wallach to end the fourth, struck out the side in the fifth and fanned Delino DeShields to start the sixth.

"I really haven't kept up my end of things this season," Harnisch said. "If I pitch the way I should, we could come close to .500."

Harnisch lost his shutout in the sixth when Marquis Grissom doubled,

Expansion has scouts scurrying, execs worrying

By ALAN TRUFX
Houston Chronicle
HOUSTON (AP) - At a time when the pool of baseball talent is supposedly shrinking, the National League is expanding.

With the Colorado Rockies and Florida Marlins joining the league next season, the three-round expansion draft, set for Nov. 17 in New York City, has baseball scouts and executives scurrying to protect their interests.

The existing teams in the National and American leagues will be allowed to protect 15 players from raiding by the expansion franchises.

Minor-leaguers who have had only three or four years of professional experience (depending on their signing date) will be exempt from the draft provided they have never played in the major leagues.

This year there won't be as many September call-ups as usual because teams will try to keep their top prospects from being eligible for the draft.

Astros assistant general manager Bob Watson says, "Normally we would bring up a guy like Jim Lewis (highly regarded pitcher for Class AA Jackson), but we won't do that this year."

The expansion draft may have considerably more impact on the current season and subsequent ones than many fans realize.

Major-league front offices are preoccupied with forming their protected lists. Watson has been on a longer road trip than the rest of the Astros - a 31-day sojourn in which he is assessing player talent throughout the organization while also scouting the majors for future transactions.

After the non-waiver trading deadline quietly passed early this month, Toronto Blue Jays general manager Pat Gillick said, "Between the payrolls and the expansion lists, when it came time to make deals, everything stopped."

General managers are reluctant to trade for veteran players for fear they might lose them in the expansion draft.

By the same token, teams are hesitant to extend the contracts of some veterans who are due to become free agents next October.

Andre Dawson, the longtime star right fielder of the Chicago Cubs, has complained that his team is making no effort to extend his contract.

But the Cubs understandably do not want to fill one of the precious 15 protected positions with a 38-year-old player who probably would be of little interest to an expansion team.

Another draft stipulation is that all players with 10 years of major-league experience and five years with their current club must be protected, along with players with any sort of no-trade clauses in their contracts.

However, these groups of players can elect to waive their rights of protection from the draft.

This creates the possibility - and indeed, likelihood - of under-the-table inducements such as National Football League teams use to keep from losing players to Plan B free agency.

In the same vein, players who are due to become free agents could make agreements with their teams to re-sign after the expansion draft.

As Chuck Pool, director of media relations for the Marlins, puts it, "If nobody tried to manipulate the rules to their advantage, it would be the first time."

Even with all the possibilities for hiding players, the multitude of stars about to become free agents will tempt the Rockies and Marlins to "win now."

Watson says, "How competitive the new teams will be depends on the philosophy of those guys. You hear rumblings of Miami saying they want to be competitive a whole lot sooner, that they might go into the free-agent market or trade some kids they draft for veterans."

One advantage the Rockies and Marlins have over previous beginners is that they will choose players from both leagues. In the last expansion draft, held Nov. 5, 1976, Toronto and Seattle could draw only from the American League.

Still, Watson isn't sure this expansion draft will be any better than the undistinguished ones of the past.

"Sure, there are more players," he allows, "but the quality of players is not what it was back in the late '70s when Toronto and San Diego came along. If you were to call every club today, they all need pitching."

Some observers see expansion as being a boon to hitters.

"On the surface," Watson says, "it would seem that as you stretch this pitching even thinner with expansion, a lot more runs are going to be scored."

"But you know there are a lot of dumb hitters around."

There are also a lot of weak hitters who could muscle up like Popeye gobbling spinach when they reach the Mile High City of Denver.

Baseballs will be flying in the oxygen-deprived atmosphere as if shot from guns. Because of that, Watson speculates that Denver "might be in a good position to hire some free-agent power hitters. Ruben Sierra might decide he can hit a lot of homers in Denver."

The upcoming class of free agents looks like the most enticing group ever, as it includes such megastars as Sierra, Barry Bonds, Kirby Puckett, Mark McGwire, Greg Maddux, David Concepcion and Doug Drabek.

An expansion team that bags the limit of three free agents could conceivably field a respectable lineup in its first year. However, both of the new teams have indicated reluctance to sacrifice their future by swapping draft picks for free agents.

Major-league clubs are rather closemouthed about their expansion strategy, but indications are the unprotected will include many well-known players with salaries higher than their perceived current values on the open market.

Danny Tartabull, an often-disabled slugger who was signed last winter by the New York Yankees for $5 million a year, is expected to be available. The youth-oriented Yankees say they will protect as many as seven or eight minor-leaguers.

The Cubs, who have spent heavily on free agents in a futile effort to contend, are reportedly considering not protecting Mike Morgan, one of the league's better starting pitchers. They may gamble that the Marlins and Rockies won't be willing to pay $3.5 million a year for the 32-year-old Morgan.

Teams will not have to reveal their protected lists until three days before the draft. So the expansionists are busy scouting some 2,500 players in the major and minor leagues.

It's a daunting task, for sure, but the evaluation process is aided nowadys by extensive computer-generated statistical data.

Scouts in the field use lap-top computers to store information that quickly can be transferred to a central computer to be analyzed by other personnel experts.

And as Watson points out, "Scouting is a whole lot easier now because of the cable (television networks) and satellites. I'm sure they'll get the job done."

Watson appears genuinely worried about getting fleeced of a top prospect.

"That 16th player might be somebody else's eighth or ninth player," he says. "I know one thing, we're going to lose three good players."

Da Bears will win da Central

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

Da Bears. Not the Lions, despite their 12-4 record, good enough for the NFC Central title last season.

Not the Vikings, even though Dennis Green should inspire these under-achievers - he's already put fear in their minds by clearing out several veterans.

Certainly not the Packers or Buccaneers, who will be more exciting if not more successful under a pair of offense-oriented coaches, Mike Holmgren in Green Bay and Sam Wyche in Tampa.

This division, as it almost always does, will belong in 1992 to those Saturday Night Live favorites, Da Bears.

"When you go 11-5, that's a pretty good record and usually will win it for you," says coach Mike Ditka. "But we didn't win some big games late in the year and the Lions did."

Chicago has won the Central six of the last eight years. It has done so in classic Bears fashion, using a powerful defense and a strong running game. The defense was just as formidable in '91, ranking fourth in the league, yielding at least 19 yards per game fewer than anyone else in the division.

But the rushing attack slipped as injuries curtailed the contributions of Neal Anderson (747 yards) and Brad Muster (412). Ditka is said to be disenchanted with the versatile Anderson for hiding some injuries last year.

Ditka is hoping Darren Lewis can pressure Anderson at halfback.

Nobody will push aside Jim Harbaugh, the first Chicago quarterback to start every game since Vince Evans in 1982. Harbaugh gives Ditka the leadership and creativity he desires - if not the strongest arm or best passing instincts around.

"The thing you have to like about Jim is the way he takes charge," receiver Wendell Davis says. "When you're on the field, you know who is running things and he doesn't have much trouble spotting what we need to do."

That can mean spotting Davis, the Bears' leader with 61 receptions for 945 yards, the best production by a Chicago pass-catcher in 21 years. Or running himself: Harbaugh rushed for 338 yards, second only to Steve Young among NFL quarterbacks.

Harbaugh also threw for 3,121 yards, with an astoundingly high (for this team) 478 passes, completing 275.

Does that mean Iron Mike is replacing his grunt and growl offense with Air Ditka? Don't count on it.

The pass protection is too uncertain, even with several veterans such as center Jay Hilgenberg. The receiving corps is mediocre and the kicking game isn't great. So the Bears will run whenever they can.

The Lions came on so quickly last year after a 45-0 opening-night pasting at Washington that few people realized how tough they had become. They followed the debacle against the Redskins with five straight wins, then took their last six, concluding with an overtime victory at Buffalo that gave them the division crown.

But this team has been struck by too many tragedies, including the deaths of guard Eric Andolsek and assistant coach Len Fontes, coach Wayne Fontes' brother, and the paralysis of tackle Mike Utley.

"We've told the players it has to be put behind us," Fontes says. "We can honor the people we've lost by moving ahead the way they would have wanted us to."

Detroit figures to move back a spot, but still should be in the middle of the wild-card race in the tough NFC. There are plenty of stars in the Silverdome - where Detroit was 9-0 in '91 - on offense, defense and special teams.

The Vikings could climb back into the race under Green, who cleaned out what he considered poor attitudes by ridding the team of Herschel Walker, Keith Millard, Joey Browner and Wade Wilson.

The running attack will center on unproven Terry Allen, but at least he has a proven blocking unit, led by guard Randall McDaniel. Rich Gannon has to show he can deliver to the Carters - Anthony and Cris - and tight end Steve Jordan.

The Packers aren't strong in many areas, but linebacker with Tony Bennett (13 sacks), Johnny Holland, Brian Noble and Bryce Paup is one strongsuit.

The one thing Sam Wyche's teams lacked in Cincinnati was a big-play defense. Not even in 1988, when they made the Super Bowl, were the Bengals reliant on their defense.

In Tampa, Wyche's witticisms and willingness to be at the center of controversy might deflect attention from how poor the Bucs are. And he does have the makings of a decent defense with Broderick Thomas (11 sacks, 174 tackles, seven forced fumbles) and Keith McCants.

Prediction: 1, Chicago (10-6); 2, Detroit (9-7); 3, Minnesota (7-9); 4, Green Bay (5-11); 5, Tampa Bay (4-12).

Rural health to get boost

WASHINGTON (AP) - A House panel has approved legislation that would provide federal grants to help health care and educational groups establish or expand a variety of interactive telecommunications activities in rural areas.

The program seeks to help health care providers in remote rural areas to more easily and quickly consult with specialists at larger teaching hospitals.

Educational services envisioned under the bill could involve anything from allowing small libraries to share resources through telecommunications links to television town meetings with state agency officials. The bill authorizes up to $30 million for grants to improve health care services and $20 million to improve educational services.

Both producers, workers hurt by losses in 1992 cotton crop

LUBBOCK (AP) - Cotton crop damage and resulting wage losses for area workers are worse than predicted, says a state disaster official examining the area in hopes of securing federal relief aid.

"We had made preliminary loss estimates of $321 million in damaged cotton crop and $20 million to $22 million in lost wages," said Ed Laundry, district manager for the governor's Division of Emergency Management.

"But it looks like those estimates will change upward dramatically."

Laundry met Tuesday in Lubbock with local, state and federal officials from agriculture, labor and emergency agencies.

They are gathering information for Gov. Ann Richards to present President Bush in hopes of receiving access to Federal Emergency Management Agency programs.

Richards specifically cited the need for unemployment assistance and emergency loans to relieve economic hardship created by the devastated cotton crop.

"Usually, the president follows the FEMA recommendations, and FEMA will feel more positive after today's meeting. There are a lot more problems than I thought," Laundry said.

"Basically, we got reports of a lot of migrant workers out of work because of the cotton failure," Laundry said. "We came up here to find out what the migrants need, but we found also that local people have lost their jobs and businesses have closed because of the cotton failure."

Affected counties include Lubbock, Bailey, Briscoe, Castro, Cochran, Crosby, Floyd, Hale, Hockley, Lamb, Parmer and Swisher.

Mexico to get dry milk, oil

WASHINGTON (AP) - The United States will donate about 2,000 metric tons each of nonfat dry milk and butter oil to Mexico to assist needy people.

"This donation will reach more than one million children in school feeding programs in Mexico," said Agriculture Secretary Edward Madigan. "Donations such as this illustrate continued U.S. commitment to helping people in need throughout the world."

If Bush declares those counties disasters, residents would be eligible to receive disaster unemployment assistance through the U.S. Department of Labor.

Red Cross Update

Special thanks to Sally Walker for helping as volunteer office staff. Sally also works with the Disaster Committee.

Our chapter will be hosting a disaster services workshop on Oct. 17. The morning session will be an introduction to disaster services and is a prerequisite for all other Red Cross disaster training. This class outlines agencies and gives a broad overview of disaster services.

Volunteers are needed to take these classes and to be ready to work future disasters in our area and all over the United States. Call the office if you would like to register for the workshop of if you would like to work with our local disaster services committee.

We are accepting donations for hurricane relief at our office. Checks will be sent to the Hurricane Disaster Relief headquarters. Our chapter will be doing a garage sale in October to raise funds for disaster relief.

Compact house plan suits small lot Exterior of Banyon belies spaciousness

The Banyon fits easily on a small lot and is economical to build. In a home with such a compact exterior, you might well expect a somewhat cramped interior, but that simply isn't the case with this design.

Vaulted ceilings in the entry, living room, dining room, family room and master bedroom make the informal Banyon seem even more spacious. The living room is further expanded by a boxed-out bay window.

While the large country kitchen is adjacent to the combination dining/family room, it isn't completely open. This arrangement keeps kitchen messes out of sight until there is time to deal with them. Other features include a sunny eating nook, a small pantry and a pass-through counter to the family room.

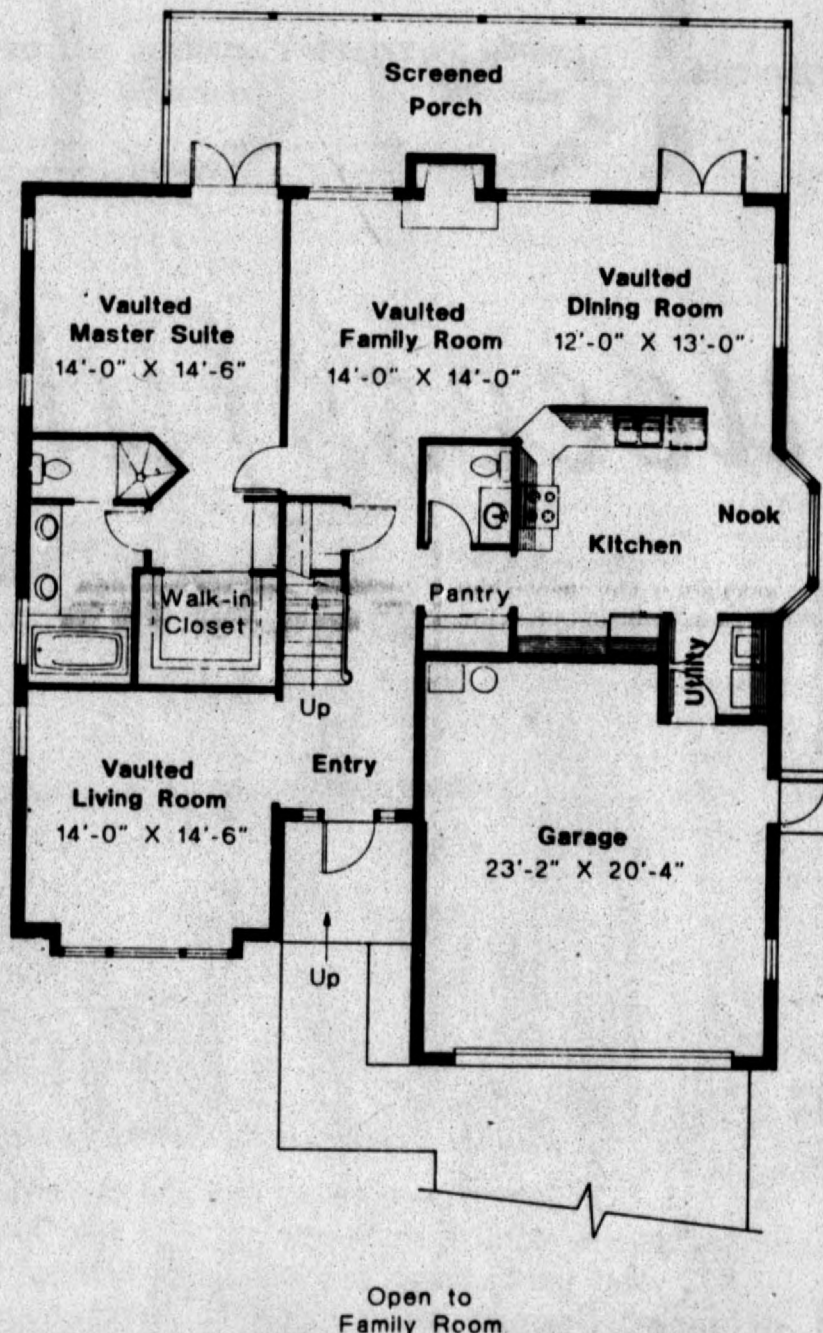

A small powder room is conveniently close to the kitchen, family room and entry. The utility room also is handy, tucked into a passageway between the two-car garage and the kitchen.

Amenities in the master suite include a huge walk-in closet, spa tub and a separate shower. French doors from the bedroom open onto a wide screened porch.

Two good-sized bedrooms and a bathroom nestle under the gable that runs the width of the Banyon. A railed bridge at the top of the stairs overlooks the family room, to the rear, and the entry hall to the front.

A review plan, including scaled floor plans, elevations, section and artist's conception, may be ordered by sending $7.50 to Associated Design, 1260 Charnelton St., Suite 2, Eugene, OR 97401. Please specify the Banyon 11-004 and included a return address.

Questions and Answers

Q: What is the best way to control weeds and lawn pests?

A: You can remove a few weeds by hand, but judicious use of herbicides is in order if there are lots of weeds. The leaf structure of the weed determines the type of herbicide you use. Broadleaf weeds, such as dandelions and blindweed, are treated with a broadleaf herbicide applied after the plant is up and growing.

Grass-like weeds, such as crabgrass, foxtail and goosegrass are best treated with a pre-emergent that is applied in the early spring, before the weeds have a chance to sprout. Grassy weeds can also be treated after sprouting with a liquid crabgrass killer - but only when the plants are very young.

When using a dry, or granular, broadleaf herbicide, wet the lawn before spreading. The herbicide will adhere to the leaves, and the plant will absorb it more readily. Allow several days before watering again. When applying a liquid herbicide, simply spray it on and then avoid watering it for several days.

Pre-emergent herbicides, by contrast, do their work below the surface. As such, you'll want to water the lawn immediately after treatment.

Not all damage is inflicted on turf grass by weather or careless cutting; insects can damage turf grass, too. Treating insects varies from region to region, so we'll focus on the more common insects, such as the June bug.

It's common to find a few grubs while digging in your yard. Most cool-weather lawns have some. The experts say that fewer than 10 grubs per square foot is acceptable. More than that may do noticeable damage. Check for grubs by spading down and peeling back sections of lawn.

Grubs can only be killed when they are feeding heavily, and this occurs in mid-August. Don't apply today's short-lived pesticides earlier than August, because it is a waste and an unnecessary assault on other insects and birds.

A grub treatment should be watered-in well so that the pesticide can be carried several inches below the surface.

THE REAL RESTING PLACE OF THE REAL BILLY THE KID MAY BE AT OLD FORT SUMNER

FORT SUMNER, N.M. (AP) - The Billy the Kid Museum is located here in the community where the 21-year-old outlaw was shot to death in 1881 by Lincoln County Sheriff Pat Garrett.

The Kid often used William H. Bonney as his formal name then. But there's evidence that he was born Henry McCarty - although he also sometimes used the alias Henry Antrim. It's all blurred in the mists of myth that leave only the nickname Billy the Kid indelibly imprinted in folklore.

"We have a rifle that belonged to Billy the Kid, and I've got the documentation on it," says owner Don Sweet, whose father founded the museum in 1953. "I've got the door that Billy backed through the night he was killed, and two curtains that came out of the room."

UNITED WAY

"Due to recent controversies with United Way of America, we pay no state or national dues at this time; all money stays right here to help our local groups."

UWDSC provides funding for 12 agencies that directly affect life in Deaf Smith County: American Red Cross, Big Brothers/Big Sisters, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Family Services, Rape Crisis/Domestic Violence Center, Salvation Army, High Plains Epilepsy, Hereford YMCA, Senior Citizens, Campfire and Children's Rehabilitation Center.

"Many people don't realize how important their donation is to the United Way," said Ron Rives, campaign chairman. "These agencies serve our county's children and elderly, men and women, families and single people. A few dollars from everyone can add up to 100 percent of our goal. We urge everyone who can, to attend the luncheon and learn more about the difference they can make through the United Way."

The luncheon will be a joint civic club meeting for the second week of September; others are welcome to attend the luncheon but are asked to make reservations by calling the UWDSC office at 364-5220. Cost for the luncheon, catered by K-Bob's, is $4.75 per person.

"I've got a rock that he carved his name on that came from north of town here and the chaps and spurs he wore to the dances, silver inlay, silver on iron, very nice decorative spurs. Billy went to the dances, and he could sing real well and was a very good dancer."

The museum's collection includes antique cars and wagons. There are also memorabilia from nearby Old Fort Sumner, the old military fort, among them brass kettles the soldiers cooked in, and items relating to Gen. Edwin Vose Sumner, the Civil War general for whom the fort was named in this eastern New Mexico town.

"We have General Sumner's army blanket, cash box and spurs," said Sweet. "And we have the letter from his daughter giving these items to my father."

Sweet is witness to the wide appeal of the outlaw legend. "Last year I counted up and we had visitors from every state and 40 foreign countries," he said. "The most were from Germany, after Canada, of course, among the foreign visitors."

The museum is open 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily through September, then closed on Sundays. Admission is $2 for adults, $1 children 12 and up, younger than 12 free. The telephone number is 505-355-2380.

Old Fort Sumner Museum is beside the old military cemetery in the historic area of the old fort, about 7 miles south-east of present-day Fort Sumner. The cemetery contains Billy the Kid's gravesite.

"We have the Kid's favorite gun, a Colt Lightning, in our collection, along with other local historic items," said museum curator Joe Bowlin.

"The gravesite is a constant attraction even when the museum is closed - people come in off the highway and go into the cemetery and if it's dark they'll go searching around for it with their flashlights."

The museum, 3 1/2 miles off Highway 60-84, is open 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily year round. Admission is $2 for adults, $1 for children over 12. The telephone number is 505-355-2942.

Bowlin is also president of The Billy the Kid Outlaw Gang, which he describes as a society, based in nearby Taiban, dedicated to preserving and documenting the history of the outlaw and his times. He said the society, which he founded in 1987, now has a world-wide membership of around 3,000. The telephone number is 505-355-9935.

Part of Old Fort Sumner has been restored and has been designated a New Mexico State Monument, Bowlin said.

A newly published book, "The Lincoln County War," by Frederick Nolan, depicts in detail the events surrounding the war, one of the most brutal episodes in American frontier history. It includes photos and letters of the protagonists.

The book is published by the University of Oklahoma Press, 607 pages, $49.95.

Paschel, Ellis wed in Amarillo

During a candlelight wedding ceremony Saturday afternoon in San Jacinto Baptist Church in Amarillo, former Hereford resident, Devany Lynn Paschel, and Raymond Ellis, both of Amarillo, were united in marriage. Officiating was Dr. Stan Coffey, church pastor.

The bride is the daughter of Larry and Jo Paschel of 131 Greenwood and the bridegroom is the son of Donald Ray Ellis and LaDonna Revell of Amarillo.

The church was decorated by a 15-branch candelabrum and two seven-branch candelabra, each adorned with fresh flower arrangements. Fiacas trees and assorted green foliage provided the back drop. Unity candles were decorated with candle rings of fresh flowers.

Jo Anne Short of Amarillo served as matron of honor and Ray Higgs of Canyon was best man.

LaVonda Moseley of Amarillo, the groom's sister, was bridesmaid and Dick Hogan of Amarillo was groomsman.

Guests were escorted by Ray Higgs of Canyon and Dick Hogan.

Flower girl was Kinsey Reeve, daughter of Mitchell and Jan Reeve of Hereford.

Myra Vaughn of Amarillo, organist, accompanied Mark Bewley of Amarillo as he sang various musical selections.

The bride was presented in marriage by her father wearing a candlelight designer gown fashioned with a fitted bodice and a V-shaped neckline in front and back. The bodice was hand-beaded with pearls and re-embroidered lace and accents of iridescent rhinestones. Pearl teardrops surrounded the dropped waist which featured a large bow at the center back. The French pouf sleeves were pleated at the top and the fitted lower sleeves were covered with lace accents, pearls and iridescent rhinestones extending to the wrists. The lower skirt had re-embroidered lace appliques trimmed with pearls and iridescent rhinestones. The hem of the gown and the semi-cathedral length train were edged with delicate scalloped lace.

The layered shoulder-length veil was attached to a pouf of bridal tulle decorated with pearls.

The bride carried a cascading bouquet of ivory carnations, pink roses and baby's breath.

The bride wore a ruby ring which belonged to her late sister, Jill Paschel, and carried a handkerchief edged in tating made by her aunt, Ruby Baker.

Bridal attendants wore peacock blue satin floor-length dresses fashioned with peplums and back bustles. The necklines were low-cut in the backs and were draped with strands of pearls. They carried small cascading bouquets of ivory and peacock tipped carnations with pink roses and baby's breath.

The flower girl wore a peacock satin dress overlaid with peacock lace and carried a basket of pink rose petals.

Krystal Ellis, the groom's daughter, invited guests to register at the reception held in the church parlor.

The bride's cake was served by her aunt, Johny Sowell of Houston, and the groom's cake was served by Carol Turner. Punch and coffee were poured by the bride's aunt, Lynn Jennings of Arlington. Pauline Phipps assisted.

The bride's table, which was covered with lace, was decorated with the attendants' bouquets and the bride's cake which was trimmed with peacock ribbons, pearls and candles. It was topped by an ivory lace gazebo with hand-blown crystal lovebirds drinking from a fountain.

The groom's table, also covered with a lace cloth, featured a chocolate cake decorated with bridal figurines and "Devany and Ray".

The bride designed the flower arrangements that decorated individual tables at the reception. They consisted of peacock blue silk roses and wild flowers intertwined with pearls.

Leaving on a wedding trip to Red River, N.M., the bride wore a soft peach faille city short-suit with accompanying jacket trimmed in pearls. The couple will reside in Amarillo.

The bride attended Hereford High School and the University of North Texas in Denton. She is a sales associate at Dunlap's Department Store in Amarillo and plans to attend Amarillo College this fall where she will study fashion merchandising.

The groom attended Palo Duro High School in Amarillo and is self-employed in the masonry business.

Out of town guests represented Arlington, Houston, Clarendon, Vega and Canyon. Special guests included the bride's grandparents, Leona Sowell of Hereford and Mr. and Mrs. George Paschel of Vega, and the groom's grandparents, Ward Ellis of Amarillo and Pauline Revell of Clarendon.

The rehearsal dinner was held Friday evening at Marty's Restaurant in Amarillo.

— YOUR EYES —

CARING FOR YOUR GLASSES

It's smart to protect your eyes with quality sunglasses that reduce glare and keep out harmful rays of the sun. Your optometrist can show you well-made glasses that are free of visual distortions and tinted so that you see colors normally. You can get the protection you need and look good, too.

Once you acquire sunglasses -- or even regular eye-glasses -- it's also smart to protect your investment with good care. Here's how:

- * Clean lenses with a soft cloth and use a lens cleaner to remove smudges and spots. Don't use your nails to pick off a spot.
- * Remove glasses gently with two hands to avoid straining the earpieces. And, no matter how stylish, don't wear glasses or sunglasses on top of your head; the temples will stretch.
- * Always use a case for glasses. Don't put them in a bag or pocket without the case; keys, combs, or any sharp object may scratch the lenses.

Funding is available through the Texas Department of Health for screening mammography for Texas residents qualifying for financial assistance.

Early detection of breast cancer is the major goal of cancer control for each woman seen in the clinic. The clinic provides low cost screening which includes a breast exam by a registered nurse trained in breast cancer detection, teaching of breast self examination, and a mammogram.

Currently, the most effective method known method known to win the battle against breast cancer is early detection. Early detection is best done by following the guidelines recommended by the American Cancer Society for breast cancer screening for women who have no signs or symptoms of breast cancer.

The guidelines are: (1) learn and perform breast self examination every month; (2) have a physical examination every year; and (3) have a mammogram according to the recommendations by age.

Women between the ages of 35-40 need to have a baseline a mammogram; 40-50, a mammogram every one to two years; and over 50, yearly mammogram.

Justice, Rankin married in Paris

Jennifer Lea Justice and Walter Snyder Rankin Jr. were married Aug. 8 in a formal, double-ring ceremony at First United Methodist Church in Paris.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. J. Kenn Justice of Paris and the late Mr. Justice, formerly of Hereford. She is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Justice of Dimmitt and formerly of Hereford, and of Mrs. Joe Murrell of Abilene. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Rankin of Midland.

The bride was escorted to the altar by her grandfather, Vigil Justice, and given in marriage by her mother. She wore a gown of silk shantung designed with a portrait neckline and short sleeves worn off the shoulder. The moulded, dropped bodice was entirely veiled with silk Venice lace, intricately jewelled with pearls and iridescent sequins. The long, full skirt extended to a chapel-length train.

Juli Justice of Paris, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Christal Aycock, Mrs. Johnny Grusing, Lacey Lavender and Lynn Sherrill, all of Lubbock, and Mrs. Brady Nichols of Abilene. Jordan Strom was flower girl.

Walter Rankin, father of the groom, was best man. Groomsmen were Hank Hudson, Hunter Langford and Kevin Witt, all of Lubbock, and Chris Kenney of Fort Worth and George Matte of Midland.

After a wedding trip to Orlando, Fla., the couple will be at home in Lubbock. The bride is a 1989 graduate of Paris High School and is attending Texas Tech University. The groom is a 1986 graduate of Midland Lee and a 1990 graduate at Tech, where he was member of the Raider football team. He is attending graduate school.

Ueckert wins honorable mention in poetry contest

A Hereford woman, Rachel Ueckert, has received special recognition for a poem she entered in a World of Poetry contest.

"Never again go to war" was written by Ueckert at the time of the Persian Gulf War. The poem was published on the Amarillo newspaper opinion page.

The Hereford poet was notified that she earned an Honorable Mention in the contest. She received a letter from the comedian Milton Berle, who also writes poetry, encouraging her to attend the World of Poetry conference in San Francisco, Cal., on the Labor Day weekend. Berle will be a speaker at the meeting.

Ueckert has seen a number of her poems published through the years. She said she has received letters from strangers complimenting her on her work.

"I wish I could go to the convention," she said, adding that seeing Milton Berle would be a special treat.

HEA, CTA host lunch, other events

Hereford Educators Association recently co-hosted with CTA a welcome to Hereford and to HISD for new teachers.

Juice, coffee and homemade cake were served to fifty-two new teachers by HEA and CTA officers. Each teacher was presented a "welcome bag" of gifts from Hereford merchants. Door prizes, also furnished by local merchants were presented before the New Teacher Orientation.

An early morning coffee served as a time of fellowship of all HISD employees before the general faculty meeting on August 17. HEA and CTA co-hosted this activity also.

Both organizations joined the HISD administration in sponsoring a noon meal for all school personnel after the general faculty meeting. Original plans were for the meal to be at the high school cafeteria, but the amount of tickets sold exceeded seating space, so the crowd was moved to the Bull Barn, where almost 500 people were served. Faculty representatives were responsible for contacting personnel about tickets.

Kristi Lytal and Natalie Sims, teachers at Hereford High School and Hereford Junior High entertained the group with country-western music. Approximately forty door prizes, again donations from Hereford merchants, were given before personnel returned to individual campuses.

HEA officers received materials for members and for recruitment of new members at the Area 29 Workshop held recently at the Community center. Plans for an increase of from 10 percent to 15 percent in membership for the 1992-93 school year, with emphasis on all employees of HISD being given the opportunity to join HEA/TSTA.

Officers involved in increasing membership in HEA, "The Leadership You Can Count On," are Jane Gulley, Membership Chairperson; Joe Don Cummings, Grievance Chairperson; Donna Warrick, Secretary; Randy Farr, Treasurer; Terry Zimmerman, President Elect and Faculty Representative; Carolyn Waters, President and Faculty Representative, Deloris Dowell, Bluebonnet; Dee Ann Matthews, Shirley; Carlynn DeLozier, West Central; Martha DeBord, Aikman; Sara Cook, Northwest; Joan Hopper, Tierra Blanca; Dolores Foster, Stanton; Martha Emerson and Shannon Jensen, High School; and Mary Varner and Julia Arrendondo who are working with enrollment of Educational Support Personnel.

An increase in enrollment has already begun and workers are confident that our goal will be met.

Meeting times are yet to be decided, but ten-minute campus meetings are being considered with three to four general meeting to be held throughout the year. Several projects are being considered that will involve membership and that will be beneficial to members and to the community.

DeBord returns to WT cheerleading squad

Foster parents needed in Hereford

An orientation meeting is planned in Hereford on Sept. 8 for persons who might be interested in being foster or adoptive parents.

A Model Approach to Partnership in Parenting (MAPP) training program will be conducted by Department of Human Services if there is enough interest.

More foster homes than ever are needed by DHS for temporary living for children. There is also still a need for adoptive parents, especially for children who are not infants nor toddlers.

Foster parents serve abused and neglected children from newborn to age 18, and are substitute parents for other parents who are unable to care for the child for a short time. The primary goal of the program is to reunite the family; children almost always return to their own family, and the situation in the natural home is supervised and programs implemented to improve relations.

Foster parenting is a tough job, said Dee Hernandez of Hereford. Hernandez has served for several years as a foster parent.

"Knowing a child has been helped is worth it all," she said. "Prospective foster parents may request a child of a certain sex or age because they have a child that age or sex. DHS works closely with foster parents to match a child's special needs to a family that can best provide for the child's security and comfort."

Besides a variety of background checks, foster homes must pass a fire inspection, all pets must be immunized, and each person living in the home is tested for tuberculosis. The foster parents receive a reimbursement from DHS, and foster children usually qualify for Medicaid programs.

Foster parents receive support from the Golden Spread Foster Parents Association. There are fundraising events held throughout the year to help with special needs like band, music lessons, camp and sports.

Anyone interested in foster parenting may call Hernandez, 364-8527; Cindy Hall in Adrian, 538-6303; or John Spradling, foster care home developer in Amarillo, 353-9962.

Olsons will lead Mixers

George and Betty Olson were installed as leaders of the Hereford Merry Mixers square dance club recently. Caller Roy Johnson of Amarillo installed the officers.

Other couples installed were Carlyle and Dorothy Sargent, vice president; Benny and Joan Womble, secretary-treasurer; Ronnie and Nln Brown and Gid and Juanita Brown, social chairmen; and Truitt and Corrine Hardage, Top-Tex representatives.

The Merry Mixers recently danced for the residents of King's Manor. Five couples journeyed to La Veta, Col., last week for a dance. Freddie McKee was the caller for three squares here last week.

Janene Hooley and Ervin Davis joined the Merry Mixers, transferring from the Levi's and Lac club in Amarillo.

The Merry Mixers are planning to offer lessons to interested couples the latter part of September. The specific night is to be announced.

We want to thank all of you who have shared bits of wisdom with us. We will continue compiling this type of column occasionally as long as you send us your favorites and express your enjoyment.

Between the Covers

By JOE WEAVER

That's where I've been a few times this week - between the covers. I really enjoy this cooler weather. I hope it portends a long fall instead of an early winter! I slipped up again last week when I forgot to thank all of those who helped with the Friends of the Library booth at the jubilee. Your assistance was greatly appreciated. Thanks also to all of you who bring us books, talking books, and videos. Some go on the shelf, some in the book sale. All are appreciated as they help the library progress!

Speaking of the Friends...the board met this past week to discuss some plans for the coming year. On the burner for the coming months: A Happy Birthday Hank Party, to celebrate ten years of Hank the Cowdog (October 1)...the purchase of more videos...popcorn to be sold at Family Films...Annual Book Sale (October 16 and 17)...and more!

After a few dry runs, this week we've got a good selection of fiction. That's the good news. The bad news is that most of it is already reserved, so if you see something you've been waiting for, better come in and get your name on the list.

Ebony Swan has been on the best-seller list for a number of weeks now, and we finally got our copy. Authored by Phyllis Whitney, this is a "spellbinding" tale of a young woman's search for the truth about her mother's mysterious death and her own past. Her search for the answer opens old wounds and creates anxiety among people who fear what may lie dormant in Susan's memory.

Who knows what jewels lurk behind the covers of "dime" romances? In 1987, Sandra Brown wrote a story published in the Bantam Loveswept series. Now, five years later, it's back as Fanta C, an "irresistible novel" in hardcover. The jacket blurb still sounds like a pulpy romance, though: "Elizabeth's days are filled with the business of running an elegant boutique and caring for her two small children. But her nights are long and empty since the death of her husband two years before, and she spends them dreaming of the love and romance that might have been. Then Thad steps into her life - a man right out of her most intimate fantasies." See what I mean?

Now that I've made Ms. Brown's fans mad at me, I'll move on to Jude Deveraux. Once again the term "cheap romance" comes to mind, but I'll be fair - Sweet Liar is brand new. There's the common situation of the heroine hating the hero to begin with, then falling madly and hopelessly in love. Together they unravel the story of her grandmother's association with the mob, and the subsequent disappearance of said grandma, which starts the whole ball rolling to begin with. "Dramatic, passionate, and deeply moving, yet filled with endearingly lighthearted moments, Sweet Liar celebrates the joy of life and love." The publisher's words, not mine.

Joshua, Father Joseph Girzone's pious woodcutter has come home in Joshua in the Holy Land, but finds home is no more peaceful than the "time long ago." An uplifting and welcome addition to the "Joshua" series.

And...just when you thought you knew all the dirt about Palm Beach... Archy McNally returns to confront glitz, ghosts and gore in McNally's Luck, Lawrence Sanders's "masterful" new thriller.

If you enjoyed Not Without My Daughter, Betty Mahmood's true account of her and her daughter's escape from Iran, then you need to read For The Love Of A Child. The sequel picks up where the original leaves off, and describes the author's cultural readjustment to America, her constant fear of her husband's revenge, and her frustration with a legal system that offers no protection.

Just in time for Back-To-School is How to Teach Your Child At Home - A Parent's Guide to Helping Kids Get A's. Based on author's experience and extensive research, and packed with tips, techniques, rules and examples with easy-to-follow guidelines on every major subject. Written in a readable and enjoyable style.

Starting Tuesday, we'll be back on our "regular" schedule, opening at 9:00 rather than 10:00. This weekend is the last fling before school and schedules really get back to business. Us too. The library will be closed Saturday through Monday for Labor Day.

The odds against being hit by a meteorite in any given year are ten trillion to one.

Wedding information must be submitted by 5 p.m. Monday to be included in the next Sunday Brand. Wedding information forms, as well as those for engagements and showers, are available at the news office, 313 N. Lee.

BY BEVERLY HARDER

Talents are personal resources that make us special. Some youth think that if they can't sing or play a sport they want to play, they don't have talent. However, parents can spot and encourage the development of their children's talents.

There are many kinds of talents. Visit with you children about what they think they do best. What do they enjoy doing that other people do that seem to be special? Do they know how to make people happy? Do they teach their pet tricks? Do they enjoy playing with little children? What talents do other people have that your children would like the chance to learn?

Talents are a personal resource that can be used several ways. Some people use their talents to make money, like baby-sitting, caring for other people's pets, or playing a sport as a professional. Some talents are used for personal pleasure, just to make yourself or other people feel good. Sometimes talents are used as a substitute for money. For example, a pre-teen may cook a special dish for someone who knows how to repair bicycles.

Let your children tell you what they think is one of your talents. Share how you developed it or how you have used your talent in different ways. Encourage youth to see talents as more than a gift. Talents are a resource just like time, energy and money. Resourceful youth increase the value of their talents by developing them, using them wisely and sharing them with others.

Encourage youth to choose someone they know who has a talent they admire. Ask them to talk with the person they have chosen and find out about when they realized they had this talent, how they developed it and how they have used it. Set a time when your child will share what he or she learns from talking to the talented person. They might write or give you a news report on their "talent news" as part of the family evening news.

Local restaurant gears for future

"Doing whatever it takes to get the job done" is the company motto and ideal Sirloin Stockade International has chosen as a direction for the 90's according to local manager Gary Irvin.

The Hereford restaurant, which is part of vast chain covering a 12-state region and among 20 other locations throughout the Lone Star State, offers a family steakhouse concept which has steadily grown in popularity.

First and foremost, the Sirloin Stockade menu features an emphasis on good nutrition, starting with top quality, all-American beef, cut fresh daily. In addition, chicken and seafood are offered as staple entrees in an effort to satisfy a variety of tastes, and an extravagant salad and hot food bar offers more than 80 fresh vegetables, fruits, prepared salads and side dishes daily.

"We continue to focus on quality, variety, service, teamwork and dedication," says Irvin, "and our popularity continues to grow every year."

Irvin also cites a recent menu change as the most dramatic example of the restaurant's effort to listen and respond to its customer's desires. "We separated the smorgasbar from all the entree selections, and we actually lowered the prices on most entrees in the process. The change allows the customer to buy as much or as little as they want which is a unique concept in restaurant dining."

"Our management philosophy places priority on being responsive to the needs and desires of Hereford...we'll do whatever it takes to get the job done," he says.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - A real estate company is suing Elizabeth Taylor, claiming she annexed a piece of land next to her Bel Air home that it owns.

The lawsuit, filed Wednesday by A.M. Real Estate Inc., says the actress and her husband, Larry Fortensky, tore down a fence between the two properties, put up a new one beyond their property line and landscaped the disputed parcel.

A call to Miss Taylor's lawyer Neil Papiano went unanswered after business hours.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Former "Diff'rent Strokes" star Todd Bridges says he has found solace in God since his acquittal on charges of shooting a drug dealer.

And Bridges, who was once a heavy cocaine user, said he hasn't touched the drug in three years.

"I've realized that all the things I do have to be done to glorify God," Bridges, 27, said in Wednesday's Los Angeles Wave newspaper. "It made me realize that I do have a calling and a lot of things to do."

Bridges was found innocent in 1989 of attempted murder in the shooting of a drug dealer at a crack house. But the jury deadlocked on a charge of assault. He was acquitted at a retrial in 1990.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a 45-year-old woman and have been a single parent for 15 years. My career is flourishing and I should be on top of the world. So why am I miserable? I've been diagnosed as having "night terrors".

These attacks have plagued me for almost 13 years. I've broken bones, scared my family half to death, and almost killed myself. With night terrors, you jump out of bed and literally run for your life. While still asleep, you scream, can't breathe and think you're dying. This is very frightening for the family and no fun for the victim.

I was diagnosed years ago at a sleep disorder center. They claimed I have the sleep patterns of a 13-year-old and what I am experiencing can be dangerous. I was put on medication, which did not help. In fact, the drugs made me very tired and more susceptible to these attacks.

I'm beside myself with anxiety and don't know where to turn. If you can help me, Ann, I'll be forever grateful. -Loning For Normal Sleep in Philadelphia

DEAR PHILADELPHIA: My office spoke with Dr. Mark Mahowald at the Minnesota Regional Sleep Disorder Center at Hennepin County Medical Center in Minneapolis. He said there are a number of disorders that can cause the behavior you described, and most are treatable. It is Dr. Mahowald's opinion that you may have been misdiagnosed, and he suggested that you try another clinic. He is optimistic about your chances to get help if you follow through.

For information or referrals, write to the National Sleep Foundation, 122 S. Robertson Blvd., Suite 201, Los Angeles, Calif. 90048.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a 35-year-old single male, never married and considered attractive. The problem? I can't seem to find a woman who will give me the time of day.

I've answered personal ads, joined singles groups, gone to church activities and even tried nightclubs. The only women I've met who show any interest are extremely overweight and don't care about the way they look -- or they are deeply religious and just want to be friends. The attractive professionals are all busy and have no time to date.

For example, last week, I asked out a smart young business executive, and this is her schedule: Monday, pottery class, Tuesday, aerobics, Wednesday, night school, Thursday, volleyball, Friday, softball practice, Saturday and Sunday, weekend church retreat. Another woman who answered a personal ad I had placed told me she works late every night and goes home to see her parents on weekends.

Are there any women left how are physically fit and have time to date? Why is everyone so darned busy all the time? I'd like some answers. -Falls Church, Va.

DEAR FALLS CHURCH: With all the women out there who are eager for men, you can't get a date? Yes, you DO have a problem. I can't tell you what it is because I don't know you, but believe me, something is definitely out of kilter. Obviously, no one will level with you so I suggest that you see a counselor.

You need an objective, unbiased professional who will evaluate your personality and explain to you why you keep bombing out. Good luck.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This is in response to "Mrs. Weary Ears in the West," who asked, "What can be done about a person who never stops talking?" She went on to complain about her husband who "wakes up in the morning with his mouth in gear."

"Motor Mouths" (as you call them) come in both genders. I am married to a woman who is a high-energy wife and mother, loving and well-informed, but she never stops talking. When I brought her home to meet my parents, my dad asked, "Was Denise by any chance vaccinated with a phonograph needle?"

I wouldn't trade my wife for anybody else's, but please be aware that there are just as many overly talkative women as men, so soft-peddle it, Annie. -Escondido, Calif.

DEAR DIDO: Your point is well taken. Read on for more on the subject:

From Cleveland: Please don't be so quick to put down people who talk a lot. There could be a medical reason. My wife of 20 years suddenly became a non-stop talker and it almost drove me around the bend. It turned out that she is manic-depressive. After being put on medication, she has resumed her normal speech pattern and our life is good again.

Dallas: My husband used to talk a lot and sometimes I got so tired of listening to him I'd say, "For heaven's sake, Harry, will you please be quiet?" Three years ago, he was operated on for cancer of the larynx and now he speaks through a mechanical device. How I wish I could hear his natural voice again. It would be sweet music to my ears.

Detroit: I am a male "Motor Mouth" who read your recent column with interest. I was cured when one woman simply said, "SHUT UP." Men who talk too much are lucky if they have a woman who will level with them.

Goleta, Calif.: I think you made a bad call on "Weary ears." You suggested she put on earphones. That "solution" might give her a bit of relief, but it certainly won't solve the problem. Her husband is probably troubled about something and the constant chatter is a cover-up for his anxiety. He should get some counseling.

Fort Lauderdale: I wish the woman who complained about her "Motor Mouth" husband would come to this part of the country and visit with the dozens of widows who were once married to men who talked too much. I am one of them.

My darling husband was the life of the party, the one who told the funniest jokes. I remember sitting through the same timeworn stories dozens of times, mumbling to myself, "I can't believe he's going to tell that one again."

I've had an awful lot of quiet evenings these last two years and the loneliness is dreadful. What I wouldn't give to hear his voice again. Lord how I miss that man! Those women who complain that their husbands talk too much should count their blessings. -Silence Is Not Always Golden

DEAR SILENCE: Your message came through loud and clear. My thanks to you and all those who wrote for being so candid.

Dear Readers: Is there a lawyer in your life? Your son or daughter, husband, wife, parent, sweetheart or good friend? Give him or her the new book by Sen. Paul Simon. It's informative, fascinating and beautifully written. The title: "Advice and Consent," published by National Press Books. The price: $23.95 (slightly more in Canada).

Dwain Pittenger displays the trophy, featuring a statuette of Charles Lindbergh, won at the Oshkosh '92 Antique Aircraft show early this month. The Cessna 1943 Bobcat T-50, a model called the "Bamboo Bomber" during World War II, won the antique classic division of the Experimental Aircraft Association. Pittenger bought the twin-engine aircraft in 1986 and estimates that 3,000 hours of work went into the restoration.

NBC flies away with '92 Emmy nods

On Sunday, Fox presents the live broadcast of The 44th Annual Emmy Awards. Dennis Miller, Kirstie Alley and Tim Allen serve as hosts of the program honoring outstanding achievements in television. One highlight of the show will be the presentation of the Academy's Governors Award to cable impresario Ted Turner.

Kirstie, Dennis, Tim and no Gilbert

By Steven Alan McGaw

NBC got 100. CBS received 70, and ABC followed close behind with 63. The next closest recipients, ahead of networks like HBO and PBS, were producers Joshua Brand and John Falsey with a whopping 30.

What they got were nominations for this year's Emmy Awards. The trophies presented by the Academy of Television Arts & Sciences will be handed out on Sunday, Aug. 30. For the sixth year, the Fox network will carry the star-studded special, scheduled to run about three hours ... but don't bet on it.

"I'm your long-form awards show director," laughs Walter Miller, recalling his experiences producing big awards programs, including this year's Tonys and a memorable Emmy telecast that ran 4 hours, 15 minutes. Executive producer Miller admits there's really no way to insure the show will stay on course because of variables like acceptance speeches and unscripted banter between presenters. He also declares "there isn't any protection" from unexpected (and unwanted) incidents like that of last year, when comedian Gilbert Gottfried took advantage of the live broadcast to launch into a vulgar comedy routine. In minutes, the switchboards at Fox affiliates lit up like Christmas trees.

Miller says the key is to keep the show moving and keep it funny, a job primarily in the hands of the program's three hosts: Dennis Miller, Kirstie Alley and Tim Allen. The trio will appear in rotation throughout the show, with Miller kicking off the evening with a monologue that's sure to touch on the presidential race and the recent demise of his syndicated talk show. Alley will anchor a segment saluting television's "Women of Comedy," and Allen will likely contribute some of his trademark male-oriented humor.

Other highlights of the show will include appearances by Jerry Seinfeld and Richard Lewis (sure to bemoan the cancellation of his Anything But Love), a final fanfare for several long-running series that came to a close this season and the presentation of the Governors Award to cable mogul Ted Turner. Longtime Turner-watchers will surely expect the controversial entrepreneur's acceptance speech to contain some of his well-known, irreverent wit.

Falsey and Brand netted their nominations with just two shows: NBC's critically acclaimed period drama, I'll Fly Away and the quirky Northern Exposure, one of CBS' brightest success stories in the last few years. Both shows are up for Outstanding Drama series, as well as trophies in the writing and directing divisions. Leads Sam Waterston and Rob Morrow will compete for a prize in the acting category.

CNN gets corner on weekly poll results

By Michael Scogin

Currently in its fourth week on CNN, College Coaches Corner airs each Sunday morning. The half-hour show gives college-football fans the first look at the week's CNN/USA Today top 25 coaches' poll, plus game highlights and live, on-location interviews.

The show is anchored by newcomer Paul Crane, who joins CNN after nine years at CBS' Dallas affiliate KDFW-TV. Crane, who also anchors CNN's College Football Preview on Saturday mornings, says the unveiling of the weekly coaches' poll is one of the highlights of College Coaches Corner.

"The great thing about the poll is that the college coaches really have their fingers on the pulse of what's going on in the game," Crane says.

Joining Crane is USA Today's John Welsh, who provides detailed analysis of poll results. Live interviews with top college coaches are also featured.

"We'll interview the coaches from the biggest games, analyze how Saturday's play affects the bowl alliances, provide statistics - all the things that college-football fans want to know," says Crane, whose enthusiasm is a Sunday-morning wake-up call to viewers.

"The great thing about college football is its storied traditions and the way campuses come to life on game day. We'll be tapped into the emotions of college football and all the things that make it unique and different."

SOAP TALK

Actors quitting 'Days' jobs

By Candace Havens,
Dear Candace: I was a huge fan of Days of Our Lives, but now I'm not. It all started with Mary Beth Evans (ex-Kayla) leaving the show. I'm not a big fan of hers, but I had heard that she was fired because of a money problem. Then they hired Patsy Pease (Kim) again. Now to me that is not fair. Why can't Days keep both of them?
Then Staci Greason says that she'll be leaving in October. What's going to happen to little Brady? Now Roberta Leighton and Robert Mailhouse (Ginger and Brian) are also leaving, due to a story-line decision. What in the world does that mean? But to top it all off, Days has hired Edward Mallory to play Bill Horton. A lot of people I know are displeased with Days.
—April Laman, Trinity, Texas.

EMMY

in this year's Emmys. Kirk Douglas' guest performance in an episode of HBO's Tales From the Crypt is nominated in the Lead Actor in a Drama series category, and Edward Asner, winner of seven Emmys (a record) is going for his eighth trophy with a nod for his supporting role in CBS' defunct The Trials of Rosie O'Neill. Marion Ross, twice nominated for her work in the long-running Happy Days, will compete for the Outstanding Lead Actress in a Comedy Series award for her work in CBS' critical favorite Brooklyn Bridge. Among her competitors is The Golden Girls' Betty White, an 11-time nominee facing her third win. © TV Listing Inc.

TRIVIA, ETC.

Test those Emmy memories

By Steven Alan McGaw

- Questions
1. When were the Emmys first broadcast in color?
 2. Name the actress whose 1966 acceptance speech consisted entirely of saying, "The feeling's mutual."
 3. Name 1955's "Best Variety Series."
 4. In accepting his award in 1986, this actor exclaimed, "I feel 4 feet tall!"
 5. This recent Oscar winner won the 1956 Emmy for "Best Single Performance by an Actor." Identify the performer and the vehicle in which he appeared.
 6. In 1967, this artist was nominated for both starring in a series and writing one episode. (He won neither.) Name the star and the series.
 7. This comedy series and its star were each recognized in the 1970 Emmys — after the show was cancelled. Name them.
- Answers:
1. 1956.
 2. Lee Grant, for Peyton Place.
 3. The Ed Sullivan Show.
 4. Michael J. Fox.
 5. Jack Palance won for his performance in Requiem for a Heavyweight.
 6. Robert Culp, I Spy.
 7. William Windom won for his work in NBC's My World and Welcome to It, the newly-unemployed actor said, "I'm sober, have a tux and will travel."

Dear April: Evans left for a variety of reasons and money was only one of them. The producers of the show felt that there wasn't anyone who could take the place of Patch as a love interest for Kayla, which was bad news for Evans, who really wanted to stay on the show. There have been rumors that she could turn up on General Hospital though.
Pease was brought back mainly because she felt she was ready to work again and the show welcomed her. The producers wanted to tie up the loose ends between Kim and Shane (Shaughnessy), before Shaughnessy leaves the show in October to pursue prime-time and movie work.
As for Ginger and Brian, they are not the only ones exiting. Aug. 31 is the last tape date for Shannon Sturges (Molly) and Michael Easton (Tanner). Both Sturges and Easton were glad to go; they had tired of constantly being on the back burner.
Greason is leaving the show of her own accord, saying that she has tired of acting and wishes to pursue other interests. Her character, Isabella, will be killed off and it is not yet known what will become of baby Brady. The reason for the return of the character Bill Horton is the producer's promise to make the Brady and Horton families the crux of the show.

What are brothers for?; HBO strikes up the 'Band'

Crime doesn't pay ... as well as show business. On a recent edition of BET's Live from L.A., Keenan Ivory Wayans, executive producer and star of In Living Color, commented on his brother Damon's new film, Mo'Nasty. "It's sort of an autobiographical sketch of Damon. There was a period when Damon thought he was the smartest guy in the world, and that got him into a little trouble (with the law). That was the turning point for him — what made him realize that what he got into was not where he wanted to be ... I went to New York and convinced his parole officer to let him come out here (to Los Angeles) and got him into comedy."

Damon Wayans

And the Band Played On, journalist Randy Shiels' controversial best seller about official and public responses to the outbreak of AIDS in the early 1980's, may become a motion picture after all. NBC once owned rights to the project, but after hesitating for three years, decided to pass. After HBO Pictures acquired the production rights, Joel Schumacher, who directs the trashy 2000 Malibu Road for CBS, was to direct, but he, too, backed out. Now Roger Spottiswoode (Under Fire, Shoot to Kill) has accepted the assignment, working under executive producers Aaron Spelling and E. Duke Vincent (Melrose Place).

The muppets take Orlando? Jim Henson Productions and The Disney Channel have struck a major distribution deal, it was announced recently. The agreement provides for Henson's live-action series Fraggle Rock to air on Disney; the animated version was already airing on the channel. The Disney Channel will also begin airing the popular Henson films The Muppet Movie, The Great Muppet Caper and The Dark Crystal and will extend the channel's window for the Emmy-winning series Jim Henson's Mother Goose Stories.

CABLE NEWS

Additions to Family; leave it to Weasel

By Dan Rice

The pony express rides again. The Family Channel has purchased 65 episodes of The Young Riders for an exclusive run weeknights and Saturdays beginning Tuesday, Sept. 1. The cable channel has also picked up 66 episodes of Life Goes On, which will air Monday through Thursday evenings and Sunday afternoons beginning Monday, Aug. 31.

For a journey through the past, hitch a ride on TBS Sunday, Aug. 30, as National Geographic Explorer leads an archaeological expedition to the pyramids at Giza, Egypt. Host Robert Ulrich goes on location as Egypt: Beyond the Pyramids details the study of the people who constructed the enigmatic pyramids.

Moving to the totally fresh, Sunday also marks the debut of the HBO Comedy Hour: Pauly Shore. The MTV veejay and star of Encino Man, who describes himself as "the Weasel," delivers a performance that's guaranteed to teach you some new phrases.

"Ain't that tuff enuff?" On Saturday, Sept. 5, The Nashville Network's The Texas Connection welcomes The Fabulous Thunderbirds and their guests, Lou Ann Barton, W.C. Clark and Delbert McClinton.

Dive, dive! Wild Hearts Can't Be Broken debuts Sunday on The Disney Channel. Based on a true story, the film stars Gabrielle Anwar as a Depression-era girl who joins a stunt show as a high-diver on horseback. © TV Listing Inc.

'Roundhouse' adds punch to Saturdays

By Chris Carpenter

On a night when anyone old enough to have a driver's license is elsewhere, Nickelodeon offers Snick, or Saturday Nickelodeon, two hours of prime-time programming for kids. The second of Snick's four distinctly different series is Roundhouse, a bare-bones variety show that makes up for a small budget with big energy.

Call it Sonny and Cher with oversampling, Donny and Marie sans disco, but a more appropriate label might be In Living Color for pre-teens. Roundhouse producer Buddy Sheffield, a former Color writer, doesn't discount that comparison.

"I created a lot of the sketches that some of you probably hate," Sheffield recently said of his old job at a press gathering, "and ... a lot of kids watch (In Living Color). If they're going to watch that kind of show, we might as well give them one that has the right kind of values and is planned for them and not pick them up by accident."

True to at least one trait of its Fox ancestor, Roundhouse is peopled by an extremely talented ensemble cast that delivers both deft humor and dance moves with synchronous timing and acrobatic vigor. Wedged between established Nick faves Clarissa Explains It All and The Ren & Stimpy Show, Roundhouse makes a solid case for a new Saturday night fever.

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) - Oscar-winning producer Arnold Shapiro is breaking some new ground with his latest documentary, a discussion of child abuse that will be televised on several commercial networks at the same time.

Shapiro says he chose the subject because child abuse is often the root cause of child abuse.

"Victims of child abuse either act out their rage on society or on themselves," he says. "We're all affected because it costs $5.3 billion every year just to investigate reports of child abuse and neglect."

In an unprecedented move, Shapiro's one-hour documentary "Scared Silent: Exposing and Ending Child Abuse" will be televised at 10 p.m. EDT Friday on CBS, NBC and PBS. It will be repeated the following Sunday on ABC. In another first, a toll-free hot line will be shown three times during the program.

"Scared Silent" is also being distributed to Canada and other countries.

The program's goal is to break the silence that has enabled child abusers to escape detection through the fear of the victims.

Oprah Winfrey, herself a victim of child abuse, is host of the special. She will devote her syndicated talk show "Oprah" to the subject of child abuse on Thursday.

She points out in the documentary that most child molesters are family members or close friends, rather than strangers. A number of cases are discussed by the victims and the perpetrators to illustrate the three types of abuse.

One of them is a woman named Eva. She and her father talk of incest and the effect it has had on their lives. The father, who served a prison sentence and underwent therapy, revealed that as a child he had been abused by a neighborhood boy. It points out that abuse is handed down from generation to generation.

Although full names are not revealed, there are no hidden faces. They all speak candidly, often in graphic detail. Shapiro says that although he found many of the cases they investigated shocking and unbelievable, he did not want to drive any potential viewers away by showing pictures of battered children.

Shapiro won an Academy Award in 1979 for "Scared Straight," a documentary about a unique program in which juvenile offenders were told the hard facts about prison by hardened inmates.

"Child abuse affects more people than AIDS," Shapiro says. "We needed to reach as wide an audience as possible. That's when I came up with the idea of the simulcast in prime time. The networks received the program free, but I asked them to run fewer commercials than usual."

"I really think - and I don't mean to sound overly dramatic - that 'Scared Silent' can save lives. I think people will see this and become aware of things they hadn't recognized on a conscious level. Maybe a perpetrator will see it and realize the harm he is causing. Millions of children are being abused every day, and it will continue as long as people remain silent."

Oprah Winfrey was the first and only choice as host because child abuse was known to be one of her major causes.

Shapiro says psychological or emotional abuse may be the most destructive because it overlaps cases of emotional and physical abuse.

"That is the one parents can work on and be sensitive to," he says. "They should not verbally destroy their children. No one recognizes it in themselves."

LET'S TALK

Kate's great out of States; ALF has returned to Melmac

By Taylor Michaels

Q: A number of months ago I saw a wonderful old movie on TV. It took place in Venice, Italy. An American woman fell in love and after some time learned the man was married. She decided to go back home with a broken heart. I believe the star was Katharine Hepburn. I only saw a portion of it but would like to see it all. —Dixie Jones, Greenville, N.C.

Katharine Hepburn in Summertime

A: The name of that 1955 gem is Summertime. The film was loosely adapted from the stage play The Time of the Cuckoo. Hepburn is perfectly cast as an independent yet lonely woman who flirts with true happiness for the first time in the form of a married Italian man. The picture was wonderfully directed on location by David Lean (Lawrence of Arabia, Great Expectations). Incidentally, the film's "controversial" theme narrowly escaped the iron fist of the then powerful Legion of Decency in the United States. Most video stores with a good selection should have it.

sions, this masterful drama concerning the plight of a large Welsh coal-mining family was directed by John Ford and starred Walter Pidgeon, Donald Crisp and Maureen O'Hara. Told through the eyes of the youngest son (Roddy McDowell), the film won five Academy Awards for Best Picture, Director, Supporting Actor (Crisp), Cinematography and Art Director. It is available, but only on laser disc, according to Leonard Maltin's Movie and Video Guide 1992, and may only be for sale in some stores.

Q: Please settle a bet I've had with my husband for some time. He thinks that Elizabeth McGovern (She's Having a Baby) and Elizabeth Perkins (He Said, She Said) are the same person, but I am positive they are not. (He thinks she changed her name!) —Tracy W., Portland, Ore.

Q: What happened to the show ALF? I know it was cut, but they left ALF surrounded by the Allen Task Force and "To Be Continued," and that was the last I saw of the show. Did I miss something? —J.D. Stolk, Gresham, Ore.

A: It's been said that love conquers all, Tracy, and I hope your devotion to your husband will allow you to forgive him for believing the two Elizabeths are the same person — they aren't. For further comparison, check out McGovern in Ordinary People, Ragtime, The Bedroom Window and Racing With the Moon. Other films with Perkins include About Last Night, From the Hip, Sweet Hearts Dance and Big.

A: If you saw "Consider Me Gone," the last original episode of ALF to air, you've probably seen the last one. The one-time top-10 program continued only in reruns and syndication. ALF debuted on Sept. 22, 1986, and was a surprise hit for NBC. The cat-eating alien life-form inspired a successful line of merchandise and a Saturday-morning cartoon version of his adventures. The series was canceled in 1990.

Q: Since returning from a trip to the British Isles, I've been looking for a video of the movie How Green Was My Valley. I have a vague memory of seeing this movie about life in Wales, probably in the '40s. Can you tell me if this is available on video? —Lois Scott, Fredonia, Kan.

Send your questions to Let's Talk, Features Dept., P.O. Box 961009, Fort Worth, Texas, 76161-1009. Please send no return envelopes; questions will only be answered within this column.

A: Released in 1941 in slightly differing British and American ver-

Heartthrob Billy Ray Cyrus shows his stuff On Stage, Thursday on The Nashville Network.

Nice Guy Leno finishes first - what about his viewers?

NEW YORK (AP) - Tuesday marked Jay Leno's three-month anniversary behind the desk of NBC's "The Tonight Show." For three months, he has been slammed by critics and dissed by Arsenio Hall. And he has taken it like a man - a NICE man.

Nice is a wondrous thing after the reign of Johnny what's-his-name, who in recent years seemed to think he was doing viewers a favor even showing up in reruns.

By contrast, Leno is just plain tickled to have the job. Not only does he report to the office Monday through Friday like other working stiff, he comes in early. He stays late. He invites hip, classy, brainy guests, and he reads the books and sees the movies they are there to plug. He lets all his performers - even the greenest singer or standup comic - come sit on his couch when they finish their acts. He holds up their CDs until you could memorize the fine print.

That's a nice guy. Leno clearly works hard on his monologue, and can deliver blistering observations such as his forecast for a Sen. Al Gore-Vice President Dan Quayle debate: "Like watching the Dream Team playing Lithuania again."

But all is not right in Lenoland. Here, in no particular order, is a list of problems with "The Tonight Show" - and how Jay can fix them.

- Something should be done about Jay's over-eager manner, especially the heaving shoulders and recurrent giggling.

Suggestion: Try a Xanax. - That practice of restating a joke once or even twice for an extra laugh - it has a desperate look to it, and suggests that the audience was too dumb to get the punchline the first time around.

Suggestion: Try a cork. - The live sketches are pretty lame. While the prerecorded parodies are better, the fact is, there are shows that specialize in this kind of stuff (ever heard of "Saturday Night Live"?). Suggestion: Leave satire to the experts.

- A marvelous band doesn't necessarily make a good TV house band. On television, Branford Marsalis' ensemble comes across as reedy and bland.

Suggestion: Sign the Zydeco Party Band from "The Late Mr. Pete Show," and give that washboard virtuoso a long-term contract.

- Like the old one, the new "Tonight Show" set is a glowing example of money over taste. The mural of that dusky bay recalls the decor at a bad Italian restaurant. The drab purple curtain seems pinched from a junior high assembly hall.

Suggestion: Borrow the cool, super-modern set from "The Dennis Miller Show." He doesn't need it anymore.

- The average commuter has better rapport with a subway turnstile than does Jay with Branford Marsalis. Announcer Edd Hall, usually kept off-camera, could be phoning in his part from Uranus.

Suggestion: One is the loneliest number, Jay, so get a sidekick fast and get down with him. Or with her! A sharp, sassy female to bounce things off of might be just the ticket. Your interplay with comic Paula Poundstone, serving as "Tonight Show" convention correspondent, suggested the sort of much-needed edge an on-site woman back-up could bring to the show.

Bottom line: Jay Leno needs spice to go with the nice.

"Roc" goes live

HOLLYWOOD (AP) - The warm-up comedian was trying to cool down a studio audience that had been standing in 97-degree heat just moments before. His comedy routine carried a bracing admonishment. "Turn your beepers off, turn your phones off, no talking pictures, no talking, no yelling out," he barked. This is live television in the '90s. Specifically, this is Sunday's season premiere of Fox Broadcasting Co.'s "Roc," the only prime-time comedy to be broadcast live since the 1950s.

And though the weather outside was frightfully hot, the climate inside Stage 4 at Hollywood Center Studios was flawlessly cool. The 30-minute sitcom's live broadcast went off without a discernible hitch. No flubbed lines, no missed marks, no natural disasters - which in Sunday's case would have constituted a non-functioning air conditioner. About 15 minutes before (See ROC, Page 11) showtime, executive producer Vic Kaplan had stood outside, looking slightly dazed. "I'm a little nervous," he said, sweat beading his forehead.

What's the worst that could happen, barring an actor dropping dead on stage?

"We could miss a few shots," he said, beginning with the most innocuous of possible calamities. Kaplan quickly stopped this negative train of thought. "These people are professionals. They don't want to make mistakes."

They didn't. Which is why Fox chose this show to go live in an attention-getting ploy designed to boost its image and the show's ratings.

All four cast members of "Roc" are stage actors used to the rigors of nightly live performances. The Fox program, which depicts a working-class black family, has received critical acclaim but not big ratings.

So when the fourth network renewed "Roc" earlier this year for a 22-episode second season, it was accompanied by an announcement that the seasoned team of Broadway actors would perform live for each installment.

"Roc" stars Charles S. Dutton, an ex-con-turned-actor who received a Tony nomination for his role in August Wilson's "The Piano Lesson." Co-stars Carl Gordon and Rocky Carroll also appeared in the play.

In preparing to go live Sunday, the cast began rehearsing five days before, knowing there would be no chance to reshoot scenes that didn't work or lines that fell flat.

On Saturday, the actors did one run-through and then taped a dress rehearsal. The last was designed as a contingency should something unforeseen occur, like a non-functioning satellite.

Lag time: One second. Eastern and Central time zones carry "Roc" as it is happening. Mountain and Pacific time zones offer the program tape-delayed, but Fox insists it will not doctor any imperfections for Western broadcasts.

Sunday's show had none, although the warm-up comedian claimed he stood too quickly at the start of a commercial break and accidentally popped into a closing shot.
