Cultural, religious revival experienced by Jews in Moscow

rabbi in a traditional black coat and hat admonished the customers crowding to get kosher meat at Moscow's first Jewish food shop.

"You have been waiting for two hours. I waited 70 years for this," Rabbi Yitzhak Kogan told them as a saleswoman put the finishing touches on rows of neatly packed chickens bearing kosher labels.

The opening Thursday involved only one counter inside an ordinary Russian food store. Despite its small size, it was another sign of a revival of Jewish religion and culture in Russia since the collapse of Communist rule.

The Soviet Union, which was officially atheist, allowed a handful of synagogues to function. But it discriminated against Jews and conducted anti-Zionist campaigns that were often anti-Semitic as well.

About 500,000 Jews emigrated from the Soviet Union to Israel and the United States before democratic changes brought greater freedom at Emigration rules were relaxed, and about 500,000 more Jews left for Israel after 1989. But many Jews were put off by reports of unemployment and lack of housing in the Jewish state, deciding to take their chances in a new Russia. Emigration fell to 64,000 in 1992 and has continued to decline.

Most of Russia's estimated 1.5 million Jews are not religious and have little knowledge of Jewish traditions, but they view the Jewish revival as a litmus test of Russian society's openness.

Moscow alone, with about 500,000 Jews, now has a Jewish theater and restaurant, a second synagogue and most recently, a kosher fast-food restaurant, Gamburger.

There are also several Jewish newspapers, a Jewish school, Jewish summer camps, Hebrew classes, professional training courses for

Paying up

MOSCOW (AP) - An Orthodox prospective emigrants and a bakery that make matzo, the unleavened bread eaten during the Passover holiday.

Lecturers and teachers often arrive from Israel, whose Moscow embassy runs a cultural center, complete with computers and a library.

Much of this revival can also be credited to American Jewish groups such as the New York-based Orthodox Chabad Lubavitch movement. It backed the new kosher food department, in a store on the busy Garden Ring road in central Moscow.

The counter offers kosher chicken and beef, a small selection of biscuits, American-baked matzo and instant food imported from Israel.

"Two other stores want us to open kosher departments," said Kogan, an Israeli who left Russia seven years ago after a 14-year wait.

Kosher meat was the biggest problem, said Kogan, now vice president of the Lubavitch movement in Moscow.

'There is a large private demand. In addition, many religious schools, kindergartens and youth centers consume kosher food," Kogan said. However, "we could not find a supplier of healthy cattle. Ninety percent of cattle around Moscow is sick with pneumonia.'

So the beef is brought from Saratov on the Volga River, and chickens come from a plant in Zvenigorod, near Moscow.

About a dozen customers besieged the counter minutes after the opening, and the first load of meat, more than half a ton, was running out fast.

"We always observed Jewish traditions and kept a kosher home," said David Shalolashvili, who was born in the former Soviet republic of Georgia. "We used to get meat at the synagogue, or take live chickens to a ritual slaughterer."

"Sometimes, we would get along with no meat at all," he said.

Plea bargain takes Oklahoma governor off the felony hook

By RON JENKINS Associated Press Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) - Gov. David L. Walters is off the hook with a misdemeanor conviction in a massive campaign contribution investigation that has snared some of his closest associates.

Under a plea agreement reached late Thursday, eight felony counts were dismissed and Walters pleaded guilty to a single misdemeanor count of violating the state campaign law in his 1990 campaign.

District Judge John Amick, in an unusual late-night court hearing, dismissed two counts of conspiracy and six counts of perjury against

The felony charges could have forced the first-term Democrat from office. Walters has been planning a re-election campaign in 1994 and has amassed a $1 million campaign chest.

Under the plea agreement, Walters, 41, was fined $1,000 and received a one-year deferred prison sentence. He also agreed to contribute $135,000 from current campaign funds to the state Ethics Commission. The governor resumed his normal schedule this morning, appearing at a breakfast meeting in Norman to lobby for his turnpike plan. Walters said he was glad the investigation was over and said he will let the guilty plea speak for itself. Former Republican Gov. Henry Bellmon, whom Walters succeeded told the Tulsa World the penalties seemed mild.

"To coin a phrase, apparently the legal mountain has labored mightily and produced a gnat," Bellmon said.
Prosecutors defended the agreement as best for the state. Walters, who showed no emotion as he entered his plea, told reporters outside the courtroom he did what he considered best for his family and

"I'm somewhat of a fighter and every bone in my body said to fight," he said. "It's in the best interest of the state of Oklahoma that we not have a long extended fight. I chose an option that was available to me to end this process as soon as possible."

Walters is the first sitting Oklahoma governor to be indicted and only the ninth sitting governor in the country to be indicted this century.

A federal grand jury indicted Oklahoma Gov. David Hall three days after he left office in January Walters' indictment was returned in September but remained sealed until Thursday night. Walters pleaded guilty to encouraging Norman attorney Richard Bell to break state law limiting contributions to $5,000. Under Oklahoma law, a misdemeanor charge doesn't constitute grounds for losing office. The six perjury counts stemmed from Walters' signing of inaccurate campaign reports. "I'm satisfied this was the right way to handle it," District Attorney

Bob Macy said. "He has admitted that he violated election laws. What we have accomplished is what we set out to accomplish.' Attorney General Susan Loving said the grand jury that investigated Walters' 1990 campaign contributions still has a final report to write,

but the jury's work is basically

The grand jury has issued 20 indictments - four of which remain sealed. Among the cases still pending is that of close Walters adviser Larry Brawner, who faces several felony and misdemeanor counts.

Ms. Loving, who was appointed attorney general by Walters, said the troubles caused by an investigation were preferable to "covering up" problems discovered in the Walters

The grand jury investigation began in August 1992 after a federal investigation found no federal law violations. The federal probe began with former state Tourism Director J.B. Bennett making allegations that state jobs were for sale in the 1990 campaign.

Walters has blamed the onset of the grand jury investigation, along with the press, for son Shaun's 1991 suicide by an overdose of antidepres-

In an affidavit, Bell outlined several contributions he and family members made to Walters and discussed a meeting at a Shawnee motel in which

Walters sought additional funding. "David Walters just looked at me and said, 'I need $25,000," Bell said in the affidavit. "He said 'I've got a big TV buy coming up here pretty soon.' And, he said, 'That's what I

Bell said he told Walters that was a lot of money and if that's what he needed, "I need to talk to you about two or three things,

He said he told Walters he wanted to talk to him about a say in selecting workers compensation judges. Bell said he told Walters he also was concerned about the influence that Brawner had on picking judges since Brawner mainly represented insurance companies.

Bell said one of the questions he asked Walters when Walters asked for the help was "Well, do I get credit for what I've already given you." He said Walters said, "No, no. I need $25,000 more because you know that's what it's going to take to get this buy."

Bell pleaded guilty in February to two counts of violat He was given a two-year deferred sentence and was fined $4,000.

Under deferred sentences, records are expunged if there are no more law violations during the term of the

Thursday night's plea brought to ' an end several days of intense discussions between the governor's attorneys, prosecutors and others.

Macy said the agreement was reached suddenly early Thursday evening. "We had been discussing things back and forth and we reached agreement on a couple of critical points and - poof - it was all over," he said.

Hereford routed the Lobos in Hereford as Wade McPherson threw Freshmen three touchdown pass and ran for another score.

Hereford won the season series; the teams met three times this season, and Hereford won twice. The win gives the sophomores a 5-3 record.

Raymond Gonzales started the scoring on an 80-yard pass play, and other TD. Hector Cavazos kicked the extra Jeb Skiles caught a three-yard scoring strike from McPherson, then caught a two-point conversion pass. Next, McPherson scrambles for a 25yard TD run and hit Gonzales for the two-point conversion. Hereford led 22-6 at halftime.

In the second half, Duane Thomas ran 30 yards for a touchdown and Skiles caught a 30-yarder from McPherson. Cavazos kicked another extra-point to finish off the scoring.

Justin Scott had an interception, and John Messer and Brian Betzen were commended for excellent defensive play by coach Chris Christopher.

The Hereford A team lost 36-12 to Palo Duro Blue in Amarillo, and the B team lost 34-0 to PD White, coach James Salinas said.

Schilling shines as Phils stay alive; Jays lead

By JIM DONAGHY AP Baseball Writer PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Curt Schilling gave everyone a break - except the Toronto Blue Jays.

Schilling pitched a five-hitter for Philadelphia to beat Toronto 2-0, sending the World Series back to SkyDome on Saturday night with the Blue Jays still needing one win for their second straight championship.

Thursday night's result was quite a contrast to Game 4, when the Blue Jays rallied for six runs in the eighth inning for a 15-14 victory. The teams combined for 32 hits and all sorts of scoring records.

Manager Jim Fregosi said the Phillies needed a complete game from Schilling, the Game 1 loser, and the right-hander gave it to them and much

Blind boy plays football at Alvin

By LAURA TOLLEY Associated Press Writer

ALVIN, Texas (AP) - Freshman center Danny Mathis plays second team at Alvin High School and runs drills and practices much like the other football players. But when practice is over, the 16-year-old trades his helmet and pads for a cane to help him on his way home.

Mathis is blind.

This is his third year in football and his coaches and teammates insist he's just one of the guys.
"We've all been around him so much, you really don't think about it," says assistant coach Joe Webb. "A lot of people think it's a novelty, but it's really not."

Maybe Alvin residents have just gotten used to sports figures who break the rules in grand style. After all, this rural town south of Houston is home to strikeout king Nolan Ryan, who stretched his major league career to the unheard of age of 46.

Now, a 5-foot-3, 116-pound blind youth at Alvin High is tackling high school football, the king of sports in the Lone Star State.

Mathis, however, is rather humble about his gridiron exploits. He says he just likes the game.

"I find football fun. It's a sport I like," he says. "(And) it's not hard if you have the team to back you up, and your family."

So how does he do it? Mathis can play thanks to some help from his coaches and players, who guide him with a series of hand and verbal signals. And there's always at least one outstretched arm for Mathis to grab. Mathis grasps the arm of another player many times: to run through the many football exercises, go for a drink during a break or walk to the dressing room. After a play, a coach may call out to him to guide him off the field, or a fellow player will tug on his jersey to get him headed the right way. Webb explains that Mathis takes the field on a quarterback-sneak play.

Before Mathis snaps the football, the quarterback will tap Mathis either on his left or right side or his back to let him know the position of his opposing player.

"I've nailed a couple of guys," he says, then smiles and adds, "If I miss them, I pay them back.'

Yes, he misses some blocks, and has even hit a teammate or two in practice.

But Webb praises Mathis, saying he played well, though not often, in the team's first five games. The coaches don't like to leave him in too long, because opposing players can catch on to the signals.

"We try not to patronize him," Webb says. "We never say, poor little Danny, he has a disability."
But Webb and others admit to being protective of Mathis, though they say there's been little need for it. Teasing can be legendary among teen-agers, but players and coaches say other teams have not harassed Mathis.

Perhaps the other players are just too impressed, says Jason Pettit, 15, who played with Mathis at Manvel

Junior High and now at Alvin.
"They respect him too much to make fun of him," Pettit says.

Mathis became blind after being abused as an infant, and he says he never remembers seeing. He later was adopted by Dolores and Sonny

"The fans deserved what they saw tonight," Schilling said. "We were disappointed for what they went through, too."

It was the 39th time that a World Series had stood 3-1. Of the previous 38, the team leading has won 32 titles. The Phillies plan to start Terry Mulholland (1-0) against Dave Stewart (0-1) in Game 6.

"This is a good note to go to Toronto on," said Schilling, the NL playoffs MVP with 16 strikeouts on 19 innings against Atlanta. "Our fans are incredible. They were really behind us."

But some of those same fans filled the conversation on the local radio talk shows only hours before, expressing their disbelief that the Phillies blew a 14-9 lead against the Blue Jays in the eighth inning a night earlier. The city was stunned.

Schilling, put in the position of needing a complete game, walked three and struck out six. He made 148 pitches.

"This is my nine innings," Schilling said. "I always feel if I don't go nine innings, I didn't do my

Schilling got some early support when John Kruk scored Lenny Dykstra from third in the first inning on a groundout off loser Juan Guzman. Dykstra, who has scored few doubts. He also provided the stat eight runs in five games, led off with a walk, stole second and moved to third on catcher Pat Borders' throwing error.

Doubles by Darren Daulton and Kevin Stocker in the second accounted for the only other run off Guzman, who dropped to 5-1 lifetime in the postseason. Guzman gave up five hits, four walks and struck out six in seven innings.

Manager Cito Gaston could have walked Stocker, in a 1-for-13 slump, to pitch to Schilling, but was hoping the pitcher would lead off the next inning if Guzman got the rookie.

"They have the same type of players we have," Gaston said. "They've done it all year and we

The Blue Jays had everything in place for a victory celebration, but Schilling just wouldn't let them do it at Veterans Stadium. He had to escape a big jam in the eighth, though.

Borders led off with a single and rookie Willie Canate pinch ran. Rob Butler, batting for Guzman, then singled to send Canate to third with Rickey Henderson, Devon White and Roberto Alomar scheduled to bat.

and easily got him at the plate.

White then struck out and Alomar hit a routine grounder to second. Schilling retired the side in order to finish the game.

with Mel Phillips

If you want to have more fun in the outdoors, watch the animals. Mother Nature reveals to her animals the solutions to some riddles that baffle us humans. As a child, I marveled at the incredible semi-annual migration of the birds. The last four decades have only reinforced my awe at their ability to travel great distances with pinpoint accuracy.

Each spring, the appearance of the red-breasted robin marks the end of winter and heralds the arrival of spring. After years of diligent observation, I know it is time to quietly slip off to Baylor Lake near Childress or White River Lake near Crosbyton. The big bass are on a pre-spawn feed and will eagerly attack my white spinnerbait.

In the fall, Mother Nature somehow tells the robins that winter is coming, and during their southern migration they spread the word to the other animals. Largemouth bass respond by going on a feeding spree. Bass, having endured the dog days of summer by hiding in the thickest shoreline cover, will start cruising the creek channels looking for shad.

Although I can't see the bass change from their summer feeding patten, the autumn arrival of Mr. Robin signals that it is time to start throwing a crankbait. So while other anglers continue to beat the shoreline, try a chrome/blue back Rat-L-Trap and enjoy some great fishing.

Lake Greenbelt, with its hundreds of acres of moss beds near the old creek channel, has some terrific fall fishing. White spinnerbaits, buzzbaits and Pop-R's will work on the days when the bass are tired of chasing a rattling crankbait.

Congratulations to Erik Schrader for winning the 1993 Lake Meredith Championship Bass Tournament. Erik, the 18-year-old son of Billy Schrader, used a white/blue spinnerbait to fool a nice 4.88-pound smallmouth bass. He won a trophy, a beautiful "Champion" jacket and $410. Second place prize money of $205 went to Amarillo Fireman Ed McBride, who used a Phish Stik to catch 4.16 pounds of bass. Borger's Mike Stroup used a Pop-R and finished third with 4.11 pounds.

Last call--On Saturday, the Lake Greenbelt Championship Tournament, the last bass tournament of 1993, is open to all interested anglers. The entry fee is only $25, and registration starts at 6 a.m. Saturday at the south ramp. Fishing hours are from 7 a.m.-12:30 p.m. The winner takes home a trophy, a monogrammed "Champion" jacket and the prize money. All new contestants are eligible to win a Lake Texoma Striper trip for two.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Enclosed back when I seemed to have lost my please find a tribute to my wife, Sara. We are both 95 and have been married for 68 years. I would be so happy if you published this, Ann. I want to honor this wonderful woman .-- John Marshall Perkins

DEAR JOHN: What a loving letter. You are a real role model for husbands everywhere. Here it is:

A Tribute To My Wife
Sara, My Darling: When I found you in the spring of my life, my thoughts and fancy turned to love. But now as we approach the setting sun, viewing the sunset in its God-made glory, my mind goes back to yesterday. When I think of the years that have passed, I become aware of how fortunate I am to have had you by my side--to love, and to help me maintain straight and narrow and to pull me makes me gag."

Even though you did not always understand, your thoughts and deeds were always meant to be in my best interests. Now in the autumn of life's way, it is sweet to know that I still have you to love and that you love me, too .- J.M. Perkins, (P.S.: This was written several years ago, but it is still true and will be until my dying day.)

DEAR READERS: After that beautiful tribute, I am printing a letter from a reader who could use some tips from Sara. Here it is:

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Last year, my boyfriend gave me a beautiful engagement ring. Whenever I tried to tell "Howard" how happy I was and suggest that we should make plans for our future, he would reply, "Stop a sense of balance, to keep me on the talking about that stupid subject. It

I tried to explain that when two people become engaged, they are SUPPOSED to talk about their future. He replied, "I only gave you that ring to get you to stop talking about marriage. I hate the subject.'

Howard broke my heart, Ann, but I'm over him now and good riddance. I'm a very pretty woman, and I don't look my age. But--when am I going to find the right man? I have a nice personality, I'm kind and considerate and I give 100 percent in a relationship. The men I've been meeting always ask for my phone number, but they never call. Could it be because I'm more attractive than they are and they feel inferior?

I need some answers. Can you help?--Joanne in Las Vegas

DEAR JOANNE: You also need a course on how to win friends and influence people. I suggest that you start with some counseling. You're pushing all the wrong buttons, honey. P.S. I'm glad you're through with Howard. He was no bargain.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please print this message for all wind chime lovers. If you have no neighbors within a mile, hang your wind chimes all over your property. However, if you have neighbors closer than a mile--PLEASE hang your beloved wind chimes inside your home and turn on a fan to make them jingle, jangle, clang, ting-a-ling, bang-bang-bang, etc. You will be considered a thoughtful neighbor and will spare others a lot of annoying and unwanted racket .-- Bothered in Minneapolis

DEAR MINNEAPOLIS: Different strokes for different folks. Enough

What can you give the person who has everything? Ann Landers' booklet, "Gems," is ideal for a nightstand or coffee table. "Gems" is a collection of Ann Landers' most requested poems and essays. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $4.85 (this includes postage and handling) to: Gems, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Barbara Billingsly, the TV mom of all TV moms, is back on the tube playing you guessed it - a mom.

Billingsly, the traditional American mother on "Leave It To Beaver," appeared in an episode of the NBC sitcom "The Mommies."

'You can imagine our awe at not only meeting Barbara Billingsly but appearing with her on television,' said Marilyn Kentz, a series co-star.

Kentz and Caryl Kristensen are comedy partners who based the show on their own lives as suburban moms in Petaluma, Calif. Billingsly, 70, plays Kristensen's mother.

Billingsly said she loves "The Mommies," but noted how much racier family TV shows have become since the Beav.

'When we did 'Leave It To Beaver,' Ward and June didn't even have a bedroom," she said. "Things are quite different now."

Ask your pharmacist

There are certain questions you should ask your pharmacist the next time you get a prescription filled, say the experts at the American Pharmaceutical Association, the national organization for pharmacists.

Here are some questions: When and how do I take this? With food? At a certain time of day? For how long should I take it?
What side effects should I watch

-What if I miss a dose? -How shall I store it?

Your pharmacist can answer these and any other questions you may have about the medicines you takeprescription or nonprescription.

NEW YORK (AP) - Actor William Hurt has asked a Manhattan judge to deny a request by his estranged wife, Heidi Henderson, to see his 1992 tax

The 43-year-old Hurt, who is being sued for divorce, said in court documents Henderson doesn't need to see his tax forms because their pre-marital agreement settled all financial and child support issues.

The former couple has two children, Samuel, 4, and William, 3.
Hurt and Henderson, daughter of bandleader Skitch Henderson, have been separated for more than 2-1/2 years, said Hurt's spokeswoman.
