'If I had one wish...'

Leaders reveal dreams for 1992

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

"If wishes were horses, beggars would ride..." and Hereford and Deaf Smith County would enjoy economic and family stability in the future.

As a new year arrives, several residents were asked what their "wish" would be for 1992, either for themselves and their families, or for their community.

A deep concern for their hometown came through as to a person, each voiced a desire to see Hereford and Deaf Smith County grow and prosper.

Said County Judge Tom Simons:

"I wish that the entire community would work together to make this a hustlin', bustlin' place, economically and every other way."

Similarly, Michael Carr, executive vice president of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce, said:

"My hope is for the entire community to work together for a common purpose -- making Hereford and Deaf Smith County as progressive as possible."

Hereford Mayor Tom LeGate wants the best that can be for his community:

"I wish for prosperity for the entire community... I see the recession as such an intimidating factor, I wish we could be insulated from those economic woes."

A civic worker and Hereford businesswoman, LaJean Henry, combines her family and community concerns:

"I'd love to see my family have good health and I especially would love to see us get some new industry and business... we have a good community rapport and it would be wonderful if the economic situation would improve."

A resident of Hereford only since August, City Manager Chester Nolen has high hopes for his new hometown:

"I'd like to see the business we have stabilized and solidified... so we can find our 'place in the sun,' bring the business or industry to make it happen."

Deaf Smith County Justice of the Peace Johnnie Turrentine wants the best for the youth and adults of the community.

"I'd love for our community to thrive, for farming to get better and for less crime here. Wouldn't it be wonderful to see Main Street and the mall the way they used to be!"

More population growth is a wish expressed by Don Cumpton, Hereford Independent School District administrator.

"I wish for prosperity for everyone. I hope the community keeps growing and progressing. Hopefully, we'll get some things that will help us do that."

O.G. (Speedy) Nieman, chairman of the committee working to bring a 1,000-bed prison to the county, hopes for success in the coming year:

"I hope we have the health and energy to work for the betterment of our community, in every way."

Judge David Wesley Gulley of 222nd District Court has a wish for his community that is universal:

Lyons is top officer

Ronnie Lyons has been named police officer of the year by the Hereford Police Department. Lyons was chosen by his fellow officers for his team spirit, dedication to law enforcement and conduct which brings integrity and favorable light upon the police department. Lyons received the personal plaque shown, and his name will be added to the permanent plaque at the police station. Lyons also received a gift certificate.

WTSU hopes to close the book

CANYON, Texas (AP) - West Texas State University is calm now, as students and faculty are on holiday from the just completed fall semester.

But before the calm, there was a storm on this attractive, little Panhandle campus, where many have been consumed by the end of an important chapter in their own school's history: a seven-year era plagued by allegations of McCarthyism and financial mismanagement, which resulted in this month's indictment of the school's former president.

Ed Roach, who presided over the school for 6 1/2 years before stepping down Dec. 31, 1990, was indicted along with Clarence Thompson, former vice president for finance administrative services, and university controller Gary Barnes on charges of using scholarship money to cover school budget shortfalls.

Roach, who is currently associate deputy chancellor for academic program planning with the Texas A&M University System in College Station, was booked and released Dec. 17 from the Randall County jail on a $5,000 personal bond.

He has refused to comment about the charges. Students and faculty say the indictments interrupted progress to move away from Roach's maligned regime, which included what some contend was an almost incestuous business relationship with Dallas oilman T. Boone Pickens.

Pickens served as chairman of the school's board of regents until West Texas State merged with the Texas A&M System in September 1990. "It's been a bad time for West Texas State," said student body president Jared Knight. "But hopefully these latest events will be the end."

"WT was ready to leave that era behind a while ago. And I think we have made great strides to move forward." Former West Texas State regent Nolon Henson defended Roach, saying, "I was disappointed in the indictment. I think they will have a hard time proving it."

Bruce Grimes, former vice president for external affairs and former athletic director, also stood up for the indicted men. "I think they are good people. I've had a lot of dealings with all three, and they've always been above board, honest and fair with me," Grimes told the Amarillo Daily News.

And an attorney for Pickens called the indictments "disgusting," and the result of a "hate fight."

"Those who wanted Ed Roach's blood, wanted his job, are fueled by such hatred that when they got it, now they want some of his flesh," said Jim Besselman.

"The tragedy is that these three men - Roach and Clarence Thompson and Gary Barnes - did nothing to profit themselves," Besselman said. "Three sets of auditors have gone over the books - the state auditors office, Arthur Anderson (paid for by Pickens and Mesa, and the A&M auditors - and not one penny was diverted to the pockets of Roach, Clarence Thompson and Gary Barnes."

The problems at West Texas State began in May 1986, when Roach released a plan for the university that called for sweeping cutbacks and a complete reorganization of several departments to help endure a depressed economy.

1991 was a very unique year here

The year 1991 will go down as one of the most unique in the history not only of the world, which saw the fall of the Soviet Union, nor of the United States, which saw the country at war in January and at its most peaceful time (perhaps in the country's history) in December, but also in Hereford and Deaf Smith County.

The city and county seemed to be plagued by what some called a recession and others a depression for much of the year. By year's end, the city seemed to be rejuvenated by a widespread effort to obtain a new state prison in the county.

The county was touched by war as many persons from Hereford, or with Hereford connections, headed for the Middle East. Almost all returned to Hereford later in the year for special welcome-home celebrations climaxing in a huge July 4th celebration at Veterans Park.

The year marked milestones for many: a new manufacturing facility opened as a subsidiary of Poarch Brothers, and an ion exclusion facility valued at more than $13 million was completed at Holly Sugar. There was more expansion at Hereford Bi-Products (with the promise of more to come).

There were new faces replacing old: Ron Rives became the new administrator at Deaf Smith General Hospital as DSGH launched a new affiliation with Lubbock Methodist Hospital. Darwin McGill retired as city manager and was replaced by Chester Nolen. Don Cumpton, who had twice guided Hereford football teams to the state semifinals, received an offer he couldn't refuse, and longtime assistant Danny Haney took over the head job.

It was also a time of loss, including Doug Josseland, who was Chamber president in 1990, killed in a boating accident during the summer of 1991, depriving us of a young leader and a good friend; James Hull, president of Deaf Smith Electric Cooperative and civic leader, who lost a long battle with cancer; Charles Watson, Hereford funeral director and civic leader who suffered a heart attack; Gwen London, who had served as county librarian for many years; Bob Wear, long-time minister at Central Church of Christ whose column, "The Abundant Life," was a regular feature in the Brand, and David Emerick, a civic leader in many areas who lost his battle with cancer.

Here are some of the highlights during year from the Hereford Brand.

Coming Tuesday: A review of the year from July through December.

Editor's note: The foreword for this article was written by Managing Editor John Brooks. The research through back issues of the Brand was done by Staff Writer Lindsay Radford. She is a senior at Hereford High School and is a part-time member of the newspaper's staff. She is planning to study journalism at either Northwestern or Missouri (she's been accepted at both), the top two journalism colleges in the nation.

Besselman disputes that. "Someone fibbed to the grand jury," he said.

Faculty in the T. Boone Pickens College of Business voted overwhelmingly last year to remove Pickens name from the school.

Gary Kelly, associate dean of the business school, refused to comment about current sentiments toward Pickens.

But one business professor in computer information services, who asked not to be identified, said many still oppose Pickens.

"If you polled all the faculty in the business college, they would still want Pickens' name disassociated," the professor said. "There is still animosity."

"Roach and Pickens handled things like good ole boys. They did whatever was best for them, not what was best for the school."

That's "an infantile statement," Besselman said. "To say that a guy would give his time and service on the Board of Regents was in his best interest shows classic naivete."

Besselman attributes the battle to Roach's attempt to impose a more corporate-style structure to the school instead of the "tenured professor role."

Current West Texas State president Barry Thompson, who took over for Roach Jan. 1, declined to comment about the indictments, saying the men "are innocent until proven guilty."

Thompson said the school will focus on the future by attempting to bring football back as a non-scholarship sport next fall.

Thompson has demanded an open-door policy throughout the campus and a state audit this summer showed West Texas State is back on track financially.

"We are not looking back," Thompson said. "We will continue to move forward and make progress, just as we have for the past 11 months."

Promoted at Hereford State Bank

The board of directors of Hereford State Bank announced this week the promotions of (from left) Debbie Holmes, Opal Walterscheid and Debbie Gonzalez to assistant cashier and Charlene Sanders to assistant vice president.

HSB promotes four

The board of directors of Hereford State Bank has announced the election of Debbie Holmes, Debbie Gonzalez and Opal Walterscheid to the position of assistant cashier and the promotion of Charlene Sanders from assistant cashier to assistant vice president.

The promotions were announced last week by Craig Smith, chief executive officer and president of HSB, to become effective Jan. 1.

Holmes has been associated with Hereford State Bank for 12 years and is currently in the commercial loan department. Holmes and her husband, Richard, have two daughters, Jenifer and Tarabeth, and are members of First Christian church. She is the memorial chairperson for the American Cancer Society.

Gonzalez has been associated with Hereford State Bank for 14 years and is currently a note teller in the installment loan department. Her husband, Armando, is employed at Holly Sugar. They have three children: Vanessa, 16, Ashley, 8, and Mackenzie, 3.

Walterscheid has been with Hereford State Bank for 22 years and is currently an inside teller. She and her husband, Leonard, have one son, five daughters and nine grandchilddren. She is a member of St. Anthony's Catholic Church.

Sanders has been with Hereford State Bank for eight years and is currently the supervisor in the commercial loan department and secretary for Craig Smith. Her husband, Ed, is the head of the service department for Brandon & Clark Electric in Hereford. They have two children, Lori and Stacey, who are students at Hereford High School. She is the American Heart Association's memorial chairperson and is a high school religious education teacher at St. Anthony's.

WISHES

"If I have one wish, its for moral and economic stability and advancement. I would encourage people to be responsible for their actions and to help other people."

If the proposal for locating a prison here bears fruit, Raymond Schroeder, president of the Deaf Smith Hospital District, sees some special benefits.

"Right off, I'd wish for a prison to be built here and for Deaf Smith General Hospital to become more financially secure, with more use by the community."

Those assets that make a community more attractive to new business and industry are the basis of a "wish"

by Lewis McDaniel, of Southwestern Public Service.

"In my opinion, the thing that would help more than anything is improvement of the quality of life; for instance improved medical facilities and physicians, park and street improvement, entertainment... these are things that business and industry look at. Anything we can do to improve the quality of life will help."

Deaf Smith County Treasurer Vesta Mae Nunley has a very simple wish for 1991:

"I simply hope for a prosperous New Year for everyone in Hereford and Deaf Smith County. I don't think I have to elaborate on that."

WTSU

But in the midst of these cutbacks, the school's board of regents allowed construction costs for a new home for the school's president to hit $991,000, which was $496,600 more than the amount approved by the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board.

The campus was outraged and nicknamed the house "the Roach motel." More than 80 percent of the faculty voted "no-confidence" in Roach. Pickens and Roach blamed the Amarillo Globe-News, which reported the over-spending.

From that point on, faculty claim Roach was reluctant to cooperate with the media and Pickens began a campaign against the Globe-News, urging readers and advertisers to boycott the newspapers.

According to a Randall County grand jury's report, Roach was using scholarship money to cover deficits in athletics as early as 1986.

The shortfalls in athletics forced the school to disband its football program this year.

"We knew we weren't crazy," psychology professor Gary Byrd said of the no-confidence vote. "We just couldn't get anyone to listen to us. At least not at first."

Byrd, who served as faculty senate president near the end of Roach's tenure, has been one of the most vocal critics of Roach and Pickens.

Byrd said he speaks on behalf of dozens of faculty who claim the two men used bully tactics to stifle open discussion on important decisions and crammed through their own agenda for the school.

"The checks and balances were completely shut down under Roach and Pickens," Byrd said. "They were so quick to quiet criticizing voices that after awhile, none of the faculty were talking to each other about the problems. It was like living in the McCarthy era."

With morale plummeting, Byrd helped develop an underground newspaper decrying a lack of academic freedom on campus. The paper, called The Rest of the Prairie, included a cartoon with bumbling caricatures of Ed Roach and T. Boone named "Fred Poach" and "Tycoon."

The paper, which drew a libel suit from Roach in February 1988 that was later dropped, also celebrated the first anniversary of Roach's no-confidence vote.

"We did it for morale," said Byrd, editor of the paper. "It was humor, so a lot of the faculty embraced it. It allowed us to let off some of the steam by laughing together."

A state audit released in April cited school leaders for mismanagement of a $1.5 million matching-fund endowment given to the school in 1987 by Pickens and his oil and gas company, Mesa Limited Partnership.

The endowment helped lead the board to rename West Texas State's college of business after Pickens. But the school failed to raise the matching funds and gave $800,000 back to Pickens and Mesa.

But attorney Besselman notes that the school kept more than $750,000. "Because it was the 'in' thing to do to hate Ed Roach, for that gift, Mesa and Pickens were investigated by the grand jury," Besselman said.

The Randall County grand jury said evidence shows there was no attempt by the school to match the funds.

"It is even more inconceivable that neither the board of regents nor Dr. Roach made any effort to notify those normally in charge of raising funds for matching these endowments..." according to the grand jury's report.

Killeen massacre tops Texas stories in 1991

DALLAS (AP) - Survivors of George Hennard's bloody rampage through a crowded cafeteria said the few minutes seemed like hours. For the families of 23 victims killed in the nation's deadliest mass shooting, the pain will last forever.

The Oct. 16 massacre at the Luby's Cafeteria in Killeen, which shocked the nation and traumatized Texans, was voted the state's top 1991 news story in a poll of editors at Texas newspapers and broadcast stations.

The massacre received more votes than the Gulf War's effect on Texas, the state's battle with school finance reform and Ann Richards' successful fight to legalize a state lottery.

Police never did find out why Hennard, 35, drove his dark blue pickup through the front of the Killeen Luby's, where 100 or more patrons were eating lunch. Several were attending "Boss's Day" celebrations.

Some witnesses said Hennard shouted "This is what Bell County has done to me!" when he emerged from the truck. The next thing he did was shoot a man whose table he had bowled over.

He then began walking around the restaurant in circles, unloading the two 9mm semiautomatic pistols, a Glock 17 and a Ruger P89.

"It was boom! boom! boom! The shots weren't real fast. He seemed very calm," said Luby's employee Angela Wilson.

"He looked right at me and pointed the pistol," said Sam Wink. "I thought I bought the farm but a lady close to me got up to run. He turned and fired at her."

Before Hennard used his last bullet to kill himself, the gunman had spent six magazines that, if full, contained 96 rounds. He had killed 22 people. More than 20 more people were injured, including one who died the next day.

Some of the injured were taken to nearby Fort Hood, where military doctors compared the carnage to the Persian Gulf War.

The war's effect on Texas was voted the second biggest story of 1991. Thousands of Texans went to the Persian Gulf to help oust Iraqi troops from Kuwait.

The war began during the evening news on Jan. 16 as waves of U.S. attack planes bombed Baghdad. The United States and its allies launched a massive ground assault against Iraqi troops on Feb. 23. Four days later, President Bush declared victory.

The following weeks and months were filled with joy for many Texans

Texas' top 10 stories for '91

- DALLAS (AP) - Here are the top ten Texas news stories as selected by Texas editors and broadcast.
1. CAFETERIA MASSACRE - George Hennard drives through a Luby's cafeteria window in Killeen, and opens fire on the lunchtime crowd, killing 23 before using his last bullet to kill himself. It is the nation's worst mass shooting. (31)
 2. GULF-TEXAS - The Persian Gulf war touched many Texans as the state's military installations sent thousands of soldiers to fight Saddam Hussein. (7)
 3. SCHOOL FINANCE - The state finally gets a revamped school finance law that requires rich districts to help fund their poor neighbors, but the rich districts start their own challenge to the law.
 4. STATE LOTTERY - Voters, finally given the chance to vote on a state lottery, overwhelming approve the numbers game to help raise state revenue.
 5. STATE BUDGET - The state continues to struggle with tightening finances. Legislators finally raise various taxes $2.7 billion, and look to a state lottery, to close the budget gap.
 6. UNEASY ECONOMY - Texas Instruments, Frito-Lay, Halliburton and Oryx Energy lay off thousands of workers as do hundreds of smaller firms across the state. Texas' quarterly unemployment rate climbs.
 7. CHEERLEADER HITMAN - A woman is accused of hiring a hitman to kill the mother of her daughter's cheerleading rival. She was convicted, but has won a new trial.
 8. SPEAKER INDICTED - Gib Lewis, longtime speaker of the Texas House of Representatives, continues to battle misdemeanor ethics charges. Lewis hints he will seek re-election.
 9. DALLAS TIMES HERALD - After 112 years, the Dallas Times Herald ceases publication.
 10. CENSUS BATTLES - The results of the 1990 census set up changes in governments all across Texas. Hispanics challenge the numbers, which the government admits understate minority populations.

who welcomed their family members home from the Gulf. For 17 Texas families, there were burials with military honors instead of homecomings.

The casualties of war also included the economies of cities, such as Killeen, El Paso and San Angelo, that rely heavily on their military bases for a living.

The continuing battle to restructure the economies of cities, such as Killeen, El Paso and San Angelo, that rely heavily on their military bases for a living.

The so-called "Robin Hood" school finance plan, which involved shifting tax dollars from wealthy school districts to poor ones, was enacted 23 years after the poor Edgewood Independent School District brought a lawsuit.

Shortly after the plan was implemented last September, hundreds of school districts faced sharp reductions in state aid, while poor districts reported modest gains.

Now there is speculation in Austin that the Texas Supreme Court may rule the system unconstitutional. Richards says she's tired of the fight and suggests that the court write the next funding plan.

"Let 'em go ahead and do their own plans," she said. "I really think that the sentiment of the public has had it to here with every single thing we do being litigious."

Texans took a chance in November, voting nearly 2-to-1 in favor of a state lottery that is expected to generate $1 million a day for the state Treasury.

Comptroller John Sharp, whose office will run the lottery, says instant scratch-card games should be available this summer. The big-money, computerized "lotto" games should start by January 1993.

Approval of the lottery, which was strongly backed by Richards, followed months of bickering over whether it would help shore up budget problems and whether the state should turn to gambling to avert new taxes.

Sen. John Leedom, Texas' oldest senator at 70, staged the most ballyhooed filibuster in years in an attempt to sink the lottery. His marathon speech in August lasted 7 hours and 17 minutes. After he quit, senators approved the lottery measure, 22-5.

In a trial that drew national attention, a 37-year-old Channelview woman portrayed as the "ultimate stage mother" drew 15 years in prison for trying to arrange a hitman to kill the mother of her daughter's cheerleading rival.

But a state district judge granted a new trial for Wanda Webb Holloway because one of her jurors should have been disqualified. A new trial date has not been set.

The tribulations of House Speaker Gib Lewis finished eighth. Lewis, who was indicted in December 1990 on two misdemeanor ethics charges, is tentatively set to go on trial in late January.

The speaker is charged with accepting a gift from a powerful San Antonio law firm and failing to report the gift on public disclosure statements. He denies any wrongdoing.

The ninth-biggest story was the demise of one of the state's largest newspapers, the Dallas Times Herald. The Dallas Morning News bought the newspaper's assets for $55 million on Dec. 8 and the last edition rolled off the press Dec. 9, ending 112 years of publication.

Times Herald staffers had heard rumors that the newspaper was in danger of folding for years, but the sale surprised most of them.

"I guess I shouldn't say I'm shocked, but I am," said business writer Helen Bond. "It's just a tough time all over.... We've been writing about all these companies laying off people and now we are, too."

A challenge of 1990 census counts ranked 10th.

The state is suing the federal government for $1 billion it says rightfully belongs to Texans. The U.S. Census Bureau has estimated that its 1990 count missed more than 5 million people nationwide, including more than half a million in Texas.

The census estimates a Texas population of 16.9 million. State officials say it should be at least 17.5 million, adding that many of those missed were blacks and Hispanics living in urban areas and South Texas.

- Thanks to all our many friends and customers for allowing us the opportunity serve you.

1991 a history lesson for ages

EDITOR'S NOTE - It was one for the books. Here's an unconventional review of an unlikely year.

By MITCHELL LANDSBERG
Associated Press Writer

A lecture to the class of 2091: Wake up, cyberpunks! Remove the virtual reality gloves! Prepare for history!

Today's subject is 1991, the year of the Persian Gulf War. This, believe it or not, was once considered one of the world's swiftest and most lopsided military victories.

And 1991 was the year an empire collapsed in what was then the Soviet Union. That ended the Cold War, which you'll remember from your studies of the 1950s and '60s.

If you opened a newspaper or turned on a television or radio in 1991, you'd have heard about George Bush, Mikhail Gorbachev, Saddam Hussein, Norman Schwarzkopf,

But more about them later. Let's put things in perspective. We're talking about a period of tremendous global change, change that came at an almost unprecedented pace. As 1991 began, the Soviet empire was shrinking. East Germany, Poland, Hungary, Czechoslovakia - all had left the Soviet sphere in the previous year and a half. The United States was left as the world's only superpower.

But the United States had its hands full, too. Its economy wasn't doing very well. Millions were without jobs, hundreds of thousands without homes. As New Year's rolled around, we had an American people disturbed about their nation's drift and jittery about the prospects for war.

In many areas there are buildings available for above the ground interment. These are called mausoleums and contain individual crypts or groups of crypts, that can be arranged for interment the same way as cemetery lots. A family mausoleum is a building used for family members. Usually this type of mausoleum is purchased from the cemetery and built to exact specifications. The family retains the only key to the mausoleum. Individual or companion mausoleums, hold one or two crypts. Whatever your wishes, we can help you with any questions you may have about methods of interment.

Before we close the door on the old year, we heard a devotional in Sunday School about keeping the traditions of Christmas, and we meant to pass it along before Christmas. The words are by Peter Marshall (1902-1949), and they bear repeating:

"In a world that seems not only to be changing but even to be dissolving, there are some tens of millions of us who want Christmas to be the same...with the same old greeting of 'Merry Christmas' and no other. We long for the abiding love among men of good will which the season brings...believing in this ancient miracle of Christmas with its softening, sweetening influence to tug at our heart strings once again.

"We want to hold on to the old customs and traditions because they strengthen our family ties, bind us to our friends, make us one with all mankind for whom the Child was born, and bring us back again to the God who gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

"So we will not 'spend' Christmas...nor 'observe' Christmas. We will 'keep' Christmas--keep it as it is...in all the loneliness of its ancient traditions. May we keep it in our hearts, that we may be kept in its hope."

oOo

As the year 1991 winds down to the end, we start thinking about a new year--about hopes for better things to come. Last year about this time, we wrote a few paragraphs in our column about taking care of the "little things" in our lives. The thoughts drew some favorable comments, so we'd like to pass them along again.

As we move into the new year, let's forget for the moment all those big problems in the world which we can't do anything about. Let's remember some of the little every-day things which we can do something about.

If we remember the little things and take care of them, then we will be in a better frame of mind to figure out what part we might play in helping solve the bigger problems of the day. Most things start in the mind, so let's begin to think that everything can be better, and let's have enough faith in ourselves and in the work we are doing to expect them to become better.

Let's talk about the good times--when something or someone made us happy. Let's talk about how fortunate we are and have a smile for everyone we meet. Let's appreciate our friends by letting them know how important we think they are. Let's hope for their success and be as enthusiastic about their good fortune as we are about our own. And, let us not forget to provide a shoulder to cry on in times of sadness.

Let's close the door on mistakes of the past and be concerned with making ourselves better. Let us direct criticism toward our own faults, rather than waste it on those who may not need it and certainly don't want it.

If we do all these things, we will develop a strength of character that does not recognize doubt or fear, that is more of a match for any trouble, that ensures the peace of mind which fosters brighter thoughts and nobler deeds. If we open the door on the possibilities in the days ahead, it will be a Happy New Year!

Abolish SS limit

BY MARTHA McSTEEN, President
National Committee to Preserve Social Security & Medicare

Recently, the U.S. Senate passed legislation to repeal the Social Security earnings limit. While many Americans are unaware of the significance of this action, it could improve life for millions of seniors currently affected by this law.

A Senate amendment to a House-passed bill extending the Older Americans Act, approved by voice vote, would abolish the earnings limit for Social Security recipients 65 through 69. Currently, seniors between those ages can only earn $9,720 before losing benefits. If they go over that limit, they automatically lose $1 in benefits for every $3 they earn in excess of $9,720. But unearned income--such as income from stock dividends and other investments--is not affected by the limit at all, and this can be substantial for upper-income individuals.

Due to double-digit increases in health costs and increased living costs, many seniors need or want to stay in the workforce. Unfortunately, even those with moderate incomes are trapped in a Catch 22 situation. If they continue to work they may be penalized through a loss of Social Security benefits. Without the extra income, they often face living near the poverty level.

Opponents argue that repealing the earnings limitation would cost the Social Security Administration more in added benefits. While this is true, the extra cost would be partially offset by new revenues from additional income and payroll taxes paid by working seniors. In addition, the Social Security Trust Fund this year is expected to generate a surplus of some $70 billion--many, many times more than the cost of repealing this Social Security law. And, this is not to mention the $50 million to $100 million a year that would be saved in administrative costs.

The bottom line is that, as the recession worsens, it doesn't make sense to shut out people who want to work and contribute to the economy. Not only do senior Americans supply our workforce with a wealth of experience and knowledge which many of our industries depend on, but removing this restriction would help to breathe life into our struggling economy.

The U.S. House of Representatives has yet to act on this proposal, but a House plan similar to the one approved in the Senate has 266 sponsors and is expected to be taken up soon after Congress reconvenes in January.

Now is the time to let our congressional members know that this outdated policy needs to be abolished. After all, every American deserves a chance to live in economic dignity.

Babbling Brooks

Well, 1991 has been interesting, hasn't it?

What a year. I was thinking a few minutes ago about how bad it's been, so many things that have gone so wrong for so many people this year.

Then I got to thinking about how many things we really have to be thankful as we prepare, or brace, for 1992.

It's time not to scramble, but for a prayer of thanksgiving.

Dear Lord: Thanks for the gift of life. You and I and a few others know that at this time last year life wasn't worth a whole lot to me. Thanks for showing me, in your own way, just how very, very precious it is.

Thanks for giving me some hope in the tough times. You showed me the light at the end of the tunnel was not a train. That's a tremendous blessing.

Thanks for an understanding bunch of folks at Hereford State Bank. They could have been less kind, for good reason. Thank you for them, and be sure and send them some of the blessings you might intend for me.

Thank you for leading others to show me that I can worship you in a very special way. You and I are a lot closer than we've been in a long time, aren't we? Why didn't I listen to them four years ago? Someday, show me the answer while we share eternity together, okay? Bring Janie and Mark and Teresa and all the rest extra-special blessings; they can have some of mine, too.

Thank you for my very special relationship. Shower her and her daughters with more of the blessings you might have saved for me. They deserve them for having to put up with me. Her family is so, so special. Pass some more of the blessings to them.

I thank you for the patience and understanding of everyone here at the Brand. There are some very special people down here, just for putting up with me if for nothing else. They need some of those blessings, too.

Thanks for so many of the good people in this community. Some of them I like more than others; let me love them all more. Let others see, as you've let me see, that just because some people are different from ourselves that we are all part of your family. Please give us more love for everybody.

Thanks for the love you have given us this year; we have really needed it. Oh, the trials you put us through at times! But we made it through, didn't we. Thanks for your love and guidance. We may not understand now, but I'm sure we will someday.

Finally, thanks in advance for 1992. We know it'll probably be different from 1991--it could be another lu-lu. We depended on you to see us through a doozy of a year this year, and we trust you'll see us through another year.

An AP News Analysis

Term-limit advocates push for vote

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) - When it's a question of voting against Congress and the political establishment, term-limit measures are hard to stop. When it gets personal and involves kicking out the local congressman, limits can be losers.

In Washington, the first state to defeat a term-limit proposition, the measure rejected in the Nov. 5 election fit the latter description. And that sacrificed a major advantage the term-limits lobby had elsewhere: it led the voters to look at the people who would be punished, not only at a distant, unpopular government.

Pushed to make that choice, people tend to stick with the congressman they've got. That's why more than 96 percent of House members who sought new terms in 1990 got them, despite an anti-incumbent mood toward Congress as a whole.

The term-limits movement can offer a vehicle for those conflicting sentiments, a way to vote no on Congress even while voting to re-elect a member of Congress.

House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., who went home to take a lead role in the campaign against term limits, said such measures are designed "to capture dissatisfaction with the other person's incumbent," not necessarily with a voter's own representative.

The limits that won in 1990 all fit that formula because they're all prospective, applying six or even 12 years from now against officials who may or may not be familiar faces.

That wasn't the case with the measure Washington voters turned down by a 54-46 percent margin.

upsetting public opinion polls that had showed support running at two-thirds or more, a margin in line with national surveys on the issue.

It looked like the measure's sponsors ran the term limit bandwagon over their own feet by drafting a measure more drastic than they could win.

The Washington vote was on retroactive term limits, applying to time already served in elective office, state or congressional.

It would have prevented all eight Washington House members from running again in 1994, after one more term. Foley and his House colleagues said that would have crippled the state's delegation to Congress while other states, with rival interests, kept their seniority and clout.

That argument concentrated on California, in anti-limit advertisements that said a Washington delegation stripped of congressional seniority wouldn't be able to defend the water resources of the Northwest against the giant to the south.

Congressional term limits in Colorado, the only state to approve them, wouldn't be effective until 2002 if they withstand the inevitable court challenge. Oklahoma and California adopted limits at the state level; in all three states, the clock started running when the measures were enacted, regardless of seniority accumulated earlier.

California's legislative term limits were upheld by the state Supreme Court on Oct. 9. That measure gave legislators a maximum of eight more years, beginning last Jan. 1. It also sets a two-term limit on statewide elective office.

State-imposed limits on congress-sional tenure haven't been tested. The Supreme Court will have to decide whether they fit the Constitution, which sets citizenship, age - 25 for the House, 30 for the Senate - and residency as the qualifications for Congress.

Foley and other Washington opponents tried to get the term-limit initiative stricken from the ballot as unconstitutional, but the state Supreme Court ruled against them.

House lawyers have filed an advisory brief on a projected Florida term-limit measure, contending it is unconstitutional. A California Republican, Rep. Christopher Cox, tried to bar such briefs in the future, but his resolution was rejected, 265-160.

Foley said the Washington outcome showed that the voters are not in a blind rage; ready to punish incumbents with term limits whenever they get the chance.

He said it brought down "this sort of flying high assumption that every term-limit initiative or proposition in the country is unbeatable... the wave of the future."

That will be put to a broader test in 1992, when term-limit advocates hope to put the issue to votes in at least 15 states.

THE VOICE OF BUSINESS

THE OTHER SIDE OF FREEDOM

by Dr. Richard L. Leshar, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

WASHINGTON—During a recently televised "It's Your Business" debate, one guest—a member of Congress—was astonished to hear me say that a yearning for economic freedom helped spur the overthrow of communism.

Like many politicians, he had made a career complaining about the perceived evils of capitalism—unequal distribution of wealth, the pain of recessions, pollution, and the like. He had lost sight of the fact that free enterprise, for all its flaws, remains the most dynamic and effective economic system known to humankind.

To be sure, there are many in the leadership of the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe who have a vested interest in the status quo. They perceive in free enterprise a threat to their privileged position. Also, rank and file citizens are fearful they might not be able to adapt to a genuinely competitive system.

Nor would I disparage the appeal of democracy to people of other nations. Without question, the demand for political rights is real and deeply felt. Thanks in part to the pervasive influence of modern technology, people in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union are now aware of the world around them, and eager to exercise the same political rights enjoyed in the west. The same is true in Cuba, China and other lands still suffering under communist repression.

But hand in hand with that demand for political freedom is an even more desperate consciousness of the failure of central economic planning. The swap of political freedom for economic security, a devil's bargain if there ever was one, was a deal communism proved unable to honor. Regulation of economic activity served only to stifle innovation, undermine motivation, corrupt morals, and strangle productivity. The world now realizes our free enterprise economic system, for all its flaws, is vastly superior to statism.

Still, many of our own politicians either cannot or will not read the handwriting on the wall. They see in communism's fall no lesson for ourselves. Within that context, Congress spends 25 percent of our Gross National Product; keeps buying real estate, though Uncle Sam already owns more than a third of all the land; and merrily seeks to mandate a laundry list of expensive employee benefits that can only erode the vigor of our private sector, and reduce opportunity.

It would be tragic indeed if the fallacy of central economic control were to finally expire in the Soviet Union, only to be resurrected and preserved in the United States.

1991 year of triumph, turmoil and tragedy

Saddam Hussein had invaded Kuwait in a grab for oil. With support from the United Nations, President Bush sent U.S. troops to neighboring Saudi Arabia. By the end of 1990, Bush had given Saddam an ultimatum: Get out of Kuwait by Jan. 15 or get forced out.

"It may turn out that the only language that Saddam Hussein understands is the language of force," Vice President Dan Quayle told American troops in Saudi Arabia on New Year's Day.

Some people asked: What about the language of money? Peace groups and some U.S. allies urged Bush to rely on an economic blockade to force Saddam to his knees. But on Jan. 12, Congress granted Bush the authority to go to war.

In a sense, the debate over the war was a referendum on the U.S. role in what Bush liked to call the "new world order."

What it meant was that the United States would act as a global sheriff. Once again, it would send U.S. forces to settle a dispute in which it was not directly involved.

This time, though, it would be acting with the support of much of the world. The military would have the resources - and the political backing - to do the job. And the United States wouldn't have the Soviet Union standing in its way. By mid-January, 700,000 troops from 29 nations were arrayed against Iraq, a half-million of them from the United States.

The war began Jan. 16, U.S. time, with airstrikes on Baghdad and other strategic sites in Iraq. Saddam told his people, "The mother of all battles is under way."

The allied strategy was to establish control of the skies and then "soften up" the Iraqi ground forces with day and night bombing. No one knows how many Iraqis died in the unrelieved bombing, but it was surely tens of thousands.

Iraq fired its Scud missiles at Saudi Arabia and, more provocatively, at Israel - to try to get the Israelis involved in the war and alienate Bush's Arab allies. But Israel never took the bait.

The final stage of the war was a ground invasion of Kuwait and southern Iraq that began Feb. 24 and lasted three days. The allies, in a pincer assault, routed the Iraqis, tens of thousands of whom threw down their guns and surrendered.

There were fewer U.S. casualties than in any previous American war: 148 killed in action, 21 by their own "friendly fire."

The war made a national hero of U.S. commander Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, who later expressed some misgivings about leaving Saddam in power with considerable military clout. In July, a poll showed that seven of 10 Americans also believed it was a mistake.

The war left a mess in Iraq. Among other things, the United States had to step in to save starving Kurdish refugees who were fleeing Saddam's forces.

But Saddam held on. He had staying power, which set him apart from some other world leaders.

Bertrand Aristide was sworn in as Haiti's first democratically elected president on Feb. 7 and was sent packing in a military coup Sept. 30. Soldiers took over the governments of Thailand and Mali. Ethiopian President Mengistu Haile Mariam resigned under pressure and fled his country. French Prime Minister Michel Rocard was replaced by the country's first woman premier, Edith Cresson. India's Rajiv Gandhi was killed by a human bomb - a suicide assassin who brought explosives to a campaign rally.

Nowhere was the grip on power more tenuous, or the stakes more profound, than in the Soviet Union.

President Mikhail S. Gorbachev was a hero outside his country, but the world's respect didn't count for much at home. As 1991 began, he found his authority being challenged from every corner.

The Baltic republics were pressing for independence. Russian Federation President Boris Yeltsin was openly challenging Gorbachev's authority in Moscow. Ordinary Soviet citizens were growing increasingly impatient with Gorbachev's inability to turn around their economy on a dime - or, more to the point, on an increasingly worthless ruble.

In June, Yeltsin visited Washington. He told congressional leaders, "The people of Russia are ready for reform."

What they got, at least for a few horrifying days in August, was something entirely different.

On Aug. 19, while Gorbachev was on vacation, old-guard Communists seized power in a coup. Gorbachev was placed under house arrest - although that isn't what Soviet citizens were told.

"I should say that Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev is now on vacation," Vice President Gennady Yanayev, one of the coup-makers, told the nation. "... He is very tired after all these years."

Looking back now, it's easy to see the mistakes the coup leaders made. Chief among them: not arresting Yeltsin, who marshaled the forces of non-violent resistance and forced the plotters, in the end, to back down.

Gorbachev was freed. The Communist Party was cast into disrepute and despair. The world's oldest communist system was gone, a red shooting star that lingered 74 years.

By mid-December, Gorbachev had agreed to Yeltsin's demands for a new, loosely tied commonwealth of independent states - the old republics. The Soviet Union, Ronald Reagan's "Evil Empire," the nation against which the United States had measured itself for decades, was simply vanishing off the face of the Earth.

"There will be no more red flag," Yeltsin declared.

Elsewhere in what had been communist East Europe, Yugoslavia became mired in a civil war. And the Warsaw Pact - communism's answer to NATO - dissolved itself.

Suddenly, the world was a much different place. When the United States helped convene Middle East peace talks, its almost-silent partner was its old foe, the Soviet Union.

The Mideast became a less forbidding place in other ways, too.

On Dec. 4, Associated Press correspondent Terry Anderson was released after almost seven years as a hostage of extremist Shiite Muslims. He was the last of the American captives in Lebanon.

Those were the big international stories of 1991. On the home front, it was a year of mostly grim news.

The U.S. economy slumped into a recession and stayed there. The electorate became angry, resentful. Incumbents lost elections with shocking regularity. Politics became even uglier than usual.

A man with a history as a Ku Klux Klan leader and neo-Nazi made a serious run for the governorship of Louisiana. David Duke lost, but his candidacy sent a message that voters were fed up with politics as usual.

More trouble befell the Kennedy clan. After a night of drinking with his uncle, Sen. Ted Kennedy, William Kennedy Smith was charged with raping a young woman at the family's Florida estate. He was acquitted, but the case dramatized how far the family's image had fallen since its glory days in the 1960s.

Next to the war, no event captured the nation's attention as much as President Bush's nomination of Judge Clarence Thomas to the Supreme Court. What fascinated Americans was not that the conservative Thomas was only the second black nominated to the court. Rather, it was a remarkable televised Senate hearing into allegations that Thomas once sexually harassed an aide, Anita Hill.

In the end, the Senate sided with Thomas and confirmed his nomination. Americans were disgusted - either by the confirmation or the way the Senate handled it, or both.

For sheer revulsion, though, nothing compared to what unfolded in Milwaukee in July.

Jeffrey L. Dahmer, a 31-year-old factory worker, was charged with 17 counts of murder after the dismembered bodies of 11 people were found in his apartment. Other bodies were found elsewhere.

Dahmer confessed almost immediately. The language of a police affidavit captured the horror:

"Dahmer further stated that he would drug these individuals and usually strangle them and then he would dismember the bodies, often boiling the heads to remove flesh so he could retain the skulls."

Americans made fine distinctions in the terminology of death. Dahmer was a serial killer - he killed over years. George Hennard, on the other hand, was a mass murderer - he killed 23 people in a single 10-minute burst of rage. It happened in a Texas cafeteria on Oct. 16, and was the worst mass killing in U.S. history. Hennard took a 24th life as well - his own.

One of U.S. history's worst natural disasters struck the brushy hillside neighborhoods of Oakland, Calif., in October - a terrifying wildfire that destroyed 3,000 homes and killed 25 people.

Death came more quietly to Norway's King Olav, to dancer-choreographer Martha Graham, to jazz giants Stan Getz and Miles Davis, and to Nobel Prize-winning author Isaac Bashevis Singer. U.S. Sen. John Heinz was killed in a plane crash.

Newspaper tycoon Robert Maxwell died mysteriously when he fell - or so investigators said - off his yacht. His sons inherited a financial nightmare, and soon Maxwell's holdings were in bankruptcy.

It was a bad year for airlines, too. Eastern, Pan Am and Midway all went out of business.

The award for most convoluted business failure of the year went to the Bank of Credit and Commerce International, which was shut down by regulators worldwide who found global fraud and intrigue.

If you went to a movie theater in 1991, you might have seen "Dances

With Wolves," which dominated the Academy Awards, or perhaps the popular "Terminator 2: Judgment Day."

If you read a book, it might have been "Scarlett," the mega-selling sequel to "Gone With the Wind." Or perhaps "Harlot's Ghost," Norman Mailer's 1,307-page novel that challenged the capacity of printing presses.

Not yet published - but on the horizon - was the autobiography of Earvin "Magic" Johnson. He moved from the sports pages to the front pages in November when he announced he was retiring from professional basketball because he had been infected with the AIDS virus.

What was AIDS? That, young people, is another long, long story. ...

Tulia's big 4th quarter beats Herd in Canyon

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

Tulia scored 37 points in the fourth quarter to erase a lead which Hereford had held all game long and beat the Herd 82-67 Friday in a second-round game of the Canyon Rotary Boys Tournament.

Hereford led 16-6 after the first quarter, 33-28 after the second quarter and 52-45 after the third. Then with about three minutes left in the game, the bottom started to fall out.

"Most of the way until the fourth quarter our lead was 7-10 points, Thomas said, "but then Derek Mason fouled out; we got into foul trouble; and we lost our composure a little bit."

Tulia took the lead for good at 63-62 with two and a half minutes left in the game.

There were many causes for the disastrous fourth quarter, Thomas said: the foul trouble, offensive rebounding, missed shots and turnovers.

"We threw the ball away in crucial situations (the Herd had nine turnovers in the fourth quarter). We started missing some shots that we probably should have made, and that hurt us. Probably the biggest thing that hurt us was they outrebounded us offensively. They had 22 and we had 12 (for the game)."

Next up for Hereford, now 4-10, is Littlefield, which previously beat Hereford 61-52 Dec. 7. They were to play at 6 p.m. Saturday for third place in the tournament.

"Our kids got to get their heads up," Thomas said. "We were pretty much down after the game (the loss to Tulia)."

Young Shula hired in Cincinnati

By The Associated Press

The NFL's fast-moving revolving door finds a new coach at Cincinnati, a coach fired at Tampa Bay and a team without a coach in Seattle.

Just a normal day, only more so. David Shula joined his father in the NFL coaching ranks when he was named to replace Sam Wyche with the Cincinnati Bengals.

Richard Williamson was fired as Tampa Bay coach.

And still waiting in the wings - reportedly - is former New York Giants coach Bill Parcells.

At 32, Shula becomes the youngest head coach in modern league history, just as his father Don Shula was when he stepped into his first head coaching job in 1963. In the early years of the NFL, George Halas of the Decatur Staleys (now the Chicago Bears) and Curley Lambeau of the Green Bay Packers were younger when they were player-coaches.

Wyche was fired on Tuesday, just two days after his Bengals finished a 3-13 season, the worst in franchise history.

"I talked with my father several times in recent days, and he's very excited for me," said David Shula, Cincinnati's wide receivers coach last season. "He kidded me, he said, 'You know you're going to break my record, don't you?' And I really hadn't thought about it at the time. He said, 'You're going to be the youngest head coach ever hired in the National Football League.'"

"But he said, 'I'm all for you. The next record I hope you break is 300 wins.' I said I want to get one win first, and then we'll think about 300."

Knox neither quit nor was fired, although the team said it would honor a buyout clause in his contract.

A statement issued from Seahawks headquarters said Knox's departure was agreed upon Friday in a meeting in Palm Springs, Calif., between the coach, club president Tom Flores and owner Ken Behring.

Knox, 59, commenting briefly to a local radio station, said, "We mutually agreed that separation was the thing to do at this point. We just agreed that it had been a fine relationship and we should end it this way."

Later Friday, Flores praised Knox's coaching ability and said he might name himself as the Seahawks' fourth coach.

"Obviously, if I wanted the job, that would be the end of it, right?" he said in a telephone conference call.

"Right now I am thinking about it."

Knox, who ranks sixth on the all-time NFL list of coaching victories, with a 171-114-1 record, said he had nothing arranged, but was "going to take a look at other coaching options to see what the options are and proceed from there."

He was 80-63 with the Seahawks, closing with a 7-9 season.

Knox was the ninth coach to resign, retire or be fired since the start of the 1991 season.

The 50-year-old Williamson replaced Ray Perkins in December 1990 and won only four of 19 games. The Bucs finished 3-13 for their ninth consecutive losing season.

Hugh Culverhouse, the Bucs' owner, reportedly has offered Parcells a five-year deal worth $6.5 million to leave the broadcast booth and return to the sidelines, where he led the Giants to two Super Bowl victories before resigning after the 1991 Super Bowl.

Culverhouse said he doesn't have a timetable for naming a successor, but reportedly has given Parcells a deadline of this weekend to accept or reject the Bucs offer.

Green Bay also expressed interest in Parcells. But Ron Wolf, the Packers' new general manager, said the team could not match the salary supposedly offered to Parcells by Tampa Bay and that Green Bay would not give its new coach the ultimate say in all decisions, something Culverhouse is reportedly offering Parcells.

"Bill would be an ideal guy," Wolf said, "but we can't satisfy what he wants."

San Diego Chargers general manager Bobby Beathard was reported as saying he doesn't expect Georgia Tech to try to outbid him for the services of Tech football coach Bobby Ross.

"I know they want him to stay, but from what I understand, he wants to coach in the NFL," Beathard was quoted as saying in Saturday's editions of The Atlanta Journal-Constitution.

Ross is Beathard's top candidate to replace Dan Henning, who was fired.

On Friday, Beathard said he has spoken to Ross's agent, Atlanta attorney Jack Reale, and was waiting for a mutually convenient meeting time, probably before the new year.

"They've said they'll get back to me, and I'm sure they will," Beathard said. "From what I understand, there are some details that they'd like to take care of at the school before they meet with us. When those things are completed, we'll get together."

Ross, who just turned 55, has completed the first year of a four-year contract with Tech. He just completed his fifth season with Tech with an 18-17 victory over Stanford in the Aloha Bowl on Christmas Day.

Warriors' Hardaway sets record with 0-for-17 night

By The Associated Press

Tim Hardaway was able to see the bright side of going 0-for-17 from the field because the Golden State Warriors still managed to beat the Minnesota Timberwolves.

"I'm gonna frame this one," he said of Friday night's box score showing his 0-for-17, which eclipsed the previous futility record of 15 shots without a field goal established eight times by seven players. "I've got to get an NBA record somehow."

Chris Mullin, whose 36 points included a 3-pointer with 17 seconds left in regulation and five points in overtime, said Hardaway still was a positive factor in the Warriors' 106-102 victory over the Timberwolves, the NBA's worst team at 4-21.

"He got 13 assists. He was doing other things," Mullin said. "We need him in there. He still did his job."

Hardaway is a 46 percent shooter averaging 23 points this season.

The previous record of 0-for-15 last occurred when Rodney McCray did it on Nov. 9, 1988. In the 1940s, Philadelphia's Howie Dallmar had two 0-for-15 games.

Pooh Richardson scored 22 points and Sam Mitchell had a career-high 17 rebounds for the Timberwolves, 1-12 since Thanksgiving.

Celtics 110, SuperSonics 87

Larry Bird scored 15 of his 25 points in the third quarter and keyed a 14-4 run that carried Boston over Seattle in front of 37,175 fans at the Kingdome.

Bird connected on 10 of 15 shots, including 3-for-4 from 3-point range, and led all rebounders with 10. Kevin McHale scored 21 points for the Celtics.

Ricky Pierce led the Sonics with 26 points on 11-for-13 shooting.

Rockets 107, Bullets 100

Hakeem Olajuwon had 26 points and 12 rebounds as Houston continued Washington's home woes.

The Rockets' first victory in four games at the Capital Centre since Jan. 2, 1988, gave the Bullets a league-worst 2-9 record at home. Washington is 7-9 away from home.

Vernon Maxwell had 24 points for the Rockets, including a 3-pointer that made it 101-97 with 1:51 left.

A.J. English scored 26 points, while Larry Stewart and Pervis Ellison each had 20 for Washington. Michael Adams finished with 16 points.

Nets 136, Hornets 120

New Jersey won its third straight game for the first time all season as Drazen Petrovic scored 32 points and Derrick Coleman had 19 points, 12 rebounds and 11 assists at Charlotte.

Petrovic and Sam Bowie scored 13 points each in the third quarter when the Nets extended a 66-55 halftime lead to 110-86. Bowie finished with 25 points as the Nets surpassed their previous season high of 122.

The Hornets were led by Kendall Gill with 25 points and rookie Larry Johnson with 23.

Cavaliers 103, Spurs 97

Brad Daugherty outscored David Robinson 31-14 as Cleveland beat San Antonio and improved its record at home to 13-1 with its fifth straight victory.

Daugherty matched his season high in points, making nine of his 12 floor shots and 13 of 14 free throws. Robinson made only one field-goal attempt in the first half and hit three of nine shots in the game.

Rod Strickland led San Antonio with 16 points and 10 assists.

Pistons 106, Magic 94

At Auburn Hills, Mich., Detroit handed Orlando its 13th consecutive loss behind Joe Dumars' 27 points and Dennis Rodman's 20 rebounds.

It was the second time in two nights the Pistons defeated the Magic. Dumars scored 31 points in a 112-100 victory in Orlando a day earlier.

Mark Aguirre added 25 points for Detroit, which won its fifth straight game and raised its record above .500 (15-14) for the first time since Nov. 18.

Dumars scored 11 third-quarter points as the Pistons rebuilt an 11-point lead that had slipped to two at halftime.

Nick Anderson and Scott Skiles led Orlando with 19 points apiece.

THE PROFESSIONAL DIFFERENCE

Mortgages generally cost less than they used to. And under new regulations, lenders must supply more information about the terms and fees involved in their loans. Today's home buyers are having an easier time in understanding the whole story. I am able to show more qualified prospects the kind of home they can buy with our computerized "matching" system. The point is, that most prospective home buyers still come to a real estate broker, for help in finding the home that meets their needs and budget. Through interviews, I discover what they really want and how much money they can invest. Most buyers need this professional help; a few may be unrealistic about what their money can buy. If you're considering putting your home on the market, let me find you the buyer, who wants a home just like yours and can afford it. We are experts in matching buyers and property, and getting top value for our clients.

ASTIGMATISM

Imagine a camera with a lens just a little out of round, so that the image projected to the film is improperly focused; the picture comes out blurry. That's just like astigmatism - a visual condition in which the front of the eye is more oval than round. The result is that light does not focus properly on the retina, the back of the eye. Astigmatism is so common that almost everyone has it to some extent, but only those with a moderate to high amount need corrective lenses. The condition may or may not go with nearsighted- or farsightedness. The degree of astigmatism may change with age. Even mild astigmatism may cause headaches, eyestrain, fatigue or blurred vision at certain distances. Any of these symptoms should signal a visit to your eye professional. Most astigmatism can be corrected with eyeglasses or contact lenses.

1991 sees Magic pass torch to Michael

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

A few days before the Chicago Bulls won their first NBA championship, Magic Johnson talked about Michael Jordan becoming the league's next torchbearer.

Little did they realize how soon that day would come.

Earvin Johnson, known everywhere as Magic, shocked the world on Nov. 7 by announcing he was retiring from the Los Angeles Lakers. He had learned after a routine medical examination that he tested positive for the HIV virus, the precursor of AIDS.

Johnson's gut-wrenching and sudden switch from champion point guard to point man in the fight against a dreaded disease transcended sports. But pro basketball was transformed. For weeks afterwards, not a day went by that those connected with it weren't reminded of what had been lost.

"Some day, there's going to be some kid out there as good as Magic Johnson," Lakers general manager Jerry West said. "He might be 10, or 15, or not even born yet. But he'll never have the charisma Earvin had. How do you replace him? You don't.

You almost feel helpless. "He had the ball 90 percent of the time and he had the greatest size advantage of anyone since Wilt Chamberlain. Combine that with skill and you have something incredible." The view that Johnson could lead the way in educating the public about AIDS was commonly expressed. "I think he's going to save millions of lives," Olympic coach Chuck Daly.

Despite his departure from the Lakers, Johnson left open the possibility of playing in 1992 on the Olympic team, the first in which NBA players will be allowed to play.

In September, Johnson was chosen for the "Dream Team" along with Jordan, Larry Bird, Karl Malone, John Stockton, Charles Barkley, Patrick Ewing, David Robinson, Chris Mullin and Scottie Pippen.

That team - the best the NBA has to offer - would have been prohibitive favorites even before the breakup of the Soviet Union and the civil war in Yugoslavia, events that gutted the toughest competition.

In the NBA playoffs, the Lakers upset the defending Western Conference champion Portland Trail

Blazers, who had the NBA's best record of 63-19 and looked strong from start to finishing - opening with a 19-1 record and closing at 16-1.

The Lakers, playing their first season under coach Mike Dunleavy, won 58 games and set an NBA record by reaching the 50-win plateau for 12 consecutive years. But they were not believed to be as good as the Trail Blazers until subduing them in six games behind the outstanding play of Johnson, fellow veterans James Worthy and Byron Scott and young center Vlade Divac.

The Bulls won 61 regular-season games, but that meant nothing to them unless they could get by the Detroit Pistons, winners of consecutive titles, plus three straight playoff-series wins over Chicago.

The Pistons defeated Chicago 4-1 in 1988, 4-2 in 1989 and 4-3 in 1990, so the Bulls believed they were ready to take the next step. But the next step was a giant one as the Bulls swept the Eastern Conference finals 4-0.

Rather than watch the Bulls sweep on the Pistons' home floor, Detroit's players started leaving the court before the final game - a 115-94 rout - was over, a performance that some believed was a factor in leaving Isiah

Thomas and Dennis Rodman off the Olympic team.

Johnson, who led the Lakers to the Finals nine times in his 12 years in the NBA, was excited by the prospect of meeting Jordan and the Bulls for the first time in the championship series.

"This is a dream come true," Johnson said. "I've played against all the superstars in the Finals. First Julius Erving, then Larry Bird and Isiah and now Michael."

Johnson's spirits were dampened considerably a few days later after the Lakers won the Finals opener only to lose four consecutive games as the Bulls rolled to the championship, the first in their 25-year history.

Johnson was so down before Game 5 that there was even discussion of retirement. No one really took the talk seriously at the time, but it was to become eerily prophetic later.

"This series has been like going to a movie expecting it to be great, then it gets to the love scene and the film breaks," Johnson said.

It started well enough for the Lakers, who won the opener 93-91 at Chicago Stadium on Sam Perkins' 3-point shot with 14 seconds left. Jordan scored 36 points, but missed two shots in the last 24 seconds, the last with three seconds remaining.

The Bulls won Game 2 107-86 as Jordan got the support he didn't receive in the opener. Chicago made 85 percent of its shots in the third quarter while outscoring the Lakers 38-26.

For the game, the Bulls shot 61.7 percent of their shots compared to 41.1 or the Lakers. Jordan scored 33 points on 15-for-18 shooting, including 13 in a row at one stretch.

Pippen and Horace Grant scored 20 points apiece and John Paxson was 8-for-8 from the field.

"Winning gets rid of the stigma of the one-man team," Jordan said. The Lakers took the homecourt advantage into Game 3 and grabbed a 92-90 lead with 10 seconds to play on a three-point play by Divac, who scored 24 points. But Jordan came through with the game on the line and forced overtime with a 12-footer.

Jordan, who finished with 29 points, scored six more in the extra period as the Bulls outscored Los Angeles 12-4 or a 104-96 victory and a 2-1 series lead.

The Bulls made it 3-1 with a 97-82 rout in the next game as they held the Lakers to 36.6 percent shooting for the game and 30 points in the middle two periods. Jordan had 28 points and 13 assists and all five Chicago starters scored at least 12 points.

Divac scored 27 points and Johnson 22, but their teammates shots less than 25 percent for the game.

To make matters worse for the Lakers, Worthy and Scott both were injured in Game 4 and did not return for the final 108-101 victory by Chicago that sealed the title. Pippen scored 32 points, Jordan clinched the Finals Most Valuable Player award with 30 and Paxson had 20 points on 9-for-12 shooting.

In the regular season, Jordan won his second MVP and his fifth consecutive scoring title with a 31.5 average.

Stockton won his fourth consecutive assists title at Utah with a league-record 1,164, but Johnson set the standard for career assists with 9,921, just 34 more than Oscar Robertson.

The record-breaking assist came on April 15, less than a week before the end of the regular season.

At the time, no one realized Magic would never become the first to reach 10,000.

Duke finally wins; Tarkanian resigns in '91

By JIM O'CONNELL
AP Basketball Writer

Duke ended six years of frustration with a national championship and UNLV's Jerry Tarkanian ended 14 years of confrontation with the school and NCAA by submitting his resignation.

Those two school provided college basketball with its ultimate good guy-bad guy matchup in 1991 when they met in the national semifinals.

Duke's fourth consecutive Final Four appearance and fifth in six years meant meeting the unbeaten Runnin' Rebels, the defending champions and winners by 30 points when the two met in the previous year's championship game.

Playing with the utmost confidence and employing defense UNLV was used to using rather than seeing, the Blue Devils won 79-77. Their biggest win was still to come.

Duke then beat Kansas 72-65 for the title and when Mike Krzyzewski finally climbed the ladder to snip the strands of net, most people could only feel good for a coach who had done things the right way.

"I am so happy with our guys," Krzyzewski said. "I am not sure anyone has ever played any harder to work for a national championship, having to beat UNLV on Saturday and then having to beat a team like Kansas.

"It's never been a monkey on my back," he said of the comparisons with NFL bridesmaids Denver and Minnesota. "I hope we do it again. I wonder when we will do it again."

The Blue Devils, who lost one starter and one key reserve from the championship team, were No. 1 in the preseason poll and by the third poll of this season were a unanimous choice.

UNLV had been No. 1 all last season and was a unanimous choice nine of the last 10 polls. That all went for naught with the devastating loss to Duke in the Hoosier Dome.

"I'll never have a group like this again," Tarkanian said. "This was a very special group of kids. They did everything well all year."

Two made the All-America team - Larry Johnson and Stacey Augmon - and four starters were drafted by the opening pick of the second round by the NBA. They had their chance to repeat because UNLV reached a settlement with the NCAA which would see this season's team banned from live television and postseason play for violations of the program committed under Tarkanian in the 1970s.

On June 7, 13 days after photos were published showing former UNLV players with convicted sports fixer Richard Perry, Tarkanian resigned after 18 seasons at UNLV, saying he would coach only this season despite one more left on his contract.

"The latest round of inaccurate but damaging rumors has proven to be the final straw," Tarkanian said. "The pain I now see in my children's eyes makes me realize none of this is fun for anyone. If it weren't for the latest incident, this wouldn't have happened."

Still, even after his resignation, Tarkanian had public battles with UNLV president Robert Maxson, including a lawsuit brought by an assistant coach after the school had some physical education classes he taught secretly videotaped to try and catch possible NCAA violations.

Tarkanian needed 19 wins this season to end his career as Division

I's all-time winningest coach by percentage, a distinction he already held in the junior college ranks. Tarkanian may not be done coaching, however, as the 61-year-old known for a doleful look and a towel to chew on could return to the sidelines, possibly with an NBA team.

Duke and UNLV only seemed to dominate every college basketball headline in 1991.

Schools changed conferences to shift some balance of power.

Arkansas and South Carolina started play in the Southeastern Conference, while Florida State moved to the Atlantic Coast Conference and Miami joined the Big East.

The Great Midwest was formed and having members from Alabama and Tennessee still didn't prevent the six-team league from going middle-of-the-country with its name.

The Sun Belt and American South merged into a new 11-team Sun Belt alignment, while the Metro and East Coast Conference lost their automatic bids because of failing to meet standard criteria.

North Carolina won its 1,500th game and the coach synonymous with most of the success, Dean Smith, won his 700th while returning to the Final Four for the first time since 1982.

Chris Corchiani of North Carolina State became the first player to break the 1,000 assist mark while Kevin Bradshaw of U.S. International became the 12th player to break the 2,800-point mark for his career. The 26-year-old Navy veteran had the highest single game last season with 72 points against Loyola Marymount and the school went bankrupt after the season.

Two All-Americans who could have returned - Billy Owens of Syracuse and Kenny Anderson of Georgia Tech - didn't and the one who could have - player of the year Shaquille O'Neal of LSU - did for his junior year.

A familiar face on the sidelines also called its quits after last season as Notre Dame's Digger Phelps retired after 20 seasons with the Fighting Irish.

"For the last two decades it's never been a job," he said. "Every day, even with the ups and downs, was like Christmas Day, where you opened up the present you wanted most."

Phelps' final team at Notre Dame went 12-20 and was the sixth of his 20 teams not to make the NCAA tournament. Phelps was known for his posture on academics and athletics off the court and his ability to beat top-ranked teams on it as the Fighting Irish downed seven No. 1 teams during his tenure there.

John MacLeod, who last coached in college at Oklahoma in 1973 before embarking for a successful career in the NBA, was named Phelps' replacement.

Ryan's 7th no-hitter is big story of year

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) - The fastball moved at 96 mph. The curve was clocked at 86 mph. The changeup was 82 mph.

The Toronto Blue Jays hit only eight fair balls off of him. Only one was a problem and Gary Pettis tracked that one down before the dying quail fell safely for a bloop single.

He struck out 16. He walked only two hitters.

"It was the most dominating night of my career," the 44-year-old athlete said afterwards.

Nolan Ryan's record seventh no-hitter was the masterpiece of his 25 years in the big leagues.

And it was the runaway winner in balloting by The Associated Press for the Top Ten Texas sports stories of the year.

Ryan received all but three first place votes in balloting by 34 editors and broadcasters. The other first place ballots went to the football coaching upheaval at the University of Texas, the resurgence of the Dallas Cowboys and Texas A&M's surprising Southwest Conference football championship after being picked fourth by the preseason experts.

Ryan has been the top Texas sports story for two years running. Last year he won the honor when he pitched his sixth no-hitter, shutting down the Oakland A's.

But there was no no-hitter like the last one.

"I've never had a night when I had total control and velocity of all three of my pitches," Ryan said. "Tonight I did."

While Ryan had total control, Texas coach David McWilliams lost it with the Longhorns.

He was reassigned to other duties in the athletic department and John Mackovic, the athletic director and head football coach at Illinois, was hired to replace McWilliams, who has four years left on his contract.

Only last year McWilliams had been given a five-year contract when Texas won the SWC and a berth in the Cotton Bowl.

The big turnaround of the Dallas Cowboys was ranked third as Jimmy Johnson got the Cowboys into the playoffs for the first time since 1985.

Fourth was Texas A&M's surprising sweep of SWC football foes even though coach R.C. Slocum's bunch had been picked in the middle of the pack. The Aggies face Florida State in the Cotton Bowl on New Year's Day.

The Houston Oilers' winning the AFC Central Division and their Super Bowl run was picked fifth.

The disgrace of Roy Tarpley was sixth. One of the most talented players in the National Basketball Association, Tarpley was kicked out of the league for his third violation of the NBA's drug abuse policy.

Seventh went to the dismissal of veteran Texas Tech coach Gerald Myers, who had become a West Texas legend but had fallen on lean years.

Eighth place went to the basketball troubles at Texas A&M where coach Kermit Davis was sent packing. Tony Barone was hired and the school was put on probation for rules violations.

Ninth was the flop of the Houston Cougars, preseason picks to win the SWC football crown. Not only did they finish in the second division but David Klingler had a miserable year and wasn't among the finalists for the Heisman Trophy.

And 10th place went to a team that wasn't even on the original ballot. The Killeen Kangaroos gave their town some sorely needed cheer by winning the state Class 5A Division I schoolboy football title. Write-in votes carried the Kangaroos to the 10th spot.

In October, just before Killeen began its championship run, a gunman killed 23 people during a rampage at a Luby's cafeteria. The event itself was the top news story in the state in 1991.

As coach Bobby Etheredge put it: "I don't know of a world more deserving...."

Freeman recognizes sports figures who deserve awards

An AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) - Here are the annual Freeman File awards for your holiday pleasure. 'Tis better to give than receive:

-THE WHAT-HAVE-YOU-DONE-FOR-ME-LATELY LAURELS: To University of Texas president Dr. William Cunningham, who asked Longhorns coach David McWilliams to step down only a year after he had given McWilliams a new five-year contract after he got Texas to the Cotton Bowl.

Runnerup No. 1: Texas Tech president Robert Lawless who got rid of popular basketball coach Gerald Myers after the West Texas wizard made the Red Raiders a respected name in the sport for almost two decades.

Runnerup No. 2: The Cotton Bowl, which "promoted" loyal servant Jim "Hoss" Brock to be point man of the selection committee, taking away his job as executive vice president. Only problem is with the new bowl alliance, Brock's famed wheeling and dealing won't be needed like it was in the past to bring in such teams as Boston College and Doug Flutie, Auburn, Ohio State, UCLA and Troy Aikman and Notre Dame and Tim Brown.

-THE ROY ROGERS WHITE HAT AWARD: To David McWilliams, who was always upfront with the press. A very nice man. Runnerup: Former Texas Tech basketball coach Gerald Myers, a straight talking West Texan who never tried to sugarcoat a loss. Returned every telephone call.

-THE JACK ELAM BLACK HAT AWARD: To President Cunningham, who should have given McWilliams the chance he deserved.

-ONCE IN A LIFETIME MOMENT MEDALLION: To Nolan Ryan for pitching the best game in his illustrious major league career, a seventh no-hitter, in front of his fans and on my watch. Thanks Nolan. Would have killed me to have missed it.

-D.X. BIBLE COACH OF THE YEAR AWARD, COLLEGE DIVISION: To Texas A&M's R.C. Slocum, who took a team that started 13 freshmen and sophomores and swept the conference schedule to earn a spot in the Cotton Bowl.

-D.X. BIBLE COACH OF THE YEAR AWARD, PRO DIVISION: Jimmy Johnson. Can anyone fault the job he did this year with a team that has gone from one victory to seven to 11?

-D.X. BIBLE COACH OF THE YEAR AWARD, HIGH SCHOOL DIVISION: Killeen High School coach Bobby Etheredge, who gave his still-stunned community the Christmas present it needed with a Class 5A Division I state high school football championship.

Thanks for the memories!

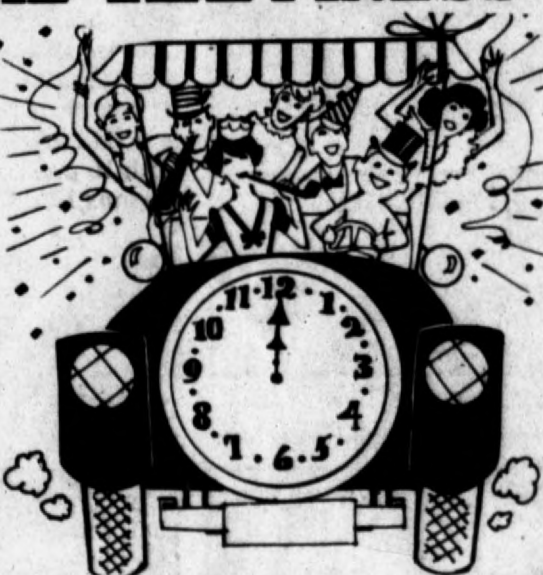

We would like to express our appreciation to Golf Pro Brent Warner and Deborah for their contributions to Pitman Municipal Golf Course and the community.

Best wishes in your future endeavors!

Bride-elect honored

Becky Christie was honored recently with a bridal shower. Pictured are (l-r) Marvine Mathis, grandmother of the honoree; Carolyn Christie, mother of the honoree; the honoree; Carolyn McDonald, mother of the groom; Naomi Scarborough, grandmother of the groom; and Pauline McDonald, grandmother of the groom.

Athletic shoes should be carefully selected

There may be some truth to the old cliché, "If the shoe fits, wear it." But, exercisers be warned: When it comes to athletic shoes, fit is only one consideration. The "best" shoe should be selected only after a careful review of the shoe's biomechanics.

"Although fit and comfort are excellent indicators of a good athletic shoe, avid exercisers should look for specific design elements that enhance the quality and longevity of high performance shoes," says Robert Larsen, vice president of marketing for K-Swiss Inc., a leading manufacturer of athletic footwear.

Crucial to choosing the right athletic shoes is asking a few basic questions. Does the shoe have ample cushioning for shock absorption? Is it flexible enough to bend across the forefoot? Does it provide adequate stability to ensure minimal side-to-side motion. And, will the shoe last?

A prime example of a high-performance shoe designed for optimum stability, cushioning and flexibility is K-Swiss' versatile Luzern cross-court training shoe for women. The Luzern features a patented Aosta rubber outsole for durability and longer wear - a necessity for frequent high-impact workouts - and provides a removable polyurethane padded sockliner for increased comfort and shock absorption.

Like all K-Swiss shoes, the Luzern's designing and quality is based upon the K-Swiss Classic tennis shoe, which is celebrating its 25th anniversary this year.

Distinguishing characteristics of the Classic include its unique three-piece construction, a design which uses few seams, resulting in increased durability and comfort; an exclusive D-Ring lacing system, which provides optimum rear foot control; a polyurethane foam innersole cushion for superior shock absorption; and a rubber outsole that provides a firm grip on all types of surfaces.

When shopping for an athletic shoe, consumers should also keep in mind that many shoes are engineered for specific sports.

"It's important for an athlete to choose a shoe appropriate for the sport he or she will be playing. A tennis player needs a different type of shoe than a long distance runner, for example," says Dr. Arnold Serkin, a Los Angeles-based podiatrist and member of the American Board of Sports Medicine and American Runners & Fitness Association.

Shopping Guidelines

Whether shopping for an athletic shoe for a specific sport, or just to wear around the house, K-Swiss recommends that beginning and advanced exercisers alike follow a few guidelines:

- * Don't try on shoes in the morning. It's best to buy at the end of the day, when your foot has had time to swell.

- * If you only play one sport most of the time, buy a shoe that is specifically designed for that sport.

- * Measure your foot each time you buy a new pair of shoes. Many people make the mistake of buying athletic shoes a half size too small.

- * Always try on shoes with the socks you plan to use during a workout. A tight shoe probably won't stretch to comfort later at home.

- * Fit all shoes while standing and as a pair. They must be comfortable in the store - don't assume that they will stretch out later.

- * A good fit is dictated by one finger's breadth from the end of the longest toe to the end of the shoe when standing. There should not be a shift of the foot in the shoe when walking or stopping sort.

- * Analyze your old shoes and note where they wore out. Bring them to the store so the clerk can detect your foot problems and guide you to a shoe with a better fit.

Christie honored with bridal shower

Becky Christie was honored with a bridal shower at the Nazarene Church recently.

She is the Jan. 3 bride elect of Jerry McDonald.

Greeting guests with the honoree were Carolyn Christie, mother of the honoree; Marvine Mathis, grandmother of the honoree; Carolyn McDonald, mother of the prospective bridegroom; Naomi Scarborough, grandmother of the prospective bridegroom; and Pauline McDonald, grandmother of the prospective bridegroom.

Refreshments of petite quiche, fruit plate, donut holes, coffee and spiced tea were served by Rhonda Banner and Lauri McDonald, sister of the prospective bridegroom.

The refreshment table was decorated with a burgundy and hunter green floral arrangement with a silver coffee service.

Hostesses included Rhonda Banner, Marilyn Bell, Carole Bishop, Sunny Brush, Cathy Bunch, Adelle Clements, Janet Coleman, Pam Ruckman, Laura Schlabs, Marilyn Culpepper, Pat Goforth, Maxine Hutson, Eva Lookingbill, Alice Lueb, Jerrine Mickler, Bea Noland and Betty Rusher.

The hostesses presented the honoree with a cookware set and money.

The names of the five great lakes can be remembered through the use of the mnemonic device: H-O-M-E-S. Huron, Ontario, Michigan, Erie, and Superior.

Birthday Reception for Louise Ferguson

*It's a birthday party for Louise!
Come and join us, if you please.
We know she'll be forever young...
Her step is light-her spring's not sprung!!
To those who love her, it can be told...
Soon she'll be seventy-five years old.
Family, friends, long-lost cousins...
We're gathering people by the dozens!!
So...set aside an hour or two.
We'll look forward to seeing you!*

Couple joined during candlelight ceremony

St. Luke's Methodist Church in Lubbock was the setting for the candlelight marriage ceremony of Michelle D'Lee Moreland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald D. Moreland, of Lubbock, and James Douglas Bartlett of Lubbock son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Douglas Bartlett of Hereford.

Pieter VanWaarde, college pastor of Trinity Church in Lubbock, officiated.

Seated at the registry table in the church foyer were Melonie Smith, Jennifer Porter and Angie Clark, all of Lubbock.

Cascading greenery was highlighted by tiny white lights along the length of the altar. The chancel was adorned with poinsettias and a large white Christmas tree. At the center of the chancel was a circle of lights candelabrum which gracefully flowed from the top center, out, and around to the base.

On each side were heart shaped candelabrum. White tapered candles were lit by Jay Holcombe and Mike Wester. Royal blue bows accented the pews on the center aisle.

Lara Ferguson and Bobby Campbell sang "Household of Faith" after guests were seated.

The parents of the couple lit the family candles surrounding the unity candle.

"He is Exalted" was played as the bride was presented in marriage by her father. She was attired in a white bridal satin gown with a sweetheart neckline and v-back. Both the front and the back of the fitted bodice were embellished with pearls and sequins applied on imported lace. The leg-o-mutton sleeves also had imported lace and pearls. The sleeves from elbow to wrist were inset with lace and intricate beading.

The v-shaped bustle, attached at the waist, followed the same lace and pearl pattern as did the skirt. The bridal gown featured a chapel length train which was graced with lace, beads, pearls and sequins. Both the dress and train were edged with schiffli lace and pearls.

The bride's fingertip bridal illusion veil flowed from a headpiece with pearls and sequins.

She carried a cascading bouquet of wedding white and pastel pink roses, rose lepto accented with blue statice and needle point ivy intertwined within the bouquet, which was placed on a pleated lace fan that was carried by the groom's maternal grandmother, Margaret Ann Durham, in her wedding.

The bride's jewelry consisted of a diamond drop that was given to her paternal grandmother, Nell Moreland, by the bride's grandfather.

Gerrie Moreland of Borger, sister-in-law of the bride, served as matron of honor. Best man was Jay Holcombe of Lubbock.

Bridesmaids were Shannon Wester, Heather Womack and Kim Clifton, all of Lubbock. They wore royal blue dresses that featured sweetheart necklines and long sleeves. The straight tea-length skirts were accented with matching peplums. Each attendant carried a single, hand tied, white amaryllis blossom and bud.

Groomsmen were Steve Lyle, Mike Wester, both of Lubbock and Gregg Moreland, brother of the bride from Borger.

Blessings for the couple were spoken by the bride's father and brother.

A reception for the couple was held in the church fellowship hall. Greeting guests were Mysti Taguba, Courtney Campbell and Jennifer Hon, all of Lubbock.

The bride's and groom's tables were covered with white linen cloths, overlaid with white lace which was draped and tied with white satin bows.

The bride's table was centered with a three-tier white wedding cake with raspberry filling. The cake was ornately decorated with cream colored rose buds and lace. Between each tier was lace lattice. The cake was served by Elaine Bryant.

Bridal punch was served from a silver punch bowl by Billie Hardin. The bridal mints were heart-shaped white chocolate topped with a tiny blue flower with green leaves.

The groom's table featured a turtle cake with cream and dark chocolate colored frosting. It was served from a silver tray. Decorations on the top featured some of the groom's interests.

Cindy Fangman of Hereford served coffee from an antique silver urn from the groom's table and Pat Confer of Hereford served the groom's cake.

The couple left for a wedding trip to London, England. They will make their home in Lubbock.

A rehearsal dinner was hosted by the groom's parents in the Brazos Room of the Lubbock Plaza.

Pre-nuptial courtesies have been held in Lubbock and Hereford.

A bridal luncheon was hosted by the bride's grandmother Nell Moreland in Lubbock.

Special guests included Mrs. Lahoma Whitaker, Nell Moreland, Margaret Ann Durham and Mr. and Mrs. N. D. Bartlett, Jr., all grandparents of the couple. Guests also attended from Hereford, Kingsland, Plainview, Waco, Brenham, College Station and Dallas.

Make potatoes split for quick healthy dish

For a hearty side dish that takes less than 15 minutes to bake, try the following recipe for a quick-to-fix Potato Split. You start with a baked potato, then fill with a mixture of cheeses, vegetables and sunflower nuts.

Potato Split

1 large baked potato (about 10 ounces)

3 tablespoons low-fat milk

1 cup cottage cheese

2 tablespoons toasted sunflower nuts

2 tablespoons green bell pepper

2 tablespoons chopped carrot

2 tablespoons sliced green onion

1 cup shredded Cheddar cheese

1 teaspoon pepper

Salt to taste

3 cherry tomatoes, halved

Halve and scoop out the baked potato, leaving 1-inch shells. Mash potato pulp in a bowl. Add milk, cottage cheese, sunflower nuts, green pepper, carrot, onion, 1 cup of the Cheddar cheese, the pepper and salt. Gently mix to blend thoroughly. Mound into potato shells, dividing equally. Arrange 3 tomato halves on each, pushing in slightly. Sprinkle with remaining cheese. Bake in a 450-degree F oven about 10 minutes, until cheese is melted and potatoes are heated through. Makes 2 servings.

Note: Potatoes may be prepared in advance up to the point of baking. Wrap them securely and refrigerate up to 2 days. Reheat in a conventional or microwave oven.

Let us show you a Texas you've never seen before.

- All 172 pages in full color
- Each page measures a large 15 x 11 inches
- Presents the entire state in stunning detail
- Appendices and specialty maps of many different features

THE ROADS OF TEXAS is the culmination of a mammoth project that has involved many individuals for over two years. When you get your copy of THE ROADS OF TEXAS you'll wonder how you ever traveled the state without it.

This 172 page atlas contains maps that show the complete Texas road system (all 284,000 miles) plus just about every city and community! Texas A&M University Cartographics Laboratory staff members produced the maps, based on county maps from the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation. The details shown are amazing—county and local roads, lakes, reservoirs, streams, dams, historic sites, pumping stations, golf courses, cemeteries, mines and many other features too numerous to list.

AMERICAN GRAZING

"Grazing" or snacking on mini-meals is fast becoming the American way of eating. Our fast-paced lifestyles leave little time for families to sit down to three meals a day. Nutrients and calories lost through incomplete or skipped meals can be replaced by snacking. Done wisely, grazing is not only good for you, but can be fun when you find creative, low-fat ways to enrich your diet.

The best grazing strategy is to make sure that the foods you choose are nutritious. They should provide not only calories but vitamins, minerals, fiber, protein and other essential nutrients. Don't think of grazing foods as extras but as important components of your diet. Throughout the day distribute the appropriate amount of food for your size, age and activity level.

There are several benefits associated with grazing. The flexibility of mini-meals allows you to get nutrition and energy when you need it. Recent studies suggest that light, frequent snacks may be even better for your body than eating three regular meals. Researchers have studied people eating exactly the same food, but distributing it differently throughout the day. The snackers tended to have lower blood cholesterol levels and healthier levels of some hormones. While this research is still new, it does indicate that a snacking meal pattern high in fat, sugar and sodium from your house.

When you crave something salty, try air popped or microwave light popcorn, baked taco chips with salsa, bread sticks or low-salt pretzels. If you crave something sweet, try fresh or dried fruit, rolls or muffins with low-sugar preserves and skim-milk puddings or custards. The world is full of wholesome, interesting snacks that can be prepared and eaten in a variety of ways. Your creative imagination can supply you with many more low-fat, nourishing snacks to make your mini-meals healthy and enjoyable.

might be a nutritious, sensible alternative to larger meals.

As positive as grazing on mini-meals can be, it is wise to remain aware of possible problem areas. If you eat more between meals without adjusting the size of regular meals you could take in excess calories resulting in a weight gain. Many snack foods have a poor nutritional content and are high in fat, sugar and sodium. Care must be taken to avoid substituting nutritionally incomplete snacks for regular meals.

Following these tips will help you develop good snacking habits that can add to your nutritional well-being:

- Keep snack portions small.
- Serve your snacks on a plate or dish to control the amount you consume.

- If you are having difficulty finding nutritious snacks, save food from each meal to snack on later.

- Keep wholesome, ready-to-eat snack foods at hand for when the snack attack strikes. Eliminate those snacks

Between the Covers

By JOE WEAVER

So Christmas is over and 1992 is staring us right in the face. Did you accomplish everything in 1991 that you wanted to? At any rate, it's behind us now, and we have to look at what lies ahead. At the library we are looking for great things. Say "library" to any number of people and 99% of what we do is "books." But the Deaf Smith County Library is a whole lot more. I don't know that we will institute any NEW programs this year, but we do want to expand and promote our existing ones.

-Adult Literacy Program...we have lots of people who have signed up to be tutored. Now we need the tutors. If you want to make a real marked difference in someone's life in 1992, volunteer to be a literacy tutor.

-Summer Reading Program...plans are already being made to accommodate a big crowd this summer, as we "Discover A New World...Reading."

-Greater visibility around the community...we are preparing an entertaining and informative program for presentation to clubs and organizations.

-Audio/Video materials...we intend to increase our collection of Talking Books, and, yes, Virginia, we are going to get some videos in 1992! The friends of the library are working on it...and speaking of that, the...

-Friends of the Library...will be better than ever this year! We got a number of new memberships last fall, and we are getting some new directors with lots of fresh ideas. (Some day I'm going to tell what the Friends do and why YOU should be a member.)

-Annual Meeting...I hate the sound of this because it sounds so "exclusive", when the public is not only welcome, but encouraged to attend. Our featured speaker this year will be Jena Rawley-Whitaker, illustrator of a soon-to-be-released children's book. I don't believe we've ever had an illustrator speak to us before, and Jena's unique personality will make this a meeting you don't want to miss.

-Book Sale...in October as usual, but we'll take donations (books OR cash) any time.

-Special events...look for our booth at the 1992 Scout "Fair" (or whatever it's official name is). You'll be hearing more about this as it draws near, but the Friends of the library will be there with their bean bags and prizes.

NOW-you've heard our New Year's resolutions...what about YOURS? Make 1992 the year to try something different. If you always read fiction, BREAK AWAY! Try a little non-fiction. Or vice-versa. How about something fast-paced and exciting like Blood Games by Jerry Bledsoe. This is an expertly researched true account of a brutal murder in rural North Carolina. What appears at first to be a burglary gone bad turns into something infinitely more barbaric, involving a trio of college kids linked together by drugs and Dungeons and Dragons.

If you lean towards westerns, check out Wondrous Times in the Frontier. Dee Brown, author of Bury My Heart at Wounded Knee, has produced a work rich in anecdotes about pioneers, women, lawmen, outlaws, newspapermen, schoolteachers, cowboys, tenderfeet, preachers, and native Americans. As in his other non-fiction, Brown shows that the American past is an amazing adventure filled with wonders, frustrations, triumphs, romance, and merriment.

Tomorrow Will Be Better may sound like a revision of Gone With The Wind, but actually it's "a true story of love, and one family's triumph over the horrors of World War II". Zdena Kapral, a Czech National, recounts her survival of three of the bloodiest events of the twentieth century.

If you insist on reading fiction, we've got some of that, too. Jerome Doolittle offers a "Tom Bethany" mystery entitled Strangle Hold, involving a murdered rich kid, a corrupt insurance company, and a host of heavies.

Or maybe this is your year for fantasy...All The Weyrs of Pern (by Anne McCaffrey can fill the bill. My source (thanks, Sherry) informs me that, while this is part of a series, each book stands alone, and that McCaffrey's tales are highly enjoyable, even for those who don't care much for fantasy.

And of course, we couldn't let the holiday season come to an end without featuring a diet book. Diets That Work, by Deralee Scanlon, R.D., compares and evaluates most of the weight-control plans that are popular today. Before you start your post-holiday diet, sit down with a glass of egg nog and some pumpkin pie, and read Diets That Work to determine the best plan for you.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Domestic violence is not a subject that many women want to talk about, but the effects can be devastating. Unless women are willing to discuss it openly, it will continue to destroy families and endanger another generation. Please, Ann, publish the following facts. People need to know that:

--Four thousand women die from domestic violence annually.

--Ninety-five percent of domestic violence victims are women.

--Thirty percent have been physically abused while pregnant.

--Over two-thirds of abused children come from households where the mother is abused.

--Children who grow up in violent homes come to believe that violence is normal and acceptable and that it is the best way to control others.

--The majority of violent adult prisoners were raised in violent homes.

--The FBI reports that 30 percent of the women murdered in this country were killed by their husbands or boyfriends.

--During the six-month period following an incident of domestic violence, approximately 32 percent of women are victimized again.

--Battering often occurs during pregnancy. In just one hospital emergency unit in Illinois, 21 percent of pregnant women had been battered. These women had twice as many miscarriages as non-battered women.

--Children from violent homes have higher risks of alcohol and drug abuse and juvenile delinquency.

--Children from violent homes have higher risks of alcohol and drug abuse and juvenile delinquency.

--Children in homes where domestic violence occurs are physically abused or seriously neglected at a rate 1,500 percent higher than the national average in the general population.

--Data from shelters in Illinois show that 51 percent of battered women reported the abuse occurred at least once a week. Another 25 percent reported a once-per-month frequency. More than 60 percent were hit with a fist or an object. In Texas, more than two-thirds had their lives threatened--60 percent were kicked, and 40 percent were abused with a knife or a gun. More than 25 percent were sexually assaulted.

If you were a victim, there are people who care about you and your children's future. Domestic violence counselors will not tell you what to do, but they can provide information on the legal system, financial assistance, job counseling and in some cases, shelter.

If there is no domestic violence program in your area, call the National Domestic Violence 24-hour hotline for help. The number is 1-800-333-SAFE. (TDD for the hearing impaired, 1-800-873-6363).

Domestic violence is a crime. If you keep it a secret, you are protecting a criminal and doing a grave injustice to yourself and your children.--Florence Forshey, president, Illinois Coalition Against Domestic Violence, Springfield, Ill.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: What is the accepted office attire for gentlemen? Anyone will tell you it's the suit jacket and tie, a combo that has been around for only the last century or so.

That bulky layer of fabric across the back and chest and the red power rag knotted into a choke hold over the Adam's apple convey the unspoken message: "I'm a member of the establishment, like 40 million other jerks who look just like me." And that's a message that any corporation can appreciate. That's why a man cannot hope to get or keep a job unless he wears that regulation uniform, whether the temperature is 100 degrees or below zero, rain or shine.

I've found that while at work, my thoughts rarely wander far from my own neck because, like a masochist, I wrapped a rope-like piece of cloth around it before I left the house. I do so because the boss says I must.

Often, when I'm entertaining a client, the entire region beneath my jacket becomes a marsh. Every inch of my white shirt is wet. I don't let on. What's important is that I look great.

At one time, designer Edith head was said to be working on a new idea--an attractive, lightweight jacket for men that would not require a tie. I couldn't believe it. Unfortunately, is months later she was dead and there has been no one to take her place.

Women claim that men have it easy when it comes to apparel. Men need buy only a couple of suits and they're set. Could be. Still, when the temperature is 102, I'd love to be able to wear a flimsy cotton something-or-other. For that particular freedom, I'd trade places with a woman in a minute. Let the suits and ties go the way of the girdle, I say.--Stuck at the Cleaners

DEAR STUCK: Confide in your haberdasher or a trusted salesman. He can help you. Your shirts are probably too tight and too high on your neck.

I trust you know that jackets can be purchased in cotton, seersucker, linen and many other fabrics. Investigate the alternatives. No matter how you cut it, buster, men have far fewer apparel woes than women. You came to the wrong place to complain.

Words Of Wisdom IV

I've read dozens of books and articles on the subject of success over the past 25 years. I'm still not sure how to accurately describe or define it. So rather than try to define it in my own words, I want to use the words of successful people.

I hope you will find guidance and inspiration for the new year in these words from the wise. My wish for each of you is that 1992 will be your most prosperous year ever.

Defining Success

- Six essential qualities that are the key to success: Sincerity, personal integrity, humility, courtesy, wisdom and charity.- Dr. William Menninger
- The person who gets ahead is the one who does more than is necessary - and keeps on doing it.- Unknown

- Success is a journey, not a destination.- Ben Sweetland
- If A equals success, then the formula is A equals X plus Y and Z, with X being work, Y play and Z keeping your mouth shut.- Albert Einstein
- Positive anything is better than negative nothing.- Elbert Hubbard
- It is impossible to fail totally if you dare to try.- Robert H. Schuller
- Success is doing with a smile what you have to do anyway.- Unknown
- The toughest thing about success is that you have to keep on being a success.- Irving Berlin
- Success is simply a matter of luck. Ask a failure.- Earl Wilson
- The difference between failure and success is doing a thing nearly right and doing a thing exactly right.- Edward Simmons
- People rarely succeed at anything unless they have fun doing it.- Unknown
- I'm a great believer in luck, and I find the harder I work the more I have of it.- Thomas Jefferson
- Success is achieved by those who try. Do it now.- W. Clement Stone

Reader's Insight

- As you travel on through life, no matter what your goal. Keep your eye upon the donut, and not upon the hole.- Seen in an Oklahoma donut shop by Dr. P. H. Haralson in 1948.
- Someday I hope to enjoy enough of what the world calls success

- so that someone will ask me, "What's the secret of it?" I shall say simply this: I get up when I fall down.- Paul Harvey
- Goals are as essential to success as air is to life.- David Schwartz
- If I had eight hours to chop down a tree, I'd spend six sharpening my ax.- Abraham Lincoln
- Successful people make decisions quickly (as soon as all of the facts are available) and change them slowly (if ever). Unsuccessful people make decisions very slowly, and change them often and quickly.- Napoleon Hill
- In three words I can sum up every thing I've learned about life: It goes on.- Robert Frost
- Nothing great was ever achieved without enthusiasm.- Ralph Waldo Emerson
- Think of all the beauty that's still left in and around you and be happy.- Anne Frank
- Tough times never last... but tough people do.- Dr. Robert Schuller
- Let him who would move the world, first move himself.- Socrates

If you would like to share your favorite quotations, we will try to include them in future columns. Send your letters to: Quotations, c/o Minding Your Own Business, P.O. Box 67, Amarillo, Texas 79105

NESTLE DOWN TO A STATELY HOME

Basement Allows Plenty Of Optional Living Space

© BY W.D. FARMER, A.I.B.D.

A two story foyer greets guests in style and the L shaped stair is open rail with a full view open rail balcony above. The living room and dining room are separated by the foyer and nestled away from daily traffic flow. However, the dining room is available directly from the spacious family room for added convenience.

The large family room is lavishly appointed with a soaring vaulted ceiling, majestic fireplace, built in wet bar and a fireplace surrounded by bookshelves and base cabinets.

The dining room and large breakfast room are easily served from the spacious kitchen which makes formal or informal entertaining easy. The breakfast room is highlighted by a sloped ceiling, access to the wet bar, porch availability and a bay window. The huge kitchen features an island with cooktop and extra counter top and cabinets for convenient meal preparation.

A central bath with powder room services the guest bedroom on the first floor and the laundry room is shown from the breakfast room.

There are three bedrooms on the second floor, the master bedroom featuring a tray ceiling and walk in closet. The luxurious master bath incorporates compartments with a garden tub, separate corner shower and two lavatories. A central bath services the remaining two bedrooms.

The basement level consists of the garage and abundant bonus space. A potential extra room, a game room and a full tub bath can be included in the basement.

The traditional exterior style features symmetry in window placement, hip and gable roof design and is drawn for brick construction.

The plan is Number 3044. It is a computer generated plan. It includes 3,063 square feet of heated space on the first and second floor. All W. D. Farmer plans include special construction details for energy efficiency and are drawn to meet FHA and VA requirements. For further information write W. D. Farmer, P. O. Question-Answer

Q: We are having a problem with mold growing throughout our new home during the winter. The house is brick and the walls are insulated well, including the windows. We have ceiling fans in every room. We've kept the thermostat at 68 degrees Fahrenheit. How can we prevent the mold from returning, especially in closets?

A: You must introduce cooler, drier air into your house, as it's so well insulated and draft-free. You can duct fresh outside air into your hot-air heating system plenum, but it should be dampered and connected to a humidistat set to go on when your furnace does. You can also preheat this air, but in order to do so you should consult a licensed mechanical engineer.

Your house is now so tight that cool, dry air cannot leak in under doors and around or through unsealed windows or through uncaulked gaps in the walls. This drier air would offset the moisture produced inside your home by normal living - steam from showers or baths, and cooking. Adding exhaust fans in the kitchen and bathroom can help solve the problem. Opening a window once a day and running these fans for 10 or 15 minutes should help. Experiment with how wide you open it and how long you run the fans. While this will negate some of the energy-saving built into your new house, it can solve the mold problem.

Another alternative is to run dehumidifiers in the basement and on the first floor. This will help remove some of the excess moisture that is encouraging the mold.

It takes more than blind luck to pin down the right home

Sure, you could go on stumbling through the housing market. Running into dead ends and getting cornered with too little information.

Or you could nail down that new home the easy way. By consulting an experienced real estate agent.

An agent can point out options you may have missed. Get you inside interesting homes that you may never have seen otherwise. Even do a lot of the groundwork, so you don't have to.

Like researching financing packages. Checking through the multiple-listing service for homes that fit your needs - and your pocketbook. Negotiating with the seller. And arranging for inspections. He or she will even be there at closing.

So instead of forging ahead without knowing what's out there, get some help from an expert. A real estate agent.

Inside The Hereford Brand, you'll find both qualified agents and valuable information about home buying. Everyday, the real estate classifieds list many properties and agents. And The Brand's Sunday housing section examines the latest market trends and housing opportunities.

With the right guide, hitting your mark can be child's play.

THERE'S MORE Hereford IN THE BRAND.

CLASSIFIED ADS
Classified advertising rates are based on 15 cents a word for first insertion ($3.00 minimum), and 11 cents for second publication and thereafter. Rates below are based on consecutive issues, no copy change, straight word ads.

TIMES	RATE	MIN
1 day per word	.15	3.00
2 days per word	.26	5.20
3 days per word	.37	7.40
4 days per word	.48	9.60
5 days per word	.59	11.80

If you run ads in five consecutive issues with NO changes, you get the same ad in the Reach 4 More free. The regular charge for that ad would be $4.00.

CLASSIFIED DISPLAY
Classified display rates apply to all other ads not set in solid word lines, those with captions, bold or larger type, special paragraphing, all capital letters. Rates are $4.15 per column inch; $3.45 an inch for consecutive additional insertions.

LEGALIS
Ad rates for legal notices are same as for classified display.

ERRORS
Every effort is made to avoid errors in word ads and legal notices. Advertisers should call attention to any errors immediately after the first insertion. We will not be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion. In case of errors by the publishers, an additional insertion will be published.

One play you could run clear of home buying interference.

Financing, Down Payments, Price negotiations. Inspections. All obstacles that could block you from buying a home.
 But one move could get you right through that red tape. A call to an experienced real estate agent.
 An expert agent can coach you smoothly through the entire home buying process. From using the sophisticated multiple listing service to find the home that fits your needs and your budget. To tackling financing options. Setting up and monitoring inspections. Negotiating price. And even maneuvering you through closing.
 So when you need a skilled teammate, get someone who really knows the housing field—a real estate agent.
 Read The Hereford Brand for more information about qualified agents. Every day, the real estate classifieds list many properties and agents. And on Sundays the housing section examines the latest market trends and home buying opportunities.
 Getting the right coaching now could mean the difference between confusion and closing.
THERE'S MORE Hereford IN THE BRAND.

Communism goes from penthouse to outhouse

MOSCOW (AP) - Last December, Yevgeny Kafyrin was a high-ranking official at Moscow's city Communist Party Committee, where he presided over meetings and banquets and received weekly perks of beef, chicken and cheese.

This December, Kafyrin has a temporary job teaching political theory at the Moscow teaching school. He has lots of free time, which he spends standing in line outside grocery stores, helping his wife shop.

The fate of Kafyrin, a heavysuit man who favors the drab gray suit of the Soviet bureaucrat, mirrors the changes that wracked the Soviet Union in 1991: The global superpower now can barely feed its own people and faces an uncertain future.

The August coup was the final kick that pushed the already wobbly Soviet Union into collapse. Once a clumsy conglomeration of 15 republics that supported each other by relying on heavy centralized government subsidies, the vast land is now a work-in-progress, a collection of states facing the new year with growing uncertainty.

The coup cost Kafyrin his job. At the time, he was vacationing with his family. He returned to Moscow only to find all the doors and windows of his office sealed and guarded by the police, in accordance with a decree from Russian Federation President Boris N. Yeltsin.

The coup also forced Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev to resign his post as president (since there is no longer a Soviet Union) and as general secretary of the Communist Party.

Gorbachev, whose policies of perestroika and glasnost helped drag the country out of its totalitarian mold, has no clearly defined role in the commonwealth.

The party itself, once touted as the vanguard of the people, no longer exists. When Yeltsin suspended its activities in Russia after the coup, many people were happy to turn in their party cards. They said they had joined only to further their careers.

"When I began to work for the Party Committee, everyone knew perfectly well that my job would only be a temporary one," acknowledged Kafyrin, 46, who joined the party in 1970. He said he knew the party's days were numbered.

"The party was just not in the position to regulate events taking place within its own structure. So as a political organization it gradually ceased to exist," he said.

Because of the party's flaws, his committee was expecting some sort of desperate action, like the coup, sometime during the year, Kafyrin said.

Unlike many former party officials who have been forced to start life all over again, Kafyrin did not have a hard time finding employment in the newly competitive job market.

He has the Soviet equivalent of a doctoral degree from Moscow State University's department of "philosophy," an umbrella term meaning Marxist-Leninist theory with a smidgen of French philosophy and a dab of other Western theories thrown in. Gorbachev's wife, Raisa, graduated from the same department.

Proud of his credentials as a "specialist," Kafyrin said that when the party was suspended, he was immediately offered a new job in the Moscow Pedagogical Institute.

And he still works as an unofficial party organizer when he's not at work or helping his wife with the shopping.

Others have not been so adept. Last week the Sovetskaya Rossiya newspaper wrote about a former Komsomol Communist Youth League official who has been searching for a new job for months without success.

Wearing a suit rented from a local theater shop, he spends his evenings crashing fancy receptions at a downtown restaurant, to bring food home to his family and to collect bottles of vodka and beer to resell on the street.

But Kafyrin's life is bound to get more complicated as 1991 turns into 1992.

His new post is only temporary, and will end when a colleague returns from maternity leave. His new salary is slightly higher than his Party Committee wages, but he does not receive his former weekly food allocation of beef, chicken, cheese and sausage, rare delicacies for which most Soviets must queue for hours.

And the only subject he is trained to teach - Marxist-Leninist theory - is no longer in demand.

"Students these days are all different. There are some who want me just to teach the history of philosophy, there are others who are interested in Marxism," Kafyrin explained.

"But those who know the history of philosophy know perfectly well that Marxism is one of the biggest breakthroughs in human and scientific theory," he said, trying to sound convincing.

"Yeltsin actually helped us Communists. Only after party activities were forbidden did it become obvious which party members were real Communists and which were careerists," he said. "For the future of the Communist movement, it's important to know who's who."

Top US stories

By The Associated Press

Here are the top stories of 1991 as selected by U.S. newspaper editors and broadcast news directors polled by The Associated Press.

In the poll, 153 editors and news directors ranked the stories. A first-place vote earned a story 10 points and a 10th-place listing one point. Stories are followed by the number of points they received.

1. U.S.-led force crushes Iraq's war machine. The aftermath: Kurdish refugees, a dispute over Iraq's nuclear program, and Saddam holds on. 1,290.
2. Coup by hard-liners aimed at ousting Mikhail Gorbachev fails, but the upshot is the collapse of communism and the union. 1,090.
3. Black conservative Clarence Thomas is nominated to replace Thurgood Marshall on the U.S. Supreme Court. At the brink of his confirmation he is accused of sexually harassing an associate, Anita Hill. He is confirmed. 783.
4. The release of Associated Press reporter Terry Anderson brings an end to the captivity of American hostages in Lebanon. 750.
5. The economy tumbles and American confidence is shaken. 628.
6. The Cold War ends. Bush and Gorbachev announce nuclear arms reductions, Warsaw Pact dissolves its military component. 533.
7. The AIDS epidemic is 10 years old and is highlighted by the plights of Kimberly Bergalis and basketball star Earvin "Magic" Johnson. 488.
8. Unemployed factory worker Jeffrey Dahmer is accused in Milwaukee of killing 17 men and chopping up their bodies. 236.
9. Prodded by the United States, Arabs and Israelis meet in Madrid and then Washington, with inconclusive results. 208.
10. A video camera catches white police officers beating a black motorist, setting off a furor over racism in the Los Angeles Police Department. 183.

The next five finishers were the William Kennedy Smith rape trial, the slide in President Bush's popularity, the massacre of 23 people in a Killeen, Texas, cafeteria by a gunman who then killed himself, abortion and the David Duke campaign for governor of Louisiana.

The Associated Press also polled 90 editors in 42 countries outside the United States as to their choices for the top 10 stories.

Their picks:

1. The Gulf War; a military coalition forces Iraq out of Kuwait.
2. Hard-line coup against Mikhail Gorbachev fails, and Soviet republics move toward independence.
3. Yugoslavia's civil war rages.
4. Mideast peace talks between Israelis and Arabs.
5. The end of the Cold War.
6. South Africa dismantles apartheid.
7. European Community nations wrangle over closer political and financial integration.
8. AIDS epidemic spreads.
9. Cambodian peace settlement signed.
10. Rajiv Gandhi assassinated.

'Terminator 2' tops U.S. movies in 1991

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Arnold Schwarzenegger's "Terminator 2: Judgment Day" has raked in $204.2 million, to become the top-grossing film of 1991, which is expected to be the third most lucrative year in box-office history.

"Robin Hood: Prince of Thieves" finished second with a North American theater gross of $165.5 million, according to preliminary figures released Thursday by Exhibitor Relations Co. Inc.

It was followed by "The Silence of the Lambs," "City Slickers" and "Sleeping With the Enemy."

"Terminator 2" and the No. 8 film, "The Addams Family," are still playing in theaters, so their receipts will grow slightly before the year is out.

Overall figures have not been released, but the industry publication Daily Variety has predicted 1991 will finish behind 1989 and 1990 as the best box office years in history, although overall movie attendance declined about 4 percent this year.

It was also a tough financial year for some studios.

Carolco Pictures, which produced "Terminator 2," is in financial distress, and Orion Pictures, the maker of "The Silence of the Lambs," is in bankruptcy court.

Here is a list of the top films that debuted in 1991, with distributor, release date, and total gross to date. The lineup could change slightly by year's end.

1. "Terminator 2: Judgment Day," TriStar, July 3, $204.2 million.
2. "Robin Hood: Prince of Thieves," Warner Bros., June 14, $165.5 million.
3. "The Silence of the Lambs," Orion, Feb. 14, $130.7 million.
4. "City Slickers," Columbia, June 7, $120.7 million.
5. "Sleeping With the Enemy," 20th Century Fox, Feb. 8, $100.3 million.
6. "The Naked Gun 2 1/2: The Smell of Fear," Paramount, June 28, $86.8 million.
7. "Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles II: The Secret of the Ooze," New Line, March 22, $78.6 million.
8. "The Addams Family," Paramount, Nov. 22, $78.4 million.
9. "Backdraft," Universal, May 24, $77.7 million.
10. "Hot Shots!" 20th Century Fox, July 26, $68.3 million.

Class to be given on dolls

Senior citizens interested in making porcelain dolls can sign up for classes to be held at the center.

Barbara Edwards has offered to provide the instruction which will consist of three classes beginning in January. Classes will be limited to 10 people. Each student will be responsible for the purchase of their own supplies. The center will do the firing.

These beautiful dolls have become very popular again during the last few years and make beautiful gifts and collectibles.

If you are interested in signing up for classes, please contact Rosalee McGowen at 364-0471 or Barbara Wirt at the Senior Center 364-5681.

NEW MEMBERS
 John Chavarria, Marcos and Marcella Madrid, Marie and Paul Estrada, Ed and Ann Line, Paul and Mary Kay Hagar and Jess and Madalena Hudson.

I can't believe another year has gone by! So many things, both good and bad, have happened. We do have a lot to be thankful for.

I've had the privilege of working as your director for 13 years. It seems each year gets better.

Our Christmas Party is always a special time. We had a delicious meal and great entertainment. We want to thank Richard Selmon and his daughter, Tonya, for the wonderful piano playing and singing. They are great! Also our Christmas Party wouldn't be complete without that ole' gentleman, Santa. Somehow he always finds the Center and on the same night of our party. Thank you, Santa!

We will be having a New Year's Party at the Center. It will start at 8 p.m. and last until 1992!! There will be a band, "We Three," from Clovis for those who would like to dance. Also we will have dominoes, Spinner, bridge and Skip-Bo. There will be refreshments served. Please come... we'll have lots of fun. This will be our first New Year's party, and we want it to be a success.

See you next year at the Center!!

Daniels honored by local Masons

Margie Daniels, executive director of Hereford Senior Citizens Association, was presented the Community Builders Award by the Hereford Masonic Lodge No. 489 at a special ceremony on Thursday, December 12 at the Senior Center. The award was granted by the Grand Lodge of Texas and is given to persons for "exemplary service to the community." Worshipful Master David Euler acted as presenter for the state organization.

John Bunch served as master of ceremonies for the event and introduced lodge officials and special guests attending the ceremony. Refreshments were served.

Margie received this award for her work in senior citizens programs locally and at the state level. Before coming to Hereford, Margie worked as administrator of a retirements center. When she moved to Hereford 13 years ago, she began working as director of the senior citizens center in the old Central School building. Under her direction and leadership the association has expanded to an organization with a full range of service to older individuals in the community. The Senior Center which has been built is known as "one-of-a-kind" throughout the state and nation. We are all proud of Margie.

Nutrition Notes

By CHARLOTTE R. CLARK
M.S. RD/LD
Eat Healthy

The "goodies" that we all enjoy during the holiday season are traditional but can complicate our "diets."

One needs to remember that healthy eating can be summed up in a few words: balance, variety and moderation. The foundation of good health is a well-balanced, variety and moderation make it happen.

These facts are very important to each and every person and need to be kept in mind when we are tempted to indulge, especially to an excessive degree in the holiday cheer delicacies.

Balance in the diet is achieved by getting the right amount of nutrients in the right proportions and not taking in more calories than you use.

More than 40 nutrients are needed for good health and no one food has them all. To get all the vitamins, mineral, fiber, protein, carbohydrates and essential fats required, one's food plan should include selections from all the daily food choices which insure variety.

To keep calories in check, watch portion sizes. Moderation also means keeping an eye on fat, sugar and salt intake. If you love hamburgers, french fries and ice cream, you don't have to give them up—just eat smaller amounts less frequently.

Good nutrition starts with healthful thinking one needs to separate fact from fiction. Several examples:

1. You adore hot fudge sundaes. If you eat one, just balance the next few days with foods lower in fat and calories.

2. Vegetables in creamy sauces can be loaded with saturated fats. Choose plain vegetables more often.

3. You splurge on a piece of chocolate cake and think you should go without dinner. never skip meals to compensate for extra calories—it's important to establish a regular eating pattern. Three balanced meals a day aren't always possible—well-planned, healthful snacks in between smaller meals will provide the nutrients you need without going overboard on calories.

*The exception to this advice is that if you have a health problem and you need a more structured daily intake, always adhere to those guidelines.

4. You eat oat bran cereal everyday so do not need to worry about saturated fats or cholesterol in your other meals. No one type of soluble fiber is a magic cure to lower cholesterol—it's your total diet that counts.

Good eating habits are just one of the variables that can maximize health. Exercise is another factor; diet and physical activity work hand in hand to maintain a fit, healthy body.

Young at Heart Choir

After our very busy November and early December activities, the choir has taken a short vacation from practice.

The choir was honored to participate in the King's Manor Christmas party on Friday, December 12. Monday, December 16 found us at the Community Center for the Breakfast Kiwanis club Christmas Party. A number of Christmas carols were presented along with scripture readings by Bill Lamm.

We will resume our regular meetings on Thursday January 9. Come join us and start the new Year off right. We welcome anyone to come join us. Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to everyone from the Young-At-Heart Choir.

President's Corner

Guess I'm really having fun! "Time flies when you're having fun," so the saying goes. Seems like July 4th was only last month.

We had a successful Festival of Trees in November, thanks to the generosity and hard work of a lot of fine people.

On behalf of the members of the Board of Directors, I want to wish everyone a very Merry and Blessed Christmas and a Happy New Year!

Eye Openers

By Dr. Hugh B. Currie
Currie Eye Institute
DID YOU KNOW...?

Refractive surgery is surgery done on the cornea (clear window on front of eye) which changes the power that a person needs in their glasses. The most common way this change in refraction is accomplished is with a procedure called radial keratotomy or RK. Radial keratotomy changes the shape of the cornea by flattening it. This is done by making several radial cuts into the corneal surface. This pattern of cuts takes the shape of the blades on the fan of a windmill. There are usually 4 to 8 of these cuts made fairly deeply into the cornea and uniformly spaced. Since the cornea is flattened, the focus of the light into the back of the eye changes. If a person is nearsighted, this change in focus will result in a decrease in the nearsightedness.

Radial keratotomy will not work for farsightedness. It is also not adequate to correct large amounts of nearsightedness. It has been used on large numbers of people to correct mild to moderate nearsightedness successfully.

Less than 1/2 of all ophthalmologists perform this operation. Most of those that elect not to do this operation feel that the operation's unpredictability in occasional cases is not acceptable. These surgeons also fear that the operation weakens the cornea so that a few patients continue to slowly progress in their corneal flattening until they begin to become farsighted, a very undesirable result. This corneal weakening is thought to be responsible for a few corneal ruptures during accidental blows to the eyeball. Consideration of these factors has not discouraged the thousands of people who have elected to have radial keratotomy and who are "willing to take their chances."

Anyone interested in radial keratotomy should be careful to take the time to understand this operation and its results completely. This is not a procedure to be taken lightly.

'Granny dumping' increasing in US

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - One elderly woman was left sitting in a hospital driveway as a car sped away. Another was wheeled into an emergency room with a note saying, "Please take care of her," pinned to her purse.

Emergency room workers call it "granny dumping," a phenomenon that they say is becoming familiar across the country as families crumble under the strain of caring for relatives who are living longer than ever.

"It's tough," says Dr. Jack Allison, president of the American College of Emergency Physicians. "There's a systemic involvement here, a reflection of the health care system that leaves these patients abandoned."

An informal survey by the ACEP drew 169 responses from emergency rooms across the country, reporting an average of eight abandonments a week, he said.

The American Association of Retired Persons, which recently met in San Francisco, raised the issue in a recent issue of its "Bulletin," describing abandonment as a small but rapidly growing problem.

Elderly abandonment seems to be most noticeable in states like Florida, California and Texas that have large retirement communities, said Dr. Toni Mitchell, director of Tampa General Hospital's adult emergency department.

Recently, the Tampa emergency room staff found a woman sitting in a wheelchair, a note pinned to her that said, "She's sick. Please take care of her." Mitchell calls these cases "the positive taillight sign. They roll them in the door and all I see is the taillights vanishing in the distance."

Another woman was literally dumped in a hospital driveway, recalled Allison, chief of services for the emergency department of Pitt County Memorial Hospital in Greenville, N.C.

Family and staff had faded away as the elderly woman developed a drinking problem, leaving one housekeeper who "one day, was just absolutely undone by the whole situation, loaded up granny, (drove to the emergency room), opened up the door, shoved her out on the concrete and drove away," he said.

More commonly, the elderly person is brought in or transferred in by landlord or nursing home under pretext of illness. Then, when the emergency room is ready to send the patient home, there's suddenly no one in sight, the boarding room is taken or the nursing home place is gone.

In San Francisco, the most common manifestation of the problem is family members who leave a relative with a host of suggested ailments, said emergency department physician Ellen Taliaferro.

"At 3 a.m. it turns out the phone number they gave us doesn't work," she said.

Some families seem to just want a break.

In one case, doctors tracking the movements of a frequent patient realized that the family was dropping the man off, working an 8-hour shift, and then reappearing to reclaim him, she said.

"The patients that are most common here are the people who have sort of been abandoned by life. They get too sick to stay in the shelter and they're not quite sick enough to stay in the hospital and they don't have friends or relatives or resources to take care of them," she said.

One reason elderly abandonment seems to be becoming more visible now is that overtaxed emergency rooms can no longer absorb the strain of being an unofficial placement center, doctors said.

"We are so overwhelmed with all of the ills of society," Mitchell said.

About one-third of the respondents to the ACEP survey rated the problem as a "four" or higher on a severity scale of one to six. The most common reason for abandonment, they said, was due to depletion of emotional, not financial resources.

Mitchell and Allison would like to see social service agencies providing more outpatient and in-home services to help families cope with relatives.

In California, "there are services and programs available," said Paige Talley of the California Department of Aging. "I do feel that the families just get so frustrated that they don't know what to do."

The problem of taking care of aging relatives has long been recognized, said Jean Grun, spokeswoman for the Levittown, Pa., group, Children of Aging Parents.

The government in March reported that life expectancy in the United States had reached a record 75 years, up from 62.9 years in 1940.

Often the primary caregiver is a woman.

"She's caught in the middle, she has her own children, she has her husband to take care of and then she's driven to give attention to her parents or his parents. It is quite a strain," Grun said.

Experts advise families to take time for themselves, perhaps through placing the relatives in an adult day care program. Some companies are offering multigenerational day care which mixes seniors with infants, something that both sides seem to benefit from, Grun said.

Realizing that the caregiver isn't alone is important, said AARP spokesman Ted Bobrow. "They don't have to take it all on their own shoulders."

Hotline responds to needs of elderly

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Claudia Cadera had answered hundreds of calls on the suicide line for the elderly. But nothing prepared her for one woman's late-night cry for help.

The woman had just taken a lethal dose of pills to end the pain of cancer, but she didn't want to spend her last hour alone. She asked Cadera just to talk with her.

"I was kind of upset. I didn't want to be talking to someone who was dying. I did my best to try and talk her out of it," said Cadera, a volunteer with the 24-hour crisis hot line for senior citizens.

"I regretted later that I was sort of pushing this to get her to change her mind. ... Maybe I could have just been there for her," said Cadera, still troubled a month later by the sound of the line going dead.

Life or death decisions - whether to trace a call, just talk, or send for help - are made each day by volunteers at the unusual hot line in a storefront office. Volunteers answer about 15 calls in the early morning hours alone, the shift Cadera has worked once a week for five years.

"The elderly have more, and more intense, losses and they get less support from society in terms of agism in this culture. There is an attitude, 'Well, they're old anyway.' There is not the same compassion," said Patrick Arbore, director of the Center for Elderly Suicide Prevention & Grief Related Services, which runs the line.

Volunteers on the "Friendship Line," as the service is called, are trained for eight weeks in the special needs of the elderly, who have the highest rate of suicide of any U.S. age group.

The line receives about 7,000 calls a year, and volunteers - who include senior citizens - make house visits as well.

"We really make a connection and people really open themselves up and tell you things they never tell anyone because you are not judgmental and because you are their same age - not the age of a son or daughter - but someone they can identify with," said Cadera, 75.

Founded in 1973, the line subsists on part of a $35,000 a year city grant it shares with the city's suicide prevention hot line.

Arbore spent four years calling one despondent man, who initially refused help.

"The first time I called, he said he didn't want to talk and that the call was of no value. I said, 'OK, but how about tomorrow?' He said, 'It won't do any good,'" said Arbore, who had initiated the first call after learning of the man's suicide attempt.

Arbore called the next day and the next and for two months the man said each time, "It will do no good."

"But he answered," Arbore said. After three years of calls and visits, the man asked for a ride to see his wife at her nursing home and later drove himself to get a haircut, an act that helped him feel independent again.

Calls to the line come from around the nation but primarily from the San Francisco region and include people who are not suicidal, but who are mentally ill or in need of reassurance.

"They seem to be seeking a balance weight, a reality check. They are saying, 'I think I am all right and I want to touch you and that will help me confirm that the world is still here,'" said Cadera.

She said the toughest times are when she answers two calls back-to-back from people close to taking their own lives.

"When you have pulled someone back from the edge, you are exhausted. It takes about one hour and then to pick up the phone and hear a voice saying, 'I've just taken pills.' To have that is the worst thing that can happen to you," she said.

The job does have its own rewards. "I'm not really doing it for other people. I'm doing it for my own personal growth," Cadera said. "I have a need to connect with people on a gut level and it's something I don't get enough of in everyday life. And if that is helping someone that's good."

The hot line number is (415) 752-3778.

Golden Line Dancers

The Golden Line Dancers are like everyone else during the holidays - rushing around and hurrying so. They always manage to have an hour every Monday and Friday to do the thing they like best - line dance. The exercise, fellowship and fun we have is more than you can imagine.

During the Thanksgiving holiday, guests in the home of Edward and Leona Schilling were Russell and Evelyn Altmiller, Desley and Sherri Altmiller, Rachel and Dustin - all from Olney.

Also visiting were Betty Fiel, Becky and Hope Stewart from Amarillo; Raymond and Peggy Miller and Kyle from Plainview; Peggy Miller from Dallas; Rodney and Pam Miller and Sarah from Canyon; Wayne and Mary Schilling, Amy, B.J., Greg and Allen from Slaton; Burl and Paula Miller, James and Jacob of Hereford; and Matt and Kyla Schilling, Karli and Karie from Hereford.

The group had a fantastic Thanksgiving dinner and enjoyed family fun and fellowship. They also drove go-carts, played basketball and horseshoes.

Ed McCreary spent Thanksgiving in Kansas City with his daughter. On the way, he visited two grandsons and their families in Wichita Falls.

Geraldine Frank spent Thanksgiving with her daughter, Joanne Bauldin and family in Gainesville.

Jolene Bledsoe spent the Thanksgiving holidays with the Charlie Bell family at Camp David near Austin. The family enjoyed food, games and fellowship.

Upon her return home, she and Nedra Robinson enjoyed a visit with their friend, Mary Helen Askew Miller from Irving. Mary Helen and her husband, Chuck, has spent the holidays with her son, Jerry Askew and family in Hereford.

Betha Tiefel spent a weekend in Arlington with the Danny Boyer's. She went with Herbert and Viradelle Burns from Amarillo.

Bessie Story spent Thanksgiving in Dallas with her son and family. Bessie has been feeling under the weather and we hope she returns to good health soon.

Dr. Eugene and Norma Hendon spent the Thanksgiving holidays in the Dallas area with their Children and grandchildren.

The Pete Carmichael's hosted several family members during Thanksgiving. Visiting were Mr. and Mrs. Ken Carmichael, sons Keith and family, Kevin and family; Doug Carmichael and Shari James of El Paso. Carmichaels from Missouri spent from Monday evening through Sunday afternoon with them.

The Festival of Trees was a big success and the line dancers were right in there doing their part. As previously reported they made all the decorations for their "Fantasy Angel" Christmas tree that was auctioned off and purchased by Joe Artho. Thanks Joe. They also helped in the craft booth, sold tickets and most anything that needed to be done.

On Wednesday evening, Dec. 11, the Line Dancers had their annual Christmas party. A wonderful time was had by all with approximately 42 in attendance.

November birthdays include Mildred Betzen, Bunky Daniels and Jane Packard. Only one line dancer is celebrating a birthday in December - Happy Birthday to Bessie Story.

Consumer Groups Storm Local Grocery Stores!

Stores point finger at newspaper

Today saw one of the largest consumer responses of the week to offers made by local grocery stores for discounted prices. Across the city, shoppers were redeeming coupons cut from the local paper in record numbers.

"We know any offer we make will be highlighted most by the newspaper," commented a grocery store spokesman. "Our goal is simply to inform the consumers that these discounts are available. We are confident they will respond if they see it in the paper." His statement was backed by recent Consumer Data Service reports that indicated grocery store ads triple volume on discounted items and double volume on regularly priced items. It also revealed grocery ads are read by well over 70% of newspaper readers.

Grocery store representatives unanimously agreed that newspaper advertising was the only way to get immediate consumer response. One grocer remarked, "Most people read the paper, and a bunch of those readers clip our coupons. It's that simple." His comments reflect the well known Manufacturer's Coupon Center report which stated that over 80% of all families use coupons.

"When consumers want more for their money, they always go to the newspaper," a grocery official said. When pressed by reporters for the best offer he could make to the consumers he replied, "Look in the paper, it's all right there. Green leaf lettuce, two heads for 79¢... with a coupon of course."

Tyne Daly, Gena Rowlands excel in 'Face of a Stranger'

Emmy and Tony Award-winner Tyne Daly (left) stars as Dollie, a homeless woman alone on the streets of Seattle, in the made-for-television drama, Face of a Stranger, airing Sunday on CBS. The film is directed by Claudia Weill, from a script by Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright Marsha Norman. Gena Rowlands co-stars.

Claudia Weill directs script by Marsha Norman

By Suzanne Gill

Of all the things Face of a Stranger might have been, it is a success. Airing Sunday, Dec. 29, on CBS, the movie is one of the two or three network dramas that appear each season making it impossible to condemn the state of made-for-TV movies wholesale. It succeeds as a women's film, as a film about homelessness and as a valentine to late middle age. Talented people on both sides of the screen have given more than their names to the movie; it bears the marks of a labor of love. In Face of a Stranger, actresses Tyne Daly and Gena Rowlands, director Claudia Weill and screenwriter Marsha Norman manage to show us a butterfly without killing it and mounting it on the head of a pin.

In the harbor city of Seattle two lives intersect. Aristocratic, open-hearted Pat Foster (Rowlands) is mistress of an elegant high-rise apartment in the center of town. She walks or takes a taxi to the market, to lunch or to visit her daughter (Cynthia Nixon) at the antique shop where the young woman works. At night, she and her husband (Kevin Tighe) frequently go out. Her chief concern is her daughter's choice of men: a thoughtless, ambitious young stock broker who announces their impending marriage without even troubling himself to propose.

In a stairway across from the apartment lives Dollie, a keen-eyed bag lady (Daly) who picks Pat from the crowd. Life on the street has made Dollie bold, outspoken and even philosophical. Like most people, she hides her sorrow and her neuroses, presenting a cheerful, if rather grubby face to the world, where she must beg for her daily bread. Although she isn't afraid to ask for what she wants, Dollie won't let herself be treated as an object. Instead, she strikes up a friendship with Pat, offering unsolicited advice in exchange for a cheap umbrella or a pair of boots.

Events swiftly overtake them both. Pat's husband dies suddenly, leaving behind unfinished business in the form of a mountain of debt. Pat, who has never had a job, or lived anywhere else in the city, finds that her usual relationships fail her. Instead, she embarks on a new life with encouragement from Dollie and an old college friend, David (Harris Yullin).

Inner and outer, height and depth, light and darkness — all are used to good effect by Weill. Pat's odyssey takes her from high-rise to street level, and eventually to a dark and hellish encounter with a nameless family clinging to hope in a cruel underworld of poverty. Rowlands makes the most of every scene. Her Pat has inner resources that went undetected during long years of comfortable living (but never complacency). She emerges brilliant, with new wings.

STAR NOTES

Victims' activist now wife of 'Commish'

By Lisa Otoupal

ABC's newest cop show, The Commish takes a lighthearted look at the problems facing a suburban police commissioner. While it may not have the same punch as Law & Order or L.A. Law, it does have something those shows don't: a strong focus on the characters' families. Heading up the commish's family is his wife, Rachel, played by Theresa Saldana.

While still in her teens, Saldana began her career on the New York stage, working summer stock and dinner theater until her first feature-film role in Nunzio. Her big TV break came with a starring role in the series Kojak.

Saldana moved to Los Angeles and, in just six weeks, was starring in I Wanna Hold Your Hand as Grace. Her next major film was Defiance with Jan-Michael Vincent, then came the role of Jake LaMotta's sister-in-law in Raging Bull.

In 1982, the actress was brutally assaulted. During her recovery, she founded Victims for Victims, a self-help group that received recognition as one of the leading victims' groups in the United States. Her efforts earned her a Presidential Commendation and, in 1984, the lead in NBC's Victims for Victims: The Theresa Saldana Story. Her book, Beyond Survival, which deals with the experiences of victims (her own included), won the Christopher Medal.

Picks and pans of week's bowl games

By Steve Paschal

There are 15 college football bowl games on tap this week, so here's a quick list of the matches to watch (or avoid), if at all possible.

Best Matchup: Ironically, at a time when universities and bowl committees are skirting the rules in an effort to put together glamour games, the best New Year's battle figures to be in Pasadena, California. PAC-10 champion Washington and Big 10 winner Michigan, which are bound to the Rose Bowl by conference commitment, clash in the only game that features two legitimate national championship contenders.

The 11-0 Huskies are, in the eyes of many fans west of the Mississippi, the best team in the country and should be number one if they beat the fourth-ranked Wolverines, regardless of what top-ranked Miami does against a relatively weak Nebraska team in the Orange Bowl.

Most Underrated Game: Thanks to an early-season loss to Tulsa, Texas A&M has never achieved the national recognition afforded to Florida State. But the SWC champion Aggies and SEC runner-up Seminoles, this year's Cotton Bowl combatants, may put on the best New Year's Day show.

For Football Junkies Only: There are only three types of people who will bother with the Independence Bowl: Georgians, Arkansans and people with nothing better to do on Dec. 29.

Window shopping in 'Aspen': no sale

Documentary on PBS long but not deep
By Dan Rice

The term "documentary" is derived from the French documentaire, used to describe travel films. Frederick Wiseman's new documentary Aspen, due to air on PBS Monday, Dec. 30, does more than merely travel to this Colorado resort town, it stays for a good, long visit — a 2 1/2 hour visit in fact. Presented without the traditional documentary devices of explanatory narration, captions or even background music, Aspen allows the viewer to experience the local lifestyle more as a lingering fly on the wall than a consumer snatching scripted glimpses. On the other hand, this subtle, just-hanging-out approach with its too-long segments leaves us anxious to move on; we can taste the flavors, but must we finish every course?

Wiseman's list of documentaries to his credit include Near Death, a six-hour program dealing with the interaction of the intensely ill with invasive life-sustaining machines. His Aspen suffers from the lack of editorial stance and any direct confrontation with serious local issues.

While cinematographer John Davey has captured thrilling vistas of the snow-painted mountainscapes, we are left wanting more. Too much time is spent indoors attending meetings and functions that could occur in any given city. Our trip to Aspen is all but used up with the likes of a plastic surgeons' slide show on nose-jobs and a group of nameless people playing charades.

We see the rich and affluent in the spas and on the slopes, wrapped in full-length furs and housed in glorious mansions, but there is more than glamour here. Besides a peek at a village of shacks and trailers and a Latino's statement that he knows of only one area Hispanic who owns a home, Aspen offers no clues as to the two-time boom town's situation where the skyrocketing property values have made it impossible for locals working in the service industry to afford to live in their hometown.

SOAP TALK

Brick, Channing: switched at birth

By Candace Havens

Dear Candace: During an episode of Santa Barbara (before Sophia was shot by Eden), a lot of reference was made to Channing, who was the son of Sophia and Lionel. When I first started watching this soap a number of years ago, Sophia and Lionel had another son, Brick, whose wife died in a fire.

What is the relationship, if any, between the two? Also, in what sequence does all of it come together? Was Brick around before Channing, or even before Sophia was married to C.C. Capwell? Please help me understand. —D.G., Cheshire, Mass.

Dear Reader: I'll try to explain the situation as best I can. Channing Capwell was murdered soon after Santa Barbara began. He was thought to be the son of C.C. Capwell and Sophia. Later on, we discovered that Channing was actually killed by his own mother, who was trying to scare Channing's real father, Lionel Lockridge.

Minx Lockridge, matriarch of the Lockridge clan, threw a wrench in things when it was discovered she burned evidence revealing Brick Wallace, her chauffeur, is actually the real Channing Capwell. So, the man Sophia shot wasn't really her son. Years later, Minx admitted she had changed the babies at birth, because she didn't want the boy to be raised by the Capwells. Therefore, Brick Wallace is actually Channing Capwell.

Dear Candace: I was so glad to read in your column that someone else thinks the new Vicky/Marley stinks on Another World! The new Grant is terrible, too. What is the address to write to NBC and voice our opinions? —Thank you, Tricia Butler, Shelby, NC.

Dear Reader: I agree that perhaps Jensen Buchanan made a weak start in the twin-sister roles, but I think she has come a long way in the past few weeks. I have a feeling it won't be too long before we forget there was someone else portraying the characters before her. Send your letter to Another World, c/o NBC-TV, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N.Y., 10112.

I want to hear from you! Send your questions and comments to Candace Havens, Soap Talk, P.O. Box 961009, Fort Worth, Texas 76161-1009.

Reader wants to write Abdul, Roberts, Magic Johnson

By Taylor Michaels

Q: I am 13 years old. I was wondering if I could have the addresses for Paula Abdul, Julia Roberts and Magic Johnson.

I also read the letter from the person who wrote about shows wasting food while other people go hungry. Please don't leave my article out, because I feel strongly I know what I'm talking about. The earth was a gift and we're wasting it. We know we need to recycle, but some people don't because they know they won't be around in the future. But if you were living in the future, you would wish the earth's resources hadn't been wasted. I just wanted to tell the world about recycling. —Oscar Chavly, Rock Springs, Wyo.

Magic Johnson

A: Thanks for your comments. Write Abdul c/o Virgin Records, 9247 Alden Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif., 90210. Write Roberts c/o ICM, 8899 Beverly Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif., 90048. Write Johnson c/o Los Angeles Lakers, P.O. Box 10, Inglewood, Calif., 90306.

Q: To whom is Arnold Schwarzenegger married? Has he been married more than once? How many children does he have? —LaVon Cummings, Chanote, Kan.

A: The actor married NBC news-woman Maria Shriver on April 26, 1986. They have one child, a daughter named Katherine Eunice (born while Schwarzenegger was filming Total Recall). This is his first marriage, and it seems to be a happy one.

Q: Can you tell me about Patrick Swayze? Where can I write him? —R. Caron, Prescott, Ariz.

A: Swayze was born on Aug. 18, 1954, in Houston. His career began as a dancer under his choreographer mother's tutelage. He went on to dance on Broadway and made his feature film debut in Skatetown, U.S.A. He starred in various other films before becoming an "overnight success" in Dirty Dancing in 1987. He is married to actress/dancer Lisa Niemi. You can write him c/o Triad Artists, 10100 Santa Monica Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif., 90067.

Q: There is a program on NBC called The Adventures of Mark and Brian. Could you please tell me where I could write to these guys? I recently moved from Southern California and I listened to Mark and Brian on KLOS daily, so I'm very excited to see they are on a national program. —Larri L. Erstad, Truth or Consequences, N.M.

A: Write to the adventuresome duo c/o NBC, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N.Y., 10112.

Q: I would like more information on the guy who played in Hardball — the one with all the hair and the tight jeans. Where can I write to him? —Jackie Lertwich, Sparta, Tenn.

A: The actor's name is Richard Tyson. He is an Alabama native who — believe it or not — once attended the U.S. Naval Academy, where he played on the football team. An injury forced him off the field and, eventually, into acting. He arrived in Hollywood with $100 and took a room at the YMCA. Nothing panned out, so he took yet another track, earning an MFA at Cornell University. A role in the film Two Moon Junction and guest shots on China Beach led to the Hardball lead in 1989. Tyson likes Humphrey Bogart, basketball and water sports. His dream is to open a Shakespearean theater company. Write him c/o Triad Artists, 10100 Santa Monica Blvd., 16th Floor, Los Angeles, Calif., 90067.

Q: I would like the address for Richard Grieco. —Jennifer Sullivan, Coffeyville, Kan.

A: Write Grieco c/o CAA, 9830 Wilshire Blvd., Beverly Hills, Calif., 90212.

HAVE FUN at the Movies

EXCELLENT GOOD FAIR POOR DON'T WASTE MONEY

BUGSY: Starring Warren Beatty and Annette Benning. What a great movie! Warren Beatty has never given a better performance than he does as Ben "Bugsy" Siegel, the Jewish gangster who dreamed up Las Vegas as we know it. As Bugsy, he's quixotic, charming and vain, and eager to conquer - women, territory, politics. The picture's resonance comes from the world Levinson builds around his main character. And, and honorable (he considers himself faithful to his wife because he doesn't lie about his infidelities).

He's also incorrigibly vain (always staring in mirrors, even when beating someone's brains out). He's also insane. Director Barry Levinson has shot Bugsy in a sentimentalized mode without sentimentalizing the film. The settings for 1940s Hollywood are lush and the details are right. The picture's resonance comes from the world Levinson builds around his main character. And, he's created a Virginia Hill who is Bugsy's perfect match, a woman who's had a lot of affairs with rich men but especially likes gangsters because sadism excites her. Annette Benning tosses off her cool snappy dialogue as though she was born to speak it. Rated R for extreme violence. Beatty and Levinson have reinvented the gangster genre. Dust off the Oscars.

Four Boxes

established Dunaway as a major screen personality, and Parsons won an Academy Award for her supporting role as Clyde's sister-in-law. Cinematographer Burnett Guffey also won an Oscar. Not rated. Would be an R for extreme violence.

MORE BAD GUYS ON VIDEO

24 YEARS EARLIER: THE GANGSTER BEATTY ON VIDEO

BONNIE AND CLYDE: (1967) With Faye Dunaway, Estelle Parsons, Gene Hackman and Michael J. Pollard. This is a magnificent film version of the story of Bonnie Parker and Clyde Barrow. Warren Beatty, who also produced this exciting, well-written gangster classic, is brilliant as the impotent hoodlum Barrow. The film

LITTLE CAESAR: (1930/Black & White) Starring Edward G. Robinson as a hood who claws his way up to gang kingpin, after which the only way is down. No rating. Would be a PG-13.

PUBLIC ENEMY: (1931/Black & White) Starring James Cagney. Cagney runs booze in Chicago and plants a grapefruit in the face of Mae Clark. This is still one of the toughest gangster films. Also featured is a young Jean Harlow. No rating. Would be an R.
