Perot eyes re-entry in presidential race

DALLAS (AP) - Ross Perot weighed a late re-entry into the presidential race today, awaiting an almost certain blessing from his supporters across the country.

The campaigns of President Bush and Democrat Bill Clinton uneasily prepared for Perot's decision, expected at a late afternoon news conference.

Despite his abrupt withdrawal from the presidential race in July, Perot still held enough appeal to affect the outcome of the election, now a little more than four weeks away.

Perot ordered his volunteers to let him know by today whether they want him back in and Perot promised his feelings wouldn't be hurt if they said no.

All signs pointed toward a positive decision.

John Jay Hooker, a former Nashville publisher and politician, said he spoke with Perot Wednesday night but said the conversation didn't yield a clue about his decision.

But Hooker said, "If I saw you dressed up in a tuxedo and standing up front of a church and there was a woman coming to meet you, I'd be pretty certain you were going to get married, right? The point is I believe that today he is going for president of the United States."

"What we feel about Ross is he's charismatic," said Bill Maher, Perot's Oregon coordinator. "He has a great mind, a wonderful personality, a great communicator. That would enhance the chance of our issues being pushed through."

Maher and other state coordinators were surveying Perot's support in all 50 states, and sending their results to Perot's headquarters in Dallas today.

New Hampshire coordinator Herb Clark said 78 percent of the supporters he polled in his state wanted Perot back in.

"They see him as the only viable alternative," he said.

As his volunteers lined up behind their man, it was revealed that Perot hired a private investigative firm not only to provide security at his campaign headquarters but also to investigate the backgrounds of volunteer leaders.

The New York Times and The Washington Post quoted Clayton Mulford, general counsel to the Perot campaign, as acknowledging that some of the $76,000 paid to the San Francisco firm was used to conduct investigations of allegations that campaign money was being misappropriated. But some volunteer leaders said they were accused of improper behavior in their pasts and removed from their jobs.

Perot had also set up a new toll free hotline for the public to register its support. But the billionaire said only people who supported him should call the line, frustrating voters who want to tell him not to run.

"I'm a businessman," Perot said. "I'm not going to pay for the phone call for some fella that says, 'Don't do it.'"

About 2 million people have tried to get through to the toll-free phone line, spokeswoman Sharon Holman said.

Maher said 90 percent of the 6,000 Oregon supporters contacted since Monday felt Perot should run against President Bush and Bill Clinton.

Since abandoning the campaign trail July 16, Perot has remained poised to re-enter at any time.

Campaign finance reports filed with the government show he continued to spend millions, maintaining a 50-state organization and quietly preparing campaign advertising. Through August, Perot's organization had spent $18 million, including $16 million of his own money.

On Wednesday, there were more signs of preparation at his Dallas headquarters. Phone company workers installed new lines for the volunteer-staffed phone bank and an office supply company delivered about a dozen new desks.

Perot's effect on the campaign is, at best, difficult to measure. His popularity has fallen dramatically since he ditched the race 10 weeks ago.

But even with support in the single digits Perot could scramble the race in a number of big states, hurting Bush in some, Clinton in others.

In the same breath that he welcomed Perot back into the race, Clinton said Wednesday that "he could give the election to Bush if those who want change are equally divided."

The Bush campaign is also uneasy about Perot, particularly that he might aim a multimillion dollar advertising blitz at the president.

Congress okays energy bill

WASHINGTON (AP) - House and Senate negotiators broke the logjam on a massive energy bill early today and approved legislation that supporters say eventually will help curb the nation's thirst for imported oil.

The post-midnight agreement, which ended nearly 12 hours of bargaining, set the stage for final congressional approval of the most sweeping changes in U.S. energy policy in 15 years.

The 1,300-page bill affects everything from efficiency standards for lights and shower heads to requirements for building nuclear power plants and determining who deliver's America's electricity.

"We really reached a good compromise," declared Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., who first introduced his energy package in the Senate nearly two years ago. "I think it's going to have tremendous impact. There's no question it will eventually reduce the need for oil imports."

Some critics, including many in the oil industry, questioned how much impact on imports the bill actually will have because it does little to spur domestic oil production.

For a time, sharp disagreements over offshore oil drilling restrictions and requirements for the purchase of alternative fuel vehicles by private fleet operators threatened to thwart an agreement.

But under pressure from the Senate negotiators, Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., agreed to drop a proposed ban on offshore drilling along most of the U.S. coastline as well as a requirement to buy back certain existing oil and gas leases.

Another compromise was reached on when private fleets will have to begin purchasing vehicles that run on fuels other than gasoline. The issue had stymied the talks last week when Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., a longtime protector of the auto industry, had objected to the timetable saying automakers couldn't produce such cars as fast as required.

Under the compromise, private fleets would have to begin buying alternative fuel vehicles in 1999 and have 70 percent of their cars use a fuel other than gasoline by 2006. Federal and state government fleets will phase the vehicles in a few years earlier.

The bill also calls for:

- Developing competition in the electric industry by creating new independent electricity producers that could compete with utilities in the wholesale distribution of electricity.

- Adopting new energy efficiency standards for light bulbs, electric motors, toilets and shower heads.

- Streamlining the licensing of nuclear power plants to speed up construction of new reactors by allowing a "one-step" permitting process.

- Expansion of the Strategic Petroleum Reserve to 1 billion barrels and authorizing the president to withdraw oil in an emergency if supply shortages cause sharp price increases.

House sustains veto of family-leave bill

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Bush's veto of a bill that would strike down limits on federally financed abortion counseling faces a Senate test as Congress wades through a host of politically charged issues standing in the way of adjournment.

Bush's perfect record of making vetoes stick was intact after the House on Wednesday easily sustained his veto of the family leave bill.

"I think it's going to be a devastating issue" for Bush, said Sen. Chris Dodd, who has pushed versions of the bill for seven years.

Besides the so-called abortion "gag rule" test today, the Senate also planned to vote on whether to follow the House in overriding Bush's veto of a bill that would slap conditions on renewal of China's favored trade status.

Also scheduled were votes on the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty, the nuclear weapons agreement worked out with the former Soviet Union, and a foreign aid bill including $10 billion in loan guarantees for Israel.

The disparate votes were scheduled in consecutive order in the Senate, reflecting the hectic pace of final actions as both chambers tried to adjourn the 102nd Congress by early next week. Lawmakers of both parties are in a rush to return home to campaign in the election one month away.

More than the usual number of lobbyists and journalists crowded the Capitol's corridors to witness lawmakers caught in rapid-fire floor votes and difficult behind-the-scenes negotiations on bills not quite ready for prime time.

The gag rule was imposed by the administration to prevent federally financed family planning clinics from offering counseling to women, most of them poor, on abortion. A Senate vote to sustain his veto would remove the last legislative obstacle, and the administration planned to begin implementing the rules today.

Groups opposed to the rule were challenging it in federal court, although previous attempts failed in the Supreme Court.

Bush made his veto stick for the 33rd consecutive time when the House voted 258-169 to sustain the bill that would have required many businesses to offer up to 12 weeks unpaid leave to employees to care for a sick relative or new child.

Acknowledging defeat, supporters of the family leave bill said Bush's veto would reverberate in the presidential election. Democrat Bill Clinton supports the measure, and he has hammered Bush for opposing it while at the same time trying to claim "family values" as an issue.

"The president consistently talks about family values. ... I think the president's isolated himself and lost all credibility on these issues," said Dodd, D-Conn.

Despite the partisanship, 42 Democrats deserted their party and voted to sustain Bush's family leave veto, including some committee and subcommittee chairmen. Thirty-eight Republicans voted to override their president.

"For Congress to simply pass another mandate and then say to people in the business world ... 'You may have to eat the costs' ... would be to have a mandated increased unemployment bill," said House Minority Whip Newt Gingrich, R-Ga.

He and other supporters of the bill pointed to Bush's eleventh-hour alternative, $500 million in tax credits for businesses that grant the unpaid leave to workers.

Separately, the House voted as expected - and overwhelmingly - to override Bush on the China trade issue. The vote was 345-74.

Top advisers seek debate agreement

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Bush and Bill Clinton called a temporary truce in their war of words over debates as aides searched for agreement on how to stage a series of showdowns in the campaign's final month. Ross Perot promised word today on whether he would join the race - and any debates.

Top advisers to Bush and Democratic nominee Clinton met for nearly four hours Wednesday night and were resuming negotiations today. By agreement, the two camps said only that "discussions are ongoing" and refused to provide details.

As the talks continued in Washington, Clinton and Sen. Al Gore were campaigning in Wisconsin and Ohio, while Bush took a day off the campaign trail. Perot was home in Dallas as his state coordinators began reporting whether their volunteers want Perot to make it a three-way race once again.

The debate negotiations broke weeks of finger-pointing over which side was to blame for the impasse. The Bush campaign scored a small victory as the talks began, getting Clinton to drop his insistence that any negotiations be held under the auspices of the bipartisan Commission on Presidential Debates.

Instead, the two sides met privately at the Washington law office of Clinton campaign chairman Mickey Kantor. Leading the Bush delegation was campaign chairman Robert Teeter.

During Wednesday night's talks, the two sides broke on several occasions and members of both teams could be seen in office windows making telephone calls. But neither side would say if any progress was made.

For weeks, Clinton had the upper hand in the debate over debates, repeatedly mocking Bush for refusing to participate in forums scheduled by the bipartisan commission. Bush objected to the commission's plan for a single moderator, saying he favored a format involving a panel of journalists, such as the one used in 1988.

But just as the commission canceled plans for a third time - this time for a debate scheduled Sunday in San Diego - Bush made a surprise offer to debate Clinton on four successive Sundays beginning Oct. 11. Bush compromised somewhat by offering to debate twice with a single moderator and twice with the larger panel.

That proposal, which also included two unscheduled vice presidential debates, was what Teeter brought to the table Wednesday night.

Clinton aides said they would open by asking that the first debate be held this Sunday and a second Oct. 15 - both dates on the commission's schedule.

And Clinton advisers said the Democrat, who leads in national polls, did not want to debate Nov. 1 - two nights before the election - as called for in the Bush proposal. A misstep so close to the election would be hard to repair, so as front-runner an election-eve debate would carry high risk.

It was unclear, however, if the two sides reached any agreements in the talks that recessed just before midnight Wednesday.

But just the fact that face-to-face negotiations were under way greatly increased the likelihood of debates. A wild card is Perot, who has said he would be eager to join debates should he enter the race.

The volunteers who call on you are local folks and probably some of them are friends. They are involved in a good and legitimate funding situation, helping local agencies provide services in this community.

I am always suspicious of mailings from out of town that solicit money or request my help in raising funds. Some of them appear to have high administration expenses. I can't help but wonder if some guy is running the show at a salary of $250,000 a year!

There are plenty of good causes conducted right here in this community, spearheaded by people you know. We're living in an age when fraud and deceit are commonplace. Welfare reform law draws protests

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) - New Jersey today becomes the first state to deny an increase in benefits to mothers who have babies while on welfare, part of a reform package intended to make poor families more self-sufficient. Opponents of the provision say children will suffer, and they have threatened a court fight. Under the law, a welfare recipient who has a child 10 months or more after enrolling in the federal-state Aid to Families with Dependent Children program no longer will get the usual $64 monthly increase in benefits. "I don't think that's right. Some people need that help," Barbara Johnson, a 21-year-old welfare recipient in Trenton, said as she waited to see a caseworker. "Sixty-four dollars can buy Pampers. Sixty-four dollars can buy T-shirts for my child. For somebody that don't have a job, $64 is a lot better than none."

Johnson, who has a 4-year-old daughter, is two months pregnant but will not be affected because the state is allowing a 10-month grace period before it begins withholding benefits. The freeze is part of a law that federal and state officials say will help break the cycle of poverty. The law allows a welfare recipient who has a child to work and earn an amount equivalent to half her monthly grant without losing benefits. It also allows mothers to marry without losing benefits for their children. The typical AFDC family in New Jersey, a mother and two children, receives $424 per month. Other provisions of the Family Development Program, as the package is called, begin today in only three counties - Camden, Essex and Hudson - where more than half of New Jersey's 130,000 welfare families live. The provisions will be phased in statewide over three years. These provisions are aimed at linking families with the services they need to become self-sufficient, including education, child care, health care and job training. Women on welfare will be required to go to school or receive job training, or risk losing some or all of their benefits.

"We need to work with all the issues that affect a family," said Aletha Wright, a Human Services Department official responsible for the program. "Before, we focused a lot on the adult, and now we're looking at the adult and the family." The law was signed by Gov. Jim Florio in January and received the necessary approval from the Bush administration in July. President Bush has promised to help states that try new welfare approaches, and reforms are being considered in such states as Michigan, Maryland and Wisconsin. More than 40 states have cut or frozen welfare benefits in the past two years.

"It's safe to say there'll be some legal challenge," said Martha Davis, attorney for the NOW Legal Defense and Education Fund in New York City. Major changes also confront Michigan welfare recipients beginning today. They will be asked to sign a "social contract" binding them to work, go to school or volunteer 20 hours a week. Those who refuse will be referred to a job training program that is being expanded to include community service. Their benefits can be cut if they fail to cooperate.

Other changes include more generous incentives to work part time, beefed-up child-support collections, tougher penalties for welfare fraud and expanded programs to keep families together and children out of foster homes.

Brooks, Gill, Cyrus lead way at country music award show

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - Garth Brooks, whose introspective songs and rousing concerts have lifted country music to new heights, was voted top entertainer by his peers for the second year in a row. Brooks' 9 million-selling "Ropin' the Wind," which has been No. 1 on both the pop and country charts, won best album to give him two major honors at Wednesday's Country Music Association Awards. Brooks shared the spotlight with velvet tenor Vince Gill, who won two awards, including top male vocalist. Mary-Chapin Carpenter was chosen top female singer.

Billy Ray Cyrus won single of the year for the rollicking crossover sensation "Achy Breaky Heart." "Awards aren't what it's all about," Brooks, who sold boots before his music career took off three years ago, said backstage at the Grand Ole Opry. "If you go into a town, and there ain't tickets left for your show or records in any stores around there, then you're doing your job." Gill, co-host of the nationally televised show with Reba McEntire, collected trophies for best male vocalist and for writing his hit "Look at Us" with Max D. Barnes.

George Jones, whose hits include "He Stopped Loving Her Today," was named to the Country Music Hall of Fame in recognition of his 40-year career. "The only thing I can say is that country music has been awful good to me throughout a whole bunch of years," Jones said. The new honky-tonk duo Brooks & Dunn won duo of the year, breaking a four-year hold on the award by the mother-daughter act the Judds, who are no longer performing together. Fiddler Mark O'Connor was named best musician, and Diamond Rio was chosen best group.

Stock prices fall after job report issued

NEW YORK (AP) - Stock prices gave ground today in a wary response to the latest news on job-market conditions. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 5.13 points to 3,266.53 by noon on Wall Street. Losers outnumbered gainers by about 4 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 632 up, 886 down and 642 unchanged. The Labor Department reported that initial claims for state unemployment insurance rose by 15,000 in the week ended Sept. 19, surprising analysts who had been expecting a small decrease. The news drew a warm response in the bond market, where traders saw it as a favorable portent for further declines in interest rates. But analysts said stock-market investors were less enthusiastic about it, given their concerns over stubborn weakness in the economy. Jobs data for all of September are due out on Friday, in a report expected to carry a lot of weight with the Federal Reserve as the Fed decides whether to ease credit conditions further. Volume on the Big Board came to 97.17 million shares at noon, against 81.73 million at the same point Wednesday.

Carpenter, who won a Grammy Award earlier this year, said she hopes her country award ends questions about whether she's really country. "I spend most of my year doing interviews explaining why I'm a country artist, defending myself more than anything else," she said. "This makes me feel like maybe I don't have to."

Task force seeking health care reforms

AUSTIN (AP) - A state task force has recommended that Texas provide health care coverage for all children and pregnant women, but the proposal's prognosis in the Legislature is up in the air. "I can't anticipate what the Legislature might do because I am very very cognizant of the economic difficulties that the state faces," Texas Health Policy Task Force Chairwoman Shirley Chater said Wednesday. But, she added that the report "says loudly and clearly that we need reform of the health care system in the state of Texas." Health care costs in Texas have skyrocketed in recent years from $30 billion in 1988 to $44 billion in 1992, according to the task force. Meanwhile, more employers and individuals are dropping coverage. About 4 million Texans, including more than 1 million children, are uninsured, the task force said. The cost of extending health care coverage to all children under 18-years-old and pregnant women would be about $4.2 billion more than the current Medicaid coverage, the report said. That would require $1.5 billion in state dollars, about double the current state portion of health care. Ms. Chater said that some of that extra money could be found in cost-savings from other task force recommendations, including negotiated rates on health care services, and private insurance. In August, the panel initially recommended that lawmakers implement a health care system in which all Texans would be covered under a plan administered by a single insurer. Private insurance companies and businesses immediately attacked the proposal as "socialized medicine." In the face of the criticism, the task force instead suggested that the single insurer proposal be adopted for children and pregnant women. But coverage for all Texans should remain a goal, the task force said. "There is nothing socialized about this," said Ms. Chater.

Doctors can analyze genetic cell code with new method

Research teams on two continents have collaborated to develop a procedure to diagnose cystic fibrosis before an embryo is implanted in the womb.

The teams, from the Center for Reproductive Medicine and Surgery of The Methodist Hospital and Baylor College of Medicine in Houston and from Hammersmith Hospital in London, reported their finding in the Sept. 24 New England Journal of Medicine. Their technique allows doctors to analyze the genetic code of cells taken from an embryo produced through in vitro fertilization (IVF).

The analysis shows whether the embryo will develop cystic fibrosis, be a carrier of the disease or be unaffected. Cystic fibrosis (CF) is an inherited disorder that causes severe lung disease and is frequently fatal. As many as one in 25 Americans carry the CF gene.

The new procedure, which can also be used to identify other genetic diseases including hemophilia, Tay-Sachs and Duchenne's muscular dystrophy, allows doctors to diagnose potentially lethal conditions before a pregnancy develops.

The Baylor-Methodist team, led by Dr. M. John G. Lesko, successfully collaborated with researchers to analyze embryos produced from an involving a husband and wife who each carry a CF gene suffer from the disease.

The team successfully completed a pre-implantation genetic analysis and an embryo transfer to the woman's uterus where a single pregnancy developed. A healthy baby girl was born last March and she is unaffected by CF.

According to Hughes, director of the Baylor Prenatal Genetics Center and assistant professor of molecular genetics, pre-implantation genetic analysis offers new options to couples whose children would be at risk for genetic diseases.

"Previously, couples had to wait from nine to 15 weeks to find out if their developing baby was affected by a known genetic disease. Now, we are able to diagnose these inherited diseases within three days after an egg is fertilized in the laboratory, before it is transferred back to the woman," Hughes said.

The procedure involves removing one or two cells from a four to eight-cell embryo. Using a process called polymerase chain reaction (PCR), scientists copy the cell's DNA, the genetic building material in all living things, and analyze it for normal or abnormal genes.

The embryo is not harmed by the cell removal and can develop into a healthy baby as the London case demonstrated, Hughes said.

The London team was led by Dr. Alan Handyside, Dr. Juan J. Tarin and Professor Robert M.L. Winston, M.D., of the Institute of Obstetrics and Gynaecology, Royal Postgraduate Medical School at Hammersmith Hospital.

Saga of the Spud
IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (AP) - Potatoes, the world's most widely grown vegetables, were discovered in 1532 by Spanish explorers in Northern Peru. They were first brought to America in 1719 by British colonists who settled in New England.

The Idaho potato, today's best seller, is actually descended from seed ancestors in Maine. The Russet Burbank variety was developed in 1872 by horticulturist Luther Burbank for taste, texture and resistance to blight.

It was found to thrive in Idaho's moist, volcanic soil and climate of hot days and cool nights.

Make pocket T-shirts

An old pair of denim jeans, no matter how tattered and torn, can be recycled to accessorize and enhance a back-to-school wardrobe. Try these fun ideas with your kids as they assist in creating, sewing and gluing one-of-a-kind denim pocket T-shirts.

Step 1: Cut out the back pocket of a pair of blue jeans, cutting along the edge where the pants layer meets the pocket. Cut very close to the pocket top-stitching without cutting the pocket. At the top opening of the pocket, allow an extra inch of fabric above the pocket.

Step 2: Pin the cut-out pocket to the front of a cotton T-shirt. Fold under the extra fabric at the top of the pocket and top-stitch in place. Then, top-stitch around the pocket on the sides and bottom, using the existing pocket top-stitching as a guide.

Step 3: Iron the T-shirt. Tuck an antique lace or floral hankie in the pocket and the shirt is ready to wear.

For a child-size shirt, cut out the mini pocket under the right front pocket of most jeans. Sew it to the small T-shirt as described above. Then, sew colorful buttons on the front neckline ribbing in the shirt. (this step will give your school-age child a lesson in sewing buttons!) Or, squeeze a puddle of fabric paint where you want to place a button. Press the button on the paint. Let the paint dry. For fun, pop a mini Troll doll in the pocket and you'll have a whimsical and colorful shirt to enjoy this fall.

For baby, sew a mini pocket to the middle of a one-piece cotton garment. Add color to the neckline by squeezing fabric paint in bottles to make dots and squiggles. Place a rattle or infant toy in the pocket for a perfect baby gift.

What do you pack in travel medicine bag?

When you're traveling, it's a good idea to take along an assortment of medicine that may come in handy.

If you are flying to your destination, pack medicines and your health insurance information in your carry-on luggage in case your checked luggage is lost or delayed. Make sure to pack enough medication to last your entire trip.

Some drugs increase your body's sensitivity to sunlight and heat. So if you are going to a warm weather destination, ask your pharmacist about prescription and over-the-counter medicines that may affect your sensitivity to sun exposure, recommends NARD, the national association representing independent retail pharmacy.

Store medicines away from direct sunlight because heat and humidity can alter their potency. The glove compartment of your car or a beach bag, where temperatures can climb to over 100 degrees, are not good storage places.

If you have a chronic or life-threatening condition, wear an identification bracelet with detailed medical information. If you are pregnant or have a chronic health condition, check with your physician or pharmacist about the potential effects of heat, sun and fatigue.

WHAT TO PACK

-Sunscreen- to prevent sunburn and the effects of chronic exposure to the sun's ultra-violet rays.

-Antifungal lotions and powders-for relief of heat rash, athlete's foot, jock itch and other fungal infections.

-Calamine lotion-for relief of itching and discomfort due to poison ivy, poison oak and insect bites.

-Tweezers and petroleum jelly-for removing splinters, insect stingers and ticks. Ticks should be loosened and suffocated with petroleum jelly before removing them from the skin. Be sure to wash the affected area thoroughly afterward.

-Hydrogen peroxide and cotton-for cleaning wounds.

-Bandages-for cuts, abrasions.

-Antihistamines-for relief of sneezing, running nose, watery eyes and itching caused by allergic reactions. Your physician or pharmacist can help you select an appropriate antihistamine.

-Analgesics-such as aspirin, ibuprofen or acetaminophen for relief of headaches, muscle aches and joint pain.

-Antibacterial-to apply to cuts and abrasions before applying bandages to prevent infection and promote healing.

Board approves summer institutes for teachers

"What goes around, comes around" may not be one of the scientifically embraced laws of physics, but Treasure Brasher, physics instructor at West Texas State University, is providing evidence in support of common-sense theory. Brasher, who teaches University students each fall and spring, has spent the past two summers teaching teachers, and a third summer of grant-supported institutes is in the works.

"Science isn't just something you read about," Brasher said. "It's a subject that demands active involvement. It's an adventure, and we, as teachers, have a responsibility to share that adventure with our students. The younger those students are when they're exposed to science, the more they will enjoy it, the more they will understand it and the better prepared they will be when they come to my classroom at West Texas State University."

Two Brasher-submitted grant proposals, "A Science Summer Institute for Primary Teachers" and "A Physics Summer Institute at West Texas State University" that will be co-directed by biology Professor David LaBric, were approved by the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board and will receive $51,782 and $31,703 respectively from the Eisenhower Mathematics and Science Program.

Both institutes, one for first, second and third-grade teachers and one for high school teachers, will be offered for four weeks in late June and early July and are virtually free to participants. The grants cover the costs of tuition, fees, classroom materials, child care and some travel, and the University provides complimentary residence hall rooms for long-distance travelers. Participants who successfully complete institute requirements will also receive at least three hours of undergraduate or graduate credit.

In the last three years, Brasher has successfully secured almost a quarter-of-a-million dollars in grants from federal and state funding agencies, including a $41,545 matching funds grant from the National Science Foundation that was used to upgrade the University's physics labs and to introduce computers in data acquisition and analysis procedures.

"Treasure is a person of ideas who has the knowledge, the skills and the energy to develop and implement her ideas," Dr. Horace Bailey, dean of the College of Agriculture, Nursing and Natural Sciences, said. "I don't have to ask Treasure to do things; she comes to me for support. She is a pleasure to work with and an asset to this University."

Brasher, a 1956 graduate of Dumas High School, received both her bachelor's and master's degrees from West Texas State University and with the exception of additional studies at Northern Arizona University and the University of Houston, has never strayed far from home. She first joined the WTSU faculty in 1961, taught in the Canyon Independent School District in 1962-63 and returned to the University campus from 1963-65 before beginning an uninterrupted 15-year stint at Canyon High School in 1965. She rejoined the WTSU faculty in 1980.

Saga of the Spud

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (AP) - Potatoes, the world's most widely grown vegetables, were discovered in 1532 by Spanish explorers in Northern Peru. They were first brought to America in 1719 by British colonists who settled in New England.

The Idaho potato, today's best seller, is actually descended from seed ancestors in Maine. The Russet Burbank variety was developed in 1872 by horticulturist Luther Burbank for taste, texture and resistance to blight.

It was found to thrive in Idaho's moist, volcanic soil and climate of hot days and cool nights.

Russet Burbanks now account for more than 95 percent of the state's potato crop, says the Idaho Potato Commission.

Hereford-Levelland game will be family affair

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor
Several things will be at stake Friday when the Herd travels to Levelland to take on the Lobos at 7:30 p.m.

Hereford would like to go into district play the next Friday with a winning record (the Herd stands 2-2) and on a three game winning roll.

Levelland would like to go into district play with just one win. The Lobos are 0-4, although they gave 4-0 Andrews a scare in their last game before finally losing 30-23.

Also at stake Friday are bragging rights at future Kuper-Malouf family get-togethers.

Mark Kuper is a starting defensive end for the Herd. Josh Malouf is the starting fullback for the Lobos. They are cousins, and they are on a collision course.

This is not just any football game. The outcome of this game could be a major topic of conversation at Thanksgiving and Christmas.

"All my relatives will be watching," Kuper said. "I don't know which side my family will sit on."

"It's kinda weird," Kuper said. "When we were little we used to go out and play on the football field and try to tackle each other."

Josh is the son of Tony Malouf, an all-state linebacker for Hereford in

Determination

Hereford tailback Petey Colvin looks determined to fend off Friendship safety Kendrick Hollie as the two approach the goal line in last Friday's game. Colvin scored on this play, scored another touchdown later and totaled 143 yards on the night to take Offensive Player of the Week honors. Cornerback Ronnie Gomez is the Defensive Player of the Week.

Brett goes 4-for-5 to reach 3,000-hit plateau

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) - George Brett always had a flair for the dramatic.

Nursing a sore shoulder, with the season dwindling down to the last five games, the Kansas City Royals star got the four hits he needed in spectacular fashion. He hit safely his first four times up Wednesday night to become the 18th major leaguer to reach 3,000 career hits.

He doubled in the first inning against the California Angels, singled in the third and singled again in the fifth, all against Julio Valera.

Then, with most of the fans in Anaheim Stadium already on their feet, he hit rookie reliever Tim Lincecum's first pitch to him in the seventh on a hard liner to the right side of the infield.

The ball hit the dirt just in front of second baseman Ken Oberkfell and took a big hop over his shoulder into right field and Brett reached the milestone.

The 39-year-old Brett, whose 19-year career has been marred by a string of various injuries, added his name to the 3,000-hit list that began this season with Pete Rose at the top and Roberto Clemente at the bottom.

Brett did it with the 59th game of his career in which he had four or more hits.

"I was a little misty-eyed," said Brett, who received a five-minute standing ovation and was presented the ball he hit and the first-base bag.

Heading into the game, he was worried that he might tear the strained muscle in his left shoulder, and the thought also was in the back of his mind that he was running out of time to get No. 3,000.

"It's a relief ... and I am the happiest man in the world right now," he said after going 4 for 5 in the Royals' 4-0 win over California.

"All I wanted to do was get one hit and not do any further damage to my shoulder. I was scared the first time I swung, but then I relaxed."

He laughed and added, "After 19 years, I'm finally learning that you don't have to swing hard to hit the ball."

Angels coach John Wathan, who played 10 years with Brett, then was the Kansas City manager for five more years, said Brett was most deserving.

"Not only has George had the talent to do what he did tonight, but he's had the work ethic, too," Wathan said. "He's always been one of the hardest workers in baseball."

Brett had missed the last two games because of his sore shoulder, and he hadn't had a hit since Saturday. He was 0 for 4 in Minneapolis on Sunday, when his shoulder first started bothering him.

He said the four hits Wednesday night came surprisingly easy.

Fortugno, a 30-year-old rookie left-hander, "threw a fastball right down the middle and I just swung real easy," Brett related. "But it was amazing how relaxed I was. I couldn't believe it. Usually, I envisioned what the 3,000th hit would be like and all the pressure and tension in my arms and all the nervousness in my body, but there was none tonight.

"I felt very, very relaxed all night."

He made the milestone three weeks to the day after Robin Yount reached 3,000 and 20 years to the day after Clemente achieved that figure.

Brett thus added one of the final jewels in a 19-year career that includes the distinction of being the only player to win batting titles in three decades: 1976, 1980, 1990.

Brett said he is undecided about playing next season. The Royals have a $2.5 million option for next season with a $1 million buyout, but haven't indicated their plans.

Brett, who married this year and has his first child due in the spring, says he will consult with family, friends and the Royals before making a decision.

Glavine, Brantley show mettle in duel

By JOHN NICHOLSON
Associated Press Writer

Jeff Brantley and Tom Glavine cleared some things up.

Brantley demonstrated his recent success as a starter wasn't a fluke and Glavine put concerns about his health entering the playoffs to rest in San Francisco's 1-0 victory over Atlanta on Wednesday night.

Brantley, making only his fourth start for the Giants after 52 relief appearances, pitched 5 1-3 innings to increase his scoreless streak to 20 1-3 innings.

"It's amazing to me he has pitched this well," San Francisco manager Roger Craig said. "He just fell into a bad rut as a reliever. I knew he could be a good starting pitcher, but I didn't know he could be this good."

Brantley (7-7) allowed three hits, struck out eight and walked two. He's 3-0 with an ERA of 0.44 in 20 2-3 innings as a starter.

Rod Beck pitched the final two innings for his 16th save as San Francisco snapped a two-game losing streak and ended Atlanta's three-game winning streak, one night after the Braves clinched the NL West title.

Glavine (20-8), who has lost five of his last six decisions, has been bothered by sore ribs for more than two months.

"It's frustrating anytime you lose

1-0, but to me that wasn't the important thing. What was important was to be totally healthy, and I was," Glavine said. "I felt like I got back to my old self. I was a lot sharper than I had been. It's a good feeling."

He allowed five hits, walked one and struck out four in seven innings.

"He pitched great. He was very impressive," Atlanta manager Bobby Cox said of Glavine. "I'm very satisfied."

Will Clark drove in the game's lone run in the first inning with a sacrifice fly.

Astros 5, Padres 4

In Houston, Eric Anthony hit a pair of two-run homers.

Anthony cut San Diego's lead to 4-2 with a homer in the fourth and completed the scoring with the game-winner in the eighth.

Jimmy Jones (9-6) got the final out in eighth for the victory and Doug Jones worked the ninth for his 35th save.

Mets 6, Phillies 2

In New York, Chico Walker drove in three runs with a pair of singles and five Philadelphia errors led to three unearned runs.

Sid Fernandez (14-11) allowed eight hits with five strikeouts and one walk.

Cubs 6, Pirates 0

In Chicago, Greg Maddux reached 20 victories for the first time in his career, scattering seven hits in his fourth shutout and ninth complete game.

Maddux (20-11), who struck out nine and walked two, joins Glavine as the only 20-game winners in the NL.

Reds 3, Dodgers 1

In Cincinnati, Tim Belcher allowed five hits in seven innings for his fourth straight victory and Willie Greene drove in two runs with a double and a single.

Belcher (15-14), who struck out seven, matched his career high in victories by beating his former teammates for the second time in four starts this season. Rob Dibble pitched the ninth for his 25th save.

Pedro Martinez (0-1), the younger brother of Dodgers starter Ramon Martinez, allowed four hits in six innings in his first start in the majors. He struck out seven.

Cardinals 3, Expos 2

In St. Louis, Ray Lankford singled in the winning run with one out in the 11th inning.

Bryn Smith (4-2) worked two scoreless innings for the victory.

Brewers blow chance as Jays lose

By The Associated Press

George Brett made history, Frank Viola missed it by an inning, and the Milwaukee Brewers missed a chance to take advantage of Toronto's history of bad final weeks.

Brett, coming back from a two-day layoff caused by a sore left shoulder, became the 18th player to reach 3,000 hits, going 4 for 5 Wednesday night as the Kansas City Royals beat the California Angels 4-0.

Further up the coast, the Brewers lost to the Seattle Mariners 7-4, missing a chance to close within 1 1/2 games of the Blue Jays, who were no-hit by Viola for eight innings before losing 1-0 to the Boston Red Sox.

Milwaukee, which has one game left with the Mariners and three with the Oakland Athletics, still believes it can win the AL East in the final pennant race of the season.

"It's a lost opportunity to pick up ground and it could be critical, but we'll have to see," Brewers manager Phil Garner said. "It's still not over."

Ken Griffey Jr., Tino Martinez and Bret Boone homered for Seattle, which ended a club-record 10-game winning streak by Chris Bosio (16-6). Milwaukee had won its previous seven overall.

Seattle took a 4-1 lead in the third on Boone's fourth homer and Griffey's 27th, a three-run drive. Griffey became the first player in Seattle history to drive in 100 runs in consecutive seasons.

Tim Leary (8-10) gave up three runs and eight hits in 5 2-3 innings and Rich DiLucia finished for his first major league save.

In other games, Kansas City beat California 4-0, Texas beat Oakland 7-3, Detroit beat Baltimore 4-2, New York beat Cleveland 4-2 and Chicago beat Minnesota 4-3.

Red Sox 1, Blue Jays 0

At SkyDome, even Viola's near no-hitter couldn't keep Toronto from lowering its magic number to two for its second straight AL East title and third in four seasons.

Viola (13-12) didn't allow a hit until Devon White's leadoff single to center in the ninth and finished with a one-hitter. Viola was pitching by his own request with only three days' rest against David Cone (4-3), who allowed a fourth-inning homer to John Valentin.

Rangers 7, Athletics 3

Jose Canseco played in the Oakland Coliseum for the first time since the Athletics traded him to Texas on Aug. 31, and hit a run-scoring single.

Canseco, traded for outfielder Ruben Sierra and pitchers Bobby Witt and Jeff Russell, singled with the bases loaded in a four-run seventh.

Jose Guzman (16-11) allowed three runs and six hits in seven innings and Matt Whiteside got five outs for his third save.

Juan Gonzalez hit his 41st homer, a two-run drive in the first off Bob Welch (11-7).

Tigers 4, Orioles 2

Detroit got six doubles and the Tigers turned four double plays in their final home game.

John Doherty (7-4) gave up two runs and nine hits in six innings and Mike Henneman got three outs for his 24th save. Bob Milacki (6-8) was tagged for four runs on seven hits - including six doubles - in six innings.

White Sox 4, Twins 3

Robin Ventura hit a tie-breaking home run off Scott Erickson (13-12) leading off the eighth at the Metrodome. Mike Dunne (2-0) was the winner and Roberto Hernandez got his 12th save.

Public Notice

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company has asked the Public Utility Commission of Texas (PUC) for approval to offer new optional call management services called Caller Identification Service (Caller ID) and Anonymous Call Rejection (ACR).

Caller ID is a new optional phone service which allows subscribers to see the phone number and/or name of most local calls before they answer the phone. Caller ID also allows the recording of the date, time, name and/or phone number of calls. Currently, Caller ID would work only on most local calls, not long distance calls. It would also require that a separate display unit be connected to the telephone. These units that attach to the telephone will be available from various retail vendors, including Southwestern Bell, at a cost starting at approximately $50.

Southwestern Bell is also proposing that all customers be able to "block," or stop their name/number from being transmitted and displayed on a Caller ID device, free of charge. You would have this option of "blocking" your name/number on each call free of charge. There would be no need to subscribe to this service. All customers would have this capability when Caller ID is introduced in their area.

If you want to block your name or number, you need only press *67 on your touch-tone pad (or dial 1167 from a rotary phone) before dialing the telephone number. The person you're calling would see displayed a message such as "private" or "anonymous" on their Caller ID display unit.

Southwestern Bell also proposes that qualified domestic violence and law enforcement groups have the option of free per-line blocking, or free per-call blocking.

Anonymous Call Rejection (ACR or "block the blocker") allows subscribers to automatically reject all calls that have been marked anonymous, or "blocked" by the person calling. It is not necessary to subscribe to Caller ID Name/Number to subscribe to ACR. With ACR, your telephone will not ring if the person calling you has "blocked" his/her name or number. The person calling whose identification is blocked will receive a message to hang up and call back with caller identification unblocked. Following are the proposed monthly rates for Caller ID and ACR.

Proposed Rates (monthly)*	Residence	Business
Calling Number only	$6.50	$ 8.50
Calling Name only	$6.50	$ 8.50
Calling Name & Number	$8.00	$12.00
Anonymous Call Rejection	$3/$1	$3/$1

* These rates are in addition to the initial installation charges and monthly basic service rate. For residence customers, installation charges are $2.70 per feature, with a maximum charge of $5.40. For business customers, the charges are $5.40 per feature, with a maximum charge of $10.75.

 Anonymous Call Rejection is $3 per month if purchased without Caller ID and is $1 per month when purchased with Caller ID Name or Number.

Seminoles should beat Miami

By RICK WARNER
AP Football Writer

Four times in the last five years, Miami has spoiled Florida State's chances of winning the national championship. The Seminoles would love to return the favor Saturday.

Once again, a national title could be at stake when the No. 2 Hurricanes meet the No. 3 Seminoles at the Orange Bowl.

The winner will become the leading challenger to top-ranked Washington, while the loser will probably be eliminated from the title chase.

"Whoever wins it has a chance to win the No. 1 prize," Florida State coach Bobby Bowden says. "The one that doesn't win, I don't think has a chance."

This year looks like payback time for Florida State, a 3-point underdog.

While the Seminoles have gotten better each week, Miami took a giant step backward in last week's 8-7 squeaker over Arizona. The Hurricanes gained only 2 yards rushing, lost star defensive end Rusty Medearis for the season with a knee injury, and barely kept alive their 47-game home winning streak when Arizona missed a 51-yard field goal on the final play.

Miami's running game has ground to a halt because of an inexperienced offensive line and fullback Stephen McGuire's slow recovery from knee surgery. McGuire has killed Florida State the past two years, gaining a career-high 176 yards in 1990 and rushing for 142 yards last season. He's only carried 15 times for 39 yards this season.

Miami's one edge could be at quarterback, where senior Gino Torretta has a lot more experience than Florida State's first-year starter, Charlie Ward. Torretta figures to be steadier, but Ward has shown bursts of brilliance in his first four games.

After last year's heartbreaking loss, Bowden joked that they would chisel "But he played Miami" on his tombstone. This year, there will be no need for gallows humor. ...

Don't be confused by bowl system

By RICK WARNER
AP Football Writer

Confused by the new bowl coalition? Think you need a Ph.D. in math, a dozen college football magazines and a pocket computer to figure it out?

Well, stop worrying.

"The bottom line is simple," Fiesta Bowl director John Junker said. "Every year we're going to get the best teams and the best matchups possible in what we think are the best bowls."

Junker does admit it will take time for fans to understand all the fine points of the coalition, which includes all the major bowls except the Rose.

"It's a familiarization process," Junker said Wednesday in a conference call from Chicago, where he was meeting with the heads of the Cotton, Sugar and Orange bowls to discuss a marketing plan for the coalition.

"I'm a basketball fan, but I'm not sure I can explain how they come up with all the pairings for the NCAA tournament," he said. "It takes time for people to understand something new."

To speed the process, coalition members want to get a bowl selection show on ESPN or one of the three big broadcast networks. It would be similar to the popular NCAA basketball selection show on CBS.

"We'd like to do something this year," Orange Bowl director Steve Hatchell said. "I think there would be a lot of interest in it."

Confirming recent reports, all the bowl executives agreed that the coalition contract permits the most sought-after schools to pass up invitations for "economic reasons" - in other words, more money from another bowl.

But they denied the provision would favor the Fiesta, the only major bowl with two at-large slots.

"It's not just the Fiesta," Sugar Bowl director Mickey Holmes said when asked about bowls boosting their payouts. "We could do it, the Cotton could do it and the Orange could do it."

Despite the economics clause, Holmes said he doesn't expect any bidding wars or the kind of backroom deals that plagued the old bowl selection system.

"It's a lot different situation than in the past, where you kept your cards hidden in your vest pocket," he said. "Now it's a partnership. We're all in this together, so there's going to be full disclosure."

Because it has two at-large berths, the Fiesta has the best shot at a No. 1 vs. No. 2 game on Jan. 1. But it's not impossible for the Cotton, Sugar or Orange to get the two top teams, even though one of their bids automatically goes to a conference winner.

If, for instance, Texas A&M wins the Southwest Conference and is ranked No. 2, the Aggies could be matched against No. 1 Washington in the Cotton Bowl (if the Huskies tie UCLA for the Pac-10 title and can't go to the Rose because of the tiebreaker system.)

Under that scenario, the Fiesta would officially get first crack at Washington. But Junker indicated he would waive his pick to set up a 1-2 game in the Cotton.

"We'd do what's best for college football," he said. "We'd let our conscience be our guide and do the right thing."

Coalition officials said they will use The Associated Press writers' poll to determine the selection order for the bowls. The American Football Coaches Association lobbied the coalition to use the USA Today-CNN coaches' poll.

"Since this is our first year, we want to make it as clear-cut as we can," Hatchell said. "We just think it's simpler to use the AP poll this year."

Cougars leaving bad loss in past

HOUSTON (AP) - Houston coach John Jenkins says his team is ready to put last week's 61-7 loss to No. 4 Michigan behind them and look for a better game against Southwestern Louisiana.

"It's over with," Jenkins said. "Shovel it up and throw it over your shoulder and move on. They had the whole plane ride back to feel sorry for themselves. I told them 'I won't look back if you won't.'"

A week after being accused of running up the score with a last second touchdown pass against Illinois, the Cougars were embarrassed by the Wolverines before 105,000 fans in Michigan Stadium. The Cougars play Southwestern Louisiana, which is 2-2, Saturday night at Rice Stadium.

"It's hard to put something like that out of your mind," kicker Trace Craft said. "Everybody was pretty upset. I thought we had the potential to get up there and play. Everybody's got to deal with it in their own way."

It's harder for senior guard Jeff Tait, who grew up in Detroit. "It probably hurt me more, losing to a team you wanted to play for growing up," Tait said. "I wanted to beat them so bad."

Craft, a walk-on from Weatherford, went four for four on field goals to start the season but he missed a 30-yarder in his only attempt at Michigan.

Public Notice

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, in accordance with the rules of the Public Utility Commission of Texas (PUC), hereby gives notice of the Company's intent to implement a new schedule of telephone rates in Texas for optional Custom Calling Services and Touch-tone service, effective March 15, 1993, unless otherwise determined by the PUC.

These proposed rates will not increase or decrease the Company's overall revenues; the net effect will be neutral to the Company's annual revenues.

The Company proposes to decrease the rates for Touch-tone service for residential customers from $1.00 to 68 cents, and also to reduce the Touch-tone rates for business customers from $1.75 to $1.70. In addition, the Touch-tone rates for business PBX trunks will be reduced from $3.15 to $2.18.

This proposal to decrease the rates for Touch-tone service does not change the commitment that the Company made in the Docket No. 8585 Stipulation to reduce the rates for Touch-tone service in 1993.

The Custom Calling Services affected by the Company's application are optional telephone service arrangements that provide the following features: Call Waiting, Call Forwarding, Three Way Calling, Speed Calling-8 and Speed Calling-30. Following are the feature combinations and their current and proposed rates.

One Feature per line	Residence		Business
	Current Rate	Proposed Rate	Current Rate	Proposed Rate
Call Waiting	$2.10	$2.85	$2.65	$3.25
Call Forwarding	2.10	2.10	2.65	3.50
3-Way Calling	2.10	2.10	2.65	2.50
Speed Call-8	2.10	2.10	2.65	2.50
Two Features per line
Call Waiting, Call Forwarding	3.75	4.25	4.75	6.00

Call Waiting, Speed Calling-8	3.70	4.25	4.75	4.75
Call Forwarding, 3-Way Calling	3.70	3.50	4.80	5.00
Call Forwarding, Speed Calling-8	3.70	3.50	4.75	5.00
3-Way Calling, Speed Calling-8	3.70	3.50	4.75	4.00
Three Features per line
Call Waiting, Call Forwarding and 3-Way Calling	5.30	5.65	6.90	7.50
Call Waiting, Call Forwarding and Speed Calling-8	5.30	5.65	6.90	7.50
Call Waiting, 3-Way Calling and Speed Calling-8	5.30	5.65	6.90	6.25
Call Forwarding, 3-Way Calling and Speed Calling-8	5.30	4.90	6.90	6.50
Four Features per line
Call Waiting, Call Forwarding, 3-Way Calling, Speed Calling-8	6.90	7.05	9.00	9.00
Speed Calling - 30 code capacity	3.20	3.20	4.25	3.20

Most of the Company's residence and business customers who subscribe to Custom Calling Features and Touch-tone service will be affected by the proposed rate restructuring.

It is expected that the restructuring of Custom Calling Features will result in a rate increase for approximately 2.9 million residence customers and 280,000 business customers. The reduction in rates for certain Custom Calling Services and Touch-tone Service will affect approximately 4.3 million residence customers and 1.7 million business customers.

This rate restructuring is expected to have a "revenue-neutral" effect on the Company's annual revenues. The proposed rate restructuring of Custom Calling Services will increase the Company's annual revenues by $19.8 million; while the reduction in Touch-tone rates will decrease the Company's annual revenues by $19.8 million.

This proceeding has been designated Docket No. 11382. Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in this proceeding should notify the PUC as soon as possible. The deadline to intervene is October 30, 1992. A request to intervene, participate or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information may also be obtained by calling the PUC Public Information Office at (512) 458-0258 or (512) 458-0221, teletypewriter for the deaf.

HERD

1967. Josh, a senior, is described by Herd coach Danny Haney as a "bruiser." He ran 11 times for 31 yards in last year's meeting, a 17-7 win for Levelland.

Kuper is a junior playing his first year of varsity, so he's got his work cut out for him in the family battle. He's ready, he said.

"He's going to be running right at me and I'm planning on shutting it down," Kuper said. "He's a stout little sucker, and he'll be coming right at me. When it's over I'm going to shake his hand and say, 'Well, you lost.' That way, at family reunions, I'll be able to talk about it forever."

Despite Levelland's record, Kuper and his defensive mates will have quite a challenge Friday. While Malouf is the thunder in the Lobos' offense, running back Chris Smith and receiver Tommy Howry provide the lightning.

"They throw the ball," Haney said of Levelland's offensive philosophy. "They've run 182 plays, and 82 have been passes. They spread you all over the field and try to get you in trouble, throwing the ball deep most of the time."

Quarterback Kelly Ramsey has thrown for 192 yards per game--by far the most of anyone in the Lubbock area. Howry has 17 catches for 374 yards.

While the offense has scored two touchdowns per game, it has also produced touchdowns for the opponents. Randall returned an interception 65 yards for a score last week. Two weeks ago, Coronado returned two interceptions for touchdowns: a 100-yarder and a 75-yarder.

Haney said that while the defense hasn't played very well, the interception returns haven't helped. Levelland has given up 116 points in four games.

Injury report: Rover Joel Gaytan will return this week from a knee injury after missing several games. Two players are out for the Levelland game: cornerback Michael Ramirez and linebacker Gabriel Medrano.

Players of the Week: Not only is rugging back Pety Colvin the team's offensive player of the week--he's also the Amarillo Globe-News' Player of the Week for Class 4A.

Colvin ran 16 times against Frenship for 143 yards and two touchdowns. His third straight 100-yard performance boosted his season total to 382 yards.

Cornerback Ronnie Gomez is the defensive player of the week. He intercepted a pass against Frenship, a week after getting two against Monterey.

The junior varsity player of the week is offensive tackle Ricky Mendez. For the sophomores, it is tailback Richard Hicks.

Free-agent Slaughter joins Oilers

HOUSTON (AP) - Webster Slaughter is ready to start catching - and catching up - with the Houston Oilers.

The former Cleveland Pro Bowl wide receiver went through his first workout with the Oilers Wednesday and spent most of the drill chatting with wide receivers coach Chris Palmer.

"I probably need to spend a couple of nights at his house," Slaughter said. "That won't happen but I do have a lot to learn. When I was with the Browns I always thought it would be nice to run this offense."

Slaughter is one of four players who were given temporary status as unrestricted free agents last week and the Oilers quickly took advantage of his status to give him a two-year contract worth a reported $2.2 million.

He expects to contribute quickly but doesn't expect to make the Oilers instant Super Bowl favorites.

"I don't think anyone expects more of me than I expect of myself," Slaughter said. "They've got some big receivers here and I think I can just add to that. I'm not going to push them over the top."

The Browns drafted Slaughter in 1986 and he earned Pro Bowl status in 1989 when he caught 65 passes for 1,236 yards.

"After playing against the Oilers for so long, it was weird getting my helmet and seeing that big derrick on the side," Slaughter said.

Oilers cornerback Cris Dishman said he's glad he doesn't have to defend against Slaughter anymore.

"I like his attitude, he's got a defensive back's mentality," Dishman said. "You hit him and even if it stings him, he'll just up and spin the ball on the ground. I like that."

Child safety hints

Every month, more than 8,000 children ages 14 and under die as a result of accidents, many of which could have been prevented. Health care costs for childhood injuries are estimated at $7.5 billion a year.

The American Academy of Pediatrics is taking advantage of October's Child Health Month to urge you to follow these simple safety precautions.

-Travel safely with your child, making sure he rides in an age-appropriate safety seat anytime he's in a motor vehicle. Although all states now require the use of infant safety seats, many parents neglect to use them or use them incorrectly.

-Teach your child to wear a safety helmet when riding her bike. Eighty-five percent of bike accident deaths could be prevented if young cyclists wore helmets, yet only five percent do.

-Don't let any children swim unsupervised and teach your child basic water safety rules.

-Child-proof your home. Keep unsafe products out of children's reach, lower your water heater's temperature to 120 degrees F. to avoid burns, cover unused electrical outlets and use safety gates at staircases.

-Know basic infant and child first aid.

NEW YORK (AP) - Demonstrators accusing H. Norman Schwarzkopf of war crimes disrupted a book-signing appearance by the retired Army general.

The former Desert Storm commander said Tuesday the right to stage such protests is "what makes this country great."

About 50 demonstrators carried signs and chanted slogans outside the book store, claiming the Gulf War was fought to enrich oil companies and accusing Schwarzkopf of ordering bombing raids that killed 46,000 Iraqi children.

The protesters shouted, "Murderer!" and accused Schwarzkopf of accepting "$5 million in blood money" to write his memoirs.

Police hustled the protesters from the store and took three into custody. They were later released.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: I never gave osteoporosis a thought until over a month ago. I had pains in the center of my back from being injured when I fainted. They did go away for several months. Recently I had spinal X-rays, bone density tests and a bone scan of several vertebrae. The diagnosis was osteoporosis in the upper spine.

I'm only 64 and have always had two to three or more glasses of 1 percent milk a day, no alcohol, no coffee or caffeine. I have eaten cheese and plenty of calcium-rich food most of my life. I opted to not take estrogen during the menopause. That was about 12 years ago. I understand the majority of the bone loss is in the first 10 years after the menopause.

I tried shots of Calcimar, but they made me really sick. I am starting estrogen replacement, Estrace and Provera, and two tablets of 500 mg calcium with vitamin D. So far, no bones have been broken. I weigh 120 pounds, am 5 feet 6 inches and have small bones.

I am really discouraged with the pain in my back and by the prognosis I keep reading in articles. I know it is not the end of the world, but I feel like some fragile piece of china waiting to break. Give me a good word!

DEAR READER: It is too bad osteoporosis doesn't hurt when it first starts. That would alert a person to get early treatment. Pain usually occurs when a vertebra collapses, which can happen without warning. Such pain should disappear, or if there is some reason for compression of nerves, that may be able to be corrected.

It is likely that you can stop the progression of osteoporosis. Taking estrogen is a good idea. It is true — and I wish more women realized this — that even a very high calcium intake will not always prevent osteoporosis. That is why combinations of medicines are usually advisable.

A newer medicine, etidronate (Didronel), has been reported to prevent bone loss from the vertebrae, but not the wrist and hip. Now there are some questions about its long-term effects. I have discussed it and other medications in Special Report 98, Understanding Osteoporosis (Dissolving Bones), which I'm sending you. Share it with your doctor. Others who want this report can send $3 with a long, stamped (52 cents), self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/98, P.O. Box 5537, Riverton, NJ 08077. Your outlook should be good with estrogen replacement, adequate calcium intake and a program for what you can and should not do.

DEAR DR. LAMB: My question is one I'm sure many women like myself would like to ask. I had my tubes tied at age 21. I am now engaged to be married. My fiancé and I would like to have a child some day. Is there any way for me to get pregnant outside the conventional way. Money is no object. We will happily accept any alternative.

DEAR READER: You could check into whether or not you could have your tubes reconnected. That is often possible today with microsurgery. Depending on how much of the tubes was damaged, there is a 50 percent chance of reversing the surgery.

The other option is in vitro fertilization. Since your ovaries should still be working, ova could be harvested within your abdominal cavity, placed in a dish and then fertilized by your husband's sperm. The fertilized ova can then be implanted into your uterus. This procedure gets around the mechanical blockage that occurred when you had your tubes tied.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: "Steve" and I were married four years ago, before our marriage, we made all the right decisions--we finished school. I didn't get pregnant and we had a good time.

I went to a small college on a scholarship and worked two jobs to pay my bills. Steve felt it necessary to attend a more prestigious university. He received a few hundred dollars in grants, took out a large student loan and worked part time. He moved into a fraternity house, which cost another few thousand dollars. After college, he went to law school.

We had an elaborate wedding and a beautiful honeymoon in the Orient. NO expense was spared. I felt that after all the years of sacrificing, we deserved to begin our life together in style.

One year later, I found out that Steve and his parents had financed the greater part of his education through credit cards and the debt was astronomical. He said it never occurred to him to tell me about it and admitted he didn't know exactly how much it was. He thought he could handle it.

That was three years ago, but I still feel resentment. I have tried all my life to make practical decisions and assumed I'd met a man who did the same. Steve is the kindest person I've ever known, and he loves me dearly, but I'm having a hard time forgiving him. I hate owing money, and it will be years before we can pay off this enormous debt.

I feel overwhelmed and have no enthusiasm for the future. Please give me some advice that will help me get over this.--No Name, No City

DEAR N.N.: Granted, Steve should have told you about the debt before you married him, but he didn't. So, are you are going to hang on to the anger and let it ruin your life together? I hope not.

Thousands of other couples who are saddled with heavy debt from financing a college education pay it off eventually and so will you. Stop picking at this wound or it will never heal. Think positively about your future together so you can be a helpmate instead of a millstone.

Planning a wedding? What's right? What's wrong? "The Ann Landers Guide for Brides" will relieve your anxiety. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.65 (this includes postage and handling) to: Brides c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Southwest Airlines offers free tickets

Southwest Airlines will reunite hundreds of senior citizens, 65 years of age or older, who demonstrate a strong economic need for assistance, with family and friends this holiday season by awarding complimentary tickets through its 13th annual "Home For The Holidays" program which kicks off this week.

Applications are available to area seniors who are 65 years or older and who cannot afford to travel home. They can be picked up at senior centers or by calling the Panhandle Area Agency on Aging (PAAA) in Amarillo at 372-3381 or toll free outside of Amarillo at 800-642-6008. The PAAA has joined forces with Southwest Airlines to administer the program. Completed applications must be received at the PAAA by October 20, 1992 for consideration.

A limited number of applications per city from each of 34 cities served by Southwest will be selected to receive a complimentary roundtrip ticket based on their need for economic assistance and reason for travel. Past recipients may apply and only one application per person will be considered. Ground transportation is not provided. Ground transportation to or from an airport served by Southwest Airlines is also not provided.

Each year, Southwest Airlines works in conjunction with local community organizations systemwide to distribute applications and select senior recipients.

Revolutionary Soldier

BOSTON (AP) - British Gen. Thomas Gage (1721-1787) ordered the first military action of the Revolutionary War in 1775.

As governor of Massachusetts, he commanded troops that were fired on by rebels at Lexington and Concord. He then unsuccessfully directed the Battle of Bunker Hill, which led to his recall.

Born in Sussex, Gage entered the British army in 1741, came to America in 1755, fought Indian forces at Fort Duquesne and from 1763 to 1772 was British commander in chief in North America.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - Pat Alger, whose country hits include Garth Brooks' "Unanswered Prayers" and "The Thunder Rolls," has been named songwriter of the year by the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers.

Alger's other songwriting credits include Kathy Mattea's "A Few Good Things Remain," Hal Ketchum's "Small Town Saturday Night" and Don Williams' "True Love."

ASCAP named "Don't Rock the Jukebox," written and sung by Alan Jackson, country song of the year.

The awards were announced Monday at ASCAP's 30th annual country awards dinner. ASCAP collects royalties for songwriters.

NEW YORK (AP) - Guardian Angels founder Curtis Sliwa has gone into the hospital for surgery to close two of the five bullet wounds he suffered when he was shot in a cab three months ago, his wife says.

"His mental state has been tough," Lisa Sliwa said Monday. "He has been walking around with the type of injuries a lot of people would be in bed for."

She said her husband will undergo surgery at Bellevue Hospital on Thursday.

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) - Michael Jackson was met by thousands of screaming fans as he arrived for what is billed as the biggest show ever by a Western pop star in the formerly Communist nation.

Jackson was to take his "Dangerous" world tour to Bucharest's 62,000-seat National Stadium today. Military parades under dictator Nicolae Ceausescu were once held in the stadium.

During his four-day stay, Jackson is scheduled to meet President Ion Iliescu and visit orphanages. Promoters say all concert proceeds will benefit Romania's 100,000 or so orphans.

Jackson, wearing sunglasses, a black hat and tight pants, was greeted by about 3,000 cheering, sign-waving fans at Otopeni Airport on Monday. He waved to them and left in a black limousine.

"I'm so happy I saw Michael," said 17-year-old Corina Ardeleanu. "I never thought I would live long enough to see him."

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) - J.Z. Knight, the New Age spiritualist who claims to be regularly in touch with a 35,000-year-old warrior named Ramtha, says she once "channeled" Jesus Christ.

Mrs. Knight, who is being sued by her former husband for a bigger divorce settlement, said Monday under questioning by his lawyers that she made contact with Jesus at a Christmas event in 1983.

Jeff Knight is seeking to increase the $120,000 he settled for in his 1989 divorce from Mrs. Knight, who attracted hundreds of followers and built a multimillion-dollar empire from her Ramtha books, tapes and seminars.

Knight has claimed he was duped into accepting a paltry settlement. Mrs. Knight denied hiding money from him.

Hints from Heloise

Q. I have four throw rugs which the backing has come off of in a number of places. This causes the rug to wrinkle in the bare areas. Is there anything I can purchase to apply to the back of the rugs? — Eleanor Quayle, Hammond, Ind.

A. Yes, there is a product you can buy. It's available at many hardware and carpet stores and is made specifically to replace the backing on rubber-backed rugs. However, it is expensive, so be prepared. It might just be cheaper to replace the rugs.

Q. I've just moved into my first new home, and in several areas I plan to hang groups of pictures. I'm afraid to start this project for fear I'll put too many nail holes in the wall before I get the grouping right. Help! Do you have a "Heloise" hint to make this easier? — Lisa M., Quincy, Mass.

A. Sure do, and it's easy. Sometimes when hanging pictures in a grouping, it is hard to tell how they will look, so try this to help the project go smoothly. Trace an outline of each picture on brown paper or freezer paper and cut each one out. Begin hanging the cutouts on the wall using straight pins or small pieces of tape to hold them in place. When you are happy with the results, replace the paper cutouts with the actual pictures.

Q. I have a 4-month-old daughter spits up often, so I carry a small pump spray bottle (from a trial size of hair spray) filled with baking soda and water in her diaper bag. I use this to spray on her clothes to deodorize them when she spits up. This saves on changing clothes and keeps my baby smelling nice. — Sherri Goodwin, Dover, N.H.

A. Every mother will thank you for sharing this hint! Just another great use for baking soda. I'm sending you a copy of my pamphlet, Heloise's Best Baking Soda Hints. It's just chock-full of money-saving uses for baking soda. Anyone else who wants a copy should send $2 and a self-addressed, stamped (52 cents), business-size envelope to Heloise/Baking Soda #2, PO Box 795001, San Antonio TX 78279-5001. — Heloise

Q. My husband took a pretty white picture frame, removed the glass and backed it with gold velvet material.

A. I hung it in my bedroom to hold all my pretty pi.s. I put corsage pins on the bottom and hang necklaces on them. It is pretty and keeps my pins and necklaces neat and handy. — Jane Litchfield, Ft. Myers Beach, Fla.

Q. This may sound like a stupid question, but how can I remove chewing gum from the bottom of my son's shoes? — Ricky's Mom, Montgomery, Ala.

A. Try a spray lubricating oil or petroleum-based laundry pre-wash spray. Spray it on the gum and wait a couple of minutes. It should come right off when you rub it with a piece of nylon net or a paper towel. — Heloise

OUTDOOR CANDLE HOLDERS

Dear Heloise: Reuse tuna cans as candle holders for outside table candles.

Just spray paint a clean tuna can to match your outdoor furniture and insert a candle when dry. It will protect the tables from dripping candle wax. — Pamela Rathe, Lacombe, La.

COLLECTING ALUMINUM CANS

Dear Heloise: I am a college student, and my roommate and I recycle aluminum cans, newspapers, glass and plastic. My hint, however, only concerns aluminum cans.

My roommate and I, like most people who recycle cans, save them up until there are enough to bother with. Well, the left-over soda in the cans attracts ants, so when I finish a can, I rinse it out and set it in the dish drainer to dry.

It cuts down not only the number of ants but also the mess from leaky cans, and it is really not that much trouble. But when it comes down to it, nothing is too much trouble if it will help our planet. — Laura Day, College Station, Texas

Collar a menswear look effortlessly

Women who want a menswear look without a lot of bother might try a coat dress. It's equal parts jacket and dress, masculine yet feminine and easy to wear. But don't take it to great lengths. It has to clear the knee, or you'll risk looking frumpy.

A coat dress gives you the structure and clean silhouette of a suit, yet it's a one-piece alternative that offers a simple look for most any body type," says Susan Marfino, a dress buyer for Brooks Brothers in New York.

Marfino says a best-selling style is a double-breasted knee-length navy wool gabardine with gold buttons and peak lapels. The store stocks a similar style in black and white wool houndstooth. In the pipeline is a charcoal flannel pinstripe and, for chaise, an ivory coat dress. They're $250 each.

Kenar's coat dresses come in menswear fabrics like gangster stripes and glen plaid or checks. "But," says designer Lynne Ozar, "there's always a twist like a softer neckline or tulip hemline or fitted silhouette, so they're still sexy."

She says Kenar's best-seller is single-breasted and close to the body. In rayon glen plaid with black rayon crepe collar, it's about $168 at Bloomingdale's, I. Magnin, Neiman Marcus and Saks.

One of the most enthusiastic proponents of coat dressing is Francine Browner, a West Coast designer. She says the coat dress has been a top seller since last spring.

"We call it investment dressing because it's the new cover-up, a key wardrobe item that gives you lots of looks," she says. "You can wear it as a dress or even over pants or a catsuit because basically a coat dress is nothing more than a long jacket."

Browner's basic style is single-breasted polyester and rayon gabardine in colors such as black, ivory, muted glen plaid and a gray chalk stripe. They're available with a removable dickey or chiffon or leopard tie. About $84 at JC Penney, Fashion Bar and Jacobson's.

"Wear it to the office with a turtleneck and opaques and flats," she says. "And for evening switch to a pearl choker, black sheer stockings and high heels. It's a desk-to-date item."

One of the more popular day-to-evening looks is a black satin-backed crepe tuxedo coat dress. Brooks Brothers has one for $295. Evan-Picone's version is about $220 at Foley's, Hecht's, Lord & Taylor, Rich's and Saks Fifth Avenue.

"It works as a holiday dress, but you can also get away with wearing it to the office with plain pearl earrings and a scarf," says Susan King-Barone of Evan-Picone in New York.

St. John knits says the nice thing about their coat dresses is that they require very little accessorizing.

"Usually they have quite a bit of detailing on their own," says Kelly Gray, St. John's vice president in Irvine, Calif. "You just slip on the dress and shoes, and your look is complete."

A wool and rayon double-breasted coat dress in navy or red with gold-trimmed epaulets and goldtone buttons is $680 in December at St. John boutiques, Saks and Neiman Marcus.

Another take on the menswear look is the vest dress. At Ralph Lauren's fall runway show, the look was simply an elongated vest that hugged the thigh. A black and gray chalkstripe wool and cashmere vest dress is $800 at Ralph Lauren boutiques. Pair it with his striped cotton shirt with white collar and cuffs, $275.

For more cover-up, try a jumper. At Brooks Brothers, they're long and lean in gray wool flannel or navy pinstripe with a self belt, $145.

Laundry has a mid-belt jumper in gray pinstripes that buttons up the side and is belted in faux crocodile, $146 at Saks Fifth Avenue. Add the label's gray striped cotton shirt with paisley tie, $68, and the boardroom awaits.
