

Taylor resigns; HUSD discipline plan adopted

By JERI CURTIS
Managing Editor

Head football coach Jerry Taylor's resignation was accepted Tuesday by the Hereford Schools board of trustees as an emergency item on the regular meeting agenda. Taylor submitted his written resignation in order to assume duties at Odessa High in the head coaching position. (See story, Page 10.)

Following an executive session, the board agreed to post the position opening and start pursuing a new coach.

Model plans and advisory committees of students, parents and principals helped develop the district's Discipline Management Plan which was adopted unanimously Tuesday night. The plan includes a listing of the responsibilities of the students, parents, teachers and administrators; a specific code of conduct for students and the discipline which is appropriate for infractions.

Discipline is graded on levels of teacher directed, that with administrative intervention, and, for the incorrigible, the alternative education programs—suspensions, alternative school, expulsion.

Copies of the code of conduct are to be included in report cards issued this month. Parents are to sign a letter of notification and return it to the school. The district also plans to have a parent training workshop in March. By the end of 1986, all professional personnel shall be trained in the district's management program through a two-hour in service meeting.

Margaret Cooper, a parent who has been urging the board for months to purchase playground equipment, thanked the board for recent bids pursued on equipment for the primary schools. The board is looking at options from two companies, but tabled the issue until further research on liability could be done.

Cooper also asked the board not to forget the intermediate schools and specifically requested better outside lighting at Bluebonnet. Assistant superintendent Larry Wartes assured her that Southwestern Public Service was currently looking at the lighting problem.

Assistant superintendent Marc Williamson reported that a committee is working on recommendations for the career ladder selection for this year.

Another committee is being formed from representatives at each primary school to consider first grade testing and should have a recommendation by the April board meeting.

Board member Cal Jones reported that the Long Range Planning Committee had put roofs as a priority on capital improvement. Upon committee recommendation, the board also approved for Dr. Harrell Holder, superintendent, to seek advice of architects and engineers for a review of plans and costs for remodeling oflice areas at Hereford High and Stanton Junior High.

The board voted for a purchase of a 15-passenger van for the district. Whiteface Ford of Hereford was the low bidder at $15,552.

The board also:
—Allowed use of the La Plata gym for the Church of the Nazarene on March 20 and for the Big Brothers-Big Sisters on Feb. 19.

—Made a budget amendment to purchase media center supplies and furniture. The amendment did not call for extra spending, but only tended a bookkeeping item.

—Agreed to work with the Chamber of Commerce on an Adopt-A-School advisory committee.

—Heard a curriculum report on school nursing services.

Deficit estimate will trigger cuts of budget law

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional and administration budget officials said today the federal deficit for fiscal 1986 will exceed a staggering $220 billion and trigger the first round of government-wide spending cuts under the new Gramm-Rudman budget-balancing law.

In separate projections required under the new law, the White House Office of Management and Budget predicted a deficit of $220.1 billion while the Congressional Budget Office said that this year's red ink would amount to $220.9 billion.

Last fiscal year's deficit was $212 billion.

The two agencies, outlining spending cuts totaling $11.7 billion that would be required by March 1 under terms of the law, enumerated staff and service cutbacks that will be needed in thousands of federal agencies and programs.

In all, across-the-board cuts of 4.3 percent will be needed in domestic programs and 4.9 percent for the military, the budget agencies said.

The extent of the cuts had been disclosed earlier by White House

The projected deficit for the year, which began Oct. 1, will far surpass the 1985 deficit despite spending cuts approved last year by Congress.

Under the law, automatic spending cuts are triggered if the estimated deficit, as projected by the two budget offices, exceeds the Gramm-Rudman deficit target for 1985 of $172 billion by at least $20 billion.

In this case, the average of the two estimates — $220.5 billion — was $48.6 billion over the target, meaning that the cuts will take place automatically March 1 unless Congress moves to block them or a federal court issues a stay.

For this year alone, Congress limited the overall impact of the budget cuts to $20 billion for all of fiscal 1986. That works out to $11.7 billion for the period of March 1-Oct. 1, that portion of the fiscal year affected by the required cuts.

The law says the cuts must be evenly divided between defense and domestic programs. However, a decision by President Reagan to

Firemen elect Spain as chief

The Hereford Volunteer Fire Department re-elected David Spain as fire chief last night during a regular meeting of the department.

Also re-elected to his third term as assistant chief was John Bob Drake. Dale Broadstreet was elected to serve as secretary and Steve Bigham was elected to serve another term as department treasurer.

Company captains who will be serving this year will be Mike Watts, Company 1; Ted Higgins, Company 2, and Ed DeLozier, Company 3.

Kirk Spain was re-appointed as training captain.

Company lieutenants who will be serving this year are: Brian Baum, Company 1; Bill Watts, Company 2 and David Kreig, Company 3. Tim Homer will serve as training lieutenant.

Commander surrenders to Gemayel

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — President Amin Gemayel's main Christian rival, Elie Hobeika, surrendered today after his headquarters near Beirut harbor were barraged for eight hours by forces loyal to the president, military sources said.

But militia sources reported that fighting between Gemayel's right-wing Phalange Party, backed by rebel units of the Lebanese Forces militia, and irregulars supporting Hobeika, commander of the Lebanese Forces, was continuing.

The military sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Hobeika called Lebanese army commander Gen. Michel Aoun by radio from the bunker of his besieged "war council" headquarters at 1:30 a.m. and said he was ordering his men to lay down their arms in the fighting that pitted Christians against Christians.

Hobeika's Lebanese Forces militia, previously the largest Christian militia with about 6,000 fighters, lost half its strength today with the sudden defection of military commander Samir Geagea, according to Christian radio reports.

Sources in Hobeika's command said about 100 people were killed and 300 wounded in more than eight hours of fighting around Hobeika's headquarters in east Beirut's Karantina district and in the Christian heartland north of the capital.

The sources at Hobeika's command, who also spoke on condition of anonymity, said many of the wounded bled to death where they fell because medical teams could not get through because of the fierce fighting.

Radio stations controlled by both sides said Geagea's estimated 3,000 fighters and Gemayel's 1,000-strong Phalange militia mounted a joint attack at daybreak on Hobeika's remaining 3,000 fighters.

Geagea, 37, moved tank units from nearby hills and gunboats from his main base in the ancient port city of Byblos, 22 miles north of Beirut, to join the assault on Hobeika's command post in east Beirut's Karantina quarter.

The sources said both sides were carrying out "suicide attacks" in front line areas in Karantina overlooking Beirut harbor and in disputed sectors between the capital and the port of Jounieh, 12 miles north of the capital.

Witnesses reported apartment blocks, schools and factories in east Beirut, the Christian half of the capital, were set ablaze by artillery, tank and rocket-propelled grenade fire.

For many years, three events have been a sure sign that a new year is underway in Hereford—the Sugar Beet Banquet, the junior livestock show, and the Chamber Banquet. The events traditionally draw large participation and it should be no different this year.

The Sugar Beet Banquet is set Saturday night in the Bull Barn, and the livestock show gets underway next week. The C of C Banquet has gradually moved to February, and this year's banquet is scheduled Feb. 13.

Congressman Larry Combest and Beau Boulter will speak to the Texas Sugar Beet Growers Association during the Friday business meeting. The banquet speaker Saturday night will be Dr. Byron Augustin, humorist and author and a professor at Southwest Texas State University in San Marcos. The Brand will present its annual "Man of the Year in Agriculture" award.

Take twelve full grown months; see that they are thoroughly free from old memories of bitterness, rancor, hate and jealousy.

Cleanse them completely from every clinging spite; pick off all specks of pettiness and littleness.

In short, see that these months are freed from all the past. Have them fresh and clean as when they first came from the great storehouse of time.

'Routine'

Reagan's checkup due

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will enter Bethesda Naval Hospital on Friday for a follow-up examination of his colon, from which a cancerous tumor was removed in July, the White House announced today.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan would undergo a colonoscopy, the same type of examination that discovered the tumor last year.

After the tumor was found to be malignant, Reagan's doctors said he should have colonoscopies every six months for the rest of his life to guard against the growth of new, potentially cancerous lesions.

This will be the first of those routine follow-up examinations.

Speakes said the president "feels great" and gave no indication the examination is other than routine.

Because Reagan has had at least three polyps, one of which was malignant, he is regarded as having a greater-than-average chance of developing more.

County spelling bee scheduled March 13-14

The annual Deaf Smith County Spelling Bee will be conducted on March 13-14, it was announced today by O.G. Nieman, county chairman.

The bee will be held in the Heritage Room at Deaf Smith County Library. The junior bee is scheduled Thursday, March 13, beginning at 3 p.m., and the senior bee will follow on Friday at the same time. The Hereford Brand is sponsor of the county bee.

The spelling bee is open to all intermediate and junior high students in the county. Eligible students must not have passed beyond the eighth grade at the time of their school finals and must not reach their 16th birthday on or before the date of the end of the current school term.

The winner will advance to the Regional Bee at West Texas State University on Saturday, April 26, 1986. The top 10 contestants at the regional meet will receive prizes, and the champion will receive an all-expense paid trip for two to Washington, D.C., compliments of the Amarillo Globe-News.

Local Roundup

Two arrests made Tuesday

The Hereford Police Department made two arrests Tuesday, one for driving while intoxicated and the other for no proof of insurance and no driver's license.

Police also reported to an address where the residents had moved, but had left four dogs chained. Apparently the dogs had not been watered in two weeks. The animal control officer took the animals to the city pound.

A burglary was reported at Stanton Junior High where a snare drum valued at $430 was stolen.

Police also heard reports of a suspicious person and a prowler.

Chamber banquet set Feb. 13

The annual Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce banquet has been scheduled Feb. 13 with George McKinney of Dallas as guest speaker.

McKinney is a well known humorist and banquet speaker. He is manager of the community development department of Texas Power & Light Co. Other banquet highlights will be the presentation of the "Citizen of the Year," recognition of new officers, and presentation of a community service award.

Mauro expects race to cost $1 million

AUSTIN (AP) — Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, kicking off his re-election campaign, says he expects the race to cost him about $1 million.

Mauro, who gave Democratic Party officials a check Tuesday to cover his $3,000 filing fee, said he has raised $434,000 so far.

Mauro said he will emphasize his management of state lands and the Texas veterans programs the General Land Office oversees as he seeks re-election to the office he first won in 1982.

"I think my three-year performance will stand the test of hard scrutiny," he said.

"During the last three years, while oil and gas prices have decreased about 7 percent, revenues at the General Land Office have actually increased," he said.

"Last year, income from public lands paid the first $145 in primary and secondary education costs for each and every one of the schoolchildren of Texas.

"That means the average taxpayer in Texas paid 7.2 percent less in state school taxes and 3.2 percent less in local school property taxes," Mauro said.

Phillips offers relocation

PHIPS, Texas (AP) — Phillips Petroleum has offered to help relocate 400 people who have been ordered to move off land the company owns here, but many of the landowners say they will enlist the aid of attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes in their battle to stay where they are.

The Phillips Homeowners Association voted 106-61 Monday to send a five-person committee to Houston to meet with Haynes about options the homeowners have to preserve their homes.

Talk of meeting with Haynes late last month split the town, with one group wanting to fight to stay and another group willing to move, believing the Oklahoma-based company will treat them fairly.

The residents are being evicted partially because of environmental concerns, the company says, and partially because of a desire for the land to be ready for other uses when that becomes necessary.

According to a statement issued from Phillips' corporate headquarters in Bartlesville, Okla., details of the land development and moving assistance plan will be completed by Feb. 1.

Value of the plan is approximately $3 million, the company said.

The company wants to move the homeowners from their land, located near Phillips Petroleum's refinery and chemical operations.

Halley's Comet visible this last week

AUSTIN (AP) — This week is the last opportunity for viewing Halley's Comet until mid-March, according to a University of Texas research scientist in astronomy.

Dr. Edwin Barker said after this week the comet will be very close to the horizon and will be obscured by city lights.

At present, viewers should look for the comet from twilight until 8 p.m., CST, at 10-15 degrees below the western horizon. The comet will appear 5-10 degrees above and to the right of the planet Jupiter and below the "water jar" portion of the constellation Aquarius, Barker said.

According to Barker, 10-15 degrees is equivalent to the width of a fist at the end of a fully extended arm positioned vertically above the horizon.

Americans give media high marks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite their widespread belief that the news media are biased and influenced by the powerful, Americans give newspapers and broadcast stations high marks for credibility, according to an opinion survey made public today.

The apparently contradictory responses are contained in a survey commissioned by Times Mirror Co., which owns the Los Angeles Times, Newsday and other newspapers, and conducted by the Gallup Organization.

The survey concluded that "the vast majority of the citizenry believes that the major news organizations in America are believable" and found that the news media's credibility was higher than President Reagan's.

However, while giving high ratings to the believability of the media, most people interviewed were critical of many aspects of its performance. The strongest critics of the media tended also to be the people who used it the most and knew it the best.

On the issue of credibility, the Gallup survey conflicted sharply with the findings of a study done last year for the American Society of Newspaper Editors. The ASNE study, conducted by MORI Research Inc. of Minneapolis, concluded that "three-fourths of all adults have some problem with the credibility of the media."

Cocaine fire may have led to crash

WASHINGTON (AP) — A fire ignited by "free-basing" cocaine may have caused the New Year's Eve plane crash that killed rock 'n' roll star Rick Nelson and six others, published reports said today.

Sources said preliminary reports indicate Nelson's body contained a measurable level of unmetabolized cocaine, which means the drug had not been absorbed into his system at the time of death, The Washington Post reported. But the sources said final laboratory reports are not available yet.

Rudy Kapustin, National Transportation Safety Board chief investigator, was quoted by the Dallas Morning News as confirming that the board was investigating the possibility of a drug-related fire.

Yemeni planes bomb airport

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Diplomats and Persian Gulf sources said today that South Yemeni air force planes bombed the capital's airport and harbor, and that forces loyal to the president made small gains in the third day of fighting for control of the impoverished Soviet ally.

Officials in the North African country of Algeria said an Algerian diplomat was killed in the fighting. They did not identify him, or give the circumstances of his death.

Japanese sources had said earlier the diplomat was killed by a stray bullet.

Sources said it was not clear if the raiding pilots were rebels, apparently members of a hardline pro-Soviet faction, or supporters of President Ali Nasser Mohammed.

Mohammed, who was reported Tuesday to have been seriously wounded in the fighting, also is a Marxist but recently had been reported interested in improving ties with pro-Western Arab neighbors Saudi Arabia and Oman.

Regular communications to the impoverished country on the southern Arabian peninsula remained cut off today.

Democrats to confer in Plainview

Democrats from the 31st District will have regional conference in Plainview on Saturday, Jan. 25, at the Hale County Ag Center.

Doug Seal and Angela Lamb will open the conference at 10 a.m. with a welcome followed by remarks by Rep. Pete Laney and Sen. Bill Sarpalius.

Rep. Jim Rudd will be the morning speaker at the 10:35 a.m. session.

Six seminars are scheduled for 11 a.m. Topics include voter identification and turn-out in rural counties, personal computers in local campaigns, new rules and regulations in holding elections, how to organize a Young Democrats group, building enthusiasm in your political organization, and how to win a political debate.

A dutch treat lunch is planned for the noon meal.

After a repeat of the morning seminars, a business meeting will be held at 2 p.m.

Carl King, president of the Texas Corn Growers Association, and Fred Lundgren, of the Texas Department of Agriculture, will lead a panel discussion on the 1985 farm bill.

At 4 p.m. will be the keynote address, speaker pending.

Planning the Tournament

Less than half receive food stamps

AUSTIN (AP) — Those who manage Texas' $700 million food stamp program say they found no surprises in a Harvard University report this week that said thousands of state residents below the poverty level aren't involved in the food subsidy program.

"We knew we had variable rates of participation from county to county, and we're really not sure why they occur other than perhaps because of a personal choice not to participate," Randy Washington, director of income assistance for the Texas Department of Human Resources, said Tuesday.

The Harvard report, outlined Monday, called 150 counties across the nation "hunger counties" because of the possibility that poor residents are going hungry. The report said Texas has 29 of the counties, where a substantial number of the residents live below the poverty level but don't receive the food stamps.

Washington said about 1.3 million Texans, living in 400,000 households, receive food stamps. The total getting food stamps, he said, is 46.7 percent of the 2.9 million shown in the 1980 census as living below the poverty level in the state.

Washington said the food stamp program has offices across the state, distributes literature about program eligibility at health departments and county offices, and maintains a toll-free hot line for telephone inquiries.

Jane Jaggar, a Department of Human Resources program director for Travis, Hays and Caldwell counties, said her agency estimates that in Hays County, only 25.9 percent of the residents eligible for food stamps have applied for them. Hays and Caldwell and Milam were three Central Texas counties listed in the report as "hunger counties."

"I do know from my work with the department that there are a whole lot of people who will not ask for help for various reasons," Jaggar said. Elderly people and those without transportation often elect not to apply, she said.

In Caldwell County, with a population of 25,799, state figures show that 2,233 residents are receiving food stamps — a little over one-fourth of the county residents eligible.

"If they don't get help, they're either too proud or so ignorant they don't know who to ask," Caldwell County Judge L.W. Scott told the Austin American-Statesman. "Plenty of pride is involved. Most of them would go hungry rather than ask for help."

The report on the counties was issued Tuesday by the Harvard University School of Public Health and the Physicians Task Force on Hunger. The U.S. government considers that a family of four is living at the poverty level if their annual income is $10,609 or less.

In San Marcos, the county seat of Hays County, Lynn Wright is food stamp supervisor for the office of the Texas Department of Human Resources.

Ms. Wright disagreed with the Harvard study conclusion, but acknowledged that nutrition and hunger problems exist in the rural county whose economy is primarily based on ranching and farming.

"I am sure that there are people eligible for (food stamp) benefits here who have not applied for it. I don't know why that is," Ms. Wright said. "But I just find it very hard to believe that two-thirds of the people who are eligible are not getting stamps or other forms of assistance. I just can't believe that figure can be that high."

Court may rule on how far government can bend religion rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court justices had questions for the lawyers: What if a person's religious beliefs demanded he wear a big cross with his military uniform? Or a beard, or a turban?

"What if your client wanted to satisfy his religious rights in the military by wearing a derby?" Justice Byron R. White said.

Would the government be guilty of violating his constitutional rights if it told him "no"?

What if someone's religion required cocaine for ceremonies? Must the government say OK on grounds of religious freedom?

The point the justices were trying to make as they heard arguments in two religious-freedom cases Tuesday was: How far must the government bend its rules in order to allow Americans their constitutionally guaranteed right of "free exercise" of religion?

Lawyers for two clients fighting welfare and military-uniform restrictions on religious grounds didn't pretend to have the answers.

But the "what if" questions from several of the nine justices — including John Paul Stevens, William J. Brennan and Chief Justice Warren Burger as well as White — seemed to show a court thinking hard about the broader ramifications of the decisions it will make this year on the subject.

In the two specific cases argued Tuesday:

—A federal appeals court here had ruled last year the Air Force was within its rights in telling Capt. S. Simcha Goldman, an Orthodox Jew and an ordained rabbi, he had to quit wearing his yarmulke, or skull cap, when in uniform as a clinical psychologist at March Air Force Base in California.

—A federal district court in Pennsylvania had ruled health officials had to resume welfare payments they cut off to a 5-year-old named Little Bird of the Snow, whose parents refused to let the government use her Social Security number.

Computer use and dissemination of the number — which the parents say was unwittingly applied for when the girl was an infant — would under the parents' Indian tribal beliefs "rob her spirit and perhaps deprive her of her ability to become a holy person," lawyer Gary Gildin said.

BUDGET

shield all military personnel from any staff cutbacks resulted in the slightly higher percentage of cuts for the remainder of Pentagon programs.

And while the cuts will not approach those that will come later in the year when the Gramm-Rudman act takes full effect, they still will produce dramatic government-wide slashes in services and programs.

Federal agency heads, notified late Tuesday by the OMB of the magnitude of cuts on a department-by-department basis, were struggling to determine exactly how the cuts could be carried out.

Hiring freezes were expected to be instituted throughout the government, with layoffs likely at a number of agencies, according to several government officials who spoke only on the condition of anonymity.

Labor Department spokesman David Demerest said, "We don't have a lot of flexibility from one program to another."

He said there would be some "picking and choosing" within specific programs, but that generally the percentage cuts were fixed and across-the-board.

An analysis by the House Education and Labor Committee said the March 1 cuts would result in a $170 million cut in funds this year for the federal compensatory education program; a $224.8 million cut in student aid; and a $43.6 million cut in the federal vocational and adult education program.

Funds for the National Endowment for the Arts will be cut by $7.7 million and by $6.4 million for the National Endowment for the Humanities, according to the congressional document.

The committee report also said the cutbacks would mean a $159.2 million reduction in the Labor Department's training and employment services budget, a $15 million cut in a federal jobs program for senior citizens, a $96 million cut in low-income energy assistance and a $62.7 million cut in the federal program for the handicapped.

Funds for the Department of Housing and Urban Development will be cut $673 million under the Gramm-Rudman formula, according to sources.

A Food and Drug Administration spokesman, Dick Thompson, said the cuts meant an $18.2 million slash in the agency's budget. FDA sources said it could work out to the equivalent of just under 200 jobs lost out of an agency workforce of about 6,900.

Interior Department spokesman Alan Levitt said the budget cuts won't close any national parks but could mean reduced hours at some parks and furloughs or layoffs of personnel. Some interior funds are exempt from cuts — notably Indian trust funds, land settlements, loan guarantees and insurance. Cuts should total "a little more than $200 million" out of a total department budget of $6.2 billion, Levitt said.

The law, named for sponsors Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, and Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., would eliminate the federal deficit by 1991 through a series of decreasing annual deficit targets.

A three-judge federal panel is considering a suit filed by 12 members of Congress and a federal employees union challenging the constitutionality of the law.

Hughes serves as hostess Thursday

Bud to Blossom Garden Club members met Thursday morning in the home of Betty Hughes, 538 Sycamore Lane.

Roll call was answered with a Sesquicentennial thought, "My first impression of Texas."

During the business meeting conducted by Naoma Spann, Marcie Ginn was appointed to assist Hughes as first vice-president. Also, it was announced that National Arbor Day is scheduled April 25.

Karen Barela reported that club members had assisted at the official visit recently of the Bert Taylors from Bordertown, Australia. The club provided a floral arrangement at the reception and presented Mrs. Taylor with a tote bag and corsage.

Hughes reported that the Christmas party and dinner was enjoyed by members and husbands and Wilma Bryan gave a report on members helping decorate Westgate Nursing Home and Golden Plains Nursing Home with wreaths, centerpieces and place mat butterflies.

It was also announced that during the holidays, members furnished fruit, cookies and candy for clients at the Hereford Satellite Work Training Center.

Spann, Jane White and Hughes were elected as delegates to District I Spring Convention planned March 11-12 at the Amarillo Garden Center.

It was also reported that the Junior Operation Wild Flower display was held during November at the Deaf Smith County Library by Tracy Duncan.

Members present included Barela, Bryan, Ginn, Hughes, Patricia Robinson, Tommie Savage, Spann, White and Winnie Wiseman.

The next meeting is planned at 9:30 a.m. Jan. 23 at the Ginn home, 205 Douglas. The program topic will be on house plants and Hughes will be directing a tour.

If anyone is interested in attending a meeting or joining the club, contact Tracey Duncan at 364-8010.

NEW YORK (AP) — A typical supermarket shopper scans some 300 items a minute, according to a survey by a national marketing services company. The Howard-Marlboro Group reports that research teams using eye cameras found that by the end of a routine supermarket visit, the shopper could have scanned, accepted or rejected more than 5,000 possibilities.

The survey also indicated even the most careful shoppers find it difficult to resist impulse purchases.

DR. GOTT

Sound waves dissolve stones

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My husband has two big kidneystones. The doctor says he should have wave therapy. Does it work?

DEAR READER — The treatment of kidneystones is undergoing a revolution. In addition to the traditional manner of removing stones surgically, urologists are now using sound waves to fracture and pulverize these troublesome deposits. The technique is called ultrasonic lithotripsy and is so effective and so safe that surgery for kidneystones may soon become antiquated.

Lithotripsy is administered in two ways. The first method involves passing a probe up the ureter (the tube leading from the kidney to the bladder) or into the kidney itself through a flank incision. Then the stone is bombarded by sound waves until it dissolves. For the procedure to work, the probe must touch the stone.

The second method is called the "blitz bath." After the patient is placed in a tank of water, the stone is pulverized by extracorporeal (outside the body) sound waves. This technique is still considered to be experimental, it is not reimbursable by Medicare and there are only a few available units in the country.

If your husband's doctor has suggested lithotripsy, I say "go for it." This new treatment may save him — and millions of other Americans — from more painful and dangerous surgery.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Every time I walk into a health-food store or pick up a tabloid newspaper, I am bombarded by health claims about vitamins and minerals. These substances are touted to cure all kinds of disease, fight old age, prevent colds and neutralize cancer cells. Do you know of any factual source that will give me rational information on this subject?

DEAR READER — There is indeed an enormous amount of misinformation being circulated about the value of vitamins and minerals — everything from vitamin-megadose cancer cures to the faddish orthomolecular treatment of mental disease.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I have had a prostate infection for the last year. I've been seen by a urologist and he's been treating me with all kinds of medicine, but it keeps coming back. Will I have this the rest of all my life?

DEAR READER — Prostate infections can be troublesome and resistant to treatment. You might have a prostatic stone that is forming a focus of infection.

To give you more information, I'm sending you a free copy of my Health Report on THE PROSTATE GLAND. Other readers who want a copy should send 75 cents plus a long self-addressed, stamped envelope in care of this newspaper to P.O. Box 2597, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My bowels don't move very much and I have to strain a lot. I take Metamucil and eat bran cereal, fruits and vegetables. Hope you can help me. I'm 82.

DEAR READER — Like thinning and graying hair, bowel malfunction seems to be an inevitable consequence of aging. Try using a combination stool-softener/laxative (like PeriColace); this, plus bran and fiber, may get things going.

DEAR DR. GOTT — In a recent column, you recommended eating gelatin to strengthen nails. I'm certainly surprised that you would repeat that old wives' tale as though it might be factual. Even if protein would help nails, which is unlikely, a single ounce of red meat gives you more than a package of dry gelatin.

DEAR READER — True, true. But it sometimes works, and it's inexpensive.

Tips for quitting

DEAR READERS: The six major American cigarette companies spend $1.5 billion annually to promote their products. Some 330,000 Americans will die prematurely this year of diseases linked with smoking. That's as many Americans as have been killed in all the wars fought in this century.

If you didn't join the Great American Smokeout on Nov. 21, you can start next Monday. Here are some tips to help you quit the filthy habit.

QUIT TIPS FOR SMOKEOUT DAY FROM THE AMERICAN CANCER SOCIETY.

Wet down all cigarettes in the house and throw them in the trash can. Clean out all ashtrays in your home and office and store them. Discard matches; hide lighters, or give them away.

When the urge to smoke hits, take a deep breath. Hold it a second, then release it very, very slowly. Taking deep rhythmic breaths is similar to smoking, only you'll inhale clean air, not poisonous gases.

Exercise to help relieve tension. Climb stairs rather than take the elevator, park the car a block or two from your destination and walk the rest of the way. At home, practice touching your toes, jog in place, do jumping jacks.

When tempted to reach for a cigarette, think of a negative image about smoking. Select your worst memory connected with the habit. The time you burned a hole in your suit or when you were left completely breathless running for a bus that pulled away. Imagine this experience for 15 seconds whenever the urge occurs.

Reward yourself with oral substitutes in the same way you may have used cigarettes. Good examples: chewing sugarless gum, lemon drops, pumpkin or sunflower seeds, apple slices, carrot sticks, unbuttered popcorn or stick cinnamon.

Eat three or more small meals a day. This maintains constant blood sugar levels, and helps fight the urge to smoke. Avoid sugary foods and spicy items that can trigger a desire for cigarettes.

Scramble your day and change habits connected with smoking. Drive a different route to work; eat lunch in a new place; leave the "scene of the urge." At home, avoid your "smoking chair" after dinner, reach for gum rather than a cigarette when answering the phone.

Cleanse your body of nicotine. Drink liquids — lots of them. Water (6-8 glasses a day), herbal teas, fruit juices and caffeine-free soft drinks are recommended. Pass up coffee, caffeinated soft drinks and alcohol as they increase your urge to smoke.

Keep your hands and mind busy. Work on a crossword puzzle, knit a sweater, balance your checkbook, fix something around the house, shampoo the dog, clean out the closets. Respond to those unanswered letters on your desk.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Is the wife really the last one to know? I have often wondered about this. At the moment two close friends are being cheated on openly and both appear to be totally oblivious to what is apparent to others. What say you, Ann?—WHITE PLAINS

DEAR W.P.: Often the wife knows but she wants to keep her marriage intact. Ignoring the tell-tale signs is her way of doing it. "Others" should MYOB.

What's the story on pot, cocaine, LSD, PCP, downers, speed? Can you handle them if you're careful? Send for Ann Landers' all-new booklet, "The Lowdown on Dope." For each booklet ordered, send $2.00, plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (39 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Texans rate doctors up-to-date

Texans think doctors are usually up-to-date on the latest advances in medicine, but that they keep patients waiting too long for their appointment, according to a survey conducted for the Texas Medical Association.

The survey also reveals that most Texans believe the professional liability situation has reached crisis proportions and that the tort system needs reform. These and other findings are featured in the January issue of the official TMA journal, Texas Medicine.

Doctors also were rated as having very high or high ethical standards by 58 percent of the respondents. Nine out of ten said it is important to have a personal physician.

These findings come from a survey conducted in July by V. Lance Tarrant & Associates, Houston. "We feel we can better serve patients by knowing what they like and dislike about their doctor," according to Dr. Joel Reed, Houston, chairman of the TMA Council on Communication. "That's why we asked that this survey be done."

While 58 percent of Texans said doctors keep them waiting too long, a nearly equal number think doctors take a genuine interest in them and are up-to-date on medical advances.

The article points out that Tarrant, Bexar, and Dallas county folks and those 55 and older have consistently favorable opinions about doctors. Persons with a family income of more than $50,000 a year are slightly more negative about physicians than the average Texan.

On the broader issue of health care, 76 percent agree government should provide better health care for the poor and elderly. Increased confidence in medicine is shown by the 94 percent who said medical science now routinely saves many people who would have died five or 10 years ago.

Seventy-five percent of Texans are keenly aware of the growing crisis with malpractice suits and awards in this country. More respondents said persons are not usually justified when they sue doctors, but are looking for an easy way to make money. The amount awarded to patients by juries in malpractice suits is usually too much, said 44 percent of the respondents. More than half said there should be a limit on the amount of money that can be awarded to someone suing a doctor.

The telephone survey included 700 adults 18 years of age and older in Texas.

LEMON JUICE

SORGUES, France (AP) — Next time you ask for a lemon twist, the waiter might spray lemon juice from a pressurized can into your drink.

The new product, already in use in France, contains the juice of 15 lemons, has no preservatives, no sugar, no chemicals and very few calories.

Soon to be introduced in the United States, the juice can be used in cooking, cocktails and water, and the makers say the aerosol can keeps the juice fresh for five months or longer without preservatives.

Nearly half the world's output of dry mustard never reaches the mustard pot. Four tons in every 10 are marketed in bulk for use in other foods.

POLLY'S POINTERS

Fridge needs clean coils

DEAR POLLY — How often should the condenser coils of my new frost-free refrigerator be cleaned? What's the procedure for cleaning these coils?

— BEV
DEAR BEV — The condenser coils should be vacuumed every two to three months. It's easy and takes only a few minutes.

A buildup of dust on the condenser coils will reduce their efficiency and the refrigerator won't work as well, so it's important not to neglect this minor chore. At the same time, you should remove and wash out the drain pan under the refrigerator and sweep out or vacuum any readily available dust there.

One more maintenance chore is important. Every day wipe around the refrigerator gasket with a damp cloth. Cleaning the gasket is vital to maintaining a good seal and keeping the gasket in good condition.

Hope you enjoy your new appliance! A few minutes of maintenance when necessary will allow the refrigerator to give you many long years of service. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — My family always had a problem with clothes hangers. We would hang wet clothes on them and the wire would make a rust stain on the clothes. We solved the problem by wrapping colored plastic tape on the wire hangers. This way, you can make old hangers look new again. Every family member has a different color. — MRS. R.D.

DEAR POLLY — If I have something I want to remember to tell a friend or relative, I make a note of it to keep in my address book near the name. When the person calls, I call or we visit, and I check the address book for notes. Often it is an important message, so this memory jogger helps a lot. — J.C.

Thomas speaks to Veleda members

Veleda Study Club members met Monday in the home of Joyce Ritter. President Marcella Bradley presided and extended a welcome to guests, Darlene Fields, Judy Detten, Snooks Farr, Gid Brown and George Ritter.

The business meeting was postponed until the next regular meeting and President Bradley turned the program over to Norma Walden. She introduced guest speaker, Garth Thomas, co-chairman of the Hereford Genealogical Society.

Thomas spoke to the group on the preparations of the events to take place during the sesquicentennial year.

He announced that the Wagon Train that is currently making its way around Texas will be in Hereford May 15. He said that each one should take part in welcoming them.

Thomas asked, "What can we, Deaf Smith County, do to be remembered 150 years from now?" Suggestions have been made to build another park or to put a fountain somewhere in the city. He said the committee was open to any suggestions.

Thomas announced that South Australia is also celebrating its 150th birthday and that it had many things in common with the state of Texas.

He stressed that in celebrating this state's birthday, residents should have a good time but do something memorable, something that will help citizens grow and become better.

Refreshments were served to 11 members and their guests. Those present were Bradley, Juanita Brown, Betty Gilbert, Marjorie Lassiter, Donna Lindeman, Norma Martin, Ritter, Suzane Stevens, Walden, Patricia Weldon and Margaret Zinser.

The next meeting will be held in the home of Norma Martin.

Self-rescue kit provides way out

By JOAN GOESSL, Associated Press Writer

Lee Maynard isn't trying to alarm people. But he wants them to think about being trapped on the fifth floor of a building when a raging fire cuts electricity to the elevator and clogs the stairwell with smoke.

The situation isn't hopeless for someone carrying a High Rise Self-Rescue Kit that Maynard calls "the third way out" and says makes possible a slow and controlled descent along the outside of a tall building.

He said the kit his mail-order company will be selling this spring is no gimmick.

"This is a serious, serious piece of equipment," Maynard said. "It's not a toy and that's one thing we want to make sure people understand. It was not designed to play with."

"It's sort of a bomb proof mountaineering device that gives people a shot at rescuing themselves from buildings that are not too well designed."

The kit contains an anchor strap, a sturdy Dacron-coated rope line, a pouch-like harness, a flashlight and a glass breaking tool designed to safely knock out a window pane. It weighs about four pounds and fits into a case the size of a youngster's lunch box.

The system operates on the same principle as a downwards-moving elevator — controlled descent.

The anchor strap is secured to any object in the room that will not move or cannot be pulled through the window — the toilet or radiator, for example, or a large and heavy chest of drawers.

Next, the rope line is attached to the anchor strap and the evacuee steps into the harness. The line and descending device already are attached to the harness. Then comes the descent, with the evacuee lowering himself through the window, placing his feet against the side of the building and controlling the speed of his descent by the amount of pressure exerted on the rope.

Those who've tried the kit swear by it.

Don Strehl, a friend of Maynard's and president of the Santa Fe company that handles Maynard's public relations, said he was wary of taking the device on a practice run from the third floor of a Santa Fe building.

"I rappelled once before in my life and that was 20 years ago," Strehl said. "But like the instructions say, if Joe Jones took it out and got confident that the thing was going to hold him, he'd have a tool that will get him out of a building."

Bill Forrest, a mountaineer and owner of Forrest Safety Products Inc. of Denver, invented the self-rescue kit at the urging of a friend who works on the 38th floor of a Denver office building.

Forrest first invented a rescue system designed for entire companies and followed that with a system for firefighters.

"I took those principles and miniaturized them and gave people other options," Forrest said. "Some people will probably say they'd never use it, but from what I've learned from firefighters, people would rather jump than burn and I'd rather use this system than jump."

That same sort of logic applies to any mishap, Forrest insisted, be it a fire, hurricane, chemical leak or terrorist attack. If there's no other way out of the eighth floor, he asks, won't most people give the rescue device a whirl?

The Lee Maynard Co. of Santa Fe will include the rescue kit in its outdoor equipment catalog this spring. Maynard said he expects the kit to sell best in states where skyscrapers and high-rise apartment and office buildings are the norm.

Local Camp Fire News

During the last year, Camp Fire has been celebrating 75 years of service to youth.

The culmination of the national celebration was in November when Camp Fire representatives from all across the country met in Kansas City, Mo. for the 75th Anniversary Camp Fire Congress.

Attending the meeting from Hereford were Nita Lea, Betty Drake, Cindy Norvell, Brenda Pagett and Jackie Flood.

Delegates were there to receive the annual report, elect officers, and deliberate on the amendments to bylaws and various proposed resolutions. Board members and management staff are given opportunities to attend workshops of special interest to managers.

Margaret R. Preska was elected as the new National President. She is the president of Mankato State University, Mankato, Minnesota.

During World War II, U.S. Marine Corps troops landed on the tiny Pacific island of Iwo Jima Feb. 19, 1945. The action was taken after 70 days of shelling had failed to break the Japanese defense. Four days later, in a scene immortalized on film as one of the great moments in American military history, the Stars and Stripes was planted on top of Mount Suribachi.

THIS SHRIMP IS SMALL

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The Cortez barrel shrimp is only half-an-inch long but uses its size to advantage.

The creature slips in between the spines of sea urchins and eats their tubular feet. The sea urchin has hundreds of feet which are used for locomotion and trapping plankton, and it simply ambles on unaware of the shrimp's presence.

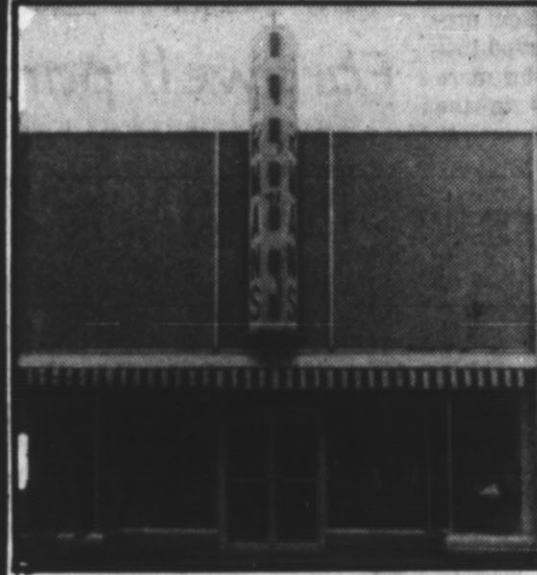

The shrimp are commonly found in the Gulf of California.

Spinhirne nominee for Woman of the Year

Mary Lou Spinhirne was nominated as Cultural Extension Club's Woman of the Year when the group met Friday in the Spinhirne home for their first meeting of the year.

Edith Hunter opened the meeting with a prayer followed by The Pledge of Allegiance and to the United States and of the Texas Flag, led by Bertha Dettmann.

For the opening exercise, Spinhirne read "Two Little Stems from Life's Blessings" and "The Greatest Blessing."

President Nell Pope conducted the business meeting and assisted members filling out their new club yearbooks.

Roll call was answered with "How I would rate my Christmas on a scale from 1 to 10."

Refreshments of tea and cherry granola dessert were served to S.T. Walton, Byrdie Fellers, Wilma Goetsch, Jewell Rogers, Vernis Parsons, Marie Thomas, Carrie Mae Doak, Jewell Hargrave, Edith Hunter, Dettmann and Pope.

The next meeting is planned Jan. 24 in the home of Wilma Goetsch.

Sexual rehabilitation key to recovery after treatment

Education and counseling can have a great impact on a patient's motivation to resume sexual activity after pelvic cancer therapy, according to Texas Medicine, the official journal of the Texas Medical Association.

The article in the journal's January issue states that treatment of pelvic tumors often hinder a person's ability to function sexually because the tumors are close to the genital area. Authors Andrew C. von Eschenbach, MD and Leslie R. Schover, PhD, Missouri City, write that despite this, 80 to 90 percent of pelvic cancer patients do not need intensive sex therapy. Instead, information on water-based lubricants, penile implants, hormone therapy, and other appropriate facts can help patients cope with the stress of cancer treatment.

The authors state that education and counseling often can clear up any myths about cancer that may deter patients from resuming sexual activity. Contrary to what some patients may think, cancer cannot be spread through sexual contact.

Other areas of discussion between patient and physician should include advice on how to resume sexual activity in a non-pressured way, an explanation how cancer therapy will affect sexual desire, arousal, and orgasm, and information on treatments, such as hormone therapy. According to the article, patients with a history of marital conflict or individual psychological problems may need to be referred to a mental health professional for more intensive evaluation early in the cancer treatment process.

Hightower, lawmakers criticize voc ag cuts

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Education Agency has gone further than lawmakers intended in cutting vocational agriculture programs, according to Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower and some legislators.

The TEA "seems to think that learning to raise a proper pig is not quite on an educational par as learning to program a computer," Hightower said at a Tuesday news conference.

But State Education Commissioner W.N. Kirby said Hightower had never approached him about the matter, Kirby said that in an election year he prefers to look at facts rather than listen to rhetoric.

Hightower said TEA cut about $580 million and 10 field supervisors from the program.

"Not only does this cut out the guts of the program, but it destroys the heart as well," he said.

"They are not interested in any rural programs at all," House Appropriations Chairman Jim Rudd added.

Rudd and other lawmakers were on the losing side of a 1985 budget battle over vocational agriculture. Lawmakers voted to reduce the program, but Rudd said the education agency went too far.

"They're taking it to an extreme. They're killing the program," said Rudd, D-Brownfield.

State Education Commissioner W.N. Kirby said lawmakers — who cut vocational education funds from $6.1 million to $4.2 million — left his agency no choice.

"The Legislature was well aware at the time out budget was cut that the only way we could reduce our vocational education budget by such a significant amount would be to eliminate the 10 area vocational education field offices," he said.

Kirby also was upset at Hightower's efforts.

"It is interesting that Commissioner Hightower attempts to solve problems with press conferences rather than meeting personally with the people directly involved," said Kirby. "He has never once discussed this matter with me."

"I am an educator and an administrator, not a politician. Because of that, I tend, especially in an election year, to look not at the rhetoric of statements but at reality and facts," he said.

According to Rudd, the Legislature voted to cut 10 vocational agriculture jobs, but left the agency enough "discretion" to keep the program alive.

State Reps. Bob Melton, D-Gatesville; Robert Sanders, D-La Grange; Steve Carriker, D-Roby; Bill Haley, D-Center; and Sen. John Sharp, D-Victoria, joined Hightower and Rudd at the news conference.

Hightower offered a "compromise" plan in which six regional supervisors would be reinstated at a cost of $200,000. State universities have offered office space to keep down the cost of the program, he said.

Aaron Alejandro of Dallas, president of the state Future Farmers of America, said his organization's activities have been hurt by the vocational agriculture cut.

"Our program is one that needs to stand," he said.

About 59,000 students are now enrolled in Texas vocational agriculture programs, which include classroom study and after-school projects.

Workshops planned in Amarillo

James L. Haley of Austin, noted researcher, will be the featured speaker Saturday afternoon at the bimonthly Panhandle Pen Women meeting at the Quality Inn Central, 601 Amarillo Blvd. W.

Workshops start at 10 a.m. and all attending are urged to bring work to be critiqued. Lunch costs $5.65.

For reservations, call Winona Cobb, 352-5992 in Amarillo.

Baby shower held in Spann home

A baby shower was given for Rachael Christine Hamby, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Hamby, Saturday in the home of Mrs. Joe Spann, 516 Sycamore.

Refreshments of pound cake, spiced tea, punch and coffee were served to 35 guests.

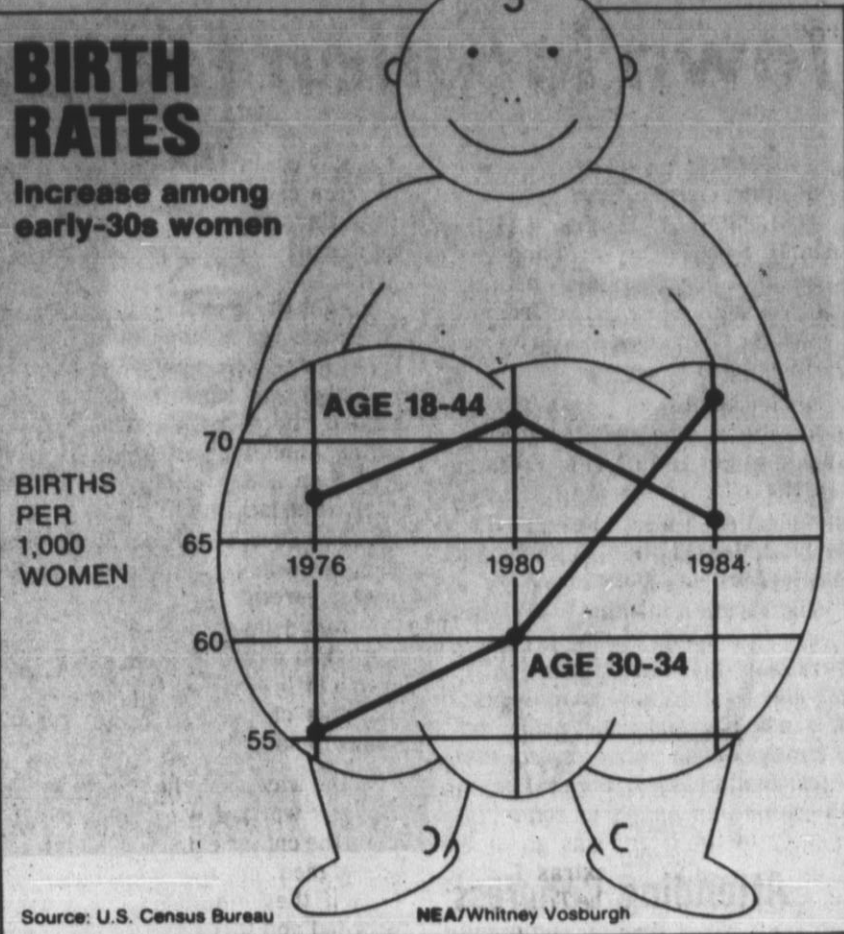

Serving as hostesses were Mmes. Spann, Bob White, Gaylon Bryan and Tom George.

Residents listed on honor roll

Area students attending Angelo State University in San Angelo, are listed on the Dean's Honor Roll for the fall semester at the University.

Those listed on the 3.00 to 3.49 Honor roll include Donnell Gordon Anderson, computer science major; Aaron Michael Shakocius, computer science major; Sherri Lynn Ellis, health and physical ed major; Lisa Ann Connally, undecided major; and David Shannon Barton, business major.

Those listed on the 3.50 to 4.00 honor roll include Ronnie Lynn Killough, computer science major; Jeffrey Theon Morris, history major and Randy H. Villarreal, an undecided major.

While the U.S. birth rate declined to its lowest point since 1976, the total for American mothers in their early 30s kept increasing steadily.

PTA formed at Shirley

Fifty parents and teachers were in attendance when Shirley Elementary School formed its Parent Teachers Association Thursday evening.

Articles were read and approved and officers were elected.

Sherry Blackwell will serve as president; Kathy Christie, vice-president; Martha Rickman, secretary; Gail Carter, treasurer; and Vickie Ortiz, reporter.

The meeting was followed by an open house.

The next meeting was scheduled March 13.

Farewell party set Thursday

Louise Walker, Deaf Smith County extension agent, will be honored at a farewell party from 5-7 p.m. Thursday in Deaf Smith County Library Heritage Room.

The public is invited to attend the event which will be hosted by members of the Extension Homemakers Council and 4-H

Parent-Leaders Organization. Walker, who has been county extension agent for six years, is moving to Magnolia, Ark.

The 50-star flag was raised for the first time officially at 12:01 a.m. on July 4, 1960, at Fort McHenry National Monument in Baltimore.

Clowning topic of Calliopian meeting

John Avery was guest speaker at the Calliopian Study Club meeting held Thursday in the home of Sue James with Sheri Kerr serving as co-hostess.

Avery gave an interesting explanation of clowning. As he made up his face in his clown person, he explained how each clown has his own face and appearance which is his alone.

When he completed his make-up, he stood and showed his costume complete with multi-colored shoes which he had painted himself. He blew up balloons and made them into animals and then gave each member present an apple made from a blown-up balloon.

Avery also explained the many functions of clowning. His favorite role is in teaching religious meaning of scriptures and in interpreting music. He said he has been able to use his clown personality very effectively in teaching religious truths.

He also mentioned that clowning is extremely satisfying for him and he has fun showing a different personality from that of everyday life.

During the business meeting, members voted to change their guest night to March 13 and to cancel the April 24 meeting in favor of going to the Community Concert.

The next meeting was planned Jan. 23 in the home of Vera Threewit.

Those present included Mmes. Paul Coneway, Emil Dettmann, Virginia Holmes, Faye Holt, James Hull, Sue James, Duffy McBryer, Ted McWhorter, D.C. McWhorter, Trow Mims, Millard Nobles, Kathlee Palmer, Kathryn Ruga and Jack Wilcox.

About 9 million ducks and geese visit California's Central Valley during fall, winter and spring. The valley is regarded as one of the nation's most important wintering areas for waterfowl; 60 percent of the Pacific migration route's waterfowl winter there. Yet, the Central Valley — a 400-mile-long trough between the Coast Ranges and Sierra Nevada — is more farmland than wetland. Once holding an estimated 4 million acres of wetlands teeming with wildlife, the valley is now one of the world's most valuable agricultural regions. Since early settlement, 94 percent of the valley's marshes have vanished, according to National Geographic.

Ants can be frozen for long periods without harm. Many spend the winter inside logs and stumps, coated with ice crystals.

THE SMOKING FUROR

Smoking is no longer the "glamorous" thing to do. Most adults agree it's harmful and smoking on the job or in public can be done in restricted spots.

King abandoned prepared text for 'I have a dream' speech

Martin Luther King Jr., who would have been 57 today, inspired people with his words, but it was a crowd of 250,000 people that inspired him to his most famous speech, in which he recounted: "I Have a Dream."

King had gone to the Lincoln Memorial on a sweltering Aug. 28, 1963, with a prepared text to fill the eight minutes he had been allotted to speak to those who had marched on Washington to demand civil rights legislation.

His message was that "America has given the Negro a bad check" and they were there "to redeem that check" and "not accept the idea that there is no money in the Bank of Justice."

But he discarded the text, and gave what many believe was his greatest speech: "I have a dream that one day this nation will rise up, live out the true meaning of its creed: We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal."

The words have been recalled in many of the tributes accorded King this week as the nation prepares for its first observance of the federal holiday honoring him. Although King's birthday is today, the third Monday in January, Jan. 20 this year, has been set aside for the holiday.

In one ceremony Tuesday, about 500 people gathered at the Lincoln Memorial to hear King's speech again. The military presented the colors, city officials laid a wreath, and gospel singers performed "We Shall Not Be Moved."

The highlight was five minutes of tape-recorded excerpts of the speech. Then, many joined hands and sang the anthem of the 1960s civil rights movement, "We Shall Overcome."

Fred Brown, who heard King deliver the speech, said it struck him the same way Tuesday as it did more than two decades ago: "It projects that feeling of togetherness, of hope, of pulling together."

When King began a rhythmic demand for freedom now, for jobs now, the crowd caught his timing and shouted "Now!" in cadence. It was then that King abandoned his text, and ended the speech by saying:

"When we allow freedom to ring from every town and every hamlet, from every state and every city, we will be able to speed up that day when all of God's children, black men and white men, Jews and Gentiles, Protestants and Catholics, will be able to join hands and sing in the words of the old Negro spiritual, 'Free at last! Free at last! Thank God almighty, we are free at last!'"

When King finished, there was a moment of awed silence, followed by a crash of sound as the audience shouted its approval.

"They kept on shouting in one thunderous voice," his widow, Coretta Scott King, recalled a year after King's slaying in 1968, "and for that brief moment the Kingdom of God seemed to have come on earth."

In other ceremonies Tuesday, Martin Luther King III told about 600 people in Little Rock, Ark., that if his father were alive he would be working to eliminate poverty, poor housing and poor education.

"Our work is unfinished because people are still suffering," he said.

Town location for 'Dallas: The Early Years'

By BONNIE LASITER
Palestine Herald-Press

PALESTINE, Texas (AP) — Elliott Turner was applying for a loan at a local savings institution when a loan officer across from him leaned over and said: "You ought to be in pictures."

My husband and I were having dinner with friends who told us that a movie might be filmed in Palestine. As the wire editor at the Herald-Press, I'm always looking for a story, and I told my friends to be sure and let the paper know when.

The movie is "Dallas: The Early Years," a made-for-TV production covering the background of the popular Friday night soap "Dallas." It is to be released in the spring.

Sandy Couch, vice president at Jacksonville Savings and Loan in Palestine and active in community theater in the town, was given the chore of casting 40 extras for the movie to be filmed on the Texas State Railroad. She called on community theater groups in Rusk, Athens and Jacksonville as well as Palestine to provide the actors.

Turner would fill the part of one of the porters, Sandy told him as he filled out his loan application. It sounded fun, so he took the day off from his job at the Texas Department of Corrections and joined the movie scene.

Lawyers plan to view local zoning ordinances

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawyers for satellite dish manufacturers plan to review hundreds of local zoning ordinances that specify where the home earth stations can be built to see how many ordinances have been pre-empted by a new federal ruling.

Fred Finn, an attorney representing SPACE, the association of manufacturers, dealers and owners of dishes, said a decision by the Federal Communications Commission on Tuesday may invalidate a majority of the 500 to 750 local rules governing backyard and rooftop dishes.

While he anticipates that many of the communities will change their rules when the federal pre-emption text is published, he predicted that some cases will end up in court.

FCC officials said the order was crafted so it will be difficult for a community to ban satellite dishes if it does not also ban ham radio antennas and apartment house master antenna system dishes.

Albert Halprin, FCC common carrier bureau chief, predicted that the Sandy contacted Bonnie to tell her the film crew was in fact coming to Palestine, and before Bonnie realized it, she had signed herself on as an extra.

Herald-Press photographer Steven D. Reece would have to be on the scene for photos, so why not join the cast also. And when the movie crew needed more male extras, sports editor Allen Burnett found himself giving up a day off to join his co-workers on location.

And besides, the movie production company was paying extras $40 for the day's work.

At Maydelle we joined others who had taken a day off their jobs to get in on a little of the action. (The depot sign was changed to Pride, Texas, for the movie.)

On the way over, the Herald-Press trio was worried we wouldn't even make the cut for extras. What if they had signed up too many extras? What if they didn't have our sizes recorded and there was no place for us?

After all, we were the "amateur's amateur."

We weren't rejected and soon were ushered to the wardrobe truck to stand in line and take clothes issued to us. Just like the military.

Then it was off to a makeshift only regulations that would survive a court challenge were general rules existing before the advent of backyard dishes, apartment house master antenna and ham radio towers.

The commission said one type of ban that would pass muster would be a prohibition on any structure that does not blend with the colonial architecture in the historic section of Williamsburg, Va.

The nation's almost 2 million dish owners can pick up for free the programs being transmitted to cable TV systems.

The law allows that practice to continue as long as it is not done for commercial purposes, such as providing entertainment in a bar.

Television Digest, an industry newsletter, says 17 cable programmers have decided to scramble their signals to combat free viewing.

Home Box Office, one of the largest pay programmers, today becomes the first to scramble its signal full time.

More than 100 signals are not scrambled.

dressing room in somebody's house. (We just followed the crowd — the location crew had taken care of all the details.) I had a rather boring dress to wear which was covered by a drab coat and shoes that looked just like the ones my third-grade teacher wore. Allen looked like he was a stock broker from the East, and Steve, well, he looked like the average working guy in well-worn clothes.

It was the 1930s, after all.

Since women wore virtually no makeup in that day, it was a quick smudge of lipstick, and I was on my way to the hair design area. It is incredible how an expert from Dallas can turn a 1985 hairdo into a depression-era style with just a little styling gel, pins and lots of hair spray.

But Steve and Allen had to stop off at the barbershop. They both had already given up their beards because they were told ahead of time that all men must be clean shaven. For $40, they decided it was worth it.

But again like the military, it was over-the-ears and off-the-neck time for the guys. Local barbers Bennie McInnis and Thomas Vaughn were hired to do the haircuts.

After we had been there for three hours, we were finally on the set. It was the back of the set, but we were there. We got to watch some of the other extras filming a crowd scene at the train depot.

It was just what you would expect. There was a camera mounted on a boom truck, a director sitting in a "director's" chair and (portable) dressing rooms for stars with their names on the doors.

We hardly ever saw the stars. And since these were the early years, we didn't really recognize old Jock and Digger.

We finally got up to the action area and were given a specific chore. Steven was to look up into the train at a girl he had never seen before and pretend his heart was breaking as the train pulled away from the station, carrying her away. He was to be so broken up, in fact, that he was to run alongside the train, waving his arms. Now, that is really acting.

But Allen and I were not so fortunate. We were to walk down the wooden sidewalk — in the deep background.

After a quick run-through and several takes on film it was time to break for lunch. Another military maneuver — stand in line and take what they give you.

The afternoon dragged quite a bit as we filmed one more brief scene, took a two-hour break and then went back and boarded the train for an altogether different scene. We were to give the appearance that the train was full of passengers as it pulled up to the station. After a one-hour wait on the train, we rode up to the station — about a two-minute ride just as it was getting dark and the filming would have to stop.

It was a lot of waiting for a little action, but it still seems worth it. During the lengthy break, the extras were stationed at the Maydelle Cafe. And when you put a group of amateur actors together (most of them are active in community theater groups), the creativity just seems to come out. First some impromptu lines and then singing. There was a piano player in the group and the songs went from Christmas carols to contemporary to old-time gospel.

The mood among the "stars" was friendly. And there was a lot of visiting during the wait on the train. In addition to the TDC employee and the savings and loan vice president, we met a boutique operator, hospital lab technician, teacher, construction company owner, steel fabrication worker, title company executive, general store operator and aerobics instructor. Where else but a movie set in Maydelle, Texas, could you meet all those people.

For many of them, it was their first experience at real-live movies. Others had been on the scene during last year's filming of "Up Hill All The Way," starring Roy Clark and Mel Tillis.

Why were they spending their Monday on the movie scene?

"Applause," one said.

"How many can say 'That's me' in the movie?"

"We like playing dress up."

"It's a free haircut, and we won't need another one for three months."

And perhaps the most comprehensive response: "It's the same reason you go on stage for free in little theater — it's the camaraderie."

The other agreed.

And we found ourselves nodding in agreement at the end of the day. We had met some interesting people and had a chance to put ourselves into another time, another place. We had made 40 bucks for almost nothing, and we had done something we could write home about.

See you in the movies.

Texans can 'be a kid again' in survival games

By DARELL DUNN
Waco Tribune-Herald

LAKE BELTON, Texas (AP) — On a cold winter morning, a band of a dozen fatigue-clad men take positions in a wooded and briar-patched Texas field, preparing for an assault on an enemy camp.

Some of the "soldiers" will be killed. Others wounded.

There hasn't been a surprise, "Red Dawn" attack by communist insurgents. The events are not even part of a Fort Hood military exercise. And in reality, those "killed" and "wounded" will, within an hour, be back in the woods preparing for another assault.

The name of the game is survival. Despite some military trappings, the action is closer to a game of cowboys and Indians than military war games.

Survival games have moved into Central Texas. Participants and sponsors believe the games may become the latest craze, allowing those who play the games to act out any number of scenarios while releasing tension and frustration.

Survival Games of Central Texas Inc. began operation in November, and provides participants with 25 acres of rough terrain on which teams and individuals can battle.

"It's a gentleman's game," said Dick Gooch. Gooch and Dr. Dave Webster own and operate Survival Games.

Those involved, however, generally look like anything but gentlemen. Standard dress is camouflage fatigues. Even the faces of the players are camouflaged with paint.

"The games can be as mental or as physical as you want," said Gooch, owner and operator of The Racquet Club of Temple.

Gooch's partner, Webster, is a family practice doctor in Temple. "I deal with sick and depressed people all week long. I love to come out here and see these people laughing and smiling," Webster said.

"It's a great chance to be a kid again. To capture the flag. To play chess in the woods," Gooch said.

Gooch and Webster had heard about the growing popularity of survival games in other parts of the country, and decided it was time to introduce the games to Central Texas.

They contacted the national Survival Games headquarters in Northampton, N.H., and were granted franchise rights for Bell and McLennan counties.

They leased property near Lake Belton, purchased more than 30 carbon dioxide-powered pistols that shoot exploding paint pellets, and opened their camp for business.

Several survival game teams already have been formed in the Temple area. One team is called the "Wild Bunch," a group of about 12 Temple area men 20 to 25 that has become particularly successful.

During a recent weekend excursion, the "Wild Bunch" managed to defeat a team of Fort Hood soldiers.

Ken McDonald, employee of a Temple welding company and leader of the "Wild Bunch," said the majority of his team members are friends who grew up in the Temple area and graduated together from high school.

McDonald said his team members got hooked the first time they played, and now participate virtually every weekend.

"It gives you something to do on Sunday besides sitting in front of the television watching football," McDonald said.

The games generally are played by two teams, each with a maximum of 15 players.

The teams are designated as the Gold Team or the Red Team, with each player wearing a colored ribbon. The playing field is divided into halves, each with a variety of terrain identified by name on a large map at the base camp.

Gooch and Webster serve as officials for the game. They designate the general area where each team will place its flag. After the designation is made, the teams move out and place their flags.

Once the flags are positioned, the game begins. Each team determines a strategy, such as a mass assault on the opposing flag, or an intensive defense of its own flag.

One team moves through the woods. When the "enemy" is encountered, "gunplay" breaks out.

The carbon dioxide guns propel the 3-4-inch paint pellets accurately for 10 to 15 yards. When struck by a paint pellet, the "wounded" participant will feel the impact, although reportedly there is no pain.

A person hit in the torso below the neck and above the waist is considered killed, and must sit out the remainder of the game.

A person hit in another area of the body, such as the legs or arms, is considered wounded, and must sit out five minutes at the base camp before getting back into action.

Head shots are illegal and do not count. All participants are required to wear goggles when they are on the field of play action.

Shots that splatter off trees or bushes do not count.

A game ends when a team's flag is captured. If no one captures a flag within one hour, the game is called and the winner is determined by the number of participants "killed" or "wounded."

Participants rent the pistols, and receive two ammunition canisters containing 20 rounds, for $19. The camp is located off state Highway 36 on White Flint Park Road on the west side of Lake Belton.

Gooch said he has heard some complaints that the games are too militaristic, but he said the games actually bear little resemblance to warfare.

"If a Rambo type comes out here, they're going to be disappointed. They're not going to have that good of a time. We don't have fanatical types," Gooch said.

In fact, a participant who decides to try a Rambo-type full assault on a camp likely will find himself sitting at the base camp dead.

The carbon dioxide guns must be cocked between each shot, creating a warfare similar to a pre-automatic weapons era.

"In reality it's a game of touch and the pistol is an extension of a paint brush," Gooch said.

A number of the participants are real soldiers. Despite their training at Fort Hood on how to fight real wars, they say find enjoyment playing survival games.

"Out here, I get to do what I want to do," said one 36-year-old soldier.

There have been a few female participants in the survival games. Gooch said he is encouraging more women to join.

"I think most women would have to lose some of their inhibitions. They probably think it's a man's game, but I really think it's something everyone can enjoy," Gooch said.

Owner wants to incorporate

HILLSBORO, Texas (AP) — Carl Cornelius' vision about building a monument to truckers started with Carl's Corner truck stop, complete with two Jacuzzis, a swimming pool, a 24-hour restaurant and a game room.

Now Cornelius has bigger plans. He wants to incorporate his truck stop as a city — Carl's Corner, Texas.

Voters from the area's population of 220 will go to the polls Saturday to decide whether they want to incorporate their 1,280 acres as a city.

Voting will be from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. at the truck stop, located about five miles north of Hillsboro in Central Texas.

Cornelius says incorporation is more a matter of pragmatism than one of fame and advertising. A city has access to state and federal aid for building and improving water systems and fire and police protection.

"And you don't get it for people living in the country," he said.

"I would like to see a nice bank come out here. And I'd like to see a nice fire department come out here. I want it to be self-supporting."

Cornelius bought a pair of 500-pound, dancing, polyurethane frogs from a slumping Dallas nightclub and put them at his truck stop for looks. He also is designing and building the only drive-in theater in the world just for truckers.

Cornelius has teamed up with former Waco artist Bob "Daddy-O" Wade for his truckers' drive-in. Wade is the designer of the frogs Cornelius bought in Dallas and is better known, perhaps, for his sculpture of a huge iguana that sits atop the Lone Star Cafe in New York.

With such big dreams, planning and maintaining Carl's Corner has been a lot of work for Cornelius.

"I've been out here working on water lines, icicles on my hands and tears freezing on my face," said Cornelius.

"I just want to go play golf. Just go somewhere where it's warm and play a game of golf," he said.

Lately, though, Cornelius has turned over the daily operations of the truck stop to others and is concentrating almost exclusively on planning for the new city.

About 30 residents had a "town" meeting Sunday, and Cornelius found overwhelming support for incorporation.

"We talked about the pros and cons of it," he said, adding that the only opposition came from a man who said he doesn't want to live in a town. "But he said if it came in, he'd support it 100 percent. He just doesn't like the word 'town,'" Cornelius said.

If the vote is in favor of incorporation, another election will be held to elect city officials. Cornelius won't discuss whether he will seek a position.

But in an interview in 1984, when asked what position he would hold in his dream city, he responded with a smile, "Owner."

Apollo 14 astronaut Alan Shepard and Edgar Mitchell landed on the moon Feb. 5, 1971.

HIGHLIGHTS

By Lyndell Williams
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN—Architect consultants working on the Texas Goddess of Liberty removed from the top of the dome have discovered a message left 100 years ago painted inside the statue, but they haven't figured out what it says.

And while many statistics and reports can be found now to wrap up 1985, no one is able to decipher just what the crystal ball has in store for Texas in 1986.

The Libyan sanctions involve some six large Texas companies established in that nation and how much their loss will hurt Texas, if it comes, is a question mark.

Other various economic figurings released recently include:

—The Bureau of Labor Statistics says new Texas job opportunities will be low because of stress to energy and agriculture sectors. December's unemployment rate was 6.8 percent, a tenth under the national rate.

—Governor Mark White said he can assure Texas employers that their federal unemployment taxes will actually decrease by $120 million this year.

—Texas local property taxes grew by 12.9 percent last year, for a total of $8.2 billion in local property taxes.

—Although the Legislature increased the state's share of school aid by a billion per year, local schools adopted the largest hikes in local school taxes in state history totalling over half a billion dollars.

—A House report says that shutdown of the controversial "white oil" commerce in the Panhandle wouldn't cost the region's economy hundreds of millions of dollars in the next few years, as some have claimed.

But Texas would lose $18 million a year in production taxes.

Funds, Performance

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby last week told a group of educators his new idea to get Texas school districts to improve academically.

The state should cut their funds and quit subsidizing poor performances, he said. "That's the way our society works. You reward good performance and penalize bad performance."

A few days later, Gov. White jumped for the idea, saying the public was demanding more accountability in state spending. But White said he preferred incentives, not penalties, to stimulate better performance.

White also said the state won't have to raise taxes to fund higher education next year.

Polar Opposites

The new year promised to be unusual and it already has: Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower finally said something good about U.S. Agriculture Secretary John Block.

But it was as Block stepped down from the federal post that Hightower praised Block for being sympathetic to farm concerns.

"For his sake, I'm glad he's out of there," Hightower said in painting a gloomy prediction for thousands of Texas farmers.

With the enactment of the new farm act, Hightower has placed himself at polar opposites from President Reagan. Reagan says we have turned the corner on the farm problem and Hightower says it's going to get worse.

Crisis Hotline

In fact, Hightower last week unveiled details of his Farm Crisis Hotline program, funded in part by the Willie Nelson Farm Aid concert.

Hightower warns the feds are fixing to drive many farmers off their land for loan defaults, and his toll-free telephone service will provide assistance.

The Farmers Home Administration insists it isn't going to turn people out. Some of their insiders say Hightower is drumming up his usual fight-for-the-underdog rhetoric and unjustly making them the bad guys in an election year.

Attorney General Race

Texas Republicans held the spotlight in the attorney general election which promises to build to a fever pitch.

State GOP chairman George Strake rejected, as planned, the filing application of state Sen. Buster Brown, R-Lake Jackson, forcing Brown to go to the Texas Supreme Court for a ruling on eligibility.

Brown must resolve the question of whether he would violate the Texas Constitution which forbids legislators from seeking an office for which they've voted increased salaries.

Strake's rejection, all staged, frees Brown to go quickly to the high court for a ruling.

Meanwhile, in what Republicans tout is a coup that will attract Hispanics to their party, the son of a former Democratic Secretary of State announced his candidacy as a Republican for attorney general.

State District Judge Roy Barrera Jr., of San Antonio, threw his hat in the ring. His father was Secretary of State under Gov. John Connally.

Short Takes

• Over 400 persons attended a re-election roast for Rep. Jim McWilliams, D-Marshall, on January 7. Roasters were led by Land Commissioner Garry Mauro and County Judge Richard Anderson. House Speaker Gib Lewis appeared "for the defense." Serving as masters of ceremonies were District Attorney Bonnye Leggatt and Sen. John Sharp.

• Former U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger says he is receiving calls encouraging him to run against Rep. Mac Sweeney, R-Wharton. Krueger says he is considering making the race.

• Comptroller Bob Bullock says legislation to allow states to collect sales tax on mail-order business would mean $130 million in revenues to Texas.

• Treasurer Ann Richards reported $1 billion in state funds had to be shifted in December to cover state warrants, with a loss in interest earnings.

Commission finds cost of racketeering staggering

WASHINGTON (AP) — The manipulation of a few corrupt unions has enabled organized crime to become so entrenched in the marketplace that millions of Americans "unknowingly pay a surcharge" to mobsters for a wide variety of goods and services, a presidential commission says.

Winding up the first comprehensive federal probe of labor and management racketeering since the McClellan hearings of the 1950s, the President's Commission on Organized Crime concluded Tuesday that crime families and syndicates are "increasingly using labor unions as a tool to obtain monopoly power" in key sectors of the economy.

The 18-member commission, appointed by President Reagan in 1983, charged that federal enforcement efforts are fragmented and inadequate to stem the tide, and it faulted the administration for political ties to one union, the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, on grounds that the relationship simply does not look good.

Just two days earlier, Reagan, in an article for The New York Times Magazine, wrote that "for the first time in our history, we finally have the mob on the run" and boasted that organized crime convictions had quadrupled since he took office in 1981.

But Commission Chairman Irving R. Kaufman, who privately presented the panel's report to Reagan at the White House, said "There has never been a coherent federal strategy to attack organized crime's corruption of our business institutions and labor organizations."

In a summary released to reporters, the commission criticized prosecutors who merely "count bodies" — convictions — as a measure of success, and said, "Instead, a new strategy must be developed to bankrupt individual mobsters and to discourage union officers, employers, and public officials from accommodating organized crime."

Executive Director James D. Harmon told reporters the commission was distressed that of 1,399 racketeering prosecutions, the Justice Department had directed 57 percent of those cases against labor officials with no organized crime connections. The emphasis, he said, should be on the mob.

The commission, whose members include Sen. Strom Thurmond, D-S.C., and Rep. Peter W. Rodino, D-N.J., chairman of the Senate and House judiciary committees, respectively, said that through domination of certain labor unions in major cities, organized crime controls and regulates a number of markets in the construction, wholesale and retail meat processing, trucking, garbage carting and waterfront industries.

It cited four unions "with histories of control or influence by organized crime": The International Brotherhood of Teamsters; the International Longshoremen's Association, the Hotel Employees and Restaurant Employees International Union, and the Laborers International Union of North America.

"One of the key obstacles to more vigorous oversight of labor-management racketeering by the Department of Labor is the department's undeniable susceptibility to political pressure from the leadership of the constituency it is supposed to oversee," the panel said.

Officials at the 2-million-member Teamsters' headquarters in Washington did not return a reporter's calls Tuesday. The other three unions, unlike the Teamsters, belong to the AFL-CIO. "We have not seen the report and will have no comment until we do," said Rex Hardesty, a spokesman for the labor federation. Officials of the individual unions did not return calls.

Last year, AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland blamed government for allowing corruption within the labor movement, saying, "I don't have the tools or methods... any way of proving guilt or innocence. Crooks hurt us... we're entitled to protection from them from our law enforcement authorities."

The summary did not detail the alleged racketeering activities of any particular group.

Through theft, extortion, bribery, price-fixing and restraint of trade, organized crime "distorts the cost of doing business," and thus increases prices to consumers and results in lower wages to workers, the report said.

The report didn't venture a precise figure, but said the costs of labor racketeering "are staggering."

Whiteface football mentor submits resignation Tuesday

Taylor accepts Odessa High coaching offer

By GARY CHRISTENSEN
Sports Editor

Hereford High School's head football coach for the past three seasons, Jerry Taylor, announced his resignation Tuesday when he accepted the position as head grid coach at Odessa High School.

Taylor's resignation was made pending the approval by the school board of the Ector County Independent School District. The Ector County school board will meet in a special session on Thursday night.

The Hereford Independent School District school board accepted Taylor's resignation at its regular meeting Tuesday night. The board declared the position open and said it will begin the search for a new Whiteface head coach.

On Tuesday afternoon, Taylor said, "I just think this is an opportunity, and that I'd better try it. It's an opportunity to try and compete in a very competitive district.

"It's an opportunity to get into a larger school and see what can happen."

Odessa High School is in District 5-5A. The 1985 district champion was Odessa Permian, which advanced to the state championship game where it lost to Houston Yates.

Midland Lee placed second in District 5-5A to also earn a spot in the playoffs. The district's third place team, San Angelo Central, was ranked in the top 10 in the state in the Harris Rating System rankings all season along with Odessa Permian and Midland Lee.

Taylor, 44, was offered the Odessa High job on Monday, and announced his decision Tuesday after discussing the job offer with his family, his assistant coaches, and with football players.

"We have made the decision.

We're going to go full speed ahead and not look back," Taylor said.

"I owe a lot of loyalty to Hereford, to the fans, the students, the faculty and staff, the administration, and friends," he continues.

"Hereford's been very good to us, to my family. It's been a super situation. I feel I'm leaving a very fine job and that makes it even more difficult," he adds.

Taylor said the possibility of Hereford dropping to class AAAA in high school athletics had nothing to do with his decision to take the Odessa job. In fact, he felt a change to class AAAA would be good for the school's athletic teams.

Taylor expects that several of his Hereford High School assistant coaches will go with him to Odessa High School. Whether any of them pursue the HHS head coaching position, or just how many of them decide to go to Odessa remains to be seen.

Coach Taylor's assistants during the 1985 season were Gary Wilhelm, Ken Fowler, Eddie Richardson, T.R. Sartor, Ron Young, Jim Fish, Don Long, and Mark Turner.

Taylor replaces Jerry Millsaps, who resigned as Odessa High head coach after the 1985 season. Odessa High had a 6-4 season record.

In addition to working as head coach at Odessa High, Taylor's job offer include working as athletic director at the high school and also for three junior high schools.

Taylor reportedly will begin his new job on Feb. 3. He was offered the job by the new athletic director for the Ector County Independent School District, John Wilkins.

In 21 years of coaching experience, Taylor has been a head coach for 10 years, with an overall record of 76-32-3. In two seasons at Tahoka, 1967 and 1968, he had an 11-5-1 record.

From 1977 to 1980, and in 1982, he was head coach at Stamford, posting a 44-14-2 record. In three seasons at Hereford High School, his teams won 21 games and lost 10.

In 1983, the Hereford Whitefaces finished in a four-way tie for first place in District 3-5A with a 6-2 record, and were 8-3 overall. Hereford won the second place playoff spot in a coin flip, and lost to Odessa Permian in the playoffs.

Hereford had identical 6-2 records in the district in both 1984 and 1985, but did not qualify for the playoffs. The Whitefaces, 7-3 overall in 1984, tied for second with Palo Duro but Palo Duro went into the playoffs since it defeated Hereford.

The Whitefaces finished third in 1985 behind Amarillo High and Palo Duro, the two teams they lost two last season. Overall, the Herd was 6-4 in 1985.

Taylor graduated from Stamford High School in 1959, and from the University of Texas at El Paso in 1963. He played on the 1958 state championship team at Stamford. His college coach was Bum Phillips, who resigned as head coach of the New Orleans Saints late in the 1985 National Football League season.

Taylor began his coaching career in Spearman in 1963 as an assistant coach. After two years in Spearman, he was an assistant at Caprock High School for two years.

He then coached at Tahoka for two seasons, and moved on to Abilene High, where he was an assistant coach for six years.

Taylor went back to Stamford in 1975 as an assistant coach, and later was head coach for five seasons. Stamford advanced to the regional playoffs in 1979, and reached the state semifinals in 1980 before losing to eventual state champion Pittsburgh.

He was dean of students at Stamford in 1981 when he did not coach football. In 1982, he resumed his coaching career when he directed Stamford to the state quarterfinals before losing to Littlefield.

Taylor came to Hereford in 1983, replacing Don Cumpton as the Whiteface head coach. Cumpton accepted the head coaching position at Abilene High School that year.

Taylor and his wife, Ruth, are the parents of three children—a son Mark, 18, and two daughters, Tiffine, 17, and Sharon, 9. Tiffine, a senior at Hereford High School, is a member of the varsity girls' basketball team.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Louis Lipps, the dazzling wide receiver of the Pittsburgh Steelers, is not fazed a bit by doing double duty. He also returns punts, usually regarded as the most dangerous job on the field.

"Returning punts is something I've been doing since I started playing football," Lipps said. "It's a hard habit for me to break. I know all the risks involved, the injuries and all that. But I don't let myself think of them. I think of all the good things that can happen, like breaking one for a long return. That makes me go hard and keeps me away from injuries."

Herd sophomores beat Clovis, 64-51

Hereford High School's sophomore boys' basketball team built up a 35-20 halftime lead over Clovis, N.M., and went on to post a 64-51 victory Tuesday night in a game played in Hereford.

The victory ups the HHS sophomores' season record to 8-5. Their next action will be on Saturday, Jan. 25, when they will play two home games—against Amarillo High School at 10 a.m. and against Tascosa High School at 2 p.m.

Raymond Romo and Bobby Robbins scored in doubles figures to lead Hereford to its 64-51 win over Clovis. Romo led the way with 15 points, and Robbins scored 13 points.

Other Hereford scorers included Marcus Brown with eight points, Chad Clements with six points, and Ross Torres, Jason Bullard, Arturo Martinez, and John Streun each with four points.

Gooden is named AP male athlete-of-year

By JOHN NELSON
AP Baseball Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Dwight Gooden of the New York Mets, the youngest player ever to win baseball's Cy Young Award, today was named The Associated Press Male Athlete of the Year for 1985, capturing the 55-year-old award by a substantial margin over Chicago Bears running back Walter Payton.

Gooden, a 21-year-old right-hander who led the major leagues in victories, strikeouts and earned run average last season, received 53 votes in balloting by sports writers and broadcasters nationwide. A total of 221 votes were cast.

Payton was second with 39 votes, followed by stock car driver Bill Elliott with 25, Cincinnati Reds player-manager Pete Rose with 23 and Los Angeles Lakers center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar with 20.

Gooden was the first baseball player to win the award since 1979, when it was given to Willie Stargell of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

"It's different from the Cy Young because it includes all players from different sports in every event, and you pick the best one," said Gooden, who will be presented with the Athlete of the Year trophy Feb. 21 in his hometown of Tampa, Fla. "It's something I will always cherish." Gooden was named the National League's Cy Young winner last Nov. 13, three days before turning 21, after a season in which he went 24-4 with 268 strikeouts and an earned run average of 1.53. He put together a string of 14 straight victories from May 30-Aug. 25, and he went 31 consecutive innings from Aug. 31-Sept. 21 without allowing a run.

On Aug. 25, he became the youngest pitcher in modern history to win 20 games, reaching the milestone at 20 years, 9 months, 9 days old, and he posted the highest winning percentage in the National League (.857) since Preacher Roe went 22-3 (.880) for the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1951.

Soft-spoken and seldom given to hyperbole, Gooden rarely has tried to explain his own success. He has left that to others.

Tesuque family carves folk art

TESUQUE, N.M. (AP) — Stacks of gnarled cottonwood logs lay waiting for the chain saws and chisels of three generations of a Tesuque family who carve a menagerie of colorful animals from antelopes to zebras.

The thriving family business began in the early 1960s when Felipe Archuleta went into carving after unsuccessfully hunting for a job.

"I prayed to God and he told me what to do," said Archuleta.

Now 75, he has cut down on the number of figures he carves because of his age. But his son Leroy Archuleta, 37, and his grandson Ron Rodriguez, 17, carry on the tradition.

The elder Archuleta, who had worked as a cook, finish carpenter and stone mason, first carved an ox. The folk art figures he and his family make now are shipped nationwide, he said.

"It's word-of-mouth — we never do any advertising," said Leroy Archuleta, who began fashioning the figures in 1970.

"We can't keep up with the demand," said Rodriguez, who joined his grandfather and uncle in the trade eight years ago.

Leroy Archuleta said they fell dead cottonwood trees, which they cut into logs of various sizes.

"We use the whole tree," he said. "They're (cottonwood trees) nice to work with. They've got to be dry, though. If they're not dry, they will crack."

The carvers look at the shape of a tree or log, envisioning an animal within.

The animals are born in a studio, its dirt floor littered with wood shavings, its tables crowded with paint cans and glue.

The elder Archuleta starts with an ax to rough out his figures, but his son and grandson take a modern short cut — chain saws.

The animals are finished with grinders, hand rasps and sandpaper. Features are painted on. Eyes are marbles, sometimes pryed out of spray paint cans. Claws are cut from rubber cable sheathing. Whiskers are frizzled rope.

"Everything goes," Leroy Archuleta said.

He said he bases his work on photographs or drawings.

"Here's the picture I usually go by when carving a wild turkey," he said, hefting an empty bottle of liquor with a picture of a turkey on the label.

The three family members have carved many different kinds of animals — pigs and porcupines, coyotes and cats, rams and rhinos, bears and badgers, fish and owl, gorillas and gazelles.

So many, in fact, they said they never really kept count.

"My father once carved a lynx, and the teeth were crooked and spaced far apart, so he named it Leon Lynx," Leroy Archuleta said.

"I ain't got no favorite," he said. "Everytime I do a new piece, it's my favorite one. I'd like to keep them all, but I also need the money."

Figures usually sell for $100 to $800, he said.

"Once they (customers) see one, they want another. When people come by, they see them and want more," Leroy Archuleta said. "We have standing orders."

Rodriguez said coyotes and pigs are the most popular animals.

The younger Archuleta said the largest carving he created was a 16-foot giraffe.

Rodriguez spent a week in August carving an eight-foot dragon, coated with green paint, resplendent with red and yellow stripes.

He said he liked wood carving because "there's nobody on your back."

"I worked in a pet shop once, and they told me to cut my hair. I couldn't handle it," Rodriguez said. "It was an OK job, but this is better."

The Pentagon

The Pentagon, headquarters for the Department of Defense, is the world's largest building, twice the size of the Merchandise Mart in Chicago (with three times more floor space than the Empire State building in New York). The Pentagon houses 22,000 employees in offices that occupy 3.7 million square feet.

South Africans domesticated the ostrich in 1863 for the bird's fashionable plumes.

Widow ponders fate as pension pushes her past guidelines

McGREGOR, Texas (AP) — When Alma Bass, 71, was notified recently that she now is eligible for a pension from the Veterans Administration, she was pleased.

Before long, however, the McGregor widow was wishing she'd never heard the good news.

Officials told her the pension pushed her income about $50 above a state cutoff, so that she is now ineligible to receive Medicaid. That means, she says, that she can no longer afford the cost of her care at Westview Manor Nursing Home here.

To make the situation worse, if Mrs. Bass leaves the nursing home, her VA pension will be reduced by $79. That's because her medical expenses would no longer offset her income, said J.J. Apodaca, veterans service officer for the Veterans Administration regional office in Waco.

She would like to just refuse the VA pension, but that's not permitted either, Apodaca said. She would be ruled ineligible for Medicaid because of guidelines that require a person to take advantage of any benefit he is entitled to before he can qualify for Medicaid.

Hank Smith of McGregor, a family friend who has taken up Mrs. Bass' battle with appeals to the Texas Department of Human Resources, says he can't believe what she's going through.

"They force you to cut your own throats," Smith told the Waco Tribune-Herald. "The VA Improvement Pension Program is designed to deny benefits rather than take care of the needy, sick and helpless."

G.W. Vaughn, a service officer for the American Legion in Waco, has tried to find a solution for the woman's problems, and admits, "It's a vicious cycle."

Vaughn added, "It's a classic case of federal laws and state Medicaid laws in conflict. The very real possibility exists this could go round and round in circles. It's an awful sad situation."

Vaughn's only suggestion for Mrs. Bass was to try to find a nursing home she could afford on her monthly pension and Social Security income. Smith said none could be found.

Apodaca said there is nothing the VA can do about Mrs. Bass' situation, even if Mrs. Bass agreed to a reduction in her VA pension. He said her pension could not be reduced enough to make any difference in her Medicaid eligibility.

"We don't have any authority to put her in a VA hospital or another nursing home," he said. "We are paying what the law states we can pay. Unfortunately that conflicts with some other agency. I wish there was some adjustment that could be made."

Refusing pension would cut her Medicaid

Smith and Mrs. Bass' brother, Reinhard Boerner of McGregor, appealed Tuesday during a hearing with Department of Human Resources officials to make some adjustment in her case, which Smith described as a case of "widow whacking."

VA officials notified Mrs. Bass last year that under the VA Improved Pension Plan she was eligible to receive $525 a month, Apodaca said.

Mrs. Bass receives $368 a month in Social Security which, combined with the VA pension, pushes her income above the $650.20 Medicaid limit. About $191 of the pension does not apply toward Mrs. Bass' income total for eligibility purposes, Smith said, because it is earmarked for Aid in Attendance, to pay nursing home costs.

Mrs. Bass suffers from arthritis, congenitive heart failure and epilepsy, and a doctor has "strongly recommended" that she remain in a nursing home, Smith said during the hearing.

She has no children, only elderly brothers, and no one to help her should she have to return home, he said.

DHR hearing officer Kathy Cox said she will make a decision on Mrs. Bass' case within 10 days. Unless some adjustment is made, Mrs. Bass may have to leave the nursing home Jan. 31, unless an extension is granted through February.

"Quite frankly, we don't know how to handle (such cases)," said Bob Conkright of the Texas Health Care Association. "DHR is being very sticky with the rules these days — they're generally going by the letter of the law."

"I know of no alternatives outside of political pressure," Conkright said.

Smith has contacted U.S. Rep. Marvin Leath, D-Waco, State Sen. Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville, and State Rep. M.A. Taylor, R-Waco, about Mrs. Bass' case. A representative of Taylor's office attended part of Tuesday's hearing. Melody Chatelle, legislative assistant to Edwards, said she had contacted high-ranking DHR officials about the case.

Vaughn and Conkright said they know of few similar cases, but said they expect more of such cases in the future, unless some laws are changed.

"As veterans get older and we see more and more vets getting into nursing homes — that indicates we'll see more and more of these cases," Vaughn said.

As of September 1984, 16 percent of the 27.9 million veterans in the United States were over the age of 65, Vaughn said.

NOTICE BY PUBLICATION STATE OF TEXAS
TO: David Hernandez GREETINGS:
YOU ARE HEREBY COMMANDED to appear and answer before the Honorable 22nd Judicial District Court, Deaf Smith County, Texas, at the courthouse of said county in Hereford, Texas, at or before 10:00 o'clock a.m. of the Monday next after the expiration of 20 days from the date of service of this citation, then and there to answer the petition of Texas Department of Human Resources Petitioner, filed in said Court on the 10 day of January, 1986 against David Hernandez Respondent, and said suit being numbered DR-86A-001 FileA on the docket of said Court, and entitled in the interest of Amy Linda Hernandez, a child the nature of which suit is a request for temporary orders in suit affecting the parent-child relationship. Said child was born the 9 day of July, 1981, in Deaf Smith County Texas.

The Court has the authority in this suit to enter any judgment or decree in the child, interest which will be binding upon you including but not necessarily limited to, the termination of the parent-child relationship, the determination of paternity, and the appointment of a conservator with authority to consent to the child's adoption.

Issued and given under my hand and seal of said Court at Hereford, Texas, this 10th day of January, 1986.

Lola Faye Veazey
Clerk of the District Court
Deaf Smith County, Texas

WHY, THAT'S AMAZING!

Peter said, "I'm sure you have heard about the Good News for the people of Israel—that there is peace with God through Jesus, the Messiah, who is Lord of all creation. This message has spread all through Judea, beginning with John the Baptist in Galilee. And you no doubt know that Jesus of Nazareth was anointed by God with the Holy Spirit and with power, and He went around doing good and healing all who were possessed by demons, for God was with Him. And we apostles are witnesses of all He did throughout Israel and in Jerusalem, where He was murdered on a cross.

"But God brought Him back to life again three days later and showed Him to certain witnesses God had selected beforehand—not to the general public, but to us who ate and drank with Him after He rose from the dead. All all the prophets have written about Him, saying that everyone who believes in Him will have their sins forgiven through His name."

Even as Peter was saying these things, the Holy Spirit fell upon all those listening!

The Jews who came with Peter were amazed that the gift of the Holy Spirit would be given to the Gentiles too! But there could be no doubt about it, for they heard them speaking in tongues and praising God.

Peter asked, "Can anyone object to my baptizing them, now that they have received the Holy Spirit just as we did?" So he did, baptizing them in the name of Jesus, the Messiah.

Afterwards Cornelius begged him to stay with them several days.

Acts 10:36-48

Program leads students to use other senses

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Each day as 7-year-old Lizzie Phillips searches for her reading class at Corey Elementary, her gait slows and a look of concentration clouds her face.

She listens intently to the cheery chatter coming from each classroom along the extended hallway.

Her main clue is the sound of her teacher's voice. Today, though, the teacher isn't talking and Lizzie walks right past the room.

When she reaches a part of the hallway that dips steeply downward, she stops. That is her second clue.

"That's right, you've gone too far," says Jana Almqvist, one of the district's four teachers for the visually handicapped.

After a quick about-face, Lizzie strolls confidently into the correct room.

"She's been working really hard at listening to what's around her and recognizing her classroom," said Ms. Almqvist.

Lizzie is one of the 50 visually impaired students in the Arlington Independent School District.

She is also a product of the district's main emphasis on special education students mainstreaming.

Mainstreaming strives to help special education students participate in regular classes and student activities.

"Our goal is that they develop a great deal of independence," said Margie Gunther, director of special education. "They are not segregated from their peers at all."

The school district seems to have done so well at mainstreaming that some parents of special education students who move to the area settle in Arlington because of its first-rate program.

The Phillipses moved to Arlington 3 1/2 years ago from Waxahachie. "We came to Arlington because of the schools," said Rhonda Phillips, Lizzie's mother.

While in Waxahachie, Lizzie was enrolled in pre-school classes at Dallas Services for the Visually Impaired from the time she was 2 years old.

"I finally decided I didn't want to do that forever," Mrs. Phillips said.

She and her husband, Gary, checked out the special education programs of area school districts. Arlington and Richardson came out on top, she said.

They chose Arlington because they had lived here in the past.

"It's just been wonderful," Mrs. Phillips said. "Her progress has been amazing."

Mainstreaming requires a cooperative effort between special education and regular teachers, Ms. Almqvist said.

"It takes a very special person to adapt," she said. "We try to help the teachers as much as possible."

For Lizzie to participate in regular classes, Ms. Almqvist receives her assignments several days ahead of time from her teachers and puts them in a binder for her. She also translates her homework papers from braille into writing so each teacher can grade them.

The district has invested funds in providing up-to-date equipment for the visually handicapped students to use.

This semester, Lizzie has been learning to use an abacus, which allows her to read material that is not in braille.

The $5,000 device consists of a small, closed circuit that converts pictures into tactile impulses.

Students place an index finger on a sensing device and are able to feel words spelled out through vibrating impulses.

"It tickles," said Lizzie, who has mastered many letters and a few words on the machine.

Education for the visually impaired is available for children from birth through age 21.

"A lot of people don't know that right from the minute they are identified as visually impaired they can get services," Ms. Almqvist said.

She stressed the importance of parents getting help early for their sight-disabled children.

"Ninety percent of everything an infant learns is through the visual sense," Ms. Almqvist said.

The teachers currently work with five infants.

"Most of our students are low vision," said Ms. Almqvist. "It's just a matter of teaching them how to use adaptive equipment."

Low vision students learn to use telescopes and magnifiers to read blackboards and street signs.

Keema McClung, the orientation and mobility teacher for the district, helps students use their other senses to find their way around.

"We want them to be able to travel as comfortably, as safely and as confidently as possible," she said.

When Lizzie changed schools this year, her orientation and mobility teacher spent many days before school helping her learn how to find her classrooms, the restrooms and the lunchroom.

"We begin with the simple and go to the more complicated," Ms. McClung said. "We start out with a room, then go to a home, a neighborhood, a classroom, or a mall."

The first week of school, all of Lizzie's classmates received instruction on how to guide her when the class goes to the lunchroom or on field trips.

Now, several of her classmates argue over who gets to take her to lunch.

Mrs. Phillips attributes much of that to the mainstreaming program.

"Instead of worrying about the kids accepting her, the kids just love her," Mrs. Phillips said.

Ms. Almqvist said she gets positive comments from the students about the program.

"They like to be able to go to school with their brother or sister, or a friend. They feel like one of the kids, and pretty much, they are," she said.

"It makes them have a positive attitude.

"Eventually, where are they going to be, but out there in the mainstream. It just prepares them for what's down the road."

The Soviet Union said it had provided more than $1 billion in military aid to underdeveloped nations in 1971.

In 1978, nearly 900 members of the People's Temple sect died in the Jonestown Massacre in Guyana.

In a 1980 speech on arms control, President Reagan offered to cancel plans to deploy American intermediate-range missiles in Europe if the Soviets dismantled comparable weapons.

President John F. Kennedy was assassinated Nov. 22, 1963, as he rode in a motorcade in Dallas.

California still most expensive place to buy

WASHINGTON (AP) — California upheld its reputation of having the highest housing costs in the nation last year, with San Francisco ranking No. 1, and two other West Coast cities rated among the top five, according to a study released today.

Homes in the San Francisco metropolitan area sold last year for a median price of $152,000, more than twice the national median price of $75,000, the U.S. League of Savings Institutions reported.

The median is the midpoint, with half the homes selling for more and half for less.

The league based its rankings of 46 metropolitan areas on information pulled from 16,300 conventional mortgage loans made by member associations.

After San Francisco, the most expensive area for home purchases was New York City with a median sales price of $129,700, followed by Boston, $126,000; Los Angeles, $123,000; and Anaheim-Santa Ana-Garden Grove, Calif., with a median sales price last year of $122,000.

At the other end of the scale, some of the cheapest housing was found in the Midwest, where a depressed economy has contributed to holding down home costs.

The least expensive city among those surveyed was Pittsburgh, where the median price of a home was $54,152, followed by Dayton, Ohio, $54,750; Cincinnati, $55,300; Bloomington-Normal, Ill., $55,900, and Akron, Ohio, and Reading, Pa., both with median home prices last year of $56,000.

The typical American buying a median-priced home of $75,000 last year made a downpayment of $14,000, representing just under 20 percent of the cost of the mortgage, leaving a monthly mortgage payment of $73.

To the mortgage payment was added $75 for real estate taxes, $100 for electricity and other utility costs and $22 for insurance coverage for a total monthly median housing expense of $770 last year, according to the league survey.

At the most extreme, the median monthly housing expense in San Francisco was $1,370 compared with $673 in Pittsburgh.
