Crime rate soars over 10 years

Number of incidents, offenses doubled when package sales were legalized. That point is major with dry forces.

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

In 1982, there were 1,568 crimes and incidents reported to the Hereford Police Department.

This year, Hereford will set a new record, with over 4,100 reports and incidents recorded through September.

That already eclipses the previous record of 4,089 reports in 1986.

The figures are among the tools being used by forces pushing for a new "wet-dry" election in Hereford.

When the city went wet in 1984, the crime rate took off. Law enforcement officials feel the two are very much related.

A lot of the crimes, police say, are committed by juveniles and young adults. In many cases, the young persons are under the influence of alcohol.

For adults, it's no different. Although there is no sure measure, local judges figure anywhere from 75 percent to 90 percent of all crimes committed here are drug or alcohol related. Of those, more are connected with alcohol abuse.

There was access to alcohol before the city was voted wet eight years ago. Persons wanting a drink could go to one of the city's private clubs; south of here, along U.S. Highway 385 in Castro County going toward Dimmitt there were four liquor stores. More than one "bootlegger" was available in Hereford.

Members of the "HELP" group aren't in this for moral purposes. The Rev. Ted Taylor, pastor of the Church of the Nazarene, said the group is fighting for drying up the county because of the higher crime rate.

The city's crime rate has more assaults reported than other cities the same size, according to "Crime in Texas," a compilation of stats from all cities in the state. The number of assaults leaped from 163 in 1983 to 228 in 1984; up to 388 in 1987; and peaked at 473 in 1990. Again, many of those are alcohol-related incidents, officials say.

Students ready for Red Ribbon Week, 12A

"If we could keep alcohol out of the hands of our teenagers, it would make our job a lot easier," police chief David Wagner said. "They could still get it if they really wanted it, but they'd have to work awful hard to get it. If there weren't so many stores selling it, they would have to work a lot harder to get (alcohol)."

Rev. Taylor and the Rev. Larry Cothrin, pastor of Avenue Baptist Church, said they will tout these statistics and others as the group pushes for a new wet-dry election.

A citywide rally is planned Nov. 2 at the Hereford Community Center, and the group will solicit signatures from voters outside the polls on Nov. 3. Practically everyone in the county lives in the "wet" Justice of the Peace Precinct 1. All but the three northwesternmost sections in the county are in the precinct.

The group needs 1,441 signatures on petitions to take to the commissioners court. Once the petitions are declared valid, the county government must call an election.

Proponents of the HELP group are also pointing out the reason given for the first wet vote in 1984 is invalid. The election was called then by a group led by Art Reinauer, who was trying to develop La Escarpada XXX Winery here. The winery opened after the county went wet, but Reinauer later moved to Amarillo.

Hereford crime has soared since 1982

Liquor foes point to time of "wet" vote in 1984

This chart shows the dramatic increase in crime in Hereford since 1982. The number of incidents and offenses soared from 1,821 in 1983 (Hereford's last "dry" year) to 3,182 in 1984. By 1986, the number of offenses and incidents had more than doubled, to 4,089. The number of incidents and offenses has fallen since, but the number of assaults (bottom line) peaked in 1990, at 473.

Community service paying dividends

Hereford's Community Service Restitution program is continuing to pay real dividends after two years.

The program was initiated two years ago by current Hereford police chief David Wagner under the guidance of Larry Sheffield of the Community Supervision and Corrections Department (it used to be called "adult probation") and 222nd District Judge David Wesley Gulley. Kathy Moore is now supervising the program and the 100-plus persons ordered to perform community service.

Moore explained last week to the Hereford Noon Kiwanis that some of the persons in the program are ordered there as part of their probation or sentence after committing a felony or misdemeanor. In some cases, persons are participating in lieu of fines or jail.

In the 1992 fiscal year (it ended Sept. 30), the community received $111,865 worth of service if the hours were billed at $5 each by the participants. The benefits were derived by non-profit organizations or governments. That, said Moore, saved not just tax dollars but money that would have been paid out by the non-profit groups.

Moore explained that not only is community service cheaper on taxpayers than making someone go to jail, the offenders earn direct benefits:

One person performing community service liked her "punishment" so well she's now doing work as a volunteer for the non-profit agency.

--They learn to take full responsibility for their actions.

--It provides the offender with a positive activity.

--It improves the offender's self worth through service and involvement in the community.

--Participants have a chance to acquire or improve job skills.

"The overall program goal is to enhance the public's knowledge and understanding of the criminal justice system while providing an alternative to incarcerations for the offender," said Moore. "We want to assist the offenders in their efforts to rehabilitate themselves."

Moore also explained the offenders must use their own time to perform the service. If a person performing community service has a job, they have to do their service before or after work.

Most participants in the program work eight hours a week at their community service job. For a minor crime, state guidelines say a person has to work between 24 and 100 hours. For a first degree felony, a person may be ordered to perform at least 320 hours; they may have to do up to 1,000. Last fiscal year, 203 of the participants had committed a misdemeanor; 100 were guilty of a felony.

The program has paid off for participants, too. Moore said 18 persons were employed as a result of their community service work.

Deposits mixed at local banks

Deposits at Hereford's two banks totalled more than $130 million at the close of business Sept. 30, 1992, according to reports published recently.

First National Bank reported deposits of $66.7 million and loans of $38.8 million. Total assets were $78,716,000. At the same time a year ago, deposits were $69.6 million.

Hereford State Bank's report of condition showed deposits of $63.7 million and loans of $35.5 million. Total assets were listed at $71.3 million. HSB's deposits were up $2.2 million over this time a year ago.

In addition to the two banks, Hereford Texas Federal Credit Union submitted its totals for the quarter ending Sept. 30. Deposits were $24.7 million and loans totalled $11.7 million. Deposits were down about $535,000 and loans were down $3.5 million from the same period a year ago.

MOORE

"We also had a woman who worked with a non-profit agency," Moore said. "She liked it so much she is still volunteering for the agency, even though she doesn't have to. It was the first time she had done anything like that, and she found out she liked it."

Down the stretch they come

With nine days to go, Texas is a three-man race

AUSTIN (AP) - When U.S. Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan came to Texas last week to stump for his boss, President Bush, Bill Clinton's campaign beat him to the punch.

Two hours and 16 minutes before Sullivan's news conference was scheduled to begin, Clinton's staff faxed news reporters a sharply worded rebuttal that attacked Bush's health care record.

The sooner-than-later salvo offered a glimpse at the way the Democrat's campaign has been hustling in the president's home state.

With 32 electoral votes at stake, Bush needs Texas to be re-elected.

But facing a determined Clinton and a dogged Ross Perot, the president is finding the going tough late in his campaign.

A series of pre-debate opinion polls showed Bush and Clinton in a close race, although Clinton's 17 percentage point lead of early August had largely evaporated.

George Christian, an Austin political consultant and former press secretary to President Lyndon Johnson, said the debates appeared to have solidified support of all three candidates.

"The odds are with Bush to carry Texas, but Clinton has made it very competitive and it could go either way," he said.

Neither Bush nor Clinton is taking Texas for granted, their campaigns say.

The president has stumped vigorously. He's dispatched an army of surrogates, including First Lady Barbara Bush, Vice President Quayle, Mrs. Quayle, Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan, U.S. Treasurer Catalina Villalpando and U.S. trade negotiator Carla Hills.

In most cases, the surrogates sought to trumpet the Bush message and attack Clinton.

But the campaign was forced to apologize after Ms. Villalpando accused - erroneously - Clinton of having burned an American flag while opposing the Vietnam war.

Clinton spokesman Craig Sutherland said the charge and apology reflected the Bush camp's "desperation."

The Democrat and his running mate, Sen. Al Gore, both have toured Texas. They, too, sent surrogates, including Mrs. Clinton, Democratic National chairman Ron Brown and U.S. Rep. Joe Kennedy. They enlisted such Texas Democratic heavyweights as former San Antonio mayor Henry Cisneros and former congresswoman Barbara Jordan.

Republican consultant Karl Rove suggested, however, that the Clinton Texas campaign was mostly for show and that he wasn't spending serious money on television ad time or other campaign ammo.

"Clinton has written Texas off," Rove told the Texas Association of Taxpayers. "Once again, they've hit the road."

That is vigorously disputed by the Democrats, who say they will battle all the way.

"We're pretty pleased with the way things are going right now," Sutherland said.

"While the Clinton-Gore ticket does not have to win Texas to win nationally, the president does. If we can stop George Bush in this state, there is no mathematical solution that can put him back in the White House," Sutherland said.

Mark Sanders, spokesman for the GOP's Victory '92 effort, said the Republican campaign is gaining momentum.

"Our polls show us either maintaining or slightly improving on the lead that we gained two weeks ago," Sanders said. "We're absolutely confident we are going to carry this state for George Bush."

Clinton

His 17-point lead of August has evaporated, but aides are adamant that he has not written off Texas. He wants to win the state, but it's not crucial.

Rove and Democratic pollster George Shipley each see their party ahead.

"Clinton now leads in Texas, probably by 5 or 6 (percentage) points," Shipley said.

"Bush has been moving up in Texas. He will win Texas with a plurality, if not an outright majority, in the three-way race," Rove said.

The president's biggest problem in Texas, as elsewhere, is the sluggish economy.

The Texas Poll published earlier this month showed 66 percent of respondents calling the economy the most pressing problem. The Texas Employment Commission last week reported nearly a one percentage point jump in the jobless rate - to 7.5 percent in September.

"The president is having a problem in Texas and all over the country because people are unhappy, and when people are unhappy they tend to be unhappy with the guy who is in

Perot

He is the trump card and the joker, the unknown that may do well-or may not. Most followers say his support takes away from Bush votes.

the White House," said Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas.

A major unknown is the Perot factor.

The Dallas tycoon widely is perceived to be as strong in Texas as anywhere, and several analysts suggested that Perot may have given the strongest performances in the first and last debates.

Pre-debate polls had given Perot between 11 and 17 percentage points in Texas, and a crucial question is whether Perot takes votes from Bush or Clinton. Party persuasion factors into most answers.

"It appears Perot is taking more votes from Bush than Clinton at this point," Democrat Shipley said.

"The evidence is not there that the president is being hurt more by Perot," Republican Rove said.

Bush

His re-election is predicated on winning Texas, and its 32 electoral votes in a race that may be decided by the Electoral College, or the House.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

A quote from Live and Learn And Pass It On by H. Jackson Brown seems timely. "Regardless of how much we know, it is never enough. But that's OK because every day, with every new experience, we are offered new opportunities for discovery and growth." And from 365 Things Every Parent Should Know by Doug Fields, "Every parent, (and teacher), should know children don't know the correct answer to 'How many times do I have to tell you...'"

Evidently many students told their parents about Open House that was held at HJH on Thursday night, as it was well-attended. Even with the good attendance, though, we wished even more could have or would have been there. Parents who did attend got a glimpse of their child's education.

This year's elections have involved a great portion of the students in HJH. From grade school through high school, mock elections have been held, polls taken and studies made of elections past and present. In HJH, the voting has been done, the polls have closed and ballots have been counted. President Bush has been reelected by the students with 48% of the vote; Clinton received 32%; Perot, 14% and other, 6%. Bush won by a much wider margin with the teacher vote with 62% of the votes; Clinton, 19%; Perot, 19% and other, 0%.

Weekly Reader, a newspaper used in schools for many years, showed a win by President Bush. Reports are that Weekly Reader has not missed since beginning their voting by students program in 1956. So...stay up late on Nov. 3 and see how students' votes fare and compare.

We would hope that these experiences by our students will prepare them to be concerned and informed voting citizens when they reach voting age. The November issue of "Destination Discovery" reports that barely half of all Americans voted in the 1988 presidential elections. Only 36% of voters between 18 and 24 cast ballots, compared to 69% of those 65 and over. Voting has declined every year since 1960 and the United States now has the worst turnout of any industrialized nation! Students, live and learn and pass it on!!!

Students in Geography Bee and History UIL have begun serious practice. We do need more students to "join up" in these areas.

An organizational meeting for a Junior Historian Chapter got this group off to a good start. Over 40 seventh and eighth graders have shown an interest in this new venture. Election of officers will be soon. This is the only, and perhaps the first, such organization in the Panhandle. Discovery and involvement are the two major elements to be used in the chapter activities. The "Laboratory for Learning" will be the community, county and the Panhandle. Mrs. Waters is teacher-sponsor and several parents have already volunteered to assist in chapter activities. The Texas State Historical Society is the creator and state sponsor of Junior Historians.

Students of the week are Andrew Carr, seventh grade and eighth grader Mariana Ramirez. These two students know what involvement is and they are friendly, courteous and maintain good grades! Congratulations!

Mr. Zimmerman's Industrial Tech classes prepared the float that was co-sponsored by Hereford Educators Association. Actually, the students did the work, Hereford Butane furnished the trailer and HEA paid the entrance fee. Due to Mr. Zimmerman being ill during that time of preparation, the students actually did most of the work. Next week, we'll list those students who worked on the float and those who rose on it in the Homecoming Parade.

We extend "Get Well" wishes to Mr. Zimmerman.

Brown closes the introduction to his book with, "School is always in session and life challenges us to excel at being both enthusiastic student and inspired teacher." Would it be that each of us let that be our motto!

Students urged not to toss the TAAS this week

Hereford High School juniors Jennifer Black, Christina Salcido, Samantha Bordayo, Adrian Villanueva, Jaime Mendez, Ricky Mendez, Adela Martinez, Rosie Medrano and James Davis, surround one of many signs reminding them of the TAAS tests coming this week. Over 100 signs, ribbons and other reminders have been posted all over HHS to remind students of the important tests.

Morality questions cloud American health issues

EDITOR'S NOTE - "He who saves a single life," goes a Talmudic saying, "is regarded as if he saved the entire world." But what happens when the expense of saving a single life is so high that it costs other lives? The first of a four-part series, "Do No Harm," looks at the increasingly complicated ethics of health care.

By DAVID BRIGGS
Associated Press Writer
NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) - A pair of large hearts on either side of her name announce Elizabeth to the world outside. Sounds emanate from the newborn intensive care unit - but they are not Elizabeth's cries.

Elizabeth - her tiny limbs and torso perfectly proportioned but on a frame weighing less than two pounds - cannot cry. The tubes that help her breathe block her vocal chords; a battery of machines monitor her heart and lungs, emitting a low-pitched whine that is the only sound from Elizabeth's crib.

The power and the glory of the American health care system are wrapped up in the high-tech world cradling this 760-gram baby.

Other nations would sacrifice babies such as Elizabeth rather than spend $100,000 to save one life, but at Yale-New Haven Hospital two-thirds of babies her size will live.

After a generation of dizzying technological advances that sent health care in the United States hurtling in pursuit of immortality - at enormous cost - Americans still cling mightily to the idea that health care is a basic human right.

patients and advocates for the poor and disabled that the American medical system is in danger of spinning ethically and economically out of control.

The common good, they say, is ignored to sustain the "myth" that unlimited health care is available for the asking.

For starters, you need only look at the Third World infant mortality rates in some American cities or at the millions of uninsured Americans denied access to basic medical care.

"That's the major medical ethics issue that medical ethics hasn't dealt with," said George Annas, professor of health law at the Boston University Schools of Medicine and Public Health. "We argue whether some white, middle-class person should get an expensive bone marrow transplant. We don't care that 40 million people don't have access to basic medical care."

But the ethical dilemma goes much deeper than that, others say. In a culture that prizes the individual, the question of who makes the final decision - the doctor or the patient - has become the major issue. Few ask Cheers continue to ring out when a child such as Elizabeth is saved. But a consensus is emerging among many surgeons, ethicists, economists,

Search on for print's subject

Does the boy in the print look like anyone you know?

Martha Bridges of Hereford has a limited edition print of the painting, sent to her by a sister, Sue Gast of Memphis. Sue purchased the painting and mailed it to Hereford, thinking it might be a likeness of Martha's grandson, Josh Schroeter.

Martha said the painting, done in 1989, couldn't be of Josh since he was only two years old at the time. "The black hat and boots look familiar, but it's not Josh," she said. The owner of the arts and crafts store in Memphis reported the painting was supposed to be of a Hereford boy. The original painting was done by Jeff Topper and the print is No. 27 of 100.

"I know if it was my grandson, I'd sure want the print," said Martha. The parents or grandparents of the boy in the painting may not live in Hereford now, but if someone out there has an interest in the print, Martha would be happy to part with it. Her phone number is 364-1468.

Clinton has clear lead in new poll

WASHINGTON (AP) - Bill Clinton is "clearly ahead" in enough states to get 261 electoral votes, just 9 fewer than he needs to win the presidency, according to an ABC News survey of voters in all states and the District of Columbia.

Two other polls showed independent Ross Perot with his highest support - 20 percent - since re-entering the race Oct. 1.

The ABC poll, which used a "likely voter group" of 11,431 people from among 18,000 people interviewed, also put Clinton ahead in additional states with 47 electoral votes.

The survey, conducted Oct. 12-21, found that President Bush was not "clearly ahead" in any state and was leading only in Nebraska, South Carolina and Utah with a total of only 18 electoral votes.

Perot was not leading in any state, according to ABC. The poll rated 22 states, with a combined 212 electoral votes, as toss-ups.

It noted that if Clinton were to win all the states in which he is clearly ahead, he would need to win just one or two of the eight additional states in which he now leads.

On the other hand, it said, if Bush won the three states where he now leads, and won all the toss-up states to boot, he would still be 40 electoral votes short of victory.

A U.S. News & World Report poll taken Tuesday and Wednesday showed Perot with 20 percent support, the highest of any poll since he formally entered the race Oct. 1. Clinton was at 45 percent and Bush at 31 percent in the survey of 1,200 people. The poll had a margin of error of 3 percentage points.

A Washington Post poll taken Monday through Thursday with the same margin of error gave Clinton 42 percent, Bush 34 and Perot 20.

TAAS this week for all juniors

If you walk the halls of Hereford High School through Thursday, you'll see a lot of talk about TAAS.

For HHS juniors, and for seniors who haven't passed the three sections of the test, this week is very important.

Juniors here, and others across Texas, will be taking the exit-level Texas Assessment of Academic Skills. It's writing on Tuesday, reading on Wednesday, and math on Thursday. If they pass all three sections, the students are virtually assured graduating from high school. If they don't pass the whole thing, but pass one or two sections, they don't have to take those over again.

Last year, HHS students had a hard time with math. The math faculty has developed a program to help the seniors who haven't mastered the math test. This year's juniors are getting special help, too.

HHS Principal Terry Russell said the students have been offered special TAAS tutorials and classes since the beginning of the school year. This week, it's in the hands of students and their parents.

Teachers say the most important thing parents can do this week for their test-takers is to make sure they get lots of sleep each night beginning Monday, and come to school ready to take the important tests.

It's not just important for the kids: HHS will be "measured" by the state general success of the students on the test. If scores compare well with other schools, HHS (and local taxpayers) will be rewarded; if the scores here are lower, HHS could be penalized, and taxpayers could be hit harder in the pocketbook to make up the difference.

Task force will begin DSGH plan

More than 50 committee members will begin work Tuesday on a three-month project to develop a strategic plan for Deaf Smith General Hospital, according to Ron Rives, administrator.

The group is composed of hospital board members, physicians, hospital employees and community members. The committee will meet several times over the next few months to plan the hospital's future. The plan should be completed in January.

"We've accomplished many of our objectives in the past year to bring DSGH to a higher standard," said Rives. "Now we need to go forward, to plan for the future. We want to be sure that we are anticipating the community's needs in this rapidly changing health care environment."

The group will formulate plans regarding possible changes or additions to the hospital's physical plant; the addition of new services or improvement of current services offered; the addition of new equipment and technology, and formulation of enhanced programs for businesses and health care consumers.

The group's study will probably include an evaluation of the hospital's capital budget for 1992-93. This includes proposed renovations in the OB area of $333,400; medical/surgical area of $77,000; laboratory department of $40,000; radiology department of $40,000, and $750,000 for acquisition and remodeling a physicians' medical building--a total $1,240,400.

The budget proposes another $334,841 for new equipment and construction of an ambulance barn, along with $74,235 in carryover items from the past year's budget, for a grand total of $1,652,478.

"Planning for the future is an important component of any business," Rives said. "Deaf Smith General is no different. We need to evaluate where we have been, where we are, and where we want to be in the future--then work together to meet our goals."

Aikman ready for elections

Aikman Primary School teachers Mary Ann O'Rear and Judy Bullard prepare for the school's election on Monday. Students will sign "voter registration cards" allowing them to vote, then pick the presidential candidate of their choice in the election. Pictures of the candidates appear next to their names to help the students. Mrs. Bullard said the Aikman students in 1988 gave George Bush 66 percent of the vote, the same percentage as the adult voters in Deaf Smith County.

 "A grandchild!" was the quick reply.

At the close of this year, we'll have been in Hereford for 21 years. We've seen this community enjoy some great economic highs and suffer some lows. We've seen citizens act and react. One of our first observations of this city was the pride and cooperative spirit of its citizens.

When we first moved to the community, people would say, "I know you're going to like Hereford!" It was a positive statement, not in the "maybe" category of, "I think you'll like Hereford."

It seems to me we've lost a little of that hustlin' Hereford attitude. People have a right to agree and disagree—that's the Democratic way. But what we all need to do is to focus our disagreements on the issues—not on personalities.

We don't have to be best friends with each other, but we should have respect for one another. And it's better for everybody if we work together. If we can't tell visitors to our city that we live in a great community, it hurts all of us.

We recently read a good editorial in the Abilene newspaper that provides good food for thought:

"Most of us, most of the time, are rational, understanding, tolerant, reasonable, easy-going, fair, practical, patient. We know that we're all human and are subject to making mistakes. We're willing to listen to what others have to say and will try to see the other person's point of view. We try to work things out to everyone's satisfaction as best we can."

"Some of us, unfortunately, are mean-spirited, self-centered, argumentative, suspicious, rude, arrogant, demanding. We make easy things difficult. We see things only from our own perspective...we're quick to jump on the slightest mistake or oversight made by others, but expect them to be forgiving of our own faults—if we even admit to having any."

"If most of us were like some of us, life would be intolerable. We wouldn't have a community; we'd have hell. It's something to think about..."

oOo
We need a change in Washington, but the big problem is not with the president. The real problem is Congress.

Many voters are fed up. They're pointing to increased taxes, budget deficits, funding of obscene art, midnight pay raises, House bank scandals, and legislative gridlock as evidence of the need to clean house and start again. Only time will tell if the rising anger of voters will result in substantial changes in the U.S. Congress, but there are some positive signs.

One, there is a growing movement around the country for term limitations. And, one writer points to the three Rs of Congressional politics--Retirement, reapportionment, revolution.

More than 50 members of the House have already retired along with more than a half dozen from the Senate. Some were fed up with the gridlock; some were involved in the check kiting scandal, and some used the 1992 deadline to retire with their campaign war chests available for personal use.

State legislators throughout the country redrew the political boundaries of Congress based on the 1990 census, and this had an effect on the makeup of Congress. Taxpayer revolt is at an all-time high. Publicity of pay raises, perks, and federal spending were capped off with the House bank scandal.

Voters can make a real difference in November if they are willing to be educated and willing to get involved.

Focus on faith, females, football

BY JACK CHAMBERS

High school football stadiums in Texas are no longer just the sites of Friday night gridiron battles. They have become the focus of a major struggle involving conflicting values. Recent rulings have created a storm of controversy over two touchy subjects: praying at football games and allowing girls on the team.

Since the U.S. Supreme Court banned prayers at public high school graduation ceremonies earlier this year, many school districts in Texas have interpreted the ruling to apply to prayers at football games.

How things have changed in Texas! According to Texas Football magazine, the best high school football game played in Texas since 1960 was San Antonio Lee's 55-48 victory over San Antonio Brackenridge in 1963. Dan Cook, sportswriter for the San Antonio Express-News, concluded his breathtaking account of the game with these words:

"It was all over. Perhaps not many noticed that the winning players didn't leap with joy and rush from the field. Nor did the losers hang their heads and amble off. The two teams knelt together in prayer in the center of the field—a memorable act in itself."

One of the goals of high school athletics should be to teach moral character. But how can we teach morality without acknowledging the source of our nation's values?

David Barton, in his book, "American: To Pray or Not to Pray?" writes: "We have allowed the very principles which produce morality and virtue, and thus stability, to be banned from public life." I heartily agree with his conclusion: "We must regain the conviction that Christian principles are vital to national success, and we must be willing to pursue their reinstatement."

As for the other current issue being debated, the University Interscholastic League legislative council has just voted to allow high school girls to play varsity football.

Ratification of this proposal would be another blow to the distinction between male and female roles in our society. It would be right in line with the determined efforts of radical feminists who want to place women in combat positions in the military. It is a product of the same philosophy that has led to lawsuits against the Boy Scouts which seek to require them to admit girls to their troops.

It seems to me that the argument should not be centered around the potential abilities of girls to withstand the rigors of playing football or flying a fighter jet. The real question is, what does this do to our perception of the difference between guys and gals? Neither sex should be represented as superior to the other, but there are appropriate roles for each. This concept is vital to a society that wants to maintain its "family values."

And what about the right to association? What about the lessons guys learn from playing on a team with other guys? How about their privacy in the locker room? (Indeed, that is already being threatened, as was evidenced in the 1990 incident concerning female sportswriter Lisa Olsen, who insisted on getting locker room interviews with New England Patriot team members, and then sued the team when she felt she was the victim of sexual harassment!)

feel guilty if they want to participate in activities with other guys by trying out for the football team, joining the Scouts, or enlisting in the military. And young ladies shouldn't be told that being a cheerleader on the sideline or keeping the home fires burning when the men are off at war is archaic and discriminatory. (Besides, when it comes to athletics, girls do have many, many opportunities to compete with other girls.)

Also, the implication of boys and girls participating together in a contact sport like football opens up all kinds of unpleasant scenarios. Would you want your daughter gang-tackled by a bunch of teenage guys?

The efforts to remove prayer from football games and to add female players to the team roster are both representative of the war being waged upon the values which formed the foundation of our society.

Sometimes in a football game, it's a good idea for a coach to make a substitution by taking someone out and sending in someone else. The state of Texas would be wise to take girls off the football field and send prayer back in.

Georgia Tyler Hereford not hostile

Calling a place a "hometown" is as emotional as it is physical. That's the voice of experience, folks.

Early on in journalism classes these many years ago, "personal" experiences were not a subject for writing, or reporting.

I'm here to tell you that I'm glad "them days are gone forever," because I have something I need to say.

Living in Hereford for about 15 months did not make this city my hometown. I was tied emotionally to another city and county, by birth, by family and by preference. I'd lived in several other cities, from New York to El Paso, but Dumas was still "home."

I didn't give Hereford a chance. I was too busy driving 200 miles round trip on weekends to see my friends and family, especially a baby grandson.

My lack of focus was honest and I discovered one of the reasons is so simple that it wasn't immediately apparent. In the past when I moved, I had children and husband. New schools, new neighbors, new work situations quickly get one involved in a community.

Coming to Hereford, I had none of those. I met and enjoyed lots of people -- Deaf Smith County courthouse elective and employed personnel, City of Hereford officials and employees, members of the Hereford Rotary Club and First Presbyterian Church, and countless individuals and families who, for some reason or other, attracted my attention and were subjects of feature stories.

Then, in early September I got news that strikes terror daily in families throughout the country. A lump in my breast undoubtedly was cancerous, said the surgeon who would excise it.

When I came to in a hospital bed, I didn't need anyone to tell me the bad news. Lab tests came back and there, in the middle of the bad, was some good.

In the next two days, I couldn't believe the outpouring of concern, love and prayers that were directed toward my family and me. It's a humbling experience.

Flowers and potted plants were special tokens of this caring, and telephone calls and get-well cards came daily.

The staff at The Brand tells me the telephone rang and rang, with questions about my health.

In a few words, I discovered that even if I hadn't accepted Hereford, emotionally, Hereford had accepted me.

During coming weeks, I'll make weekly trips to the Don and Sybil Harrington Cancer Center for treatments and lab tests. These will be enduring because I've found that people are willing to help.

The trouble may be in an otherwise independent person being willing to ask for the needed help. I'm learning.

Thanks to all these people, I've learned there's nothing hostile about Hereford.

--Georgia Tyler.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

I would like to commend all of the individuals who were involved in the additional security required for our Homecoming festivities last weekend. The success of all the activities was enhanced greatly by the cooperation of Hereford Independent School District, local law enforcement personnel, and a host of volunteers.

Chief David Wagner of the Hereford Police Department and Superintendent Charles Greenawalt of HISD communicated closely throughout Homecoming week to assure the safety of all participants, spectators and fans. They were joined by Captain Pat Michael and his entire department, Sheriff Joe Brown's deputies and reserves, Fire Marshal Jay Spain, Texas Department of Public Safety officers and DPS Criminal Intelligence Service, juvenile probation department, Game Warden Jerry Stucki, Hereford Medical Emergency Services, liaison officers from Canyon and Amarillo, and many, many school officials and administrators.

It is unfortunate that circumstances exist which require the valuable time of these dedicated people to ensure public safety at events which are intended to be fun and unite a community. How lucky we are to have each and everyone of you; thank you for your loyalty, your helpfulness and most of all for caring.

I am very proud of our students for the fine behavior they displayed throughout the week. Congratulations to our athletes for an outstanding performance on the field and to the band who treated us to another sensational halftime presentation.

Again, thanks to all who were involved in making this a most memorable Homecoming.

Sincerely,
Tom LeGate
Mayor

Dear Editor:

I wish to personally thank and commend all those who were involved with the Hereford High School freshman class supper at Homecoming. The high school students, teachers, staff and parents made my job quite an enjoyable experience.

Our merchants in town were generous, as always, and helped make our event a smashing success. I also wish to give special thanks to Nancy Mitchell and the Hereford Junior High Cafeteria staff. I can't say enough about their professionalism and cooperation. They're a joy to work with.

Sincerely,
Mary Beth Messer

Dear Editor:

I am concerned about political changes being proposed without knowing the specific plans or pinpointing the what, where, when and how.

I read somewhere that a wise man said: "A change for sake of change is not wise." Also, he said the resulting odds may be 50% for improvement and 50% for worse conditions. However, he cautioned that the improving odds probably would be less than 20% since longterm improvement requires significant thought, planning, dedication and a steadiness of character.

I also recall the Biblical story of the prodigal son which had a happy ending simply because there was a non-changed home to return to. I wonder how long the son remained content--did he soon start a lottery system to obtain easy money?

Anyone who has even been catapulted from an aircraft carrier as the pilot in charge knows that it is a critical time and not a time for radical changes. A steady course takes training, practice, perseverance and determination.

I understand modernization and adaptation to the times require changes, and that those who once made covered wagons are no longer in that line of work. Anyone who would lead must serve as a role model and communicate honesty and responsibility to those following.

It doesn't take much foresight to predict turmoil for the Mideast that could cause critical situations in the near future. Only a skilled tactician can lead us through such quagmires.

Thus, during these political debates, I suggest we keep a sense of humor and not pay heed to the doomsday journalists. The sun will rise tomorrow and one day we will again have challenging goals such as settling the ocean floor and colonizing Mars.

Sincerely,
Garth B. Thomas

Notes on the Law

This election year has brought an unprecedented number and variety of criticisms on the legal system, courts and lawyers. The presidential candidates and many congressional candidates have coined new pejorative terms for lawyers, such as "tassel-loafered trial lawyers," and have vied for position in the polls by capitalizing on the public's image of greedy lawyers and ambulance chasers.

As a lawyer, it is tempting to respond in kind. However, it might be more useful to review the types of reforms that are being proposed. Professor Jeffrey O'Connell has been the driving force behind many reforms in the area of personal injury law arising out of automobile accidents. Professor O'Connell and Michael Horowitz have proposed another innovation regarding the legal ramifications of automobile accidents. This is called the O'Connell-Horowitz proposal.

The central idea in the O'Connell-Horowitz proposal is to give individuals the option of purchasing automobile insurance that does not provide coverage for pain and suffering. People buying car insurance would be given the choice of opting out of buying coverage for pain and suffering. Those who did opt out would pay lower premiums and could neither sue other drivers or be sued for pain and suffering. People who chose not to opt out of pain and suffering coverage would pay higher premiums than others. This would preserve their rights to claim damages for pain and suffering from their own insurers and I would preserve their coverage for pain and suffering inflicted on another person.

According to O'Connell and Horowitz, this would provide a big advantage to lower income people by cutting the cost of basic automobile coverage by 60 percent. With insurance rates over $1000 per year, this might result in a net savings of $600 or more per year. Also, according to O'Connell and Horowitz, the proposal would result in less litigation and provide relief to the overcrowded court systems.

O'Connell and Horowitz seem to adopt as a premise to this proposal that it makes no sense for an individual consumer to purchase insurance to cover pain and suffering. Whether you agree with this premise would likely control whether you favor the proposal or you oppose the proposal. O'Connell and Horowitz argue that it makes no "economic" sense to buy insurance for pain and suffering, because there is only a statistically small chance of an individual being seriously injured in an automobile accident. This might be so, but the other side argues that many people do in fact suffer serious and painful injuries in automobile accidents and that money can be used to obtain medical and therapeutic services to alleviate that pain.

The proposal does merit discussion and there is some indication that the Bush campaign is considering taking a favorable stance on the proposal. There is also a move to present a bill based on the proposal to the U.S. Congress. There are many other issues being debated in this political year. Next week, the idea of eliminating the "exclusionary rule" in criminal law will be highlighted.

whether the treatment is morally justified.

And like the technological world it is struggling to keep up with, the world of medical ethics leaps unbounded across barriers once considered unthinkable.

Consider that only within the last couple of years, the focus of end-of-life decisions has moved from pulling the plug on a comatose patient to the morality of physician-assisted suicide, barely stopping to pause to consider the ethics of withholding food and water from a terminally ill patient.

A general consensus has emerged that competent adults can make up their own minds, but who speaks for Baby Doe, Grandma Doe and all the others who cannot speak for themselves?

"The newborn and the severely debilitated aged do not have rights unless they have the power to exercise them. This is nihilism with a vengeance," said the Rev. Richard Neuhaus, president of the Institute on Religion and Public Life in New York. "People are right to be scared to death."

Of particular concern to many ethicists is that economics, not a sudden moral awakening, is driving the hard ethical questions in the United States today.

Economists say the day of reckoning is near for a nation that has avoided the hard questions other countries such as England, Canada, Ireland and Sweden already have faced. With only a limited budget, doctors in many European countries have learned to withhold care from infants with birthweights under 2 1/4 pounds or terminally ill patients who seek expensive treatments that promise only a limited chance of success.

But not here. In 1960, the United States spent $27 billion, or 5.3 percent of the Gross National Product, on health care. By 1990, the nation was spending $666 billion on health care, or more than 12 percent of the GNP.

In an Associated Press poll taken last year, 77 percent of the respondents said the government never should be able to refuse to pay for a life-prolonging treatment simply because it is expensive. Eighty-one percent said it is morally unacceptable to withhold a new, unproven cancer treatment because it is very expensive.

But corporations, insurance companies and the government have begun to say no more, cutting back on Medicaid, limiting health coverage and forcing employees to pay more of the costs.

Stopgap measures such as increasing insurance copayments will only delay a little longer the choices that must be made, economists and ethicists say.

"On a general level, people like to subscribe to the myth that value cannot be placed on life, that no price is too great to pay," said Earl Shelp, executive director of the Foundation for Interfaith Research and Ministry in Houston. "Sooner or later, the tinkering will come to an end."

In reality, even the current attitude at best is one of benign neglect, say many emergency room physicians who see the price paid by some Americans who are not welcomed into the health care system.

"I don't think the public really understands that we ration," said John Golenski, president of Bioethics Consultation Group Inc. of Berkeley, Calif.

Compare: Some middle-class parents don't have a second thought about getting a doctor out of bed if their child has a fever. But many poor parents "spike a fever" for days because they cannot afford a doctor's visit.

By the time they visit the emergency room, the condition has so worsened that some children contract meningitis or even die, Golenski said.

"I can see these children," he says in the plaintive voice of a healer who remembers consoling the parents of an 11-year-old girl who died for no reason "other than the parents had no insurance."

What many ethicists, economists, theologians and physicians are calling for is a national debate to set priorities and limits on health care based on values that go beyond technical expertise or the ability to pay.

They say values such as equal justice, fairness and compassion should be the yardstick in allocating scarce medical resources.

But many would say that is not the way the system works today. More and more, they say, decisions are made by default by insurance companies, corporations and caregivers on purely economic grounds.

Under this scenario, say economists like Lester Thurow of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and ethicists such as Arthur Caplan of the University of Minnesota, what will happen is a gradual slide from a two-tier to a three-tier health system, with the poor and uninsured being pushed down further as many in America's middle class no longer can afford all the health benefits they once took for granted.

In what Caplan calls the "immoral future," society basically writes off the poor and the children and the handicapped because it does not believe health care is a right.

"It's the fact that we don't have consensus on whether health care is a right, and the community has an obligation to fulfill that right, that, in the end, explains why we don't have some form of a national health care system," Caplan said.

All the technological advances in a medical system finally forced to confront its own financial mortality cannot obscure the basic moral questions facing American society, Neuhaus said.

"We're not in an entirely new moment," he said. "We're asking age-old questions: Who's my neighbor and what's my obligation to my neighbor?"

Herd turns back Pampa by 21-14

Cody Powell didn't really mean to cause the big fumble, but now that it's happened, he'll take it.

When Powell stripped a Pampa receiver of the football in the final minute Friday at Randy Matson Field, and when Shawn Fogo fell on the ball, it meant Hereford had a 21-14 win and had improved to 3-0 in District 1-4A.

Hereford was up by seven points thanks in part to Petey Colvin's three touchdowns. The Harvesters started their last drive at their own 20 with 6:24 left. The drive would have been perfect if it had started at 9:24--Pampa quarterback Tony Cavalier ran for three fourth-down conversions, but with so many plays gaining so little yardage, Pampa was running out of time.

The Harvesters still had 41 yards to go with 28 seconds left. Cavalier hit tight end Justin Collingsworth over the middle on a play that had burned Hereford earlier. He was wide open and caught it for a 20-yard gain, but Powell knocked the ball loose and Fogo fell on it. Hereford ran out the clock on a 21-14 win.

"I was going in for the tackle and I happened to get my hand around the ball instead of his arm," Powell said.

"My man Cody came from the side and hit him," Fogo said. "The ball rolled along and I fell on it. There wasn't much to it."

All three of Hereford's district games have gone down to the wire. In all three, the opposing teams have had the ball in the final minute with a chance to score and win, but Hereford held them off.

"I think we're definitely a team that overcomes adversity and lives up to a challenge," said Fogo, the Herd's safety, noting the close finishes. "It's not that they weren't good teams, and it's not that they didn't play hard, it's just that we played a little harder."

"If we keep up the hard work, we can go a long way," Powell said.

The two teams were remarkably even. Hereford outgained Pampa 329-304, and every other statistical category was just about even. The big difference was in turnovers: Pampa 1, Hereford 0.

Though the game was even, it would not have ended in a tie. Pampa would have gone for a two-point conversion if they had scored on the last drive. Hereford would have had one more penetration, so a tie wouldn't have helped the Harvesters.

Hereford got another big game from tailback Petey Colvin. He rushed 19 times for 170 yards and all three touchdowns. His second

Haney: Herd must win out

Hereford's 21-14 win over Pampa Friday goes a long way toward locking up a post-season appearance for the Herd. Hereford is 3-0 in District 1-4A, while Pampa, Randall and Dumas are tangled up at 2-1.

In the other district games Friday, Dumas clobbered Caprock 42-14, and Randall whipped Berger 35-8.

Hereford's three wins don't clinch a playoff spot, though, and even a win over Caprock next Friday in Hereford would not by itself guarantee the Whitefaces an extra game.

"We need to win out," Herd coach Danny Haney said. "It will come down to the last ball game (at Dumas Nov. 6)."

Two-point play lifts Carthage

By JAIME ARON
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) - Carthage coach Everett "Sleepy" Reynolds said earlier this week that he would devise his strategy against Henderson just before kickoff. He waited even longer to think of the game-winning play.

Reynolds' call for a pass on a two-point conversion with 1:59 remaining Friday night was successful, lifting Class 4A's No. 1 Carthage past defeat district arch-rival Henderson 28-27.

"We made that play up during the time out," Reynolds said. "We put (two players) on the other side to disguise the play."

Joey Blissett's pass to Terence Sanders for the conversion was set up by running back Cory Cato's 55-yard burst on a trap play - another late addition to the Bulldogs' playbook.

"We put that play on this week. We hadn't run it all year. We thought it might work on them," Reynolds said.

Both of the other top-ranked teams were 52-0 winners as 1A's Bartlett smashed Holland and 3A's Southlake Carroll defeated Fort Worth Castleberry to extend its state-record regular-season winning streak to 59 straight games.

Jersey Village was to play its first game as Class 5A's top-ranked team on Saturday and 2A's No. 1 Freer was idle.

Class 5A had two of Friday night's six upsets, including Conroe McCullough shut down No. 4 Spring Westfield's option offense 31-7 and LaPorte knocked off No. 8 Beaumont Central 17-14.

Henderson had a chance to put away Carthage, but missed three PAT kicks and bumbled a two-point attempt. Still, Henderson led 27-20 with 2:25 left to play.

"It was a classic. Two great teams played their hearts out," Reynolds said.

Several teams also gave it their all to knock off higher-ranked foes.

LaPorte (6-2) stunned Central (7-1) with a 27-yard field goal by Brian Spradlin with three seconds remaining to cap a 10-0 second-half rally for the victory.

"We were in this situation before when we played Aldine MacArthur," said LaPorte coach Forrest Wiegand, referring to a 22-20 non-district comeback victory. "I reminded the kids about that at halftime and reminded them what they had to do. They responded well."

Central had been headed toward a season finale showdown against No. 7 Beaumont West Brook for the District 22-5A title. West Brook destroyed Baytown Lee 61-19 to remain one game ahead of LaPorte and Central.

McCullough (4-4) shocked Westfield (6-1-1) by jumping out to a 17-0 lead then watching its defense limit Westfield to 151 yards, 233 below its per game average.

Second-ranked Dallas Kimball returned the opening kickoff against Dallas Skyline 90 yards en route to a 32-7 victory.

Third-ranked Odessa Permian defeated Midland Lee 21-14, handing the once-No. 9 Rebels its third loss in four games and knocking it out of the playoffs for the first time since 1982.

Temple, tied with Westfield for fourth, bounced back from last week's upset loss to Killeen with a 43-8 victory over Copperas Cove.

Killeen, the defending Class 5A Division I champions, fell to Waco, putting both teams and Temple in a three-way tie for the district lead.

Sixth-ranked Converse Judson edged San Antonio Churchill 21-18 and No. 9 El Paso Irvin creamed El Paso 69-7.

Class 4A's second-ranked Austin Westlake used a running to avoid totally embarrassing Round Rock McNeil, a first-year school. The Chaparrals still won 63-0, limiting the Mavericks to 72 yards offense.

Third-ranked Waxahachie fought a tough game against Cedar Hill, but came out ahead 30-16. No. 4 A&M Consolidated handled Brenham 34-12 and No. 5 Austin Reagan waxed Austin Lanier 59-0.

Sixth-ranked Bay City handled El Campo 14-2. No. 7 Gregory-Portland bombed Robstown 53-7 and No. 8 West Orange-Stark beat Little Cypress-Mauriceville 35-14.

Kerrville became the first team this season to lead No. 9 New Braunfels, but the Unicorns, who have allowed 12 points in eight games, came back to win 23-3.

Also, No. 10 Austin LBJ beat Austin McCallum 24-6 behind three touchdowns by Shon Mitchell.

In Class 3A, No. 2 Vernon scored five second-half touchdowns to ease past Graham 47-29. No. 3 Bellville topped La Grange 29-22 and No. 4 Waco Robinson thumped Troy 31-7.

Fifth-ranked Anahuac snuck by Liberty 23-21 and No. 6 Carrizo Springs walloped Crystal City 70-0.

Eighth-ranked Van, seeking its first playoff berth since 1985, was derailed 10-7 by Brownsboro. Daingerfield, tied with victorious Alpine for ninth, was bombed 44-21 by Atlanta.

Class 2A's second-ranked Grapeland, which upset Groveton last week, was embarrassed 36-7 by Leon (6-1). It was Leon coach Mike Hedrick's 100th career victory.

HERD

touchdown, a 73-yarder on the first play of the second half, gave Hereford the lead for good.

"It was a toss, but they had changed the blocking assignments so it would open up outside," Colvin said.

It certainly opened up; Colvin went untouched until he was inside the five-yard line. He was nearly caught from behind—because he cramped up, he said.

The Herd's first touchdown drive of the third quarter took up 20 seconds. Their second TD drive of the third quarter took 6:31 and went 89 yards. Colvin went 44 of those yards, including the final seven for the score. Greg Coplen's third extra point kick of the night gave Hereford a 21-7 lead with 2:13 left in the third.

Next, Pampa mounted a 66-yard, 10-play touchdown drive. Cavalier ran 10 yards on third-down-and-six at midfield, then a reverse produced 14 yards. Marc Hampton scored on another reverse from five yards out, and Tim McCavit's kick cut Hereford's lead to 21-14 with 10:22 left in the game.

Both teams were producing time-consuming drives, so there were only seven possessions in the second half—and one consisted of Colvin's long run and another was Hereford's running out the final seconds.

After Pampa's touchdown,

Hereford chewed up nearly four minutes, then punted to start Pampa's last drive. Pampa was three-for-three on fourth-down conversion in the drive, but all the plays took up too much time.

Hereford's only score in the first half came on the Herd's first possession: an 80-yard, 10-play drive. They drove the first 40 yards gradually, then Colvin ran the final 40 yards himself, cutting left outside a block by receiver Richard Wilbanks.

Pampa scored early in the second quarter. Hereford was penalized for not giving a Harvester room to catch a punt, setting Pampa up at the Hereford 49. They needed six plays. Cavalier escaped what looked like a sure sack by Joel Gaytan and hit Greg Moore in the end zone for a 17 yard touchdown pass. McCavit kicked the extra point, and the score stayed 7-7 into halftime.

"We played well all-around," Hereford coach Danny Haney said. "I can't think of anyone who didn't play well. You have to (play well) in a game like this. You have to have 44 people on the field that are ready to play, because they all have a part in it."

Tarkanian ready for first season with Spurs

By KELLEY SHANNON
Associated Press Writer
SAN ANTONIO (AP) - Jerry Tarkanian may be stepping from college into professional basketball, but the towel-chewing coach isn't changing all his time-tested ways.

The new San Antonio Spurs coach is adapting to the NBA's long season and high-dollar players while trying to stick with his own coaching style and blending a UNLV presence with the Spurs.

"It's a different game, there's no question about it," Tarkanian said. "I wasn't aware of a lot of things."

Tarkanian brings with him the winningest college basketball record, 624-122 over 19 seasons as he took UNLV to the Final Four four times and won the NCAA title in 1990.

He'll get his first real taste of NBA competition Nov. 6 when the Spurs open the regular season at Sacramento.

Tarkanian said he was happy with the start of San Antonio's preseason. The Spurs began with a 1-2 road trip, losing to the New York Knicks and Indiana Pacers and beating the Detroit Pistons.

"I'm a little surprised that we played as well as we did," he said.

All-Star center David Robinson and starting forward Sean Elliott are returning. Former starting guard Willie Anderson, recovering from surgery on stress fractures in both legs, is expected to see action again.

But two of last year's starters won't be back.

Point guard Rod Strickland became a free agent and signed with the Portland Trail Blazers.

Forward Terry Cummings tore two ligaments in his right knee during an off-season pickup game. His reconstructive surgery is expected to keep him out most or all of the season.

Antoine Carr is taking Cummings' place, but Tarkanian says the team needs "another big man - that's a must."

Meanwhile, new Spurs faces abound, including some familiar to Runnin' Rebels followers.

The Spurs - who already had former UNLV player Sidney Green - have added guard Mark Wade, also of UNLV, and Lloyd Daniels, the New York street basketball star who was to play for Tarkanian at Las Vegas but never got to after his arrest at a crack cocaine house.

Tarkanian also has hired two assistant coaches, Rex Hughes and Ron Adams, who once were UNLV aides.

Daniels, who still has a bullet lodged in his shoulder from a shooting in another drug-related incident, says he is drug-free and ready for the NBA.

Tarkanian agrees, and says Daniels is among the top six players on the current Spurs roster.

"The only thing he lacks is experience. He's going to make a lot of mistakes," Tarkanian said.

Other Spurs newcomers are guard Dale Ellis, forward Larry Smith and guard Vinny Del Negro, whom Tarkanian is depending on at point guard.

Tarkanian said he's looking forward to coaching players that don't have the off-court distractions some college players do.

"I don't have to worry about whether the guys are going to class or whether they've paid their rent," he said.

Tarkanian also won't have to operate under NCAA regulations, which he often has criticized.

But Tarkanian found out quickly about NBA policies.

"When we were in New York (for a preseason game) I ran the media out of the locker room. I wasn't aware they could be in there until 45 minutes before game time," he said.

There are some pleasant changes, too.

"We get nice per diem checks and we stay in nice hotels and we don't have to carry our luggage," he said.

Tarkanian said he plans to keep his emphasis on a running game and defense, and he says this Spurs team has outside shooting abilities, with Ellis, Del Negro, Daniels and Elliott.

"You'll see a lot of three-point shooting," Tarkanian said.

So far, Spurs star Robinson is pleased with the Tarkanian environment.

"We're talking to each other out there," Robinson told reporters after the preseason loss to Indiana. "I like this team. I like this team a lot."

Like former Spurs coaches Larry Brown and Doug Moe, Tarkanian becomes another colorful San Antonio coach whose arrival has been heralded as a new era for the franchise.

"The man has proved he can win," Spurs owner Red McCombs said. "I've never been more anxious to get started than I am this year."

Some of the fascination with Tarkanian is not only with his coaching tactics. His on- and off-court persona also attract interest.

Fans anxiously ask Tarkanian about his role in the hit movie "Honeymoon in Vegas."

"I was very surprised when I didn't get an Oscar or some kind of award for that movie," Tarkanian says with a laugh.

As for his towel-biting, Tarkanian says: "The towel's overrated. There's nothing about the towel."

"I wasn't even going to use the towel here, but I think Red wants me to use it," he said. "It does draw attention."

Tarkanian predicts he'll be happy in San Antonio. That is, if conditions are right.

"I think wherever you win, you're happy. Wherever you don't win, you're not happy," he said.

Freshmen getting to play in SWC

An AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
DALLAS (AP) - The Southwest Conference is letting youth be served on its football fields.

From Kyle Field to Ovnby Stadium, freshmen are getting a chance to make an impact. An Associated Press survey of SWC schools shows a total of 116 freshmen have appeared in SWC games this fall, 56 of them true freshmen.

Old coaches used to say a game would be lost for every freshman you played.

Now, coaches have come to the conclusion that's another old tale that should be shoved in the closet along with leather headgears and helmets with no face bar.

"Why wait if you have a talented freshman?" asked Texas A&M coach R.C. Slocum. "If he can beat out the players you have starting then give him a chance."

For example, the defending SWC champion Aggies have six true freshmen who are contributing this season. The Aggies also have played seven redshirt freshmen.

Quarterback Corey Pullig of Deer Park threw a touchdown pass in last Saturday's 35-9 victory over Rice.

Defensive back Chris Colon, also of Deer Park, has become one of the Aggies better secondary performers.

Baylor is depending on its freshmen bigtime.

Tackles Darryl Gardener of Lawton, Okla., and Charles Horton of Dallas Carter have aided coach Grant Teaff's defense. Tight end Josh Wenke of La Feria is playing well as a true freshman.

Baylor is playing 10 true freshmen and 10 redshirt freshmen this season.

"If a freshman is mature enough, I say let him play," Teaff said.

The Rice Owls of coach Fred Goldsmith are playing five true freshmen and 10 redshirt freshmen on its roster.

Wide receiver Emerson Allen of Houston (Jersey Village) has been one of the Owls more exciting freshman players.

Southern Methodist's Ramon Flanigan of Wichita Falls threw a touchdown pass in an early game for the Mustangs before he was injured. SMU has played nine true freshmen.

Texas Longhorns coach John Mackovic is certainly no shrinking violet when it comes to playing freshmen.

He has played six true freshmen and 10 redshirt freshmen this year.

Lovell Pinkney, the exciting wide receiver from Washington, D.C., has averaged 28 yards per catch, one of the tops in the nation.

Mike Adams of Arlington Sam Houston, also a gifted wide receiver, is among the nation's punt return leaders, averaging 18.5 yards per attempt.

Blake Brockermeyer of Fort Worth Arlington Heights is one of the best Texas offensive linemen, starting every game at right tackle.

Dominic Bustamante of Corpus Christi (Calallen) has started the last three games at right defensive tackle. Running backs Curtis Jackson of Plano and Anthony Holmes of San Antonio (Marshall) showed their tremendous skills when Texas defeated Oklahoma 34-24.

"If they are good, get them in the games," Mackovic said. "We're a better football team because they are on the field."

Mackovic had planned more playing time for freshman quarterback Shea Morenz until the San Angelo Central star suffered a torn ligament at a party over the weekend.

Texas Christian Pat Sullivan hasn't been shy about playing his recruits. He has played 24 freshmen, 12 of them true freshmen this year.

Lenoy Jones has started all six games at linebacker and TCU publicist Glenn Stone researched records all the way back to 1952 to try to find a case where an incoming freshman started the first game of the year in Horned Frog football.

Of course, McKinney's Max Knake has made a big impression in the four games he has played at quarterback. Clifford Barnes of Willis Point and defensive end Chris Piland have also started games for TCU.

Five freshmen have played for John Jenkins at Houston. The starting free safety, Thomas McGaughey, is a redshirt freshman and punter Cody Avants is a true freshman. Delithro Bell, a true freshman, has worked his way to second team linebacker.

Eight true freshmen have played for Spike Dykes Texas Tech Red Raiders and five redshirt freshmen have been on the field.

Texas Tech sports information director Joe Hornaday said "playing eight true freshmen is unheard of for Spike."

There's no debate about it. Freshmen have an equal playing opportunity in the SWC.

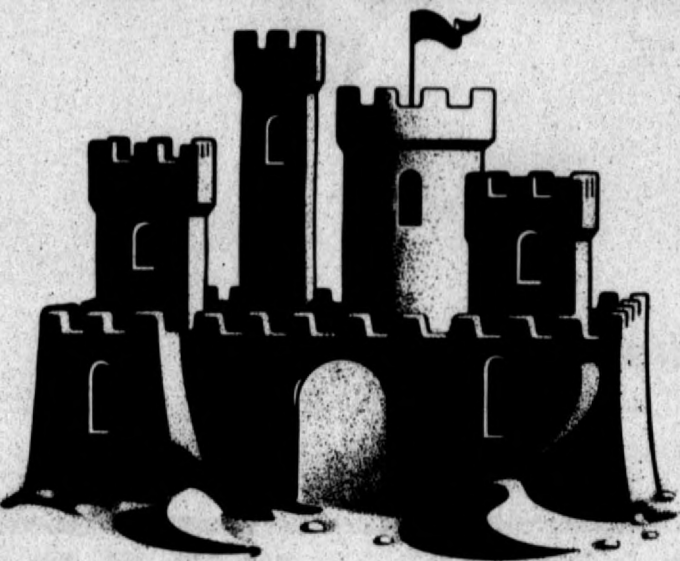

Here is the breakdown at all the SWC schools: Texas Tech, eight freshman and five redshirt freshmen; Houston, two and four; TCU, 12 and 12; Texas, six and 10; Texas A&M, six and seven; SMU, nine and none; Baylor, eight and 13; and Rice, five and 10.

BALTIMORE (AP) - Nolan Ryan, Texas Ranger miracle man, has started a game in more major league parks than any pitcher in the history of the game.

Pokes face revived Raiders

By JOHN NADEL
AP Sports Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) - The Dallas Cowboys have gone from 1-15 to Super Bowl contenders in just three years. The Los Angeles Raiders have gone from 0-4 to respectability in just three weeks.

More should be learned about both Sunday when they meet at the Los Angeles Coliseum.

While the Cowboys (5-1) are slight favorites, the Raiders (3-4) will have a lot going from them, including the backing of a crowd expected to exceed 80,000 and the fact that all things considered, they need a win more than Dallas does.

"It's wonderful," Raiders coach Art Shell said. "The crowd will come out and be vocal. There's a great team coming in to play us - America's Team - and we look forward to it."

"It's a big game for us. To have an opportunity to get back to .500, that's a plus for us. We're trying to get out of the hole we dug for ourselves."

The Cowboys will be playing only their third road game of the season and their first on grass.

Dallas won at the Meadowlands over the New York Giants 34-28 and lost at Philadelphia 31-7, meaning its defense has allowed 59 points in two road games and only 40 points in four home games.

In addition, the next game for the Cowboys will be against NFC East rival Eagles on Nov. 1, while the Raiders are headed for their bye week before playing the Eagles on Nov. 8.

"Nobody's getting too giddy around here this early in the season," Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson said. "With Philadelphia coming up, there's a possible pitfall there and I'm concerned about that."

"The Philadelphia game (on Oct. 5) was a difficult game for us. It was a hard loss, but the guys came back and worked hard and have had two good games."

With last weekend's 17-10 victory over Kansas City, the Cowboys took undisputed possession of first place in the NFC East for the first time since late in the 1985 season.

Despite their three-game winning streak, the Raiders still find themselves one game behind Kansas City and two behind first-place Denver in the AFC West.

"It's tough when you play the NFC East," Shell said. "They have a heck of a reputation for playing physically tough, and the AFC West does, too. So when two physical teams get together, everyone's sore Monday morning and it takes awhile for the team to come back."

"At least we have a bye between Dallas and Philadelphia."

Quarterback Todd Marinovich sat out most of the Raiders' 19-0 victory over Seattle last weekend because of the sprained left knee he suffered in the first quarter. But Marinovich practiced during the week and should start against the Cowboys.

Both teams have played terrific defense recently. The Cowboys have allowed just 10 points in their last two games, while the Raiders have yielded 13 in their last three and just a field goal in the last 10 quarters.

"They're a very physical defensive team," Johnson said. "They're big, strong guys who are very aggressive at the line of scrimmage who rush the passer well."

It would be surprising if the Raiders contain the Cowboys like they've contained their last three opponents, considering all of Dallas' weapons.

Troy Aikman has completed 109 of 177 passes for 1,338 yards and eight touchdowns with nine interceptions; Emmitt Smith is second in the NFL in rushing with 581 yards on 141 carries, and Michael Irvin leads the league in receiving yards with 674 on 33 receptions.

In addition, Shell said, the Cowboys probably have the best special teams in the NFL.

"They're a well-rounded football team," Shell said. "The people who are running the organization have done an excellent job. They have excellent people in the skill positions and the quarterback, of course, is outstanding. Our work's cut out for us."

As far as playing their first game on grass is concerned, Aikman believes it's no big deal.

"We've played some real good games on grass," he said, perhaps thinking about his team's 24-21 victory over the Redskins at RFK Stadium last November. "It doesn't seem to affect us too much."

VFW tournament benefits Crown of Texas Hospice

Ann Meyer, left, and Kathy Acton, center, representing Crown of Texas Hospice, accept a check from Stan Fry Sr. of the Hereford VFW Post 4818. The donation came from proceeds of a golf tournament recently sponsored by the post. Acton is the director of the hospice in Hereford; Meyer, also a Deaf Smith County resident, serves locally and in the region on hospice committees and as a volunteer. The money will be used to meet needs in Hereford.

Oilers need better punt returns

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer
HOUSTON (AP) - The Houston Oilers are expecting something special Sunday against the Cincinnati Bengals.

That's special as in special teams and more specifically punt returns, an area that hurt the Oilers in their 27-21 loss to the Denver Broncos a week ago and an area that's been a problem for more than this season.

The two likeliest candidates to handle the prickly problem of punt returns are newcomer Webster Slaughter and wide receiver Ernest Givins. They are also the most reluctant.

Both say they'll do it in an emergency but they've promoted incumbent Pat Coleman to keep his job.

Coach Jack Pardee may be ready to sound the emergency after Coleman, who has held the job for parts of two seasons, fumbled a punt late in the game against the Broncos.

"You like to get set with one return guy and keep him for 10 years but we haven't been in that situation," Pardee said.

Slaughter, who signed with the Oilers as a free agent on Sept. 29, said the first question the Oilers asked was about punt returns. He went in for one fair catch against the Broncos following Coleman's bobble.

"Now it looks like they want me back there," Slaughter said. "It's not hard to learn punt returns. It's just a bigger chance of getting injured on punt returns. I told them I'd do it in an emergency."

Givins, a key ingredient in the Oilers' run-and-shoot offense, returned 11 punts for a 9.7 yard average last season, but he thinks Coleman should remain in the lineup.

"Pat Coleman has been doing an excellent job back there," Givins said. "Sure, he made a mistake but everybody makes mistakes but you still put him back out there."

Givins made it clear he didn't want any quick hook if he does take over the job.

"I'll do anything if it helps the team but don't put me back there and if I miss one take me out," he said. "You do that and I'll tell you where to go."

The Oilers are averaging 4.0 yards on 13 punt returns this season, a far distance from the 13.2 average compiled by Billy "White Shoes" Johnson from 1974-1980.

Kick returns haven't been the same since Johnson made it an exciting part of the game.

"All eyes are on you," Coleman said. "If you turn it over on a punt return, it's nothing like a receiver dropping a pass or a lineman jumping offside. You can't compare it to that. It's hard to understand how tough it is unless you've been back there."

The Oilers spent the week trying to fix what's broken, including their injured psyche that took another tumble in Denver's Mile High Stadium. It led to a team meeting during the week to reaffirm the team's goals.

"We just wanted to make certain that losing to Denver wasn't taken as more than just one loss," quarterback Warren Moon said. "We can't put too much emphasis on one victory or a loss."

While the Oilers (4-2) honed their sights on the playoffs, the Bengals (2-4) are trying to break out of a four-game losing streak that includes Monday night's 20-0 loss to Pittsburgh.

It was the first time the Bengals have been shut out since a 34-0 loss to Cleveland in 1987. They haven't won in The Astrodome since 1984.

The Oilers rank No. 3 in the NFL in total offense and the Bengals are 27th in total defense, ahead of only the Los Angeles Rams.

"They made a lot of plays and Denver didn't stop them, they just made enough plays to stay in the game and pull in out at the end," Bengals coach David Shula said.

Stopping Houston's running game will be a key, Shula said. Lorenzo White gained 149 yards rushing in the Oilers' 38-24 victory on Oct. 11.

"They had success with their running game and they just kept going and we never stopped them," Shula said. "It didn't surprise me that they kept doing it after they were so successful."

Kickoff is at noon.

Double Duty
SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - Pitcher Jason Jarvis of the University of Utah was a fireman and a starter on the same day.

Hours before Jarvis pitched the Utes to a 9-1 victory over Northern Colorado this spring, he took time out to help a friend extinguish a fire in shrubbery in front of a neighbor's house.

Jarvis and friend put out the blaze, which shot flames 10 feet into the air, with a garbage can they kept filling with water.

Snake In Grass
FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - Davis Love III, one of the stars of the PGA Tour, is protective of his gallery.
As he was walking the fairway of the 13th hole at the Colonial Country Club in the Southwestern Bell Colonial, a snake slithered out on the course and made for the gallery on the other side.
Love was carrying a 1-iron and swung at the snake. He missed. Another swing, and the snake was history.
"I couldn't let him continue," Love said. "He was about 5 feet long, and I didn't know what kind he was."

Milo research in full bloom

LUBBOCK -- Hundreds of thousands of acres of grain sorghum ripening across Texas provide a source of income for farmers year after year. This year, sorghum means a last chance at recovery for farmers who turned to the grain as a replacement for almost two million acres of cotton wiped out by adverse weather. The High Plains alone planted more than a million acres to grain sorghum this year.

The value of sorghum as a food source for people and livestock, as well as the ability to successfully grow it in many parts of the U.S., reflects more than three decades of research by agricultural scientists, says Dr. Darrell Rosenow, professor of grain sorghum breeding with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station at Lubbock. Emphasis of that ongoing research today is to improve the quality of the U.S. crop, he said.

Introduced from tropical Africa and Southeast Asia, sorghum is not native to the western hemisphere, Rosenow said.

The development in 1963 of a cooperative sorghum conversion program between the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) and the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station (TAES) has enabled the United States to utilize the germplasm of exotic sorghums, Rosenow said. The program is aimed at using exotics to improve the sorghum hybrids used on the Texas High Plains.

The majority of the diverse sorghum lines exists in tropical Africa. Tropical areas usually receive fewer hours of light than temperate areas like Texas. The native sorghums from those areas are adapted to shorter days. They are said to be photoperiod sensitive, and require about 12 hours or less of sunlight to initiate flowering.

In the temperate areas of the world such as Texas, the days are much longer than 12 hours. Under such long days, most tropical sorghums won't flower, leaving only a small percentage of the total genetic diversity available for use, Rosenow said.

The need for more genetic diversity was recognized in the early years of sorghum hybrids when little diversity existed, he said. The exotic sorghums grew too tall and matured too late, making them very difficult to use in crosses or to evaluate. The sorghum conversion program was conceived to change the height and maturity of sorghum lines for use in Texas and other temperate areas of the world.

Using the knowledge of inheritance of height and maturity in sorghum lines, J.C. Stephens and J.R. Quinby, sorghum scientists at Chillicothe, conceived the sorghum conversion program. They theorized that crossing and backcrossing exotic sorghums to appropriate short, early lines would result in a shorter, earlier maturing line showing the same traits as the exotic.

Under the sorghum conversion program, exotic sorghums are planted during short winter days in Puerto Rico by USDA-ARS. These lines are then crossed to a short, early maturing line from the United States. Seed from this cross is again planted in Puerto Rico, and the first generation of offspring from the cross, or the F1 generation, is grown. The F1 generation is then self-pollinated. The selfed seed is then planted by TAES in Texas, where the F2 generation, is grown, Rosenow said.

The F2 generation is the first generation to show segregation in height and maturity. A short, early plant containing the desired height and maturity genes is selected from each cross. Seed from that is sent back to Puerto Rico to be back-crossed with the original exotic following the same procedure as above, he said.

The aim of the sorghum conservation program is to transfer the original exotic parent's genes into a short, early maturing version of the exotic line that will mature normally in the United States. After approximately five crosses, the short, early maturing lines possess essentially all the traits of the original exotic, Rosenow said. The improved seed is then released as a converted version of the original exotic.

Official release means the lines are available to anyone, whether they are a private individual or a commercial seed company. The seed company breeders use the lines as new sources of desirable traits in their breeding programs, Rosenow said.

Some converted lines have made tremendous contributions to improving U.S. sorghums. For example, several converted Zerazera sorghums from Ethiopia have been used extensively to improve not only yield potential in the U.S., but also for disease resistance and grain quality.

"The conversion process is a slow process, taking five to 10 years to achieve a converted line," Rosenow said. "But it has provided the only or best source of resistance in many situations." Essentially all the resistance to the sorghum midge have come from the conversion program.

Red Ribbon Week observed at local schools

If you see Hereford school students dressing or acting a little strange this week, encourage them.

Chances are they will be participating in the Red Ribbon Week activities planned for many Hereford students.

While officials hope all students in all grades participate, organizers feel the activities should not impose on families or cost money, children are not required to participate or wear anything, but all that are able are asked to participate.

The schedule includes:

--Monday: "Reverse Peer Pressure," with students wearing clothing inside out or backwards.

--Tuesday: "Shoe Out Drugs," by wearing two different shoes; or, "Shade Out Drugs," by wearing sunglasses.

--Wednesday: "Drugs Are Un-Bearable," students should dress up a favorite teddy bear and bring it to school; students are also encouraged to wear red.

--Thursday: "Black Out Drugs," with everyone wearing all black.

--Friday: "Keep A Lid On Drugs," everyone wears any type of decent cap, with "Say No To Drugs" balloons released at 2 p.m.

At Hereford High School, students will be encouraged to sign a "Pledge Poster" that will be posted at the school. On Friday, hug cards will be passed out; discussion guides for parents and teens, and more Say No To Drugs balloons, will be distributed at the Caprock-Hereford game.

Members of the PALS class at HHS and students who have been identified as at-risk will attend the Panhandle Red Ribbon Rally on Oct. 31 at 9:30 a.m. at Tascosa High School. The rally will include 15 workshops for students including topics like drugs, alcohol, AIDS, stress and communication. For adults, topics will include gangs, dealing with drugs and how to build positive self-esteem in children.

The Red Ribbon Campaign started when Enrique Camarena, an agent with the Drug Enforcement Administration, was murdered by drug traffickers in Mexico in 1985. In response to his death, his hometown in Florida, then many persons across the country, wore and displayed red ribbons to develop an attitude of intolerance toward drugs.

Today, the Red Ribbon Campaign continues as a unified and visible commitment toward a drug-free nation. The campaign is designed to create awareness of the drug problems in our community.

Key Club donates funds for ribbons

D.J. Wagner and Jayson Mines of the Hereford Key Club present a $300 check to Cindy Simons to buy red ribbons for Red Ribbon Week activities in Hereford. The ribbons will be provided to Hereford school children as a reminder to stay drug free. Red Ribbon Week is being observed across the country this week, with special activities planned in Hereford to help reinforce the drug-free message.

"U.S. Rep. Larry Combest merits re-election as U.S. Representative to the 19th Congressional District based on his voting record, his willingness to place principle ahead of political expediency, and his long-standing commitment to reducing federal government spending, paperwork and regulation."
— editorial excerpt from Lubbock Avalanche-Journal

"Mr. Combest, former owner of a small business... is particularly qualified to judge whether the Accountability Act takes a balanced approach to regulatory burdens."
— editorial excerpt from Lubbock Avalanche-Journal

"... I am proud of Mr. Combest for his honesty in this instance and his hard work for his constituents in most instances. Thanks Congressman Combest for representing our part of the country with honor during this debacle."
— editorial excerpt from Brownfield News

"Surely something can be said about the fact that Larry Combest, Lubbock's Republican representative, was among the 70 or so members of Congress who did not write hot checks on the House Bank, and was also among those who did not abuse their free mailing privilege."
— editorial excerpt from Lubbock Avalanche-Journal

"Combest, a member of the Agriculture Committee, has gained the reputation of an expert on farm issues. He's also been a tireless fighter against big government, as evidenced by his creation of the FAIR task force (Fight Against Intrusive Regulations). And his call for a spending freeze to stop deficit spending, while admittedly a little ahead of its time, is growing in popularity on Capitol Hill."
— editorial excerpt from Amarillo Daily News

"If the U.S. House had more representatives like him, I think we could solve a lot of this country's problems. He serves the people of his district... That's because he keeps an ear tuned to his constituents, and he knows what they are concerned about before he comes home to listen."

Members were reminded of the Halloween Carnival planned Oct. 31 at the County Bull Barn. Each member was asked to bring soft drinks and candy bars to the next meeting to be distributed at their Halloween booth.

Hyer, service co-chairperson, quizzed members on their knowledge of Disney trivia as the night's fund raiser for the Christmas Stocking Fund.

Rosebud reported that Brenda Ramey's son, Trevor, recently had an operation on his finger resulting from a basketball injury.

Deann Harris, membership chairperson, instructed members to be thinking of who they would like to invite to the fall rush party.

Informative program on flags presented

Troyce and Grant Hanna recently presented an informative program on the flag for members of the Lone Star Study Club when the group met in the home of Wilma Goettsch.

The Hannas' presentation included flag etiquette, flag history and the respect that should be shown to the flag. They also incorporated in their program a slide presentation.

Remarks were given by Grant Hanna concerning his involvement in the community with the presentation of the flag at parades and at funerals of veterans. He averages folding flags two to three times a month. He mentioned his observation during parades when some citizens do not show respect to the flag when it passes.

Troyce Hanna related some background on the flag. She said, "A nation's flag stands for the country's land, its people, its government and its ideals. It can stir people to joy, courage and sacrifice."

The earliest civilizations of Babylonia thrived about 3,500 B.C. and evidence has been found that they carried a standard at that time also. Egyptians also flew the first flag-like symbols. Flags became important in battles as generals watched where their men were and the soldiers could see which way the wind was blowing which helped them know better how to aim their arrows and spears.

Symbols used in flags go back many thousands of years. The Stars and Stripes is among the oldest national flags in existence.

The proper display and respect for the flag was given by showing slides presented by the National Americanism Commission of the American Legion.

A Flag Securing Ceremony was presented to the Lone Star members by folding a flag as the meaning for each fold was explained.

The program concluded with the poem "It's Just A Piece of Cloth." Members were presented with a Flag Code by the speakers.

In the absence of the club president, Ursalce Jacobsen presided over the brief business meeting in which the minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

The hostess served refreshments to the guest speakers, Mr. and Mrs. Hanna, and members, Betty Jo Carlson, Oneita Davidson, Margaret Ann Durham, Naomi Hare, Jacobsen, Retta Ramp, Verna Sowell, Ruby Stevenson, Quintna Waits, Jo Wade, and Gladys Willoughby.

The next meeting will be held Nov. 10 in the home of Margaret Ann Durham.

Residents' son weds Oct. 10 in Round Rock

Austin residents, Sheila Kay Dalton and Duane Joseph McNaney, were married Saturday afternoon, Oct. 10, in St. William's Catholic Church in Round Rock.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Timothy Dalton of Kansas City, Mo., and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James R. McNaney of 604 E. Fourth St.

The marriage was officiated by the Rev. Louis Pavlicek, church pastor.

The altar was decorated with two brass paradise candelabra adorned in mauve carnations, rosarios, white pixie carnations, baby's breath and fern leaves with a white silk bow in each. Also, included on the altar was a brass memorial candelabrum in memory of the bridal couple's grandparents who are deceased: Charles and Mary Jo Dolan, Thomas Dalton, and William and Mary McNaney. The memorial candle was decorated with a matching white silk bow and ivy and was lit by the fathers of the bride and groom at the beginning of the ceremony. In addition, on the opposite side of the candle, was the unity candle placed in a brass stand and decorated with white ribbon. Ivy supported the unity candle and tapers which the mothers carried when the ceremony began. The kneeling bench was adorned with white ceremonial cloth.

The bride's sister, Michelle McIntosh of Windsor, Calif., served as matron of honor. The groom's best man was former Hereford resident, Kirk Jones of Greeley, Colo.

Bridesmaids were the bride's sisters, Maureen Dalton Link of San Diego, Calif., and Kathleen Dalton of Kansas City, Mo.

Groomsmen were the groom's brother, Curtis McNaney of Swartz Creek, Mich., and Greg Herbert of Austin.

Katie and Kevin McIntosh, children of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce McIntosh of Windsor, Calif., served as flower girl and ring bearer, respectively.

The groom's nieces, Amanda and Pamela Klein, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Rick Klein of Hereford, lit candles.

The bride's sister, Kathleen Dalton of Kansas City, Mo., sang wedding selections and was accompanied by organist, Joseph Ambrosavage.

Musical selections included classical music of Bach, "Ave Maria" and "Gaelic Blessing" by John Rutter with an instrumental procession "Trumpet Voluntary" by Henry Purcell. Also, "Lord of All Hopefulness" by Jan Struther played when the groom's sisters, Kathy Waller, Mona Klein and Diane McNaney, carried up the gifts at the offertory; the "Panis Angelicus" by Cesar Franck performed for communion; and the recessional "Trumpet Tune in D Major" performed by Henry Purcell.

The bride's parents presented their daughter in marriage. She wore an ivory taffeta gown featuring a V-neckline which flowed into a beaded collar with a scalloped edge. The fitted bodice was lightly beaded with iridescent sequins on appliques of embroidered organza. The basque waist was accented with a pleated cummerbund design and the full skirt flowed into a chapel-length train with a low accent at the bustle.

The bridal veil of cream tulle was gathered at the bride's crown to a lightly sequined embroidered organza bow accented with pearls. The veil softly cascaded down in three layers of the cream tulle with pearls gently dispersed throughout.

She carried a cascading arrangement consisting of cymbidium orchids, white pixies, English ivy and baby's breath with an ivory ribbon running throughout the flowers.

Bridesmaids wore tea-length stain teal dresses with matching shoes. Each dress featured a V-neckline and satin material draped from the bodice and gathered at the waist joining a bow of the same material. They carried loose hand-held arm bouquets of mauve carnations, white pixies, rosario, plumosa, ivy and baby's breath scattered throughout.

The historic Barr Mansion's courtyard was the setting for the reception. The bride's three-tiered almond cake was adorned in various shades of mauve roses and white icing in the form of ribbons and bows. The groom's German chocolate cake had a basket weave fudge icing topped in pecans. The cake table was decorated with the bride's and bridesmaids' bouquets.

The menu at the reception consisted of mu shu pork flatbreads, cucumber dill sandwiches and goat cheese rolled in spices and flowers.

Kathy Coleman of Kansas City, Mo., assisted with the registry and wedding preparations.

The bridal couple departed from the mansion in an array of spraying champagne, bird seed and a multitude of colored sparkles. They left for a honeymoon to the Fredricksburg area.

The couple plans to reside in Pflugerville.

The bride received a B.S.B.A. degree in accounting from Rockhurst College in Kansas City in 1986. The groom received a B.B.A. degree in accounting from West Texas State University in 1986 and a master's degree in finance in 1988 from Texas A&M University. Both are employed as auditors with the Texas State Auditor's Office in Austin.

Out of town family members attending the wedding represented Kalispell, Mt., Tulsa, Okla. and Eastsound, Wash.

What to ask about your medicines

The National Council on Patient Information and Education suggests asking these five questions every time you get a prescription medicine:

1. What is the name of the medicine and what is it supposed to do?
2. How much of the medicine should I take, when should I take it and for how long?
3. What foods, beverages, other medicines or activities should I avoid while taking it?
4. What are the possible side effects, and what should I do if they occur?
5. What written material is available about the medicine?

With answers to these questions, you'll have the knowledge that you need to take your medicine correctly.

Red Cross Update

BY BETTY HENSON

By late September, more than 1,500 Red Cross workers had served more than 170,000 meals to the victims of Hurricane Iniki on the islands of Oahu and Kauai. Shelter as provided to 17,000 people and the cost of providing disaster assistance to those victims was estimated at $10 million.

The Red Cross disaster relief operations continue in Florida, Louisiana and Guam. The process of providing assistance, such as groceries, new clothing, medicine, basic household items, tools, temporary housing and emergency home repairs to families, will continue for some months. Volunteer staffing needs will continue for months as replacement workers are needed. More than 3,000 workers have been trained to support the efforts of thousands of local volunteers.

Our chapter is helping the national disaster relief effort by raising funds. A garage sale will begin at 9 a.m. Thursday and continue through Friday and Saturday.

A Disaster Relief Training Workshop will be held later to train volunteers to help in disasters. Please call the office if you would like to help.

Volunteers are needed every day next week. Please call the office at 364-3761 if you can share some time to help with the garage sale.

— YOUR EYES —

HUNTING SEASON

Whether you're shooting a target for practice or a deer in the woods, it's vital to have good vision when you squeeze the trigger. To shoot with accuracy takes excellent hand-eye coordination and the ability to distinguish detail at considerable distance and against varied backgrounds. The "picture" the hunter sees may be confused by distance, movement, and difficult light and weather conditions.

Unfortunately, some hunters end up shooting fellow hunters instead of animals. A study in Minnesota found that 77 percent of those who had wounded fellow hunters had defective vision -- and half of them didn't realize it! In addition, about 15 percent of the male population is either color-blind or color-deficient and dangerous to their fellows.

For safety's sake, every sportsman who shoots a gun should have his or her vision checked annually. Correction -- glasses or contact lenses -- may not only protect other hunters in the forest but improve the accuracy and effectiveness of shooting.

We all enjoy the beautiful sights and smells of the spring. Yet, that seems so far away with fall ending and winter still to pass. However, now is an excellent time to prepare your flower bed for spring flowers.

October through November is a great time to purchase bulbs while a good selection is in the garden shops. All bulbs, except tulips and hyacinths, may be planted at any time. If you are going to purchase tulip and hyacinth bulbs, chill them in a refrigerator until mid or late December before you plant them.

Spring flowering bulbs need to be placed in well prepared beds. The base of the bulb will need to be at a depth that is three times the diameter of the bulb. In sandy soil, set the bulb slightly deeper and in clay soil less deeply.

Besides bulbs, check the nursery or garden center for started plants. These can include snapdragons, sweet williams, calendulas and pansies. If these are planted now, they should survive the winter and provide excellent color in early spring. You should wait until late October or November to plant your pansies.

Since it is that time of year when leaves fall off of trees, now is a good time to collect leaves for the compost pile. You'll need to have extra soil available so that each six-inch layer of leaves will be covered with several inches of soil. Always wet the layer of leaves before adding the soil. It is also necessary to add about one pound of lawn or garden fertilizer to each layer of leaves. This will help provide the necessary nitrogen to the leaves for decomposition.

By preparing your flower bed now, you can insure yourself of beautiful flowers in the spring. I cannot think of a better way to add color to the world after a grey winter.

Steel Roofing Comes of Age in West Texas

Cover-All Home Pros of Lubbock, having specialized in steel siding, eaves and overhang trim for brick homes for 32 years, started receiving calls about steel roofing and decided to investigate the product. They found a wide variety of metal roofing available for the residential homeowner. They range from 29 gauge galvalume to 18 gauge Grecian copper. Warranties ranged from none at all to 20 years on both labor and material. After proper investigation it was found that the 26 double coated steel material, carrying a 20 year labor and material warranty, is the best buy for our sometimes damaging climate. This type of product is available in many new designer colors.

With 32 years of experience in the home improvement field, L.K. and Barbara Lankford, owners of Cover-All Home Pros, know it's not enough to have a quality product. You must have properly trained and qualified people to install the product. With this in mind, they started seeking a person that was factory trained, honest, and able to manage this new department. They chose Lee Wright, a contractor with 24 years experience in the home improvement business and all types of roofing. Lee is most impressed with this steel roofing system.

To introduce this product to this area we are offering discounts of up to 25% on our most popular colors in 26 gauge, 20 year warranted steel. Only a limited number of roofs will be installed at this greatly reduced price.

Of even greater interest to the homeowner is the fact that loans are available to those who qualify with up to 20 years to repay the loan, and no down payment. In addition to steel roofing, all of our steel siding, eaves and overhang trim covers can be financed. Call for a free, no obligation estimate at 748-1822 or 1-800-248-1149.

Former resident weds Oct. 17 in Albuquerque

Wedding vows were exchanged by Kristin Mariette Healer of Albuquerque, N.M. and former Hereford resident, Casey Ray Daniel of Lubbock, Saturday afternoon, Oct. 17, in the Montgomery Blvd. Church of Christ in Albuquerque. Officiating at the ceremony was Harvey Porter, pastor of the church.

The bride is the daughter of Charles and Lynn Healer of Albuquerque and the bridegroom is the son of Harley and Linda Daniel of 213 Ranger Drive.

The church was decorated with candelabra arranged in front of a pink draped background, a white runner which led the way to the front of the church, and the unity candle which was flanked by baskets of gladioli, lilies, mums, and assorted fall greenery. Pews were marked by candelabra accented with burgundy and pink bows.

Krista Toombs of Lubbock was maid of honor and the groom's twin brothers, Mike and Mark Daniel, served as best men.

Bridesmaids were Teri Forest and Kelly Farmer, both of Amarillo, Brandi Matthews of Lubbock and Melissa Weaver of College Station.

Groomsmen were the bride's brother, Matt Healer of Albuquerque; the bride's cousin, Alexander Tenney of Albuquerque; Steve Dollar of San Antonio; and Brent Berry and Kevin Hansen, both of Mesa, Ariz.

Flower girl was Erica Hoover, daughter of Phil and Karen Hoover of Albuquerque. Ring bearer was Casey Paul Page, son of Mike and Lori Page. The bridal train was carried by Thomas and Phillip Hoover, sons of Phil and Karen Hoover.

Presented in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a designer's gown created in a rich winter white brocade. It was fashioned with an open sculptured V-neckline which was encrusted in pearls bordering the contour and full-length Juliette sleeves. The fitted basque waistline allowed the full ballgown skirt to float to the floor and sweep into a mid-cathedral length train. The pearls that appeared on the neckline reappeared on the basque seaming at the hip line.

For her hair, the bride chose a demi-tiara of pearls and delicate silk flowers. A pillow pouf accented the back of the veiling and allowed the illusion to cascade from the back of the headpiece. Her jewelry consisted of pearl and diamond earrings.

The bride carried an elongated bouquet of white roses and stephanotis with cascading ivy.

In keeping with bridal tradition, as something old and borrowed, the bride carried an antique lace handkerchief which she borrowed from the groom's mother. It had also belonged to the groom's great-great-grandmother. The bride's wedding attire served as something new and a blue garter was something blue.

The bridal attendants wore straight floor-length two-piece suits made of burgundy brocade and designed with pleated sleeves. Each carried a single pink rose accented with greenery.

The bridal couple's parents entered the sanctuary to the music of "Heirloom" and each lit the unity candle. The processional was "Perfect Union" and the recessional was "As For Me and My House." The couple lit the unity candle to "Endless Love." Other selections provided by the church chorus included "Somewhere in the World," "Just You and I," "Love of the Lasting Kind" and "Friends."

The bride's cousin, Heather Tenney of Albuquerque, invited guests to register at the reception held at the church.

Cake was served by Rhonda Anz of Lubbock, and Keri Buck and Sarah Cushman, both of Albuquerque. Punch and coffee were poured by the groom's cousin, Chari Suttle, and Kelly O'Malia and Tracy Albright, both of Albuquerque.

The bride's four-tiered cake, which was placed on a table covered with a white lace cloth, was decorated with white roses cascading down the side and topped with Precious Moments bride and groom figurines. The groom's chocolate fudge cake was covered with chocolate covered strawberries.

Leaving for a wedding trip to San Antonio, the bride was attired in a red and black checkered dress with black patent accessories. The couple plans to reside in Lubbock.

The bride, a 1988 graduate of Sandia High School in Albuquerque; attended Abilene Christian University and Texas Tech University where she will graduate in December with a bachelor of science degree in elementary education. She is presently doing her student teaching in Lubbock.

The groom, a 1987 graduate of Hereford High School, graduated from Texas Tech University in 1991 with a bachelor of business administration degree in accounting. He is employed by Tri State Chemical in Brownfield.

The rehearsal dinner was hosted by the groom's parents Oct. 16 at Stephens in Albuquerque.

Last-minute costume tips

Putting together kids' Halloween costumes can be a last-minute ordeal. If you're scrambling to get your child ready for a Halloween party or for trick-or-treating, these tips may help:

-To make a cape for a Robin Hood, Batman, a queen or magician costume, cut a piece of wide felt to the desired length to suit your child. (Be sure the cape is short enough to prevent your child from tripping and falling). Punch holes along the width of the felt with a hole punch. Weave heavy string or cording in and out of the holes to gather the felt. Drape the gathered felt on your child's back and loosely tie the cording in front. For Robin Hood's quiver, glue a piece of brown burlap over a potato chip can. Tie a string around it to sling over your child's shoulder. Fill it with cardboard arrows or use the can to carry the best treats!

-For a Dalmatian, stencil various shapes and sizes of black spots all over a white sweatshirt or pajamas. Make the stencil by cutting out holes on a large index card. Use a sponge and black acrylic paint to dab the spots on the fabric through the stencil. For ears, stencil more spots on pieces of white tagboard you have cut in shapes to resemble ears. Glue the shapes to a headband. Stay away from dog catchers on Halloween night!

-Put reflective tape on all costumes if your kids are outside in the dark. Neon dimensional fabric paints will also add a glow in the dark when applied to clothing.

-Face painting is a fun and safe alternative to wearing a mask. Here's a simple recipe you can whip up with your kids:

In a small, clean, empty yogurt container, stir together 1 teaspoon of cornstarch and 1/2 teaspoon of cold cream until well blended. Add 1/2 teaspoon of water and stir. Add food coloring one drop at a time until you get the desired color. Make several batches in different colors and paint faces with a small paintbrush. The paint will wash off with soap and water. If you have leftover paint, cover the containers and use another time for birthday parties or for dressup on a rainy day.

ATLANTA (AP) - Elton John has filed a $35 million lawsuit against a tabloid TV show because one of its reporters allegedly said he moved here to be near an AIDS treatment center.

"Hard Copy" reporter Deborah L. Scranton is accused in the lawsuit of saying off the air that the British pop singer moved to Atlanta to be near the U.S. Centers for Disease Control, which she allegedly said was an AIDS treatment center. The CDC does AIDS research but does not treat patients.

The lawsuit, filed Wednesday in Fulton County Superior Court, says John isn't infected with the AIDS virus and lives in Atlanta "simply because he likes the city." He bought a condominium in Atlanta last year.

Linda Lipman, a spokeswoman for "Hard Copy" in New York, said Thursday she wasn't aware of the lawsuit.

Nutrition guidelines for children

Children have become more sedentary over the last few decades, and are heavier than children were in the past. In fact, 30 percent of America's school-aged children are overweight or obese, and many of them grow up to be overweight adults.

The American Academy of Pediatrics is taking advantage of October's Child Health Month to urge you to make sure your children eat healthy foods and exercise. Follow these guidelines.

-Breast-feeding is the best source of nutrition for infants, with the only acceptable alternative being iron-fortified infant formula. Infants under 1 year of age should not receive cow's milk or low-iron formula.

-Solid foods and juices should be started at 4-6 months of age.

-Dietary fat should not be restricted in infants. After 1 year of age, children should receive a varied diet from each of the food groups. Diets that avoid extremes are safest for children.

The United States went off the gold standard in 1933.

What teens can do to help

There's nothing scarier than an out of control mob, bent on mayhem and destruction. The recent riots in Los Angeles are proof of that. The situation can be particularly frightening when the violence is racially motivated.

Community and church leaders who were involved in or near the crisis in L.A. say teens can help defuse racial tensions in their neighborhoods, schools and communities. Their suggestions are featured in the October 1992 issue of The New Era, a magazine for teens published by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints.

To Prepare

1. Talk about it. Openly discuss racial tension with your parents, teachers, church leaders and friends. Take advantage of forums at school or church to discuss what's happening and how to avoid negative behavior. If there aren't any discussions going on in your area, suggest to your teachers or leaders that some be developed.

2. Broaden your cultural horizons. Take classes, try new foods, learn a different language, and make new friends with people of other cultures. Sometimes we think that if someone is different than we are, friendship could be awkward. But you'll be surprised at how similar we all are, and your world can expand when you see it through someone else's eyes.

3. Get involved in the community. Petition for legislative action where it's needed. Write to public officials. Prepare to run for office yourself some day. If you have experienced prejudice in one form or another, put those negative feelings to good use by resolving to be compassionate and tolerant of others.

4. Treat others with respect. Racial problems could be avoided if everyone would remember the Golden Rule and treat others as they themselves want to be treated.

When You Meet Racial Tension Face to Face

1. Listen. Follow any directions you may be given by those with proper authority. Do what your parents, teachers or the police tell you. Also, listen to others and try to understand their frustrations. Sometimes being a good listener can help someone vent strong feelings and prevent violence or irrational behavior.

2. Stay away from violence. Even if you're not involved, being a spectator encourages violent behavior and you could be unwillingly drawn into the situation. Avoid people and environments that foster violence.

3. Suggest alternatives to racial violence. If you know someone who is contemplating violence, suggest they try another way. For example, diverting angry energy to a physical activity, talking it over with someone they trust, or temporarily leaving the area. Make an effort to find peaceful ways to resolve problems and disagreements.

4. Be a part of the solution. If disaster of any kind occurs in your area, take the opportunity to serve your community by helping to clean up and provide for those in need. Sensible teens can be a stabilizing influence and a real plus in the community.

Curtsinger reports on 173rd Sovereign Grand Lodge

A report on the 173rd Sovereign Grand Lodge Session held recently in Atlanta, Ga. was given by Susie Curtsinger when members of the Hereford Rebekah Lodge #228 met Tuesday evening with 16 members present.

Curtsinger said that Odd Fellows and Rebekahs were selected by President George Bush to receive the Presidential Community Service Commendation which was presented to Sovereign Grand Master Carl Williams and International President of Rebekah Assembly Darlene Clemmer by Jerry Dahmen, recipient of the award from President Ronald Reagan.

President Bush stated, "Through your generosity and hard work, you have shown that the tradition of neighbor helping neighbor is alive and well in our country. Your efforts profoundly influence the life of your community, and they are shining examples for us all." The coveted award honors Odd Fellows and Rebekahs for their achievements in environmental and human services, including the "Living Legacy" tree planting program, its network of senior care homes, the Arthritis Foundation, World Eye Bank and Visual Research and educational loans for the disadvantaged.

Noble Grand Anna Conklin presided at the business session when 17 visits to the sick, 27 cards, 10 dishes of food and six flowers were recorded.

Members were reminded of the toy and cake walk to be featured during the CrimeStoppers' Annual Halloween Carnival.

Genevieve Lynn was hostess for a Halloween party, complete with costumes, following the regular meeting.

Others present were Irene Merritt, Marie Harris, Ben Conklin, Jo Iribeck, Dorothy Collier, Nelma Sowell, Peggy Lemons, Lydia Hopson, Shirley Brown, Faye Brownlow, Ursalee Jacobsen, Ocie Bolton and Ann Werner.

The next meeting has been changed to 7:30 p.m. due to the time change.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - Grand Ole Opry comedian Minnie Pearl will be honored on her 80th birthday Sunday with a 5-foot-tall birthday card.

The card, which was produced in conjunction with a race sponsored by the Minnie Pearl Cancer Foundation, will be delivered to Miss Pearl's home.

Miss Pearl, a breast cancer survivor, hasn't performed since suffering a stroke more than a year ago.

With her old-fashioned outfits, high-pitched "Howdee!" and chatter about "ketchin' a feller," Miss Pearl was the leading comedian in country music for more than 40 years.

Hospice program explained to La Plata Study Club

Kathryn Acton gave an informative presentation on the Hospice Program when members of La Plata Study Club met Tuesday evening in the home of Yvonne Simpson with Dorothy Mercer serving as co-hostess.

Acton explained that the Hereford program is a part of the Crown of Texas Hospice which was founded in Amarillo in 1983. The goal of hospice, which is international, is to give care "to the weary traveller and to allow the terminally ill persons to be where he or she wants to be, doing what they want to do as long as they can"

In the absence of the president, Lois Mitchell conducted the business meeting. Following the recitation of the club collect and the business reports, Audine Detman reported on the plans of the Hereford Beautification Committee.

Refreshments were served by the hostesses to Margaret Schroeter, Mitchell, Avis White, Audine Detman, Ludie Greeson, Nelda Fortenberry, Dorothy Ott, Clara Brown, Betty Taylor, Mildred Fuhrmann and Dorothy Prowell.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

POLITICS, PORK AND PREDICTIONS

Unless you've been held captive in your basement by aliens from outer space, you know it's an election year. The candidates are making charges and counter charges and both camps have muddy hands. Workers are wearying, campaign managers hope they are cresting and election coverage crews are gearing up for a long night on Tuesday, November 3rd.

I seldom make predictions on political matters, but I'm making an exception in this column. I'm going to make four predictions and I want you to remember where you read them. They won't appear in Rush Limbaugh's newsletter, George Will's column or William F. Buckley's commentary. Remember, you read them first in this newspaper, in the Minding Your Own Business column.

From the crystal ball

My first prediction is that one candidate will win. My second prediction is that it will be a close race. The third is that if the Democratic candidate is elected, it will have an adverse effect on small businesses. The final prediction is that when the election is over, the majority of Americans will not have even cared enough to vote.

My first prediction is a certainty. The second a little more risky, but I still make it with confidence. The third is a frightening scenario for small business owners, because it would give the Democrats majority control of both the Congress and the White House.

Please bear in mind that I too, own my own business. Remember also that I hold the opinion that small businesses make up the economic engine that propels this great nation of ours. Therefore, I am concerned that having one-party dominance in both the legislative and executive branches would mean we're in for tough times in the business world.

The "tax and spend" party has dominated our House and Senate for nearly 3 decades. Under their leadership we've seen record government growth, deficit spending and increased regulations. These "pork barrel" policies have forced millions of small business owners to call it quits.

The fourth prediction - that majority of Americans won't even vote - is the most disheartening. How I would love to be wrong on this one. However, records of voter turnout show that the silent majority sit at home while the vocal minority go to the polls.

Millions of Americans are not even registered to vote. According to the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, 25 percent of American businessmen and women are not registered. Nearly 40 percent of those who were registered, didn't vote in the last election.

The high cost of not voting

This election year we can't afford to not vote. The cost of government is skyrocketing and we must regain control. According to U.S. Representative Larry Combest, (R-TX) the cost of government regulations alone is more than $4,100 per household. The U.S. Government gave us more than 67,000 pages of new regulations last year.

In response to this growing glut of paperwork, Combest and Senator Orrin Hatch (R-UT) have proposed legislation that would cap the cost of new regulations. On behalf of all small businesses, I applaud their efforts. We must keep fiscal conservatives in Washington.

If we are not careful to elect men and women who care about these costs, we could be regulated right out of business. Democrat or Republican, we need men and women who will serve us well. Men and women who understand that neither Congress nor the President create jobs; only healthy, profitable businesses offer employment opportunities for our work force.

I urge you to go to the polls on November 3, 1992. Cast your vote for individuals who will help us reduce government spending by cutting waste, paring pork and lowering taxes. It can be done, if we care enough to vote.

DALLAS (AP) - Ross Perot and his wife were flying across Asia to London and the Dallas businessman had brought along enough work for what he thought was an eight-hour flight. The trip took 17 hours, and Perot was restless.

Margot Perot was reading the "Winds of War" and Perot wanted in on the book.

"Margot would read a page, tear it out and give it to Ross," recalled Tom Meurer, a former Perot aide whose wife was on the plane.

"Ross reads faster than Margot, and he kept saying, 'Hurry up, Margot. Read the next page.'"

The book on Henry Ross Perot is that he can hardly ever wait to turn the page. He has had a storybook life of fabulous wealth, high-profile crusades, fervent patriotism and worldwide celebrity.

He was an Eagle Scout by age 13, a millionaire in his 30s. He works at a breakneck pace, demanding action and loyalty of those around him. He disdains inefficiency, once described his company's philosophy as "Ready, fire, fire, fire," and likes to quote Winston Churchill's dictum: "Never give in. Never give in. Never. Never. Never. Never."

His favorite hobby is racing a souped-up speedboat at 135 mph, sometimes chasing his helicopter-flying son across a Texas lake.

He even talks fast.

For most of his life, Ross Perot has been in a hurry. He badgered his way into the Navy, then couldn't wait to get out. He set sales records at IBM, and found the pace too slow. He sold his company to General Motors Corp. and took a seat on the GM board, but when the giant automaker was slow to reform, consented to an acrimonious buy-out. He burst onto the national political scene last spring with talk of joining the presidential race and just as quickly bailed out when he thought he couldn't win.

Now the 5-foot-6 billionaire is back, trying to do the superhuman in politics: win the White House as an independent with no political experience, a multimillion-dollar war chest and barely a month as an official candidate.

For a man who idolizes Churchill, the Boy Scouts and Norman Rockwell, who covets the myth and the legend he has become, it is simply the biggest, most expensive crusade in a long list of public and private endeavors, each one seeking a broader stage.

"You like to have the action. You like to have the projects. You like to have two or three fights going on. That's what keeps things exciting. That's what he likes to do," Perot's son, Ross Jr., once said of his father.

It is no easy task to define Ross Perot, a man of seemingly conflicting images:

Is he a "temperamental tycoon" or a brilliant businessman? Is he dictatorial, or merely aggressive? Is he obsessed with espionage, conspiracy and security, or simply a father concerned about his family's safety? Is he intolerant, or just strong-willed? Does he break rules and insist on getting his way, or does he fight for just principles and hold out from compromise? Does he quit when the going gets tough, or have the common sense to know when it's time to change course?

Maybe all of this, and more. Perot can be folksy, homespun, charming and downright funny, yet he can also be terse and prickly, pushy until he gets his way. He portrays himself as clean-cut, proper and God-fearing, often quoting hymns, yet associates say he curses and swears in the office.

He has been described as autocratic, yet wins high marks for listening to many sides and building coalitions. He claims the highest regard for individual privacy and Constitutional principles, yet has arranged surreptitious investigation of rivals.

"I think the most remarkable thing about Ross is that he hasn't changed one iota in the 20 years that I've known him," said longtime Perot lawyer Tom Luce. "Obviously his thinking emerges and changes and matures. But his personal characteristics, he hasn't changed one iota."

Friends say the Perot rarely seen by the public is a practical joker whose idea of a stunt is sending a pregnant-looking woman to a friend's door the day after his marriage. He once donned a suit of shining armor and rode a white horse around a summer-hot parking lot at a birthday party with employees.

Associates also say he is an incredibly demanding - yet caring - boss with little regard for rank or stature, his enthusiasm allowing him to be mistaken at times for a zealot.

He was born at 5:34 a.m. in Texarkana, Texas, the descendant of French traders from Louisiana, named Henry Ray Perot and known as Ray until fifth grade. That's when his parents, Gabriel Ross and Lulu May Perot, changed Ray's name to Ross. They wanted a namesake in the family after their first child, Gabriel Ross Perot Jr., died of spinal meningitis.

Perot's father was a cotton broker with a gift for gab. His slogan was "Sell it... You can't eat it."

"His dad may have been one of the two great storytellers I've ever seen," said Millidge Hart III, one of the first employees at Electronic Data Systems, the company Perot founded. "That's where Ross gets his ability to tell stories. But in terms of who's the better salesman? Ross is better than his father ever was."

His was a childhood straight from the easel of Rockwell. Hanging in young Ross' bedroom was a Rockwell calendar showing a Boy Scout in prayer. He delivered newspapers, played the accordion, rode horses.

"He was a feisty dude," said Mitchell Young, a childhood friend. "What I'm saying is he had a lot of grit. When we were playing these scouting games, he may not have been the strongest or the fastest, but he never quit. He's had this characteristic all his life."

"Ross is not a fearful man," added Perot's onetime scoutmaster, 82-year-old Sam Shuman. "If you use the word guts, he's got guts. He's not scared to try anything."

After high school, where Perot was an undistinguished B-student, he attended Texarkana Junior College and was elected president of the student council. Infatuated with the Navy, and eager to attend school at a place where they paid students, Perot pestered Sen. W. Lee O'Daniel for appointment to the Naval Academy.

He was perhaps too naive to realize he had neither the connections nor the credentials for the honor. But when O'Daniel was packing up to leave Washington, an aide said he had one appointment to Annapolis left.

"Does anyone want it?" Perot, who heard the story from the aide, quotes O'Daniel as saying.

"Well, we've got this boy from Texarkana who's been trying for years."

"Give it to him," the senator said. At Annapolis, Perot again became class president, and was an average student, ranking 454 out of 925 in his class.

Hart, whose parents were friends with Perot's folks, remembers the first time he met Ross. Hart was a plebe at the Naval Academy; Perot a senior, ready to set up his fellow Texan for a fall.

"There was a lot of hazing of plebes, especially from Texas. This little guy walks in and says, 'My mother told me to look after you,'" Hart said. "Then he left. There were four first classmen outside the room, and he says to them, 'There's a plebe from Texas in there, guys.' That was my introduction to Ross."

Once at sea, Perot served on a destroyer and aircraft carrier from 1953 to 1957. By 1955, the 25-year-old lieutenant was seeking a discharge, in part because of what he saw as slack morals aboard ship, in part because of disagreements with a senior officer. Higher-ups denied his request, saying "no hardship exists."

Back home in 1957 with an honorable discharge, Perot went to work as an IBM salesman while the computer industry was in its toddler years. He soon recognized that some companies needed computer services but couldn't afford the gigantic expense of an IBM mainframe, and that some companies bought computers but didn't use them all the time.

So Perot left IBM in 1962 and created a way to share - EDS.

For a fee, EDS would pick up a company's data at night, rent time on another company's computer and process the material overnight.

As the company grew, Perot advertised in Hawaii for military officers on their way home from Vietnam, and recruited a crack army of salesmen and engineers. He didn't have an office, so he convinced clients that EDS workers should be "on-site."

The classic entrepreneur, Perot had created a new industry. His company grew at a phenomenal rate, enriched largely by government

Diabetic seminar planned

Charlotte Clark, registered dietician, at left, and Martha Rincon, certified dietary manager for Deaf Smith General Hospital, review the diabetic exchange list for the upcoming Diabetic Management Seminar scheduled Oct. 27. The seminar is free to the public and will be staged at 2 p.m. Tuesday at the Hereford Senior Citizens Center and at 7 p.m. in the lounge of the Hereford Community Center. The Family Living Committee of the Deaf Smith County Extension Service is co-sponsor of the event.

Fleas of various species can survive months without feeding or remain frozen for a year and then revive.

King Henry IV of France signed the Edict of Nantes in 1598. It granted rights to the Protestant Huguenots.

In 1743, Thomas Jefferson, the third president of the United States, was born in what is now Albemarle County, Va.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A while back, you performed a tremendous public service by spotlighting (and blowing the whistle on) an organization of which I have been suspicious for a long time. I am referring to the Cancer Fund of America.

You also cautioned your readers to take note of Watson & Hughey, a direct-mail fund-raising company that orchestrates the activities of the Cancer Fund of America.

No doubt because of your huge readership, you put a dent in their profits, but you did NOT succeed in putting them out of business. How do I know? Keep reading.

Just this morning, I received another pitch from the Cancer Fund of America. This time the mailing had the nerve to inform me that my name had been selected by "someone in the area" as a person who might agree to serve as a door-to-door volunteer. I was given the "privilege" of calling on at least five of my neighbors and asking them to contribute money to their organization.

I think it's time for you to alert your readers again, Ann. There are large numbers of good-hearted people out there who need to have their eyes opened.—A Longtime Reader in Lincoln, Ore.

DEAR L.R.: I have received several letters just this past week that are very much like yours. I noticed that they came from smaller towns, which means the con artists are probably avoiding the larger cities where people might be a bit more alert to this sort of thing.

For readers who may have missed my earlier warning, I am going to repeat it. It came from Sharon

Swanson, executive director of the Cancer Research Foundation, a much-respected and completely legitimate organization that has been supporting cancer research in Chicago medical centers for 44 years. She wrote, "Millions of dollars are diverted from charities like ours by Watson & Hughey and their ilk."

Swanson went on to point out that she had received a letter from the Walker Cancer Research Institute asking for a donation. On the back of the letter in very small print was the information that 0.96 percent of the money raised goes to research. THIS MEANS LESS THAN 1 PERCENT OF THE TOTAL! The remaining 99-plus percent goes for "administrative costs, fund-raising and education associated with the fund-raising appeals."

Swanson wrote: "Here again are the names of six organizations that solicit people through Watson & Hughey. Please warn your readers to be alert and aware."

"Cancer Fund of America, Inc., Knoxville, Tenn.

"Center for Alternative Cancer Research, also known as Project Cure of Dothan, Ala.

"Walker Cancer Research Institute, Inc., Edgewood, Md.

"Pacific West Cancer Fund of Seattle.

"National Animal Protection Fund of Tulsa.

"Social Security Protection Bureau, also known as Foxhall Corp. of Washington, D.C."

More than 100 years ago, P.T. Barnum said, "There's a sucker born every minute," and people keep proving him right. So there you have it, dear readers. Keep this column handy for referral when mailings come asking for money to support cancer research. You are my friends, and I don't want you played for fools.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A 40-year-old man in my office who had been bald for 15 years came to work yesterday sporting a full head of hair. Half the people in the office told him his hair looked terrific. The other half pretended not to notice.

On another occasion, a woman who was turning gray suddenly showed up as a flaming redhead. Many co-workers told her they liked it, and others acted as if they didn't see anything different.

Is it appropriate to comment on such changes? I'm unclear as to how to react.—Graying, Balding and Whatever Comes Next in St. Louis

DEAR WHATEVER: In my opinion, that fellow who invested in a hairpiece would have been disappointed if nobody had said anything. Ditto the instant redhead. Silence would be patently phony, so my advice is to speak up. And don't hesitate to lay on the compliments if you believe the change is for the better.

Gem of the Day: The 9-to-5ers lament: A boss is a person who is always late when you come in early and always early when you come in late.

What's the truth about pot, cocaine, LSD, PCP, crack, speed and downers? "The Lowdown On dope" has up-to-the-minute information on drugs. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.65 (this includes postage and handling) to: Lowdown, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Third Festival starts Nov. 19

The third annual Festival of Trees is just around the corner and seniors at the center are preparing for this four-day event. The doors will open to the public at 9 a.m. Thursday, November 19. During the festival, there will be an array of entertainment, activities, and special events.

The center will hold a holiday bazaar featuring ceramics, homecrafted items, baked goods, and condiments. The snack bar will be open for all to enjoy. Children will also have the opportunity to do some Christmas shopping in a shop featuring items especially for them.

The main feature of the festival is the display and auction of beautifully decorated Christmas Trees which have been sponsored by local businesses and individuals and decorated by various individuals and organizations.

Last year, over 4,000 persons enjoyed the festival and it is expected that more will attend this year. Children from day care centers, kindergartens, and senior citizens will be special guests for daytime activities on designated days. There is no admission charge for viewing the trees and attending general festival activities.

Several special events are planned. The first of these will be a private reception Thursday evening, November 19 for a preview showing of the Christmas trees and to express personal appreciation to those sponsoring a tree for display and auction. It is through this sponsorship that major costs of the event are underwritten.

At 7 p.m. on that same evening, the Festival Gala, which will feature a banquet and dinner music by Marie Howard, will be held. This is a ticketed event with sponsors and decorators as special guests. Tickets are $17.50.

The general public and those in attendance at the gala will be invited to attend the Auction of Trees also to be held at the center on November 19. The auctioneer will raise the gavel at 8 p.m. There is no door charge for persons attending the auction to observe or participate.

Friday evening, November 20, will feature a Style Show and Supper coordinated by Thelma Mercer. The affair will begin at 7 p.m. Admission is $6.50 per person.

Saturday morning, November 21 begins with "Breakfast With Santa" at 9 a.m. for children 12 years of age and under. Santa will visit and eat with the youngsters. There will be favors for the children and entertainment by Susie Merrick. The admission is $3.

The "Teddy Bear Tea" will be held on Saturday afternoon at 2 p.m. Children may bring their teddy bears and take part in the Teddy Bear Parade. A program for the children will be presented. Admission is $3.

There will be a Family Christmas Party on Saturday night, with a country supper and entertainment by the Walkers. Admission is $8 for adults and $4 for children.

A Holiday Turkey Buffet lunch will be served at the center on Sunday, November 22 from noon to 2 p.m. The charge will be $7.50 for adults and $3.50 for children 6 through 12. There will be no charge for children under 6.

The Festival of Choirs will be held from 2 p.m. until 5 p.m. on Sunday in the center auditorium. The charge for this special event is $2.

Many are working on various projects for the festival. Specific committees are: Entertainment; Ruth Knox, Audrey Powell; Children's Activities; Juanita Coker, Jane

Packard; Herd Restaurant; Grant and Troyce Hanna, Larry and Geneva Summers; Holiday Bazaar; Barbara Wirt, Jerry Clark, Helen Kleuskens, Edith Taylor; Bake Sale; Jewel Hargrave, Jo Lee; Sponsors Reception; Clora Brown, Truman and Norma Thurston; Festival Gala; Jolene Bledsoe, Roberta Caviness, Elizabeth Cesar, Margie Mims; Style Show;

Also, Thelma Mercer, Anna Kovacs, Eunice Boyer, Erika Durham; Breakfast with Santa; Helen Kleuskens; Teddy Bear Tea; Mary McCutchen, Mildred Garrison; Christmas Party; Louise Packard, Bea Cargo, Bill Lamm; Sunday Buffet Lunch; Pat Clark; Festival of Choirs; Cecil and Eunice Boyer; Center Decorations; Barbara Wirt; Tree Sponsorship; Shirley Garrison, Ann Werner; Tree Decorations; Helen Spinks, Lucy Martin; Volunteers; Lester Wagner; Publicity; Margie Daniels; Tickets; June Patterson, Sadie Shaw; Filming; Floyd Coker; Set-up; Al Daniels; Clean-Up; Bill White; Sound system; Lights; L.J. Clark.

We need items for the bazaar and the bake sale. There will also be a need for many volunteers to help during the festival. Let us know what you can do to help.

Margie's notes

The Thanksgiving season is near and we are ever aware of our blessings and how good it has been to live in and be a part of a community like Hereford.

We are beginning a new year at the center and as always we are looking forward to the best year ever. I want to join all of you in welcoming three new members to the governing board: Shirley Garrison, Clarence Betzen, and Wayne Amstutz. They will replace outgoing board members Lester Wagner, Cecil Boyer, and Cecil Oglesby, who deserve our heartfelt thanks for their work and accomplishments.

The center is always busy during the holiday season. The Festival of Trees is just around the corner and we are really looking forward to this event. It is becoming a major holiday celebration in the community and is our major fund raising endeavor. We need your help. The committees are hard at work and will need many volunteers. Let us know the area you want to help with.

Our annual Christmas Party is scheduled for Saturday, December 5 at 6:30 p.m. Those going on the Branson Tour will leave on December 10.

We hope to see you all at the center during this holiday season and throughout the year.

President's Corner

BY SHIRLEY GARRISON, PRESIDENT Hereford Seniors Citizens Association

Lester Wagner remarked last month about the wet, cool summer that we had enjoyed. The fall has been quite a contrast--hot and dry since the first of September. Even though we are much in need of a good rain, we have had benefits as farmers from the dry, clear fall. The harvest has accelerated, allowing many to be finished already. For a farmer, to be finished before Thanksgiving is a rarity. Many have sugar beets, a few some cotton and some have late milo still to harvest, but a good rain would be welcomed by all now.

We are beginning another year for Hereford Senior Citizens and the Center is already buzzing with activities. Your board of directors asked to take the presidency, and I feel honored that they would ask. This will be my second round as your president, having served during the construction of the new addition approximately three years ago. I solicit your help and cooperation this coming year. We have a great organization, the finest facility in which to meet, and the best staff of any organization I know.

We encourage all eligible members to join and become a part of our fellowship!

Marriage, sex can go together for U.S. seniors

CHICAGO (AP) - The happiest men and women in America are married couples who have sex frequently after age 60, says a report by the Rev. Andrew M. Greeley, the sociologist-priest-novelist.

Thirty-seven percent of married people over 60 make love once a week or more, and 16 percent make love several times a week; Greeley noted in his report, based on two previous surveys involving a total of 5,738 subjects.

Nine out of 10 of those over 60 who made love at least once a week said their spouses were "very attractive physically," said the report.

Men and women who engage in frequent sex after 60 report the happiest marriages and are more likely to report that they are living exciting lives, the report said.

"Their sex may be better because their lives are more satisfying, or the other way around," Greeley said. "I'm not trying to explain the flow. I'm just trying to show what's going on."

Greeley is a sociology professor at the University of Chicago and the University of Arizona, and a research associate at UC's National Opinion Research Center. He has written more than 100 books, including 24 novels.

Part of the data for his latest report came from the center's nationwide surveys of 4,424 people conducted from 1988 to 1991. The other part came from Gallup polls of 1,314 respondents analyzed previously in a 1990 study by Greeley.

He said he was prompted to write a new paper on the topic by two events. The first was the cancellation of television series such as "Matlock," "The Golden Girls," and "In the Heat of the Night," which portray and appeal to older people.

The second was a recent Kirkus book review that ridiculed Greeley's 24th novel, "The Wages of Sin," for offering "safe sex for seniors" in the portrayal of passion between a man in his 50s and a woman in her late 40s.

"The image of passionate love between older people as grotesque is dominant in American society," Greeley said in his report.

"It may be that the last great American taboo is passion among the elderly," he wrote, adding that virtually no sociological literature exists about sexual passion between older men and women.

Domeena C. Renshaw, co-chair of psychiatry and founder of the sexual dysfunction program at Loyola University Medical Center, said it has been known for years that many older people are sexually active.

For example, she said, a small inquiry seeking personal accounts on the topic that was placed in Consumer Reports magazine almost a decade ago generated "thousands" of responses. They led to "Love, Sex and Aging: A Consumers Union Report" by Edward M. Brecher in 1984.

Greeley said, however, that even though some reports have indicated that many older people have sex, little has been reported previously to indicate those who are sexually active live more satisfying, rewarding lives.

Don't let diet be a barrier

CHARLOTTE R. CLARK
MS RD/LD

Persons with diabetes perceive diet as one of the major obstacles of everyday life. Barriers related to diet concern areas of human functioning such as feelings of bodily discomfort, hunger, or sickness; they can also be associated with financial costs. Dietary barriers are the result of restrictions in food choice or of the required regularity of eating. Social dietary barriers occur while eating with other people; they also are caused by inadequate food offerings. The perception of dietary barriers depends on factors such as the type of diabetes and sex, age, body mass index, and social and educational level. Rarely do the barriers vary with increasing duration of diabetes. Little is known about the relationship of dietary barriers to different modes of therapy. Which is the most effective: insulin-independent diabetes therapy or non-insulin dependent diabetes therapy?

Traditional dietary treatment includes set timing and size of five to seven meals per day, fixes weight-maintaining energy intake, a carbohydrate; fat; protein ratio of 50:35:15, and plans food exchanges according to carbohydrate tables. High-fat, low fiber foods and simple sugars may be prohibited. Dietary adjustments may be recommended only in relation to hypoglycemia, exercise, and sick days.

The aspects of diabetes treatment perceived as most difficult and perceived health status was reported by self-reported questionnaire by Niewind and Friele in the research done in the Netherlands (1990). The questions covered the following aspects of treatment: bodily discomfort and instability of eating pattern; restricted food use; restricted food pattern; inadequate food offerings; required regularity of eating; eating in social situations; and financial costs of the diet. The response format was evaluated to produce the following results.

Diet is considered to be the most difficult aspect of most diabetic patients with monitoring the metabolic aspect considered second most difficult. Reasons giving for difficult handling of the condition are as follows: feeling ill because of eating more than allowed, wanting foods excluded from the diet, finding it difficult to stay away from sweets, being allowed only small amounts of certain foods, having to eat lean foods, having to say "no" to offers of food, relying on others who forget to buy appropriate foods, having to eat while others don't, having others interfere with eating, having to explain the diet to others, always having to take food along, having to eat much of certain foods, not being able to enjoy food, finding eating boring.

Traditionally, diet has been the cornerstone of IDDM therapy. Poor diabetes control has been attributed to either inadequate dietary advice—so-called "unmeasured diet"—or poor adherence to the complex, traditional dietary recommendations.

Mealtime flexibility is associated with enhanced treatment satisfaction in IDDM patients with insulin therapy as it adds to the patients' competence to handle their disease. Despite fewer dietary barriers and greater flexibility of life-style, patients perceive diet as one of the "biggest" problems of diabetes. This is especially true when they have to reject food offers and have to eat regularly and when their daily routines are disrupted.

Two Seminars on DIABETES will be held Oct. 27, sponsored by Deaf Smith General Hospital and Deaf Smith County Extension Services. Participating will be Beverly Harder, Charlotte R. Clark MS RD/LD, Martha Rincon, CDM, Nancy Griego RN, Elizabeth Fowler and Nancy Anderson, RN.

Seminars will be at 2 p.m. at Senior Citizens Center and 7 p.m. at the Community Center. We extend to any interested citizen a cordial invitation to come and share in these presentations.

Funeral pre-planning is big business

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - More people are planning and paying for their funerals long before they die to spare survivors the strain of having to choose and finance the arrangements, industry experts say.

It's just another piece of today's growing financial planning picture, helped by greater state regulation that offers better security for funeral investments made years before death.

"Often, financial planners will recommend people plan for this as well," said Bruce Holstrom, president of the Pre-Arrangement Association of America, a Chicago-based industry group with 400 funeral directors, cemeterians and suppliers as members.

The number of people planning and paying for funerals in advance is roughly quadrupling every decade, according to data gathered by Indiana-based Forethought Life Insurance Co. From 305,000 in 1980, the number grew to 1.2 million in 1990 and is projected to reach 4.5 million by the end of the century.

A customer can pick out the casket, vault, service, calling hours, flowers, music and any other arrangements. In some cases, the customer may choose the arrangements but not pay for them; in others, money is set aside for the funeral but arrangements are left to the survivors.

The American Association of Retired Persons encourages its 33 million members to plan their funerals in advance, said spokesman Ted Bobrow, but warns them to be wary of financing plans and the restrictions that go along with them. In some cases, "pre-need" plans cannot be canceled or transferred to other states.

"By all means people should plan in advance, to make sure that their wishes are followed through and also so that their families aren't burdened by not being sure what the right thing to do is," Bobrow said.

"Making arrangements at the last minute can be very painful" for survivors, he added.

Revenues for future funerals represent more than 40 percent of the overall business this year at Harry W. Moore Funeral Chapels. The average cost: $4,500 to $6,000, said David Ring, president of the three-home chain.

Industry expert Robert Ninker said the prearrangement field, once tarnished by con artists working door-to-door, has matured into an industry regulated closely by state insurance and investment oversight agencies. Agents typically are funeral home directors who place the investment in an insurance policy or a bank trust, he added.

Ninker, executive director of the Illinois Funeral Directors Association, said "pre-need trusts" in that state have grown from $6.3 million in 1976 to an estimated $300 million this year. In that time, the percentage of funeral homes offering prearrangements in Illinois has grown from 50 percent to more than 90 percent. Other states report similar growth, he said.

"Pre-need now is consumer-driven, for several reasons. No. 1, people today are more sensitive to the need for advance planning. What used to be sort of an option now has become, 'We really ought to do that,'" Ninker said.

"Also, they can get a guaranteed funeral at today's prices. It gives people peace of mind," he said.

In the last five years, Forethought and other insurance companies have grabbed bigger pieces of the financing market once nearly monopolized by trusts, Ninker said.

Forethought was founded seven years ago by Hillenbrand Industries, the parent company of Batesville Casket Co. in southern Indiana. The insurance business has multiplied more than ninefold from 9,284 new policies sold in 1987 to 83,979 last year, said Tom E. Brewer, Hillenbrand's chief financial officer.

The average age of Forethought policyholders is 72, Brewer said, but he added, "We'll write it at any age." More than 60 percent of the policies are paid in lump sums, but Forethought also offers payment plans over two, three, five and 10 years.

'Hats Off to Minnie' honors priceless country comic

For more than 50 years, Minnie Pearl has delighted audiences with her homespun humor and matchless backwoods philosophy. Monday on TNN, Barbara Mandrell welcomes over 100 performers to pay heartfelt tribute in Hats Off to Minnie: America Honors Minnie Pearl.

Well-wishers flock to tribute for ailing star

By Dan Rice

"How-dee! I'm just so proud to be here!" says Minnie Pearl wherever she appears. Recuperating from a stroke that has prevented her from performing in recent months, Minnie now reaps the bounty of the love she has sown in Hats Off to Minnie: America Honors Minnie Pearl, a tribute by her peers airing Monday, Oct. 26, on The Nashville Network.

For 50 years, Sarah Ophelia Colley has played Minnie Pearl, a good-hearted, wise-cracking character inspired by a mountain woman Colley met when she was part of a drama troupe. Minnie comes from the fictitious town of Grinder's Switch, Tenn., which she describes as "a state of mind, a place where there is no illness, no harm, no unhappiness, no political unrest, no tears. It's a place... where all you worry about is what you're going to wear to the church social and if your feller's gonna kiss you in the moonlight on the way home."

Barbara Mandrell had suggested a special to celebrate Minnie's anniversary, but various obstacles hindered the project. When Colley fell ill, the idea of a tribute blossomed with the intention of giving the beloved entertainer a "get well" wish on a grand scale. The efforts of host Mandrell and others resulted in two and a half hours of music, comedy and sentiment from stars of the country-music world and elsewhere. Vintage and contemporary clips of Minnie Pearl performances add perspective to the event, and replicas of Minnie's flower-bedecked straw hat with dangling price tag adorn many heads and the stage itself.

The lineup is no less than incredible. The Statler Brothers help kick things off with their personal tribute, "Minnie. You're You're a Pearl." Next, Pee-wee Herman clowns in TNN's all-star tribute to country humorist Minnie Pearl.

Minnie's Grinder's Switch comes to life à la Hee Haw with Roy Clark, Grandpa Jones and TV cousins Gomer (Jim Nabors) and Goober (George Lindsey) Pyle. The parade of performers is like a history of country music, from current chart-toppers like Ricky Van Shelton, Lorrie Morgan and Kathy Mattea to old-timers including Roy Acuff, Little Jimmy Dickens and Bill Monroe. The long list of talent also includes Mel and Pam Tillis, Eddie Rabbitt, Charlie Daniels, Holly Dunn, Amy Grant, Porter Wagoner, Freddy Fender, Bobby Goldsboro, the Forester Sisters, Glen Campbell, Pat Boone and Brenda Lee. Even sausage king Jimmy Dean left his corporate office to sing a duet with Faron Young. On the humorous side, there are appearances by the Smothers Brothers, Ray Stevens and Pee-wee Herman, who was invited by special request of his old friend Minnie Pearl.

Producer Lynn Doerschuk says, "We had people coming out of the woodwork wanting to participate. She's (Minnie) had such an impact on so many people we had at one point in time to say, 'This is all we can take,' without turning it into what everybody was joking about being a 'Minnie-series.'

Minnie Pearl's kind-hearted humor, professional camaraderie and genuine friendliness have helped and motivated generations of performers, scores of whom wanted to join in this tribute.

"Roy Clark had a sold-out show in Branson (Mo.) that he canceled to come," Doerschuk reports. Even after the show was taped and edited, he says he "got a call from Lily Tomlin, who said, 'Is there any way I can get in it?' It seemingly was very, very important to a lot of people to be there."

HBO continues its tradition of irreverent humor with Sunday's One-Night Stand: Dom Irrera.

STAR NOTES

Anthony Perkins: bigger than Bates

By Dan Rice

The death of Anthony Perkins in September as a result of complications from AIDS was deeply mourned by both his peers and his legions of fans. The centerpiece of his legacy of work is, of course, his portrayal of the unbalanced Norman Bates in the Psycho film series. While his haunting performance as Norman made a lasting impression on world audiences, it also overshadowed his fine work in other films and plays.

Perkins began acting in summer stock at the age of 15, then made his film debut at 21 in 1953's The Actress. He appeared on Broadway and in TV dramas before returning to film in 1956's Friendly Persuasion; it was this role that earned him an Oscar nomination for best supporting actor.

Perkins delivered some of his best performances in the next few years, notably as a mentally ill ballplayer in Fear Strikes Out and a fledgling sheriff who turns to bounty hunting in The Tin Star. The films Desire Under the Elms, On the Beach and Tall Story began to propel Perkins to romantic-lead status, but 1960's Psycho forever changed his image.

Perkins can be seen this week in his last film role, as an obsessive, amateur detective on the trail of a serial killer in NBC's In the Deep Woods, airing Monday, Oct. 26. It is heartening to note that his career ends with a character that is the antithesis of the role which severely typecast him.

The Delta Force  An American squadron attempts to rescue hostages from terrorists. Chuck Norris, Lee Marvin R Profanity, Violence. 2:50. (1986) Oct. 27 9:00pm.

It's kind of scary 'In the Deep Woods'

NBC telefilm offers Perkins classy exit

By Steven Alan McGaw
Anthony Perkins takes a fine final bow in NBC's suspenseful In the Deep Woods, airing Monday, Oct. 26. Based on a chilling novel by Nicholas Conde (The Religion), the film is one of the best suspense-type movies the networks have produced in some time. Unfortunately, the format and limitations of mainstream television (commercials, etc.) does not provide for the kind of sustained tension a piece like this really needs.

Rosanna Arquette stars as Carol Warren, a successful author and illustrator of children's books. When a childhood friend becomes the latest victim of the Deep Woods Killer (a serial murderer preying on attractive career women), Carol is shaken by the realization that no one is entirely safe—or to be trusted.

A few days later at a book signing, Carol meets a tall, haunted-looking stranger (Perkins). He is Paul Miller, a self-proclaimed detective determined to find and apprehend the killer responsible, he says, for the death of his daughter. Carol is shocked by Miller's icy revelation that his investigation is now centered on her own brother, and she abruptly ends their meeting. As she leaves, she realizes Miller is hiding much more than he is telling. She also feels confident she will see him again.

Arquette delivers an edgy intensity in what may be her best performance since The Executioner's Song, a perfect complement to Perkins' brooding presence. Chris Rydell is convincing as Tommy, Carol's dutiful, angelic-looking brother, and D.W. Moffett offers real charm and allure as Carol's dubious boyfriend, despite the worst haircut seen on television this year.

Writers Robert Nathan and Robert Rosenblum have crafted a skillful (though at times illogical) script from Conde's novel, and director Charles Correll keeps the action moving at an appropriately swift pace.

LET'S TALK

Back to 'Jack's' or Finola's finale?; never bet with your sister

By Taylor Michaels

Q: I would like to know about Finola Hughes. She was my favorite character on General Hospital as Anna Scorpio. I was pleased to see her again on Jack's Place, but now it's off the air. Will Jack's Place air again in the future? If not, will Finola Hughes be in any other programs? —Cindy Bailey, Portland, Ore.

Finola Hughes

A: Hughes was born in London, and she attended several prestigious private schools when she was young to study ballet. Her first dramatic role of prominence was in the London-based production of Cats playing Victoria, The White Cat.

This work caught the eye of director Sylvester Stallone, who cast her in his film Staying Alive in 1983. After appearing in productions around the world for several years, Hughes landed the part of Anna Devane Lavery Scorpio on GH, winning many of the awards set aside for daytime television's best. Her work on Jack's Place continues; ABC has ordered 13 more episodes of the series.

Hawkeye part came along. The actor is 35 years old, single (though linked to both Isabelle Adjani and Winona Ryder) and has starred in these other films: Nanou, The Insurance Man, My Beautiful Laundrette, Stars and Bars, The Unbearable Lightness of Being, A Room With a View and Eversmile, New Jersey.

Q: I am 10 years old and play baseball. Nolan Ryan is a special ballplayer to me. He is the best in the world. Could you tell me where I could write to him? —Berl Prouty, Carlsbad, N.M.

Q: I was told that the little girl who starred in 1973's Paper Moon and the man who played her uncle were in real life father and daughter. Is that so? Didn't Jodie Foster play the little girl in an earlier production? —M.L. Battenfield, Atlanta, Texas.

A: A role model to many including his teammates, some of whom have named sons after him, Ryan has agreed to pitch for at least another season. You may write to him in care of the Texas Rangers, P.O. Box 1111, Arlington, Texas, 76010.

A: Tatum O'Neal played Addie, the cigarette-smoking con artist in cahoots with her real-life father, Ryan, in Paper Moon. It was her first screen appearance and earned her an Oscar. Jodie Foster played Addie in a brief Paper Moon television series that aired in 1974-1975.

Q: Could you tell me about the lead actor in the new movie The Last of the Mohicans, such as his name, age and marital status? What other movies has he done? He looks familiar. —S.M., Battle Ground, Wash.

Q: My sister and I are having a dispute over the first season of The Facts of Life television series. My sister believes the season started in the late '70s (1978 or 1979). I believe it started in the early '80s (1981 or 1983). Please clear this up for us. —Kristi and Jennifer M., Portland, Ore.

A: His longer hair may have thrown you, but the ruggedly handsome and talented lead in Mohicans is the same Daniel Day-Lewis who stood at the podium to accept the Best Actor Oscar a few years ago for My Left Foot. Day-Lewis' portrayal of afflicted Irish poet Christy Brown in the 1989 effort reportedly led to nervous exhaustion and an extended vacation — until the

A: The first episode of The Facts of Life aired on Aug. 24, 1979.

SOAP TALK

After 'Days,' Easton turns to 'Nighttide'

By Candace Havens

Last spring, Michael Easton was named one of People Magazine's 50 Most Beautiful People, and millions of fans agree. Most recently, the good-looking actor could be seen daily on NBC's Days of Our Lives as Tanner Scofield, the rebel without a cause.

Unfortunately, the NBC brass didn't care much for Easton's rebel-like attitude around the set and chose not to renew his contract. Easton defends his actions by saying he only wanted to make the work better.

"Working on the soaps is very physically and mentally draining," says Easton. "Day in and day out, it is not some of the most artistically rewarding work you are doing. Sometimes I would walk out of the studio banging my head on the wall.

"You spend a lot of time just trying to make the material work and be believable, but because of the time element with daytime, sometimes it just doesn't happen," says Easton. For the most part, he was happy to leave the show and was ready to move on.

But Easton has moved on. He is starring in Nighttide, a prime-time movie with Emma Samms, Parker Stevenson and Joan Chen airing this fall on NBC. "It's a thriller with a lot of twists and turns in the plot," says Easton. "I play a guy named Shawn who is kind of a dark character and is not who he appears to be. It's a big change from Tanner."

Samms and Stevenson play a couple who appear to have it all - looks, money, success. The two slip away for a weekend at the beach, and that is where the tale of larceny and murder begins.

Easton prepared for his role by working out twice daily with a personal trainer and eating only fruits and vegetables. "I visualized this character as a very lean, muscular, hungry-looking man," says Easton.

So what happens after Nighttide? Easton has done a multitude of jobs besides acting. He enjoys writing poetry and says writing is his first love.

"It is not easy for me, but it is what I like to do, better than acting." Of course, if things get too tough, Easton says, he can always go back to bartending.

Whatever happens, you get the feeling that this rebel will survive.

The Jayhawkers ★★ A border raider dreams of ruling the expansive Great Plains. Jeff Chandler, Fess Parker 2:15. (1959) Oct. 27 11:00am.

The Jetsons: The Movie ★★ The Jetsons prepare to relocate to a different planet. (Animated) G 1:21. (1990) Oct. 25 9:00am.

The Journey of Natty Gann ★★ A girl travels cross-country in search of her father in the '30s. Meredith Salenger, John Cusack PG Profanity. 1:41. (1985) Oct. 29 5:00pm; 30 12:45am.

TIME OUT

A punt, a pass and the presidency

By Paul Kalmbacher

The horse-race metaphor and other sports cliches have been overworked by journalists in describing the quest for the presidency. During the final week of the election campaign, however, ESPN offers an intriguing variation on the theme.

On Tuesday, Oct. 27, ESPN's Emmy-winning Outside The Lines series examines the link between the presidency and the sporting interests of our presidents in a special edition titled Sports and the Presidency.

"Americans are fascinated by the men they elect to lead them," says host Bob Ley, who spoke to both George Bush and Bill Clinton about their sports attitudes, interests and achievements. (At press time, Ross Perot had also been invited to participate.)

In addition to interviews with former presidents Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford, the special includes anecdotal recollections of Dwight D. Eisenhower, John Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson. Presidents Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan are also represented. Author George Plimpton and ABC commentator Jeff Greenfield provide additional commentary.

Ley says he hopes the show will give viewers a glimpse of the human side of the men who occupy the Oval Office. Of the relationship between sports and politics, he says that although sports is "certainly not a prime instrument of policy, it definitely reflects their personalities."

FRIDAY

When a fever cancels her Halloween fun, Casey (Chelsea Hartford) imagines her dad (Gerald McRaney) turns into a monster in Friday's episode of Major Dad on CBS.

BITS AND PIECES

Midseason replacements; NBC to air HBO original telefilm

With the first few casualties of the fall season, it's time to look for possible replacements. There's no shortage of back-up series at ABC, where Tom Arnold's Jackie Thomas Show is the most notorious of a long list. ABC also has a collection of unaired Sibs episodes, and is in production with new installments of Jack's Place. Sirens, a drama about three rookie policewomen, will probably show up this winter. Two new comedies — Home Free and Where I Live — are also in production.

CBS' long-awaited Family Dog is said to have reported in faithfully this month. The network also has Good Advice, a comedy starring Shelley Long as a family counselor with a philandering husband, and Dr. Quinn, Medicine Woman, a western drama starring Jane Seymour, in the wings. Fox is working on a spoof of tabloid television in Exposed, starring Daphne Maxwell Reid. At NBC, Barry Levinson is producing Homicide, a serialized drama set in Baltimore. Roy Scheider is preparing to star in Sea Quest, and prodigal son Jay Tarses is working on a comedy. Tarses, whose Days and Nights of Molly Dodd became a cable hit after cancellation by NBC, said several years ago that he never intended to work for a network again.

Jane Seymour as Dr. Quinn, Medicine Woman.

HBO subscribers will have plenty of chances to see the made-for-TV drama Blind Side, a psychological thriller starring Rutger Hauer, Rebecca De Mornay and Ron Silver. After an initial run early in the new year, the movie will be presented on NBC in April or May. The move, which helps the producers raise money and saves NBC some of the cost of producing the film on its own, could be the beginning of a beautiful friendship for the business partners, though overexposure could water down pay cable's reputation for exclusivity.

Since 1920, the most successful third party candidate for U.S. President has been George Wallace, running on the American Independent Party in 1968, he racked up 9,906,000 popular votes out of a total of 73,212,000. Nixon won that year by about 510,000 votes.

Iran-Contra scandal again?

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Larry Gelbart is a writer who has found the fastest way to the jugular is by way of the funny bone.

Gelbart's rapier wit is once again on the attack in a lunatic version of the Iran-Contra scandal called "Mastergate." The first 90-minute presentation will be shown Sunday, Nov. 1, on Showtime.

Gelbart is an equal-opportunity cynic who targets everyone in sight: the president, Congress, the CIA, the military and the news media.

Gelbart brought "M-A-S-H" to television and wrote or co-wrote such movies as "Oh God," "Not With My Wife You Don't!" and "Tootsie" and the book for the Broadway musical "City of Angels." He also adapted "Barbarians at the Gate," the story of the takeover of R.J.R. Nabisco, which HBO will show next year.

"Mastergate" is fictional, but it targets all-too-real problems of America's institutions and the people who run them.

"It's less a satire on politics than a look at what television and politicians are doing to the English language as we know it," Gelbart says. "It's pretty hard to satirize politics. You can't do a satire on a travesty.

"Politicians use the language to obfuscate, dissemble, lie, and totally obscure what they're talking about. They speak out of a sense of self-importance rather than the importance of what they are speaking about."

In "Mastergate," a Senate committee investigates the CIA's secret takeover of a movie studio in order to ship arms disguised as movie props to revolutionaries in a Central American country. The hearing is seen by means of its coverage by the Totally News Network.

The chairman says the committee's goal is to learn "what did the president know, and does he have any idea that he knew it?" Among its witnesses are Maj. Manley Battle and Vice President Burden.

"God, I'd like you to go to as many meetings as I do and have any idea of what's goin' on," the vice president says. Asked if helped at the meetings, he answers, "I never once denied that, once I finally admitted it."

"Mastergate" is based on a lot of people over a lot of years," he says. "I've been watching these hearings since the McCarthy years. I've held in my feelings until they flowed over. I had to type fast to keep up with all I wanted to say. The first draft was twice as long as it is now.

"This is done very straight. It would seem we're watching the real thing - except it's a madder tea party than usual."

Gelbart, 70, began in radio writing for "Duffy's Tavern." Later, he wrote for two seasons on "Caesar's World." He developed "M-A-S-H" for television, then went on to write for movies and the stage.

"I did try to keep the humor," he says. "I've always thought it funny when men in $2,000 suits talk like they've just crawled out of the gutter. These are tough guys in a tough world. It's the macho business competition, whether it's in the board room or on the tennis court."

"I have no temptation to watch television," he says. "You have to move on. A series would be a step backward in a way because of the kind of compromises necessary to work in television. It takes too much energy. I don't know that I could do 22 scripts a year. It's hard enough to do just one."

"I don't watch TV because I think I've seen it all, including the news. I find it hard to watch the series because you find yourself mentally rewriting the shows you watch. You can't watch them the way they were meant to be watched. It's not that they're any worse than the old garbage."

"There's nothing new under the sun. Only the titles change."

HAVE FUN at the Movies

EXCELLENT GOOD FAIR POOR DON'T WASTE MONEY

UNFORGIVEN: Starring Clint Eastwood, Gene Hackman and Morgan Freeman.

The opening of Unforgiven is so old fashioned, so simple that you think the movie might be a parody. Silhouetted against an orange sky is a shack on a hill, a single tree, and a man digging a grave. A story scrolls down one side of the screen, telling the story of a good woman who married a bad man, then died of smallpox, not mistreatment.

The bad man resurrected as a good man by his late wife is William Munny (Clint Eastwood), living with his two children and apparently no regrets. But his life is hard and when a chance comes to make some quick cash with a bounty killing, he accepts and it turns out that Unforgiven isn't a spoof at all.

With a sparseness that becomes a kind of grace, Unforgiven (also directed by Eastwood) brings an unsparingly realistic view of the American west to the screen. This is the west as metaphor, a raw place where people have been pressed so hard they have little left but an instinct for self-preservation. High Noon it isn't. The identities of the good guys and the bad guys are too blurred. Clint Eastwood, whose taciturn gunslingers have come to epitomize the western anti-hero, directs and performs with a sure sense of mission. Gene Hackman, Morgan Freeman, and newcomer Jaimz Woolvett all turn in sterling supporting performances.

There are long, boring stretches that beg for editing or quicker pacing, but on the whole, this is an excellent western with a coarse message. Stay for the very last, when the credits roll. Keep your eye on the silhouetted tree. Rated R for language (that does not match the period), extreme violence, mature themes, and sex.

Four Boxes

HIDDEN GEMS

For fans of director/actor Clint Eastwood, one of his most underrated films is...

THE OUTLAW JOSEY WALES: (1976) With Sondra Locke.

This Western, a masterpiece of characterization and action, was (until the newly released Unforgiven) Eastwood's best film as both an actor and director. Josey Wales (Eastwood) is a farmer whose family is murdered by Red Legs, a band of pillaging cutthroats who have allied themselves with the Union Army. Wales joins the Confederacy to avenge their deaths. After the war, everyone in his troop surrenders to the Union except Wales, and an exciting cat-and-mouse chase begins. Rated PG. Four Boxes

GENE HACKMAN

Gene Hackman has probably made only two fewer films than Michael Caine (one of the most prolific movie stars today). You probably know most of them, but a few hidden gems are...

I NEVER SANG FOR MY FATHER: With Melvyn Douglas.

Hackman was nominated for his second Academy Award for his performance as the tortured 40-year-old still trying to play son to a father (Melvyn Douglas) who is obsessed with concepts of strength and pride. It is a depressing, but touching, and finely crafted film in which everyone does a superb job. It is based on the play of the same name by Robert Anderson. Rated PG. Four Boxes

One you may not have heard of, but a real hoot...

PRIME CUT: (1972) With Lee Marvin and Sissy Spacek.

Sissy Spacek made her film debut in this sleazy (which makes it all the juicier for home viewing) but energetic crime thriller about big-time gangsters and the slaughterhouse they use to convert their enemies into sausage. The talents of Lee Marvin and Hackman elevate this essentially tasteless offering. Rated R for nudity, gore, and violence.

VOL. 2 • FALL EDITION

MEET THREE FUTURE HEREFORD PHYSICIANS

R. Stephen Lawlis, MD

Glen E. Alford, MD

David Bruce Clarke, MD

Thanks to an innovative plan to bring more doctors to Hereford, three physicians will be moving to Deaf Smith County after completion of their residency programs. The creative program will guarantee a stipend salary while they complete their education in exchange for a commitment to establish a practice in Hereford. The program is one that many rural and urban hospitals use to help plan for physician coverage in the future.

R. Stephen Lawlis, MD, Glen E. Alford, MD, and David Bruce Clarke, MD, are graduates of Texas Tech University Medical School and are currently completing residencies. "This program guarantees us physicians for the future, while we are continuing a search for more physicians who can come to Hereford immediately," Ron Rives, hospital administrator said. "Physician recruitment is the centerpiece of our strategic plan for Deaf Smith General Hospital."

Dr. Lawlis and his wife, Kim, presently live in Chapel Hill, North Carolina where he is completing a three-year residency in Internal Medicine. They have two children, Sarah, and Jeffrey. They will be moving to Hereford during the summer of 1995.

Dr. Alford is currently serving a residency in family practice at Texas Tech Health Science Center in Odessa and will begin his practice in

CPR PROGRAM BRINGS LIFESAVING SKILLS TO HEREFORD

NEIGHBORS SAVING NEIGHBORS, the Tuesday-night CPR training sessions, continues at the Hereford Community Center, bringing lifesaving information to people throughout Deaf Smith County. The sessions, sponsored by Deaf Smith General Hospital and DSGH Hereford EMS, are taught by American Heart Association instructors, many of whom work at DSGH.

Executive Column

by Ron Rives

As we begin our second year together, we can look back on many successes—but this is no time to stop and rest on our laurels. It is rather a time to reflect on goals achieved and goals currently under discussion.

Our surface renovations and refurbishings have been favorably received. The community views us in a new light because we look positive, contemporary, and well-organized. We provide services efficiently and professionally, as we should.

We also provide new services, keyed to the community's needs. The ValuCare program is well underway, offering our senior citizens a wide variety of benefits and discounts. Those 65 and above make up 11% of Deaf Smith County's population, so we are definitely addressing a large, specific need. This program will continue to be a vital component in our future growth.

The CPR program—Neighbors Saving Neighbors—is only a few months old, but we expect to see it grow continuously. It offers us a chance to provide the entire county with a lifesaving opportunity—one which brings us closer together and, again, fills a real need. The combination of ag-based industry, older population, and rural area makes individual knowledge of CPR especially important to our residents.

The Board of Directors has established a committee to develop a strategic plan for our future. The group will consist of board members, hospital staff, physicians, and community members. We are committed to providing this community with the best quality health care possible. This means talking with residents, watching health-care trends, purchasing new equipment, attracting new medical personnel, and developing programs the community truly needs.

In the next few months you'll be hearing more about the strategies we will pursue. We hope you'll join us as we continue to strive to serve our friends and neighbors in the best way possible.

HOSPITAL AUXILIARY PLANS FUND RAISER

The Deaf Smith General Hospital Auxiliary is hosting a jewelry sale October 30 from 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. in the front lobby of the hospital. The sale, which is a major fund raiser for the Auxiliary, will feature fashionable costume jewelry for all occasions. Profits from the sale will be used for special auxiliary projects such as the adopt-a-room program, equipment and other projects of the auxiliary.

"This is a great time to do some early Christmas shopping," Quinta Waits, president of the Auxiliary, said. "Hospital employees and friends of the hospital will have a chance to make some excellent buys, and help fund worthy projects at the same time."

MEET THREE FUTURE HEREFORD PHYSICIANS

Hereford in August 1994. Dr. Alford and his wife, Debra, have three children.

Dr. Clarke, who grew up in Hereford, served a family practice preceptorship in Levelland from June 1989 to May 1991 and is serving a three-year residency in Boise, Idaho, where he now is living with his wife, Melissa. Dr. Clarke and Melissa will be moving to Hereford in August 1995.

"The community-based physician recruiting committee has worked very hard during the past few months," Rives added. "Their diligence and foresight in recruiting Drs. Clarke, Lawlis and Alford for the future will help assure Deaf Smith County residents continued quality health care."

VALUCARE IS IMPORTANT BENEFIT FOR SENIORS

ValuCare is the wonderful program of benefits and services designed exclusively for persons 65 and older. With ValuCare and approved supplemental insurance and Medicare, members' inpatient bills at Deaf Smith General Hospital and other participating hospitals are paid in full.

The benefits of the ValuCare program do not end there. As a ValuCare member you'll also enjoy many advantages:

- Discounts at pharmacies, medical suppliers and other retailers across the region.
- Free health screenings.

- Informative seminars on a variety of topics, including financial planning, managing prescriptions, healthy cooking and more.

- Golf tournaments, game days, exercise classes and trips.

- Opportunities for unique travel, including Fall Foliage Tours and trips to other exciting destinations.

The program, developed by Lubbock Methodist Hospital, offers participants discounts on their inpatient hospital bills as well as discounts at participating businesses. ValuCare members also receive special notice of health screenings and informational programs sponsored by the hospital.

More than 250 senior citizens are currently members of ValuCare at DSGH.

Members recently attended a discussion and review of Medicare supplemental insurance presented by Bobbie Wilson of Lubbock Methodist Hospital. Several other ValuCare programs are scheduled during the next few months.

For more information about how to join ValuCare, call Elizabeth Fowler at Deaf Smith General Hospital, 364-2141.

Health Update for You

CALCIUM—HOW MUCH?

Before menopause, women need approximately 800-1,000 mg. of calcium per day (the amount found in about 4 to 5 glasses of milk.) After menopause, women may need as much as 1,200 mg of calcium per day.

WHAT IS A HEALTHY LIFESTYLE?

Healthy behavior means eating well, exercising regularly, managing stress, avoiding alcohol and drugs, not smoking, and following your health care professional's advice regarding periodic health screenings.

TAKE CARE OF YOUR BACK

Back exercises are an essential part of back care. Conditioning the muscles that support your back can relieve and sometimes prevent a problem back. Back care also means using good posture throughout the day and lifting safely. For questions about back safety, call the DSGH Physical Therapy Department.

HOSPITAL AUXILIARY PLANS FUND RAISER

The jewelry for the fund raiser will include earrings, bracelets, watches, rings and exceptional values on beautiful 14k gold, sterling silver, gemstones and other costume jewelry.

CPR PROGRAM BRINGS LIFESAVING SKILLS TO HEREFORD

Having the skills to respond correctly and perhaps save a life is important for everyone, according to L.V. Watts, course coordinator and DSGH Hereford EMS director. The classes are designed to teach participants to administer the "breath of life" correctly, and then to give the participants enough practice so that they feel comfortable with the process.

"Every business, every classroom, every family should know how to administer CPR," Ron Rives, DSGH administrator, said. "This training program is easy to understand and will make our community a safer place to live."

For more information, or to enroll in the program, call L.V. Watts at Deaf Smith General Hospital, 364-2141.

PEDIATRICIAN'S SERVICES UTILIZED

Dr. Ranga Subra Mani is a busy physician at the South Plains Health Clinic. As Hereford's only specialist in pediatrics, Dr. Mani sees a large number of children each month. The pediatrician's role in health care begins before the birth of a child, as the pediatrician works with the physician to insure a safe delivery. Once the child is born, the pediatrician can assume the care of the newborn. The specialist's role extends until the child becomes an adult.

Dr. Mani came to Hereford with her husband, Dr. Palani Subra Mani, in April. She completed a neonatal fellowship at Texas Children's Hospital in Houston, and is board eligible.
