Interest soaring in U.S. elections

NEW YORK (AP) - After all the talk about how much American voters hate politics, the surprise of this election year may be how much they care.

By several measures of voter interest, people are keeping a much closer watch on the presidential campaign than they did four years ago.

Voter registration rolls are up. The presidential debates were TV ratings winners. Millions of people are even tuning in for Ross Perot's bar-charts-and-bad-news infomercials.

"There are lots of indications of higher interest this year," said Curtis Gans, director of the Center for the Study of the American Electorate. "There's a lot of fear and a little anger out there."

"The 1988 campaign left Americans with ashes in their mouths over the state of their political process," wrote political reporter E.J. Dionne Jr. in his book, "Why Americans Hate Politics." "It had been a brutish, backward-looking, divisive campaign. Most of the issues Americans really cared about had gone largely undiscussed... and the voters hated what they saw."

Voters may not be happy by what they see this year, but by most accounts the 1992 campaign has been far more issues-oriented and the electorate seems to be more engaged than in 1988.

In a CBS News poll conducted after the first presidential debate, 94 percent said they were paying at least some attention to the campaign, up from 75 percent at about the same point in 1988.

And the debates themselves were a gauge of interest. More than 90 million people tuned in to the final debate Monday night, compared with 74 million viewers for the highest-rated debate in 1988.

The central reason interest is higher this year - at least the one reason that most political analysts agree on - is the state of the economy.

"Any time you have a recession going on for three years, you're going to have a temporary increase in voter interest," said Gans, who stressed "temporary." His organization has charted a modest increase in voter registration nationwide so far this year, he said.

Andy Foster, executive director of the Illinois Republican Party, said both parties in Illinois have had successful voter registration drives this year. He said people believe the next president "is going to make a real difference to me and my wallet... It's more of a personal vote this time."

People were angry in 1988, and they're still angry this year. But there have been more outlets for their anger this time. Ross Perot provided one outlet, while Bill Clinton and even President Bush have harped constantly on the need for change.

Prescriptions cost less in Canada than in U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Drug companies sell the same medicines for an average of 32 percent more in the United States than in Canada, according to a congressional study.

The study of frequently prescribed drugs found that the price disparity did not result from differences in the cost of developing, preparing or marketing them. Rather, the Canadian bargains resulted from greater price regulation there and volume buying by the government to squeeze a better deal out of the manufacturers.

Congress' investigative arm, the General Accounting Office, studied manufacturers' prices for 121 medicines and found that while a few were cheaper in the United States most were substantially more expensive here.

The largest discrepancy, a 967 percent price difference, was for Isordil, a drug made by Wyeth-Ayerst Laboratories for the control of angina.

Birth control pills, antidepressants, sedatives, antibiotics, pain relievers and other preparations were among those that cost more.

Among other drugs showing the greatest pricing discrepancies were Ativan, an anti-anxiety drug made by Wyeth that cost 702 percent more in the United States; Reglan, a gastrointestinal drug made by A.H. Robins Co. that was 545 percent more; McNeil Pharmaceutical's Tylenol with codeine, 484 percent more; and Valium, made by Roche Biomedical Laboratories, 434 percent more.

The drug industry contends its prices and profits are justified because large investments are needed to get new drugs to market. Development costs are high because many compounds are tested before effective ones are found.

But Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on health and the environment, said the study raises the possibility drug companies are reaping excessive profits from American consumers.

GAO noted that U.S. drug makers generally are more profitable than other U.S. manufacturing companies.

"Once again, the United States is behind the rest of the world in providing affordable health care to our people," said Waxman, who requested the study and released it Wednesday.

Drug costs much higher in US than Canada for same goods.

The study shows that most medicines cost at least twice as much in the United States than in Canada. Some are much more: for instance, Tylenol with codeine is 740% more expensive in the U.S. than in Canada.

The study did not directly address retail prices paid by consumers. But one official involved in the research, Stephen W. Schondelmeyer of the University of Minnesota, estimated that price differences at the retail level would be about 25 percent.

"There's a pretty high correlation" between wholesale and retail price differences, he said.

A trade group, the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association, called the GAO report misleading.

Turrentines wake up NYC

Now, people in New York, and even nationwide, know about George Turrentine's ticket for failure to fasten his seat belt.

Turrentine, whose wife, Johnnie, is the Deaf Smith County justice of the peace, was given the ticket Monday by a Texas Highway Patrol trooper as he hurried to the site of an overturned grain truck.

After the story was filed Wednesday on Associated Press by The Brand, it was picked up by a New York newspaper and hosts of an early-morning radio show.

"Our phone rang at 4:40 a.m. today," Judge Turrentine said Thursday. "I can't even remember who they said was calling."

The wake-up call was to alert the Turrentines that they would be on the air in about 30 minutes.

"They called back at 5:15 and talked to us, probably two or three minutes each," said the justice of the peace.

She said she understood the talk show hosts to say the story of the seat belt ticket and the $50 fine she will levy on her husband had appeared in the New York Post.

The Turrentines recounted their versions of the tale and the interview on the national radio network ended when George Turrentine was asked, "how is it in Texas?"

"It's pretty early," responded the Deaf Smith County farmer.

Pantex, the nation's primary assembly and disassembly plant for nuclear armament, had been designated earlier by federal officials as the destination for plutonium from

Please don't forget to take time to care! The United Way campaign is still underway here and we need to reach our goal in helping fund the worthwhile agencies in our county.

Forty-five percent of those interviewed from the TV and movie world have no religious affiliation. With the trash they put into some of the shows and films, that figure should come as no surprise. In the real world, only four percent in the U.S. admit to no religious ties.

So, we urge businesses and their employees to take time to care, make a pledge to the United Way and let's go over the top this year!

Concerning homosexuality, 75 percent of all Americans believe in proper roles for men and women, but in Hollywood, only 20 percent view homosexual acts in a negative manner.

Tech blacks blast KKK

LUBBOCK (AP) - A group of black students have complained about a fraternity's reported portrayal at a party of Ku Klux Klan Grand Dragon with two members posing as blacks kneeling at his feet.

Sonya Myles, Tech's 1992 homecoming queen and president of black sorority Alpha Kappa Alpha, said the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity and the Fashion Board held a party on Oct. 9.

Ms. Myles, who said she has seen photographs of the episode, said the group allegedly ridiculed blacks by pretending to have large lips, wearing Afro wigs and painting their faces black.

A complaint was filed by Ms. Myles with the Dean of Students office on Oct. 15, the day after she was told of the party, Ms. Myles said Wednesday.

"I went to Party Time Photos and saw pictures of people running around with Afro wigs and having the physical appearance of blacks," she said. "There also was a photograph that had a picture of a KKK member with two whites who were dressed as blacks at his feet."

"It was totally atrocious," she told the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal. The pictures, she said, also included pictures of Hispanics, portraying them as gang members.

Pi Kappa Alpha president Todd Ross refused comment on the alleged incident, the newspaper reported today.

But he said in a prepared statement that at a fraternity party on Oct. 9, two members were thought to be dressed in a manner offensive to minorities and were asked to leave.

The fraternity, the statement said, "does not participate in, promote or condone behavior that discriminates against minorities."

The statement added that two members "sanctioned" by the chapter independent of an investigation by Tech or any other group.

"The Epsilon Gamma chapter of Pi Kappa Alpha has taken measures to ensure the same kind of behavior does not recur," the statement said. "The chapter and its members sincerely regret that the incident occurred and offer their apologies to the Texas Tech University community and the groups affected by the incident."

Community service has been suggested as discipline for the fraternity, but that punishment "is not going to suffice by any means," Ms. Myles said.

"We have a campus of over 24,000 people, and this is 1992," she said. "Anything like this that can go on is atrocious. Something more should be done than just a slap on the hand."

"In my opinion, with people justifying the Grand Dragon - that is justification for them being thrown off the campus completely."

Ms. Myles said the apology does not appease angry black students.

"They (the fraternity) crossed the border and went totally haywire. An apology is not enough this time. We want more," she added.

Joshua Mora, assistant dean of students, said an investigation is being conducted, but no disciplinary action has been taken.

Richards turns issue over to voters

AUSTIN (AP) - Gov. Ann Richards says it's now up to voters to decide whether Lena Guerrero should be returned to the Railroad Commission. And she says she will be comfortable with their decision. "She's (Ms. Guerrero) resigned her position. She's now taken her case to the people of Texas. And, ultimately, they're all our bosses. I respect the electorate and the decision that they make," Richards said Wednesday. Richards also said that while she respects her ethics adviser, former congresswoman Barbara Jordan, she doesn't agree with her opinion that Ms. Guerrero should decline to serve even if elected Nov. 3. "I talked to Barbara this morning and told her that's the way I felt about it and what I was going to say today," Richards said. Ms. Guerrero resigned from the Railroad Commission post Richards gave her in 1991 after it was revealed that for 12 years she claimed to have a college degree she never earned. But she stayed in the race against Republican Barry Williamson. Ms. Jordan on Tuesday stunned the campaign by saying Ms. Guerrero had failed to adhere to the ethical standards that public officials should maintain. "In my opinion if Lena Guerrero is elected Railroad Commissioner, the high ethical ground position would be for Lena Guerrero to resign that seat and allow the governor to have a new appointment," Ms. Jordan said.

Texas Republicans criticized Richards on Wednesday for failing to seek advice from her ethics adviser. "The governor preferred to embrace and fully support her political crony Lena Guerrero rather than standing up for ethics and the best interest of the people of Texas," state GOP Chairman Fred Meyer said. "The Republican Party of Texas applauds Barbara Jordan's courage in taking a stand for ethics and integrity regardless of politics," Meyer said.

Richards said she talked with Ms. Jordan after news reports first detailed discrepancies in Ms. Guerrero's claims to being an honors graduate of the University of Texas-Austin. Her grade transcripts showed a C-plus student 19 hours short of the 120 class hours required for a degree. Richards said she told Ms. Jordan "that my feeling at that time was that I really wanted to allow Lena time to do the right thing, that I thought she would. She did." Richards said she requires her key appointees to state boards and commissions "to go see Barbara Jordan before they get that appointment." "Barbara is very good laying out what our expectations are for this administration," Richards said. "I expect Barbara to feel free at any time to talk to me about anything that she sees as an ethics infraction and a difficulty."

Mail privilege said unfair advantage

WASHINGTON (AP) - A watchdog group says House members have an unfair edge in their re-election campaigns because of the taxpayer-paid mail being crammed into constituents' mailboxes. But supporters contend franked mass mailings are a crucial tool to keep constituents informed of what's happening on Capitol Hill. The National Taxpayers Union Foundation released a report Wednesday showing that Texas congressmen have sent 31 million pieces of franked mail since the start of the 102nd Congress. The Texans have sent 11.5 million newsletters, cards and other mailings in just the first nine months of this year, according to the non-partisan group seeking reform of franking laws. The NTUF, typically identified with conservative causes, based its report on information obtained from the U.S. Postal Service under a

Freedom of Information Act request. The study found there was a 40 percent hike in House mail volume for the first eight months of this year compared to the same period a year ago. "With the election approaching, the House again went into a franking frenzy," said NTUF president David Keating. "Excessive use of the frank is undermining the fairness of elections by subsidizing incumbents." Keating said 310 of the House's 435 members spent more on franking this election cycle than the $108,506 spent two years ago by the average challenger on an entire campaign. Eighteen of Texas' 27 congressmen spent at least $108,506 on taxpayer-funded mailings since the start of 1992. Dallas Democrat Martin Frost led the list, with $333,235 in postal costs and 2.5 million pieces of mass mail. Each lawmaker's postal allowance varies, based on how many people live in the district. This year, lawmakers were allowed to spend up to 67 cents per district mailing address - down 20 cents per address from last year. When ranked by cost per address, Frost was second among Texas members and 44th among all House members. The top spender in Texas, per address, was Lufkin Democrat Charlie Wilson, who ranked 10th in House spending. Other leading spenders in Texas, based on cost per address, were Houston Democrat Mike Andrews, ranked 68th; Fort Worth Democrat Pete Geren, 88th; and Sugar Land Republican Tom DeLay, 96th. Those spending the least per address were: Austin Democrat J.J. "Jake" Pickle, ranked 433rd; Rockwall Democrat Ralph Hall, 425th; Stamford Democrat Charles Stenholm, 417th; Mission Democrat Kika de la Garza, 405th; and Houston Democrat Craig Washington, 380th. "Do (critics) ever say anything about how they would propose a congressional office maintain communication with constituents?" asked Elaine Lang, Wilson's press secretary. Ms. Lang defended Wilson's postal expenditures and noted that he has not issued a newsletter since last spring. "We stayed within our budget. And, our mailings include critically important things like notices of when the mobile office is going to be coming to town," she said. Frost said a "very significant" portion of his postal spending is from town hall meeting notices. Cutting back on franking expenditures could end up hurting constituents, he said. "You wouldn't be able to have town hall meetings as often," he said. "The only way you can really get the word out to people is to directly mail (notices) to them." Frost noted that the House already has reformed franking practices, imposing limits on how much members can spend annually. "We've made some very significant changes," he said. But critics say that historically Congress' mail costs go up during election years as lawmakers seek to raise their visibility back home. Frost's expenditures remained relatively constant from last year to this year. Some Texans, however, significantly increased their mailings. El Paso Democrat Ron Coleman, who faces a stiff challenge from Republican Chip Taberski, has spent $100,208 so far this year, compared to $47,706 last year. In another tight race, San Antonio Democrat Albert Bustamante has spent $103,001 in the first nine months of this year, compared to $37,076 for all of last year.

dismantled weapons. The proposal, which surfaced during a meeting with Pantex officials in Austin Tuesday, is part of an environmental assessment of plutonium storage expected to be completed before year's end, said Roger Mulder, special projects director for the state's environmental policy division. The U.S. Energy Department wants to store plutonium weapons cores from scrapped warheads at the Pantex Plant for the interim period. Plant officials say the environmental assessment, if approved by the Energy Department, would permit the department to store plutonium on-site for up to 20 years, Mulder said Wednesday. He said the assessment would include a finding that the storage will have no significant impact on the environment. A toxic, man-made radioactive element, plutonium is used in metal spheres called pits to trigger thermonuclear explosions in nuclear weapons. Storage of plutonium pits is safer than working on the actual weapons, which has been the plant's primary mission for years, Mulder said. Earlier this year, Energy Secretary James Watkins told plant workers they will disassemble up to 2,000 weapons each year for the foreseeable future under arms cuts ordered by the Bush administration. Watkins also said plutonium recovered from dismantlement efforts would be stored for an interim period at Pantex. The plant is 17 miles northeast of Amarillo.

Herd meets Harvesters for district superiority

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

Hereford survived last week's District 1-4A showdown--a thrilling 31-26 edging of Randall. It won't get any easier this week in Pampa.

Pampa played a demanding pre-district schedule and paid for it, as they were outscored by more than 100 points in losing all five games. It hasn't seemed to hurt the Harvesters in district, though. They opened with an impressive 38-14 win at Dumas, then pasted Caprock 52-14.

"They were a very, very good 0-5 team," Hereford coach Danny Haney said. "They had a really rough, tough schedule. They made some mistakes that hurt them badly in games, because they moved the ball on everybody."

Last season, Pampa won District 1-4A, went to the quarterfinals and finished 11-3. They also beat Hereford 21-6 in Hereford. That team lost a lot to graduation, including the entire offensive backfield and the two best defensive players.

The best of what they had left is on the line, including Chris Whitney (6-5, 270) and Matt Clark (5-10, 230).

"The heart of their team is the offensive line," Haney said. "They're going to line up and try to run over you. We've got to keep them from controlling the ball--running five or six yard at a whack."

Last year, coach Dennis Cavalier had son Andy running the offense. He's graduated, but in his place is brother Tony.

"Tony Cavalier has done a good job for them," Haney said. "He's a little like his brother: he's an operator. He'll hurt you on the sprint-out and the play-action passes."

The leaders on defense are Clark, who doubles as a defensive tackle, and twin outside linebackers Jason and Justin Johnson, both about 6-3, 210.

"The thing that stands out for them is their forcing unit. They've been hurt outside by the pass," Haney said, adding that Hereford might try to take advantage of that. "We feel like we can move the ball on the ground, but for us to be successful offensively we've got to throw the ball downfield, to put pressure on the secondary and keep them on their heels a little bit."

Hereford and Pampa are the only 2-0 teams in the district, so this is the week's marquee game. In the other two games Friday, Caprock (0-2) visits Dumas (1-1) and Borger (0-2) goes to Randall (1-1).

The playoff race should go right down to the final week. There appear to be four teams in the district which could challenge for the two playoff spots: Hereford, Pampa, Randall and Dumas. On the final Friday of the regular season, Hereford is at Dumas and Randall is at Pampa.

Injury report: Tandemback Chris Brummett, who strained his knee against Borger, and linebacker Eric Sims, who turned his ankle against Randall, are both nearly 100 percent and will play Friday, Haney said.

Petey Colvin and quarterback Richard Sanderson shared the offensive award. Colvin ran for 238 yards and two touchdowns, and Sanderson ran for 128 yards and two touchdowns.

Tackle Steven Blea got the award on defense.

Jason Cole got the junior varsity award, while Jeremy Scott was picked from the sophomore team.

Caprock	0	2	36	99	2	5	91	204

This week: Hereford at Pampa; Caprock at Dumas; Borger at Randall

Player of the Week

Hereford tailback Petey Colvin ran for 238 yards and two touchdowns in the Herd's 31-26 win over Randall last week, earning him Player of the Week honors on offense, along with quarterback Richard Sanderson, who had two touchdowns and 128 yards on the ground. Steven Blea got the award on defense.

Haney doesn't know if girls want to play

Hereford boys' athletic director and head football coach Danny Haney doesn't know how future Herds will be affected by the University Interscholastic League's decision to allow girls to play varsity high school football.

He said he didn't know if any Hereford girls want to play.

"I really don't know what the feelings of the female students are about playing football," he said.

The UIL decision could make for some difficult situations, and the need for separate lockerrooms is only one potential problem.

"This is my personal opinion," Haney said. "I personally believe there are sports for girls and sports for boys, and I think if you mix the genders you ruin the uniqueness of the sport."

Of Mickey Mantle's 536 home runs, 371 were made batting lefthanded and 165 righthanded.

Pampa picked by seven points

Hereford is a seven-point underdog at Pampa Friday, according to the Harris Rating System.

Despite their opposite records--Hereford is 5-2, Pampa is 2-5--Harris ranks Pampa much higher than Hereford. The Harvesters are ranked at 52 with a power rating of 182. The Herd is ranked at 74 with a rating of 175. Hereford dropped one space despite last week's 31-26 win over Randall, which is ranked 98th with a 171 rating.

Dumas (3-4) moved down one spot to 85 despite a 49-16 win against Borger. Maybe the Demons didn't win by enough. Borger (0-7) is ranked 165th out of 173 Class 4A teams. The Bulldogs have a rating of 148.

Caprock is not far ahead of Borger. Caprock (2-5) is 159th with a 151 rating.

Harris picks Randall (5-2) and Dumas to have easy games at home.

Jays need one more win to ditch choker label

TORONTO (AP) - One more win. No more doubts.

The Toronto Blue Jays, known for failing in big games, play the biggest of their lives tonight. A triumph brings a title. A loss revives that reputation.

The Jays, in their first World Series, are quietly confident as they stand at the brink of taking the championship of America's national pastime outside the United States for the first time.

"It would be very, very special if we would be able to do it here in front of the crowd," said Jimmy Key, who brought Toronto to this point. "All that they've been through, the heartbreaks that they've had, it would be great if we could do it here."

Key's five-hit pitching through 7 2-3 innings, continued bullpen brilliance and just enough hitting from Pat Borders' homer and Devon White's RBI single gave the Blue Jays a 2-1 win over Atlanta Wednesday night and a 3-1 lead in the best-of-7 series.

The Braves helped, making just enough mistakes and hardly enough hits to avoid their third straight one-run loss.

"We had some opportunities and we couldn't take advantage of them," Atlanta's Jeff Blauser said.

Again tonight, the Braves will be fighting to do what's never been done - a win by a visiting team in an indoor Series game. Minnesota is 8-0 at the Metrodome. Toronto is 2-0 at the SkyDome.

It will be a rematch of pitchers Jack Morris and John Smoltz. They matched zeroes in one of the greatest Series games ever.

In last year's seventh game, Smoltz pitched 7 1-3 scoreless innings for Atlanta. But Morris, who joined Toronto as a free agent, did better - pitching a 10-inning shutout as Minnesota won 1-0.

Morris, 21-6 in the regular season, has struggled in the postseason. He allowed three runs in six innings in losing the Series opener.

"I am going to have to establish my fastball early," said Smoltz, who was effective in Atlanta's second-game loss. "We need to play fundamental baseball."

Key outdueled Tom Glavine, who pitched his second complete game of the Series while working on three days rest. Key, starting for the first time in 17 days after he was bypassed when Gaston went with a three-man rotation in the playoffs, was dominant.

"I'm one of the guys who has been here through all the heartbreaks," said Key, who has been with Toronto since 1984 but can become a free agent. "It's a possibility I may have pitched my last game here. That was a special moment for me."

Glavine allowed just six hits, two more than in his 3-1 opening victory. But two of them produced runs.

Borders extended Toronto's postseason record to 10 straight games with a homer, hitting a solo shot to lead off the third. Then White, 1 for 13 in the first three games, got his third hit of the game, a single, to drive in Kelly Gruber, who had walked in the eighth.

Gruber slid in hard, headfirst, across the plate and said later he may have suffered a concussion. His condition and playing status for tonight were unknown.

Key gave up singles to Otis Nixon, who was picked off, and Blauser, Atlanta's first two hitters of the game, then retired 16 straight before Nixon singled in the sixth. Then Key got the next four batters.

Trailing 2-0, Atlanta got one run in the eighth. The Braves had Ron Gant on third and Brian Hunter on first when Damon Berryhill popped up to Borders in foul ground. Mark Lemke hit a hard grounder off Key that caromed to third baseman Gruber, who threw out Lemke as Gant scored.

Duane Ward came in and struck out Nixon, who reached first when the ball eluded catcher Borders. Blauser, a righty, then hit a hard shot down the first base line. John Olerud was well positioned to make a diving, backhand stop and beat Blauser to the bag.

Tom Henke retired the side in order in the ninth for his second save. Toronto's bullpen has allowed one hit in nine scoreless innings.

"I think everybody in the clubhouse is going to want to win it right here," Henke said. "We don't want to go back to Atlanta."

Gaston uses Key, looks like genius

TORONTO (AP) - Cito Gaston, his voice thick with sarcasm about those who derided him as a "halfway manager" and now call him a full-fledged genius, is looking smarter every night.

Funny how timely hits, sparkling catches and terrific pitching can make a manager's IQ go up.

If the Toronto Blue Jays clinch the World Series tonight in the SkyDome, it will end a long period of doubt about Gaston and probably secure him a new contract for next season - something he wasn't sure he'd get if the team didn't at least win the playoffs.

Gaston didn't get outmaneuvered in the playoffs by Oakland's Tony La Russa, as many faithless Toronto fans feared, and isn't getting baffled by Atlanta's Bobby Cox in the World Series.

Instead, Gaston is controlling the action, deftly handling his starting pitchers and relievers, calling for surprise bunts, moving his fielders into the right spots and keeping everyone on the team calm until the job is done.

Gaston's choice of Jimmy Key to pitch Game 4 last night was typical of a management style that might appear to some as weak but is, in fact, successful because it places a premium on loyalty and trust in his players.

Key, 13-13 during the regular season, didn't pitch in the playoffs as Gaston went with a three-man rotation. But Gaston felt Key deserved a chance to shine in the World Series.

"He's been here just about as long as I have, trying to get to this point," Gaston said.

Key responded to Gaston's trust with a five-hitter over 7 2-3 innings as he started for the first time in 17 days.

Gaston didn't stay with Key a moment too long, though, going to Duane Ward to end a threat in the eighth inning - thanks to first baseman John Olerud's lunging, game-saving stop of a shot down the line by Jeff Blauser with runners on second and third.

In the ninth, Gaston went right away to closer Tom Henke, who shut the Braves down in order to preserve Key's 2-1 victory.

Gaston also seemed pretty savvy with the score tied in the ninth inning of Game 3.

Roberto Alomar singled and stole second, setting up an intentional walk of Joe Carter. With the infield back at double-play depth and everyone expecting Dave Winfield to swing away, Gaston pulled a surprise and had Winfield bunt. Gaston could remember only one other time this season when he asked Winfield to bunt, and this one was a perfect sacrifice that moved both runners up.

Mike Stanton, a left-hander, came in for Atlanta to face the left-handed hitting Olerud, so Gaston sent Ed Sprague to pinch-hit. That led to another intentional walk, loading the bases. When Cox went to the bullpen again for right-hander Jeff Reardon to face right-hander Candy Maldonado, Gaston this time stayed with Maldonado. Again, it was a matter of trust and a hunch that Maldonado could do the job.

"I told Candy way before they started bringing in pitchers, walking people, that he was going to be the man, and he was," Gaston said. "I could see it developing. If you're supposed to be a halfway manager, as some people accuse me of being, you can see it coming."

Gaston rose from humble beginnings

By TIM GRIFFIN
San Antonio Express-News
SAN ANTONIO (AP) - A couple of newspaper reporters once plucked Clarence "Cito" Gaston from the baseball expansion pool.

The San Antonio native took the Toronto managing job only after his Blue Jays bosses insisted.

Despite those humble beginnings as a player and manager, Gaston has made the most of his opportunities.

"That says a lot about Cito and the kind of person he is," said former San Diego Padres teammate Ollie Brown. "When he's gotten the chance, he's always been able to perform."

Former teammates and managers remember Gaston as a quiet player who approached the game with a steady, unshakable work ethic.

Most of them will be watching Gaston as he leads the Blue Jays against the Atlanta Braves, the first black manager of a team in the World Series.

"He was a silent type, never saying much," former San Diego teammate Chris Cannizzaro said. "But when he did speak, people definitely understood and paid heed."

"I think today's players understand that and that's helped him out. A lot of people bull--- their way through life. Cito wasn't that way."

Gaston was the 30th and final draft pick of the Padres during the 1968 expansion draft. He played in the minor leagues five years, but had only 25 at-bats in nine games with Atlanta.

"I remember that we had already picked most of our players for our team," former San Diego president E.J. "Buzzie" Bavasi said. "When it got down to that pick, we let a couple of our reporters make that last selection in the draft. They picked Cito and the rest, I guess, is history."

Gaston earned a starting job in the outfield during the Padres' first season and represented the team in the All-Star Game in 1970.

"We picked all those other players and it turned out that our last pick ended up being one of our best players," Bavasi said.

Gaston's work ethic was quickly noticed during those early days with the Padres. Whether taking extra swings in the batting cage or spending time studying pitchers, Gaston was always ready.

"He was a good player who always got the most out of his ability," Bavasi said. "It wasn't that he was a good player on a bad team, as is the case with many expansion teams. He was a good player who would have been good on a lot of teams."

"Clarence had a lot of natural talent, but he made that even better with all of his extra work," Brown said. "He talked a lot about baseball and definitely was into the game."

San Antonio Missions manager Jerry Royster was a close friend and roommate when they played together in Atlanta in 1977 and '78, Gaston's final two big-league seasons.

"He fathered me and took care of me, telling what to do and what not to do," Royster said. "Cito led by example and kept me out of trouble. He was like a brother to me."

"Even though I haven't talked to him recently, there still is the same feeling. Cito is a great guy, a keeper. I hope he has a lot of success in the Series and in his career."

That same, steady influence is one of Gaston's strongest managerial traits today, Royster said.

"I see him as being a good person, and you've got to be a good person to succeed as a manager today," Royster said. "He listens to players and deals with them as equals. Cito's approachable and that's how you have to be successful."

Gaston was convinced to go into coaching by then-Braves vice president of player personnel Hank Aaron, another former roommate.

Gaston was hired by Atlanta as a minor-league hitting instructor before joining the Toronto organization in 1982.

Prep runners take spotlight back from passers

DALLAS (AP) - The passing fad has passed and, this year, it's back to the backs.

The players who grind out yardage by pounding into players twice their size are again stealing the headlines, regaining the limelight from the singing seniors of 1991.

It seemed like every conversation about schoolboy football last year was over which quarterback did what.

Koy Detmer was making Mission fans forget his Heisman Trophy-winning brother, Ty, and Huntsville's Chuck Clements erased the marks set by his sibling, Steve. Recruiters also went ga ga over Shea Morenz, Corey Pullig and Max Knake, all seeing playing time this season in the Southwest Conference.

It's hard to find the clear-cut phenoms of this season, mostly because there's a new one each week. So far, there's been a 400-yard game by Beaumont Kelly's Dexter Hebert and several 300-yard efforts by various players.

Austin LBJ's Shon Mitchell has had the best streak, rushing for more than 300 yards in consecutive games, including an Austin school-district record 315-yard outing.

Then there's steady performers who have remained near the top of the leader lists with consistent 150- to 225-yard games like Converse Judson's Jerod Douglas, Texarkana Liberty-Eylau's Keldrick Williams and Rockwall's Cedrick Cromer.

The two running backs spotlighted on The Associated Press preseason Super Team, Dion Marion of Killeen and Richardson's Chris Abron, have had solid seasons, but neither has exploded in any single game.

Among lower classifications, Aric Sardinea of 2A's Tidehaven has broken 1,300 yards in six games and Ray Fisher of 3A's Coldspring has more than 1,200 yards.

Coaches say this type of inconsistent trend - a litter of quarterbacks one year, busloads of runners the next - makes them keep late nights in the offseason, retooling their strategy for the upcoming season.

DISTRICT DANDIES: With three weeks left in most district races, it's a good time to take a look at some of the most interesting 5A battles.

The top thriller could be in District 10-5A, where No. 2 Dallas Kimball and preseason No. 2 Dallas Carter appear headed for a Nov. 7 afternoon winner-take-all showdown.

The same scenario also is likely in 22-5A when No. 7 Beaumont West Brook and No. 8 Beaumont Central play a midday game that same Saturday with the district crown likely on the line.

Killeen's 14-7 upset of then-No. 1 Temple last weekend threw the 13-5A race into a dogfight. If the defending state champion Kangaroos beat Waco this weekend, they'll assume the driver's seat in the race. If not, all three would have one loss - Killeen losing to Waco, Waco losing to Temple and Temple losing to Killeen.

District 4-5A also is worth keeping an eye on, as usual. Abilene Cooper leads at 4-0, followed by third-ranked Odessa Permian at 3-0 and San Angelo Central at 2-1. Cooper and Permian meet next weekend.

Tension is filling the build-up leading to this weekend's 24-5A probable title clash between Fort Bend Clements and Willowridge. Racial slurs mentioning this Saturday's game were found Monday painted on a wall at Willowridge. Both are undefeated in district play.

Four more races could be decided this weekend when 9-5A's Irving Nimitz meets Arlington Lamar, 16-5A's Alief Elsiek travels to Stratford, Houston Lamar plays host to Houston Madison for the 18-5A top spot and Houston Washington meets Houston Yates in 19-5A.

One of the wackiest races is 12-5A, surprisingly led by Duncanville at 3-1. The Panthers, winners of five total games the last two years, are 0-3 in non-district play.

DeSoto is second at 1-0-3, followed by Garland Lakeview at 2-1-1. The Patriots' one loss actually was a victory over Duncanville that was forfeited because of an academically ineligible player.

DID THEY OR DIDN'T THEY?: It's hard to find any coach who will say he likes being ranked No. 1 because most fear that it heaps unneeded pressure onto their players.

But sometimes you have to wonder. Dallas North Dallas coach Emo Black doesn't have to think twice. He said he's sure Dallas Kimball coach James Jones ran up the score in last Saturday's 74-0 Knights' victory.

"He jacked it up to the moon," Black told The Dallas Morning News. "He was up 35-0 and threw a pass into the end zone, and then he had a fake punt."

"I'm sorry he feels that way," Jones said. "We just play football. We taught them to read things and they read it. It was not to hurt his feelings, it was to play the game. He'll get his shot at me next year."

Skeptics might say that lopsided margin was intended for poll voters, who choose a new No. 1 5A team this week following Temple's upset loss to Killeen.

Jones insisted Wednesday that that was not the case, adding that he pulled his starters early in the third quarter.

"I did know Temple had lost, but that had nothing to do with our game plan. We weren't trying to be No. 1 if that's what they're trying to say," Jones said.

Jersey Village, the previous No. 2, beat out Kimball, which moved from third to second, by eight points.

Local artist speaks to Bay View Club

Local artist Jena Rawley-Whitaker was the guest speaker during the Bay View Study Club meeting held Thursday afternoon, Oct. 15, in the home of Ruth McBride.

The artist's presentation was held in conjunction with the club's continuation of the program emphasis this year entitled, "Discovery: Art, Artists and Artifacts." Mrs. Rawley-Whitaker recently illustrated the book Fairy Tea written by Annie Ullrich. She explained that her growing up years had been privileged in that during her grade school and high school years the schools she attended in Dallas offered outstanding art teachers and "art permeated everything they did." She also stated that her parents exerted a great influence on her life in that they encouraged and had faith in her ability as an artist. They also encouraged self-motivation, and, in turn, the artist learned that from deprivation one can gain success. Mrs. Rawley-Whitaker was not allowed to watch television (except for "Lassie") resulting in avid reading of books.

The artist received a degree in fine arts and art education from Texas Tech University. During two years spent in Michigan, unemployed while her husband attended school, she learned to use watercolors as a medium and also perfected drawing of the human form. She received a portrait commission when her first child was born and has had continuous work since that time. She has received a request to illustrate a children's book with a cover letter from Santa Fe.

All of Mrs. Rawley-Whitaker's early training came into play as the artist began her work as an illustrator. She said, "It was the most tedious and most difficult work I had ever done. Even the designs had to be measured in size with a computer." The artist showed her preliminary art sketches then full sized drawings as her work progressed.

Following the presentation, the members and guests were invited to a "fairy tea" in the sun room of the McBride home. The serving table was decorated in the theme of the book. McBride used a floral arrangement of mauve, pink and turquoise set in a tureen of creamware placed on a hand-crocheted tablecloth of floral design. Coffee and tea were served along with nuts and coconut cream cake. The fairy tea was served from a teapot covered in a tea cozy of floral design. Votive candles and apples on the serving table created the ambience of the tea party.

The brief business meeting was conducted by President McBride.

Lori Hall and Sandy Josseland were welcomed as guests by members: Virginia Bayne, Margaret Bell, Beth Burran, Lou Davis, Helen Eades, Mary Fraser, Pat Graham, Nancy Hays, Nancy Josseland, Helen Langley, McBride, Majorie Mims, Program Chairman Ruth Newsom, Helen Rose, Lois Scott, Elizabeth Witherspoon, Edna Gault, and Lois Gilliland.

Church tour taken by Hereford Study Club

Members of Hereford Study Club toured St. Mary's Catholic Church in Umbarger Thursday afternoon, Oct. 15.

The group was greeted by Willie Braddy, a long-time resident of Umbarger who spoke of the warmth of the community and its caring people. She then introduced Father Jim Hutzler, pastor, who conducted the tour.

St. Mary's Catholic Church was built in 1929 and was renovated in 1945. Nine Italian prisoners of war, all artists, were transported daily from the P.O.W. Camp near Hereford to do the painting of the church. The work took from six to eight months to complete.

A 10-foot canvas mural of the Assumption hangs in the church sanctuary while scenes depicting the life of Jesus and Mary adorn the side walls. Hand-painted patterns and borders emerge from every corner of the church and two angels and a chalice are painted on the archway located over the altar.

The prisoners also installed the hand-painted ornate glass windows which totally transformed the interior of the church. One Italian carver created a replica of the Last Supper which hangs on the front of the altar.

Following the tour, members met for their regular business meeting then were served dinner prepared by Braddy and Nedra Robinson.

Members in attendance were Barbara Allen, Jean Ballard, Braddy, Doris Bryant, Morgan Cain, Addie Cunningham, Hazel Ford, Mildred Garrison, Betty Gilbert, Elizabeth Hellman, Carol McGilvary, Robinson, Gladys Setliff, Gracie Shaw, Helen Spinks, Bessie Story, Mary Stoy and Leta Kaul.

The November meeting will be held in the home of Bessie Story.

Italy's ancient Etruscans, forerunners of the Romans, combined their love of music and sports with a penchant for brutality that might have included human sacrifice, according to historians.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: I would appreciate your comments regarding the difference between the pulmonary diseases COPD and emphysema. You mentioned that COPD could be reversed if detected in its early stages. Would you give more details on the reversal process? How does COPD develop?

I have a 61-year-old relative whose X-rays indicate possible COPD. She has shortness of breath when dancing vigorously, but no other symptoms. She has never smoked in her life.

DEAR READER: COPD means chronic obstructive pulmonary disease. The other acronym is COLD meaning chronic obstructive lung disease, which is the same thing. These terms were coined to include both emphysema and chronic bronchitis because both cause obstruction of the airways in the lungs. It is often hard to separate how much of lung disease is from emphysema and how much from chronic bronchitis.

Previously, emphysema, in the strictest sense, meant a loss of elasticity of the walls of the tiny air sacs — the alveoli — while chronic bronchitis meant inflammation of the bronchial tubes that are connected to the alveoli. But prolonged chronic bronchitis eventually causes loss of elasticity of the alveoli as well.

Almost all cases of COLD are related to lung damage from pollution — the main one being tobacco smoke. Only about 10 percent of such cases occur in individuals who do not smoke. There is an inherited lack of an enzyme that may result in loss of elasticity of the alveoli, which may be the problem in your relative's case.

Chronic bronchitis is associated with cough, as in the cigarette cough. Pure emphysema may not cause any symptoms early on except shortness of breath with exertion. As COLD progresses, shortness of breath becomes more severe.

I have discussed COLD in detail in Special Issue 37-02, Chronic Bronchitis and Emphysema, which I'm sending you. Others who want this issue can send $3 with a long, stamped (52 cents), self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/37-

02, P.O. Box 5537, Riverton, NJ 08077.

Dr. Lamb welcomes letters from readers with health questions. You can write to him at P.O. Box 5537, Riverton, NJ 08077. Although Dr. Lamb cannot reply to all letters personally, he will respond to selected questions in future columns.

Saxon may be NFL's best punter

IRVING, Texas (AP) - Mike Saxon has played eight years in the NFL and doesn't have so much as a fat lip to show for it.

He has no scars, no broken bones, and no bruised psyche. He's a punter and that's illegal game for big hits.

However, punting can have its own special hell and heaven.

The hell can come from shanked punts and teammates who treat him like the water boy.

"Sax, we're kind of dry over here, can you hustle us a drink? We know you don't have anything else to do."

The heaven can come from a season like the one he is having as the best punter in the National Conference.

"I've never won the NFL punting title and I've never been to the Pro Bowl, but this may just be the year," Saxon said. "Last year was a good year. I averaged 42.6 per punt and 36.8 net return. This one is going real good."

On 26 punts, Saxon has averaged 45.3 yards with a 37-yard net return. He's put eight kicks out of bounds inside the 20. The longest return against him has been 12 yards.

According to coach Jimmy Johnson, Saxon has become one of the Dallas Cowboys most dangerous weapons.

"He's been kicking the ball very well, very consistent," Johnson said. "He kicks the ball so high we've had good coverage. We gave him a game ball after the Kansas City game because of the overall great job he has been doing."

Saxon appreciates the notice, any notice.

"I've been here eight years and I think I've got seven game balls now," he said. "They also made me a captain for the Kansas City game. I'll take any notice I can get. Punters can go unnoticed and unappreciated. It's something like this that makes me want to be even more of a part of the team and produce.

"Although I've been here eight years sometimes I feel like a rookie. I told my wife the other morning it seemed like I just joined the team."

Saxon has a lifetime 41.4 punting average with the Cowboys with an overall 34.9 return net. He has 169 consecutive punts without having one blocked.

Saxon said a punter's life can get tedious.

"Some of the players treat me like a little brother which makes me the butt of all the jokes," Saxon said. "I guess they feel that way because they have to take the hits and I don't."

There's one big hit Saxon would like to make. It's on owner Jerry Jones pocketbook.

"If I can make the Pro Bowl or win the punting title I've got a big bonus coming," Saxon said. "I just hope that oval ball keeps bouncing right for me."

Fans will flock to LA Coliseum

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. (AP) - The largest crowd to watch the Los Angeles Raiders at home this season was slightly over 53,000. The attendance Sunday when Dallas visits could be more than 30,000 higher.

"It's wonderful," Raiders coach Art Shell said Wednesday when told over 80,000 fans were expected to watch his team play the Cowboys. "The crowd will come out and be vocal. There's a great team coming in to play us - America's Team - and we look forward to it."

The Los Angeles Coliseum has a listed seating capacity of 92,488 - largest in the NFL. The second-largest is the Pontiac Silverdome, where the listed capacity is 80,500.

The Raiders have played three home games this season, losing to Cleveland 28-16 before a crowd of 48,537; beating the New York Giants 13-10 before 43,103, and beating the Buffalo Bills 20-3 before 53,017.

The Cowboys lead the NFC East with a 5-1 record while the Raiders have won three straight games to improve to 3-4.

Shell said that quarterback Todd Marinovich has recovered from his sprained left knee to the point where it's almost a sure thing he'll start against the Cowboys.

"Todd's doing pretty good," Shell said. "He came out yesterday and he worked out. We had him rolling out, doing the things he'll need to do. He'll practice today. Right now, we expect him to go."

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: After 44 years of marriage, I received the shock of my life. It would have been better if someone had taken a gun and shot me dead.

At a family dinner, my daughter suddenly blurted out, "I want you to know that Daddy sexually molested me from age 3 to my teen years." She claimed he threatened to have her put away if she told anyone. As if that weren't enough, she then told me he also molested his granddaughter. When I asked my adult granddaughter about it, she replied, "Yes, it's true. He had his hands up my dress every chance he could get."

I wanted to commit suicide. I'm over 75, and my husband is 79. For weeks, I have been like a crazy person, crying, talking to myself, praying out loud. My husband denies everything and says they are making it all up. I couldn't stand to look at him, so I arranged for a friend who cares for elderly people in her home to take care of him also.

To make matters worse, my daughter said to me, "You mean you didn't know?" Ann, I was dumbfounded. Did my daughter think I would have allowed that to go on? And then to add to the hurt, she said, "You left me alone with him many times."

It is true that I did leave her with her father, whom I trusted. I worked in the evening, part-time, to supplement our income, but had I known what was happening, I would have had him arrested and divorced him.

I went for therapy but after four months felt I had to cope with this myself. My daughter is avoiding me as if it were all my fault. Can't she realize or imagine what it is to face this horrifying situation at my age?

Ann, please give me some kind of answer that will make my burden a little easier to bear.--Hurting and Hoping

DEAR HURTING: If, after four months of counseling, you are still reeling and sick at heart, you need a new counselor.

I suggest joint counseling with your daughter and granddaughter. I believe what you have written and hope your daughter and granddaughter will do what they can to help you recover from this devastating blow. Good luck to all of you.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A friend will be married this fall, and I am one of three bridesmaids. We used to be close, but in the last few years, we've drifted apart. It makes me sad that the friendship only came alive when she needed someone to be part of her "performance."

This is the first wedding I've been in. I'm not sure how much money I should have to spend. The bridesmaids are required to pay for the dresses ($200), plus alterations ($25), a strapless bra ($20), matching shoes ($25), and a parasol ($40).

We also must pay for the bridal shower. This means invitations, stamps, renting the hall, buying party favors, decorations and the shower gift. The brides has already requested a $200 gift.

Including my transportation, this wedding will cost me almost $500. Is this normal?--Feeling Used in Philly

DEAR PHILLY: Sad to say, but this is what weddings have come to these days. Any chance of you bridesmaids renting your gowns? It's being done, you know.

I hope other young women who are reading this will take heed. Unless you feel thrilled about being asked, will enjoy the experience and can afford big bucks for this luxury, it's best to tactfully decline.

When planning a wedding, who pays for what? Who stands where? "The Ann Landers Guide for Brides" has all the answers. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.65 (this includes postage and handling) to: Brides, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Make ghosts centerpiece

Some friendly ghosts, hanging from branches, make a terrific Halloween centerpiece for your table this week. It's easy to make, and fun too!

Gather several bare branches that have blown into your yard or neighborhood park and poke them into the top of a medium-size pumpkin. Spray the branches with black paint if you wish, or leave them natural. Then make these simple friendly ghosts to hang from the branches.

Tear white cotton fabric into a square 6 inches by 6 inches. If the fabric doesn't tear easily, cut with scissors. Place a large wooden bead in the center of the fabric, making sure the hole is at the top, then gather the fabric under the bead and tie it tightly with a piece of string or yarn.

Thread a sewing needle with white or black thread 12 to 16 inches in length. Make a knot at the end of the thread larger than the hole in the bead. Bring the needle through the hole at the bottom of the bead and out the top of the ghost's head.

Remove the needle and tie the thread to one of the branches to suspend the ghost.

Make 10 to 12 ghosts and hang them from the branches. You may want to make a variety of sizes and draw faces on them with black markers, too. Drape lengths of cheesecloth around the branches, if you wish, and add several plastic spiders.

If you host a Halloween party, let guests choose a ghost to take home. Untie the thread from a branch and attach it to a safety pin for a festive party favor guests can water.

LONDON (AP) - Queen Elizabeth, Denmark's Queen Margrethe and four other heads of state will meet on Nov. 10 in the first gathering of its kind in 600 years.

Sweden's King Carl XVI Gustaf, Norway's King Harald V and Presidents Vigdis Finnbogadottir of Iceland and Mauno Koivisto of Finland will take part in the gathering in London for the start of a Scandinavian arts festival.

The last comparable gathering was in 1363, when the kings of Scotland, France, Cyprus and Denmark joined King Edward III of England for a feast, said historian Anne Crawford.
