Devastating tornadoes lash through Ontario

BARRIE, Ontario (AP) — Tornadoes lashed Barrie and other central Ontario communities Friday, killing at least 11 people, injuring about 150 others and damaging hundreds of buildings, officials reported.

Seven people were killed in Barrie, a city of 45,000 people 55 miles north of Toronto, according to a hospital spokesman and provincial police.

Two people were killed in nearby nearby Alliston and at least two perished in the village of Grand Valley, provincial police said.

"My impression is that there are still people that are missing," said Cpl. Brad Nudds of provincial police in Barrie.

Jim Perrin, a spokesman for the Barrie hospital, said 80 people had been treated there, 10 for serious injuries, and some were being transferred to Toronto in ambulances.

Another 67 people were treated at Dufferin Hospital in Orangeville, according to officials. They said many were injured when a twister destroyed a 10-store shopping plaza just north of town.

Doug Smith, editor of the Orangeville Banner, said the shopping plaza was "reduced to rubble" and a house beside the plaza was destroyed. A blind couple that lived in the house escaped uninjured, he said.

The town of Shelburne also was hit by a tornado, said Environment Canada spokesman Jim Davis.

A local reporter in Barrie said about 150 houses, a hotel and industrial buildings were damaged, and that cars and trucks were tossed about "like toys" on Highway 400, the major link between northern and southern Ontario.

Barrie authorities called in soldiers from a nearby military base to prevent vandalism.

"People were crying and screaming," said Barrie resident Patricia Burke. "All the buildings were down except the one I was in."

"It sounded like a whole bunch of jets coming," Lorne Williams said as he picked up debris littering his living room. A neighbor's car had been flipped onto the front steps of Williams' house.

Baker named as new credit union manager

Robert L. "Bob" Baker has been named as the new manager of Hereford Texas Federal Credit Union, it was announced Friday by Joe Kerr, president of the credit union association.

Baker, 50, will replace Jimmy Rowton, who has resigned after seven years as manager. Rowton plans to complete his college degree and become an athletic trainer. Baker assumes the managerial post June 17.

Baker is the owner and operator of Baker Vending Company in Hereford, and he is a former vice president of First National Bank of Hereford. He said his wife, Cindy, Little ones graduate, too!

Twenty-six children from Hereford's migrant and seasonal farm worker families will enter public schools next year armed with skills in English, Spanish, arithmetic and handwriting.

The students, ages three through five, made up Friday's graduating class from the Texas Migrant Council's Head Start program.

Dressed in white caps and gowns, the youngsters marched—some triumphantly, some shyly, down the long aisle of the Avenue Baptist Church chapel to receive their handshakes and diplomas. Both were bestowed by head teacher Thelma Castro.

Hereford's center is one of more than 9,000 across the country celebrating its 20th anniversary of the program's founding.

Since its establishment in 1965, Head Start has provided health, education, nutrition and social services to more than nine million preschool children.

Major studies in recent years have shown that children enrolled in Head Start and similar programs are far less likely to be held back a grade or assigned to special education classes than low-income children who did not attend an early childhood program.

Children also scored higher in math, had stronger self-concepts, and their parents had greater expectations of their potential.

Halleluia, Hats Off!

The triumphant seniors ended commencement Friday night with an explosion of mortar boards sailing high into the sky. Amy Mason was announced as the Outstanding Senior at the ceremony and class president Randy Villarreal granted the senior gift. Seniors left $200 to the sophomore class, $500 to the junior class, and $700 to the school.

White signs Blue Law repeal

Effective September 1

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White has signed legislation repealing the Texas Blue Law, just as he said he would if he was satisfied there were safeguards against people being forced to work on Sundays.

The bill, signed by White late Friday afternoon, was passed by the Legislature earlier in May.

Several major department stores already have been opening for business on Sundays even though the repeals doesn't take effect until Sept. 1.

The Blue Law, enacted in 1961, has forbidden the sale of 42 items on consecutive days of the weekend, effectively closing most stores on Sunday.

The law has prohibited sales of furniture, clothing, hardware, appliances and automobiles, among other merchandise.

After the repealed law takes effect,

only the sale of automobiles will be prohibited on Sunday.

Lawmakers continued the ban on car dealers at the request of their dealers association.

"After reviewing the legislation, I am confident that protections against employees having to work a seven-day week and honoring citizens' rights to observe religious ceremonies are in place," White said Friday.

According to state officials, allowing Sunday sales should bring the state between $24 million and $40 million in additional sales tax revenue. White noted that in a brief statement released after he signed the bill.

"The signing of this bill will generate revenue needed for the indigent health-care program the Legislature worked so hard to pass in the final days of the session," White said.

That $70 million program — funded by several sources — will provide medical care for pregnant women, newborn infants and others too poor to obtain it on their own.

Repeal of the Blue Law has been sought for several years, but seldom made much progress in the Legislature. Repeal had been fought by owners of small businesses who feared that a Sunday opening option would lengthen their work week as they tried to compete with larger merchants.

Backers this year, including numerous national chain stores, mounted a full-fledged lobbying effort to convince lawmakers to repeal the Blue Law, a direct descendant of 19th Century Sunday closing laws.

White also signed legislation to give cities broader authority over billboards.

Weather

SUNDAY OUTLOOK: Partly cloudy with highs in the mid 80's. Winds are predicted to be south to southwest 5 to 10 mph.

Bank open house today

First National Bank of Hereford will hold open house Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m. to show off results of a massive expansion and remodeling project which cost in excess of $1 million.

FNB, the oldest financial institution in the city, expanded its facilities to include 7,000 square feet of additional space in the former Rutherford building. It now has about 20,000 square feet of working area.

The first phase of the expansion was to remodel the former Rutherford building, adding additional of-ice space. The second phase was to remodel the existing building, inside and outside. The interior has an entirely new look with teller windows situated at an angle in the new lobby and the new entry located midway of the expanded facilities.

The installment loan department was moved to the north end of the building, and a new vault was installed on the south end.

The public is invited to the open house. "We hope you will share in our pride of being a growing part of Hereford by joining us at our open house," said Jim Sears, FNB president.

Outstanding Senior

Amy Mason, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Don Tindal, was named Outstanding Senior during Hereford High School's commencement exercises Friday night. Miss Mason was a member of the National Honor Society, in the band, on the drill team, and was named as a DAR good citizen. She was nominated for Most Beautiful and was on the homecoming court. She also served as vice president of the senior class.

Cowgirl Hall to celebrate 10th year

Induction ceremonies, an auction, a ball, a style show, and an open house are part of the festivities set by the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center to celebrate its tenth anniversary this month.

Headlining the June 15 celebration is the 1985 Honoree Induction to be held at noon at the Hereford Country Club.

Three women who are designated as Western Heritage inductees are Angie Debo of Marshall, Oklahoma; Doris Seibold of Patagonia, Arizona; and Wilma Tate of Perris, California.

Cowgirl inductees are Vivian White Dillard of Warner, Oklahoma; Thena Mae Farr of Seymour, Texas; and Martha Josey, of Karnack, Texas.

The Miss Texas Rodeo, to be crowned in Fort Worth next week, will assist in the induction ceremonies.

Tickets to the luncheon are $12 and available by reservation at the Hall of Fame.

The rodeo queen will be present at the Hall's open house that afternoon from 3 until 5 p.m.

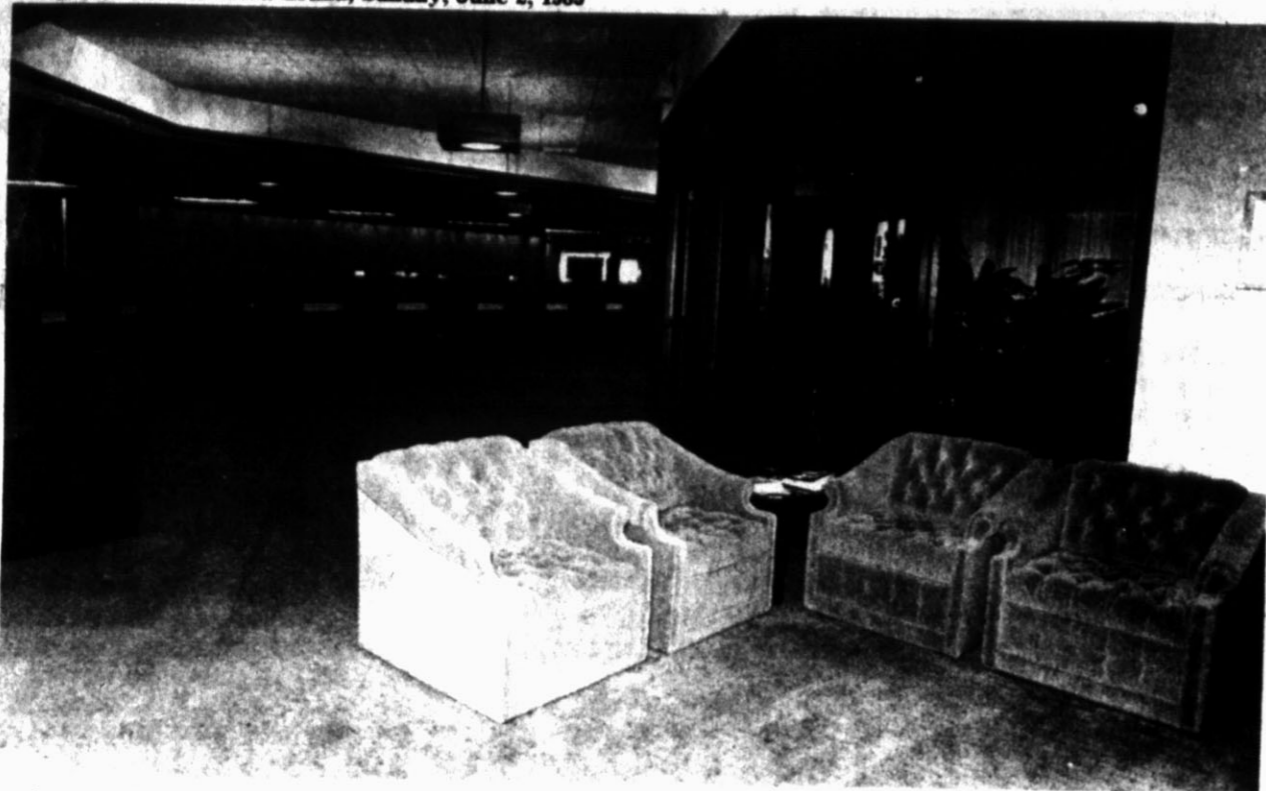

At 4 p.m. the glitter and glamour of rodeo fashion will be shown in a style show presented by two past Hall honorees, Rhonda Sedgewick and Fern Sawyer, and coordinated by Keith Ann Gearn.

The $25 tickets to the sixth annual Rhinestone Roundup Benefit Ball will entitle bearer to a barbecue supper, an open bar, and dance music by the Sundowners from Vega from 7:30 p.m. until midnight.

The annual Diamond Horseshoe Silent Auction which benefits the Hall will be conducted in two sections, at 8:30 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. At 10:30 p.m. a live auction will start.

Wrapping up the ball will be a drawing at midnight for two round-trip airline tickets to anywhere in the continental states, plus a $300 cash bonus.

The public is invited to all activities.

Bank Open House Slated

First National Bank of Hereford will hold open house to display its expanded and remodeled facilities from 2 to 5 p.m. today. The view here shows part of the "new look" in the lobby with teller windows in the background. The $1 million-plus project started last year and included expansion into the former Rutherford building, as well as complete remodeling on the exterior and interior.

August may be cooler than average

DALLAS (AP) — Despite oppressive heat earlier than usual, Texans dreading the thought of sweating out a scorching summer may be in for a pleasant surprise.

Forecasters say temperatures through August may dip below the average.

The National Weather Service in Fort Worth said there is a 55 to 60 percent chance that temperatures in the state will be a few degrees below normal temperatures.

"The weather can do just about anything, but it should be somewhat cooler than normal especially in the early part of the summer," said Michael Mach, a meteorologist with the weather service in Fort Worth.

Although short-range forecasts generally are determined by current weather conditions, the extended forecast is achieved through a mathematical process based on statistics and probability calculated by the weather service in Washington, Mach said.

A heat wave hit Texas last week, breaking record highs in some places including the Dallas-Fort Worth area. Temperatures Friday and Thursday topped 100 — the first time two consecutive days in May reportedly hit 100, Mach said.

Several Texas cities had temperatures top 100 degrees.

The heat seems to have come a little early, but Mach said it has hit 100 in the Dallas-Fort Worth area as early as March in previous years.

Although it was hotter than usual last week in Dallas, Earnie Taft, specialist with Dallas's office of emergency preparedness, said he did not know of any serious heat-related health problems at this time.

The two days of 100 and above weather pales in significance when compared to the 42 consecutive days in the summer of 1980 when Taft said temperatures topped 100.

Taft said the office helped set up several shelters throughout the city so people could get away from the heat that summer. He said 67 heat-related deaths were reported then.

If the 100 and above temperatures persist for several more days, there could be some health problems, Taft said, with the elderly, the poor, infants and obese people being the most vulnerable.

"We'll have to play it by ear," Taft said. "We don't anticipate any problems at this stage."

The heat can kill humans, but it also can be devastating to crops.

Bill Braden, communications specialist with the Texas

Agricultural Extension Service at Texas A&M University, said a prolonged period of hot weather coupled with no precipitation could hurt many crops throughout the state, especially younger crops along the coast northeast of Corpus Christi.

Spring rains have left most of the state "in pretty good shape," Braden said.

"We don't need to be overly concerned right now," Braden said. "But if this (hot weather) starts now and continues, we're going to be in trouble."

Few crops in Texas survive on irrigation systems alone. And despite modern farming technology, the farmer remains at the mercy of the weather.

"Farming is still one of the biggest gambles in the world," he said.

Bus, truck collision shocks emergency professionals

SNOW HILL, N.C. (AP) — The horror of a fiery collision that killed a truck driver and five children in a school bus and injured 20 others shocked even professionals accustomed to the blood and violence of catastrophe.

"All I remember when I first got there was a woman screaming, 'Get the children out of the bus!'" said Trooper C.W. Oakley, who investigated the collision Friday on U.S. 13 about 55 miles southeast of Raleigh.

Highway Patrol Sgt. Steve Taylor was one of the first to arrive at the scene. "I saw kids everywhere. There were kids mangled and screaming and crying," he said.

"I picked up five or six (children)," said Taylor, whose shirt was soaked with blood. "They didn't even know I picked them up."

Troopers said the dead tractor-trailer driver, 27-year-old Carson Lee Conger of Norfolk, Va., was slumped over the wheel when his truck veered into the opposite lane, slicing off the side of the bus that carried 25 Greene County schoolchildren.

Conger's truck jackknifed into a truck following the bus, both cabs bursting into flame, witnesses said. The other driver escaped, apparently unhurt, but Conger died in the fire. The bus was not involved in the fire.

"We don't know why he came across that center line — whether he was asleep, having a heart attack or whatever," said Capt. W.D. Teem of the highway patrol.

The fire in the trucks burned nearby while troopers, deputies and firefighters worked frantically to remove the children.

Greene County sheriff's officer Geraldine Charraway said she had spoken with stunned deputies and other emergency workers who returned from the crash site.

"It's been terrible," she said of their reactions. "It would just make you cry. It would just make you cry."

Elizondo was indicted May 16 by a Deaf Smith County grand jury after being arrested April 8.

In addition to the term of probation, Elizondo was ordered by District Judge David Wesley Gulley to pay two $250 fines and restitution in the amount of $4,592.65. It was his first criminal offense.

Lace, enhanced with satin flowers and petals, rimmed the waist which was tied with a satin ribbon and satin rose appliques. Matching lace also adorned the ruffle of the skirt which formed a semi-cathedral-length train and appliques of satin roses also trimmed the skirt's center.

The tiered finger-tip veil of bridal illusion was decorated with scattered seed pearls and attached to a wreath of silk wedding flowers and seed pearls.

She carried a cascading bouquet containing white silk roses, rose colored miniature carnations and assorted greenery as a good luck piece, she wore a pearl pendant given to her by the bridegroom.

Sunday: A day to rest, and shop

The Texas Blue Law has been under fire in the legislature recently to be repealed so that all items, except automobiles, can be sold on Sunday.

Currently the law provides the ban of 42 items on consecutive weekend days.

Now the measure to repeal the law has been passed by both the house and the senate and is on its way to the governor for signing.

If signed it will go into effect September 1, which is appropriately a Sunday.

It has been reported that Gov. Mark White would sign the bill if it protected employees from having to work seven days a week or on days set aside for religious worship. White feels that the present bill contains those protections.

The bill includes a provision that an employer would accommodate a worker's religious beliefs when making out weekend schedules, unless it could be proved that making such a provision could prove a hardship on the employer's business dealings.

The legislature argues that with today's two paycheck family Sunday was the only time many of them could go shopping together.

I don't think the legislature took into account that many of the families having two paychecks today work in department stores that will now have to work on Sundays.

The only people who are not going to be able to sell their wares on Sunday will be car dealers.

I also wondered if the legislature thought that car dealers were more religious than people who work in other stores and that is why they were forgotten in the new appeal.

Estimates from the State Comptroller's office say that state sales tax revenue over the next two years would increase $24 million.

For as long as I can remember Sundays have been a time to go to church and then enjoy time with your family whom you were not able to see because of work and school during the week.

By making it possible for people to work on Sunday are we forgetting family values, as our society has been blamed of so often lately?

But as the old saying goes, Money talks, and it looks as if the State government is listening this time around.

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnsongrass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek wants a point in law cleared up, he claims.

Dear editor:

There's a point in law that Congress or the Justice Department or somebody needs to clear up.

As is well known by now, many of the major defense contractors have been chiseling the government outrageously and some have been actually defrauding it. Over-charging ten times what something is worth may not be illegal but you wouldn't call it patriotic. One company has been clearly defrauding by turning in more hours of labor than occurred. I have sometimes claimed I've worked more hours than I have but I can't bill the government for it.

Having found out about the defense mess by investigating and reading the newspapers, the Justice Department has taken action. It has fined the multi-billion dollar companies a few million dollars which, if you're doing billions of dollars worth of government business, doesn't amount to much more than a $2 parking fine for you and me. Nobody is going to jail. No plans to even indicate the big shots responsible.

Now here's the point that needs clearing up: How big does a company have to be before it can defraud the government without anybody getting indicted?

You take a small defense contractor trying to get bigger. Shouldn't it know how big it has to get before it can defraud safely? Isn't this an equal opportunity country?

Not only have the big defense contractors been taking advantage of auditing incompetence in the Pentagon, they and many other big corporations haven't been paying any income taxes.

A congressman explained this. "Raising their taxes," he said, "would be bad for the economy."

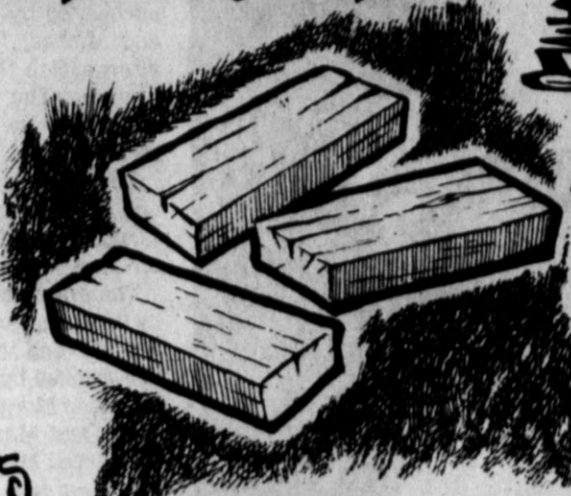

I understand that. The taxes I'm paying are certainly bad for my economy.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

CHARACTERS

This is my annual Memorial Day column. Some folks may think I am a week late but I am not. I just don't happen to go along with all of the moving of holidays around for economic reasons. Memorial Day is the last of May, just like God intended.

Every year in this column I try to remember some of the people I can never forget—the characters I have collected in my life. When life is boiled down to the things that really matter, all that is left are friends and family. Often memories are all we have left, but memories are powerful and can help fill a void. No one is dead until they are forgotten. I like to keep some folks alive. I especially like to keep the characters alive.

What makes a character a character? How do some folks stay straight in a crooked world? Or stay happy in a sad world? Or nonconforming in a conforming world? Or kind in a grasping world? I don't know the hows but I love the folks who make it. They are the most important people on earth.

There are some common attributes found in each of the characters I have collected. Somewhere in these common attributes there must be some clues to their becoming successful characters.

They all had a sense of humor. They were not always the best joke tellers, but they were the best laughers at the humorous side of life and they saw the humor everywhere. I guess they saw it because they were looking for it. The old poem that goes, "Two men looked through the self same bars, one saw mud, the other saw stars", seems to fit.

They all had the ability to laugh at themselves. The joke was always on them. While everyone else seemed to take themselves too seriously and worry too much about how they were perceived, these characters made sure the whole world got a laugh out of their flaws and foibles.

Someone said, "When a person becomes obsessed with their reputation they lose their character." These folks did not lose it.

They all marched to their own drummer. Some folks called them eccentric, some thought them strange, some huffed when they were present, and they did not care one whit. They were true to themselves.

I have my list of characters who will be remembered. I added a new one just this week. I will miss Cecil Hart but I will never forget the delight of a real character.

Farm fairy tale

By BAXTER BLACK

Klamath Falls (Ore.) Herald-News

Once upon a time King Ronnie, head mogul of the North American Agricultural Kingdom, called his knights to the round table. Each agricultural mini-kingdom sent a representative. They met at the Silver Spur in Ft. Pierre, S.D.

King Ronnie spoke, "Agriculture is having problems. We're still producing enough food to feed the world but, somehow, there's no profit in the production. I will send out a decree to the whole kingdom which will solve your problem. All you have to do is tell me what you want."

Prince Hubie, a wheat farmer from Colby, Kan., spoke first, "We'd like unlimited overseas exports, production parity, and all ag loans backed by the kingdom."

"Fine," said King Ronnie, "Does anybody object?" "Dang right! I object!" cried Prince Jim Ed Tom Bob, a Hereford, Texas cattle feeder, "Whatay' all wanna do; drive up the price of grain!"

"Uh," said Prince Gordie, a Saskatchewan wheat farmer. "Your last grain embargo really helped our grain exports, eh?"

"Well, I don't see how it would hurt," offered Prince Monty, gypo cow trader from Greeley, Colo., "Provided we open up U.S. and Canadian borders to free livestock trade."

"Impossible," said Prince John, USDA border inspection paper shuffler.

"Now hold on, boys," said Prince Ned, a banker from Des Moines. "If the kingdom backed all the loans, it might work."

"Right on," aged Prince Allis, the implement dealer from North Platte, Neb.

Prince Louie, rancher from Wells, Nev., cleared his throat, "Let me get this straight. If the kingdom backs all the loans, then it wouldn't make any difference if the price of grain went up. Because regardless of how high production costs got or land prices rose, we'd still be able to get our loan. Right?"

"Right!" chorused the representatives from the dairy, real estate, poultry, animal health, silo, seed and four-wheel drive pickup mini-kingdoms.

"So, then it's agreed," said King Ronnie, "The kingdom will back all agricultural loans and everyone will profit."

"Excuse me," interrupted a reporter from the Pelican News, "Who covers the loans if the borrowed can't repay?"

"The peasants of the kingdom of course," answered King Ronnie.

"Wait a minute!" they all cried, "That's us!"

Well, boys and girls, the plan was voted down by the Ag Round Table. But it survived and was later adopted by the kingdom' failing postal service.

U.S. Chamber Voice of Business

Profiles in courage on the budget

By Richard L. Lesh, President

WASHINGTON - Agatha Christie, Robert Ludlum and Mickey Spillane rolled into one couldn't have scripted it better.

Faced with defections in their own party, the embattled Senate Majority Leader and his Budget Committee Chairman scratch for votes on the budget package which promises continued prosperity. Deals are cut, and in the words of one Senator, "arms are broken." The President agrees to go the extra mile. An opposition Senator is suddenly hospitalized.

As the package comes to a vote in the wee hours of the morning, a lone member of the opposition bravely breaks ranks to vote in favor. Then, a key supporter is rushed back from the hospital. Still in his robe and with an intravenous needle in his arm, he is wheeled into the chamber and casts the tie vote. The Vice President, flown in at the last minute, breaks the tie and the package passes. Truth is stranger than fiction, indeed.

The main hero in this cross between suspense novel and Profiles in Courage is Majority Leader Robert Dole (R-Ks). Dole has the toughest job in Washington: he must not only face down a determined opposition but also keep in line a crew of Republicans so independent-minded they make the Little Rascals look like the Vienna Choirboys. But Senator Dole's budget feat proves again he is "King of the Hill."

Working side-by-side with Dole was Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici (R-NM), whose finely crafted package ultimately served as the basis for the final agreement.

The lone, courageous opposition vote was cast by Senator Ed Zorinsky, (D-NE). And in returning to the floor just a day after an appendectomy to vote for the controversial package, Senator Pete Wilson (R-CA) brought new meaning to the word "guts."

The men all deserve the thanks of Americans for their role in producing the budget compromise. For it is increasingly obvious that economic recovery cannot continue with megadeficits bloating interest rates and out balance of trade deficits.

The focus on their roles, however, should take nothing away from Ronald Reagan. Post-vote analysis concentrated on his concessions, but more than anyone else, the President determined the shape of this package. His insistence on spending cuts led to the elimination or reduction of programs with powerful sponsors but questionable justification—and his veto threat barred new tax hikes from the package.

Already, the President's long shadow has been cast on the main character in the next chapter of the budget saga: House Budget Committee Chairman William Gray (D-PA). Gray announced early that his package would not feature tax increases; he knows from long experience that you don't bluff when the guy at the other end of the table is holding four aces (not to mention 49 states).

But the key to a happy ending in this drama is the American people. Unless they can drown out vocal minorities and convince wavering Congressmen that prosperity for all is more important than programs for the few, the courage displayed in the Senate might be lost in a stampede of special interests in the House.

Can the President, the Congressional leadership and the American people keep this budget epic from degenerating into a disaster story, replete with continued deficits, new tax hikes and renewed recession? Don't touch that dial.

Paul Harvey

'As a man thinketh so is he . . .'

What are the idle thoughts that fill your head? When you are alone on your pillow or in your car or even in a crowd—what are the thoughts which skip in and out and about your brain?

Larry Wells will admit what his daydreams were about—about partying with women, about coveting things that belonged to other people, about beating up somebody he didn't like.

Larry—of Idaho Falls, Ida.—was poisoning himself with such thoughts until he read a book called "As A Man Thinketh."

The book was based on the verse in Proverbs: "As a man thinketh so is he."

And to Larry what the book—a gift from his parents—was trying to say was that he could think himself to be something less than he was, or something more.

He chose then and thereafter to think positively and he prospered.

and he vowed next to do what he could to help his area's least fortunate to make something worthwhile of themselves.

He elected to encourage, assist and get jobs for ex-convicts. And he has given 20 years that effort.

Wait'll you hear the results!

Eight of 10 men who leave prison are soon back in again.

Larry was determined to reverse that ratio.

He initiated a call-in talk program on local radio—counseling ex-cons and matching them with job opportunities in the area.

And he presented free to each a copy of that book: "As A Man Thinketh."

Larry, an enthusiastic outdoorsman, organized an outdoor program for ex-cons, both juvenile and adult. They went on camping trips. He taught survival courses in six states thereabouts. Nature can be a teacher and a helper.

And again, for each participant in his survival course, that book was required reading.

The numbers are in on a five-year study of participants in Larry's "great outdoors" programs. Success is irrefutable. Where nationally only two of 10 ex-cons go straight, eight of 10 of Larry's men have not been in trouble again.

Larry has become a parole officer and drug counselor. Larry says cons respond to handouts only briefly but tend to respond to an outstretched hand permanently.

He knows. He is one.

Larry Wells was in state and federal penitentiaries for six of his young years—for driving away in other people's cars—until in prison, his parents sent him that book, and he read it, and he came out of prison at 20 to prove to himself that "As a man thinketh so is he..." And he proved it to himself, and ever since to ever more.

Red Cross Update

Water Safety classes will begin Monday, June 10, at the City Pool. Registration for the classes will be held Saturday, June 8, 9-11 a.m. at the City Pool.

Mothers should bring any previous swimming records the children might have. No preregistration will be taken. Cost of the classes is $3.50 for the two week session. The cost cover the pool fee and equipment cost.

The instructors are volunteers and teach swimming and water safety in order that the number of persons drowning can be reduced. Drownings can occur any place where there is water.

National Safety Council statistics show that only 40 percent of the yearly drownings occur to people who are swimming or playing in the water. The remainder, or 60 percent, occur in the classification of nonswimming fatalities due to accidental falls into the water, from docks, decks of pools, bridges or accidents in the home.

The need for everyone to be able to swim well enough to survive is evident. Our chapter will be offering classes for children and adults. Call the Red Cross office for further information.

A baby sitter is needed to sit with the children of the instructors and aide teaching the classes. If you can volunteer 2 or 3 hours each morning for two weeks to sit with several children, call the office.

An aides class will be held Monday, at the City Pool. Call the office if you can help with classes.

Our chapter is beginning a car seat loan program call Kids in Safety Seats (K.I.S.S.) Thanks to the Toujours Amis Study Club we will soon have car seats to use for a short term rental program. Programs are still available on seat belt safety.

Special thanks to Holly Sugar Company for the donation of sugar for African Relief. Thanks to the volunteers for turning out to see the sugar off and help with the presentation.

Our chapter is blessed with many good volunteers and I want to thank each one of them for their help and support this past month. Without volunteers, our chapter and the American Red Cross would not be able to function. Thanks Volunteers!

Gypsy party, luncheon held recently

L'Allegra Study Club members met recently at the Hereford Country Club for a gypsy party and buffet luncheon.

Hostesses, Ella Marie Veigel, Mary Kay McQuigg, Judy Wall, Glenda Keenan and Cathy Guseman, dressed as gypsies and set the table with astrological decorations. Guest Janice Coulter read members' palms.

President Kitty Gault called the meeting to order and secretary Kay Lynn Caviness called roll and read the minutes of the previous meeting.

During the business session, it was decided to purchase a portable bleacher for the YMCA and the finance committee recommended to donate $4,000 to the Lifeline project from proceeds received from the recent Antique Show and Plant Sale.

Gault installed new officers following the business meeting. She read each officers' horoscope and told how best their characteristics would apply to the various officers.

Barbara Kerr will serve as president; McQuigg, vice-president; Susan Perrin, recording secretary; Betty Martin, corresponding secretary; Guseman, treasurer; Jan Weishaar, assistant treasurer; and Carmen Flood, historian. Gault will serve as parliamentarian.

HOME DECOR

The following suggestions are general in nature but can perhaps be of some assistance in making decisions concerning individual window treatments. Valences should not be used in rooms with extremely low ceilings. A valence with curved lines makes a window appear wider, while one with square lines makes it seem narrower. For a living room window composed of two framed panes of glass (double-hung), straight, hanging curtains are preferable to those that are looped-back. Looping back the over-draperies tends to soften a room's severity. A pair of looped-back curtains can make a window seem more narrow than one with a single curtain tied back to give a diagonal line.

Everything you'll need, from advice to the right nail to create beautiful window treatments are waiting for you at FINISHING TOUCHES. DEAR DR. GOTT — My 80-year-old grandmother has begun to display some loss of memory (senile tendencies). I have encouraged family members to keep her in touch with reality. Are we helping or hurting her?

DEAR READER — You are helping her. As the elderly age, they exhibit mental changes that are due to progressive loss of blood circulation to the brain's higher centers. These centers control several functions, including recent memory, emotional stability, judgment and cognitive reasoning.

Loss of memory can be a particularly disturbing symptom because it occurs relatively early and the patient is often aware of the deficiency. Most older people I know are grateful when younger associates and family members gently "refresh" their memories.

Senility is a more advanced form of higher-center malfunction. The confusion that senile patients suffer is often terrifying. For example, imagine yourself being unable to place familiar faces, recollect where you were going and how to get there or remember the day of the week. And consider: The situation isn't going to get better tomorrow as your hangover improves.

Ever wonder who you'd call if you had a car accident?

NEW RULES FOR BUSINESS CARS

The Tax Reform Act of 1984 has been called the most comprehensive and complex revision ever made of the tax laws. In any case, it bears looking into. For instance, one of its provisions cracks down on deductions for "luxury cars used for business purposes." In the past, the entire purchase price of a car used 100 percent for business could be written off in three years. The new tax law puts a cap on the investment tax credit is limited to $1,000 or the amount that a $16,000 cost would deliver. Buyers of more expensive cars get no extra credit. Depreciation deductions are also capped at $16,000 for the first three years.

SUMMER HOURS

Summer hours go into effect at the Deaf Smith County Library beginning Monday. During the months of June, July and August the library will open at 10 a.m. rather than 9 a.m. Closing times will remain the same.

"AWESOME ADVENTURES"
The arrival of summer signals the beginning of the Summer Reading Club at the Library. The theme for the reading club this year is "AWESOME ADVENTURES". Children who participate in the Summer Reading Club will encounter thrilling adventures and will be guaranteed lots of good reading at the library this summer.

The program is designed for school-age children, but pre-school children are welcome to participate as well. Pre-registration for "Awesome Adventures" will begin on Monday and the reading program will begin on Monday, June 10, at 10 a.m.

NEW BOOKS

Mystery and adventure are featured in the new books available this week at the Deaf Smith County Library. M.M. Kaye, author of "Far Pavilions" and "Trade Wind", has gone on to receive acclaim for her murder mysteries. Her latest mystery is "Death In Berlin."

Young Miranda Brand is visiting Germany for what is supposed to be a month's holiday. But from the moment that Brigadier Brindley relates the story about a fortune in lost diamonds the holiday atmosphere becomes subtly transformed into something more sinister. When murder strikes on the night train to Berlin, Miranda finds herself unwillingly involved in a complex chain of events that will soon throw her life into deadly peril.

"Death In Berlin" is set against a background of war-scarred Berlin in the early 1950s. M.M. Kaye was born in India. She lives with her husband outside London.

"Confessional" by Jack Higgins is also available this week at the library. If you were the head of the KGB and wanted to plant someone in really deep cover in the West, what kind of occupation would you train for? In what occupation would that never expect to find a man who, with a handgun, could split an apple or a head—across a large room? Clearly a man of talent, an assassin of genius. A man too experienced, too clever, to fail. A man who has been living inside the perfect cover—the cassock of a benevolent and kindly Catholic priest.

British intelligence is faced with an acute problem. The pope will be in England in less than one week and they cannot find the man they know will kill him. Only two people can help...the beautiful Tanya Voroninova, a concert pianist and daughter of a KGB general and Liam Devlin of "The Eagle Has Landed."

In "Confessional" Jack Higgin's most unusual assassin is set for the biggest kill of his life. Even the pope knows that and is waiting for him with open arms. Other new books available this week are "By Passing Bypass" by Elmer Cranton, "Legend: the life and death of Marilyn Monroe" by Fred Guiles, "Staying OK" by Amy Bjork Harris and Thomas A. Harris, M.D. and "My Mother's Keeper" by B.D. Hyman.

LIBRARY EVENTS:

10 a.m. - Pre-school public story hour Thursday morning.

June 3rd - June 8th - Pre-registration for Summer Reading Club.

Cloudy syrup

DEAR POLLY — DEAR POLLY
— We made maple syrup by boiling down sap from our own maple trees. The syrup is cloudy. How can it be made clear? — SANDRA

DEAR SANDRA — The syrup should be filtered through Orlon felt or wool felt. You may also use a piece of wool flannel, but this won't get the syrup as clear as the felt. Ready-made filter bags of the correct material are generally available wherever you get your tapping supplies, such as the spiles (sap spouts), collecting bags, etc.

The cloudiness is not harmful, but is caused by something called "sugar sand." The syrup must be hot to make it flow through the felt. Otherwise, it will not drip through the fabric.

I've also used coffee filters, which remove some impurities, but do not completely clarify the syrup. — POLLY make party invitations for my child and even make wrapping paper for a gift when I need some in a hurry. A set of colored ink pens is also nice. — OLIVE

In NBA championship series

Lakers now have homecourt advantage

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The Memorial Day Massacre is history. And so is the Boston Celtics' homecourt advantage in the National Basketball Association's Championship Series.

The Celtics overwhelmed the Los Angeles Lakers 148-114 last Monday in the opening game of the best-of-seven series, but the Lakers bounced back to win a 109-102 decision and now have the opportunity to become champions without returning to Boston.

"When you're on the road, you try for two wins," Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley said after the Lakers, sparked by veteran Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and reserve Michael Cooper, won Thursday night. "If you can't get two, you try for a split, which is a more realistic goal."

Considering what happened on Memorial Day, and considering that the Celtics had won 21 of their most recent 22 playoff games at the Boston Garden before Thursday night, the Lakers' triumph was most impressive.

Now, the teams play three times at the Forum — Sunday afternoon and Wednesday and Friday nights — a location where the Lakers were 36-5 during the regular season and are 8-1 so far in the playoffs. They have won 24 of their last 25 games at home.

The Lakers are in a position to win the title at home because of a change in format for the finals this year which has the Celtics scheduled to play Games 1, 2, 6 and 7 at home with the Lakers hosting the third, fourth and fifth games.

Abdul-Jabbar expressed the opinion that the action will probably return to Boston.

"The series is still very young," he said. "Don't be surprised if it goes seven games. I won't be."

Boston standout Larry Bird expressed a similar opinion.

"We usually play better when we have our backs to the wall," said Bird, who had 30 points and 12 rebounds in the second game. "We feel we can still win the championship. It's going to be tough. We've got to come at them a little harder."

Baseball All-Star Game boycott considered

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball's 1985 All-Star Game was in jeopardy as union officials held open the possibility of a boycott aimed at returning labor negotiations to what they call a less "absurd" path.

Former union head and now consultant, Marvin Miller, emerged Friday from the latest round of talks with management, contending that owners were trying to "gut the whole free agency market..."

Miller was standing in for acting executive director Don Fehr, who was in St. Louis on a tour of major league cities, where he was sounding out players on various alternatives.

Fehr said an All-Star boycott was still under consideration. "We've discussed all the options," he said by telephone. "That's one of them. We haven't foreclosed any of the options."

On May 23 in Chicago, the union's executive board voted to authorize a strike to be called, but no deadline was set.

That vote came three days after a negotiating session at which Lee MacPhail's Player Relations Committee offered an eight-point plan that included a salary cap on all major league teams. On Friday, the PRC gave the union more details on the plan.

"As they filled in the details, the proposal, which was absurd to start with, has become even more absurd," Miller said.

The plan would set team salary limits based on 1985 payroll figures. Teams would be allowed to exceed the limit in negotiating with players already under contract, but they would have to stay under the limit in signing free agents.

Bob Fishel, executive vice president of the American League, said the union had asked for the full plan in writing, and that it would be provided within a week to 10 days.

At 1986 soccer World Cup

Measures to be taken to prevent fan violence

By ELOY O. AGUILAR Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Organizing Committee of the 1986 soccer World Cup started Friday the 365-day countdown to the start of the event "concerned" about the violence that marred the European championship this week.

But officials said they are confident Mexican fans will make all visitors feel welcome.

The inaugural game of the 1986 World Cup in which the top 24 teams will vie for soccer supremacy will be played at giant Aztec Stadium here next May 31. The tournament will last a month.

At a breakfast to introduce some of the representatives of the Italian and English national teams, here for a series of friendly matches with Mexico and West Germany during the next two weeks, Organizing Committee President Guillermo Canedo said: "All of us who love football are deeply concerned about the incidents provoked by criminal vandals recently that led to the one this week in Brussels."

He was referring to the incident in Heysel Stadium when British fans attacked Italian fans before the European championship game between Juventus of Italy and Liverpool of England. Thirty-eight persons died, including 28 Italians, and 454 were injured.

As a result, the Belgian government banned all British teams from playing in Belgium "until further notice."

At the same time the British Soccer Association announced it was withdrawing from all European competition next season to "put its house in order."

"We have to do something about the scum that we are stuck with at football matches," said Ted Croker, secretary of the Association.

Speaking to Mexican and foreign reporters, Canedo said: "We know that those groups that try to call themselves soccer fans are nothing but mentally sick vandals trying to release their emotions in the stadiums. They are not soccer fans. Their attitude and conduct have nothing to do with love for our sport, a sport practiced and followed by millions throughout the world.

"Violence in Brussels started before the game. It was not the game itself nor the score that caused this tragedy, but people with the deliberate intent to provoke disorder."

Canedo added that professional soccer will take measures to prevent such incidents in the future and "we will back up those measures fully to put a stop to those criminals who wish to kill our sport."

Eight people were killed and at least 50 injured in a crush in a tunnel at 68 Olympic Stadium here during a championship game Sunday of the Mexican Soccer League. The stadium is one of 12 in nine Mexican cities to be used for the 1986 World Cup tournament, but officials here have said a repeat of the Sunday tragedy can be prevented.

The 1986 World Cup will be the second hosted by Mexico in 16 years. The Mexican team was eliminated in the quarterfinals in the 1970 event, but fans embraced the Brazilians who went on to win the championship as their heroes.

No problems of violence took place in 1970, when games were played in four cities.

Mexico as the host has an automatic slot in 1986 as does Italy, the defending champion from the 1982 World Cup held in Spain. The only other teams definitely in the 1986 field so far are Uruguay and Hungary.

Mexico and Italy play Sunday in Aztec Stadium to start the two-week tournament. Other games scheduled are Italy against England next Thursday, Mexico against England on June 9, West Germany against England on June 12 and West Germany against Mexico on June 15.

Mexican officials said they did not expect any problems during Sunday's game.

English Coach Bobby Robson said Thursday at a news conference here that English teams should be feared "only on the field" and that the violence in Brussels was caused by "hooligans."

English soccer team works for good relations

By ELOY O. AGUILAR Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The English national soccer team Friday night paid a courtesy call to their Italian counterparts to apologize for the spectator riot at the Europe Cup match that left 38 people dead.

"They expressed their deep regret for the tragic and shameful incident at Brussels," said Octavio Fernandez, a spokesman for the organizing committee of the 1986 World Cup.

On Wednesday, rioting broke out before the start of the championship game between Liverpool of England and Juventus of Italy when British fans attacked Italians in the stadium. Aside from those killed, another 454 people were injured. The game went on and Italy won 1-0.

As a result, the Belgium banned British soccer teams from playing in that country "until further notice." The ban applied to all English, Scottish and Welsh team, both professional and amateur.

Fernandez said both teams expressed their contempt for those responsible for the violence. Referring to the fans in Belgium, he said, "Those people cannot be considered football fans and friendly relations between the two teams here must not be affected by the incidents."

Members of the English, Italian and Mexican teams are scheduled to attend a Mass at the Mexican team's training center in memory of those killed in Belgium.

Carlo de Guadio of the Italian Soccer Federation and Coach Enzo Barzot thanked the English team for its gesture and said they hoped the upcoming match here would renew friendly relations between the two teams.

England and Italy are scheduled to play Sunday in Aztec Stadium here in a series of friendly matches that also will include Mexico and West Germany during the next two weeks.

The English team was led by Dick Wrag of the English Soccer Federation and Coach Bobby Robson. Earlier in the day, Robson said at a news conference that English teams should be feared "only on the field" and that the riot in Brussels was caused by "hooligans."

Mexico is the site of the 1986 World Cup soccer tournament in which the top 24 teams will vie for soccer supremacy.

Weight room clinic set for June 10-14

A weight room clinic for members of the Hereford and Vicinity YMCA will be held June 10-14 with sessions at 10 a.m. and 7:30 p.m.

The class will cover the hydro-fitness equipment, universal, and free weights. An instructor will be available to devise individual fitness programs.

YMCA youth soccer registration continues

Young soccer players in the first, second, third, fourth, fifth and sixth grades may sign up for the soccer leagues at the Hereford and Vicinity YMCA.

A registration deadline of June 12 has been set for the leagues.

Practice will start in the leagues as early as June 20, and league play is scheduled to begin the week of June 29.

The YMCA's goals for the soccer program are to have a first and second grade league, a third and fourth grade league, and a fifth and sixth grade league. Youth will be in leagues according to what grade they will be in during the 1985-86 school year.

If there are enough youth registered for the leagues, separate leagues for boys and girls will be formed.

After the registration deadline of June 12, there will be a registration period in which youth may sign up to fill vacancies on teams.

All players must be officially registered and pay registration fees before they will be assigned to a team.

Registration fees are $6 for YMCA members and $12 for non-members of the YMCA. Fees include team shirts, awards, and use of equipment.

Goals of the soccer program, as noted by YMCA officers, are to provide fun for children and give them opportunities to learn skills in soccer. Those skills include agility, shooting, strategy, dribbling, throw ins, heading, trapping, passing, positions, and coordination.

Each child will play half of a game during league play.

In addition to youth signing up for the leagues, the YMCA needs parents of youth in the leagues, friends or others to volunteer to coach the teams.

Anyone interested in coaching a soccer team is asked to call the program director at the YMCA at 364-6990.

Application forms for youth are available at the YMCA. For more information on the soccer program, call the YMCA.

THERE IS A DIFFERENCE IN SORGHUM SEED and producers should be very aware of that difference says a University of Nebraska seed specialist. In a test conducted by Nebraska scientists, differences were revealed in the number of off-type plants among 107 seedlots, representing 51 different hybrids from 20 seed companies. The seedlots reportedly produced an average of 0.7 tall, open-headed forage-type plants per 10,000 population. That would mean approximately three plants per acre with a field population of 40,000. The Nebraska team reported that this is, in all probability, an improvement over the frequency in hybrid seed planted 10 years ago. However, they said, this is the off-type with the greatest potential for the development of serious weed infestation.

Ann Landers

Lighting a candle

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This may be the most unusual letter you have ever received. I am attaching my name, address and phone number in case you want to verify it but am trusting that you will not reveal my identity.

The letter from the woman from Altoona who "slept with every Tom, Dick and Harry" prompted me to write. She went to bed with strangers she met in bars. So did I, after we both got drunk. I could never have done such a thing sober. And, like "Altoona," I always hated myself in the morning.

I saw dozens of articles about herpes and AIDS but they didn't bother me. I had been doing that number for so long I was sure my chances for getting a disease were about one in a million.

Well, I was wrong. I got herpes on one of those one-night stands. When my gynecologist told me what I had, I was furious. I was dying to call up that one-night stand and tell him what a rotten, no-good creep he was for not warning me, but I didn't have his phone number. Looking back, I can see why he didn't warn me. I meant nothing to him. A woman who would go for a tumble between the sheets with a man whose last name she didn't even know obviously didn't place much value on herself. So why should he?

When I was going through that first attack of herpes I felt like killing myself. It was absolutely the worst week of my life. But as I look back, I must admit it was the best thing that ever happened to me. I stopped going to bars. I also stopped drinking. I took a good, hard look at myself and decided to change my way of life.

Six months later I met a great guy at the neighborhood deli, of all places. He has accepted me despite my herpes. The attacks are becoming less frequent and less severe. We have a wonderful relationship. I feel like the luckiest woman in the world.

Too bad it took herpes to straighten me out but I am ever so grateful for this second chance at a good life. Just call me --FOUR-LEAF CLOVER IN FLA.

DEAR FOUR-LEAF: Thanks for an extraordinary letter. Any person who can turn herpes into a triumph has my admiration. Instead of cursing the darkness, you lit a candle. Congratulations.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm still burned up at all those people who wrote to tell you how dumb you were to fall for the letter about the little girl who was lost in the supermarket. (An employee found her in the bathroom with a man who had cut her hair, given her a sedative and was about to carry her out under the disguise.)

The letter turned out to be a hoax. So who cares? I'll bet a lot of people learned something from it. That's what your column is all about, isn't it?

Several months ago I lost track of my wife in a large shopping mall. The only system they had for finding lost persons was an old, broken-down security guard who asked, "Are you sure you brought her in with you?"

Just keep doing a great job and tell those nit-pickers to get lost.—A FAN FROM LANCASTER, PA.

DEAR LAN: Thanks for a sweet letter but I really don't mind being criticized. When I'm wrong I want to be told, and apparently there are plenty folks out there who are happy to do it!

Pioneering in the 80s: Cooking the one-minute cereal because you're out of the pour-and-mix stuff.

Women's Division C of C challenges residents to spruce up Hereford

Sprucing Up

Mowing the lawn may be a small job in comparison with a major remodeling project, but it sure helps the look of a place. Tommy Gallagher combines working and sunbathing.

The week of June 2-8 has been designated as the annual Clean Up, Fix Up, Paint Up Week in Hereford by the Women's Division of Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce.

The Women's Division "challenges all residents of Hereford to join the citywide effort to help beautify our community," said Avis Blakey, chairperson of the beautification committee.

Other members of the committee include Adeline Cunningham, Pat Newton, Alice Eades, Janet McCathern, and Pat Walsh. The committee is planting petunias in the Downtown Variety Park area this week.

Team effort needed

The overall goal of the annual Women Division's project is to clean up specific areas of town and to enhance the many assets already on display in the community. A number of civic groups got involved in the campaign last year and adopted isolated triangles of land to receive special attention.

Citizens are urged to clean off vacant lots, removing weeds and trash, and to take this time to "spruce up" homes where improvements have been on the drawing board.

In addition to the emphasis on beautification this week, the C of C board is also initiating a project called "Operation Clean Town."

Mike Carr, executive vice president, said the board viewed this project as a long-term campaign. "The purpose is to start now with an effective plan to clean, on a regular basis, the highway and railroad right-of-ways, vacant lots, unsightly buildings, business locations and alleys."

Carr said the chamber has already hired and is working crews along highways 60 and 385 and along Park Avenue. "In order for us to continue this clean-up work, we invite interested citizens to contribute to the project," said Carr. Contributions can be made at the chamber office, or mailed to Box 192.

Carr urged all citizens to participate in the annual "Clean-up Week" and to get involved in the longtime "Operation Clean Town" movement.

Repairs, new decor brighten any home

Winter is finally over. The spring sky is bright and clear, the air warm, and the "extra" hours of daylight are an especially welcome change from the winter darkness. This season of new beginnings is invigorating and refreshing, and there are many lovely weeks yet to come.

During the winter months, you and your family spent a great deal of time indoors. Now you're faced with an accumulation of books and magazines which kept you occupied during cozy evenings at home. Countless pairs of dripping boots and shoes have trekked through the house, and harsh winter weather has battered the exterior of your home.

For many people, the traditional spring cleaning and home improvement rituals are the solution to these situations.

At this time of the year, there are closets to reorganize, a layer (or two) of winter grime to remove from windows, and perhaps there are several minor repair jobs to be undertaken by the enterprising do-it-yourselfer.

Plan ahead

By planning in advance, organizing your time efficiently, and making adequate preparations for each job, you will find that all these projects can be accomplished satisfactorily without severely disrupting your regular schedule.

Don't try to do every chore in one grand sweep. First, decide on a specific time span during which a spring overhaul of your living quarters will be the priority, and then decide the same for work on the exterior of your home.

A single weekend might be sufficient, or maybe a two-week period of less concentrated work would be preferable, depending on your temperament and the condition of your home.

Consider whether you would rather spend two days concentrating exclusively on cleaning, reorganizing and repairing, or if you would prefer to space these jobs over a longer period, devoting shorter intervals to these projects.

You may want to arrange your schedule so that you do related jobs during a single period of time, but this isn't necessary. If you dread reorganizing the closets more than any other job, you may want to do one each day, or maybe you'll find it easier to complete this project before starting another.

Within the framework you've chosen, designate the jobs you plan to do at specific times, balancing the more complicated, time-consuming jobs with simpler, less involved tasks that can be completed more quickly.

Be realistic about the length of time each project will take, and be sure to have everything available that you will need.

It is much less frustrating to spend the necessary time in preparation than to be forced to interrupt a project because you need to go to the hardware store or search the basement for a nail of the correct size.

Although rain may disrupt your schedule for outdoor work, planning for this possibility will help you be prepared to make the most of the situation.

Perhaps this would be the ideal time to give the kitchen a new coat of paint, or maybe there are some indoor repairs that you could tackle instead.

Family involvement

Involving every member of the family in some part of the spring cleaning and home improvement projects will make these jobs seem less overwhelming

THINKING OF REMODELING? WE'VE GOT A DEAL FOR YOU!

Just a reminder, if your old furnace is about to give up, you might want to consider a new, high-efficiency heat pump. If your air conditioner needs replacement, but your gas furnace is still in good working order, an add-on heat pump may be the answer. The most efficient system is the geothermal heat pump. It may be used in the conversion of an existing system or a new installation.

Ask about our special incentives for new or conversion to electric space heating.

Doing His Part

Jim Victor is just one of many residents making repairs on their homes during Clean-Up, Fix-Up Week scheduled June 2-8. He is shown cutting boards for his house located at 310 W. Sixth St.

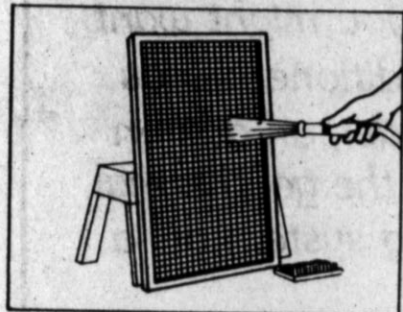

Fig. 1. Screens are cleaned by hosing, washing with water or the brush attachment of a vacuum cleaner.

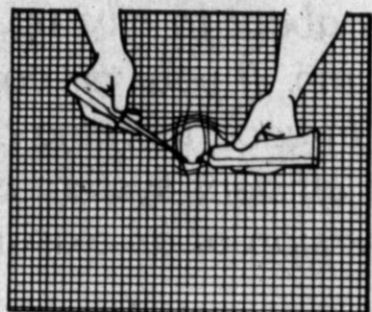

Fig. 2. To repair small holes and tears, realign the wire strands and dab the area with clear fingernail polish or household cement.

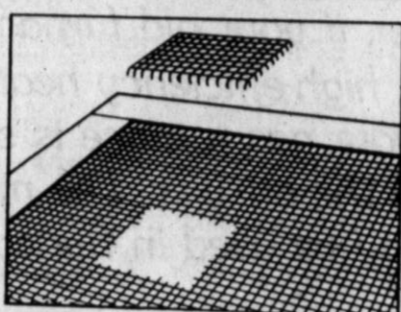

Fig. 3. Larger holes and tears are repaired by trimming edges of damaged area and covering with a screen patch. Bent wires are fit through the screen and flattened back.

For mending, replacing, installing

Simple fix-it tips listed

Repairing, replacing and installing screen doors and windows is a springtime chore that can drive some homeowners buggier than the bugs they're trying to keep outside. And it needn't be. There are simple approaches to most household tasks, and screening is no exception.

For those who abhor the semi-annual put-'em-up, take-'em-down routine, the ultimate solution is to leave 'em be. Unless the screened space is later replaced with insert-type storm glass panels, that's perfectly permissible with many of the aluminum storm door-window screen systems available today.

These combination units feature the dimensional stability of extruded aluminum frames and the non-corrosive, low maintenance advantages of aluminum screen cloth. And they're available in many sizes and combinations.

Double-track glass and screen combinations are designed for the glass panel to be opened for screen-only use, with latches for easy lift-out of the screen panel to clean the screen and window exterior.

Triple-track units include screen and standard pane glass backed by a removable double-pane insulating glass panel, all within an integral system.

Use non-corrosive aluminum

With many of these, the screens can be taken down or left in place on a year-round basis. Why leave them up? Well, why not?

The take-'em-down philosophy dates back to the type of wire mesh screening that rusted from exposure to rain and snow. Aluminum screen cloth is naturally non-corrosive and affords homeowners the opportunity to keep screens in place year-round.

Besides, window screens are more frequently damaged during installation, removal and storing. Also, screens provide at least some protection for the glass, which is much more costly to replace than screening.

Generally, the only maintenance required with year-round screening is to clean out the drainage holes at the aluminum track bottoms, hose down (Fig. 1) or clean the aluminum screen cloth with water or brush attachment of a vacuum cleaner, and lightly oil the latches and frame sides.

Another type aluminum-framed insulating door-screen system comes with glass and screen insert panels. The panels are interchangeable, depending on the season, and eliminate the drudgery of replacing entire framed units.

So, if you are still using old-fashioned wood-framed screen doors and windows, now is the time to consider converting to all-aluminum, ideally in storm sash-screen combinations for long-term energy savings.

Of course, all screens are susceptible to damage, especially full-length doors and patio sliding door screening. But, again, there are quick-and-easy fix-it solutions to save both time and money.

Repairing rips and tears

To repair small holes and tears, use an awl, nail, ice pick or pencil point to realign the strands (Fig. 2). Then dab the repaired area with several coatings of clear fingernail polish, model airplane glue or household glue.

Larger rips, tears and holes are mended with screen patches available from most hardware stores. Always use the same screen material — aluminum screen cloth over aluminum screen cloth, for example — as that being repaired.

First, trim the edges of the damaged area. Then cut a piece of screen patch of the same shape but slightly larger. Strip off several cross wires from each end and bend the wires at right angles (Fig. 3).

Place the patch so the bent wires go through the screen being repaired. Lastly, bend the protruding wires flat and dab the repaired edges with clear fingernail polish or glue.

If a screen is badly damaged or has become unsightly because of repeated patching, it'll need replacing. The simplest solution is to take the screen, frame and all, to any hardware store offering screen replacement services.

If you take pride in your fix-it abilities, you can save on installation costs by replacing the screen yourself. Simply lay the frame on a flat, firm surface and proceed as follows:

1. Screening is held in place in metal framing with splines. With a screwdriver, pry up the spline at one corner, carefully pull it out of the groove (Fig. 4) and remove the screen.

2. Center the replacement screen in the frame with 1/2-inch edges extending beyond the inside frame edges. Press the spline back into place with a blunt-edge tool.

3. With the top and one side in place, pull the screen taut, complete the splining, and trim off any excess protruding beyond the spline.

A final piece of advice concerns what to do with badly warped wood frames, rusty and bent metal frames, and rusty, tattered screening. Discard them and convert to aluminum screen cloth in lightweight, corrosion-free aluminum frames.

Virtually all home improvement contractors will tell you it's the only way to go for good appearance, easy installation and low maintenance.

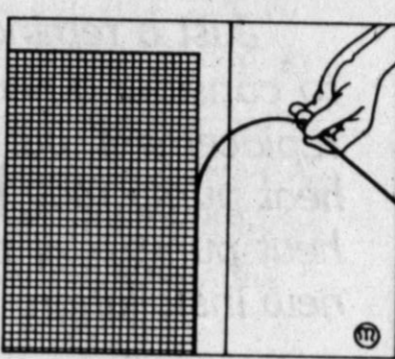

Fig. 4. To replace screening in aluminum frames, first remove the splines.

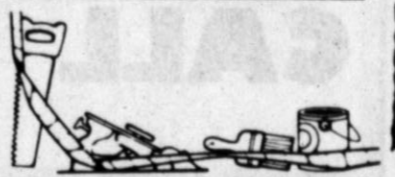

Though sliding or folding wood louver doors are ideal for closets in narrow hallways, that isn't their only use. The National Woodwork Manufacturers Association points out that they are an excellent way to add interest and dimension to a room.

Whatever the phobia is for fear of inadequate coverage, insurers have come up with a treatment. Now, homeowners can get protection against plummeting satellites or space labs.

Anyone who's covered can collect up to $1 million for bodily injury if hit by a piece of space debris. Premiums don't cost much, because your chance of collecting are about one in a billion.

Skylights are a popular way to give rooms depth and dimension. They break up the monotony of large ceiling areas and open rooms to views of the sky, says APC Corp. of Hawthorne, N.J., a leading skylight manufacturer.

They also flood rooms with natural daylight, thus reducing the need for artificial light during the daylight hours.

Cleaning up prevents burning up

Fire Marshal Jay Spain does not approve of flammable junk

A disgusted Spain peers at a likely fire spot

Boxes, oil and litter are fire hazards in alleys

By CINDY SMITH
Staff Writer

A good clean-up can prevent a burn-up.

"Take a dry, hot day like today," explained Jay Spain, Hereford Fire Marshal, "with the weeds and trash all dried out..." "All you need is some wind and you'll have a blaze going!"

"Weeds and trash get dried out real quick from hot winds," he added.

The weeds and trash Spain is talking about are the weeds and trash found in quite a few alleys throughout the city of Hereford.

According to Spain, weeds grow up around the fence or dumpster and when dried out these weeds become a fire hazard.

"First the weeds catch fire, then the fence, causing a lawn fire," states Spain, "and there's no telling what all the fire will burn up once started."

People who don't keep their weeds under control are risking their fences, their homes, and possibly even their neighbors homes.

Along the weeds, trash piled by the dumpster could be a fire hazard as well.

"Where you place your trash could help to prevent a fire," stressed Spain.

Spain went on to explain that shrubs and old tree limbs should be placed beside the dumpster to be picked up with trash.

"Hereford's sanitation department cooperates on picking up the trash," mentions Spain.

The city has two kinds of dump trucks; the round truck which empties the dumpsters and one truck that has side-boards designed especially for carrying the bigger trash/debris off.

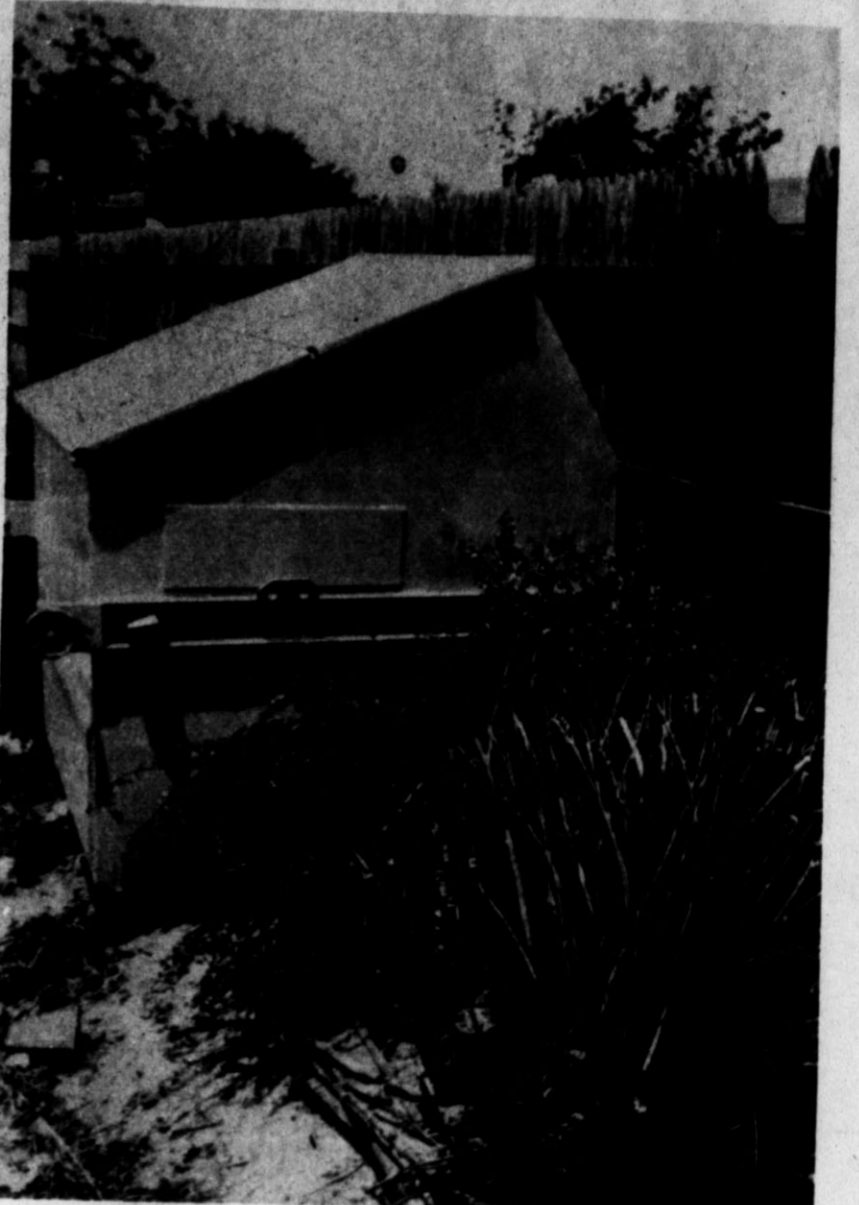

"However, the trash left by the dumpster will only be picked up if it doesn't weigh more than what one man can lift," stated Spain.

In conjunction with Fix-up Clean-Up Week the Fire Marshal listed a few safety measures on keeping a clean alley which also prevents fires.

1. Weeds should be kept mowed down.
2. Oil in alley or on grass should be buried with dirt or cleaned up.
3. Old rags used for cleaning should be put inside dumpster with lid closed.
4. Cardboard boxes should be broken down into stacks and also placed inside the dumpster.

5. The most important tip—KEEP YOUR ALLEY CLEAN!
Keeping your alley clean makes it look nice, makes the area less hazardous for fire and also cuts down on mesquitos and bugs.

And remember when mowing those weeds; "All it takes is a cigarette butt thrown into the alley," urges Spain.
"Most people won't even notice until the fence is already gone!"

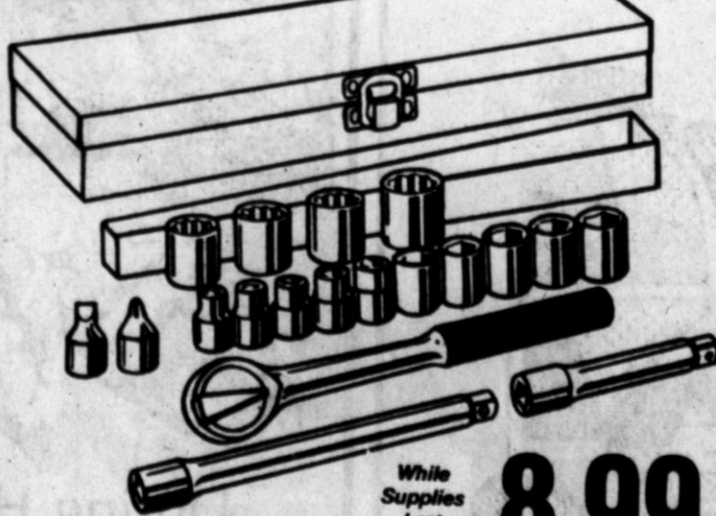

Not only unsightly, but weeds can quickly ignite

Work-at-home jobs becoming recourse

It may be from the garage, basement or kitchen table but each year more and more Americans are finding ways to earn extra money and make a living from home. A recent study shows that one out of two small business owners are forced to start their own business because they can't find a job. But before you start to feel sorry for them a Journal survey shows the average earning for a small business owner is $107,460 a year. Many of these are stay-home operations, and many are started by women.

This trend is up 25 percent since 1982. Three factors are helping to bring this about. One is that Americans are returning to the traditional value of self-reliance. Two, America is shifting from an industrial society to an information society which can be handled from smaller facilities like the home. And three, new opportunities are arising as business people plagued with rising costs like rent, employee benefits, etc. have begun restructuring their operations and encouraging work-at-home projects with special pay arrangements for these people. As a result, a new type of work force is developing away from the factory and office and into the home.

For companies with these programs, it involves locating people in different parts of the country who can operate from home. For individuals, it means finding a company with a project they can handle.

Information on these new opportunities, along with names and addresses of companies looking for people interested in doing some of their work at home has been put together by a research service in New York that has begun to study this trend. They now have information on more than 200 companies with work-at-home operations and a referral service for anyone who is interested in working at home.

To get a copy of the report on this trend and more information on these companies write Home-data Research, 444 Hudson St., Suite 467, NY, NY 10014. Enclose a stamped self-addressed (long) envelope for the report. †

Though windows do a lot more than open and close, sometimes that's an important function.

In the spring and fall, for example, windows that are easy to operate can be opened to cool breezes, eliminating the need for costly air conditioning.

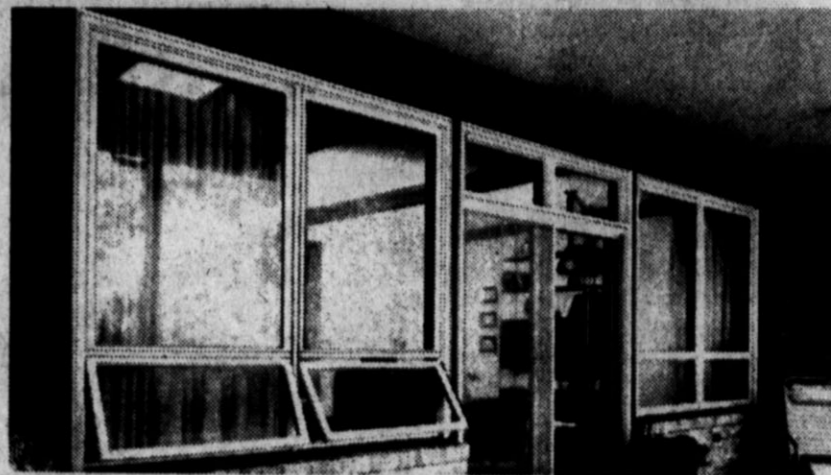

Even on hot days in summer, says the National Woodwork Manufacturers Association (NWMA), low ventilating windows on the north side of a home combined with high ventilating windows on the south side create a chimney effect. This natural convection draws cool air in from the north side and exhausts warm air out on the south side. With ventilating windows open on both sides, this chimney effect can move air through a house even when there isn't a breeze.

No matter what the season, however, the material that goes into the manufacture of windows is just as important as their operation. Wood is used in the sash and frame of well-made windows, says NWMA, because wood is a natural insulator. Many wood windows have a protective exterior cladding that all but eliminates the need for periodic painting. Some have removable grilles so there is only one large pane of glass to wash instead of many small ones.

All have factory-installed weatherstripping to minimize air infiltration and are double- or triple-glazed.

For more information on windows, send 50 cents for a copy of, "Passive Solar: Using Windows and Patio Doors to Cut Fuel Bills," to NWMA, c/o SR&A, 355 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017. †

MANY HOMEOWNERS REROOF EARLY TO IMPROVE APPEARANCE, VALUE

Because most roofs do such a good job protecting everything underneath, most homeowners take that protection for granted. There's no reason they shouldn't, because the roof is one of the few elements in a home that offers such durable, long-lasting protection.

Still, growing numbers of homeowners are replacing their roofs early for aesthetic reasons. There are two sound reasons for doing so. One is to improve a home's appearance; the other, to assure that a home retains its value.

For those who decide to reroof now, the assistance of a professional roofing contractor can be valuable. First, he will conduct a thorough on-the-roof inspection.

Second, he can provide some extremely useful information about roofing materials, and how to use color and dimension to improve the looks of a home.

Asphalt shingles, for example, are the most widely used in both new home construction and reroofing. They are attractive, durable and economical.

A new generation of asphalt shingles includes fiber glass-based and organic-based, as well as eye-appealing multi-layered shingles. All come in a broad range of attractive styles and colors.

Especially popular are the earthtone shades of brown and beige that serve to relate a home to its environment. They also create bold, dramatic shadow lines to give a roof an attractive random appearance. They require little maintenance and are designed to last 25 years or more.

Safety is another aspect to cover when talking with a professional roofer. Fiber glass-based asphalt shingles have a high fire rating—Underwriters Laboratories Class A.

This means the shingles meet UL's highest standard for resistance to ignition and spread of external fire. Organic asphalt shingles with the UL Class C rating meet most building codes.

Badly worn roof needs replacement not repair

A smile may be your umbrella on rainy, rainy day, but it won't do much to protect your house if the roof is worn out.

A roof that has seen its best days needs to be replaced. Since a roof tends to wear uniformly, limited repairs will not help a roof that is old and worn. The telltale signs include cracked, curled or missing shingles. One suggestion, says the Asphalt Roofing Manufacturers Association, is to determine the age of the roof. A roof of standard shingles that is over 15 years old is probably due for reroofing.

Get a second opinion from a professional roofing contractor who will conduct a thorough on the roof inspection. Don't go up there yourself to check. It's dangerous and could damage the shingles. If you want a closer look before calling in a professional, use field glasses to inspect the roof from the ground.

A professional roofer can also be a good source of advice on materials, designs and how to use color to improve the appearance of your home. A new generation of asphalt shingles, including new fiber glass-based shingles, offers good looks, good value, low maintenance and fire safety. Available in attractive earthtone shades of browns and beiges, many styles of asphalt shingles are designed to last up to 25 years or more. These popular earthtone colors can be used to blend or contrast with the other exterior color elements to give a home definite curb appeal.

Another factor to consider is the design life of the shingle. Keep in mind that the labor cost for application is often the same regardless of the life expectancy of the roof. To estimate the annual cost of a new roof, add the cost of labor and materials and divide the total by the shingle's design life. It may prove more economical in the long run to buy the more durable shingle because the cost of labor and materials is amortized over a longer period of time.

Asphalt shingles also provide fire protection. Manufactured to meet the fire resistance standard of Underwriters Laboratories, asphalt shingles bearing the UL label have been tested against fire exposure and will not ignite easily, contribute to the spread of flame over the roof area or emit burning brands that might cause new fires. Asphalt shingles are designed to meet UL Class C or better rating. Fiber glass shingles are rated Class A, the highest.

Additional information on roofing and how to use it to improve exterior design is available in "A Homeowner's Guide to Quality Roofing."

Change of hardware gives new look to areas

Do any of these homeowners sound like you?

Homeowner A, a dyed-in-the-wool do-it-yourselfer, wants a new look for the kitchen and bath but doesn't have much time to spend on improvements.

Homeowner B has used up six months and thousands of dollars remodeling the kitchen and bath but feels that something is still missing — the rooms have no personality.

Homeowner C has added new cabinets in the kitchen and bath to accommodate a growing family, but the new cabinets don't match the old. Something is needed to pull it all together.

All of these homeowners have a different problem but, believe it or not, there is a single solution: a simple change of cabinet hardware — knobs and pulls.

Before you take those tools in hand,

though, consider these few suggestions:

- Look for cabinet hardware that's easy to clean and durable (think how many times a kitchen or bathroom cabinet is opened every day!)

- Don't feel locked in to the size or type or placement of your old hardware. Say, for example, the original cabinetry featured knobs, but you've decided to use pulls, or vice versa. There's a variety of decorative back plates available to hide previously drilled holes. These plates are to be fastened underneath the new hardware. Simply remember to accurately mark on the cabinet where the new screw and/or bolt openings should go, drill and then attach the hardware per directions.

- Cabinet hardware shouldn't fade into the woodwork; it should make a decorating accent statement. Imagine the effect created by gleaming brass knobs set in a dark wood cabinet. Or consider the impact of chrome-finished brass pulls contrasted against bright laminate doors and drawers.

Roofers Kept Busy

With the aftermath of the recent damaging hail storm, many residents are having to reroof their homes. Other repairs are also being made during Clean-Up, Fix-Up Week by residences and businesses. Avis Blakey, chairperson of the Women's Division beautification committee, urges everyone in the community to get involved in this annual project.

Planning ahead makes insulation project easier

Assembling the proper tools speeds up the work of any craftsman. A carpenter can't build a house before he's gathered his tools, nails and wood. A seamstress needs scissors, needle and thread.

For the home handyman, the rules are the same. Before you can do a skillful job making repairs or improvements, you have to have the right tools.

If the goal is to install insulation in your attic, some simple preparation is necessary to make sure that the work is done efficiently and safely. The CertainTeed Home Institute offers some suggestions to those planning to insulate the home's attic area.

Before beginning, you'll need a tape for measuring the length and width of the attic and the space between the wood beams on the attic floor. When you determine the dimensions of the attic, take them to your local home center and they'll compute the amount of insulation you need.

Once you return home, you must have a long, strong plank for standing or kneeling upon. This will be laid across the wood beams on the attic floor to provide a stable work platform.

A long stick or push broom is useful for showing the insulation in hard-to-reach attic corners. One or more trouble lights for illuminating your work area will help you do a proper job. And, a serrated knife is essential for cutting fiber glass insulation to size.

For your comfort and safety, wear cotton gloves and loose-fitting clothing that covers most of your skin. When working in cramped areas, you might want to wear a hard hat to protect your head from protruding nails and splintered wood.

Make sure you move the packages of fiber glass insulation into the attic in their compressed form. They'll be too awkward to handle if they're opened before-hand.

Start laying the insulation in a corner and lay the boards ahead of you to form a walkway. For safety's sake, don't let too much board extend unsupported over any beam, or you may lose your balance.

Penalty stiffer for selling fake joints than peddling real thing

By KIT FRIEDEN
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — A 19-year-old woman accused of selling oregano cigarettes to undercover vice officers outside an arena during a rock concert could face a 2-to-10-year prison sentence and a $5,000
fine.

Had the cigarettes contained marijuana, a conviction would bring only a possible
one-year sentence and a $2,000 fine.

Sherry Gann was arrested
outside a Deep Purple concert at Reunion Arena on Jan.
25. Police said she offered undercover officers what she said were joints for $2 apiece.

But the cigarettes were made of oregano, a herb popular in Italian dishes and a common kitchen item.

Because of that, Ms. Gann is charged with a third-degree felony charge of "delivery of a simulated controlled substance" under a 1983 law passed by the state legislature in an attempt to tackle dealers of counterfeit cocaine, heroin and pills.

Ms. Gann's attorney, Anne Adair, and Dallas County
Assistant District Attorney
Andy Beach have conferred on the case. Both say it is still uncertain whether it will go to trial or whether Ms. Gann will enter a plea. Beach expects it to be decided in a couple of weeks.

The law in question is alternately called the "bunk drug" or "turkey drug" law.
It is designed to deliver a stiff penalty to people who sell phony drugs as real ones.

Proponents say it wasn't really intended to apply to people selling phony marijuana, and Ms. Adair says it is stupid that her client faces charges.

Ms. Gann says she never said the substance was marijuana and at the time of the arrest told the officers, "Hey, this is just tobacco."

"I've never done anything like this before in my life, and now look at how far it's gotten out of hand," she told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram in an interview in March.

She told the newspaper she sold the oregano cigarettes
because "I just really needed money because my husband had been laid off, and we needed to feed our baby."

Ms. Gann has an unlisted telephone number and her attorney declined to arrange an interview this week.

Prosecutor Beach, meanwhile, refused to make many comments about the case.
"Don't start asking me rationales or if it's a good law or not," he said.

Beach said he doesn't know

Reagan's plan shifts burden to business, winners and losers hard to pick

NEW YORK (AP) — President Reagan's proposed overhaul of the federal tax system is stirring up the nation's business community, creating headaches for
"Smokestack America" and a diverse collection of other ventures that range from insurance companies to restaurants.

The plan, unveiled this past week, would eliminate tax breaks enjoyed by many established industries but would provide incentives for starting and expanding riskier new ventures.

Analysts agree that overall, the president's quest for a simpler, fairer tax law would reduce individual taxes and increase the tax burden of business. The Treasury Department
estimates that in the long run, total individual taxes would fall 7 percent and corporate tax payments would rise 9 percent.

But within corporate ranks,
picking winners and losers becomes more complicated.

In general, the corporate tax burden would fall harder on big business, which stands to lose tax credits for investment in machinery and plant.
But some big companies
might benefit if individuals have more disposable income to spend on their products, such as automobiles.

Meanwhile, emerging technology companies have embraced the proposal,

citing the continuation of tax incentives for research and development, reductions in corporate tax rates from 46 percent to 33 percent and lower taxes on capital gains

for the investors who finance their businesses.

In addition to manufacturers, other businesses that would lose lucrative tax breaks are bankers,

restauranters, entertainment and sports promoters,
real estate agents, insurers,
and producers of oil, natural gas and other natural resources.

Mockingbirds bombing down on postal carriers in Houston, no delivery

HOUSTON (AP) — Neither rain, hail, sleet, snow nor gloom of night can interrupt the mail, but a mockingbird can.

Mail delivery for some Houston residents has been sporadic for the past two weeks, the reason — a mockingbird that "zooms down on the mail carriers," the postal service says.

And while some residents are amused that a small bird can intimidate a mail carrier, no one is laughing about interrupted mail service.

One of those residents, Mark White Sr., peeked into his mailbox Wednesday and then looked around mischievously for the feathered villain. His son, Gov. Mark White, however, is the chief protector of the mockingbird, the state bird of Texas.

A safety inspection team from the postal service investigated the situation last week, took photographs and deemed it unsafe to deliver mail in the immediate area, said spokesman Mike West.

Gertrude Heafner, who lives in the bird-bombed neighborhood, defended the bird and its annual visits to nest along the comfortable street.

"We're kind of happy to see it every year. I like birds," Ms. Heafner said. "It's never stopped us from working with the flowers or taking the dog for a walk. And it never stopped the mail before."

The mockingbird usually nests in the neighborhood
during the spring, and becomes aggressive for about two to three weeks, Ms.
Heafner said. After its young offspring leave the nest, the bird moves on, she said.

Jose Armendariz, who has been working outside
throughout the ordeal, said mail carriers seem to be the only target of the fowl aggres-sions.

"I saw the little bird a lot of times, he follows the mailman," Armendariz said.
"One time there was a woman mailman and the little bird flew down this close to her," indicating with his hands about two feet.

White said he has not received mail at his home in three days. Some residents are going to the post office to pick up back mail, he said.

"It's damn serious when you don't get mail," White said.

Postal carrier Earl Scurlock said the bird is a hazard, regardless of the smirks from some residents.

"It's not that I'm afraid
he's going to take my life," Scurlock said. "It's that he's just bothersome enough to cause me to injure myself."

Out of frustration one day, Scurlock carried a slingshot with him and attempted to hit the bird with pebbles, he said.

"I tried, but I didn't hit him," he said. The fine for killing a mockingbird in Texas is $25 to $200.

Furniture designer offers smart advice

You'll get more for your furniture dollars when you know how to shop. Sensible shopping begins at home, according to Leonard Eisen, one of the nation's outstanding furniture designers, from whose drawing boards stem unusual concepts.

Eisen is guided by the principle of "human engineering" in his styling. He believes that furniture should be created with the convenience of the consumer equally as important as the style appeal.

The 52-year-old conceptualist went back into the pages of history to bring forth turn-of-the-century nostalgic furniture that he labeled "Keepsakes" because of its timelessness. The Eisen-inspired designs derive their appeal from their versatility of eclectic mix for contemporary living.

Here is Eisen's commonsense guide for the budget-minded home decorator. "The furniture purchaser," he says, "must look at the total environment of the apartment or home in terms of traffic patterns, scale, people and personal living habits."

He notes that the quality of life is less dependent on the size of the pocketbook than in the human values of the householder.

Taking advantage of tax credit now

If you're thinking of adding additional insulation to your home, the CertainTeed Home Institute recommends that you do it now, so you can still take advantage of the insulation tax credit. The credit, which equals 15 percent of the first $2,000 invested, up to a maximum of $300, expires December 31, 1985.

The credit applies to fiber glass insulation as well as other types of attic or sidewall insulation; caulking, weatherstripping, storm windows and doors; modified flue openings; automatic furnace ignition systems; clock thermostats; and other energy conservation products.

To qualify, products must have been purchased and installed in a principal place of residence built prior to April 20, 1977. The residence may be a single family home, condominium or co-operative.

Renters (as well as owners) are eligible for the tax credit, as long as they pay for the insulation themselves. Vacation homes are excluded.

The 15 percent of the first $2,000 invested refers to materials and labor costs of a contractor. The credit is subtracted from the final amount of a resident's Federal tax liability.

Before you ever leave home, he urges, consider all of your needs. The size of the room will dictate the size of the furniture you buy. How much use is given to the furniture will be another consideration. For example, it is much more functional to have a dresser with all drawers and no doors.

Your lifestyle should be considered. Is it casual or formal?

The colors that already have gone into the room are tremendously important, Eisen observes. It's one thing to be carried away by the spectrum of colors in the store—but, remember, the furniture must look well with what you have.

Eisen is a pragmatist and counsels that beyond all of these considerations is the need to remember to stay within your budget.

Get ideas about style from the media, he urges. Later these will bring you into better focus when you begin looking at the stores' room settings.

He suggests playing a game of six questions with yourself before going into the store:

1. What can I leave out, more than what can I leave in? While every room needs a basic framework, very often a given area works with a minimum of things in it. Simplicity can be an important credo.

2. Will my room be flexible? Will it cover a variety of activities for large and small numbers of people? By looking ahead to all potential uses, you create a room that lends itself to all uses equally well.

3. Will it be efficient? Your furniture and accessories must be efficient in terms of your tastes, your likes and your lifestyle. If you like eating in front of the television set, ask your dealer about how to do it. The most practical dining room chair should sit straight, in keeping with Eisen's conception of furniture styled for "human engineering."

4. Provide for your comfort. As a student of "human engineering," which he learned as a part of his training in the design of the most functional equipment in fighter plane cockpits, Eisen stresses the role of comfort in storage as well as furniture surroundings. Plan for the things you will accumulate. Provide space for the future.

5. Create a quality of light. Creating good light, he notes, can do more for furniture enhancement than any other element in the home. Explore all forms of light, he urges—indirect, bounced off the surface, lamps—and the combinations.

6. Draw up a list of questions you would little expect to ask of the salesman. And ask them. The salesman can only interpret your needs through your questions.

Can I mix and match furniture of the type I am seeking? How do I clean the fabrics? Are there any furniture guarantees? What colors blend with what pieces of furniture? Will the furniture be functional?

For example, Eisen points out, compartments frequently are more functional than drawers which are confining.

The shopping experience is a two-way street. Make the most out of it, the furniture designer urges, by doing your shopping homework—in advance.
