be frustrated with their jobs and sometimes under stress from unhappy personal situations.

Brutality incidents are more likely to occur in the first 5 to 7 years of their careers, perhaps because they are more scared and not as savvy, perhaps because they are assigned to high-crime areas.

"As they get older, they are more likely to retreat from difficult situations," said Arnold Binder, a police expert at the University of California-Irvine.

Abusers in police departments almost always believe they are teaching a lesson to the offender, who almost always is a minority, said Dick Sobel, a police brutality expert with the National Lawyer's Guild.

"Your training is not to use force, but they give you all those ... weapons and when your authority is challenged, when you've got problems at home, when you're fed up with your job, you think you're right to do it," Sobel said. You do it, and you do it in the name of justice," he said. Experts agree that training plays a key role in preventing brutality. Improving community relations skills and giving police the tools to handle their frustrations, peacefully release their adrenaline-induced excitement and resolve violent situations without abuse have been shown to make a difference.

We're sending police officers out on the street and not giving them the skills to deal with the situations they face," said Kevin Parsons, a consultant to police departments. "Most (officers involved in brutality) are not bad people, but they are people not given the skills to handle the situation.

"Look at Operation Desert Storm and you see that intensive military training gets results," he said. "Airplane pilots and submarine pilots get extensive simulator training. There are some things that you can train people to do and get spectacular results. It can be done.

Police training has improved in recent years and psychological screening has eliminated abusive or bigoted people from becoming police officers, experts say. But violent crime has escalated, too.

We live in a pressure tank in society. People are stressed out and there's tremendous violence in the cities. Police are in a boiling furnace Attacking the problem with swift and sudden punishment for the Dawn. Hereford fire marshal Jay officers involved also would help curb abuse, Sobel said.

"If you lose your job and-or get indicted, you'll think twice," he said.

"The problem is it's condoned." In the long term, the experts say, there may be a silver lining in the Los Angeles incident - better training, were extinguished. The house, which more supervision, even greater accountability.

"Police departments are about as close to closed institutions as anything in society except the military and the clergy. They have an us-versus-them mentality, and what you're going to get are atrocities," Fyfe said.

Not only does Edwards invest a lot of time into making her dolls, but a considerable sum of money is spent as well.

"Molds for the dolls run approximately $300 a piece," Edwards said. "Of course the prices vary on the doll and what kind of accessories you buy, but eyes usually run about $15, wigs $10 to $15.50, body pellets $6 and $10 for the body. On the dressing, you can spend as much or as little as you want."

Her finished product usually costs the consumer between $100-$400 dollars. "A lot of doll makers charge $750-$800 for some of the same dolls," she said.

Edwards doesn't keep her talents to herself. She teaches classes in the art of doll making.

"Teaching the classes is something I really enjoy," she said. "I like helping others. I've tried to set up the classes where people can come in and just work when they have time. My goal is to have one of the big name doll makers come in and do a class for us."

Someday Edwards hopes to be featured with one of her dolls in Doll Crafter magazine. She also would like to sculpt her own.

"I enjoy my work," she said. "It is real rewarding and someday I hope I can sculpt my own doll."

Edwards has lived in Hereford all her life. She and her husband Albert raised their three children here.

While he was in Osh Kosh, Wis. he found pictures in magazines at the library which detailed the paint job, decals and other details that could be easily overlooked.

"I was having some trouble trying to fit the windshield," he said. "Piper stopped manufacturing that windshield. I belong to the Cub Club and read about a man from Pennsylvania who was rebuilding a Cub and I called him and asked if he could trace around his windshield so I could have a plan. He said he could do better than that. He told me that he had called the Smithsonian Institute and they had the original plans for the windshield and he would send me a copy.

"After I got the plans, I made the windshield out of Lexan, which is a shatter resistant plastic. Originally, they used plexi-glass, but it shatters too easily if you hit a bird or something."

Everything is back to its original state, except for the tail skid. Pactzold said he put in a tail wheel, because the skid made it more difficult to control.

"It was made with the skid because it doesn't have brakes," Paetzold said. "The skid helped slow the plane down after landing."

Pactzold said landing was a trick. 'You have to have good planning and know when to shut the engine off, because you don't have brakes to stop you."

The exact details on the plane were important enough to Paetzold that he spend many hours cutting out circles to cover the bolts on the plane.

'Most studs are covered in long strips instead of circles, because the circles are so time consuming," the plane buff said. "Back then materials

Even the engine is an original. Matter of fact, it is as rare as the plane.

This engine is a one magneto engine," he said. "It is one of the first and last the FAA let have only one magneto. The magneto is what sparks the plugs and if it goes out the engine will fail. With two, you have one for a back-up."

The only thing that Pactzold suspects is not original on the plane is the air speed gauge.

"All the other gauges are black and the air speed is white. When these planes first came out, they didn't have air speed gauges. They came about 1942, so I suspect someone added it on later.'

When the Piper J-3 Cub Sport hit the market in 1938, the list price was $1,095 and a person could buy one for $1,000. Because there were so few produced. Pactzold estimates his plane's worth around $50,000 to $100,000.

"Some people would spend an outrageous amount of money for a plane like this," he said. "I know two women who built a grand champion bi-plane and took it to a show without any intention of selling it, but were offered so much money they couldn't refuse."

Pactzold is not interested in selling his plane and hopes it will be in a museum some day.

"I think this is something a muscum would be interested in owning someday."

Pactzold, who built a barn with doors made especially for planes, will be looking for his next project. "I'm always looking for something out of the ordinary. It's like popcorn, once you start you can't stop.'

Has he gotten any "urgent" messages from females? He usually requests that I send him some "good food" (cookies, banana bread, fudge, etc.).

Thinking this was one of those "chit-chat" calls, I wasn't prepared for this particular mother-son conversation. I wouldn't have been cooking but let's not have that ready for this call if it was the year 2030.

"Hey, Mom, I'm planning to come home in a couple of weeks. You're always telling me to let you know in advance so you can get caught up on your laundry. That way you will have plenty of time to do mine before I go back to school. Oh, yeah, would you please go to the grocery store and stock-up on some real food? The last time I was home, all that was in the refrigerator was tofu, cottage cheese, lettuce, celery, broiled chicken pieces, a half a jar of dill pickles, NutraSweet Jello and lo-cal imitation cheese," Tim said disgustingly. "No wonder Candi looks like she suffering from anorexia. You and John are starving her to death with the diet you guys are on. The last time I saw her, she had dropped 10 pounds and you and John had gained 20."

"Okay, no problem, wise guy," I replied. "You can eat yourself into junk food oblivion. Any more instructions?"

"Now that you mention it, Mom," dusting my bedroom furniture, cleaning the mini-blinds, and throwing all that stuff that's in the bottom my closets into boxes?"

Why the sudden fascination with keeping up appearances?" I asked. "It's never phased you before when your closets and your room looked like they had been nuked!"

"Don't get crazy or anything but I'm bringing a friend home with me for the weekend and I don't want her to think I'm the world's biggest slob," he casually remarked.

'A girl, Tim?" I was dumbfounded. "You are bringing a girl home? Is this someone special? Never mind, I don't want to know. Tell me one thing though? What are the sleeping arrangements going to be?" I asked nervously.

With a laugh he said, "Mother, she will sleep in my bedroom. I will sleep on the couch." (And I thought, "I'll sleep on the loveseat next to the couch!")

"Mom, calm down. Gena is really sweet and I just want the visit to go well. Maybe John could grill some steaks and you can bake a cake or pie or something. I'm not knocking your goulash stuff you are always making. You know the casserole with the meat. and vegetables all jumbled up together with some cheese thrown on top. And tell Candi to keep the house clean, especially her room," he added.

I've always known this time would come...the day my son would bring his girlfriend home for his parents to meet. I just thought it would be another 20 or 30 or 40 years from now

The minute I hung up the phone, I began analyzing the conversation. The most important thing at this point was that the family needed to make a good impression on Tim's friend. After all, it was very apparent this person was very important to him.

First things first. If I started cleaning the house right now, it would be presentable by the time Tim and Gena came for their visit. I was a woman possessed by cleanliness. What I had thought was a fairly respectable home, now looked like something out of Worse Homes and Gardens. I had never noticed the thousands of cob webs on the ceilings or all the little "fuzzies" that had gathered on my livingroom furniture and multiplied under the chairs. And the shower stall had a lime deposit so thick on it, it would take a chisel and hammer to get it off. Nothing was left unscathed. I even mopped the driveway and rubbed lemon oil on the paneling in the garage. My craziness lasted for 24 hours a day, seven days a week. If I awoke from a deep slumber, I'd get up and press the guest hand towels. Yes, I ironed the stupid towels. Also, I was constantly warning John and Candi to be on their best behavior. When my husband had enough of me telling him how to act, he retorted, "I can't believe you are ordering me how to behave. You're the one that starts food fights at the dinner table just to get a few laughs. I mean, come on, Sandy, you should be the one reading How to Win Friends and Influence People By Not Throwing Mashed Potatoes In their Faces."

After endless days of worrying and constant cleaning, I finally met Gena. I had developed an ulcer for absolutely no reason.

Within 30 seconds of meeting my son's friend, I instantly liked her. Not only was Gena a beautiful young woman but exceptionally wellmannered. Somehow she weathered her three-day visit with the Stagner family without going completely nuts. She even took her last dinner with us in stride.

John wanted to make an extra special meal for Tim and Gena before they headed back to college. My husband took great pains in preparing a shopping list and marinating the fajita meat overnight so it would be just perfect for grilling. To make the dinner more festive, Candi and I actually used a linen cloth and matching napkins as family.

As we each took our first bite of John's fajitas, we looked at one another without saying anything. I thought we were eating beef jerky the meat was so darn tough. We chewed, chewed and chewed some more before we could swallow his appliques on them. "delicacy." My husband, who never gets intimidated and has a weird sense of humor announced, "Well, Gena, whatever we don't eat tonight, we'll save for breakfast burritos tomorrow. They should be pretty good reheated in the microwave and spiced up with a little hot sauce."

I could have died on the spot. In fact, I think my heart did stop beating; unfortunately, it started again. This poor innocent girl had no idea that my husband was only joking. Savoring the very uncomfortable silence, John finally said, "Hey, Gena, I was just kidding. When we have leftovers, we just pack 'em up in a box for a couple of months and then take 'em out in the winter to use as hockey pucks."

By this time, I was under the table from embarrassment. If I could have crawled around everyone's feet and snuck out the back door, I would have.

Still trying desperately to chew her first bite of fajita meat, Gena very graciously said, "The meal is wonderful and I appreciate the time you spent preparing it for me. Thank you!"

If I could have gotten out from under the table fast enough, I would have given her a big hug. Yeah, she fit right it with this very strange

On her next visit (I may be get to see the real Stagners. I will wear my housecoat from Saturday morning until Monday like I always do. The culinary delicacies served will consist of baloney and cheese sandwiches and potato chips and the regular bathroom towels, which will be displayed, will not be ironed and won't have the cute little swan her of a bunch of animals because she sent me the nicest thank you note and plant.

I guess our family didn't remind

Tim is planning to visit her family this weekend. I hope he remembers that he is not at home and will act accordingly. I sent with him a thank you card to send to Gena's family after he visits them, but knowing him, he'll forget to stamp it.

We, as parents, do the best we can with what we have to work with!

"You've got it made at 80" is the title of an article we ran across in another newspaper, and we think our senior citizens, as well as other readers, will enjoy it. The source is unknown.

"We oldsters sure do get away with a lot, just because we've managed to keep breathing longer than most folks. When you celebrated your 80th birthday, you've got it made!

"If you forget someone's name or an appointment or what you said yesterday, just explain that your are 80 and you will be forgiven.

When we reported on the false allegations against Proctor & Gamble Co. in Thursday's Brand, we didn't realize that one of those malicious, anonymous letters was being circulated in Hereford. A reader quickly brought it to our attention. What particularly made this reader irate was that the letter appealed to Christians not to buy P&G products. The letter concluded 'that "Christians can and should make a difference."

Our reader pointed out that the last statement was true, and that Christians can make a difference by not blindly passing along false and malicious rumors. The letter reported that the president of P&G recently appeared on the Phil Donahue Show and further stated that a large portion of the company's profits go to the Church of Satan. All of this is untrue, of course, and no P&G official has ever appeared on any network show to discuss the rumors.

San Antonio Light on Los Angeles police beating:

The videotaped scenes of White police officers stomping an unarmed Black man into the pavement in Los Angeles have shocked the nation as few such images have in the 26 years since the civil rights protests at Selma.

Protesters are demanding the removal of L.A. Police Chief Daryl Gates, and now the U.S. Justice Department has moved to review thousands of old police-brutality complaints in response to mounting concerns that this incident may not be that unusual. ...

Every police department in the nation should consider following the lead of the Justice Department and review its own backlog of complaints, just to make sure no actual instance of brutality has slipped through because there was no videotaped evidence to back it up.

Such a review need not imply a lack of confidence in the officers, most of whom do a fine job. But it could help restore the public's confidence in the integrity of the criminal-justice system, in the wake of a brutal incident that seems to call that integrity into question.

San Antonio Express-News on punitive damages:

multimillion-dollar awards for punitive damages in product liability, personal injury and medical malpractice cases.

The ruling makes clear that states may limit such awards if they are so excessive they deprive defendants of their legal rights.

By a 7-1 vote, the high court upheld the award of more than $1 million to a town employee in Roosevelt, Ala., who paid health insurance premiums to an agent who pocketed the money, leaving her with a $3,800 medical bill. Most of the award was for punitive damages against the insurance company, which said it knew nothing of the scam by its purported agent.

It's one thing to compensate a victim for economic losses. It's something else, as Justice Sandra Day O'Connor - the 1 in the 7-1 ruling - points out, to let juries inflict "potentially devastating penalties wholly at random."

The Austin American-Statesman on national energy strategy: By saying it might veto energy legislation that does not include exploring for oil in an Alaskan wildlife refuge, the Bush administration has revealed the ideological nature of its national energy strategy.

It is less an energy strategy than a petroleum production plan, which is a pity, because the president is in a perfect position to use his huge popularity resulting from the successful war with Iraq to set the nation on the road to energy independence.

sal relies too heavily on stimulation of production

A letter from P&G points out that the malicious story first reached a peak in 1982. At that time, producers of various network talk shows provided letters clearly stating that no P&G officials had ever appeared on their shows for any purpose. Many religious leaders were appalled by the ugliness of the story and also volunteered statements on the company's behalf. The story seemed to stop after the media attention given to the problem in 1982 and again in 1985. P&G had reported that the moon and stars trademark was more than 100 years old, contrary to rumors that the company recently put the trademark on products to represent forces of evil.

Unfortunately, the rumors have resurfaced. P&G now has corporate security people investigating leads on people putting out the libelous material, and the company has successfully filed damage suits against a number of people. Our column in Thursday's Brand reported on a couple in Topeka, Ks., being hit by a district court judgement of $75,000.

Dear Editor:

The City Commission has been working with the Beautification Committee of the Chamber of Commerce on park improvements. The Beautification Committee has recently conducted a rather thorough study of how some surrounding Panhandle cities addressed their park beautification and has put forth some ideas for capital improvements.

Some of these ideas include the addition of walking paths, improved restroom facilities, a covered pavilion in Dameron Park, along with additional tree and shrub planting.

The City has budgeted some money for improvements in several parks. In Dameron Park, we plan to construct curbing around the whether or not I really like these Peanut Butter M&Ms I'm eating.

There are so many more choices today when it comes to candy than there were back in the old days, the 60s.

Take, for instance, M&Ms. Way back when, M&Ms only came in plain. Then there was peanut. Now, there's plain, peanut and peanut butter. Decisions, decisions.

Peanut butter has come on in a big way, it seems. There are the old Reese's Peanut Butter Cups, but now you can get smooth or crunchy. There are also Reese's Pieces, which are about the same as Peanut Butter M&Ms.

There's even a peanut butter Snickers, and this new PBMax, which has a bunch of peanut butter surrounded by chocolate.

You can still get a Peanut Butter Log, which tastes just as peanutty and sugary as it did 30 years ago. When my Aunt Hazel visited

Texas last summer for the first time in over 30 years, she packed up a bunch of Peanut Patties. They don't

I'm sitting here trying to decide have them in Montana, and her daughters had never experienced the sugar high you get when you eat one.

However, you can get more than just a plain old Peanut Pattie. They have them in all kinds of flavors and colors besides the good ol' red ones. You can get them in pincapple and coconut and banana and all kinds of other flavors today.

And suckers are different, too. Used to be a sucker was a sucker, unless you got an All-Day Sucker, which I don't see anymore. About the most exotic thing we had besides that was a Tootsie Roll Pop, which I ever licked until I got to the middle. I'd stick that thing in my mouth and savor its flavor for a while, but I was savor its flavor for a while, but I was never patient enough to let it dissolve down to whatever that was in the middle. I always ended up biting it. Today, suckers come in all kinds of flavors, shapes and sizes. For those of you concerned about your weight, you can even get them sugarless.

Speaking of sugarless, gum comes that way, too. Gum comes in all kinds of flavors, and I've noticed that Cloves, which disappeared a few years ago, is back. There's gum that won't stick to your dentures; I don't know if that was a problem before, but this high-tech stuff works, according to an expert in the family.

There are still good old Snickers and Three Musketeers and Crunch, but you can find them in places other than the candy rack. Go look in the freezer, right next to the Haagen-Dazs Gourmet Belgian Chocolate ice cream bars. You'll find Crunch, Snickers and Three Musketeers ice cream bars. The Snickers and Three Musketeers taste surprisingly like the candy bars, especially if you like same cold from the freezer

But whey, oh why, have they not made a Cherry Mash ice cream bar. A Cherry Mash may have been the penultimate candy ever made: lots, of chocolate; some nuts; and cherry or some sort of filling with lots of sugar. It was good. In fact, they could have stopped making candy bars after the Cherry Mash, because even with all of the high-tech stuff on the market, the Cherry Mash is still the playground equipment areas and fill with sand. We plan to improve the parking area on the North end of the park and install curbing.

We will continue to add more benches and are working on tree trimming. We will be planting grass and adding playground equipment in the newly-acquired park at 13th and Ave. F for the benefit of the neighborhood.

We will need to make plans in the near future for the other newlyacquired 20-acre park immediately West of the Nazarene Church. This will be a longrange program of tree and grass planting and piping water to the area will be our first priority. This, of course, depends on funding availability.

There has been some improvements made in Veterans Park in the last couple of years, particularly in the Northeast section of the park. New roads have been cut and picnic tables, barbecue grills and some playground equipment has been added.

Without raising taxes, our budget allows for little more than annual park maintenance, and there is little money for capital improvements. The Beautification Committee has suggested that citizens be given the opportunity to voluntarily contribute toward a park capital improvement fund. Several other cities have done this and it has proven quite success-

The City Commission recently voted to add $1 per month to the residential water bills, beginning May 1st, and residents would pay this on a voluntary basis. If any resident does not wish to contribute to the park improvement fund, he can notify they City by phone or letter at any time, and the $1 contribution will not show up on the billing. If the $1 contribution does show up on the bill, the resident may simply deduct that amount and it will automatically be removed from his future billings. We sincerely hope that residents will see fit to contribute to the park improvement fund for the enhancement of Hereford.

> Sincerely, Wesley S. Fisher, Mayor to be effective. A national energy strategy worthy of the name should include a strong mix of production, conservation, alternative energy sources and environmental protection.

Energy Secretary James D. Watkins told the Senate Energy Committee on Tuesday that drilling in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge in Alaska is so essential to "any kind of a viable energy strategy that makes any sense at all" that the president might veto any package that did not contain it.

Certainly, stimulation of the domestic petroleum industry is essential. ... While the administration's plan does make a gesture or two toward more use of alternative fuels and admits higher fuel efficiency in cars and trucks should be studied, the strategy is basically an expression of the belief that if we just keep on drilling, something is bound to turn up. Where's the conservation component? The concern for the environment?

... Increasing domestic production will help, but the U.S. can never hope to become anything like energy independent simply by drilling holes in the Alaskan tundra.

Energy independence, if it is at all achievable can be achieved only through a comprehensive policy. The war with Iraq focused national attention on the need for such a policy. There is no better time than now for the president to put aside partisan, ideological theorizing and show that he can lead as capably at home as abroad.

Lubbock Avalanche-Journal on measles immunization:

It's not supposed to happen but, increasingly, children are dying of measles right here in the United States.

In 1983, for example, there were only 1,497 reported cases of measles in the entire country. But in 1990, there were 26,000 cases reported nationwide.

Centers for Disease and Control Director William Roper, testifying before Congress last week, said:

"It is low immunization coverage among inner-city populations, particularly among minority groups, that appears to be the primary cause of the recent resurgence of measles."

Dr. Roper believes those children can be reached if vaccinations are available for free at the same places where their parents pick up other benefits, such as the food supplements available through the Women, Infants and Children Program. Of course, there will have to be enough money available for the vaccinations. And President Bush has asked for an additional $40 million for the CDC immunization program. That is an increase of 19 percent, but we think it would be money well spent.

Houston Chronicle on public defenders:

Citizens charged with a crime who cannot afford a lawyer have the right to competent counsel provided by the state. That right limits the options of Harris County Commissioners Court as it considers two proposals for controlling the runaway cost of providing lawyers for indigent defendants. One proposal would restrict each of the county's 22 criminal district courts to $370,000 a year for attorney's fees in cases not involving the death penalty.

... The other proposal ... would save $2 million a year by contracting

... The other proposal ... would save $2 million a year by contracting with a few lawyers to defend indigents in each court. Aside from its cost, the current arrangement whereby more than 1,000 lawyers in Harris County receive appointments for indigent defense is subject to abuse. Campaign contributions as well as experience influence who is appointed and how much they make. That can be cured when conscientious judges make sure lawyers cam their fees. The best alternative, a public defenders office, would entail even higher costs and bureaucratic inefficiencies.

...The cost of defending indigents mirrors the rising crime rate and the attendant costs of the troubled justice system, from courts to jails to parole officers., But those costs must be borne so justice can be done. We are concerned that imposing spending limits or moving partially to a public defender system would leave the county with the worst features of both the private-appointment and public-defender systems while solving pothing. nothing.

Another 598 or 9.2% of all households in Deaf Smith County were estimated to have had incomes of from $35,000 to $49,999. This compares with an estimated 16.7% of all households nationally and 16.1% of all households in Texas.

The most affluent category of households, those with incomes of more than $50,000 per year were estimated to number 468 or 7.2% of all households in Deaf Smith County at the end of 1989. HOUSTON (AP) - After 13 years residents up to $70 million a year to the plan in January 1988 by 60 to 40

Bob Lanier, former Metro chairman and rail opponent, says the system that the city's power structure "proponents' zeal for the project has overshadowed fiscal responsibility

"I think it's something of a the city famed for its clogged boosterism psychology," says Lanier, freeways. who Mrs. Whitmire forced out of his But a bill already approved by the Metro job in December 1989 after he Texas Senate could delay that dumped all rail plans. "In part because transit agencies like to get bigger and better ... and because there 'The rail issue has developed into will be a lot of engineering projects a fight between suburban developers to pass out. It's always politically attractive to be involved with something that will add jobs - if only temporarily."

City voters established Metro in 1978 and allowed for a 1-cent transit tax to be collected. In February 1983. Metro awarded a $139 million contract for 130 rail cars in what it believed would be the first step toward a heavy rail system.

But voters overwhelmingly rejected Metro's plans in June 1983, sending engineers on a four-year search for alternatives.

Metro delayed a second public hammered out a $2.6 billion traffic. compromise plan that included more money for street improvements, bus or a bus to where it starts and the says. "We're expecting a million new replacements, transitways and a inflexibility of routes and the fact that possible rail system. Voters approved it is just a very small transportation percent.

Now Metro officials say they have completed transitways, most of the street and bus improvements and are ready to move ahead with a $1.09 billion rail plan financed by Metro and federal transit money. The proposed rail, which would begin construction in 1993 and be completed by the turn of the century. would connect downtown Houston with the upscale Galleria commercial area nearly 10 miles to the west, the Texas Medical Center about five miles southwest of downtown, and Greenway Plaza, a business district near the affluent West University Place enclave.

"Basically what we have was an agreement on a plan that offered benefits to all the segments of the service area through the year 2000," Hall says. If the rail is not pursued, "we simply are reneging on a fourth of that plan."

But opponents say the light rail system connector" approved by voters has grown into an expensive and expansive proposal that would be inefficient, underused and costly.

Lanier says the proposed rail line vote in August 1987, while it is too short to have much effect on

"Residents have to ride their car

But Hall disagrees.

'The notion that nobody will ride it will be eternally correct if we don't build it," Hall says. "And nobody has ever suggested that a public transportation system pays for itself. That's like saying a highway should support itself."

Other opponents say it should be up to the voters to decide on the project's future.

After the 1988 election, the transit authority changed the proposal so that now they are looking at a stand-alone system that will be the first phase of a multi-use, multi-decade rail system," says City Comptroller George Greanias. "That's like if we agreed to build a one-story, stand-alone house and the contractor comes back later and says, 'I'm building you a 50-story office building."

Greanias, who is considering running later this year against five-term Mayor Whitmire, has chastised city and Metro leaders for spending more than $400,000 to lobby against a bill in Austin that would put the rail issue before voters a third time.

"If the '88 plan was still in effect and they were still talking about a limited rail plan... that would be fine. But it's not," Greanias says.

'There's always going to be a built-in population that doesn't think it's going to work, but it's their money," Henderson says. "They should have an opportunity to decide whether they want to make that sort of commitment."

But Hall and Mrs. Whitmire are confident there will be no third vote.

"I don't think there'll be another referendum," Mrs. Whitmire says, adding that a vote could delay lobbying efforts for more federal money for the project.

Metro has about $450 million set aside from transit tax money to pay for the project, plus nearly $150 million in federal money from the Urban Mass Transit Administration. Houston is in line for another $50 million for fiscal 1992.

'If we don't have a referendum, we will get it," Mrs. Whitmire says. If another vote is held, Hall says it will mean just more delays. We have one of the most studied systems of the history of mankind," Hall says. "Our numbers are as accurate as is humanely possible to get them. We have a good solid plan that has been developed and needs to be acted on."

The greatest difference between household incomes in Deaf Smith County and national household incomes was found in the proportion of those households with incomes of more than $50,000 per year. As noted, these amounted to an estimated 7.2% of all households in Deaf Smith County while amounting to an estimated 18.6% of all households nationally. This group of households was estimated to account for 15.6% of all households in Texas.

Further analysis of these figures shows other differences between local, state, and national income distribution. Those households in Deaf Smith County with incomes of less than $20,000 per year were estimated to make up 55.8% of all local households while accounting for 42.3% of all households in Texas and 38.8% of national households. Local households with incomes of form $20,000 to $34,999 were an estimated 27.8% of all households compared to 26.9% of households in the state and 25.9% of national households. Finally, affluent households with incomes greater than $35,000 per year made up an estimated 16.4% of households in Deaf Smith County while accounting for 31.7% of households in Texas and 35.3% of households nationally.

White JV romps over Palo Duro

Hereford's White junior varsity baseball team used a second inning in which they batted around twice and scored 13 runs to blow by Palo Duro's JV 29-6 Friday in Amarillo.

Lead-off hitter Richard Sanderson led the White's charge with three hits, and "just about everybody got a hit of some kind," Coach Henry Perez said.

The Whitefaces led 1-0 after one inning. In the second, the Dons answered Hereford's 13 with only one run.

Hereford led 23-6 after three and 29-6 after four. The game was called due to darkness after the fourth inning, Perez said.

Fonzie Enriquez started the game on the mound for the Whitefaces. but after two innings, Perez used the big lead to experiment with Stacey Sanders and Richard Wilbanks, who don't usually pitch.

The White team plays Frenship's JV at 4:30 p.m. Monday at Whiteface Field.

Temple, St.John's upset both OSUs

By The Associated Press

It's no surprise North Carolina and Duke are in the final eight of the NCAA tournament. The same can't be said for Temple and St. John's.

The two Atlantic Coast Conference rivals and the two traditional Eastern powers advanced to regional finals on Friday night.

As expected, top-seeded North Carolina beat 12th-seeded Eastern Michigan 93-67 in the East and second-seeded Duke downed 11th-seeded Connecticut 81-67 in the Midwest.

What wasn't expected was Temple's 72-63 overtime win over Oklahoma State and St. John's beating Ohio State 91-74. Oklahoma State was seeded seven spots higher than No. 10 Temple and St. John's was rated three slots below top-seeded Ohio State.

"I still can't believe we made it By The Associated Press this far," Temple coach John Chaney said.

On Sunday, the Owls (24-9) will play North Carolina (28-5) at East Rutherford, N.J., and St. John's (23-8) will meet Duke (29-7) at

'We knew that if we penetrated and kicked it back out, the shots were going to be open," said Koubek, who made 3 of his 5 long-range shots. "We just stuck it to them from the start of the game.'

Chris Smith and John Gwynn had 16 points each for Connecticut (20-11), which failed to avenge last year's 79-78 overtime loss to Duke in the East Regional final. "I don't know if Duke ever shot

Hubert Davis hit all five of his 3-point shots and North Carolina halftime lead over Ohio State and pulled away from Eastern Michigan by holding the Hurons scoreless for minutes in the second half. 5

The Hurons stayed with the Tar Heels for 28 minutes, but were finally worn down by North Carolina's superior depth and talent.

"They have so many players," said Carl Thomas, who scored a career-high 27 points for Eastern Michigan. "They come at you in waves and it takes a toll when you have only one or two big guys."

Carolina with 18 points apiece. Marcus Kennedy had 19 points for Eastern Michigan (26-7).

St. John's raced to a 43-24 never let up.

"To play that well and sustain it makes me feel very, very good," said St. John's coach Lou Carnesecca.

Malik Sealy led the Redmen with 22 points, while Robert Werdann added a career-high 21. All of St. John's starters had at least 14 points.

Jimmy Jackson had 19 points for Ohio State (27-4), which lost three of its last five games. The loss, Ohio State's worst in 16 months, eliminated the last of the Big Ten's five Pete Chilcutt and Davis led North NCAA tournament teams.

We went out there pretty flat," Jackson said. "It was really frustrating."

Mark Macon scored eight of his 26 points in overtime as Temple reached the Final Eight for the first time since 1988

Macon, who had a terrible game at the Meadowlands in the 1988 East final against Duke, made up for it Friday night. He played the first 44 minutes before fouling out with 1:19 left in overtime and Temple leading 64-56.

"It's a good win, whether it happens in the Meadowlands or the Pontiac Silverdome," Macon said. "1988 is gone. It's 1991 now and all that matters is we won."

Sonics end Phoenix jinx

The Boston Celtics can't win in Indianapolis. The Seattle SuperSonics finally found a way in Phoenix.

"It's tough for us to win here, but the playoffs would be a different story," said Boston's Larry Bird after a 121-109 loss to the Pacers on Friday night at the Market Square Arena. It was the fifth straight loss for the Atlantic Division leaders in Indianapolis. With the victory, the Pacers improved to .500 for the first time since Nov. 16 and avenged two straight losses by more than 20 points each to the Celtics.

Meanwhile, Seattle won for the first time in more than three years in Phoenix by beating the Suns 111-105. The Sonics last won in Veterans Coliseum 10 games ago on Dec. 23, 1987.

Reggie Miller scored 21 points to lead the Pacers, who took control with a 14-2 third-quarter run.

In Phoenix, Eddie Johnson scored 17 of his 34 points in the fourth period as Seattle beat the Suns ...

Ricky Pierce added 20 points, Sedale Threat 14 and Benoit Benjamin 14 points and 14 rebounds for Seattle.

Nicklaus leads USF&G Classic

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - The act played pretty well - even gained critical acclaim - 14 years ago and 5.000 miles away.

So Jack Nicklaus and Tom Watson revived it.

In 1977 at Turnberry, in Scotland, Nicklaus and Watson hooked up in a British Open confrontation generally considered the outstanding head-to-head duel in golf's history.

They went back at it again today, once again paired together in the final group on the golf course, in the third round of the USF&G Classic.

In that long ago and far away match on the western coast of Scotland, one of the world's most important titles was at stake and eventually claimed by Watson's 65-65 finish.

This time, near the banks of the Mississippi, both Hall of Famers are seeking a revival of flagging careers.

Nicklaus, 51, the leader, hasn't won on the regular PGA Tour since acquiring his sixth Masters title in 1986.

Watson, 41, his closest pursuer, has won only once since 1984, taking the 1987 Nabisco Championship before returning to a puzzling, frustrating slump that, he admitted "eats on your mind."

Pitching products makes Ryan's face k

- Setting records each time he takes the mound made Texas Rangers pitcher Nolan Ryan a household name.

Hawking everything from office products to commemorative bone handle knives made his face so familiar that he can no longer enjoy his favorite hamburger at a remote outpost in his native state.

"It doesn't matter if it's a restaurant in Cotulla, Texas, or Houston, there'll be people coming up to talk," Ryan said. "I think the commercials made me more recognizable."

Until two years ago when he bolted the Houston Astros for Ranger riches, Ryan could occasionally go Ryan said.

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. (AP) out for dinner with his family and not be interrupted by adoring fans.

He was down home Nolan, a fellow Texan and rancher, who enjoyed eating red meat just like them.

Then came his 5,000th-career strikeout, his sixth no-hitter, 300 career victories, uncounted commercials, and Ryan's fame blossomed from future Hall of Famer to Texas cult hero status.

Country music performer Jerry Jeff Walker wrote a song about Ryan called "Nolan Ryan, He's a Hero to Us All."

"He came down last spring and sang it for us, did a pretty good job,"

SWC losing three programs--not one

Being a Texan, born in Refugio and raised in Alvin, gives Ryan a changing ownership. They went out familiarity that wouldn't exist if he performed in another state.

"People feel at ease to come up and visit because you're from the state and you're on a team that they follow," Ryan said. "We go out in public now and it's not as convenient as it used to be."

Ryan is no longer the sole domain of the sports page.

In addition to baseball, his repertoire includes politics, ranching, banking, fitness and nutrition.

Ryan considered entering the race for Texas Agriculture Commissioner, he owns a bank and has become a target for fitness and nutrition writers seeking the source of his fountain of youth.

'The trade journals pertaining to ranching, banking and fitness are starting to come around more," Ryan said.

Ryanmania didn't explode until Ryan joined the Rangers.

"The timing was just right," he said. "I think the attitude about the Houston organization was going down at that time and it was just the opposite at Texas.

"The organization was just and acquired some hitters like they were interested in winning."

Ryan has made more commercial appearances than pitching performances, adding significantly to his 3.2 million Rangers salary. S

Some of Ryan's commercial moments include: lamenting attempts to find his favorite hamburger establishment on the road; take a certain product, and he promises in his Texas drawl that "those headaches will be long gone;" in another, he dons a tuxedo to promote a disposable razor; and there is a bone-handled knife on the market commemorating Ryan's 300th career victory.

"Everyone talks about wearing the tux. I guess that was the lighter side," Ryan said. "The enjoyment of doing a commercial depends on who you're working with, but they are a lot of work. You don't do one with just one take."

Ryan's rigorous weight lifting program is the basis for a book he's written with Rangers pitching coach Tom House. The biggest ingredient in Ryan's favor is no secret; it's just hard work.

"He's still here because of his work ethic," House said. "Nobody works harder."

He leaves teammates in awe. "I tried to keep up with him one day and he almost killed me," former teammate Charley Kerfeld said.

It will be difficult for Ryan to duplicate his 1990 season when he had a 13-9 record, 3.44 earned run average and led the American League with 232 strikeouts.

Ryan came off the injury list with a back injury and pitched his sixth career no-hitter June 11 against the Oakland Athletics. At'44, he's the oldest major leaguer to throw a no-hitter and he's the first to accomplish the feat over three decades with three different teams.

He got his 300th career victory July 31 against Milwaukee and begins 1991 with a 302-272 career record.

Even the sadness of Bo Jackson's possible career ending injury brought another tribute to Ryan.

Upon departing the Kansas City Royals this week, Jackson said he had 11 memories of his baseball career. One was hitting a home run in the All-Star game.

The other 10 were of facing Ryan.

An AP Sports Analysis By DENNE H. FREEMAN AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) - The Southwest Conference lost three basketball programs recently. One forever and the other two for the foresceable future.

Arkansas left for what it believes will be a bigger payday in the Southeastern Conference.

Texas A&M and Texas Tech took the air out of their programs with devastating, self-inflicted wounds.

The Jackie Sherrill legacy came back to haunt the Texas A&M University athletic department.

In most programs, rookie basketball coach Kermit Davis Jr. might have been given a second chance, but not at Texas A&M.

"The NCAA threatened us with the death penalty if we didn't take action," said William A. McKenzie, chairman of the board of regents. "We had no choice."

Sherrill left Texas A&M in 1988 as the Aggies were put on probation by the NCAA for football recruiting violations. The Aggies didn't get hit hard because university President William Mobley took a strong stand in getting him out the door.

But a five-year cloud hangs over the school because of it and another major infraction could mean the "death penalty," the same punish-ment that befell Southern Methodist University.

"We're just sick about it," they've opened up the SWC for Texas and coach Tom Penders. Two powerful state universities may be hoop lightweights for years have certainly done one thing - to come because of the upheaval in their basketball programs. Meanwhile, anybody out there need a coach with several decades experience? Myers said he "might be interested" if some NBA team wanted him as an assistant. He doesn't have coaching out of his blood and would also entertain the possiblity of another coaching job.

Getting Myer's would be the best move the Aggies could make, but neither the Red Raiders nor the Aggies have been making many good moves lately.

McKenzie said. "Kermit was a very nice young man and a promising basketball coach."

The Aggies are building a brand new arena but it will take them years to get their program back on sound footing.

Former Texas A&M coach Shelby Metcalf said, "Texas A&M is the rock of Gibraltar. It can survive anything."

But it will take time.

Mcanwhile, Texas Tech athletic director T. Jones has found himself in the uncomfortable position of forcing a legend to resign. Jones believes the Red Raiders can find a basketball messiah who can recruit for Tech although the school geographically is a million miles away from a neon big city and has a dusty, unattractive basketball facility.

Why, T., do you think Gerald Myers used to fly his recruits in at night? He didn't want them to have to see the wild West Texas from the air.

Attendance was way down at Tech. Myers had only won a single SWC game at home in two seasons.

Things got so bad the Red Raiders had a paint-your-face promotion for the students with some good prizes; only two showed up with painted faces.

Gerald did the best he could with what he had at Tech. Given the same set of circumstances for the new coach, what makes anybody believe the new guy can do a better job than Myers?

Last February, Jones gave Myers a contract through 1995. Remember what he said at the time: He had decided the best man for the job "was right here on campus."

So who changed Jones' mind? Impatient alumni? The school president? The hunch here is that Jones didn't make the call.

"I think it was higher ups who gave T. his orders," said one highly laced administrative source.

Members,

Survival seemed to be the basic rule of the day the last few years for all financial institutions. Credit Unions, Banks and Savings and Loans have all been struggling to maintain stability and remain profitable - Hereford Texas Federal Credit Union just completed a very successful 1990.

1991 - Is developing into a real challenging opportunity. Falling interest rates and a low loan demand are compounded by a recessionary environment which is affecting the local economy. Add to this scenario, the "Desert Storm" war and resulting inflationary pressures.... These factors bring management to the questions - What is best for our membership? What plan of action should we follow with our investment? Do we expand our portfolio of loans or just remain static?

The answer to these and many other questions and our resulting game plan are relevant to the Hereford / Dimmitt communities' future growth and our members standard of living. The plan of action chosen by management will be conservative by nature of the Credit Union philosophy, but flexible enough to respond to our communities' needs and desires. Management plans to meet all challenges and to seize every opportunity available.

Hereford Texas Federal Credit Union has doubled in asset size the last five years. Hopefully this growth will continue. Despite our rapid growth we are striving to maintain a personal relationship with our membership. It is our goal to extend our services for membership's convenience. Presently we are struggling to fine-tune and correct some of our growing pains.

Management is totally committed to providing a safe, efficient and effective financial institution for the communities of both Hereford and Dimmitt.

The question management is most often asked today concerns the safety of the members money.

How does the N.C.U.A. share insurance fund compare with the condition of the F.D.I.C. insurance funds of Banks and thrifts? Most financial analysts and economists believe the number of Credit Unions that could conceivalby get into trouble and impose losses on the insurance fund does not appear to be remotely close to the number of troubled banks and thrifts.

Today the limit for deposit insurance is generally $100,000.00 per person. This limit can be increased by setting up a variety of joint or trust accounts.

The N.C.U.A. is better capitalized than the F.D.I.C. insurance fund and credit unions generally make loans that are less risky than commercial real estate loans. Losses on the conventional consumer loans made at Credit Unions will probably increase during the current recession, but not enough to endanger the fund.

Today, Hereford Texas Federal Credit Union is a very healthy financial institution. Our growth factor indicates a high level of trust in our Board of Directors as they lead us into 1990's.

Our staff does a professional job. Yet, I want to emphasize the cornerstone of a successful Credit Union is the confidence of its members. I am thankful for this support.

The future demands are exciting and I know this Credit Union Team is up to the task.

Robert L. Baker Manager

WASHINGTON (AP) - Reduced grain exports hurt farmers but are helping take the pressure off the U.S. transportation system, an Agriculture Department analyst says.

Less exports eases

transportation strain

T.Q. Hutchinson of the department's Economic Research Service said also that lower fuel prices in the wake of the Persian Gulf War are another factor in the grain transportation outlook.

Last October, the Interstate Commerce Commission reported average diesel fuel prices had peaked at $1.59 per gallon, up more than 45 percent from July 30 before Iraq invaded Kuwait.

By early February, diesel prices dropped to an average of $1.36 per gallon, Hutchinson said Wednesday in a telephone interview. And by March 18 prices had dropped to less than $1.22, within a few cents of their level of last summer. Hutchinson's comments followed precise right now.

an earlier report in which he noted USDA's projections showing total grain and soybean exports down more than 23 million metric tons from last year, including a 22 percent drop for corn and 17 percent for wheat.

"Domestic consumption of total grain and soybeans is forecast to be up almost 9 percent," Hutchinson said. "Domestic corn and wheat use are expected to increase 7 percent and 31 percent, respectively, from 1989-90."

But these increases are not large enough to offset the projected decline in exports, so reduced demand for rail and barge service is expected.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers plans to open the Missouri River for navigation on April 8, Hutchinson said in his report. Indications are that conditions will be about the same as last year, although it's hard to be income prospects have faded by about $2 billion from what the Agriculture Department was forecasting earlier this year.

"While cash receipts are expected to remain near record levels, lower direct government payments and slightly higher farm expenses will pull down net incomes," the department's Economic Research Service said Tuesday.

Agency economists said important factors in the weakening of farm income prospects are the large supplies of some commodities and weak demand for wheat and milk.

Direct payments to farmers could drop 5 percent to 10 percent from last year's $9 billion, said economist Diane Bertelsen. But much will depend on farmer participation in 1991 crop programs, she added. Net cash income was forecast in a range of $53 billion to $58 billion, down from $55 billion to $60 billion indicated earlier. Last year's net cash income also was reduced to $58 billion from $59 billion estimated previously but was still a near record.

As used by the research service, net cash income "measures the value of commodities sold in a calendar year plus government payments, less out-of-pocket costs." Some commodities sold actually may have been produced in earlier years and stored until marketed.

In another method of accounting, the report said "net farm income" may now be in the range of $42 billion to $47 billion, compared with $44 billion to $49 billion indicated previously. It was a record $49 billion in 1990.

Moisture data collected

Pre-plant soil moisture conditions within the 15-county High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1 service area range from fair to good, according to data from the annual pre-plant soil moisture survey conducted by the U.S. Department of Agriculture-Soil Conservation Service (USDA-SCS) and the Water District.

Some areas of the Water District received a couple of inches of precipitation during January and February. As a result, these areas may have more moisture in the top 18 inches of the soil than was indicated when the final soil moisture data was collected in mid-January," says Wilfred E. "Willie" Crenwelge, USDA-SCS Soil Scientist. "This reinforces the need for producers to check their own soil moisture conditions before the start of preplant irrigation."

Pre-plant soil moisture conditions play an important role in determining crop yields. Historical data indicates that above-average crop yields are produced in the Texas High Plains area when the root zone of the soil is near field capacity at planting.

Soil moisture conditions were tested from Nov. 12, 1990, through Jan. 15, 1991, at 249 soil moisture monitoring sites scattered across the Water District service area. These soil moisture monitoring sites are chosen based upon the soil type, the crop produced and the saturated thickness of the Ogallala Aquifer, which influences water well yield capabilities. Each soil moisture monitoring site represents typical field conditions near the location.

The soil moisture information gives irrigators an idea of the amount of water that needs to be added by irrigation and/or precipitation to the five-foot root zone to bring the soil profile to field capacity prior to planting. By using this information, the farmer conserves groundwater, as he is less likely to over-irrigate or under-irrigate the soil.

Sandy soils within the Water District service area hold about six inches of available water in the fivefoot soil root zone when wet to field capacity. In comparison, clayey soils hold up to 12 inches of water in the soil root zone when wet to field capacity. The total plant available water in the soil root zone profile in the Water District averages about eight inches of water when wet to field capacity.

In the corn producing area of the Water District, the survey indicated that soil moisture averaged about 50 percent of field capacity, or about four inches of available water. In the cotton, grain sorghum and wheat producing areas, the soil contained from two to three inches of available water.

With the recent precipitation received since mid-January, we have somewhat better soil moisture conditions than we have experienced in any of the past three years. This should help farmers as they prepare their land for planting. Also, based upon National Weather Service statistics for the past 79 years, it is probable that the area will receive additional precipitation prior to the growing season, which would increase the available moisture in the soil," says Crenwelge.

He adds that most of the Water District service area currently has from two to four inches of plantavailable water stored in the root zone. This moisture is fairly uniform throughout the soil profile, except for the top six inches of soil--the plow layer--which is prone to moisture losses caused by air-drying.

"Producers using conventional tillage practices expose the plow layer to air-drying and as a result, the soil requires additional moisture to overcome the soil moisture deficit. Farmers who use minimum tillage, or no tillage at all, experience less soil moisture loss from the plow layer than farmers who use traditional tillage methods.

Since the soil moisture monitoring survey reflects general soil moisture trends within the District, Crenwelge says it is important for producers to remember that soil moisture deficits can vary from field to field.

Producers can check soil moisture conditions by augering several holes in the soil and observing the soil moisture conditions at one-foot intervals. The District's Water Management Note, "Estimating Soil Moisture by Feel and Appearance," is a good guide to help farmers estimate the percentage of moisture stored in the soil profile. The publication is available free of charge to persons residing within the High Plains Water District service area.

Report shows farmers use range of crop chemicals

WASHINGTON (AP) - Farmers overwhelmingly use a wide range of chemicals on the nation's major crops, according to a new survey by the Agriculture Department.

The report is the first of a new annual series to be published by the department to provide timely and accurate information on fertilizer and agricultural chemical use.

Officials said Wednesday that the project was started as part of the Bush administration's water quality initiative and to respond to environmental concerns.

"In the past, farm-level data have been inadequate to determine the magnitude of water quality problems or the benefits and costs of alternative solutions for the farmer and other the acres, respectively. affected parties," the report said.

The information collected each year will help analysts "find solutions to the complex environmen-tal issues of the 1990s," it said.

Periodic surveys for many years have shown widespread use of fertilizers and pesticides, which include herbicides, insecticides and fungicides commonly used on field crops. The information, however, was often sketchy and incomplete.

The new USDA survey was based a total of more than 15,000 sample fields during the 1990 crop season. Information published in the 154-page report included crop acreages by state, names of chemicals, percentage of acreage treated, rates of application and total amounts applied.

Some examples of the findings: -Herbicides were used on 92.4 percent of the corn acreage surveyed in 47 states, while insecticides were used on 30.9 percent. Nitrogen, phosphorous and potassium fertilizers were applied to 96.1, 83.3 and 74.1 percent of the corn acreage, respectiveherbicides were atrazine and metolachlor, which were used on 64 percent and 26 percent of the acreage, respectively. The most popular insecticide was terbufos at 12 percent of the acreage.

-For cotton, herbicides in the six largest upland cotton-producing states were used on 94.6 percent of the acreage. Nitrogen was applied to 79.2 percent; phosphorous, 48.5 percent; and potassium, 30.6 percent.

The two most commonly used herbicides were trifluralin, on 64 percent, and fluometuron, 26 percent.

The two most commonly used herbicides were propanil and molinate, used on 84 percent and 42 percent of -Soybean farfners used herbicides on 94.8 percent of the acreage, but insecticides and fungicides "were not

The two most commonly used used on a significant portion" of the acreage, the report said.

Nitrogen was applied to 20.5 percent of the acreage; phosphorous, 27.2 percent; and potassium, 30.1 percent. The two most commonly used herbicides were trifluralin, 37 percent, and chlorimuon-ethyl, 20 percent.

-Winter wheat producers applied herbicides on 34 percent of the acreage, but significant amounts of insecticide and fungicide were not used.

Nitrogen was used on 83.7 percent of the acreage, while phosphorous and potassium were applied on 47.8 percent and 18.1 percent, respectively.

The two most commonly used herbicides were 2,4-D on 16 percent of the acreage, and chlorsulfuron, 13 percent.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate voted to raise the prices that processors provision would help farmers in a tough pay farmers for milk, a response to a milk surplus that has driven down the prices dairy farmers receive by 25 percent since last summer.

The Senate approved the provision 60-40 on Tuesday and made it part of a $5.2 billion measure that provides leading some lawmakers to question money for programs ranging from aid whether retailers have been to Israel and Turkey to extra security_price-gouging. at the U.S. Capitol.

Supporters said the milk-price period during which the price they receive for milk has dropped from $13.09 per 100 pounds to $10.16 since August.

Soviet athletes at San Angelo meet to receive Texas' finest hospitality

By CHIP BROWN Associated Press Writer

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) - Pole vaulting will replace politics as a Soviet high school track team makes an historical debut in the San Angelo Relays, considered the largest schoolboy event in Texas.

More than 80 high school boys track teams from across the Lone Star State are entered in the meet along with the Soviets, a group of 11 boys from area high schools in Ryazan, Russia.

The two-day event, which begins March 29, will mark the first time in Texas high school history that a Soviet team has competed in a sanctioned athletic event.

'The Russians have created a lot of interest in this meet," said Bob Beaver, the director of the relays, which has been dubbed "USA-USSR: The Lone Star Roundup."

"With 84 high schools entered and more than 2,000 competitors, this is easily the largest field we have ever had in the meet's 33-year history," Beaver said. "No question the Russians helped bring some teams in.'

on the track, officials in this rugged barbecue sauce. West Texas city will be smothering Star State hospitality.

"We'll call it the Texas version of glasnost," said Jean Ryon, an event organizer. "They won't know what hit 'em."

The Soviets' week-long visit will include a cowboy breakfast at a working ranch, a concert by country music star Lee Greenwood and a trip to a western wear store to be outfitted in boots, jeans and a cowboy hat.

"The Soviets' impression of Americans is cowboys, westerns, the Marlboro Man," Greg Starr, an American expert on Russia, told local high school students during a briefing about their foreign guests.

"I think West Texas will live right up to their expectations. They will be walking around with their mouths hanging open," Starr said.

The Soviets will be wined and dined Texas style, meaning chicken-fried steak, mesquite-cooked barbecue and plenty of Tex-Mex fixings.

"We are going to send those kids home with full bags, full stomachs While teams from Fort Worth and and a lot to smile about," Ms. Ryon San Antonio take aim at the Soviets said in a drawl as thick as hickory Known more for their vodka, chess the team in good ol' fashioned Lone champions and weightlifters, there was fear initially that the Soviet team would not be able to stack up against the Texas tracksters.

> But after Soviet coach Nickolai Zaitsev mailed in his team's times and distances, Beaver began to worry about rewriting the San Angelo Relays record book.

> Kostya Isaev reportedly has a best of 6-11 in the high jump and is listed as the 1990 USSR teenage high jump champion. Isaev's best would break the existing San Angelo Relays record by two inches.

Jury Podvalkov's times in the 3,200- and 1,600-meter runs would break current meet records. And triple jumper Dmitry Baykov's best effort is 3 feet better than the meet's existing mark.

compete," Beaver said. "So this will be the top-of-the-line. They are not going to send just any athlete halfway around the world."

Past competitors in the San Angelo Relays include such stars as Curtis Dickey, who later played football for Texas A&M and the Baltimore Colts, and Johnny "Lam" Jones, a football standout for the Texas Longhorns and New York Jets.

Stormy Kimrey, the sports committee director of the San Angelo Chamber of Commerce, decided nearly two years ago while on a trip to the Soviet Union to invite a team to the track meet.

Several calls in the middle of the night, due to the 9-hour time difference, and thousands of dollars donated by local businesses have helped make the gesture of perestroika a reality.

Gifts from retailers include everything from the Soviets' roundtrip airfare from Washington to San Angelo to sunscreen.

"With glasnost and the improved east-west worldwide relations, there's a feeling of wanting to get to know each other better," Kimrey said. "And it shouldn't be all up to the

"Only the gifted athletes in Russia older people. The 16-, 17- and 18-year-olds need a better understanding of life in each other's country. We hope this event can help us exchange cultures and promote world peace,' he said.

Starr, who will serve as a translator for the Soviet boys, said Ryazan and

San Angelo share similar industries, including agriculture and oil refining.

But the similarities end at the commercial market. The bare-bones Soviet economy forces residents to wait hours in line for a single piece of meat.

Starr said a Texas supermarket may cause "culture shock."

"They will enjoy the great American sport of shopping," he said. "In fact; you may find the boys running faster in the stores than on the track because of the incredible selection we have. They won't be able to get to the shelves fast enough."

WLAF ready for debut

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - As players whooped, hollered and high-fived during a scrimmage, team executives roamed the sidelines, talking of season ticket sales and T-shirt orders.

So much to do, so little time. In less than three months, the San Antonio Riders of the World League of American Football have chosen a team name, hired coaches, drafted players and prepared for their inaugural season.

'It's going to be a lot of fun," said Riders owner Larry Benson. "People that are skeptical are in for some very big surprises."

The team has sold nearly 6,000 season tickets, plus thousands more for individual games. And restaurants health clubs and other San Antonio s are offering dis freebies for Riders players.

first six points wins.

ball in its own end zone after a kickoff but opts not to return it, the ball is spotted on the 10-yard line instead of the 20.

-Teams may attempt two-point conversions after touchdowns as well as standard one-point kicks.

One of the most talked-about WLAF innovations is a plan to allow quarterbacks to wear radio-equipped helmets to receive coaching instructions. Unlike the NFL, the league also permits on-field celebrations.

"These kids are all really going to try about 120 percent on everything," Benson said. "They're here to prove a point - to prove that they're very and they love the game. Most players have participated in NFL training camps and developmental squads. Riders kicker Teddy Garcia even plays for the Houston Oilers. For many, though, this is a last chance at pro football. "We're not going to kid our-selves," Benson said. "We're not going to have a Herschel Walker or a Joe Montana. We'll develop some, but we're not going to have those guys to start out." Among the Riders standouts so far are quarterback Jason Garrett, linebacker Greg Gilbert and running backs Ricky Blake and Undra Johnson.

Riders have four "Operation -If a receiving team possesses the Discovery" players recruited from other countries; the Riders' four are from Sweden and Mexico.

> Riders coach Mike Riley, hired away from the Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the Canadian Football League, said he likes what he's seen. "I feel pretty good about what we have and the way they have worked," Riley told reporters after making final roster cuts. "I think we're ready to go.

Some observers wonder how the Riders and the WLAF will differ from other local pro football teams of the past, particularly the Gunslingers of the now-defunct United States Football League.

After all, the Riders will be playing contracts. Games will be televised on ABC and the USA Network.

Riders executives deny the WLAF is merely an elaborate farm system for the NFL.

However, said Benson: "The talent is there ... It's going to be somewhere between college and the NFL."

New Orleans Saints owner Tom Benson - Larry Benson's brother - has watched Riders practices. Some WLAF players have what it takes to play in the NFL, he said, but they have been in the wrong place at the wrong time. "I think we're all going to be really surprised," Tom Benson said.

Curiosity that has surrounded the team since its inception may subside after the Riders' season opener Monday against the Orlando Thunder in Florida.

The Riders are one of 10 WLAF franchises in the United States and abroad. The National Football League, which owns the WLAF, has also allowed its players to moonlight with the new league, but so far there are no big-name takers.

The WLAF includes six American teams, New York Knights, Sacramento Surge, Birmingham Fire, Raleigh-Durham Skyhawks, Orlando Thunder and San Antonio; a Canadian team, Montreal Machine; and the franchises, the London Monarchs, Frankfurt Galaxy and Barcelona Dragons. And there's talk of expanding to other countries next year.

"That's the whole purpose of this, to see American football (go) international," said former Dallas Cowboys coach Tom Landry, a minority owner of the Riders.

Landry said he expects more WLAF teams to start up in Europe, Mexico and Japan. "I would be surprised if they expand in America at all," he said.

The 10-game season ends on June 9 with a World Bowl.

To make American football more appealing to Europeans, who are used to fast-paced soccer, the WLAF has tinkered with NFL to keep games moving.

Among the changes: -Less time allowed between plays; 25- and 35-second clocks will be used instead of 45-second clocks. -In overtime, the team scoring the

But the Riders plan to move to the Alamodome - which will be about three times as large - once it's completed in 1993.

Benson also says the difference between the WLAF and the USFL is that teams won't wage bidding wars for players because the league controls and pays players' salaries. Most players will receive about $20,000 the first season, with quarterbacks carning slightly more and kickers slightly less. The WLAF already has television

Wearing this dot was truly humiliating. But there was another "badge of shame" that was worse, I must confess that I was once a party to this second form of humiliation, and it has been on my conscience all these years.

The girl's name was Marilyn. She had big, sparkling eyes and black shoulder-length hair. I don't recall the circumstances, but our teacher, Mrs. W., decided one day that Marilyn was "acting like a baby."

That teacher kept a frilly bonnet and a baby bottle in her bottom desk drawer. On the day Marilyn was forced to wear the bonnet, I was given the bottle and instructed to taunt her.

I recall leading a circle of girls around Marilyn as she sat there in tears, wearing that damned bonnet. I remember saying, "Yes, Marilyn, yes, Marilyn, you HAVE to take the bottle because you are a baby. Mrs. W. says so.'

I am now nearly 33. Lately I have become more reflective and am working at putting my life in order. Marilyn, her last name long forgotten, has been more and more in my thoughts. Ann, because you are able to reach the world, perhaps you can help me get word to that girl.

Marilyn, if you are reading this, I am Kelly, the nasty little twerp who led the group of other nasty little twerps in what must have been one of the most painful experiences of your life. While I cannot turn back the clock, I feel tremendous guilt over what I did to you. If you are out there, Marilyn, I hope that you will accept my apologies and find it in your heart to forgive me. If so, I will do whatever I can to make it up to you. Just sign me -- Kelly from Illinois

DEAR KELLY: Here's your letter. I admire you for trying to right Students

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I need a wrong of the past. If Marilyn sees your plea, I hope that she will let me know. I would be happy to print her letter.

> DEAR ANN LANDERS: When I was 15, I lost my virginity. I went crazy over an older guy, and we made out a few times. I'm sure I wouldn't have gone so far if I hadn't had so many beers. We stopped going together when he ran into our front porch on a motorcycle. My father was furious. The damage was $500.

The next guy was sort of nice but he hung around the house too much, and Mom got sick of him mooching meals. I turned sour on romance and just quit going with guys.

It's been three years since I have been with anyone. I met a very nice guy in the restaurant where I work and we have gone out twice. It's very important to him that he marry a virgin. I honestly feel like one since it's been so long. If I lied about this could he tell? -- Mona Lisa in San Bernardino

DEAR MONA: Sometimes yes. Sometimes no. But that's not the point. Lying is never a good idea. Tell him the truth and if he really cares about you he will accept you as you are.

P.S. I often wonder if these guys who insist on virgin brides can pass the test themselves. Maybe if they exercised more restraint in their younger days, there would be more virgins around to choose from.

Cancer Crusade plans underway

Patsy Sparkman, co-chairman, of the 1991 American Cancer Society Crusade for the Deaf Smith Unit, at left, and Nicky Walser, at right, are making plans for the door-to-door campaign planned from 2-5 p.m. Sunday, April 21. The Great American Food Fight Against Cancer, planned to begin April 18, will help residents learn how to eat healthier and lower the risks for certain cancers.

Cancer Crusade to include food fight

Nicky Walser is serving as the proper foods, will be given out that chairman of the 1991 American Cancer Society Crusade for the Deaf Smith County Unit. The door-to-door residential drive is planned from 2-5 p.m. Sunday, April 21.

During the annual education and fundraising campaign, residents will be given the opportunity to donate to the ACS and to receive information packets.

April is the month to highlight the fight against cancer. At the forefront is the American Cancer Society's Community Crusade, its annual education and fundraising campaign.

A new and exciting event has been added to the calendar just before the Community Crusade--the American Cancer Society's Great American Food Fight Against Cancer. This lighthearted event has a serious message: healthier eating choices might lower the risks for certain cancers.

The Community Crusade will continue the educational messages about nutrition on the weekend after the Food Fight, which takes place on April 18. The pamphlets, which will include guidelines on how to help reduce cancer risks by eating the day at all local grocery stores.

The Food Fight pamphlet contains recommendations that could reduce a person's risk for certain cancers. The ACS wants people to choose foods rich in vitamin A and C, low in fat, and high in fiber, as well as cruciferous vegetables.

Walser will serve as general and chairperson of Hereford's Community Crusade. She looks forward to leading the campaign to encourage people to choose a strong arsenal of foods for lowering cancer risk.

"Research reports have strongly suggested that certain foods, perhaps through their chemical content or the reactions they create during the digestive process, might affect a person's chances of getting cancer," Walser says. "For example, highfiber diets are recommended to help avoid colorectal cancer, and vitamin

A might reduce the risk of getting cancers of the lung, larynx, and esophagus. We also recommend that foods high in fat be avoided to help lower risks for cancer of the breast, prostate, and colon." Patsy Sparkman, president of the

Directors elected at annual meeting

Thirteen new directors were added to the board of the Texas Panhandle Heritage Foundation, Inc. during the annual meeting where 100 members gathered recently at the Sterguell Collections in Amarillo.

The Texas Panhandle Heritage Foundation, Inc., is the nonprofit producer of the musical drama "TEXAS" that opens its 26th season this summer beneath 600 foot cliffs in Palo Duro Canyon. The foundation has over 2,000 members.

New directors from Amarillo include Richard Allison, Sid Bayless, Sandra Gilliland, Frank Marr and Gary Moore.

From Canyon new directors are Carol Autry, Sharon Brown, Kathy Cornette, John Duggan and Dr. Kenneth Laycock.

Area directors added were Mrs. Mildred Bradford of Dimmitt and Maggie Lamb Rennels of Muleshoe. Directors re-elected to the board for a two-year term from Hereford are Mr. and Mrs. Wes Fisher, Earnest Langley, Mrs. Jack Renfro, and Mrs.

Gilvin announced a matching grant of $75,000 from the Amarillo Area Foundation with the Don & Sybil Harrington Foundation. Gilvin challenged the board to "give or get" the remaining $75,000. Donations over $500 will receive a place on the new Silver Anniversary Patio.

Manager Raymond Raillard announced over 300 groups had already booked by March 1 for the 1991 season, the largest number in history by this date.

According to Walser, the purpose of the Community Crusade is to inform as many people in Hereford as possible about cancer prevention, American Cancer Society's Deaf early detection, treatment, research, and education programs. She believes that the Food Fight will enrich the Crusade.

> "In the past, we've stressed the various tests and procedures that detect cancer in its early stages," Walser says. "But this year, with the Great American Food Fight Against Cancer, we're concentrating on how you can try to avoid cancer while enjoying delicious foods and having fun."

Lighting illuminates kitchen, bath design

recommend that home sellers turn on lights before potential buyers appear, to give the house a warm, homey look. Used strategically, lighting can be a mood enhancer, yet many people neglect this important design aspect in their kitchens and baths.

Lighting falls into three categories: general, task and accent. General lighting fulfills living and safety needs, and is usually placed overhead in the kitchen or on the wall in a small bath. Many of today's larger two-person baths incorporate privacy zones--enclosed areas that set off water closets, bidets and showers. These areas deserve special lighting attention.

Task lighting aids in performing food preparation, cooking and cleanup chores. The fixture over the sink and range-hood light are common examples. Under-cabinet strip lights are the newer application. In the bath, mirror lights aid in performing decorating selections should be made tasks like shaving and applying makeup.

Decorative lighting can be used to create a mood, define important areas and visually expand smaller spaces. For example, high-hats or recessed spotlights are frequently used to illuminate the area above open-soffit cabinets, casting a warm glow where there would otherwise be shadows. In the bath, tiny accent lights can be used to create a soothing aura when relaxing in a whirlpool tub.

Fluorescent lighting has been much maligned as unflattering, but in most cases, it is actually the best possible light source. 'A fluorescent lamp provides 60 or more lumens of light per watt of electricity used, compared with an incandescent lamp which gives 10 to 20 lumens of lights for each watt of energy used. So why the bad rap? People who dislike fluorescent light have usually worked under the wrong type. While incandescent light gives colors a warm, rich cast, there are many different types of fluorescent tubes, each affecting color and skin tones differently.

Deluxe cool and deluxe warm are best for kitchens. Deluxe cool best simulates natural sunlight. It also flatters cool colors such as blue and green, but should not be used in kitchens where warm colors predominate.

Deluxe warm, on the other hand,

Real estate agents frequently decorated in yellow, orange, rust and other warm colors. It is not a good choice where cool colors dominate.

A new type of fluorescent lighting, full spectrum, flatters all colors. Fluorescent lighting also produces less heat than incandescent light, an especially important consideration for the kitchen.

Halogen lamps, used for decades in car headlights and slide projectors, are now applied in residential lighting. About the size of a fountain-pen cap, the halogen bulb can produce as much light as an incandescent lamp ten times its size. It also consumes about half the power and lasts up to seven times longer than a standard light bulb. The light quality from this source is whiter and richer in blue, lacking the yellowish color produced by ordinary incandescent bulbs.

Because of the varying effects different light sources have on colors. under lighting similar to that planned for the actual room.

Such high-tech lighting fixtures as spotlights, eyeballs and track lights lend an air of sophistication to incandescent lighting which threatens to make fluorescent lighting pale in comparison. Yet a little creativity can turn fluorescent fixtures into showpieces. For example, fluorescent fixtures can be trimmed with tile, wallpaper, cabinet door panels or laminate to tie in with other features in the room. In addition, they can be recessed into the ceiling or soffit, or concealed with a valance.

In addition to selecting lighting types and sources, the remodelingminded consumer should keep in mind these points when developing lighting plan"

* Cabinet, counter, wall and floor colors can detract from or add to kitchen illumination. For example, maple finishes reflect 42 percent of interior light, while dark oak reflects just 17 percent. The lighter the surface, the more reflection, and the less lighting required.

Surface textures have a big impact on lighting. Today's high-gloss polyester finishes are highly reflective. Care should be taken to develop a lighting plan that minimizes glare.

* All-white European style kitchens present a high-tech look, but a lighting challenge. The solution may be to use matte finishes that are not as reflective. A kitchen designer can provide guidance in this area. * Balance between good working light and low, intimate light for entertaining can be achieved through dimmer switches on incandescent lamps and alternate switching on fluorescent lights.

A recent increase in food poisoning cases due to Salmonella enteritidis bacteria from eggs, even uncracked grade A eggs, means that consumers will have to be more careful about storing and preparing eggs

The risk of contracting salmonellosis from raw or undercooked eggs is very small. Nevertheless, eggs should be stored and cooked carefully to prevent the growth of bacteria and minimize the risk. Individuals who are particularly vulnerable to Salmonella infections include the very young, the elderly, pregnant women (because of risk to the fetus), and people already weakened by serious illness or whose immune systems are weakened.

The following tips will help protect you from Salmonella infections:

1. Cook eggs thoroughly until both the yolk and white are firm, not runny.

2. Avoid eating raw eggs, such as hollandaise sauce, homemade icecream, or homemade eggnog. 3. Use grade AA or grade A eggs with clean, uncracked shells.

4. Refrigerate eggs at home in their original carton as soon as possible, at a temperature no higher than 40 degrees Fahrenheit.

5. Use the eggs within five weeks of purchase. Use hard-boiled eggs within one week of cooking.

6. Don't keep eggs out of the refrigerator for more than two hours including time for preparing and serving. If you hide hard-boiled eggs for an egg hunt, either follow the two hour rule or do not eat the eggs.

7. Wash hands, utensils, equipment, and work areas with hot soapy water before and after you prepare eggs and egg-rich food such as quiches and custard.

8. Serve cooked eggs and egg-rich food immediately after cooking, or refrigerate at once for serving later. Store no longer than three or four days.

Eggs Not Done Lightly

The days of soft-boiled eggs and raw egg cocktails may be gone forever, thanks to the failure of the federal government to act swiftly to eliminate the spread of fresh eggs infected with a deadly bacteria, onella enteritidis

Facts given on hepatitis B virus infection

About one person out of 20 in the This vaccine can be used during United States will become infected with hepatitis B virus (HBV) at some time during his or her life. HBV, a virus that attacks and damages the liver, can cause serious health problems, including hepatitis (inflammation of the liver), cirrhosis (hardening) of the liver, and liver cancer.

The virus can be passed from one person to another by infected body fluids, such as blood, semen, and saliva. Women who are infected can also pass on HBV to their babies. Although up to 10 percent of people who are infected with HBV do not have any signs of infection, they can still pass on the virus to others. These people are called carriers.

Certain groups of people are at pregnancy to help protect mothers from becoming infected and passing the virus to their babies.

Babies born to infected mothers may develop severe hepatitis that can be life-threatening. They also have a high risk of becoming carriers of the virus. When carrier babies become adults, they have a 25 percent chance of developing cirrhosis of the liver or liver cancer.

A screening test is available to determine whether a pregnant woman has been exposed to HBV. If the test is positive, the doctor can administer a substance called hepatitis B immunoglobulin (HBlg) to the baby soon after birth to provide short-term

Nuptials planned

Nicole Marie Hammond and Jeff Anthony Brorman, both of Lubbock, plan to wed May II in Immaculate Conception Catholic Church.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Beverly Hanyen of Hereford and Tim Hammond of Conrad, Iowa, and the prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Tony Brorman of Vega.

Miss Hammond is a graduate of Hereford High School and attended West Texas State University. She is currently employed by Highland Medical Center in Lubbock.

Brorman, a graduate of Vega High School, is attending Texas Tech University majoring in mechanical engineering.

Give home stitch in time

When you're ready to look for a house, or are ready to sell one, the best way to check it out is to start at the bottom. After location, square footage, number of bathrooms and closet space, the thing prospective buyers should be concerned about most is leaking basements.

Here are some clues to help you detect leakage when shopping for a house:

-Excess rust around the legs of appliances, such as furnaces, washers, dryers, water heaters, etc.

-Rotting, discoloration or water marks on wooden stairs or furniture. -White efflorescence, a powder residue on walls and paneling caused y minerals seeping in from the mortar.

-Warped wall paneling or doors. Move furniture away from paneled walls and check for warping or bubbling.

-Stacks of storage boxes may have been placed to hide indications of seepage. Move some of the boxes and check their undersides for dampness.

-Streaks or water lines on basement walls.

-Be especially concerned with fresh paint on floor, walls and water tank with no evidence of water damage; this may indicate a thorough coverup.

-Talk to the neighbors. Ask about spring and fall flooding and visit the

Not all eggs are infected, clearly, nor is everyone likely to get sick when exposed but who wants to take the risk?

FDA is recommending the following practices suggested by researchers at Cornell University for egg users: for eggs: scrambled, one minute at 250 degrees fahrenheit; poached, five minutes in boiling water; sunnyside, seven minutes at 250 degrees or cook covered four minutes at 250 degrees: fried; over easy three minutes at 250 degrees on one side, then one minute on the other; and boiled, seven minutes in boiling water.

higher risk of becoming infected with HBV, including those who work in the health care field, those with liver disease, and people who are exposed to blood at work or who work in a dialysis (kidney transfusion) unit

In addition, the virus is more prevalent in certain parts of the world, including Haiti and Africa, and among certain ethnic groups--people of Asian, Pacific Island, or Alaskan Eskimo descent.

To help protect against HBV infection, a vaccine is available that triggers a person's immune system to make antibodies to fight the virus.

protection against infection. If the test is negative, the doctor may recommend that the mother receive the HBV vaccine if she is in a high risk group. The HBV vaccine also is given at birth and several months later to help protect the baby from becoming an HBV carrier.

Talk to your doctor about whether you might be at risk for HBV, especially if you are planning to become pregnant. It is important to know if you are at risk or are an HBV carrier to help protect you and your baby from the serious problems associated with HBV infection.

ouse on a rainy day.

However, buyer need not be scared away from a dream house that shows signs of basement flooding or moisture. A water problem can be permanently repaired by a reliable, professional service. Often the problem can be solved by installing an effective waterproofing system and the cost can be deducted from the sale price of the home.

Tips on fixing faulty plumbing

By POPULAR MECHANICS For AP Newsfeatures

Other than a dripping faucet, the most common plumbing problems are clogged drains, running toilets and leaking or frozen pipes. If you have the right equipment - and it is inexpensive to get - you can fix all of enthusiastic. these problems yourself.

Somehow, water that does not run presents more of a problem than water that runs all the time. Clogged drains can be cleared and slow-flowing ones made more > is affected, you can assume that the blockage is farther down in the drainage system. When all the fixtures in the house are affected, the main house drain or sewer is suspect.

If only one fixture is affected by the blockage, chances are it has a plugged trap. This is the curved pipe under it. More rarely, the waste line is blocked between the trap and the main drain. If more than one fixture

A rubber force cup or plunger is the first tool to reach for when a clog occurs. For this plumber's friend to be most effective, make certain the pipe to be cleared is full of water, not air. Since water cannot be compressed, it transfers the full force of your efforts directly to the blockage.

If a force cup doesn't clear the drain, you can use a drain pressurizer. This is an expandable section that screws onto a garden hose. Inserted into the drain as far as possible, water pressure expands the rubber bulb, scaling it against the pipe wall. Pulsating blasts of water under pressure break up the clog and wash it down the pipe.

The drain auger or snake frees all but the hardest-to-reach blockages.

Ranging in size and potency from light-duty hand-operated snakes to power-driven professional augers, some are do-it-yourself items and others are wielded by plumbing or drain-clearing services. A 1/4-inch-diameter auger cable is recommended for clearing most household drains. A larger size may resist going around the curves in the pipes from your fixtures to the main drain stack.

Many household drain augers offer a selection of working tips and cutters. The most common types look like stiff wire spirals of various shapes. Root cutters look more like open-ended hole saws. A toilet auger has a hook on the end to catch an object like a hairbrush or a child's toy so you can pull it back out.

If you cannot reach the blockage through the drain pipe on a fixture you may have to enter the drain stack through a clean-out opening or even come down through the vent in the roof. If the roof is steeply pitched, leave this job for a professional.

Lt. Gen Kelly to appear as distinguished lecturer

If, as tradition has it, the Persian Gulf War becomes a mini-series, one of the prime-time actors will portray real-life hero Lt. Gen. Thomas W. Kelly. But until the casting call, Kelly, director of operations for the Joint Chiefs of Staff prior to his March 8 retirement, is speaking for himself and will appear as the next guest of the Bea and Boone Pickens Distinguished Lecture Series.

The lecture, which focuses on all aspects of Desert Shield/Desert Storm and is billed by Kelly as "direct, hardhitting and laced with anecdotes," begins at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday, April 9, in the Activities Center Ballroom at the WTSU campus.

The 58-year-old Kelly became a household name during his brilliant, often witty, Washington briefings during the Panama and Persian Gulf wars.

And in spite of the stringent information policy regarding the Persian Gulf, Kelly was a popular figure and received high praise from members of the press. A "Washington Whispers" article in U.S. News and World Report, reads, "In an informal U.S. News survey of former White House, State Department and Pentagon spokesmen, Lt. Gen. Kelly was the hands-down favorite among the regular military briefers in the war. They cited his grace under media pressure, his believability, his straightforward style and his dry, almost arid, humor."

Asked on one recent session whether sending B-52 bombers to

His military education includes the Armor School, the Infantry School, the United States Command and General Staff College and the United States Army War College. He also holds a bachelor of science degree in journalism from Temple University.

Tickets to Kelly's April 9 lecture at WTSU are limited to two per person while supply lasts and are free of charge; however, donations to the Presidential Honor Student Scholarship fund will be accepted. The complementary tickets will be available to the general public beginning March 26 at the Canyon Chamber of Commerce (308 17th St., Canyon) or the Credit Bureau of Amarillo and the Panhandle (912 S. Taylor, Amarillo). University students and employees with valid WTSU identification cards may pick up tickets at the office of communication services.

The Bea and Boone Pickens Distinguished Lecture Series is a complimentary service of West Texas State University and the Credit Bureau of Amarillo and the Panhandle.

- Rabbits need a good source of roughage along with their normal diet of rabbit pellets. Choose pellet brands with at least a 20 percent fiber content. To supplement this, serve alfalfa or timothy hay daily to help him maintain a healthy digestive system. As daily treats, offer vegetables and fruits, such as carrots, leafy greens or apples. Make fresh water available at all times.

- Hairballs can develop in the stomach if your rabbit does not eat enough roughage or sheds heavily. The enzymes bromalin and papain, found in fresh pineapple or papaya, help dissolve swallowed hair. Every two to three months, give two teaspoons of fresh pineapple juice (not canned or heat processed) daily

President's Corner

Another spring season is upon us-another time for God's creation to spring forth in its glory and beauty. Many of us have witnessed many of these glorious seasons in our lives. Many also remember the great depression and the dust-bowl days of the 30s. If your remember these, you are eligible and are invited to join us at the Senior Citizen Center to enjoy the games, fellowship, meals and other activities.

Your Center is there for you. Why not give it a try? Lester Wagner, President Hereford Senior Citizens Association

Year 1991 is gone! Since March came in like a Lion, I'm really looking forward to April with calm wind and spring rain, aren't you? The Joint Conference on Aging is getting closer. We're trying to get everything together. I really hope you will register to attend some of the work sessions and also go to the banquet where Doug Manning is the speaker and to the luncheon with Kenneth Wyatt as speaker. Our Center is one of the tours people over the state will take, and I also would like to have a large group of you here to greet them on Tuesday, April 30 at 1:30 p.m. The conference starts at the Civic Center in Amarillo on Sunday, April 28, at 1 p.m. The state Senior Spelling Bee will be 1:30 to 4 p.m. We are having our regional spelling bee in Amarillo March 23 at Amarillo Senior Citizens Center. Our entrants from HSCA are Fern Carpenter, Marie Stringer and Donnie Owen. We wish them good luck! We want them in the state COL We will be leaving Hereford Saturday, May 11, for Branson, Mo., and returning on May 16. We will be staying the first night in Tulsa, then on to Springfield, Mo., to see the Fantastic Caverns and to Branson for three nights. I will soon have all the shows scheduled and will give them to you. Approximate cost for this trip is $399 per person for a double occupancy. I need a $50 denosis forms $399 per person for a double occupancy. I need a $50 deposit from each person soon and full payment by April 28. Supplemental Security Income (SSI) overpayments result from beneficiaries not promptly reporting changes that affect the amount of, or entitlement to, their checks.

The single biggest cause of Social Security overpayments is beneficiaries not reporting, or under reporting, yearly earnings. Some benefits must be withheld if 1991 earnings will exceed $9,720 for those who are 65-69 years old, or $7,080 for those under age 65. This report must be made directly to Social Security by any beneficiary under age 70 whose carnings will go over these limits.

There are special rules that apply to disability beneficiaries (including disabled widows and disabled adult children) who work. For these people any work must be reported, regardless of the amount of earnings. We need to know about any medical improvement as well.

SSI recipients must report any change in their income and resources, as well as any change in living

Most Social Security and change can also cause the SSI check to increase or decrease. Other events that must be reported by all beneficiaries are: * death or marriage of the beneficiary

* change of address

* a beneficiary who is no longer in custody of his or her representative payce.

We send a booklet about events that must be reported along with every benefit award letter. It is the beneficiary's responsibility to make these reports promptly in order to avoid overpayments and possible penalties.

You can make a report by calling our toll-free telephone number 1-800-2345-SSA (1-800-234-5772). The best time to call is between 7 a.m. and 9 a.m. although you can speak to a representative 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. weekdays.

Nutrition tips help bypass recovery

FIVE F'S ON HEALTHY RECOVERY AFTER CORONARY BYPASS SURGERY By Charlotte R. Clark,

M.S. R.D./L.D. The concepts to promote recovery after coronary artery bypass graft surgery are basic and need to be remembered guidelines to improve these patients nutritional status have been suggested. The typical diet order after surgery and when solids are resumed in the individual's diet, is a diet low in cholesterol with sodium restrictions. maintaining optimal nutrition during the first four to six weeks after surgery can be difficult and is a real challenge.

The primary goal is to replete the patients nutritional status and then concentrate on limiting cholesterol later when the appetite and laboratory values return to normal. Because of weakness optimal nutrition during this recovery period is a prerequisite for repletion and maintenance of the body.

The five f's formulate a checklist which can be essential to keep in mind when enhancing the recovery of critical care and elderly patients.

Fiber: rich foods such as fruit, legumes, vegetables, and whole grain products has proven beneficial to prevent constipation because of factors such as immobility, poor intake, and medication. Adequate fluid is essential to prevent constipation. Appetites are usually best at breakfast so high fiber choices are encouraged.

Fluids: When appetites are poor and/or limited fluid intake is observed, dehydration may occur. Individuals are more prone to have inadequate fluid and loss of appetite following the surgery and output are not monitored. Six to eight glasses of fluid intake per day is recommended providing there is not a need for fluid restrictions. Emphasis on nutritious fluids; milk, juice or supplement should be encouraged instead of coffee or carbonated beverages.

> Frequent Feedings: Appetite is abnormally low 4 to 6 weeks after CABG surgery. Large meals are overwhelming to most patients. Serving 5 to 6 feedings per day of the patient's choice may prove valuable to obtain optimal nutrition.

Fruit, sherbet, pudding, custard, soup, and half sandwiches are initially well accepted. Food preferences should be always taken into consideration, and prior to actual meal service is eneficial.

more prone to have inadequate fluid intake after discharge when the input a patient's hemoglobin level is often below 10gl Leter on discharge. In a recent study it was pointed out that iron deficiency last up to 2 months. A hemoglobin value less than 12 gl Leter usually results in weakness and fatigue because of lack of oxygen to the muscle. Increased awareness of high iron foods will assist in returning the value to normal and in some cases an iron supplement is prescribed.

Iron is found in animal and plant foods. Animal Sources: liver, lean meat, clams and oysters. These animal sources of iron are more easily utilized by the body. Plant Sources: fortified cereals, enriched bread, dried beans and peas, raisins and green leafy vegetables. Vitamin C in foods helps the body use iron; therefore, plant sources of iron should be eaten with a food rich in Vitamin C to enhance absorption.

Fortify: The body requires approximately 50 nutrients per day; that amount is difficult to obtain with inadequate intake. Sometimes a multivitamin supplement will enhance appetite.

Patients usually will accept liquids over solids when appetite is poor. Fortifying the diet with a nutritional liquid supplement between meals is often well accepted as the nutritional status returns to normal.

The goal of nutrition support is to restore and maintain the patient's nutritional status. This should be an objective to not only the professional personnel but to the family or critical ill or elderly persons.

Young at Heart

Choir is busy

The Senior Citizens "Young At Heart Choir" has been busy with practice and a number of activities. The choir presented the musical "Some Golden Daybreak" at Westway Baptist Church Sunday night March 3. There were 33 members participating and we were glad to have member Sadie Shaw in the audience. We enjoyed a time of much food and fellowship. The choir appreciates the hospitality we always receive at Westway Baptist.

The choir was honored to participate in the memorial service for Mrs. Hazel Davis, Mary Garrison's mother, on March 5 at King's Manor.

We are glad to have some members back with us after bouts with illness. Frances Hill, Marguerite McGee, Faye Brownlow, & Steve Sobczak, our director, are back in the routine again.

The choir has several engagements planned for the coming weeks. We welcome" any invitation we receive.

Magazine focuses on wildlife preservation

future of our nation's wildlife are writing for a free magazine from the Department of the Interior's Bureau of Land Management (BLM). The publication offers nature lovers a colorful look at the magnificent animals and birds of our public lands. The magazine, called Defenders, published by Defenders of Wildlife, includes a special color section highlighting BLM's "Watchable Wildlife" program. The 16-page magazine section, with 37 color photos, identifies wildlife on public lands and highlights examples of various habitats such as the tundra, Americans who care about the shrublands and grasslands, streamside areas, deserts, coasts and forests.

"In these spectacularly diverse habitats, BLM is identifying and enhancing areas where the opportunity to view wild animals is greatest," BLM director Cy Jamison said. "The guide also includes a list of rules for wildlife watching to help viewers avoid disturbing wild animals," he added.

BLM manages more than 2,700 million acres of public lands, located primarily in the western states plus Alaska. These lands provide habitat for more than 3,000 species of wildlife.

Videos help nutrition lessons

Texas, older adults are looking at untreated. nutrition in a brand new way.

They discuss what will happen in the next episode of "Reverend Jones." The poor minister collapsed right after his sermon-sounds like the typical soap opera, but it's not. The Texas Agricultural Extension Service has found an educational technique that combines the use of peer teachers, soap opera-like videotapes and flip charts to reach older minorities.

The Minority Peer Educator Project targets older blacks who are prone to develop diabetes and hypertension and older Hispanics who suffer from depression and hypertension related to obesity. The project is funded by the Administration on Aging of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

One of extension's goals in this project was to evaluate methods to reach older minorities with meaningful and usable information," said Dr. Judith Warren, gerontologist with the state extension service and director of the program. "Using health and nutrition principles in video dilemmas that people face in their everyday lives proved quite successful," she said. "Also, a key factor in this approach were those older citizens who volunteered to teach their peers at nutrition sites."

The program provides information on several major diseases that disable hypertension can help prevent thought the "Reverend Jones" video strokes. Depression, often not was different and more interesting recognized in older populations, can than other educational video tapes she

Now available in most counties in the state, the program was piloted in 16 Texas counties in 1989.

For extension, this was a first attempt to present health and nutrition information using a soap-opera type series, said Warren, who wrote the scripts. She was assisted by home economics specialists and agents with Texas A&M University and Prairie View A&M University, nutrition and minority specialists with the Texas Department on Aging and members of the Minority Elderly Task Force.

The programs featured characters that participants could easily identify with, but unlike the regular TV soaps, the tapes contained health and nutrition information, Warren said.

"A lot of the participants just got a kick out of watching the tapes and were looking forward to the next episode," said Wilma Hall, extension service county agent in Groesbeck, who introduced the program in Robinson and Limestone counties.

"We were able to provide some basic information about correlation between diet, exercise and lifestyle and explain how these factors together affect whether one is hypertensive or not," Hall said.

Older adults discovered the importance of reducing sodium and salt in the diet, she said. They also learned that hypertension has no visible symptoms, which is the main reason to be tested for this disease.

One participant, Gussie Baker, said she learned that high blood pressure can be decreased by proper exercise, medication and diet.

"I always loved seasoning with dry salt bacon, but now I use margarine instead, and I use little salt, if any," Baker said.

For Hispanic participants the pproach was ideal, said Celia McClelland, Dallas County extension agent who coordinated the program at the Brady Center in Dallas.

"It was a team effort," she said. "The people really related to the peer educators, Francis Capetillo and Gladys Martinez, and the video, "Eduardo," which covered depression after widowhood."

Although diabetes and hypertension are prevalent among Hispanics and blacks, the information is beneficial to all older adults. "Hypertension is a silent killer," Wilma Hall said. "It

"Participants did not learn how diabetes works in a medical sense, nor could they explain hypertension," Warren said. "However, the symptoms were learned. People also realized that they could improve their health and quality of life by managing these diseases."

County agents also benefitted from the Minority Peer Educator Project.

Eye Openers

EYE OPENERS By Dr. Hugh B. Currie Currie Eye Institute DID YOU KNOW...?

Many people are aware that a sudden shower of floaters suggests the possibility of a retinal detachment, but not many people know exactly what a retinal detachment actually is.

The retina is the thin layer that lines the back of the eye. It is light sensitive and acts similar to film in a camera in recording an image and sending it up the optic nerve to the brain. The retina, being a very thin layer, is attached somewhat loosely to the vascular layer that is behind it called the choroid. Occasionally the retina may develop a small hole in its surface. Fluid can work its way through the retinal hole and end up separating the retina from the choroid. This is called a retinal detachment. The retina will not work adequately when it is separated from its vascular layer and detached. An operation is required to put this retina back in place and seal the hole. Retinal detachments occur after injuries such as a hard blow to the head. They are more frequent after cataract surgery. Retinal detachments tend to run in families because of degenerative changes occurring in the retina.

If you have a sudden onset of tiny black dots, it may mean a tear has occurred in your retina with some associated bleeding. What you are seeing are the blood cells floating in the fluid inside the eye. A sudden shower of black dots associated with flashing lights may indicate the beginning of a retinal detachment and should suggest a visit to your ophthalmologist.

Exercise gives 'youthful kick' BOSTON (AP) - Joe Oubre Dr. Maria Fiatrone on the frail left leg, for both groups. Of the 32 participants who smoked three packs of cigarettes a day for 50 years, was short of breath and had high blood pressure. Now the 77-year-old does aerobics three times a week and says he feels like he's 35.

Along with an increasing number of older people, Oubre, of Baton Rouge, La., has taken up regular exercise and is helping to lend credence to researchers' theories that working out regularly can help slow the aging process and even reverse years of neglect.

A research team from Tufts University, for example, coached nursing home residents in weight lifting and found that even people in their 90s can become stronger and increase muscle size if they are put through an aggressive weight training routine.

The study was done to determine if loss of muscle mass, common among the elderly, was reversible. The research team found that it is. The Tufts study was conducted by a similar, 1988 study of the young old completed the study, 15 have (people in their 60s) by Dr. William remained active and five have (people in their 60s) by Dr. William Evans, also of Tufts.

almost 200 percent and muscle mass causes, and the rest have either fallen by 15 percent.

Roger Fielding, a research assistant at Tufts, said the findings come as interest in exercise and specifically in weight training among the elderly has increased.

In the 1990 study of the frail elderly, Fiatrone studied residents from 86 to 96 years old at the Hebrew Rehabilitation Center for Aged in the West Roxbury neighborhood.

Participants performed leg exercises on a weight-lifting machine three times a week. The average strength gain at eight weeks was 174 percent for men and women. The weights lifted increased from about 16 pounds to 43 pounds in the right leg and from 15 pounds to 41 in the dropped out to due to illness, said Evans said the researchers found Jodie Portman, spokeswoman for the that strength could be increased by HRCA. Five died from unrelated ill or are excercising independently of the official program.

Hilda Hurwitz, 88, participated in the study and kept up her regimen of exercising three or four times a week as well as walking at least one mile every morning.

'I've performed very well for my age," she said.

Researchers' findings have backed up the theory that exercise is good not only for the heart and soul, but for the bones as well.

There is pretty decent evidence that exercise can slow the aging process. There's some data to suggest that it helps with skeletal problems,' said John Cavanaugh, professor of psychology at Bowling Green State University in Ohio.

The image of the sedentary elder also is being altered by those such as Linda Switzer, whose exercise class in Baton Rouge, La., has grown to more than 50 members in just over two years.

One member of the class, Switzer said, was plagued by arthritis and had to soak in a hot tub every morning just to be able to move. "She was told when she first started she walked like a penguin and now she glides like a swan.

Research conducted at the Borun Center for Gerontological Research at the University of Southern California School of Medicine showed that even at 92 people show improved strength and better balance as a result of exercise.

'The payoff is that the people who show the most change happen to be the people starting out at the lowest level of inactivity," said John Schnelle, associate director of the center.

Seniors enjoy participation

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) - Jane Clarkson doesn't care for the thought of creeping inactivity overtaking her in her golden years.

No worry. At the rate she's going, it could never catch her.

When she's not making one of her copper sculptures, the 59-year-old St. Louis woman can be found sprinting at track meets - and setting records. "I won some blue ribbons running at a field day at my high school, Clarkson said.

"In college there were no competitive sports for girls. I play tennis and golf but I always wondered if I would have been good if I had followed up in track," she said.

So, at 55 Clarkson became a sprinter. Now she's trying to crack the 15-second mark in the 100-meter dash.

Clarkson is one of a growing number of Americans over 50 who are discovering - or rediscovering competitive athletics. There's no greater evidence of that explosion than the U.S. National Senior Olympics, which will be held in Syracuse this summer.

When the first national senior games were held in St. Louis in 1987, ,800 athletes competed in 11 events. More than 4,000 athletes will go for the gold in 18 sports in Syracuse next June 28-July 3.

But even they will represent only the cream of the country's senior competitors, said Barbara McQuitty, national-games director. "Remember, these are the ones that persevered through local and state competitions.

"It used to be if an athlete signed up to compete, they nearly always got a medal just because there were so beat full fields at every stage," she said

The National Senior Olympics are a logical conclusion to the rapid growth of state multisport games, whose beginnings date to 1969 and Los Angeles, said McQuitty.

For a long time, seniors had the opportunity to compete in annual state games - but alongside younger athletes or in neglected masters events, she said.

But in 1969, Warren Blaney, an eccentric but caring retiree, staged the first statewide games for the gray set in California. Blaney's games were a much haphazard affair - venues were hours apart, and loosely judged events took place over days - but the ball was rolling, said McQuitty.

Today, only Hawaii and Alaska do not have statewide games sanctioned by the U.S. National Senior Sports Organization, which directs the senior games, she said. In some states, there is more than one sanctioned game, although the USNSSO is working to have one qualifying site in each state.

Perceptions used to be if an older adult was playing sports they were an oddball of sorts," McQuitty said. "But now fitness is important. The growth in competitive sports is just the next stage." Gordy Shields was not an athlete in school. He played recreational tennis until 22 years ago, when bursitis made him look for another outlet for his energy.

Shields, 72, of El Cajon, Calif., up to compete, they nearly always got a medal just because there were so few competitors. Now you have to and holds the national record in the 20-kilometer race for men ages 70-74 with a time of 31 minutes, 37.9 seconds.

"The older you get, the more fun the competition is. I started cycling for fun and to stay in shape. I was getting good so I started racing to find yuppie crowd and spread.

out just how good," said Shields, who also spends hours assessing racing techniques, checking out equipment and talking with other cyclists.

"It's become a way to enjoy life more for me," he said.

Even though a majority of Americans still lead inactive lives, the 1980s aerobic craze started with the Crystal will be among the Oscars and the stars who win them during The 63 marks the second consecutive year the popular comedian has hosted the MC. The 24 winners will come from among 223 films.

with Oscar Awards 'Dances' may dance away

By Amy Schmidt Hollywood's most glamorous and talented stars will come out and shine the night of Monday, March 25, when ABC broadcasts The 63rd Annual called for tighter show security, but the gala won't be darkened by war after all. Comedian Billy Crystal, who hosted the event last year, will keep things on a light note again this year.

More than 4,800 members of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences will choose 24 winners from among 223 films. Two honorary Oscars will be awarded during the ceremonies: one to actress Myrna Loy, best remembered for The Thin Man movies of the '30s in which she co-starred with William Powell; and one to the legendary Sophia Loren, her second. Loren won her first Oscar following her 1961 performance in the Italian-made film Two Women.

The remaining Oscars are up for grabs. The top nominees include: Picture: Awakenings, Dances With Wolves, Ghost, The Godfather Part III, GoodFellas

Director: Kevin Costner, Dances With Wolves; Francis Ford Coppola, The Godfather Part III; Martin Scorsese, GoodFellas; Stephen Frears, The Grifters; Barbet Schroeder, Reversal of Fortune

Actor: Kevin Costner, Dances With Wolves; Robert De Niro, Awakenings; Gerard Depardieu, Cyrano de Bergerac; Richard Harris, The Field; Jeremy Irons, Reversal of Fortune

Actress: Kathy Bates, Misery; Anjelica Huston, The Grifters; Julia Roberts, Pretty Woman; Meryl Streep. Postcards From the Edge; Joanne Woodward, Mr. and Mrs. Bridge

Supporting Actor: Bruce Davison, Longtime Companion; Andy Garcia, The Godfather Part III; Graham Greene, Dances With Wolves; Al Academy Awards. Pre-peace plans had Pacino, Dick Tracy; Joe Pesci, GoodFellas

Supporting Actress: Annette Bening, The Grifters; Lorraine Bracco, Good-Fellas; Whoopi Goldberg, Ghost; Diane Ladd, Wild at Heart; Mary McDonnell, Dances With Wolves

With the most nominations is, of course, Kevin Costner's Dances With Wolves. Dances With Wolves scored 12 nominations, the same number as 1981's Reds and one short of the 13 nominations received by 1966's Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?

Costner's film is the first western to be nominated since 1969, and would be only the second ever to win.

Costner could make Oscar history if he were to win both best actor and best director trophies for Dances. No actor/director has ever captured both.

Actor Graham Greene, who portrayed Kicking Bird in Costner's film, would be the first Native American to win an Oscar, should he win the best supporting title. He is also the first Native American ever nominated.

Yet another first would happen Oscar night if The Godfather Part III were to score in the best picture category. It is the first "three-quel" ever nominated. Likewise, The Godfather Part II(1974) was the first sequel ever nominated. It went on to win best picture. A win by Part III would mean a clean, bestpicture sweep by the mafioso movie series. By Mary Ann Townsend Move over McKenzie-Brackman and Ben Matlock, courtroom warrior Eddie Dodd has come to Tuesday nights on ABC to fight for liberal ideals.

Based on real-life lawyer Tony Serra (and the feature film True Believer), Eddie Dodd is not a high-dollar attorney but one with a knack for breaking precedents, nonetheless.

Treat Williams stars in the role of the radical defense lawyer, a product of the '60s, who rallies for seemingly lost causes. Williams spent time with Serra in preparation for the role.

"He's a living anachronism," the actor said. "He maintains, which is interesting, the lifestyle of the '60s, which very few people still do. Not only does he have the same passion, but he really lives the lifestyle."

Ironically, it was a role as a hippie that catapulted Williams into stardom. Spotted by director Milos Forman, Williams recreated the role of hippie Berger in the 1979 screen version of Hair. He finds a similarity in Berger and Dodd's personalities.

"That's one of the things I loved about that character," Williams said of Berger. "There was a spontaneity about him that was a wonderful thing to be able to play."

Of Serra, Williams noted, "He has maintained a kind of philosophy that he is a semantic warrior whose job it is to defend the left-hand side of the Constitution against its breakdown, which he feels is occurring."

Constitution against its breakdown, which he feels is occurring." Rounding out the cast of Eddie Dodd are Corey Parker as Roger Baron, Dodd's preppie assistant; Annabelle Gurwitch as Billie, Dodd's loyal secretary; and Sydney Walsh as Kitty Greer, Dodd's former lover and a private detective who helps him with his legwork.

Undeniably, L.A. Law's MacKenzie-Brackman law firm and Andy Griffith's Matlock, as well as ABC's own public defenders on Equal Justice, provide competition for Eddie Dodd. Williams says he believes there will be enough viewers to go around because lawyer shows have such an abundance of material at their disposal. "It's a chance to reach out to all different kinds of areas of human existence."

Spurs, Pistons meet up again

By Steve Paschal

The defending NBA Champion Detroit Pistons will be making their fifth appearance of the season on NBC Sunday, when they challenge the San Antonio Spurs.

The Spurs, led by high-scoring center David Robinson, were on top of the Midwest Division until after the all-star break, but are locked in a battle for the top spot with the Utah Jazz and Houston Rockets after hitting a midseason slump. Just where the Spurs end up in the playoff picture depends in large part on the play of their 7foot-1-inch, 240-pound center. Robinson, in his second year out of Navy, has been among the league's scoring leaders all season.

Detroit received a potentially crippling blow in the quest to capture the "three-peat" that eluded the Los Angeles Lakers two seasons ago. Team leader Isiah Thomas injured his hand just before the All-Star Game. Now, even with a roster filled with possibly the most massive array of talent in the NBA, the Pistons will have their hands full just trying to keep their Eastern Division crown.

Coverage begins with Pat Riley and Bob Costas previewing the day's games as well as taking a look back at the week's stories on NBA Showtime. Then Mary Albert, Mike Fratello and Steve Jones will be on hand for the second and final meeting of the season between the Pistons and the Spurs.

'Dark Shadows' still a cult hit

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Fans of the original "Dark Shadows" - you know who you are.

You were the kids who had the plastic, glow-in-the-dark vampire fangs and mail-order Barnabas Collins rings. You skipped the Science Club meeting to run home and tune in. So you weren't class president. Heck, Barnabas was a vampire, Quentin was a werewolf and Angelique was a witch.

God knows they didn't fit in, either. But they were still cool.

And they were on every afternoon from 1966 to 1971. Now "Dark Shadows" is back, this time in prime time, this time with a whole new cast and this time with a big budget.

Your adulation, however, remains the same. What is it with you guys? Since the new "Dark Shadows"

Since the new "Dark Shadows" debuted Jan. 13 on NBC, the network has received 2,500 calls and fan letters. MGM-Pathe studios, which makes the horror series, has received 2,000 letters (500 of them to actor Ben Cross, the new Barnabas). All of this is pretty amusing,

All of this is pretty amusing, considering the original "Dark Shadows" had some of the lowest production values known to serial television.

Lines were whispered off camera, doors stuck, sets collapsed, Barnabas' fangs fell out and 18th-Century costumes caught fire. When Barnabas turned into a bat, it was rubber rodent hung from a string.

hung from a string. "Dark Shadows" began as a Gothic romance soap opera that nobody watched. Creator Dan Curtis took the advice of his 11-year-old daughter and tried something "really scary" on the doomed series. He introduced a ghost. The ratings

He introduced a ghost. The ratings soared. Next came a vampire. As its supernatural cast took on werewolves, witches and time travelers, the series began to draw 20 million daily viewers.

Barnabas was played by a Canadian, Shakespearean actor named Jonathan Frid, who gave his vampire a kind of vulnerable, angst-ridden demeanor. The new Barnabas, as played by Ben Cross (from "Chariots of Fire), arches his cyebrows a lot and smolders with passion for blood and sex (preferably in that order).

In the original supporting cast were a group of freshmen actors who graduated to nighttime series and scandalous headlines.

Kate Jackson ("Charlie's Angels" and "Scarecrow and Mrs. King") played a ghost who didn't speak. David Selby ("Falcon Crest") played the werewolf, Quentin. John Karlen ("Cagney & Lacey") was Willie Loomis. Alexandra Moltke Isles, who played governess Victoria Winters, became the real-life, much-publicized mistress of Claus von Bulow.

Frid now lives in New York and has a one-man stage show. He has no desire to play Barnabas again. "I always thought I looked like this damn silly ass," he recently told People magazine. "I couldn't believe people were actually scared."

Curtis has the most impressive credentials of the original "Dark Shadows" alumna. He went on to create the massive miniseries "The Winds of War" and "War and Remembrance."

He has returned with the new "Dark Shadows." This time, however, he has $1 million to spend on each hourlong episode, instead of the $95,000 a week he had back in the 1960s to produce five half-hour episodes.

The new series is long on sex and long in the tooth. Massive sets, period costumes and horse-drawn carriages give it a slick, expensive look.

But the camp is still there, whether intentional or not. Even a big budget can't buy authentic-sounding French accents. And people are still time traveling, although the notion of parallel time has yet to appear in the new "Dark Shadows."

Big ratings also have yet to materialize. Perhaps the "Dark Shadows" fan club should have a seance to resurrect old viewer numbers. Or make a voodoo doll in the likeness of NBC entertainment president Warren Littlefield. Maybe a little pin prick would persuade Littlefield to move the series from the graveyard of Friday nights.

betsy King will defend her title during the Nabisco Dinah Shore Invitational, Saturday on ABC.

Fans want joy for Bob, Kim

By Candace Havens Dear Candace: My husband and I are retirees. We enjoy the soaps, as they are a good pastime for my husband, who has poor health and is housebound. I remember As the World Turns many years back. It was very much a family show, and somehow in these days of "loose loves" we still cling to a family we grew up with - the Hughes family. Bob and Kim have been through a lot of bad times, yet to us as viewers we don't like the present dialogue they have. We think they should keep a respected family that we can associate with.

We want the happiness and lifestyle the Hugheses once had to be returned. We know these are troubled times, but for two old fogies, return to us Bob and Kim's happiness together. -W.A. Johnson, Jonesboro, Ark.

Dear W.A.: Thank you for writing in. I have received several letters concerning this same situation. Most everyone who has written agrees with you; they want Kim and Bob to be happy again.

Dear Candace: I like watching The Young and the Restless, but I cannot stand the lady who plays Mary Williams (Paul's mother). She's not on the show very often, but what little time she is, is too much. She has her nose stuck in everyone's business. -Elizabeth Bowen, Goodland, Kan.

Dear Elizabeth: If you don't like the character of Mary, then you have to admire the great job Carolyn Conwell does playing her. Remember, the actress only performs the lines the writers write. You are not supposed to like the busybody Mary, so Conwell is doing her job. Dear Candace: A lot of my friends and myself could really be a great, excited audience if once and for all the writers of One Life to Live would really let Gabrielle get what she deserves.

Just having Max leave her is nothing. She needs everything - every lie and all - to catch up with her all at once. She needs to be left homeless, destitute, penniless and childless. She needs to pay the penalty. Then after a few months they could rescue her for a short period. -H. Weitzel, California

I want to hear from you! If you have a favorite soap scenario you would like to sound off about, or a question about the soaps, write to Candace Havens, Soap Talk, P.O. Box 17748, Fort Worth, TX 76100 4748 76102-0748. O TV Listing Inc

'Wake, Rattle & Roll' host more than cool

By Amy Schmidt

If your kids are hooked on Wake, Rattle & Roll, perhaps you'd like to know more about the show's hip host Sam, played by R.J. Williams.

Williams plays an inventive 14year-old who's really guite cool. Sam's sidekick is a part-computer, part-VCR and television robot named Decks. He was created specially for Sam by his eccentric grandfather, Dr. Lester T. Quirk (actor Avery Schreiber.)

R.J. Williams was a top child model at age 4, and at age 5 he joined the cast of The Young and the Restless. Currently, he has a recurring role as Rowdy on the daytime drama General Hospital and also provides one of the voices for Disney's animated series Tale Spin.

Some of R.J.'s past credits include roles in the feature film Man of Passion with Anthony Quinn and the television miniseries Windmills of the Gods with Robert Wagner and Jaclyn Smith. He has also appeared on the TV series 21 Jump Street; Empty Nest; Baywatch; Star Trek: The Next Generation; Magnum, P.I. (as young Thomas Magnum); Webster; St. Elsewhere; Matt Houston; The Love Boat; T.J. Hooker and Punky Brewster.

The young actor says his favorite hobby is videotaping with his camcorder. His aspiration when he grows up: to be the next Steven Spielberg!

What do you know about the Oscars?

By Steven Alan McGaw

It's Oscar week and I'm excited! Many thanks to actor and Oscar-phile Steven Morris for his help with this Academy Awards-related quiz.

Questions: 1. One year the Oscar telecast ended 20 minutes earlier than the network had alloted. a.) What was the year? b.) Who was the host of that segment of the show? c.) How did they fill the time?

2. Name the first year in which the winners were revealed by the opening of sealed envelopes.

3. Can you identify the first year in which all nominees for the best actress and actor trophies were born in the U.S.?

4. Cite the first and only person ever to win an Academy Award entirely by write-in vote.

5. Only one round of Oscar presentations have occurred in which no film took more than one award. When? 6. When were the supporting actor and actress awards added?

By Polly Vonetes Q: Could you please tell me who played Wolf, the half-breed Apache, in Gunsmoke: The Last Apache? How old is he? This is my first time writing like to know more about him. Also, one like you, so please resp Shen on Samson, Kingman, Ariz.

A: Twenty-eight-year-old Joe Lara played Wolf in Gunsmoke: The Last Apache. Born and raised in San Diego, Calif., at age 19 he turned down a volleyball scholarship offer so he could model in Paris. Doing photos was not enough for him, so upon his return to the States he started taking acting classes at Orange Coast community college. In 1988 he was selected for the Jordache jeans TV commercial. This led to his film debut in the 1989 CBS film Tarzan in Manhattan. He has a studio apartment in north Hollywood, where he resides with his 5-1/2foot-long Burmese python.

Q: I am so impressed with the performance of Rodney A. Grant in both Dances With Wolves and the ABC movie Son of Morning Star, that I would where could I write him? -Ruth Ross, Kingman, Ariz.

A: Rodney Grant, an American Indian, was born in Winnebago, Neb. Raised by his grandmother, he grew up on the Omaha Tribal Reservation. She encouraged him to make something of his life, so at age 17 he joined the U.S. Marines. Later, motivated by an apparent scarcity of American Indian actors, Grant auditioned for and won a small part in the Nebraska Educational Television documentary We Are One. This was followed by a role in another PBS production, The Trial of Standing Bear. His theatrical films include Pow Wow Highway, Broken Documents and War Party. He can be seen in Oliver Stone's film The Doors. An address is not available at this time.

Q: I would appreciate it very much if you could give me Chad McQueen's address and James Whitmore's, as I would really love to write them both. -Alan Carney, Powell, Tenn.

A: Your letter was very interesting, and I especially enjoyed receiving the pictures. However, the addresses you requested have not been released. Many write in for addresses of the stars. Unfortunately, the addresses I have on hand are not always correct. Celebrities frequently change their addresses and/or their agents. It would be a full-time job to keep up with them. I suggest you write to the Screen Actors Guild, 7065 Hollywood Blvd., Hollywood, CA 90028. They may be able to supply you with the addresses you need.

Q: I have a question concerning National Lampoon's Vacation and National Lampoon's European Vacation. Are Rusty and Audrey played by the same young people? -Wilburn Holland, Brownwood, Texas

A: No, the actors are not the same in the two films. Audrey was played by Dana Hill and Rusty by Jason Lively in National Lampoon's European Vacation. Dana Barron played Audrey and Anthony Michael Hall played Rusty in National Lampoon's Vacation.

Q: I would like to have an address for Vivien Leigh. She is one of my favorite actresses. Gone With the Wind is my favorite film. Please help me with her address so that I may contact her. -Jane Penley, Boone, N.C.

A: Vivien Leigh suffered ill health throughout most of her career. She died in May 1967 at the age of 53, when she experienced a recurrence of tuberculosis.

Jack Scalia

Mary Crosby, Linda Gray, Steve Kanaly, Jack Scalia, Ted Shackelford and Joan Van Ark returned to the Dallas set to guest star on the season's two-hour finale. Producer Leonard Katzman predicts, "It will be the greatest cliffhanger in the history of the series." Joel Grey also guest stars on the episode scheduled to air mid-May.

Vivian Vance, who played Lucille Ball's pal Ethel Mertz in the I Love Lucy series, was honored posthumously on Valentine's Day with a star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame.

Producer Aaron Spelling has announced a Dynasty reunion is scheduled to air as a miniseries in November. Many of the stars will return for the ABC show.

CBS Sports' second straight season of Major League Baseball coverage begins Saturday, April 20, when the New York Mets visit the Montreal Expos, and the Detroit Tigers play the Chicago White Sox. This broadcast will be the first of 16 on the network.

Sidney Poitier, after an absence of 35 years from television, returns to star in Separate But Equal, a GM Mark of Excellence presentation. The two-part miniseries will air in April on ABC.

Sisters Audrey and Jayne Meadows act together for the first time in more than 20 years, portraying sisters, in an episode scheduled to be broadcast later this season on Uncle Buck. "We haven't done anything like this since the old Steve Allen Show," noted Audrey, who stars as Mrs. Hogoboom on the series.

Producer Fred Silverman has an-nounced that Andy Griffith will be returning in the fall for his fifth season on Matlock. Griffith had previously announced this would be his last year in the titled role.

KUROSAWA'S anthology piece composed of eight Eastwood went to the heart of related dreams ranging from childhood fantasy to nuclear holocaust.

One exquisite dream places the protagonist (Akira Tero) inside a Vincent van Gogh painting where he meets the artist at work. Van Gogh is played by director Martin Scorsese in a rare acting cameo. The lavish sets and surreal images help recreate the imagination of a master craftsman. This film is not for everyone, but, if you are a real movie fan, this film will overwhelm you with it's imagery; it is stunningly photographed. In Japanese with English subtitles. Rated PG.

THE EXORCIST III: (1990) Starring George C. Scott, Nicol Williamson, Jason Miller and Brad Dourif.

Fans have waited 17 years for a true sequel to The Exorcist. Now, William Peter Blatty, author of the original best-selling novel, directs his personal vision of what happened next.

After a nightmarish series of bizarre religious murders shatters the world of a police lieutenant, the door is open to a gripping story, a theological puzzle, and an unforgettable study in the Four Boxes supernatural. Several of the Agatha Christie "Jane Marple" murder mysteries will be released by MGM/UA in April - for the first time on video .
