Local school kids' teeth targeted for study

By BOB NIGH

Not since a perceptive small town dentist named Dr. George W. Heard put the Panhandle city of Hereford on the map, so to speak, in the medical world some forty years ago has such attention been focused on the teeth of local residents.

Until now, that is. Dr. Heard caused quite a stir in the early forties with his findings concerning the absence of dental decay among people who lived in and around Hereford. Subsequent investigation eventually led to Hereford being nicknamed "The Town Without A Toothache."

Now, four decades later, a New York dentist, Dr. M.E.J. Curzon, is raising eyebrows with his studies concerning the role of the trace element lithium as it is related to dental caries, or decay.

Dr. Curzon, along with Dr. David Richardson of the Department of Pedodontics at the Dental School in San Antonio, will be in Hereford Thursday and Friday of this week to conduct scientific studies of the teeth of some local schoolchildren.

Dr. Curzon is chairman of the Department of Caries Research at the Eastman Dental Center in Rochester, N.Y. His study about lithium has been funded by the National Institutes of Health (NIH) after a four-year campaign to obtain that monetary assistance.

Basically, Dr. Curzon's study will help scientists determine whether or not lithium is valuable in warding off dental decay.

In previous studies conducted in Australia and Papua-New Guinea, it was shown that where the lithium was high there was lower dental decay, lower than that produced by fluoride.

According to Dr. Curzon, "the relationship of fluoride to dental caries is well known, but in addition, other trace elements may also influence dental decay. Thus, research has shown that elements such as selenium, cadmium, and lead may increase decay, while strontium, molybdenum, and lithium may reduce decay. It is this latter group which is presently being studied for preventative agents, in addition to, or synergistic with, fluoride."

Hereford actually is just one of seven Texas cities included in the study of lithium. Also included are Big Spring, Lamesa, Amarillo, Paducah, Levelland, and Wichita Falls.

The local study has been formally approved by the Hereford Independent School District board, and will include 6th graders at West Central, and 7th and 8th graders of Stanton Jr. High.

Not all students will be included in the survey, with some 220 the maximum number to be examined by Dr. Richardson while Dr. Curzon acts as recorder and organizer.

Students were given an acceptance form to take home Friday. Approval of their parent(s) or guardian is necessary for inclusion into the program. The examinations have also been approved by the Texas State Dental Association and the Texas State Department of Health.

Each child in the study will be given a simple dental examination with a mouth mirror and explorer to record the level of dental decay. The exam will take about two minutes, and will be done during regular school hours.

"All records will be kept confidential, and there is no risk involved other than would normally occur during a dental examination," Dr. Curzon said.

In addition, a sample of plaque will

New study brings to mind work of early-day dentist

News that Hereford will be part of a study on the effects of lithium on dental caries (cavities) by a New York dentist are bringing back to mind research and study done by an early-day Hereford dentist, who correlated the connections between fluoride and dental decay back in the thirties and forties.

Dr. George W. Heard, who moved to Hereford in 1905 after practicing dentistry in Alabama for 17 years, was primarily responsible for the notoriety this West Texas town gained in the early forties due to its abundance of fluoride.

The fact that Hereford's citizens were blessed with a near void of dental decay "electrified the American Dental Association's 83rd annual convention with the possibility that Dr. Edward Taylor, dental division director for the Texas Health Department, may be on the brink of one of the most important dental discoveries in history," according to a story in The Houston Press in October, 1941.

Dr. Taylor was Dr. Heard's medium of communication of his discovery to the world. Dr. Taylor finally accepted an invitation from Dr. Heard to come to Hereford and examine some of the findings the Hereford dentist has gathered.

Dr. Heard had been puzzled by the absence of tooth decay in Hereford, especially since it is one of mankind's worst health problems. Almost from the day he moved to Hereford he noticed that there was virtually no tooth decay among old timers here.

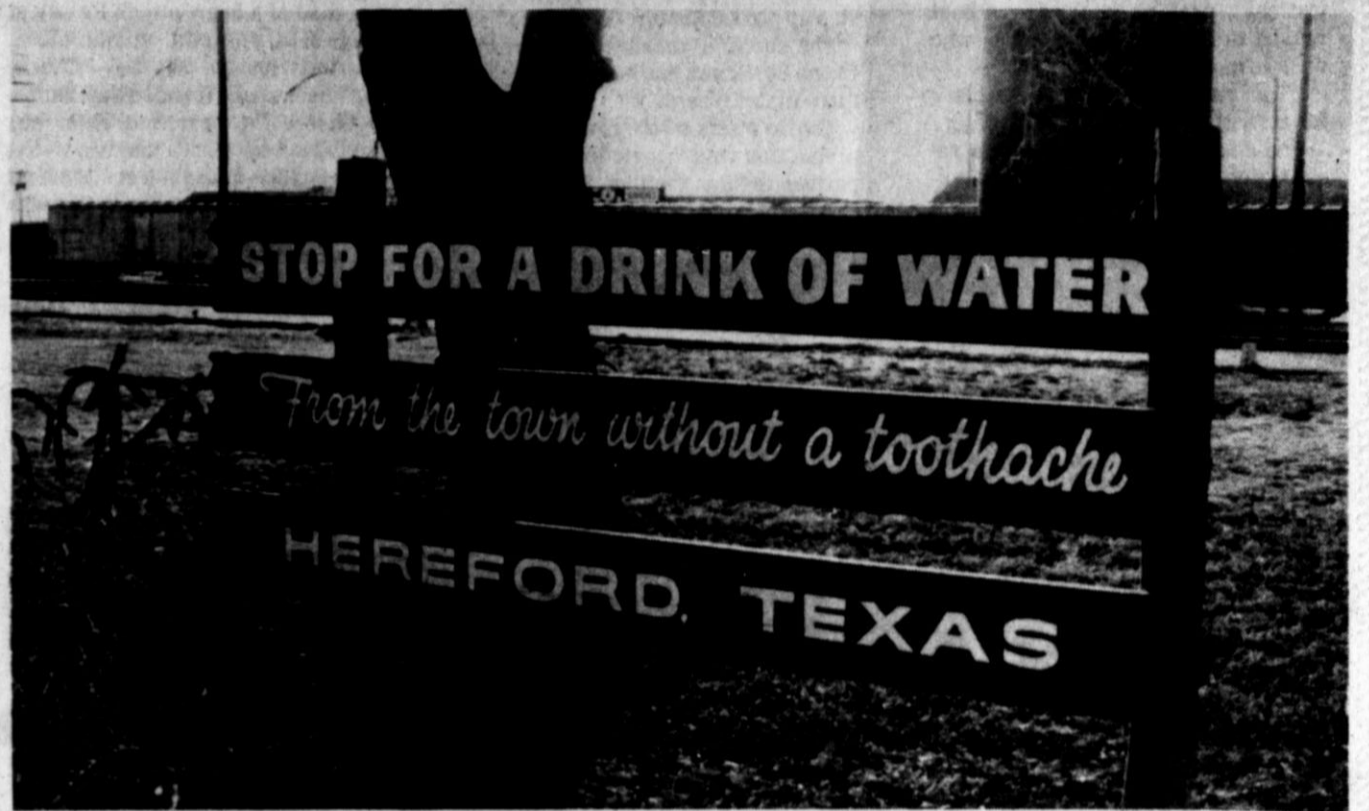

New settlers might need an occasional filling, extraction, or platerwork, but there were none of the fillings that made up the bulk of the average dentist's workload.

Old-timers in town had never given a second thought to their lack of dental woes, but they did add that they had noticed that spindly fishbone cattle brought to the area from Mexico were soon turned into fine big-boned animals. And, horses in the county had fine teeth. Even one old town dog, 16 years old, still had all his teeth.

For years at dental meetings Dr. Heard tried to interest his colleagues in his findings. Finally, Dr. Taylor took the bait, and he performed a random survey in the county.

"I examined 56 people, chosen at random from (See EARLY, Page 2A)

Hereford's notoriety as a city without a toothache grew from evidence obtained through the work of dentists back in the thirties and forties. This week, additional studies on minerals in the area will be conducted as the answer to why cavities here are scarcer than hens' teeth is still being sought.

GTE wants 'distasteful' rate hike

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — The president of General Telephone Co. says it's "distasteful" to ask for rate hikes, but he had no choice but to come to the Public Utility Commission to seek an $85.5 million rate hike for his company.

The increase, if approved by the commission, would add as much as $4 to GTE monthly bills for residential service. Business bills would go up by $10.55 a month for some customers.

GTE, the state's second largest telephone company, serves 800,000 Texans in 289 exchanges. The San Angelo-based company serves several Houston and Dallas-Fort Worth suburbs.

The rate-hike package, filed Friday, does not ask for increases in long distance rates. GTE did ask for a limit of five free directory assistance calls per month, down from the current 10. Additional information calls cost 25 cents.

Commissioners set a Feb. 25 prehearing on GTE's request.

GTE asked for a $110.6 million increase last year, and went to court after the PUC approved only $46.8 million. The case is pending in court.

The 1982 rate hike increased some residential bills by 50 percent.

E.L. Langley, GTE president, said the company has been unable to earn the 12.5 percent profit authorized last year. Earnings have fallen to 9.5 percent, according to Langley.

"As distasteful as raising rates is, we prefer this rather than reducing these programs which our customers have told us they expect," said Langley.

He said GTE cut 700 employees in an effort to reduce costs during the past year.

"We realize our customers expect quality service and it is our objective to provide it. It is unfortunate that this costs money," he said.

GTE serves 289 Texas exchanges, including some Dallas and Houston suburbs.

Here are several examples of what the requested rate increase would mean for GTE customers:

In Baytown and similar size cities, the price of basic residential service would go up to $20.65 a month, compared to the current $16.65.

In Brownwood and similar size cities, monthly basic residential service would cost $12.80, up from $8.90.

In Daingerfield and similar size cities, the monthly bill for home service would go up to $12.40 from $8.65.

GTE is seeking large increases in monthly-business phone bills. Business customers in some areas would face a $10.55 jump in monthly bills.

School as usual Monday

Hereford students will attend school as usual Monday according to Mal Manchee of the school administration office. Classes were scheduled to be out on that date due to a teacher in-service day, but that has been cancelled in order for students to make up one of the days missed due to this year's unusually severe weather.

Manchee said that some confusion still exists, but that parents should expect their children to be in class Monday as usual.

Election filings relatively light

Filings for three school board positions and two city commission seats as well as the mayor's post have been lean as the April 2 election date rapidly approaches.

School board members James Gentry and Paul Ramirez' terms are expiring this year, and one vacancy already exists with the recent resignation of board member Bobby Griego.

Gentry and Ramirez have both filed for reelection for three-year terms, while Paul Mason has filed to fill the unexpired term of Griego.

Newcomer Carl Pierson has also filed for a seat on the HISD board.

In the city election Place 1 Commissioner Wes Fisher has opted to file for the mayor's post being vacated by Bartley Dowell. Melvin Jayroe has filed for the seat being vacated by Fisher.

Place 2 Commissioner Ed Coplen, whose term is also expiring, has not yet filed for reelection.

The deadline for filing for both the city and school board elections is Wednesday, March 2.

Extension given on sales tax returns

AUSTIN, Tex. — State Comptroller Bob Bullock said this week that special consideration will be given sales tax returns due January 31 from merchants and business people in the snow-covered areas of the Texas Panhandle.

"We know the blizzard that started the last of January made it impossible for mail from 28 counties served by the Amarillo post office to be picked up and started on its way to Austin," Bullock said. "This means a lot of sales tax returns that may have been put in a mail box before the deadline weren't postmarked as they should have been."

Bullock also cautioned officials of Panhandle cities that the allocations of local sales taxes they receive from the January returns might not amount to as much as they were expecting because of the delays.

Bullock said he's given instructions that all mail from the 791 and 790 zip code areas be given special handling.

"I don't want people penalized for something that was beyond their control and the post office's," he said.

The sales tax law imposes a penalty for returns that are postmarked after the filing deadline which is the last day of the month following the period for which a return is due.

Politics is the art of making yourself popular with the people by giving them grants out of their own money.

At the reception for departing Coach Don Cumpton, a fan asked the coach if he had a slogan for his new team, the Eagles.

"I really hadn't thought about it," responded Cumpton. "It might be difficult to get them to go with Hubba, Hubba Flock!"

After words of appreciation by C of C President Bob Sims and the Booster Club's Dave Hopper, Linda Cumpton could not restrain the tears. She reported that her family had given her a maroon coat and purse for Christmas.

"What are the Abilene school colors," one of the fans asked. "Black and gold," answered Linda, "and I look terrible in yellow!"

Sims and Hopper praised Cumpton for the positive influence he projected in the community, and — most of all — for the work he did with the youngsters in athletics.

We saw an article in the Perryton paper this week about the big snowstorm of 1938, and we looked up the Brand files for that year. The paper didn't have much to say about the storm, so it must have been worse to the north. We've heard old timers refer to the blizzard of 1919, so we decided to go back to the Brand files of that year. It seems the worse factor of that winter was that the area recorded from 10 to 24 inches just before Christmas, then another 7 to 12 inches hit before Easter.

In the Dec. 26, 1918 Brand: "The weather sharks will have a new land mark to refer to for the next 15 years. After good snows last week, it kinda cleared up Saturday afternoon. Sunday morning it started again and kept growing in swirls and gusts of sleet and snow, and the end came Monday afternoon with estimates varying from 10 inches to two feet.

Sharon to keep cabinet position

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Ariel Sharon says his departure as defense minister is part of a "reshuffle of portfolios" that will allow him to retain a Cabinet seat despite calls for his ouster.

The government said Friday that Sharon would leave the Defense Ministry because of a Cabinet vote adopting a panel's finding that Sharon bears personal responsibility for the massacre of Palestinians last September in Beirut.

The Cabinet, apart from Sharon, voted unanimously Thursday to accept the judicial commission's recommendation that Sharon should quit or be fired.

There was no official confirmation from Prime Minister Menachem Begin that Sharon would stay in the Cabinet after leaving the defense post Monday.

Sharon, 54, told reporters: "There was a reshuffle of portfolios, and that's the end of the problem. I am still in the Cabinet. Begin did not fire me."

A political showdown appeared likely over the prospect of Sharon's continued presence in the Cabinet.

'Winds of War' accurate

By JERI CURTIS
Staff Writer

German-born Frieda Leitner Davis believes the "Winds of War" series is accurate but not as blunt as the Nazi takeover actually was.

"When I see movies like this one, sometimes tears come in my eyes," she said, "I remember things, you know, that really happened."

She can tell of the Nazis using human genital skin to make lampshades for SS leaders, of all her hair being burned off, disguising herself as a man to avoid being raped and eating potatoes — dirt and all — stolen from a field.

memories are still vivid. She was 16 when the war broke out in 1939.

She recalls earlier her school teacher forcing her to shake hands and give flowers to Hitler at the 1936 Olympics. ("If I had been older I would have thrown them at him," she thinks.)

Her stepfather had not allowed the children to be in Hitler Youth.

"I tell you something, American people don't know all about it. They're so scared when a tornado comes, see. Wonder what you'd do, say for instance the Germans would come over here and bomb," she queried in a charming accent. "There wasn't a night we could sleep through without having to get out and go to the basement."

"I got bombed out. I was buried under rubble for 48 hours. I lost everything I had. All I had on was a pair of pajamas."

Her first witnessing of the Jewish eradication was while at work in a tobacco store next door to a Jewish home.

"There was all kind of commotion so I went outside the store and said, 'Hey, what's going on?' There was all the SS (Hitler's secret police) and they were dragging the people out."

She went back to work and they slammed down a huge metal door to protect themselves.

"A few days later we went into town and the shopping centers and the big department stores were all Jewish and, man alive, they (the SS) dragged everything out in the street and made bonfires," she recalled. "We wanted the shoes, we wanted to pick up books. We couldn't do it. The SS was standing there with their guns and they would have shot us."

The Germans' reaction to the holocaust was sad, Mrs. Davis said, because to them, the Jews were just people too. She went to Catholic schools which had Jewish students and remembered most of her friends as goodhearted. A Jewish girl was the maid of honor in her wedding.

TCLU backs marriages of different race

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Civil Liberties Union said justices of the peace who refuse to perform marriages between two people of different race can be removed from office.

The TCLU said in a brief to the state attorney general's office Friday that state and federal law requires peace justices to perform marriages without regard to the race of the people who want to marry.

"This requirement has been clear for at least 15 years," the TCLU said. The brief was submitted with a request for an attorney general's opinion on whether certain justices of the peace in Tarrant County may refuse to perform marriages between blacks and whites.

The TCLU brief said Texas statutes state, "No officer or employee ... of a political subdivision of the state, when acting or purporting to act in his official capacity, may ... refuse to issue a license, permit or certificate ... (or) ... refuse to grant a benefit to ... a person because of the person's race ..."

Clear violation of "fundamental individual liberties" is grounds for removal of an official from office, the brief said.

"The time is long gone when the citizens of Texas could permit their elected officials to practice invidious discrimination or to improperly cause the deprivation of the right to marry," the brief added.

"Any action other than removal of the justices from office" by the State Judicial Qualifications Commission "could only be construed as official approval by the commission of violation of the laws of the United States and Texas by justices of the peace in Texas," according to the brief.

Ad runs for more than sixty years

OZONA, Texas (AP) — There haven't been many convictions for cattle rustling in Crockett County, so authorities ran an advertisement to step up prosecutions for the crime.

The sheriff's announcement in the Ozona Stockman has been running for more than 60 years.

The ad offers a $500 reward for apprehension and conviction of guilty parties in any theft of livestock in Crockett County.

"It might have been run 70 years," Kitty Montgomery, editor of the weekly newspaper, said Friday. "I have been here 25."

Ms. Montgomery said she bills the county $4.20 a week to run the ad. The small ad would have generated $13,124.00 over the past 60 years at those rates.

But she said the 1½- by 3-inch ad probably cost the county only five cents per week in the early days of the newspaper. The Stockman will be 71 years old in April.

Chief sheriff's deputy Wayne Wahl said that no one has bothered to collect a reward in his six years with the department.

Wahl said theft of livestock hasn't been much of a problem in this Southwest Texas ranching area of several thousand people.

A lamb was stolen recently and there have been several cases of cattle butchering, he says. But Wahl said he is not sure why the ad is running, other than tradition.

Ms. Montgomery says the ad has been around so long that "it's kind of like our masthead."

Reputed Mafia leader dies

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Angelo Marino, a reputed Mafia leader awaiting retrial in a murder case, died of a heart attack Friday at the age of 58, a hospital official said.

Marino, known as the "Cheese King" because he founded the California Cheese Co. near San Jose, was hospitalized for tests about two weeks ago at the Eisenhower Medical Center, said a nursing supervisor who asked not to be identified.

Marino was convicted in 1960 of the 1977 murder of 24-year-old Peter Catelli, who authorities said was trying to extort $100,000 from the Marino family to pay gambling debts.

Texas No. 2 in military salaries

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas ranks second in the amount of salaries paid to active duty military personnel and would be one of the states most affected by President's Reagan's proposed freeze on military pay, according to Defense Department figures. Payments to military personnel on active duty in Texas were expected to exceed $2.6 billion for the fiscal year that ends Sept. 30, according to Pentagon estimates.

The figures are particularly important for communities built around military installations, whose personnel spend their pay on cars, housing, food and drink, clothing and countless other necessities and luxuries.

Simply put, the president's proposed freeze would cut the amount of Defense Department funds that otherwise might be funneled into Texas next fiscal year.

With the freeze in effect, salaries to active duty military personnel in Texas would total just over $2.4 billion in the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1, according to Pentagon estimates.

Each percentage point increase in military salaries beyond the level recommended by the president would result in about another $24 million being paid to such personnel, much of which would go toward bolstering local economies.

In proposing the freeze last month, Reagan said it was part of an overall program aimed at reducing "the dangerous growth rate in government spending" which he said was threatening economic recovery.

But some members of the Texas congressional delegation immediately expressed concern over the freeze proposal, though their reservations were generally expressed in terms of its impact on the military, rather than on the Texas economy.

In the last fiscal year, which ended Sept. 30, nearly $2.18 billion was paid in salaries to active duty military personnel in Texas, according to the Pentagon.

Those payments went to personnel in more than 70 of the state's 254 counties, although the amount per county varied widely.

"The snow literally paralyzed the Christmas business for the Hereford merchants, and it looks like Santa Claus will have to use an airplane to reach the little folks in the country."

Then, these quotes from the April 10, 1919 Brand: the 1918-1919 record for the freakish weather still holds good. Here it is, April 10, and outdoors the landscape closely resembles what most people would picture as a typical Arctic scene in the dead of winter.

"Tuesday was a cold, windy, rainy day and about 6 p.m. a blow from the north came up, bringing with it mixed sleet and snow which one local citizen described as a 'regular wampus.' Heavy snow Tuesday night and a lighter snow Wednesday morning left from 7 to 12 inches of snowfall. Owing to the wind the drifts are piled high in places.

"Some cattle losses will undoubtedly follow, owing to the weakened condition of the livestock following the hard winter, the cold rain and sleet which came Tuesday night.

"The Amarillo News reported the area was visited by one of the most severe snowstorms of the season. Amarillo traffic was demoralized and unpaved streets were almost impassible. Train service on all lines entering Amarillo was paralyzed by the snow. The News reported that dispatches from adjoining communities indicated the snow and rain had fallen practically over the entire Panhandle.

A front-page item in 1919 issue reported that "Mayor Wm M. Knight and L. Baskin spent last Sunday in Clovis, where they investigated certain civic matters from which they hoped to obtain data which might be of benefit to similar work in Hereford."

Another item reported that just 37 votes were cast in the school trustee election. "The three nominees of the recent mass meeting received the entire vote, no additional names being written on any of the ballots. The small interest is attributed to the fact that there were no disputed issues at stake, and no opposition to the candidates."

One of the top articles on the front page concerned an accident: "Last Monday the pin in the double tree on the Schultz Dairy wagon dropped out and the horses became frightened and bolted. The wagon was overturned and partially wrecked on the curbing across from the Courthouse and broken milk bottles were scattered to the four winds of the heavens. Fred Schultz, who was driving, escaped by some miracle, and the horses were soon rounded up."

County residents were already wondering about the oil potential in the area: "While this community is outside the lines of the proven Texas oil fields, so far as they have been exploited, at the same time a great deal of local agitation has been going on, looking toward the development of real facts — whether we have any oil under us or not. Whatever one group or another may believe to be the truth regarding this disturbing question, all agree that they would like to have the matter settled once and for all time by drilling a hole to the bottom of things in general."

We checked a few of the ads while looking at the 1919 issue. E.B. Black & Co. advertised their prices were "25 percent less than neighbors in other places — an 8-piece dining suit was offered at $125, a living-room suit for $95, and a bedroom suit for $185. E.W. Harrison advertised coal for $8.50 a ton; J.E. Crouch proclaimed he was back on "a pre-war basis, cleaning and pressing suits for $1 each.

Fox Mercantile's Easter specials included men's blue overalls for 75 cents, ladies' house dresses from 98 cents to $2.15 and ladies' suits at $29.98. McQueen Grain & Coal announced that ice would be going up 5 cents to 70 cents a hundred, and readers could Phone 1 for ice cards.

"And I tell you, when I seen all this, I cried," she said. "One SS came up to me and said, 'What are you crying for? They're Jews.' I didn't say nothing cause I was scared with that gun there."

She said most of the Germans knew about the concentration camps, but kept mum out of fear for their own life. "It was known then, but we couldn't say anything about it," she said. "You say something and the SS men get ahold of you and you be dead."

"They tortured them, they tortured them just to get their skin and make lampshades for all the high SS men, you know. They made all kinds of things with human skin, they made wallets and lampshades and all that stuff," she said, then raised her pitch. "Can you imagine?"

"Two girls I went to school with got shipped off and I never seen 'em again," she said.

After the war Mrs. Davis visited one of the camps where Jews were gassed and cremated. She said at that time the ovens still smelled and there was dust of burned flesh on the walls.

"When you walked in there you felt like the people either staring at you or screaming," she said. "You walk through there you get an eerie feeling and the wind blows and it sounds like people screaming."

When the Jews were being dragged away, it was the first sign most people had that Hitler wasn't a good guy. Mrs. Davis said people started questioning things then, but by that time the government controlled everything already.

"When you go to the store and you don't go in there and say 'Heil, Hitler' you don't get a loaf of bread," she remembered. "Tough? For me it was because I hated to go in a store and raise my arm all the time and say 'Heil' to some mere man."

Six months before World War II was over she joined the Red Cross. When she thinks back on that she has to laugh. While the Russians were battling a group of Germans who were barricaded in a train station, the ambulance crew was eating cheese and drinking vodka waiting to do their duty. She said the Russians would stop fighting long enough to allow the medics in safely and haul out the injured, then resume firing for another round.

Mrs. Davis said many women barricaded themselves to avoid being raped by the Russians during that occupation. She and a daring cousin did otherwise.

"We'd dress as men. I had long blond hair. We got elastic, and I was heavy then, and taped our breasts down and put men's clothes on," she said. "Then we'd go and get food out of stores, money out of vaults, wine out of the wine cellars."

All that time with Russians guarding on building tops. Mrs. Davis said she and her girlfriends would hide behind wine barrels and get giggly just from the fumes. It made dodging bullets a little more fun.

She stole bread once while disguised as a man and had to run from Russian fire for the crime. Her cousin at home was the first to notice that at least one shot had pierced the thief's leg.

"It was stealing bread, but we was hungry," Mrs. Davis declares. "We'd go out in the field and steal potatoes and eat them dirt and all."

"I didn't feel bad afterwards, because that was our food," she says, but adds it was hard to steal that first time. "We was just plumb hungry."

Her church was bombed, she surmises, because the Nazis may have found out about the priest's underground ham radio network.

Her stepfather was anti-Nazi but was drafted into Hitler's army in 1942. She said he didn't handle it very well, but had to go. The continuous residents is much lower than that for the whole group.

3. Caries immunity is at least partially acquired after the eruption of teeth.

4. Fluoride is contributory either by consumption or by application (bathing the teeth), or both, to immunity, but that cannot be considered the only factor.

The impact of finding the exact cause for the lack of dental decay in Hereford would have been immense. Dr. Taylor theorized that once the definite factors were compiled, a formula would be obtainable to make possible the same immunity for every person in the world.

That formula has never been found, but the fact that those people born and reared in Hereford have less tooth decay, and those who move to the area also received benefits still remains.

Another piece may soon fit into the puzzle when results of the lithium studies being conducted by Dr. M.E.J. Curzon are compiled.

billion, while Levelland has 32.5 parts per billion, and Big Spring, 23.5 per billion.

Of the children in the study, details will be recorded as to length of residence as life-long residents, and immigrants arriving at the ages of one, six, and nine.

Subsequently, the statistical analysis will be stratified according to these parameters, but with the main emphasis being put on life-long residents. This will be done for comparison with many other studies completed by Dr. Curzon on similar samples in Wisconsin, Ohio, and California.

Early

homes in the area," he said. "Forty-three were native born, continuous-resident people. Not one single carious tooth or filling was found in the teeth of those 43 native people ranging in age from two years to past middle age."

A subsequent examination of 810 Hereford school children revealed that well over half of them had no tooth decay whatsoever. Each child was graded on a basis of decayed, missing, or filled teeth (DMF).

The figures showed an average DMF of one per child, as compared to 5-10 DMF per child elsewhere.

Another striking fact was also turned up.

In people who had moved into Deaf Smith County in the last half dozen years, evidence of old decay was found, but the process had been stopped. In many cases, the floors of old cavities had acquired a hard, glazed surface.

To help determine the cause of the low rate of decay, peculiar to the small region in and around Hereford, the area's drinking water was examined.

The water supply proved to contain 2.5 parts of flouride per million parts of water. But, flouride alone wasn't the answer, for in another Texas town with exactly the same concentration of flouride, the decay rate, although low, was still more than twice that of Hereford.

Samples of meat, milk, wheat, and vegetables were gathered for analysis at Texas Tech. Almost from the onset one fact stood out clearly: the foods were astonishingly high in phosphorus, probably the most vital of all soil minerals.

Hereford area carrots contained 50 percent more phosphorus than usual; turnip greens, 30 percent; cabbage and lettuce, 60 percent. Meat and milk were also similarly high in phosphorus.

Amazingly, wheat, the chief food product, was found to be 600 percent above the normal. Calcium content was also high.

Dr. Taylor attributed the low dental decay rate in Hereford to fluorides, sunshine and calcium, as well as the abundance of phosphorus.

The secret in "The Town Without a Toothache," as Hereford became to be known as, is "in the food consumed," Dr. Heard later wrote. The doctor spoke highly of the value of the consumption of raw milk.

"I made close observations, and every child that drank raw milk had no tooth decay," Dr. Heard wrote. "Every child (there were a few) that didn't drink raw milk, had bad teeth. Listen, we are what we eat!"

Dr. Taylor concluded his studies with nine findings, some of which are:

1. The incidence of caries in Deaf Smith County is approximately only half as high as the heretofore lowest reported in the United States, and much lower than average.

2. The incidence of caries in

be collected from a select group of 14 year-old boys to find out "if there are different levels of minerals in the water, and if those minerals affect the plaque on the teeth."

Local dentists are also participating in the survey, and will provide samples of teeth extracted over the past several months to Dr. Curzon for use in his study.

In addition to the studies done in Australia and Papua-New Guinea, an analysis of U.S. Navy recruits and their dental status between 1958-68 showed that of 270,000 men examined from states east of the Mississippi River, 360 were caries, or cavity, free, and with no history of dental decay. Of that group, 36, or 10 percent, all came from a small rural area of Northwest Ohio.

Analysis of the area's water supplies showed that, among other trace elements, there were high concentrations of lithium.

The Hereford area has also been found to contain higher than usual concentrations of lithium.

The Ohio areas had 35-40 parts per billion of lithium as compared to a national average of two parts per billion.

The Hereford area has 102 parts per billion, by far the highest in the state. Wichita Falls, which is in the low lithium area, has zero parts per

Computers replacing animals in experiments

By SHARON HERBAUGH
Associated Press Writer

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Medical students here used to put dogs in ice baths, cut their nerves, place catheters in their hearts and inject them with morphine. Now, thanks to computers, experimenters can get the same results simply by pushing buttons and watching a television screen.

The University of Texas Medical Branch has turned to the computer to cut costs and appease people who "thought the animals were consciously suffering, even though they were anesthetized," said Dr. James R. Walker.

Though they probably never will totally replace animals in experiments, computers can be programmed to duplicate the same bodily functions students would observe with animals, said Walker, an assistant professor of physiology and biophysics.

Programs designed by Walker illustrate the heart and blood levels as they would be affected by the injection of drugs or by changes in temperature.

Computers also save time and eliminate the unknown variables such as disease and malnutrition that can ruin experiments.

But there are also drawbacks — the machines are "too perfect," can create "computer phobia," and don't give students the experience of working with real tissue, Walker said.

He said his use of computers was inspired by a University of Indiana program simulating the dynamics of the cardiovascular system. Walker designed two programs by converting the physiological functions into a series of mathematical equations.

One program simulates the reaction of the heart and blood vessels to drugs and the other demonstrates how body temperature reacts to cold and heat.

The programs were introduced last November to 200 students in the school's functional laboratory which integrates physiology, biochemistry, pharmacology, immunology, anatomy and pathology in experiments.

The school still uses about 400 dogs a year in experiments, plus a dozen sheep, 140 rabbits and 140 rats, he said. Each medical student in his career will participate in 24 experiments, about three-fourths of which will use animals, he said.

Computers can save time as well as money.

"Much of the students' time was spent waiting — watching polygraphs, waiting for changes to appear, waiting for the drug to wear off before they could move to the next step," he said.

"Now with the push of a button, they'll be able to compress several weeks into an hour or stretch two milliseconds out over several minutes. Time is in the hands of the programmer."

And with computers instead of animals, students can stop an experiment in progress so they can jot down notes. Or they can repeat the process if they don't understand what happened, Walker said. There also is a "Help" button that gives students options.

The cost of four small computers, a printer to record the results and operating supplies was about $15,000, Walker said. The machines could pay for themselves in two years, he said, but that's not the only advantage.

"We can't be sure of the condition of some animals, especially dogs, that have heart worms or other problems related to malnourishment and sometimes the experiments don't come out the way they're supposed to," Walker said.

"And while it's more appropriate for sophomores to work with diseased animals, it's bad for the freshman because they don't see what the textbooks say is supposed to happen."

Using computers also eliminates the cost of buying and caring for the animals, some of whom must be destroyed after the experiments, Walker said.

"Dogs cost about $50 each. Then there's the housing and feeding expenses as well as the (employees') salaries. With today's economy, medical schools are being pressured to either drop animal experiments or increase the efficiency."

Also working against the use of animals is opposition from groups such as the National Humane Society and students who have threatened to disrupt the labs because they don't want to see animals destroyed.

Walker currently is working on two more computer programs.

One program simulating how food in a stomach triggers a release of hormones which in turn trigger a release of enzymes is being tested at Texas Tech School of Medicine in Lubbock.

The other, "still in the thought stage," would normally require the animal to survive for a period of weeks or months, "something we're not able to do now."

But Walker said the machines may be "too perfect."

"It behaves the same way (each time) and that's unrealistic," Walker said. "People and animals are different and you won't get the same effect every time. There are times when a drug can be administered that will knock a person out, while the same dosage administered to another person won't have any effect whatsoever."

Computers don't give students the feel of working with a live animal, Walker said.

"If the same concept used in aviation. Flight simulators are much more effective after the pilot has actually flown a plane," he said.

Propeller from nation's hacked squadron survives

COLUMBUS, N.M. (AP) — Only a splintered maple propeller and a copper replica of a flimsy Curtiss "Jenny" biplane remain now of the nation's first Air Force squadron, which failed its initial mission.

Eight cloth-coated JN-3s were flown to this southern New Mexico town in 1916, three days after Mexican bandit Pancho Villa sacked Columbus in the last attack on a continental United States community. Villa's raiders razed most of Columbus, looted stores and killed 16 Americans.

Only two planes returned from the failed four-week mission into Mexico to track Villa. The first Aero Squadron pilots were so unhappy with the crafts' performances, they hacked up the surviving planes and burned them, historians say.

The lumbering biplane's mission — the first military use of airplanes by the U.S. — was to track the rebels so 10,000 pursuing troops under U.S. Army Gen. John "Black Jack" Pershing's command could capture Villa. Earlier that year, Villa had slain 15 Americans on a Mexican train.

Infuriated by both attacks, President Woodrow Wilson ordered the planes flown in from San Antonio, Texas, to hunt the nettlesome Villa.

"Villa embarrassed the United States. We couldn't just stand by and do nothing," said Arthur Kern, caretaker for the Columbus Historical Museum.

The museum houses an odd collection of military memorabilia from Columbus' Camp Furlong and photos of the border town before and after Villa's surprise attack.

But perhaps the most unusual item in the museum is a maple, four-foot propeller, the last piece remaining from the Jenny's undistinguished military start.

The high desert air proved too much for the Jenny's mechanical makeup, Kern said. "The dry climate raised havoc with wooden propellers," El Paso, Texas, historian Bill Rakocy said. Maple was thought to be the most durable of materials for airplane propellers.

Most of the planes crashed at one time or another, Rakocy said.

The plane's 90-horsepower engine proved too paltry for most takeoffs in Columbus' 5,500-foot altitude. Further, few spare parts were available and the planes had no navigation or radio equipment, he said.

Air technology in 1916 had yet to reach the United States, Kern said.

Mishaps occurred far too often for the pilot's liking.

One pilot flew into a Mexican forest fire at dusk thinking it was a town where he could land. Another had a foot of water accumulate in his open cockpit when he flew through a drenching rainstorm, historians say.

All too often, the planes broke down after landing and the pilots had to hoof it to safety. One pilot hobbled 60 miles with a broken ankle before he was rescued, authorities say.

In one narrow escape, a pilot flew into Chihuahua City where Villa was thought to be hiding. But Villa supporters in the town became so enraged, they chased after the pilot, who was able to take off safely and escape, American West magazine reported in 1976.

Army Capt. Benjamin Foulois was one of two pilots able to return to Columbus with his plane. But when he arrived, he "set match to" the two remaining planes, the magazine said.

America's first Air Force went up in flames, Kern said. "Not a noble start," museum visitor Monte Ent said sarcastically.

To commemorate the first Aero Squadron, the Hacienda Sur Luna private airport near Columbus has a $30,000 copper replica of the Jenny cemented to a pillar overlooking the runway. The five-year-old replica also includes a facsimile of a leather-helmeted Foulois in the front seat of the two-seater.

But the replica's propeller fell off in a winter wind one night, Kern said.

"Not even Mother Nature was nice to those planes," Ent added. "Good thing we didn't give up on planes after that."

The Latin Quarter in Paris is so named because the area is the home of the Sorbonne, where the Latin language was taught.

For most people advertising seen in newspapers is more believable than advertising seen anywhere else, polls show.

Inflation now under control?

Prices, as measured by the government's Consumer Price Index, rose last year at only 3.9 per cent, the slowest rate in the past 15 years.

In other words, inflation, which ranked as public enemy No. 1 in opinion polls throughout the 1970s, finally came under control in 1982.

So why is there no cheering in the streets? The simple answer is that this kind of achievement does not lend itself to cheering. It is not dramatic. It is not even tangible to a lot of people.

Easy money to be passed out makes for more cheering, as any good politician knows. And a lot of politicians are stating that a little inflation is not all that bad, that people are used to it and we need not get upset about inflation.

But it might be good to look at what a lower inflation rate has achieved so far.

Corporations are able to sell stock issues again rather than pile up bigger debts. New businesses are being formed at record levels.

Personal savings are up sharply. In our own community bank deposits are at record levels. Some of this has to be attributed to the fact that inflation has not robbed people of their purchasing power and has allowed them to save.

People on fixed incomes, the retirees if you will, have had a raise in 1982 for the simple fact that prices have not risen the customary 10 to 14 per cent. This means that those fixed income dollars go further. Maybe this is not dramatic, but it is worth appreciating.

The administration pushed policies that affected inflation. Monetary restraint has lowered interest rates from 20 per cent to 11. Deregulation has reduced the cost of energy and transportation.

We hope that Congress does not make the mistakes it has made in some recent years by succumbing to the demands for easier money, for more federal spending, the same proposals for pump priming with federal funds.

In other words, we hope that Congress does not do the things that will send us back to 14 per cent inflation and 20 per cent interest rates, all in the name of government emergency programs.

There are real indications that this recession is turning the corner. Housing sales are up across the nation and in Perryton we have 14 new houses on the way right now. Automobile sales are finally taking an upturn and it won't be long before more auto workers are called back to their jobs.

The indicators are there that we are making things work without inflation to rob us of our future security. Some of us can even feel like cheering now.

COMMENTARY

Don Graff

For better and worse

OK, here we go again. In its news coverage, the Wall Street Journal is a paragon among newspapers.

BUT! The latest and highly successful effort of the WSJ to tick us off is a recent editorial. The subject is one that has received some exposure in this space — some might say overexposure.

El Salvador. Specifically, the Reagan administration's straight-faced certification to Congress a few days back that the fractured Salvadoran government — an assembly dominated by the radical right, an army holding the real power and a figurehead president, installed by the latter and largely ignored by the former — has advanced the human rights of Salvadorans because "only" some 5,000 of them have perished in the last year at the hands, it is widely accepted in the majority of cases, of agents of their own government. That government is thus deemed worthy of continued U.S. aid.

What ticks off the WSJ is criticism of the certification. The editorialist magnanimously allows that most of the critics — who include a very large chunk of Congress and much of the media beyond the jurisdiction of the WSJ's editors — are not motivated by enthusiasm for Soviet imperialism, in which the WSJ finds both cause and significance of the unpleasantness in El Salvador.

No, theirs is another heresy entirely. "They are people who think the United States lost in Vietnam because its political objectives were evil, a source of needless bloodshed. As vindication of their position on Vietnam, they hold that U.S. hegemony over any part of the world, even close to the U.S. border, is unjustified."

There is, of course, a Vietnam connection — but not the one the WSJ makes. It is the alarming propensity of the United States to allow itself to be sucked into a winless situation deeper than anyone ever intended because the policymakers refuse to recognize when the time has come to cut losses.

But the issue of most concerns to most critics is more fundamental. It is not a question of whether the administration's objectives in El Salvador, and Central America in general, are evil but whether they are in the real interests of the United States.

They are not. The maintenance of hegemony, even should that have its short-term political advantages, is not worth the long-term alienation of populations that is the inevitable consequence.

The greatest American handicap in advancing our real interests in Latin America is the American record there. Administration after administration has lined up time after time with rapacious thugs pretending to be strong leaders in the mistaken belief that they represent stability.

With the result that when a despot finally gets the boot — a Batista in Cuba, a Somoza in Nicaragua — the popular rage is also directed at the United States, and it can virtually be guaranteed that the new regime will be hostile.

In the world according to WSJ and others who prefer myth to truth, it is always someone or something else that bears responsibility for the American setback.

See Cuba, Fidel Castro, Herbert Matthews and the New York Times. Matthews and the Times did not create Castro. Years of misrule in Cuba did that. And, by bringing him to world attention, they did not enable him to overthrow Batista. Batista's own brutal excesses did that.

Well, does any of this really matter? After all, most Americans aren't supposed to be all that interested in what goes on to our south.

Yes it does. And we ought to be. We have some degree of choice elsewhere in the world in selecting the peoples with whom we are closely associated. Not in the Americas. Geography has pre-selected them. We cannot afford to be the agents of their alienation.

GETTING OVER RAISING

Cultural attitudes and reality seldom move on the same time table. Long after society changes we still have to deal with the attitudes of the past.

Not so long ago it was considered dangerous to drink milk while eating fish. Mysterious things were supposed to happen from this combination. Somehow the result was sickness or death.

This fear came from the past. In the days before refrigeration people often ate bad fish or drank rancid milk. Since they had no understanding about bacteria or germs their explanation became the old wives tale about the poison of fish and milk together.

By the time I was young we knew better. It had been well established that fish and milk were not poison. Established or not, we did not drink milk when we ate fish. Old attitudes die hard — and slow.

Fish and milk is not the only fear we had. Step on a crack and break your mother's back caused me to walk funny for years. Matter-of-fact, I still avoid cracks in the sidewalk, even if I have to put a "Crow Hop" in my gait. I am sure I look weird going down the sidewalk looking as if I am playing hopscotch.

It is hard to get over our raising. My favorite story about this sort of thing is:

A guy noticed his wife always cut the end off the ham before she cooked it. When he asked why, his wife said, "I don't know. My mother always cut the end off her ham and she made the best ham."

They asked the mother and she said, "I don't know why, but my mother always cut the end off her ham and she made the best ham."

They went to the nursing home to ask the grandmother why she always cut the end off the ham before she cooked it. The grandmother said, "Because my pan was too small."

I wonder what we do now that some joker will write about in 50 years?

Heads you lose; tails IRS wins

By Richard L. Leshner,
President
Chamber of Commerce of the United States

WASHINGTON — In the 1950's comedy "Some Like It Hot," Marilyn Monroe, bemoaning her fate in life, complained, "I always get the fuzzy end of the lollipop."

The American taxpayer can sympathize.

Whenever Congress rides forth to do battle over the federal budget it is the taxpayer who ends up carried from the field in a stretcher.

When deficits are low, the Washington politicians raise federal spending to "stimulate the economy."

When deficits are high, the same politicians call for raising taxes to fight inflation and high interest rates.

Increase spending. Raise taxes. Heads the taxpayer loses; tails the IRS wins. It is an old game and it becomes more expensive for us each year.

This time around the argument runs as follows: Deficits cause high interest rates; high interest rates deter new investment and stand in the way of a strong recovery; therefore, we must raise taxes to cut the deficit.

There are two problems with this line of reasoning.

First, there is more than one way to skin a cat or shrink a deficit. In theory, Congress may staunch the flow of red ink by either raising taxes or putting a tourniquet on the growth of federal spending.

However, we have already tried to tax away the deficit — and it gets larger with every tax increase. It is time to look at the spending side of the deficit equation.

Federal spending has grown from $77 billion in 1980 — Jimmy Carter's last year — to over $80 billion in 1982. And spending for direct payments to individuals rose from $271 billion to over $366 billion in those three years.

This explosion of spending explains a great deal of the deficit. Slow economic growth explains the rest.

Just as you cannot dig your way out of a hole or tax your way out of a recession, Congress cannot "tax away" the deficit. Any increase in taxes will be another drag on the economy which increases — not decreases — the deficit.

The News under date of Feb. 9 calls, attention to some important facts in connection with the dissemination of typhoid and malarial fevers. The News claims, and rightfully, that both typhoid and malarial are most prevalent among country people, meaning, of course, people who live in the small towns and in the country where unsanitary conditions exist. The News in a previous article showed that these two diseases are transferred by insects—malaria by certain mosquitoes and typhoid by the common house fly.

50 YEARS AGO

Today's weather in Hereford matches in temperature that of yesterday when the thermometers of the city dropped to the lowest recording citizens have experienced for a number of years. Nine below was reported by the Santa Fe, and nearly seven below by the West Texas Gas Company.

Despite warnings of its approach, no one really expected a story period of the ferocity that swept down upon the Plains country Monday evening. The thermometer dropped 70 degrees in just a few hours and with snow driven by a high wind. Appearances were excellent for an old-time blizzard.

25 YEARS AGO

Snow, up to four inches in spots, blanketed Deaf Smith County Tuesday and Wednesday, bringing more moisture to wheat and pastures and making streets and highways dangerously icy.

Hereford proper had gained .38 of an inch of moisture from 3½ inches of snow by Wednesday noon. Reports from farmers across the county gave similar figures.

Citizens of Hereford have responded to Central School's appeal for clothing for some of its students and the school now has plenty of clothes to distribute to needy pupils according to L.C. Thomas, principal.

Recession blamed for many things

Recessions get blamed for many problems which are in no way related.

Along with all the innocent people who really suffer from layoffs and business failures, many not-so-innocent are likely to blame the recession for unrelated misery.

The ultimate way out is suicide.

But what do you know! Last October some labor economists at Williams College and the University of Minnesota convinced themselves that the recession was killing us — literally.

They accumulated numbers on suicides which they sought to correlate to the jobless rate and announced that "with every one percent increase in our nation's unemployment 300 American men kill themselves."

The problem is most acute, they said, in men ages 15-34.

And these researchers — Shapiro and Ahlburg — sought to explain that the recession was not having the same effect on women workers because men "have a stronger attachment to their jobs."

Ahlburg and Shapiro admittedly did not include in their study other potential factors.

As I say, they are "labor economists," and thus oriented.

A more comprehensive — a more objective — analysis of the numbers would have revealed that 75 Americans kill themselves every day. It is the suicide rate of boys 10 through 24 which has trebled over the past 30 years, good times and bad.

Indeed, now that last year is in and added up we can see evidence that Americans are strengthened, not weakened, by tough times.

Suicides in Pittsburgh increased last year 26 percent.

Observers, eager for ammunition with which to dramatize the agony of recession, promptly jumped to the conclusion that the increase related to joblessness.

But a closer look at the numbers discredits their preconception.

Of all those 171 suicides in Pittsburgh only two were laid-off steelworkers.

There, as anywhere, most of the victims suffered family-related or mental health problems.

And actually, though this is an increase from the previous year — last year's 171 suicides in Pittsburgh were seven percent fewer than in 1979 — a year of comparative prosperity.

Further, nationally the suicide rate was down last year. Fewer during recession.

Americans can survive adversity better than they can survive prosperity.

Inflation rate: needle in haystack

Editor's Note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Deaf Smith County grass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek runs up against inflation this week, with no gain.

Dear Editor: There are two groups of people in this country none of whom anybody has ever personally met: (1) the TV listeners selected to tell the Nielsen TV ratings people what they're watching, and (2) the people selected to tell what the inflation rate is.

I'm not much interested in the TV ratings. If I owned one of the three networks and mine came in third, which means instead of making say $50 million I made only $45 million the first six months of the year, I believe I could swallow my pride and live with that.

But I would like to know who the inflation rate people talk to.

According to the latest government figures, the rate of inflation is now a little over 5 percent, down from 12 percent. This has me baffled. It's hard for me to understand how the rate of inflation is coming down while the price of things I buy is going up. It's like balancing the budget by quadrupling the deficit. It's like getting out of debt at one bank by borrowing from another to do it with.

I can understand that if you have a $250,000 house for sale with no takers and you reduce the price to $225,000, then the way the government figures it the inflation rate on that house has fallen 10 percent. But at the same time the cost of utilities for that house, like electricity, gas and telephone, keeps going higher and higher. Every time you turn around, there's another rate increase.

One of the reasons the government statisticians miss this I guess is that all their office utility bills are paid out of our pockets, not theirs.

Finding out how the inflation rate is got at is like hunting for a needle in a haystack, although come to think of it I've never heard of anybody needing a needle so bad he'd look for one in such an unlikely place.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

State of women power

In the fallout from last November's elections, there is cause for celebration among politically-active women.

The euphoria doesn't come from Washington. It comes from Ohio and New Mexico, where two new governors lead the nation in appointment of women to their cabinets.

Ohio's Richard Celeste and New Mexico's Toney Anaya went after the women's vote and promised top jobs. After they won, each put an unprecedented number of women in their cabinets: one-third — four — of the New Mexico cabinet posts and four of the 18 slots filled thus far in Ohio.

Barbara Nejeleski, who monitors appointments for the National Women's Political Caucus, says this is an enormous step forward.

I find it interesting that among the women are an Indian, a Hispanic and a former nun. Also a nurse, a teacher, administrators, attorneys and those with experience in budgets, human services and conservation. One is the mother of two small children, two are single parents and several are single. Most have been politically active for some time.

In New Mexico, Anaya's opponent had said he would favor a constitutional amendment banning abortion and could not endorse the newly revived Equal Rights Amendment.

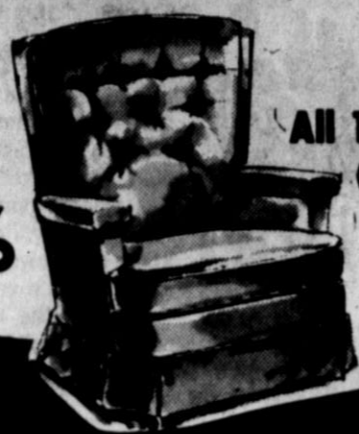

Ohio and New Mexico are sure to feel the impact of these women. Their appointment demonstrates that the road to the state house may be as much an avenue to political power as the road to Washington.

Johnson hoping West can end losing streak

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Earvin "Magic" Johnson said Friday the home crowd at the Forum in Inglewood should help the West end a three-game losing streak against the East in the 33rd National Basketball Association All-Star game Sunday.

"Right now, I'm not excited about the crowd, but I'm sure it will mean more to me Sunday when the crowd starts reacting," said Johnson, the Los Angeles Lakers' guard who will start for the West in the 12:30 p.m. PST game.

"I love the crowd and the smell of popcorn. It really gets me going." Johnson joked at a news conference about entertaining the fans by allowing East forward Julius Erving of Philadelphia to score on uncontested dunks. But when asked about the losing streak, Johnson became serious.

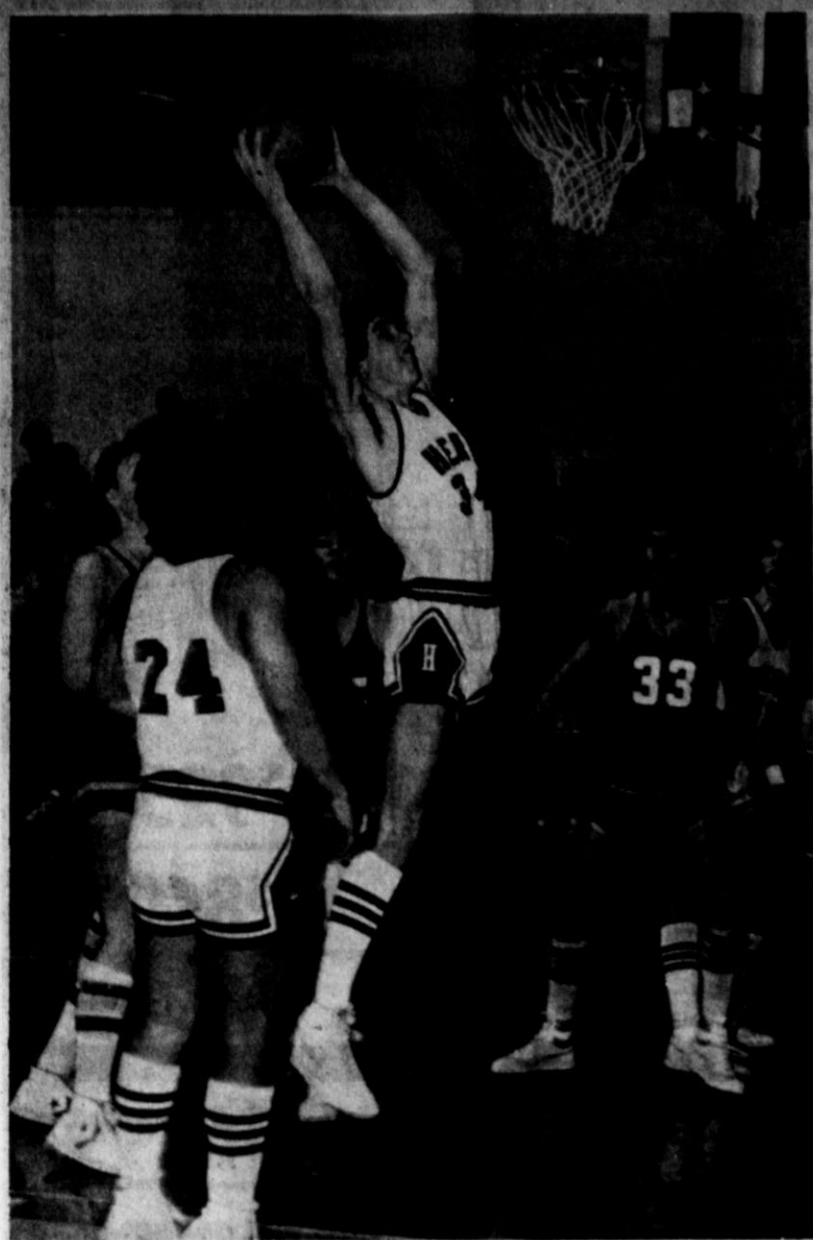

"Losing is a foreign language to me," Johnson said. "I expect to win and to try hard to win, but I'll also try to have fun."

Despite the three straight losses and the East's 21-11 series edge against the West, Coach Pat Riley of the Lakers said he didn't feel the East had established itself as the dominant conference.

"The games always have been close, especially last year when it went down to the wire," Riley said. "The East has just been making big plays at the end."

"These guys were voted in to the game and I don't worry about them playing together," Cunningham said. The other East starters are

Moses Malone and Erving of the 76ers, and Larry Bird of Boston, which Cunningham called "one of the best front lines ever put together."

Party's over in 3-5A cage races

BY LES GILES
Sports Editor

It's over ... the party's over ... you can turn out the lights, because it's cigar time as far as Plainview, Caprock and Monterey are concerned in this year's District 3-5A boys and girls basketball races.

Caprock's boys came through with a gutty 75-52 double overtime victory over Lubbock High Friday night to complete the playoff picture, as far as this district is concerned.

With the win, Caprock and Plainview secured playoff berths in the boys' half of the league. Plainview and Monterey's girls already had playoff spots locked up prior to Friday's games.

It mattered little that Plainview's boys lost a 62-61 thriller to Palo Duro, or that Monterey's girls were bombed by Amarillo High, 73-47.

Friday night's play concluded the regular season for the girls. The boys complete the regular schedule this week with games Tuesday and Friday, but the outcomes matter little, except for final district position.

Plainview and Caprock's boys are in, regardless of what happens this week. The bulldogs are 11-3 and the Longhorns 11-4 following their 10th win in a row. After that, it's Lubbock, AHS, Palo Duro and Tascosa at 8-6. Even if Plainview and Caprock lose next week, the most losses they could have would be five — one fewer than anyone else.

Plainview's girls wound up the district champion by virtue of their 50-41 win over Palo Duro Friday. The Bulldog girls completed the regular league season with a 15-1 mark, while Monterey fell to 14-2. AHS, a state tournament semifinalist a year ago, wound up with the best season record (20-3), but its 13-3 league standard was good enough for only third place.

Hereford's girls salvaged a degree of satisfaction by tripping Coronado, 59-52, Friday. That victory secured fifth place in the final standings for the Whiteface girls (7-9, compared to Coronado's 6-10 record).

The boys, meanwhile, lost their 11th straight game and remained the league's only winless club (0-14), dropping a 92-83 decision to the Mustangs.

Hereford, which ended the season 9-11, jumped out to a 17-1 first period lead, after the Mustang girls scored the first point of the contest.

The Herd led by as many as 22 points (27-5) in the second quarter, and at the half enjoyed a 35-14 edge.

Coronado cut into the deficit in the second half, closing within 16 (47-31) after three periods, and finally getting as close as five points (57-52) with 31 seconds to go.

Cathy Bartels and Sherri Ellis led the way for Hereford, scoring 16 and 15 points, respectively. Bartels also pulled down 13 rebounds and Ellis 12.

For the game, Hereford was 23 of 54 from the field (42.5 percent), while Coronado was 19 of 45 (42.2 percent). The Mustang girls might have made things much closer except for a 14 for 31 performance from the free-throw line.

In the boys' game, Coronado jumped ahead early, grabbing a 10-2 lead midway through the opening period, and expanding that to 18-6 a couple of minutes later.

The Mustangs led by as many as 18 points (29-11) early in the second period, before Hereford pulled within eight (29-21) after running off 10 straight points. But, by halftime, Coronado enjoyed a 49-43 cushion.

Hereford managed to close within nine points (65-56) by the end of three periods, and cut the difference to seven (66-59) in the opening minute of the final quarter, but could get no closer.

Pat Norris tossed in 23 points, while Steve Priced chipped in with 18 and a dozen rebounds for the winners. Terry Shelton led Hereford, now 5-21 on the season, with 18 points and nine rebounds. Brian Taylor added 17 points, including 11 of 11 from the charity stripe. Jeff Streun also was in double figures with 13 (11 of 14 free shots) as was Steve Welch with 11.

The Whitefaces stayed as close as they did by sinking 31 of 39 foul shot attempts. From the field Coronado was 36 of 79 (46.8 percent), while the Herd was 26 of 64 (40.6 percent).

Hereford's boys travel to Palo Duro Tuesday, then close out the season Friday at home against Lubbock High.

"Marvelous" Marvin Hagler KO's Sibson in 6th

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — Marvin Hagler's punches were so sharp, so swift, so damaging, that Tony Sibson didn't see them coming. He only saw their results.

After Hagler successfully defended his undisputed world middleweight boxing title for the sixth time Friday night by stopping Sibson at 2:40 of the sixth round, the challenger retreated to his locker room for a peek at the damage.

"I didn't believe anyone could ever do what happened to me tonight," said the

Briton, who had won 14 consecutive fights since losing Nov. 8, 1979. "I looked in the mirror and saw what I've never seen in my life."

He gazed at a gash beside his left eye that required three stitches and led to the end of the crowd-pleasing, slugging match. He wasn't sure he saw the blows that opened it.

"I couldn't see the punches to stop them, so he was knocking me all over the place," said Sibson. "His punching was so accurate, I couldn't find an answer to it."

Hagler had hoped Sibson's eyesight would play tricks on him.

"I wanted to confuse him," said the 30-year-old belter from Brockton, Mass. "I wanted to give him a mirage. He'd look for something and it wouldn't be there."

Sibson, 24, looked for the skills that had carried him to a 47-3-1 record and the No. 1 World Boxing Council ranking but never really found them.

Hagler scored with combinations early in the first round and was the aggressor.

In the second round Sibson stuck by his charging style of close-in fighting and landed several good lefts to the head.

"He shook me up with a good left hook that caught me on the side of the eye in the second round," Hagler said. "That got me a little nervous."

The challenger continued to score in the third round, hitting Hagler with three consecutive blows 2:15 into the round. But in the fourth round, the bout shifted decidedly to Hagler as he bloodied Sibson's nose early.

In the fifth, he opened the eye cut that unleashed a stream of blood down Sibson's left cheek.

Sibson's handlers stopped the cut, but Hagler got it going again early in the sixth round. Then, after a furious exchange of punches, a right-left-right combination floored Sibson at 1:47 of the round. He got up and fought back gamely, only to be put down by two rights to the head. Blood covering his face, Sibson tried to right his mouthpiece as he staggered to his feet, but referee Carlos

Padilla ended the battle. Padilla scored the first five rounds 50-46 for Hagler. Judge Tony Perez had it 49-46 and Marcello Bertini 50-45, both for Hagler. "I was just going into my tool chest and starting to put things together the right way" when the fight ended, said Hagler, now 56-2-2 with 47 knockouts.

College basketball roundup

Villanova trips Pitt, 78-65

By The Associated Press
With the snow piling up outside and few fans paying their way to get inside, Villanova athletic officials decided to let students in for free to watch the 12th-ranked Wildcats tangle with Pittsburg.

And even though Villanova won the Big East matchup 78-65 Friday night, Wildcats Coach Rollie Massimino said the people who got in for nothing got what they paid for.

"It's still lack-of-groove city for us," Massimino complained. "We had an eight-or 10-point lead throughout the second half and really, that's all we could do. We couldn't break it open."

He said that after Villanova hit a school-record 69 percent of its shots from the field.

The game was the only one involving a Top 20 team Friday night. Meanwhile, the driving snow that blanketed the East also forced postponement of several games Saturday night. Among the games wiped out were Duke-Maryland and Davidson-Virginia Military Institute.

Pitt, which had recently upset nationally ranked conference foes St. John's and Syracuse, pulled within 48-44 in the second half before the Wildcats took charge.

Villanova's John Pinone scored 25 points, despite an upset nationally ranked conference foe St. John's and Syracuse, pulled within 48-44 in the second half before the Wildcats took charge.

"I think we played them better this time," said Pitt Coach Roy Chipman, whose Panthers lost 60-48 at home to Villanova earlier this season. Clyde Vaughn led Pitt with 22 points.

In other games, Michael Chavez scored 14 of his 16 points in the first half, pacing California to an 80-53 victory over Pacific, which suited up only eight players. Chavez hit seven of eight shots from the floor in the first half.

Cal scored the last nine points of the first half to take a 36-17 lead at intermission and then opened up a 51-20 margin early in the second half.

Reserve Jimmy Elliott had eight points late in the game and Lonnie Boone scored 22 points as Tennessee Tech beat Ohio Valley Conference leader Murray State 78-73. Glen Green scored 29 points for Murray State, now 17-4 overall and 8-2 in the conference, which it still leads by one game.

Ivy League action saw Willie Oliphant score 17 points as Pennsylvania routed Dartmouth 70-46; Butch Graves tallied 22 to lead Yale over Cornell 76-70; Craig Robinson's 17 points helped Princeton defeat Harvard 67-46; and Columbia rallied past Brown 63-59 behind Darren Burnett's 19 points.

And, in Elkins, W.Va., John Casner scored 27 points as Davis and Elkins topped Bluefield State 111-110 in five overtimes.

City of Houston hopes for new USFL grid franchise

HOUSTON (AP) — A sports agent planning to announce that Houston has won a new professional football franchise is probably celebrating a little early, says the United States Football League commissioner.

Dr. Jerry Argovitz, who represents a large number of National Football League players, said this week that he has sole rights to a USFL team which will take the field in Houston next year.

But USFL Commissioner Chet Simmons, reached in New York, said Friday that league founder David Dixon has not notified the league of his plans for a Houston franchise.

"In any case, any action Mr. Dixon would propose would require review and approval by the league," Simmons said.

"It is the intention of the USFL to expand into four cities for play in the 1984 season. At this point, no final award has been made to any city. The league is currently reviewing excellent applications from more than 10 cities."

League officials have said they hope to place at least one team in Texas.

Argovitz, 44, said he and other investors will make a down payment of $2.5 million for the team. He said they would pay an additional $3.5 million over the next four

Herd golfers 10th in meet

LUBBOCK — Hereford's girls, after going more than a month with little or no practice because of poor weather, opened the spring golf season Friday here, finished 10th among 12 teams in the Lubbock Invitational at Pine Hills Country Club.

Amarillo High won the one-day meet, carding a 382 total for 18 holes. It was three shots better than Midland High and nine better than third-place Snyder. Hereford shot a 445, paced by Tiffi Dirks' 89, which was good for third place in the medalist race.

Midland's Kelle Mobley won medalist honors with a 78 — four strokes over par. Dena Warren of Borger was next with an 86, followed by Dirks and Nancy Avery of Amarillo High.

Other Hereford scores include: Kelly Williams, 108; Julie Vick, 138; Cindy McCracken, 122, and Jeri Beach, 126. Debra Schroeter had a 134. "Considering the fact we haven't practiced at all since mid-December, I wasn't too displeased," coach Mike Fields noted.

"But, we weren't the only teams that hadn't been able to practice because of the weather in the Panhandle."

The girls' team will travel to Big Spring for a meet Feb. 24-25, while the boys will be in Roswell for the NMMI Invitational that same weekend.

Bowling deadline is Feb. 18

Mavericks have shed country image in NBA

An AP Sports Analysis By DENNE H. FREEMAN AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Like the change to the upbeat rock music they play at time outs, the Dallas Mavericks have shed their country image in the National Basketball Association.

If you play Dallas, you had best play hard. They are more explosive than expansion now. They aren't country cool, they're city slick.

They've beaten Portland in Portland.

They've beaten Phoenix in Phoenix.

They've beaten the Los Angeles Lakers three out of the last four times they've played them.

They have won 12 of their last 15 games.

They are one game over .500 and in second place in the Midwest Division of the NBA's Western Conference.

If the playoffs started tomorrow, the Mavericks would be there, edging Kansas City out for the sixth and final berth in the Western Conference.

"Dallas has the talent to be a playoff team," said Laker Coach Pat Riley. "Dick Motta has done a great job."

Opposing players are impressed by the crowds they face in Reunion Arena, averaging some 12,000 per game, eighth best in the NBA.

"It's like a college crowd," said Riley.

The Maverick fans haven't developed anything like San Antonio's "Baseline Bums" but they are a loyal lot, giving standing ovations to losses.

You would have thought Notre Dame had beaten UCLA in South Bend, Ind., the night Mark Aguirre tossed in back-to-back three point baskets to beat the Lakers. Hundreds of fans waited out in the cold to get Maverick autographs an hour after the game.

Three weeks later the Mavericks downed the defending world champions again on a last-second Jay Vincent bucket to get Reunion Arena rockin'.

Motta has masterfully handled Aguirre, the No. 1 draft choice two years ago.

Aguirre, sometimes pouty, sometimes overweight, sometimes no defense, has turned into a slim, trim, eager scoring machine.

And he's trying hard to play defense and rebound.

"Mark's not there yet with his defense but he hustling and getting more consistent," said Motta. "He has been a force offensively."

Aguirre scored a club-high 44 points recently in a road victory over Portland.

Trade rumors have been flying about Aguirre but the Mavericks, who still need a beefy, rebounding, passing center to be a true playoff threat, have denied them all.

Maverick followers saw potential morale problems when Motta started Aguirre and Jay Vincent, last season's leading Dallas scorer, at the same time.

However, both have been caught up in the spirit of Motta's team concept and pass to each other when the situation dictates.

Motta's offense is a passing game built around his forwards who produce most of the points. The center, in Dallas' case power forward Pat Cummings, is supposed to be a passer and a banger inside.

Motta's defense is on floor burns. You take charges, you dive for loose balls, you help out, or you get pine time.

Guard Brad Davis, a refuge from the Continental Basketball Association, is a near 60 per cent shooter who is magic doling out assists. Not even swift Kelvin Ransey, obtained from Portland in the off-season, could beat out Davis.

The 6-9 Cummings was picked up from Milwaukee for a second-round draft pick. When he has good games the Mavericks usually win. He neutralized Kareem Abdul-Jabbar in one game against the Lakers.

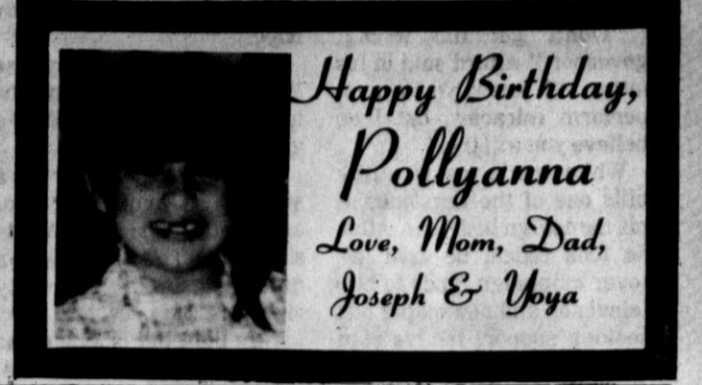

The Mavericks in three short years have developed into a competitive team without a big-time center, unheard of in today's NBA.

"It's a shame the All-Star break came when it did because we are on a roll," said Vincent. "But we'll come back livelier for our run at the playoffs."

Yes, a Maverick said that. Incredibly, he's right. They've got a chance.

In 5,000 meters

Salazar predicts world record

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Outspoken Alberto Salazar, the fastest marathoner in history, is boldly predicting he will break the world indoor best Saturday night when he meets Robert de Castella of Australia, the No. 2 marathoner, in the 5,000-meter race in the star-studded U.S. Olympic Invitational track and field meet in the Meadowlands Arena.

Salazar's goal is to go below the clocking of 13 minutes, 20.4 seconds set by Suleiman Nyambui of Tanzania on Feb. 6, 1981 in New York's Madison Square Garden. In that race, Salazar finished second in 13:22.6, the best ever by an American.

Salazar's American record was lowered to 13:20.55 by Doug Padilla last year.

Now, the 24-year-old Salazar not only wants to break Padilla's record, but also Nyambui's.

"I'm confident I can run under 13:20," said Salazar. "I think this is the fastest indoor track in the world. The turns are gentle, the banks are just right, and you don't feel any tugs on the turns."

"I'm sure I can get the record if I can just manage to stay on my feet all the way."

That reference was to last year's 5,000-meter race in this meet, when he got tripped up on the first lap and recovered to win in 13:23.08.

Salazar's predictions cannot be taken lightly. In 1980, he predicted he would break 2:10 in the New York City Marathon in his first attempt at the 26-mile, 385-yard distance. He did it, running 2:09:41, the fastest first-time marathon ever.

In 1981, he predicted he would run the fastest marathon ever. And again he came through, running 2:08:13 in the New York City race.

For de Castella, the 1982 Commonwealth Games marathon champion who has a career-best of 2:06:18, this will be his indoor debut.

He is concerned about being able to handle the fast 10-laps-to-the-mile boarded track.

"The bends are very difficult and tight," he said. "If the field is closely bunched, it could be easy to get knocked down."

Salazar and de Castella have run only once in the same race — the World Cross Country Championships at Rome last year. Salazar finished second and de Castella was 10th.

In addition to Salazar and de Castella, the 5,000 will have Nyambui; fellow Tanzanians Juma Ikangaa, the runner-up in the Commonwealth Games marathon, and Zakariah Barie; Jim Hill, a "sleeper" from the University of Oregon; Sothenes Bitok of Kenya; Nick Rose of Britain, and Chris Fox, formerly of Auburn.

A host of holders of world indoor bests will be on hand in other events, including Eamonn Coghlan, mile, 3:50.6; Carl Lewis, long jump, 28 feet, 1 inch; Billy Olson, pole vault, 19-0 1/4; Stephanie Hightower, women's high hurdles, 7.37 seconds, and Jim Heiring, men's 1,500-meter walk, 5:27.1.

Hearing is scheduled for Oilers' Stemrick

HOUSTON (AP) — A state judge scheduled a March 30 hearing to decide whether authorities illegally searched Houston Oilers All-Pro cornerback Greg Stemrick.

Stemrick, 31, pleaded innocent Friday to a charge of possessing 2 1/2 grams of cocaine.

He was arrested Jan. 12 with teammate J.C. Wilson after they came out of a bar being monitored by narcotics officers, Assistant District Attorney Chuck Cottingham said.

Stemrick is free on $5,000 bond. Wilson has pleaded innocent to charges of driving while intoxicated and driving with a suspended license. He is free on $800 bond.

Cottingham said police observed Stemrick carrying a white powder. "The officers had good reason to believe the substance was cocaine," Cottingham said. "The officers identified themselves and there was a physical disagreement. After he (Stemrick) was in handcuffs, the officers recovered the cocaine." The arrests came 10 days after Oilers head coach Ed Biles told a news conference that drugs and alcohol were among problems that plagued his 1-8 team last season.

EYE CARE UPDATE

DR. JAMES SIMNACHER, O.D.
THE THREE-IN-ONE OPTOMETRIST — LENS

QUESTION: My cousin says she really likes her new glasses with the three-in-one lens. Why would anyone need a three-in-one lens?

ANSWER: Some people have serious problems in seeing things clearly at any distance: closeup, nearby, or far away. That's when a three-in-one lens is needed. Take a bookkeeper with this kind of problem. He makes entries or checks figures in the records in front of him. At the same time he may be working with a desk computer or adding machine a short distance away. And he has to be able to see across the room when someone wants his attention. If anyone needs trifocal or three-in-one lenses to work in comfort and without eye strain, it's good to know they're available.

AUSTIN (AP) — James Alford of Granbury, one of thousands of Texans who responded to Gov. Mark White's televised request for feedback on utility costs, knows he's asking for a lot — lower monthly bills.

"Don't get me wrong, governor," Alford said in his letter. "I know you cannot perform miracles, but I do believe you will try."

White made rising utility bills one of the keystones of his campaign last year. After he took office, he used leftover campaign funds to buy television and newspaper ads seeking support for his plan to switch the Public Utility Commission from an appointed to an elected body.

He also wants support for the abolition of the automatic pass-through of fuel costs.

Ann Arnold, White's press secretary, says the response to the ads has been "overwhelming." The governor's staff has given up trying to keep up with the mail. It's all being stuffed into boxes in the Capitol basement until workers can sort it out.

Many include hand-scribbled stories of hard times, low income and rising utility bills. Richard Ford and his wife in Pampa, who are both older than 70, wrote White, "You are our only hope."

Some, however, oppose White's ideas and say the utility companies are doing a good, honest job.

To Lilla Ford of Tyler it's a simple problem of arithmetic. She told White she is 77 and ill. She lives on a monthly Social Security check of $283.

"My light bill is as high as $40.03. My gas bill is $53.34. There is no way I can pay these bills and buy food and pay for the medicine," she said.

Mrs. Ford, like many letter-writers, complained about her natural gas bill, which is regulated by the Texas Railroad Commission, not the PUC. White has not called for changes in natural gas price regulation by the state.

Mrs. Mason Harden's handwritten letter says she is doing all she can, but is losing the battle against the bills.

"Please sir. Please help," she wrote White. "Shore need your help. I only used a very small gas heater. Used a cooker oven to cook on. Stay in bed a half-day under an electric blanket on four."

E.R. Sadler of Dimmitt wrote, "The fuel adjustment cost makes me sick to look at the electric bill and the gas bill. How did they get in this position to rip the people off? Please get on with it."

Dolly Marvin of Fort Worth said she supports White. She added a dig at Bill Clements, White's predecessor.

"Glad old Clements is out, the old goat," she said.

At least one utility company has mounted an organized effort to counter White's ads. In a letter that starts with, "Dear Texas Shareholder," Gulf States Utilities Chairman Paul Murrill says an elected commission is a bad idea.

He quoted a research company report that said, "In general, more risk may be ascribed to those states in which commissioners are elected since the commissioners are put into office by the same people who pay the utility bills.

"If the ratepayers become displeased about increases in utility bills, they can, and often do, show their displeasure at the ballot box," said Murrill.

Arnold Smith of Conroe, who said he owns 2,000 shares of GSU stock — but disagrees with Murrill — sent the executive's letter to White, along with some comments scribbled in the margins.

"I see nothing wrong with protesting exorbitant rates at the ballot box. This is a democracy," said Smith.

Murrill's letter said an elected commission that held rates artificially low would hurt the utility companies and eventually, their customers.

Smith wrote in the margin, "Baloney!"

Opponents to White's plans offered several arguments. B.R. Brumby of Houston says Texans are not qualified to elect utility commissioners, and the selection of commissioners should be left up to the governor.

"The public is just not knowledgeable enough to make wise selections on such people," said Brumby.

Norman Freeman of Dallas agreed.

"If you were running a large business ... would you go out on the street and ask people to select a manager for you to run this big division, or, as a skilled and knowledgeable executive, would you select someone you knew was capable to run such a large enterprise?"

"What kind of intelligence do you expect to get when you permit inexperienced people to pick your managers?" asked Freeman, an "investment adviser."

R.E. Matthews, chairman of the board of the First National Bank of Longview, also said the governor can pick better commissioners than the people can.

"Governors of our state have always done an exceptional job in appointing officials to various boards and I feel you are capable of doing the same," he told White.

Kerrville resident James Murphy said he supports White, but is afraid "special interest groups will take control" of an elected commission.

John Hudson of Austin said, "Texas voters are already overburdened electing officials to obscure posts in state government."

"You ran on a platform of utility reform, now use your power of appointment!" he told the governor.

Jim Turner of Beaumont said, "Being anti-utility is today an attractive position, your election is proof of that."

"But you can't legislate costs away and most reasonable people realize that," he said.

Many letter-writers told White they plan to hold him to his promises on utility bills.

"I am a taxpayer who likes the fuel adjustment clause and I simply cannot understand why you are against it. There are many people, Texans, out there who voted for you thinking it will lower bills. That's, in simple English, not true and we both know it," said James Estes of Abilene.

William Threlkeld of Menard supports White's plan, but warned the governor:

"Be sure you can answer some day when you meet your maker."

Any woman who has oily hair will tell you that it is very difficult to keep her hair clean. The reason is that oil from the scalp begins to replenish itself with amazing rapidity. In the first hour after shampooing, as much as fifty percent of hair and scalp oils are replaced. The replenishing process then tapers. It takes up to three hours to restore the rest of the hair's natural oils. Oily hair is generally a result of hormonal changes, warm weather and/or increased glandular activity. These factors can often only be controlled through a positive attitude and good general health.

Man jailed, praised after spanking lover

HOUSTON (AP) — A judge sentenced a man to one year's probation for spanking his wife's former lover because he did not apply "equal justice."

County Court-at-Law Judge Bill Ragan said public sympathy was "greatly in favor of giving the man a medal and putting the wife in jail."

But Ragan said he had to punish Michael Ware to stop similar acts of domestic violence.

"He was wrong for being judge, jury and executioner," Ragan said. "I can't just slap him on the wrist and turn all the wayward folks in Houston loose to spank their wives' lovers."

Ragan gave the 26-year-old repairman a year's probation and a $200 fine for spanking his wife's former lover with a wooden paddle in October.

Ware, who was convicted Monday on two charges of misdemeanor assault and trespassing, said he got "the raw end of the deal."

"It's hard for me to believe that I broke the law. The judge said the community thought I should get a medal," Ware said.

"If I didn't believe in God I would have walked over there and killed him," Ware said. "But it was worth it, the court case, everything. I can't even pay my fine."

After Ware was convicted, Ragan said, several citizens called asking for leniency.

"I weighed these expressions," the judge said.

But Ragan said Ware should not have dispensed vigilante justice unequally after discovering his wife had an affair.

"He (Ware) didn't apply equal justice in this case," Ragan said. "He should have spanked the wife equally as hard as the lover."

After the beating, Ware tore off the victim's clothes and locked him out of the house, testimony showed.

GINGER LYONS
...to marry Timothy Reed

Couple to marry Valentine's Day

Miss Ginger Lyons, daughter of Joyce Lyons of Hereford, and Timothy Reed, plan to marry Monday afternoon in the home of Reed's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Don Reed of Lubbock. The Rev. Sam Nader, pastor of First Methodist Church of Lubbock, will officiate.

Miss Lyons will be attired in a two-piece emerald green silk ensemble and will carry a bouquet of pink roses and baby's breath.

The couple will make their home in Lubbock.

Miss Lyons, a 1972 Hereford High School graduate, attended West Texas State University and Texas Tech University. She is currently employed as a hairdresser at the imajanation in Lubbock.

Reed is self-employed in Lubbock.

Family members from Hereford who plan to attend the ceremony include the bride's mother; her grandmother, Evalee Potter; her aunt and uncle, Gayle and Jan McElhaney and their two children, Jodi and Clifton; and brothers, Frank also of Hereford and Steven of Amarillo.

Career Day scheduled

Some realistic information about job opportunities is hoped to be gained by students at the Hereford High Career Day, Feb. 24, according to Mary Parker, faculty coordinator.

The Career Day began last year in conjunction with the Deaf Smith County 4-H to provide contact between students and persons in different career areas.

Plans for the event began months ago when students completed an interest sheet detailing possible careers. From that questionnaire, master schedules were prepared and students were enrolled in their special interest areas.

Each presentation will have a question answer period and there will be a section on how to choose a career.

Where too few requested a particular section, the students are scheduled for a related area.

The class schedule will be altered to make four 42-minute periods. Students will have an hour lunch break while the presenters and sponsors attend a luncheon sponsored by the 4-H Council, Campfire Council and Hereford High at the Community Center.

TYE, Texas (AP) — A municipal judge fired by the mayor of this small West Texas town says that he will not leave the bench until the full City Council dismisses him.

Mayor Jim Snowden, who has been feuding with Municipal Judge Dennis Hodges for several weeks here, has also fired all three members of the Tye Police Department. Hodges says Snowden has abused his authority.

"I've called him a dictator. And what else can you call him?" said Hodges.

The judge showed up for work Friday and read a paperback romance novel because the mayor had dismissed all pending cases.

Wedding vows exchanged by Hereford couple

Immanuel Lutheran Church was the setting for the Saturday afternoon wedding uniting Janet Gayle Stacey and Jeffrey Paul Nielsen. The Rev. Matthew Sullivan, pastor, performed the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Bobby and Freda Bridwell of 608 Stanton and the bridegroom is the son of Don and Marlene Nielsen of 411 Centre.

Large bouquets of peach and baby blue mums, carnations, gladioli, and daisies in brass champagne buckets adorned each side of the altar. "Wedding Song," "Color My World," and "Endless Love" were vocalized by Dean Stanley.

Kim Bridwell, the bride's sister, served as maid of honor and Terry Blackwell was the best man. Joe and Kevin Hamby served as ushers.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an off-white chiffon gown featuring a wide V-shaped lace ruffle extending over the shoulders and trimmed with satin ribbon. The full, sheer sleeves were caught with wide lace, ribbon edged cuffs closed with pearl buttons. The high collar was also trimmed with lace.

The fitted waistband adorned with a double row of ribbon, tied at the back and the full skirt fell in two tiers trimmed with ribbon and a lace ruffle.

She wore a wide-brim hat covered with lace and ribbon and carried a silk flower nosegay of peach and candlelight miniature roses with baby blue Bells of Ireland and white stephanotis.

The maid of honor was attired in a baby blue gown similar to the bride's but fashioned with pearl buttons at the front neckline. She carried an arm bouquet of baby blue, peach, and candlelight silk flowers.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church basement. Angie Sandoval invited guests to register. Cheryl Davison and Cindy Carroll, the bride's sisters, and Sandra Nielsen, the groom's sister, served refreshments.

The bride's cake, iced in white, was accented with zig-zag garlands and string work with shell borders. The bottom tier was petal-shaped and the second tier was round. Ribboned bouquets of chrysanthemums cascaded from each pillar and apricot, beige and blue flowers adorned the tiers. A large wedding bell backed by a heart and double wedding rings hanging from a ribbon topped the cake.

The oval-shaped chocolate groom's cake was iced with chocolate buttercream frosting. Apricot, beige and blue chrysanthemums surrounded the bride and groom's monogram which centered the cake.

The couple will reside at 834 Irving.

The bride graduated from Hereford High School in 1978 and attended La Plata Beauty School and Amarillo College of Hair Design. She is currently a secretary at Hereford Uniform and Linen.

The bridegroom is a 1978 graduate of Torrington High School in Torrington, Wyo., and a 1981 graduate of Eastern Wyoming College. He is presently employed at Brown Sheet Metal.

Out of town guests included the bride's aunt and uncle, Bill and Pat Frye of Dumas.

In ceremony at San Jose Catholic Church

Couple is married here Saturday

Miss Connie Denisse Villarreal and Roy Lee Garcia exchanged wedding vows Saturday afternoon at San Jose Catholic Church. The Rev. James O'Connor officiated at the ceremony. The church, where the bride's parents were married 20 years ago, was decorated with burgundy and white flowers.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Hector M. Villarreal of 112 Star St., and Ophelia Garcia of 307 Lake St.

Gloria Cano was maid of honor and Peter Castillo served as best man.

Bridesmaids included Linda Garcia and Marisa Fuentes, cousins of the bride; Lupe Del Toro of Austin; Patricia Cano; and Kathy Robles. The bride's brother, Randy Villarreal; Saul Villarreal; Andrew Prieto, cousin of the bride from Austin; Ramiro Alaniz; and Ricky Garza served as groomsmen.

Junior bridesmaids were Marta Pina and Elena Martinez, cousins of the bride from Austin; Veronica Casarez; Monica Cantu; Mandy Cantu; and Rebecca Leal, all cousins of the bride.

Junior pages were Pablo Guerrero, son of Raul and Nora Guerrero, and Maria Ramirez, daughter of Ruben and Sylvia Ramirez. Flower girl was Mitzi Villarreal, sister of the bride.

Candle lighters were the bride's aunt and uncle, Ruth and Jaime Villarreal, and altar boys were Alonzo Ramirez and Joey Balderaz. Mass deacons were Raul Gutierrez, uncle of the bride; Emilio Fuentes, uncle of the bride's father; and Vicente Garcia.

Organist was Yolanda Madrigal and flutist was Sandy Zepeda. Nancy Beltran, soloist, performed "Anillo de Compromiso," the couple's principal selection.

Escorted to the altar by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of organza, satin, and lace. The Queen Anne neckline was enhanced with ruffles and the sheer, fitted sleeves were adorned with lace appliques. The full skirt formed a chapel-length train and was fashioned with a wide ruffle circling the back.

As something new, the bride wore a veil presented to her by her aunt Elividia and uncle Omar Villarreal. Something borrowed and something old was a double strand pearl necklace from her aunt. She also wore a blue garter and pennies with the bride and groom's birth years and she carried a bouquet of burgundy and white flowers.

Her attendants wore burgundy floor-length gowns with matching headpieces and carried burgundy flowers with white ribbons.

Audry Nadine Villarreal registered guests at a reception which followed the ceremony at Hereford State Bank. Maria Garcia and Nela Fuentes served wedding cake and Priscilla Villarreal and Mitzi Villarreal served punch and coffee.

Others assisting at the reception were Antonia Madrigal, Bertha Zepeda, Miriam Gutierrez, Lucy Garcia, and Ophelia Garcia.

Diet Facts & Fallacies

These nutritional tips brought to you by DIET CENTER

Do you have high blood pressure? If so, you can join with 35 million other Americans who also suffer from this same disease.

Blood pressure is actually a measurement of the force exerted by blood pumped from the heart against the walls of the arteries and veins. If this measurement remains above normal, it is labeled as high blood pressure or hypertension.

High blood pressure is now viewed as a disease that should be treated "no matter how mild or uncomplicated." While science has yet to determine its definitive cause, you can take two steps to control high blood pressure. First, if you are overweight, diet effectively with a program that provides for long-term maintenance, not just a quick, temporary loss. Second, restrict your salt (sodium) intake at mealtimes and in food preparation. For additional help in putting these steps to practice in your life, contact your local Diet Center Counselor.

This year's annual event will be held from 5-9 p.m. April 1. Observing the demonstration are from left, Gary Phipps, Rotary president; Gene Ehler, chairman of the fish fry; and Denny Hicks, co-chairman of the event. (Brand Photo by Sandy Pankey).

Largest gold theft occurs in Miami

NORTH MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Two masked gunmen walked in the unlocked door of a jewelry wholesaler, tied up three workers and stole an estimated 875 pounds of gold worth up to $9 million in what could be the nation's largest gold theft, officials said Friday.

The bandits vanished during a fierce thunderstorm that had cleared the streets of potential witnesses.

The gold stolen Thursday night was worth $6 million to $9 million, police said. In 1980, thieves stole 800 pounds of gold from another Dade County jewelry business, and that $8 million burglary was described at the time by an insurance investigator as the nation's largest gold theft.

Metro-Dade police spokesman Tim Davis said the FBI was calling the robbery the biggest gold heist in "recent memory."

The thieves walked into Golden Door Jewelry Creations, forced owner Scaul Crediwiosu to open three safes and then blindfolded and bound him and two other employees with electrical tape, Davis said.

Crediwiosu was kicked in the back, officials said, but there were no other injuries.

"They got away clean" with bars, chains and other items made of gold, said Sgt. William McArthur.

FBI agents were called in because of the size of the theft and the likelihood that the stolen gold would be taken to another state and sold, FBI spokesman Dennis Erich said.

Erich said investigators were trying to determine why the door to be unlocked.

"It may be that someone had just come through and brought something or was in the process of taking something out," he said. "We want to obtain an explanation."

Windows of the one-story building, where workers fashion gold chains, charms and other items for sale to retail jewelry stores, are covered with wrought-iron bars.

Rotary Club slates annual fish fry

Rotary Club members have scheduled their annual fish fry from 5-9 p.m. April 1 at the Hereford Bull Barn. Admission price for the all-you-can-eat supper is $5.50 for adults and $3.50 for children six to 12 years of age. Children under six will be admitted free of charge.

Tickets may be purchased from any Rotary Club member and will be available at the door. Take out orders will also be prepared. Side dishes will include cole slaw and French fries, as well as tea, coffee and lemonade beverages.

Proceeds from the annual event will be given to Deaf Smith General Hospital in order to purchase a second heart thumper for the other ambulance.

Club members have purchased two additional commercial deep fryers in order to better accommodate the crowd.

Gary Phipps is Rotary Club president and serving as chairman and co-chairman of the fish fry are Gene Ehler and Denny Hicks.

Take extra care with hose

BY LOUISE WALKER
County Extension Agent
Nothing takes more time to wash than panty hose. Care instructions say "wash by hand," but anyone knows the gentle or delicate machine cycle is just as good.

Or is it?
Here's what happens when I mix six pairs of panty hose with some other niceties. As the final spin cycle finishes, it's readily clear that there is one huge ball of clothing. Not one piece seems to separate from the blob.

The next thirty minutes are spent disseminating the clothing. Once you unwind one leg of the pantyhose from around the agitator, the next five minutes may be spent trying to find the other half. Seems legs of panty hose and sleeves of blouses have a strong affinity for each other. Sometimes those synthetic things must do acrobatics — they certainly get in some knotty situations.

Seems all this activity sometimes creates runners. To solve that problem and the time element of untwining hoisery, I chose to launder the hose in a dirty pillow case secured with a discarded dingy shoestring. Last week Allison said "yuk" to that idea as I used her pillow case.

Have decided to solve the problem once and for all — I'm purchasing a mesh delicate fabric laundry bag with its own zipper. Bragged to my secretary about my decision. She wasn't impressed at all. She says now I'll snag the panty hose on the zipper of the bag and still have runners. At least, that's what happens to her.

As a last resort, I've heard if one will thoroughly wet their new, unworn panty hose and then place them in the freezer, that will make them more durable to runs. Of course, you do let them thaw before putting them on. And preferably let them dry, probably hanging in the bathtub.

I am hesitant to put panty hose in the freezer for fear one of my children will snip them in small pieces with the kitchen scissors and put them in the stew along with the carrots and potatoes.

I am open to anyone with suggestions as to how to keep nylons from getting runs.

One can save energy by always using a cold water rinse when laundering. However clothes can be gotten much cleaner by using warm or hot water in the wash cycle. Generally, the dirtier the clothing, the hotter the water needed to clean properly.

I hear lots of problems with fabric softeners. A blue fabric softener used in laundry sometimes leaves bluish or grayish stains while a pink one leaves a greasy like stain. The fabric softener sheets used in the dryer deposits a greasy stain on synthetics quite often. All fabric softener stains can be removed by rubbing the stain with bar soap.

For other helpful hints in laundering and clothing care, contact the Extension office. We have a couple of helpful publications.

BY-ERMA BOMBECK

The eve of Valentine's Day seems as appropriate a time as any to ask, "Where have all the men gone?" It's been awhile since I've shopped, but every woman I've encountered doing the singles scene has confirmed that eligible men have become as extinct as the whooping crane.

The dating famine seems to have hit the 25-30 age group the hardest. No one knows why.

Logistically speaking, this is the way the figures add up. In 1955, 2,073,719 boy babies were born. Out of that number, 872,638 died in war, accident, or natural causes, leaving 1,201,081.

Now it gets sticky. Since 10 percent of every thousand get married and 5 percent of every thousand get divorced, you can assume 15 percent of this total are marrying and divorcing one another, leaving, 1,020,919.

A survey recently estimated that homosexuals represented possibly 10 percent of the males, which brings the eligibles down to 1,010,710.

Of the little over a million eligibles roaming around, 5 percent don't know their sign and don't even care. Another 5 percent are tied to their mothers by a food fixation and would never give that relationship up for a girl. They prefer to hang out with their handball buddies.

A whopping 20 percent are searching for a girl in the traditional role who will pick up his clothes, run his bath, burn her fingers shelling his three-minute egg, run his errands, bear him a child every year, look like a fashion model, tend his needs when he is sick, and hold down a full-time job outside the home to make payments on his boat.

Twelve percent are perennial schoolboys who take two classes a semester, have changed their major 13 times and feel they cannot risk a commitment until they're out of school.

Fifty-five percent of today's eligible men have gone underground for lack of money. "Hello" is a luxury, "I'm buying" is a line they only remember from an old Bogart movie.

Let's see, what's left? A conservative 3 percent. Hey, that means there are 17 men out there who are your basic healthy, traditional males who still believe in conversation, time to know one another and are not threatened by new attitudes.

Just sit still, guys. Don't move! Have I got 282,000 girls for you!

Financial aid workshop organized for seniors

South Plains College will host a Financial Aid Workshop Thursday for high school seniors who are planning to attend college this fall and who may be looking for ways to finance their education.

The workshop will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the Student Assistance Center on the third floor of the college library. Area high school seniors and parents interested in obtaining information about financial aid programs are invited to attend.

"The workshop is designed to let college-bound seniors know what kinds of financial assistance is available to them," said Steve Beck, SPC's director of Student Financial Aid who will be directing the program. Application procedures, eligibility requirements and recent changes in federal financial aid programs will also be discussed.

Beck emphasized that the workshop is open to all interested seniors and parents, regardless of whether or not the student plans to attend SPC this fall.

"It's important that the application process for financial aid be begun as early as possible," Beck said. "This workshop will be a good starting ground for many college-bound students."

For more information, contact South Plains College at 894-9611.

Hanna outlines goals for Historical Society

Members of the Genealogical Society met Thursday evening with the new president, Troyce Hanna, outlining three goals she would like accomplished this year.

The organization hopes to increase membership, have a workshop or a series of meetings to help beginners learn how to start their own family records and to complete and publish the marriage and cemetery records as collected by the society.

The main topic of discussion was the publication of the Deaf Smith County marriage records from the beginning of the county records in 1891 to 1980, a total of over 15,000 names.

Pre-publication orders are being taken up until March 8. The cost will be $15 a copy plus $2 postage and handling if mailing is necessary. Orders are being taken by Mrs. Wilma Clark, 316 Ave. J.

Others in attendance were Clara Brown, Jaenette Ramey, Ruth Fish, Ms. Clark and Garth and Edwina Thomas.

Visitors and potential members are always invited to attend the meetings held every second Thursday of the month beginning at 7:30 p.m. in the Deaf Smith County Library Heritage Room.

Q. I guess I'm too late for this tax year, but I understand I may now participate in an Individual Retirement Account even though I'm included in an employer-sponsored plan. When should I begin my IRA?

A. Right now! You can still open an IRA and deduct your contribution for the 1982 tax year. Do so prior to filing your 1982 return or by April 15. Yes, you can benefit from an IRA even if you are participating in a company-sponsored plan. You may make an annual IRA contribution of up to $2,000 or, in the case of married couples with a non-working spouse, $2,250. Interest earned on your IRA is tax free until you begin making withdrawals at age 59½, or retirement, when most have reduced incomes and a lower tax bracket. If you're thinking about opening an IRA, do it now.

Library has various aids for tax returns

BY DIANNE PIERSON
County Librarian

Do you need help this year filling out your own income tax return? If so, the Deaf Smith County Library may have just what you need.

The Internal Revenue Service has supplied the library with audio cassette tapes which tell you how to fill out federal income tax forms for 1982.

The tapes come in a set of two. One tape contains line-by-line instructions for the IRS form 1040 and Schedules A and B. These schedules are for itemizing deductions and reporting interest and dividend income. The other tape tells how to do the Forms 1040A and the new Form 1040 EZ.

The 1040EZ is for taxpayers who are single, have no dependents, do not claim exemptions for either age or blindness, have a taxable income of less than $50,000 and interest of less than $400 with no dividend income, and who claim no tax credits. The new 1040EZ has only 11 lines, and more than 20 million taxpayers are eligible to use it.

The cassettes may be borrowed for a period of seven days per patron. The library is open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Mondays and Thursdays, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesday, Wednesday, and Friday, and 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday.

If you have any questions please feel free to call the library at 364-1206 for additional information. We also have several new books on preparing your 1982 income tax forms.

One of the new books available this week at the library is "How to Save 50 percent or More on Your Income Tax Legally" by Ray Anderson. In his latest book, Anderson, who is his own highly successful tax practice has saved millions for the wealthy, tells the ordinary taxpayer the secrets he has hitherto only told his clients.

Read this book and learn: how to develop a tax plan to survive the recent tax increases, what to do about the hidden inflation tax, why a pre-tax dollar saved can be worth a $100, and many more helpful hints.

We also have two copies of J.K. Lasser's 1983 Income Tax book.

The library has ordered the 1982 income tax forms and should be receiving them soon, if they are still available.

AT&T line latest application

NEW YORK (AP) — The opening of American Telephone & Telegraph Co.'s fiber-optic transmission system along the East Coast this past week marks a major step in the rapidly expanding use of lightwaves to move voice and data communications.

Fiber-optic systems transmit voice and data through rapid pulses of light that travel through hair-thin glass fibers. They are considered better than traditional copper cables because they are lighter, smaller, can carry substantially more signals and are more immune to interference.

A signal is transformed into the light pulses at the start of the transmission line, and then converted back to an electrical signal at the other end through the use of a device called a photodetector.

The value of fiber-optic components sales in the United States last year totaled $335 million, says Gnostic Concepts Inc., a research firm in Menlo Park, Calif. But that will grow to $1.3 billion in 1986 and $2.8 billion in 1990, it estimates.

Abundant Life

THE VIEW OF SELF by Bob Wear

The way we view self is very important to our self-image, in our associations with others, and in what we do with our life. Therefore the basic principle we use in our evaluation of self and the progress of self must be chosen with great care.

The general inclination seems to be to measure self by other people, but we know that this is not a wise practice. If we consider people who, for one reason or another, are not doing well; we will be thinking that we are doing very well, because we seem to be doing better than they. On the other hand, if we consider people who are doing much better than we; we may be discouraged and may wrongfully downgrade self.

It is admitted that there is an existing spirit of competition, a general practice of comparing people with people. There is a proper place for this, but it is not in our evaluation of self. From the standpoint of our "view of self," our "consideration of personal progress," and our "general well-being;" we must not consider the standing, the action or the position of other folk.

Our chief competition should be with self. For a better "view of self," we must establish a pattern of wholesome competition with self, doing a little better as we move along; making a little progress from day to day; adding some knowledge to what has been gained; and making some improvement each day.

We must learn to enjoy life without comparing it with others. Our personal progress, our improvement of self; without any great concern about what others are doing or not doing; will enable us to feel better and better about ourselves, enrich our lives beyond the fondlest expectations and empower us for a continuing life style that is better and better. Thus we establish and maintain "the view of self" that is fair and most contributive to abundant living.

Ann Landers Alarmed at attitude

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Can you stand just one more letter about the woman who was irked because her husband left his soiled laundry inside-out? Tsk, tsk. What an atrocity!

Six years ago my husband, in a time of desperation and under terrible pressure, committed a major crime. He is paying for it in a California prison.

Once a week I drive 200 miles to visit him for four hours. I am living for the day when he will be a free man. Of one thing I am certain. When he walks through this door he can throw his clothes anywhere — clean, soiled, wrong-side-out — and drape them over the TV, stuff them in the mailbox or the fridge. I couldn't care less.

What happened to me could have happened to anyone. Suddenly your husband is not at your side. You must cope alone — with the job, the finances, the car, family problems and illness. The whole bit. No companionship, no escort, the days are meaningless. The nights are hell.

So turn his undershorts inside out yourself, woman, and thank God you have them to turn. — Folsom Gate Widow

DEAR F.G.W.: Your letter could go a long way toward changing some attitudes around the globe. Thanks for writing it. Here's another one on the same subject.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I must comment on the letter from the woman who was mad because her husband threw his socks, shorts and shirts in the hamper wrong-side out. She said it burned her up.

It takes all of five seconds to turn a sock inside-out, about seven seconds for a pair of shorts and the same for a shirt. If a wife can't do that much for her husband, it says a lot about their marriage.

I'd be ashamed to write a letter like that. — Old-Fashioned In Springfield

DEAR SPRINGFIELD: A good way to measure people is by the size of the things that make them mad.

Many women might say they resent a man who is too lazy to turn his laundry right-side-out. At the risk of being a traitor to my sex, I believe as you do — that if the marriage is good, a wife wouldn't give it a second thought.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am the mother of a teenage daughter. Elsie is a pretty girl, a high school senior and has been going steady with this boy for over a year. He is two years older, had to repeat a year of high school, dropped out and has had several menial jobs. I doubt that he will ever get his diploma, let alone go to college.

I believe Elsie feels sorry for the boy because he doesn't have any other friends. I see no hope for my daughter's future so long as she continues to go with him. I'm afraid he might influence her against going to college next year.

It breaks my heart to see her throw herself away on such a mediocre boy. Tell me what to do. — Heartsick In Boston

DEAR HEARTSICK: I hope you haven't told your daughter what you told me. It would make her more determined than ever to continue to go with him and prove you wrong.

Find something about the boy to admire and speak well of him. Show no disappointment or hostility. This approach may not work but knocking the kid could glue her to him permanently.

Chapter announces local essay contest winners

Each year the Daughters of the American Revolution observe American History Month during February. Along with the celebration of this country's history, individual chapters sponsor American history essay contests in their communities.

This year Los Ciboleros Chapter of DAR has involved schools from Hereford, Dimmitt, Springlake-Earth, Lazbuddie, and Friona with the essay topic, "Everyday Life in Early America."

Students in the fifth and sixth grades wrote essays between 300 and 600 words in length, while seventh and eighth graders' essays were to be from 600 to 1,000 words long. Students were to describe any one aspect of everyday home life during the period of American history from 1750 to 1850 and discuss how it differs from life today.

Two essays which were judged to be the best from this area will advance to state competition, and state winners will eventually go to nationals. Essays which will be sent to state are those of Mendee Petree, a fifth grader at West Central in Hereford, and Wayne Schader, who is in the sixth grade at Dimmitt Middle School.

Other bronze medal (or first place) winners from Hereford are Jill Suzanne West of Bluebonnet, a fifth grader, and Carmen Brockman, a sixth grader at St. Anthony's.

Certificates of Award, presented to second place winners, were earned by Nikkie Hutson of Bluebonnet and

Mendee Petree

Mike Manchec of West Central, who tied for the fifth grade position; and Wendy Connolly of St. Anthony's, a sixth grader.

Essays were judged on historical accuracy, adherence to the subject, originality, interest, neatness, spelling, and punctuation. A bibliography of source material was also to be included with each essay.

Chairman of the essay contest for Los Ciboleros Chapter is Mrs. Garth B. Thomas. She reported that a total of 343 essays were entered from the nine area schools, which includes Shirley School in addition to the other Hereford schools already mentioned.

The essay submitted by Mendee Petree, which will advance to state, is printed below. Other top essays will be published in subsequent issues.

EVERYDAY LIFE IN EARLY AMERICA

My great-great-great-grandfather and grandmother Metz came from Germany in 1840. They were married in the United States, because it was cheaper to get married here than in Germany. Great-great-great-grandfather Metz was twenty years old when he arrived in the United States, and he was a weaver by trade. They settled on a farm in Iowa, state. Great-great-great-grandfather and grandmother Metz had nine children. They had three boys and six girls.

Since great-great-great-grandfather was a weaver, he raised sheep. The boys helped shear the sheep and card the wool. The girls helped great-great-great-grandmother spin the wool into yarn on a spinning wheel. Then they dyed the yarn into colors with dyes made from onion skins, nuts, bark, marigolds, smartweed, and cobalt which made a beautiful pure blue. Then great-great-great-grandfather wove the wool into beautiful patterns, and great-great-great-grandmother made all the clothes. She knitted their socks and they were good tailors also, because they made their own suits and coats. When clothing became worn out it was not thrown away; rather it was used to piece comforters for the beds.

People who lived on the farm had simple homemade clothing. Men and boys wore woolen pants, knitted socks, and heavy shoes. When the weather was very cold, men wore wool mittens, and fur coats. Women on the farm wore dresses of wool or linen with petticoats underneath. Most farm boys and girls wore the same kind of clothes as their mothers and daddies.

People who lived in town dressed in more expensive clothing and usually did not have to make their own clothing. Lace was worn on nearly everything in the 1840's. Sleeveless jackets were also in style. In 1840's cuffs and collars on the sleeves and neck were very popular. White spencers were worn with colored shirts. Evening gowns were low cut and made of lace and satin. Beautiful headdresses were worn across the head. In 1840 sleeves to the elbow were popular for small girls just as they are today. Underneath the sleeves there were undersleeves of white muslin. A small piece of frilly muslin was worn at the throat. Boys wore tight sleeves and pantaloons. They also wore jackets that were open and rounded in front and trousers of blue and white striped linen. Plaids and stripes were very popular for boys and girls during the 1840's. Bonnets and hats were also very popular. Sun bonnets of calico were worn in the summer time by country girls along with calico dresses and aprons.

Today when we want new clothes to wear we go to a store and buy them. We do not have to shear the sheep, dye the wool, and weave the material into cloth as they did a long time ago. Now our clothes are made in big factories. In the factories, many people and machines help to make the material and then sew it into clothes to sell to the stores so that we can have new clothes.

Kings Manor News

BY RUBY STEVENSON

Just look what we came home to see. Beautiful snow—if some of us have been inconvenienced, just think what it is doing to our good earth. I hope our friends, the farmers, are benefitted. Maybe it isn't as wet as is needed but it sure is a good start. Sunny California didn't stay sunny, for as soon as we left they had storms worse than our snow. I'm glad I live in beautiful Texas.

People have birthdays even if it snows. At King's Manor, Bibby Morgan, Mary Sears, Beulah Wright and Lucile Naylor gave us a chance to sing "Happy Birthday." We love each one and hope they have a happy year 'till we sing again.

Those fine ministers who come each Tuesday evening to share God's word with us are to be commended. This January the Rev. Doug Manning, the Rev. Jesse Hodges, the Rev. Weldon Butler and the Rev. Louis Crenshaw visited us.

As usual the American Legion Auxiliary presided at Bingo on Thursday evening. We had fun and fellowship.

A reception was given Jan. 20 in the Lamar room honoring two lovely couples who were celebrating their wedding anniversaries. Mr. and Mrs. Tom Manning were celebrating 55 years and Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Hudson, 59 years. They must have married very young or maybe it is their cheerful spirit that belies the years. We are happy for these two couples to be in our midst.

A beautiful cake, cookies, and punch and coffee were served to many friends other than those in the Manor. Everyone wishes you many more celebrations.

All of you noticed the splendid job Andy Powers did writing this article for the paper last month while I was gone. He did so well, I think he should continue for your sakes. Maybe if each reader would call Andy and insist, he would consider writing for you. He even writes beautiful poems and books, so you see he is experienced. I don't have to tell you I'm an amateur.

So many staff members braved the snow storms to get to King's Manor to bring the services needed. Everyone appreciates the dedications of these who love us and make a happy home for us.

One of the cooks lives many blocks away and walked to work at 5 a.m. on a bitter cold morning to prepare breakfast. Where do you find more loyalty. She loves us. The maintenance men opened lanes to walk; a trail to drive when possible. You were cold but you too, were dedicated to digging us out.

Others like Bea Noland drove in the worst kind of weather to bring help to other people. Does all this make you understand what a truly great place King's Manor is?

Solon says Congress can't meet tax deadline

By DON KENDALL AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A senior Democratic congressman says Congress probably cannot act before a March 11 deadline to ease the federal tax load on farmers who take part in the payment-in-kind acreage program this year.

But Rep. Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., gave assurances that legislation still would protect farmers from an unnecessary tax burden, even if it comes after the deadline.
As it stands, commodities given to farmers under the PIK program will be liable for federal income taxes as soon as farmers are eligible to receive them.

Signup in the program ends on March 11, and administration officials are fearful that farmers may be discouraged from participation unless Congress exempts the crops from taxes until a farmer puts them on the market.

Under PIK, eligible farmers will get surplus wheat, corn, sorghum, cotton and rice for taking cropland from production this year. The objective is to reduce a backlog of surpluses which have depressed the farm economy.

Foley, the third-ranking Democrat in the House, told a meeting of farm editors Thursday that he did not expect House action on the measure before the March 11 signup deadline.
"But I'm satisfied they will act, and I think by the time we get some legislation introduced ... and get co-sponsorship on it, I think it'll become clear that legislation will be enacted," Foley said.

Agriculture Secretary John R. Block and other administration officials favored taxing PIK crops at the time farmers dispose of the commodities — the same as those they would have harvested if they had not enrolled in the program.
Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., on Wednesday promised Block and farmers that changing the tax law regarding PIK "is a top priority consideration" and that "every effort will be made to push this change through Congress before the March 11 deadline" for signup in the program.

Dole, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, added that "farmers can be assured that we will move quickly" to pass the legislation.
But Foley said the House Ways and Means Committee, which has the say on tax bills, has put Social Security "very much on the front burner" and has pledged not to take up any other tax issues before concluding work on Social Security.
Foley said he expected

Social Security to be taken up on the House floor "sometime in the second week of March," which would be past the PIK signup deadline.
"So we may have to see legislation passed retroactively," Foley said. "I'm personally committed to doing whatever I can — with a bipartisan coalition of members — to see that legislation is passed."
Foley, whose Washington state district is a major wheat producer, was asked if delay in straightening out the farm snarl might discourage farmers from taking part in the PIK program.

"We want to give them sufficient conviction that this is going to be taken care of so it doesn't discourage participation," he said.

Assistant Secretary William Leshner, USDA's chief economist, told another group that he was hopeful Congress would act on the tax change before March 11. Leshner and others met with Senate Agriculture Committee staff people later on Thursday to map out legislative strategy.

Snow, mud, cold delay soil sampling

Heavy snows, wet soils and cold weather has delayed soil sampling for High and South Plains producers. Soil sampling and fertilizing was also delayed by the government finally establishing the PIK program. Do not let these delays raise your 1983 production cost this year, cautioned Justin T. McBride, county Extension agent in Deaf Smith County.

The best time for sampling is just before the field is dry enough to handle tractor traffic. Later everyone will be in a dead run to get their land prepared, so be ready to start your PIK production acres on the right foot, he cautioned.

To get a good soil test, a good soil sample is essential. Obtain 10 to 15 samples taken from the surface down to six inches deep. Mix these samples in a plastic bucket. Then take about two-thirds to three-fourths of a pint of the sample soil and mail to the soil testing laboratory for testing.

Be sure to complete a crop information sheet on each soil sample, notes McBride. This aids the soil chemist to generate a better fertilizer recommendation for your farm.

Information sheets, sample bags for mailing and additional information on soil testing is available at the county Extension office.

World grain crop forecast still high

WASHINGTON (AP) — Total world grain production in 1982-83 is still forecast at a record level, despite a slight decrease from prospects a month ago.

The Agriculture Department said Thursday that global output is expected to total 1.661 billion metric tons, down from more than 1.663 billion estimated in January.

Production last season, comparatively, was about 1.625 billion metric tons.

The USDA's World Agricultural Outlook Board said that the decline from the forecast a month ago was due mainly to reduced prospects in Argentina and South Africa because of hot, dry weather and 5 percent higher than the 1981-82 harvest," the report said. "A lower estimate for Pakistan was more than offset by upward revisions in a number of smaller countries."

Production of so-called coarse grains such as corn and sorghum was indicated at a record 785 million metric tons, down slightly from last month but 3 percent above last season's harvest.

Wheat crop 'fair to good'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's 1983 winter wheat crop was generally in fair-to-good shape as of Feb. 1, according to the Agriculture Department.

Planted last fall for harvest this summer, the crop was rated as "mostly good in Kansas and Oklahoma," and fair-to-good across the rest of the country, the USDA's Crop Reporting Board said Thursday.

"Unseasonably mild temperatures over much of the Great Plains left wheat without protective snow cover for most of the month," the report said. "Despite lack of insulating snow, winterkill was light due to milk conditions. Precipitation from snow or rain replenished soil moisture in nearly all areas and should aid growth as warming occurs."

World rice production was forecast at 403 million tons, unchanged from last month but 2 percent below the 1981-82 harvest.

USDA report rebuts worker stereotype

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new report by the Agriculture Department says that it is not accurate to stereotype hired farm workers as made up of poor, minority group migrants.

of the difference may be explained by "the relatively large proportion of students, housewives and other part-time wage earners" in the farm work force. However, family incomes — the combined incomes of all family members — also reflect a lower-income status.

Looking at the category of migrant workers alone, the report said that "the stereotype of low-income migrant farm worker families is not supported" by the income figures.

"Roughly the same percentage of migrant families — 62 percent — had annual incomes of $10,000 or more as non-migrant families," it said. "Nearly one-third of both migrant and non-migrant families have annual incomes of $15,000 or more."

Migrants — which made up 8 percent of the 1979 hired farm workers — are defined as those who travel across state or county lines and stay overnight to do farm work.

"They averaged $4,582 a year in individual earnings from all sources, compared with $4,126 a year for non-migrant workers," the report said. "About 47 percent of migrant workers' pay came from farm earnings, compared with 60 percent for non-migrant workers."

"Although some certainly fit this image, the typical farm worker is more likely to be white, a non-migrant, and part of a family with an annual income of $10,000 or more," the report said.

In 1979, it said, the median family income of farm workers was $13,384 per year, which was only 68 percent of the U.S. median for all families of $19,587.

Rural U.S. lagging despite employment growth

WASHINGTON (AP) — As the Reagan administration sees it, the development of rural America should be left mostly to those who live in the small towns, farms and "country" environs of larger cities.

But officials say there are some things the federal government can and should do to help states and communities improve the quality of life for more than 57 million Americans who live outside of metropolitan areas.

The plan recently was sent to Congress by Agriculture Secretary John Block as the administration's "rural development strategy" for the 1980s.

It was submitted shortly after President Reagan sent Congress a proposed budget for the year beginning Oct. 1 which included a 23 percent cut in the Agriculture Department's programs for small community and rural development operations.

The report, "Better Country: A Strategy for Rural Development in the 1980s," was drawn up to comply with the Rural Development Policy Act of 1980.

"After a century of decline, many areas of rural America have experienced remarkable revitalization in the last decade," the report said.

"Rural employment growth outpaced urban job progress by one-third in the last decade. The rural economy continued to diversify far beyond its traditional base in agriculture, with major expansions in manufacturing, services and trades.

"Significant advances in health, housing education and other living standards also came to much of rural America over the past 10 years."

But there are still areas which are clouded by "poverty, isolation and decay of facilities," the report added.

"On the average, rural America still lags behind urban America in measurable indicators of income, education and housing conditions, though some argue that lower costs of living may offset part of the rural disadvantage."

A 25-member National Advisory Council on Rural Development was appointed by Block to represent a geographic and economic cross-section of the country.

Block also tapped the views of other Cabinet officers and the heads of federal agencies. Each state governor was asked to make recommendations.

Block said in a letter sent to President Reagan with a copy of the report:

"This strategy is submitted in the confidence that, to a remarkable degree, it comes directly from the people it is intended to serve."

Generally, the report advocates no new, big spending program to pour money into rural areas where economic development and social services have not kept pace with needs.

"The governing philosophy for addressing these concerns is one both strongly suggested by rural Americans and consistently espoused by this administration," the report said.

"It is a philosophy which attaches a high value to local leadership — as embodied in the New Federalism initiative — and joint public and private efforts to deal with community problems."

One step would be to combine a number of specific federal programs into block grants to the states, which would design development packages to fit local needs. This is necessary, the report said, because local people "can best decide their own needs and chart their own paths" to an improved future.

As an example, three programs of the Farmers Home Administration would be converted into block grants — rural water and sewer grants, water and sewer loans and community facility loans. FmHA and other federal rural housing programs would be switched to block grants to be controlled locally.

"Traditional categorical aid programs — heavily regulated and usually urban oriented — cannot meet this test of local control," the report said. "Other means must be employed to provide effective support to rural American without dominating, restricting or obstructing rural initiative."

The report said the lack of job opportunities "remains the greatest single problem in rural America" underemployed and part-time workers who permeate the rural economy," it said.

"The American farmer, plagued by falling commodity prices and mounting operating costs, has been especially hard hit by recent economic adversity. For many farmers, not even additional part-time jobs have made ends meet."

Moreover, the report said, chronic rural poverty "continues to haunt parts of the American countryside" and 12 million rural Americans fall below the official poverty line.

"Rural poverty is not confined to those who cannot or will not work," it said. "In 1980, 24 percent of poor rural families were headed by people who worked full-time virtually every week of the year. More than half of all poor rural families had two or more people on the job."

Holly net loss at $2.3 million

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — Holly Sugar Corporation sustained a net loss of $2,363,000 or $1.62 per share on gross revenues of $165,247,000 for the nine months ended December 31, 1982, compared with net income of $2,430,000 or $1.53 per share on revenues of $195,106,000 for the same period in 1981.

Net loss for the third quarter was $1,199,000 or 87 cents per share on revenues of $52,241,000, compared with a net loss of $548,000 or 35 cents per share on revenues of $67,983,000 for the same quarter in 1981.

John Bushnell, Holly's President, stated that, in spite of adversities, Holly's management has accomplished the following during the past year to build the foundation for future profitable operations: (1) selling expenses for sugar have been reduced by approximately $965,000 compared with last year; (2) general and administrative expenses have been reduced by more than $2,335,000 and are at levels below two year ago; (3) operating overhead has been reduced by over $300,000; and (4) Holly has undertaken a program to significantly reduce beet seed division expenses, which are down over $400,000 compared with a year ago. In addition, interest expense is down more than $1,000,000 compared with a year ago.

The first nine months' net loss generated a net Federal and state income tax credit, of $2,321,000 compared with a provision for Federal and state income taxes of $2,276,000 for the comparable period last year.

Some of the nation's leading beef cattle and swine research nutritionists will be featured at the 13th Biennial Grain Sorghum Research and Utilization Conference scheduled for Feb. 23-24 in Brownsville. They will review the newest techniques and findings in grain sorghum processing and livestock feeding.

Congressman Kent Hance will open the conference. His keynote address will be followed by specialists who will review recent research in animal nutrition and grain sorghum utilization as well as the complete range of grain sorghum physiology, breeding, chemistry, pathology, entomology, cultural and management practices.

Coordinators of this year's conference are Dr. Charles Berry of Cargill Seed Division, Plainview, Dr. Art Onken, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, Lubbock, and Elbert Harp, Executive Director of Grain Sorghum Producers Association in Abernathy.

Conference sponsors are:

Texas Crops Report

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Most farmers are getting plenty of time to evaluate their options regarding the government's new PIK (payment-in-kind) program because of cold, wet conditions that are preventing field work.

Farmers are planning and calculating all aspects of the program as they wait on improved weather conditions to complete land preparations for spring planting, said Dr. Zerie L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

The Extension Service is involved in providing educational information on the USDA program and is conducting numerous workshops and meetings to help farmers better understand their options.

The past week's weather ranged from a blizzard and heavy snow in the Panhandle to scattered rains over much of the eastern half of the state. The cold, wet weather kept farmers indoors, but stockmen were busy feeding and caring for their herds, Carpenter said.

Many cattle are losing weight due to the adverse weather despite heavy feeding. Some cattle were lost to the cold in the Panhandle while a number of baby lambs perished in West Central Texas.

Hay supplies are running short in some areas, and green grazing on wheat and oats continues to be limited due to poor growing conditions, said Carpenter.

Where fields were not too wet, farmers were planting a few early vegetables in eastern areas. Also, early vegetable planting continued in the Rio Grande Valley and Winter Garden.

Harvesting of winter vegetables such as spinach, carrots, broccoli and cauliflower continued in the Winter Garden and Rio Grande Valley, and sugarcane and citrus harvesting remained active in the Valley, said Carpenter.

Reports from district Extension directors showed the following conditions.

PANHANDLE: Blizzard conditions kept most farm operations at a standstill and put the pressure on cattle feeding. Most cattle are losing weight and some deaths occurred during the latest cold snap. A little cotton is still to be harvested. Most wheat is dormant due to the cold weather.

SOUTH PLAINS: Farmers in a few counties are still waiting on open weather to complete cotton harvesting. And a little cotton is still field-stored in modules because wet conditions have kept farmers from hauling it to gins. Wheat continues to make little growth due to the cold weather. Cattle feeding remains heavy.

ROLLING PLAINS: Cold,

wet conditions remained the order of the day, leaving 15 to 20 percent of the cotton crop still to be harvested in a few counties. Wheat growth remains limited due to the adverse weather, so cattle have little grazing. Cattle feeding is heavy throughout the areas.

NORTH CENTRAL: Wheat and oats continue to make limited growth due to cold, wet conditions, so cattle have little green grazing and are being fed heavily. Gardeners are setting out some early spring vegetables and fruit and hatching trees.

FAR WEST: Cotton farmers have finally finished harvesting their crop and are getting their land ready for the coming season. Most wheat is making good growth and providing some grazing. Ranchers are busy with feeding chores and are shearing goats as weather conditions permit.

WEST CENTRAL: Rain and snow fell over much of the area last week, keeping field work at a standstill. The cold weather also limited the growth of small grains. Livestock are in fair to good condition, with heavy supplemental feeding. Calving and lambing are in progress.

Some baby lambs perished in recent cold weather.

CENTRAL: Farmers are continuing to study the PI program as they wait on open weather to get their land ready for spring planting. Wheat and oats are providing little grazing due to adverse growing conditions. A lot of older wheat is showing nitrogen deficiency. Most pastures are severely overgrazed. Cattle conditions are declining despite heavy supplemental feeding. Lice are a real problem in cattle.

EAST: Cold, wet conditions continued to slow the growth of small grains and winter forages. Some early spring vegetables such as onions, Englishpeas and cabbage are being planted where field conditions permit. Livestock remain in good shape, with supplemental feeding active.

UPPER COAST: Continued wet weather is keeping field work at a standstill. Wheat and oats are making little growth due to cold, wet conditions. Cattle are in fair condition, with heavy supplemental feeding. Gardeners are planting a few early spring vegetables.

SOUTH CENTRAL: Farmers are getting in a little field work, but cold, wet con-

Mardi Gras horses are breed apart

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Even a cowboy who would rather hug his horse than kiss a leading lady knows that a horse has no more common sense than a goose.

A horse can be cantankerous, nervous — spooked by a scrap of paper blowing in the wind.

So one of the marvels of Mardi Gras, which police look upon as a controlled riot, is the sight of a mounted policeman, high in the saddle on a horse that peers benevolently at the swirl of outlandish and half-drunk revelers packing the street.

This calm acceptance of weird humans and loud noises doesn't come naturally to man or beast.

But the abnormal becomes normal if it is made a part of every day, and for two weeks before Carnival police mounts lead a maddening life.

In a practice session in City Park, 19 horsemen slumped in the saddle and wait for the herd. Cigarettes glow in the dusk. Horses shift restlessly. "I was so tired last night," Bob Grimsley reported. "My wife had to take my spurs off."

Heads nod. Hoofs stamp amid manure and dry hay. From a distant clump of oaks, comes a shout: "They're h-e-e-e-e-e."

"Let's go," said Grimsley, getting a grip on the reins.

In a cloud of dust, the New Orleans Police Mounted Patrol rides out for another dose of abnormal.

Across the meadow, 150 head of high school students stampered out of two chartered buses. Tubas grunt, trumpets shriek, batons whirl, snare drums rattle the air.

The John F. Kennedy Sr. High School Band marches

by, white boots flashing horns blaring "March Grandiosa." At each cymbal crash, horses rear and whinny, only to be yanked back into line by the reins. It is just what the police ordered.

One rider loses his hat as his horse rushes under a low tree branch.

"That's what rehearsals are for," said Grimsley. "When the real show begins we will be ready."

It was part of a noisy training period that included firecrackers, smoke bombs, neon flags, flapping umbrellas, clanging hub caps and other startling things.

It is not unusual for a rider to take leave of the saddle and sail through the air, bucked off. At patrol headquarters, a chalkboard ranks throws by points for style and distance. Lt. Gerald Fayard, pitched during a firecracker drill, leads.

"It's like the old cowboys used to say, 'There ain't a horse that can't be rode, there ain't a man that can't be thrown,'" said Bobby Nelson, looking down from his horse Aspen.

Even the abnormal cannot prepare a horse for some encounters.

A mountie's tale of past Mardi Gras atrocities include burning cigarettes pushed under saddles, a horse belly slit with a razor blade, a haunch shot with a staple gun.

Only an idiot or a crazy would dare such things; mounties are not to be trifled with. In a dense crowd on a narrow French Quarter street, a mountie can lean his horse sideways against a wall of people and push it back.

"I figure me and my horse are worth about 20 officers on foot," said C. J. Robuck, a reserve mountie.

Dynasties dominate political life for Lebanese

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Powerful families rather than organized parties dominate the political scene in Lebanon, where candidates are often groomed from the cradle.

Sometimes reluctantly, sometimes eagerly, the sons of the political godfathers pick up the reins of power and perpetuate a system of feudal fiefdoms.

They run for office or play kingmaker for others. Ensclosed in mountaintop fortresses, ancestral mansions and modern apartments, they wheel and deal with each other over endless cups of bitter coffee — and sometimes with guns and bombs.

Built-in power bases rooted in a religious sect are passed from father to son, sometimes with a political party that revolves more around family ties and personal loyalties than ideology.

"My father was involved in politics, my grandfather was involved in politics, and my sons are going to be involved in politics," said Camille Chamoun, an 82-year-old former president of Lebanon who wears thick, tinted glasses but can still knock down more clay pigeons than his 48-year-old son, Dany, when they go skeet shooting.

Dany Chamoun, like other sons of the powerful fathers, polished his political credentials as a militia commander in the 1975-76 civil war when Christians led by the Chamoun, Gemayel and Franjeh families fought a coalition of mostly Moslem, Lebanese leftists and Palestinians.

Admitting to little interest in politics before the war, Dany Chamoun, a British-educated civil engineer, was a natural choice to lead the "Tigers" militia of his father's National Liberal Party.

"I want him to go into politics because it's the tradition of the family," said Camille Chamoun, seated beside his son in a small the son, whose casual but imposing manner and sandy-haired good looks give him the appearance of a man Hollywood would cast to play a bright young senator.

On the Moslem side of the city, Tammam Salam, the 37-year-old son of two-time Prime Minister Saeb Salam, said he had been "poking my nose into politics" since childhood.

"I must have been naturally inclined to this kind of world, and I started getting more and more interested in it," said Tammam Salam, who last year succeeded his father, uncle and grandfather as president of the Makassed Islamic Philanthropic Association in Beirut, a traditional power base of the city's Sunni Moslems.

TeleWaves

What family was that?

By Peter Meade

Be it the ultrawealthy Ewings of "Dallas," the Carringtons of "Dynasty," the underprivileged "Waltons," the adventurous Cartwrights of "Bonanza" or the lovable "Brady Bunch," television viewers have always found family life as interesting as cops and robbers, private eyes, doctors, lawyers or cowboys.

One might even say that television's preoccupation with family series has entered its second generation. Dick Van Patten, patriarch of "Eight is Enough," began his television career portraying Neils, the son on the 1949-56 series "Mama."

NBC has just added two family series to their midseason lineup. "Mama's Family," starring Vicki Lawrence, Harvey Korman and Ken Berry, began as a continuing skit on "The Carol Burnett Show." Last year the group assembled for the highly-rated CBS special "Eunice" and now hopes to continue as a Saturday night series on NBC.

Also in the NBC lineup on Saturday night is "Family Tree," starring Anne Archer and Frank Converse. The series features a divorced man with two children who marries a divorcee with three children, including an 11-year-old deaf son.

Here is a quiz on some popular family shows of the past. Check your television genealogy.

- 1) What unusual family lived at 1313 Mockingbird Lane?
- 2) Mayfield was the setting for what popular series?
- 3) What "Family" member is currently seen on a family-oriented series?
- 4) Name the show featuring identical cousins Patty and Cathy Lane?
- 5) What was Dennis the Menace's last name?
- 6) Name the show starring real-life brother and sister Paul and Patty Petersen?
- 7) On "All in the Family," what was Archie Bunker's occupation?
- 8) Name the series about entertainer Danny Williams and his family?

BONUS: Name the children on "Eight is Enough." ANSWERS: 1) "The Munsters" 2) "Leave It to Beaver" 3) Meredith Baxter Birney on "Family Ties" 4) "The Patty Duke Show" 5) Mitchell 6) "The Donna Reed Show" 7) dock foreman 8) "Make Room for Daddy" BONUS: David, Mary, Joannie, Susan, Nancy, Elizabeth, Tommy and Nicholas

Board of Education votes to open textbook hearings

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Education planned to vote formally today on whether to let witnesses testify in favor of proposed books at state textbook adoption hearings.

The board tentatively approved the change Friday. It would allow debates between opposing sides and dramatically change the way textbooks are chosen in Texas, where it is a $60 million industry.

Currently only opponents of books can testify. Publishers are allowed to respond, but only to each specific complaint — they cannot initiate testimony.

A feud between two groups spawned the change. Present at the Friday session were the two factions' leaders — Michael Hudson, Texas coordinator for People for the American Way, a national anti-censorship group founded by "All in the Family" producer Norman Lear; and Norma Gabler, a Longview housewife who with her husband, Mel, has been appearing at the textbook hearings for 21 years to complain about books that do not uphold "tradition."

"We are surprised and pleased that the board acted so quickly and so extensively," Hudson said after the meeting.

Mulligan's Stew

Phony peace stirs memories

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN AP Special Correspondent RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Can this really be the 10th anniversary of the Paris accords which brought the peace that passeth all understanding to Vietnam?

Henry Kissinger and Le Duc Tho were awarded the Nobel Peace Prize for this disastrous diplomatic document that permitted the Americans to withdraw without honor while the North Vietnamese moved into position for the fall of Saigon two years later.

I spent a fair portion of the previous decade in Vietnam and Cambodia and even now cannot bring myself to watch a movie on the Nam, except an unconscious comedy like John Wayne and "The Green Berets," which so amused our Marines when it was shown in their rec hall on Monkey Mountain near Da Nang.

Lately, however, like the publishing industry, I have begun to take a chance with books on Vietnam. Several new titles occupied my evenings since Christmas by the fireside or on plane journeys.

Anthony Grey's novel "Saigon," spanning a half century in the life of what is now called Ho Chi Minh City, is an incredible tour de force.

It is incredible because Tony Grey, the former Reuters correspondent who spent two years under arrest in Peking at the height of the Cultural Revolution, never set a foot in Saigon. His accomplishment here is akin to that New York reporter who vividly described the San Francisco earthquake, block by block, by using maps and memory without ever visiting the scene of that epic disaster.

Telling the Saigon story through the eyes of Joseph Sherman, a young American who first arrived in Vietnam in 1925 on a big game hunting expedition with his father, a U.S. senator from Virginia, Grey accurately re-creates the city and its lush surroundings through four generations. He begins with the French rubber planters in the days before Dien Bien Phu and winds up with helicopters lifting off from the roof of the U.S. Embassy in the final ignominious hours.

Where the novelist fails in bringing Vietnam back alive from its tragic past, anthropologist Gerald Cannon Hickey succeeds in two remarkable books recently published by the Yale University Press: "Sons of the Mountains" and "Free in the Forest."

HEALTH Drugs to prevent gout

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB - My doctor, who I have been going to for 15 years, is giving me probenecid (Benemid). This is for the uric acid in the blood. I have asked many times why I must take this as I have no sign of gout. His answer is I can eat any foods and this medication will take care of the uric acid. What would happen if I just did not take it? I am 76 years old and in fairly good health except for a little osteoarthritis.

DEAR READER - The treatment of gout is fairly complicated. There are certain medicines you use during acute attacks to relieve the pain. Still others are given to induce your kidneys to flush out uric acid so it won't build up in your system and cause an acute attack of gout. And still another medicine, Zylorim (allopurinol) is given to stop your cells from producing too much uric acid. Neither the medicines to help flush out uric acid nor the medicine to stop production of uric acid are helpful in relieving the pain or treating the acute attack.

A doctor often has a choice of whether to flush out uric acid or to use Zylorim to stop its production. If you don't do either, and your body has a tendency to produce too much uric acid, you can develop an acute attack of gout or gouty arthritis. If you use probenecid or sulfinpyrazone (Anturane) to flush out uric acid it is important to drink plenty of fluids and take an alkaliizer. That helps to prevent the formation of uric acid stones in the kidney. So drink your fluids. If you use Zylorim you will not have an excess amount of uric acid in the urine and this is not necessary. But some people do not tolerate Zylorim well for a variety of reasons. When you are being Treated to eliminate uric acid the diet becomes less important. DEAR DR. LAMB - I just turned 60 and I am afraid it is going to be quite traumatic for me. It seems everybody has to sound off about everything that is going to kill you after age 60. Is old age some kind of crime in this country? We are told that we are increasing our chances of getting vaginal cancer 10-fold simply by taking estrogen, a substance that our own bodies used to make anyway. This puts me on the horns of a dilemma. Nobody in his right mind wants to run the risk of cancer but no female in my family ever died of cancer. And there are some benefits from the estrogen. I don't know whether to quit my estrogen or continue. My family doctor is not worried and keeps close tabs on me. My yearly exams always come back negative.

DEAR READER - General recognition that people are capable in older age must be getting a tremendous boost around the world, with the United States and China being led by people past 70. And there are plenty of successful active older women as well. The average life expectancy of the American female is nearly 80 years of age.

Vaginal cancer is rare. You may mean uterine cancer (endometrial). And the dangers are highly variable. With no significant family history and a good annual program, you are unlikely to have any problem.

DEAR DR. LAMB - My nephew is constantly cracking his knuckles and I can remember my mother telling me that if I cracked my knuckles I would develop arthritis in my hands in later years. Is there any truth to this? DEAR READER - Apparently not. A doctor and his son did a study on this a number of years ago and found no correlation. I hate to tell you this because I know how annoying the habit can be. I guess the greatest danger to knuckle-crackers is from physical attack by the person who has to tolerate the habit.

OF COURSE THEY'LL LAUGH AT YOU!

Since Christ suffered and underwent pain, you must have the same attitude he did: you must be ready to suffer, too. For remember, when your body suffers, sin loses its power, and you won't be spending the rest of your life chasing after evil desires, but will be anxious to do the will of God. You have had enough in the past of the evil things the godless enjoy - sex, sin, lust, getting drunk, wild parties, drinking bouts, and the worship of idols, and other terrible sins.

Of course, your former friends will be very surprised when you don't eagerly join them any more in the wicked things they do, and they will laugh at you in contempt and scorn. But just remember that they must face the Judge of all, living and dead; they will be punished for the way they have lived. That is why the Good News was preached even to those who were dead-killed by the flood--so that although their bodies were punished with death, they could still live in their spirits as God lives.

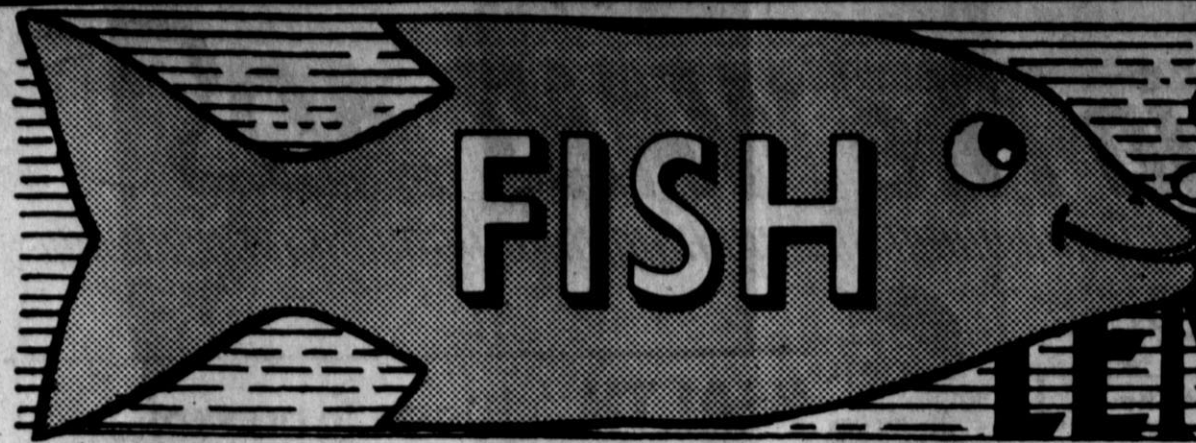

Dear friends, don't be bewildered or surprised when you go through the fiery trials ahead, for this is no strange, unusual thing that is going to happen to you. Instead, be really glad--because these trials will make you partners with Christ in his suffering, and afterwards you will have the wonderful joy of sharing his glory in that coming day when it will be displayed. (1 Peter 4:1-6, 12-13)
