By R. GREGORY NOKES AP
Diplomatic Writer

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, having exchanged views for improving U.S.-Soviet relations, went separate ways today — Shultz to brief President Reagan and Gromyko to address the United Nations.

Shultz and Gromyko met for three hours here Wednesday, and both said their discussions on U.S.-Soviet relations would continue when Gromyko meets Reagan at the White House Friday.

Gromyko was in a good mood after the meeting, and a senior U.S. official said the "discussions were a good start" toward improving relations between the superpowers after a long period of deep chill.

"We hope the Soviet Union is prepared to move the relationship forward," said the official, who briefed reporters on the condition he not be identified. "We hope they are as prepared as we are," he added.

Shultz, who also seemed satisfied after the meeting, gave Reagan a 15-minute telephone report on his talks with Gromyko. He was going to Washington today to provide Reagan with an in-depth briefing.

Gromyko today was delivering an address to the United Nations General Assembly here and then meeting with Walter F. Mondale, the Democratic presidential hopeful.

U.S. analysts were closely scrutinizing Gromyko's speech for clues on Moscow's response to Reagan's proposals, unveiled in a U.N. speech Monday, for "a better working relationship" between the superpowers.

Publicly, Moscow has been skeptical and even insulting, accusing Reagan of using his speech as "camouflage" to hide his real aggressive intentions. But U.S. officials said the Soviets are privately signaling they may be interested.

Reagan will find out for sure on Friday, officials believe. But these officials, who insist on anonymity, also caution against expecting any significant breakthroughs in U.S.-Soviet relations to emerge from the meetings here and in Washington.

Gromyko was smiling when he left the meeting site at the U.S. Mission to the United Nations, joking that while he couldn't answer any questions, but that reporters could ask him "a thousand questions" after his meeting with Reagan.

The senior U.S. official indicated that Shultz had raised Reagan's proposals for improved relations with Moscow, including regular Cabinet-level meetings. He said considerable time was devoted to arms control issues. In addition, the official said, Shultz and Gromyko discussed security matters, regional problems, bilateral relations, human rights and terrorism.

Help sought for peace effort

By ROBERT H. REID Associated Press Writer

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Egypt is consulting with the United States at the highest level about the possible renewal of a U.S. peacemaking role in the Arab-Israeli conflict, the state-run Middle East News Agency said today.

The state-run agency said Foreign Minister Esmat Abdel-Meguid would meet with President Reagan in Washington today to deliver a message from President Hosni Mubarak.

It said the message "deals with the latest developments in the Middle East, particularly a reactivation of the peace process and active participation of the United States."

The Cairo newspaper Al Ahram said Mubarak telephoned Abdel-Meguid on Wednesday to give him "directives" regarding the meeting with Reagan. Abdel-Meguid has been in New York since last week for the current session of the U.N. General Assembly. The Egyptian-U.S. consultations come two days after Jordan decided to resume diplomatic relations with Egypt following a 5½-year break that stemmed from Egypt's 1979 peace treaty with Israel.

Top Egyptian officials — including Abdel-Meguid, Prime Minister Kamal Hassan Aly and State Minister for Foreign Affairs Butros Ghali — said Wednesday that Jordan's move would boost chances of renewed Arab-Israeli peace talks.

Pro-Soviet Syria and Libya have condemned Jordan's action and threatened to seek an Arab boycott of Jordan in retaliation for the move.

The Reagan administration characterized Jordan's action as "helpful to the cause of peace and stability" in the Middle East.

U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Richard Murphy, who is on what U.S.

officials describe as an "exploratory tour" of the region, met with King Hussein for two hours in Amman on Wednesday, but no details of the talks were released. Murphy has been in the Middle East since last week, when he traveled to Beirut, Lebanon, to investigate the bombing of the U.S. Embassy annex a week ago.

In Beirut, military investigator Elias Mousa refused to release the name of a man believed to be the suicide driver of the bomb-laden van that exploded at the annex, sources said Wednesday.

Responsibility for the attack, which killed at least 14 people, was claimed by Jihad Islami, Islamic Holy War, a shadowy pro-Iranian underground group that also claimed to have bombed the U.S. Embassy in west Beirut in April 1983.

Discounts offered taxpayers

By REED PARSELL
Managing Editor

Discounts are being offered those who pay their local taxes before year's end, announced Fred Fox of the Deaf Smith County Appraisal District.

Meanwhile, Fox reported the re-appraisal of county properties is about 40 percent completed. Field work should be wrapped up the early part of next year, he said.

Tax statements for 1984, according to the chief appraiser, were to have been mailed today, meaning residents should receive them by Monday. Those who pay their taxes by the end of next month are to receive a 3 percent discount.

Further discounts are offered for November and December, when 2 and 1 percent, respectively, are to be knocked off tax bills. For payments made between Jan. 1 and 31, there will be no discount. Penalties begin in February.

Fox estimated 60 to 62 percent of local taxes are normally collected in October. By the end of November, 79 percent have been paid, December 85 percent and January 90 percent. It takes the rest of the fiscal year, Fox explained, for the collection rate to reach the usual 93 to 94 percent.

In addition to encouraging people to pay taxes before the end of the calendar year, the local appraisal office has another request.

"It would really help the appraisal district," Fox said, "if people paid at the beginning of the month."

For one thing, Fox maintained, early payment leaves more time for possible problems to be resolved. Also, large companies always pay their taxes at month's end, and a surplus of private tax payments places a heavy burden on Fox's staff.

The county appraisal district office is located in the east side of old Central school building, 402 W. Fourth St. Its mailing address is Box 2298, Hereford, TX 79045.

Regarding the re-appraisal effort,

GOP's headquarters opened

The Deaf Smith County Republican Party committee has officially opened its campaign headquarters and plans an open house in the near future.

Staffed entirely by volunteers, the office is located at 216 N. 25-Mile Ave. Headquarter hours are 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, with the telephone number being 364-7432.

The office can provide information about Republican candidates Bill Allen, Phil Gramm, John Smith, Larry Combest and Virgil Mullenax, the committee announced.

Dennis Hicks is Republican county chairman while Jane White serves as secretary and chairs the Republican Women's organization.

Debe Graves is coordinating the office volunteers with help from captains Margaret Diller, Edwina Thomas, Violet Reinauer, Pat Fisher and Claudia McBrayer.

Ruth Newsom is in charge of the telephone committee.

Lake feasibility study done

The U.S. Bureau of Reclamation confirmed Wednesday that it has completed a feasibility study of Buffalo Lake requested by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

"We have issued the report to Fish and Wildlife, but we really shouldn't talk about it," a public affairs spokesman said. "You'll have to get it from them."

Johnny Beall, resident refuge manager at Buffalo Lake, said the regional office of the FWS in Albuquerque has its copy, but he has not received one yet. Beall said it is his understanding that the BOR has recommended the dam be repaired with a "glory-hole" spillway, which has been estimated to cost between $7 and $8 million.

Beall said the FWS will probably agree with that alternative, which is also favored by the Buffalo Lake Water District Board.

Lack of freeze fine for Fuston

John Fuston, county ASCS director, said it is "just fine with me" that the county did not get a repeat of last year's early freeze.

"The normal freeze date is around Oct. 15," he pointed out, "and we really don't need one before them."

Last year, a record Sept. 20 freeze caused damage to milo, cotton and soy beans, with many of the crops consequently harvested early.

With the exception of sugar beets, which are being pulled now as part of a Holly Sugar Corporation early harvest plan, most crops will not be harvested until after the first freeze.

Sign broken sometime Tuesday

A sign worth an estimated $400 was broken sometime between 11 and 11:30 p.m. Tuesday at Dan Stockstill's 603 N. 25 Mile Ave., Hereford police reported this morning.

Meanwhile, on Wednesday police made two arrests: one for public intoxication and the other for driving while license suspended and no liability insurance.

WEDNESDAY'S HIGH: 51 (normal: 79 record: 98 (1953))

OVERNIGHT LOW: 40 (normal: 53 record: 36 (1936))

PRECIPITATION: .15 inches (7 a.m. Tuesday to 7 a.m. today)

OUTLOOK: Thirty percent chance of showers tonight, which should have a low in the middle 40s. Winds Friday are to be 10 to 20 miles per hour from the northeast, with a high in the low 50s foreseen.

Proposition 4 eyed by county treasurers

By KIMBERLY THOGMARTIN
Staff Writer

Proposition 4, the proposed state constitutional amendment that could abolish the county treasurer's office in Comal and Bexar counties, was discussed by the more than 100 county treasurers attending the 36th Annual Texas County Treasurers' Conference in Amarillo last week.

Deaf Smith County Treasurer Vesta Mae Nunley helped plan the conference and introduced guest speaker Sen. Bill Sarpalis of Canyon. Nunley also served on the nominating committee that named officers for the coming year.

The 27 counties in the Plains region hosted the event.

"We learned that if each county treasurer updates his office and presents himself to the constituents as a necessary office," Nunley

At 36th annual conference in Amarillo

reported, "it will help fight the disintegration of the office."

Nunley said county treasurers statewide are concerned about the proposition, which may be the sign of a trend to transfer the duties of a county treasurer to the county clerk.

"The majority of county clerks," she pointed out, "are already overwhelmed with duties and cannot take on the treasurer's duties."

"The county treasurer is elected by the people and is a voice for the people," she added. Nunley said the main duty of a county treasurer is to safeguard the county's money.

Other speakers at the conference were J. Robert Brown, executive director of the Texas County and District Retirement System; Norman Troy, Jefferson County commissioner; District Judge Bobby L. Cummings of the 52nd Judicial District in Coryell County; and Doug Manning, president of In-Sight Books, Inc. of Hereford.

"Doug was a beautiful representative of Deaf Smith and Hereford," Nunley claimed.

Manning based his remarks on what he sees as a growing tendency to expect too much from the government and blame the system when things go bad. He told the conference that greed is what causes Americans to expect too much from the government.

"He did it in a humorous way, but he made a point," Nunley said.

Single punch kills prison inmate

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A single punch by one prisoner left another inmate dead after an argument while gardening outside a prison unit, a prison official said.

"It was not a fight," chief prison spokesman Phil Guthrie said Wednesday. "It was just one blow."

Clifford R. Shropshire, 31, was dead at the Darrington Unit shortly after 4 p.m., Guthrie said.

"These two inmates got in an argument," Guthrie said. "The guy being questioned struck the victim one blow with his fist. He fell to the ground and was taken inside the unit."

Shropshire was dead before a doctor could examine him, Guthrie said. Spokesman Charles Brown said Brazoria County Justice of the Peace Walter Matthews had ordered an autopsy.

Shropshire was the 14th Texas prison inmate killed by another prisoner this year, Guthrie said. The 13 others were stabbed to death, he said.

Shropshire was serving a 15-year term at the unit about 40 miles south of Houston after being convicted of involuntary manslaughter and failing to stop and render aid in Denton County. He was admitted to the prison in December 1981.

Black defends cross burning case

HOUSTON (AP) — A state district judge has appointed a black lawyer to defend a white man accused of burning a cross outside a black family's residence and hurling Molotov cocktails that burned a teen-ager.

But Judge Michael McSpadden, who learned of the accusations against Baron Lee Boyington after he appointed Steven Greenlee to defend him, said Wednesday he foresees no racial problems.

Boyington and Ted Creamer are accused of burning a cross in the grass of the black family's yard and throwing two Molotov cocktails into their residence Aug. 12.

A teen-ager who had gone to the window to see what was burning suffered second- and third-degree burns on his legs and his mother was also burned, Greenlee said.

Arson investigators later recovered the remains of a white hood and the Molotov cocktails.

Rains fall on thirsty Abilene

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Rains of nearly three inches have fallen on West Central Texas, delighting area farmers and ranchers who have been battling a 13-month drought.

The rains Tuesday and Wednesday were the most since the Columbus Day floods of 1981 and produced the first measureable runoff in almost a year into Lake Fort Phantom, this city's primary water source.

The saturating rain will give wheat and other small grains that already have been planted a healthy start on their growth, but it came too late for cotton, officials said.

Thousands of acres of cotton have already been plowed under, and most farmers and ranchers have collected the insurance benefits, officials said.

The National Weather Service reported that 2.6 inches of rain fell in little over 24 hours starting at 11 a.m. Tuesday when a strong cold front pushed through the area.

Pentagon parts abuses abound

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon, stung by suggestions it is indifferent to waste and fraud, says it has uncovered 17,000 cases of contractor abuses in 2½ years, but its chief investigator says he still finds more under "every rock I turn over."

"We know we're very vulnerable," Inspector General Joseph Sherick, who has been involved in Pentagon procurement for 34 years, told a news conference Wednesday at which he defended the Pentagon's own efforts to uncover abuses.

"We know that we have control problems," he said. "And we're doing a tremendous amount of work on improving our internal controls."

But at the same time, Sherick said, "I keep turning over rocks and every rock I turn over I find new things."

Sherick's appearance came a week after a Senate subcommittee heard about the $7,622 the Air Force paid for a 10-cup coffeemaker for the C-5A cargo plane and about arm rests for that airplane that cost $670.06 apiece.

Hong Kong pact affects Taiwan

PEKING (AP) — China's pledge to protect Hong Kong's free-enterprise system after the 1997 takeover from Britain commits the Communists to a policy with far-reaching implications for Taiwan, another capitalist enclave Peking wants to reincorporate.

Diplomats say the Chinese-British pact to return Hong Kong to China when Britain's lease expires in 13 years is part of Peking's strategy to dispel Taiwanese doubts about its "one country, two systems" idea and gives China a propaganda advantage.

"This is a concrete example of the soft-line approach they have been peddling since 1978," said a Western diplomat. "It's a milestone along the way."

The sources, from Western and Asian countries, spoke on the condition that they not be identified.

The pact, initialed Wednesday in Peking, guarantees that post-colonial Hong Kong's economic and social systems will remain unchanged for at least 50 years and specifies that Hong Kong's 5.5 million people will enjoy a large degree of autonomy.

"Chinese newspaper commentaries are going to make the point that China is taking a very enlightened approach. This is meant for Taiwan as well as Hong Kong," the Western diplomat said.

Protests hinder NATO maneuvers

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Police fired tear gas to disperse 200 demonstrators who cut through the fence of a munitions depot and made close to 100 arrests nationwide as violent protests continued to plague NATO's fall maneuvers.

Government and military officials say the protests have included an increasingly violent series of attacks on soldiers, as well as costly vandalism and acts of sabotage.

On Wednesday, hundreds of demonstrators tried to break into munitions depots, damage military equipment and blockade bases to protest the Autumn Forge exercises, which involve about 250,000 troops from seven NATO countries.

At least 96 arrests were made during the day in scattered incidents in the strategic Fulda Gap region near the East German border. No serious injuries were reported.

Leaders of the West German peace movement have disassociated themselves from the violence against soldiers, and Carl-Dieter Spranger, an Interior Ministry official, said members of West Germany's "terrorist fringe" were to blame for most of the trouble.

Reagan: Carter years cause

Ailing intelligence pointed out

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

Walter F. Mondale is meeting with the Soviet foreign minister as President Reagan says a "near destruction" of U.S. intelligence in the Mideast during the Carter administration is being felt in Lebanon, and Vice President George Bush moves to end questions about his income taxes.

The Democratic presidential candidate was in New York today for his meeting with Andrei A. Gromyko, while Reagan was back in the White House after a one-day campaign swing to the Midwest. Reagan was preparing for his own session with the top Soviet diplomat on Friday and meeting with Secretary of State George P. Shultz.

Bush, dogged by renewed questioning over his taxes, sought to avoid having the issue explode into the kind of controversy that Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro faced a month ago until she released family tax returns.

"We would like to get on with the campaign and not answer questions about taxes every day," his press secretary Peter Teeley said Wednesday.

Campaigning in Indianapolis, Bush issued a statement saying he will release "essential information" about his taxes for 1981, 1982 and 1983. Until now, Bush had maintained that the information couldn't be released because his personal holdings had been placed in a blind trust and that his tax returns weren't known even to himself.

Reagan spent Wednesday in Ohio and Wisconsin in what is his only campaign trip this week.

In Ohio, Reagan was met by an enthusiastic crowd of 5,000 people in a gymnasium at Bowling Green State University and was asked by a student about security in the wake of the latest terrorist bombing of the U.S. Embassy annex last week in Beirut.

Reagan, who accepted responsibility when 241 U.S. servicemen died in a similar suicide truck bombing in Beirut last October, suggested that intelligence actions "before we came here" were in part to blame.

"... We're feeling the effects today of the near destruction of our intelligence capability in recent years — before we came here, the effort that somehow to say, well, spying is somehow dishonest and let's get rid of our intelligence agents, and we did that to a large extent," Reagan said.

Reagan said his administration is "trying to rebuild our intelligence to where you'll find out and know in advance what the target might be and be prepared for it."

His comments touched off a storm in Congress.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., vice chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, said: "I believe an apology is in order. If none is forthcoming, a motion of censure is in order."

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., a member of the Intelligence Committee, called Reagan's comment "outrageous and beneath the dignity of the office of president of the United States ... It is a slur on our intelligence officers and a slur on those who died."

Last week's bombing, in which two Americans died, was the third of its kind in 17 months. In April 1983 the U.S. Embassy in Beirut was attacked, killing 17 Americans.

Mondale's afternoon meeting with Gromyko was expected to include discussions on arms control, Central America and the migration of Jews from the Soviet Union. Mondale pledged that he would do nothing to upstage Reagan's meeting with Gromyko.

"I don't negotiate," Mondale said Wednesday. "I am a candidate for president, but only the president of the United States can negotiate."

"We stand together as one as Americans behind our president when we negotiate with a foreign power," Mondale said.

Mondale, in an interview published today in The Washington Post, acknowledged that his speechmaking style doesn't carry as well on television as it does on the stump.

"I watch the evening news occasionally and sometimes I come across too hot. I've got a high-pitched voice."

In Friday's debate

Doggett to dodge record, Gramm thinks

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Democrat Lloyd Doggett will try to avoid talking about his record when he squares off against Republican Phil Gramm in a debate Friday night, Gramm predicts.

"He's going to try to create a lot of issues that don't make any sense," the College Station congressman said Wednesday on a campaign swing through Beaumont.

The two are scheduled to meet for the first of two televised debates in College Station Friday night.

Gramm and Doggett, a state senator from Austin, crossed paths Wednesday in San Antonio, Houston and Beaumont.

Doggett, who has likened the election to the Old Testament battle between David and Goliath, revealed the third of his "smooth stones," charging that Gramm supports the "powerful and privileged."

The race is a "contest between a Texas senator with a record of putting the Davids of Texas first, of fighting for the ordinary, hard-working, taxpaying families of this state, and a politician with a record of putting the Goliaths first, fighting for the powerful and privileged while turning a deaf ear to the needs and concerns of ordinary Texans," Doggett said in San Antonio, where he spoke in front of the Alamo.

But Gramm, at a San Antonio hotel, said Doggett's "stones" are ludicrous.

"He's got to appeal to these absurdities because he knows he can't win on his own record. He's running around throwing rocks based on no fact at all," he said.

Gramm said Doggett is a millionaire and contributed $500,000 to his own campaign.

"It's an absurdity to say that I'm a Goliath in this race," he said.

Doggett charged that Gramm received more contributions than any other congressman from the chemical and nuclear industries.

Gramm said he could not verify Doggett's figures on his own contributions from those industries, but he said that because the petrochemical industry is the largest in Texas, "I hope I've received support from them."

Doggett criticized Gramm in Beaumont for opposing the federal Superfund, which helps clean up chemical dumps. Gramm responded that he supports efforts to protect the environment but does not favor the Superfund because it taxes all chemical industries rather than just those that produce dangerous chemicals.

Gramm also said Doggett had contributions from gay rights groups and organizations against a strong national defense.

"We are talking about two different visions, two different agendas for the American dream," he said.

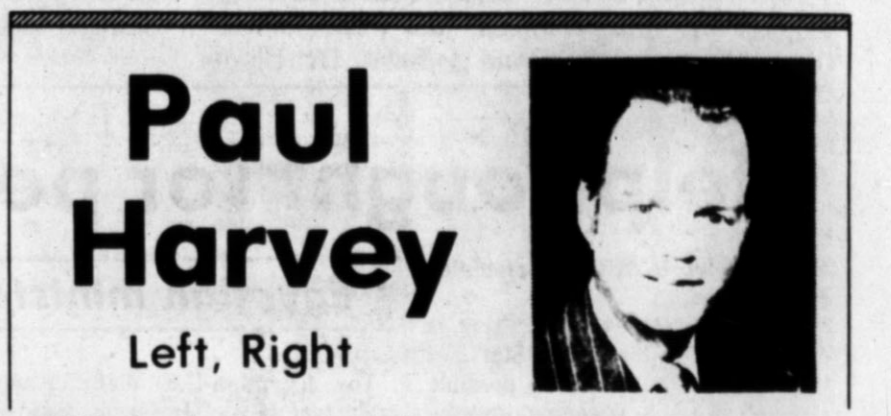

"Lloyd Doggett wants to tax those dreams so he can pay off all the pro-spend special interest groups. I'm being supported by Texans and the traditional values of Texans," Gramm said.

Both candidates also said they hoped Friday night's scheduled statewide televised debate in College Station will highlight their differences.

"This race becomes a question of who will fight for the small businessman and ordinary taxpayers of this state," Doggett said in Houston.

Gramm said he had no special plans to ready himself for the debate, but Doggett said he would spend most of the day Friday working with media advisers to prepare.

Politically, all nations swing back and forth between left and right. Historically they never swing as far right as left, thus they go in concentric circles.

Might that change now?

There was no hotter hotbed of reaction to Vietnam than Berkeley, Calif. In 1971 the Berkeley City Council dropped from its proceedings the Pledge of Allegiance.

It's back. For the first time in 13 years, the Berkeley City Council is pledging allegiance to our government again.

President Reagan is telling his audiences that our nation's hedonistic heyday is passing, that our nation is in the midst of a rebirth of faith, traditional values, the work ethic, the importance of family.

And in many cities fully half his audiences are "young," as he characterizes the political philosophy of his opponent as "old ideas."

Then there is what happened (this month) in Canada.

Canada went conservative. Canadians saw their own nation's economy moribund, saw Reaganomics thriving.

So they elected a lawyer-businessman, Brian Mulroney, whose political experience was nil but whose passion was for pragmatism.

Hand-in-hand with his intelligent wife, he campaigned, in the Reagan image, for reviving the Canadian economy and improving relations with the United States.

His conservatives won 211 seats in the 282-seat Parliament.

Never in Canadian history has any one party enjoyed such a lopsided victory.

Even in traditionally liberal Quebec, the conservatives triumphed.

55 percent.

The re-appraisal effort is to include such things as homes, vacant lots, business lots, mobile homes and multi-family dwellings, Fox said.

People should realize, Fox stressed, they will probably not be subject to larger tax payments because of the re-appraisal. The rise in appraised property value will be accompanied, he thought, by a corresponding drop in tax rates.

"So you'll be paying a little less rate on a little more value," Fox said.

The physical end of the re-appraisal project is being carried out by three field appraisers, Fox said.

One is from his office and the other two are being borrowed from J.W. McMorries and Company, a local appraisal firm.

Anyone with questions about the re-appraisal effort or tax payment discounts may telephone the county appraisal district office at 364-0625.

Beef grades explained

COLLEGE STATION — Many consumers buy USDA graded beef without knowing what the difference grades labels really mean.

The United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) grades meat according to the number and size of flecks of fat found in the red meat portion of the cut, says Marilyn Haggard, a food and nutrition specialist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service.

The more flecks of fat — or "marbling" — the higher the grade of meat, she explains.

"One reason why people become confused about the grading system is that they're used to thinking in terms of lean for determining the quality of ground beef," says Haggard. But even in ground beef, a certain proportion of fat is needed or the taste drops off, she adds.

Each USDA beef grade is a distinct level of quality:

—Prime grade beef has abundant marbling which enhances both flavor and juiciness. It's the most likely to be served in fine restaurants, and the most costly retail grade.

—Choice grade beef has slightly less marbling than Prime, but is still of very high quality. Choice grade is produced in the greatest volume and widely sold on the retail market.

—Good grade beef lacks some of the juiciness and flavor of higher grades because it has less marbling. Some stores sell this quality beef under a house name rather than the USDA grade name.

—Standard grade beef has a high proportion of lean meat and little fat. Because it lacks marbling, this grade of beef will be somewhat dry unless prepared with moist heat.

A recently completed nationwide study funded by the Texas A&M Agricultural Experiment Station, USDA and some cattlemen's associations, showed that consumers can detect differences in the palatability of beef steak among USDA grades, even though the steaks were not identified by grade.

According to Dr. Robert Branson, director of the research study, the consumers' satisfaction with a steak increased as the grade increased, but 25 percent of the consumers in the study also rated leaner Choice grade beef as palatable and indicated they would buy it.

Some people may prefer this leaner meat since it cuts calories and fat in their diets, and food costs, suggests Haggard.

But simply trimming the visible fat from the outside edges of any grade of meat will probably do the most to reduce fat intake, she says, and the flavor produced by marbling in the meat itself can still be enjoyed.

Ann Landers

Don't wait any longer

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Quite a while ago you printed a letter from Ricardo Montalban to his son that appeared in Family Concern, Wheaton, Ill. I carried it in my wallet and planned to read it to my twin sons when they reached their 12th birthday. (They are now 10). My wallet was stolen yesterday on a crowded bus. I don't care about the money, but I was upset about losing that clipping. Is there any chance that you will run it again soon? Thanks.—D.R.L. In Manhattan

DEAR MAN: Here it is—but please don't ait until the twins are 12. Read it to them NOW. It's not a minute too soon.

DEAR SON: As long as you live in this house, you will follow the rules. When you have your own house, you can make your own rules. In this house we do not have a democracy. I did not campaign to be your father. You did not vote for me. We are father and son by the grace of God, and I accept that privilege and awesome responsibility. In accepting it, I have an obligation to perform the role of a father. This is 100 times more than what a pal is. I also am your friend, but w are on entirely different levels. You will do, in this house, as I say, and you cannot question me because whatever I ask you to do is motivated by love. This will be hard for you to understand until you have a son of your own. Until then, trust me.—Your Father

DEAR ANN LANDERS: When I read the letter in your column about the man who said he loved the aroma of women's feet, I thought you had made up that letter. I seemed so goofy. After reading this enclosed item in the paper I never will doubt you again.—Boggled In Connecticut

DEAR BOGG: I received several copies of that clipping and can't understand why so many people were dumbfounded. By now it should be apparent that nothing is so weird that somebody, someplace isn't doing it.

Here's an abbreviated version of the news story:
MINEOLA, N.Y.: A minister's son who allegedly climbed into second-story windows in the middle of the night to tickle young women's feet and stal their shoes was charged Monday with burglary.

Richard Hunter, 20, suspected of five similar break-ins, "just likes women's feet," said Detective L.L. Louis Fucito. "Some people like other parts of the female body, and he just likes the feet."

"If he saw some girl who he thought had nice feet, he would go to her house," said Detective Jerry Wright.

Hunter, of Roslyn Heights, was arrested Sunday, arraigned Monday and released in his parents' custody on the condition he get psychiatric help.

Young Hunter is a suspect in five similar break-ins in the area since last year, some of which also involved the theft of shoes, said Fucito.

And now, Bogg, if you will permit a personal observation, this young man does not sound like a winner since he seems to enjoy looking de-feet ind eface.

Ann Landers' new booklet, "Sex and the Teenager," explains every aspect of sexual behavior—where to draw the line, how to say now, the various methods of contraception, the dangers of VD, the symptoms and where to get help. For a copy, send $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (37 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Lapidary Club discusses trip and monthly display

Deaf Smith County Lapidary Club met Monday evening in the Flame Room.

Jack Nunley, president, presided over the business during which the Halloween Carnival sponsored by the Rotary Club was discussed. The group decided not to participate in the carnival.

Nunley reminded members of the book sale sponsored by Friends of the Library and announced that the club would have the display at the library for the month of October. Members are to meet at the library Thursday at 7:30 p.m. with their rocks in order to assemble the display.

Those not able to make it at 7:30 p.m. are asked to bring their rocks to the library Thursday afternoon.

The trip to Black Mesa State Park in Oklahoma which 16 members participated in was discussed. Various rocks picked up on the tour were shown and the correct names were given for those rocks.

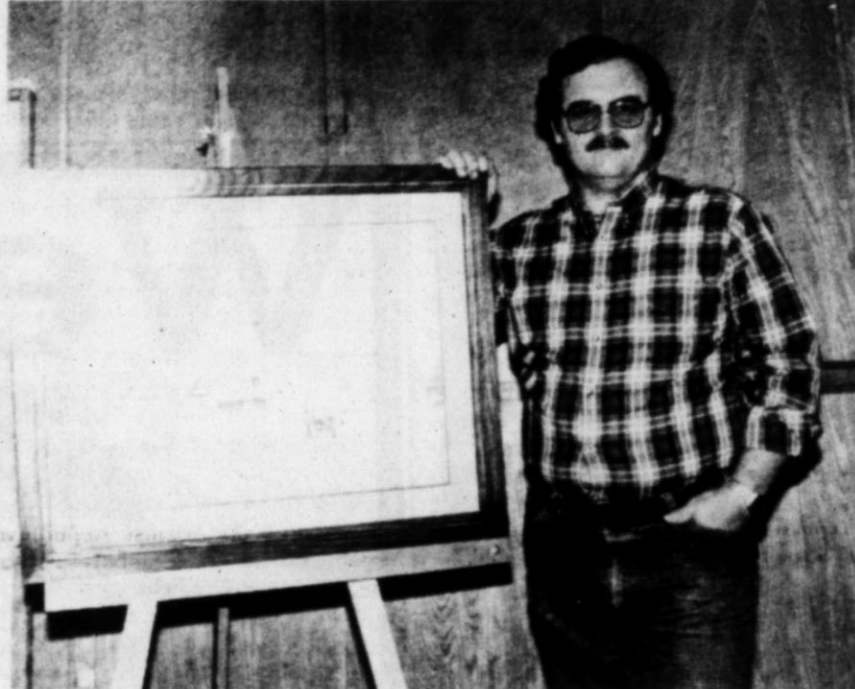

Hosts for the meeting were the Nunleys, the Newells and the Matthews. The door prize, furnished by the Saddlers, was awarded to Allison Nunley and Bert Brown. Nunley won a pendant and Brown won a belt buckle.

New members Whitey and Maggie Vohelm of Canyon were introduced, as were four visitors, Maudie Henson of Oklahoma, Chris Henson, Allison Nunley and Casey Nunley. Thirty-three members were present.

The next meeting will be Oct. 22 at 7:30 p.m. in the Flame Room. Officers will be elected.

Baseball's Joel Youngblood was traded by the New York Mets to the Montreal Expos on Aug. 4, 1982. As a Met, Youngblood had played against the Cubs in an afternoon game in Chicago. He immediately flew to Philadelphia where he played a night game with his new team, the Expos. It made him the first man ever to play for two major-league teams in two different cities on the same date.

Guest Artist

R. Russell Brown, a Canyon artist, spoke to the Hereford Art Guild Tuesday afternoon as their guest artist. Brown has an unusual technique in which he uses a dry brush on smooth illustration board, forcing him to create his own texture. The result is a smooth almost print-like effect.

Nearly 20,000 books pass through store

By LISA BALL
Staff Writer

Where can one find a place that has doubled in size every year since its opening and currently has close to 20,000 books that have passed through more than one person's library?

Only one place: Diller-a-Dollar Bookstop, 214 N. 25 Mile Ave.

Margaret Diller returned to Hereford three years ago after teaching for 12 years on a Navajo Indian reservation in New Mexico and simply decided that she would open a store.

"I knew that Hereford had one bookstore and one religious bookstore, but not a used bookstore," she explained. "I had worked at Hastings' Books and Records for just about six months, but I had really enjoyed it."

For someone without any business experience or counseling, Margaret Diller has proven extremely successful. When she opened in October of 1981, she had 5,000 books that she had bought from another used bookstore. Today, however, she boasts 5,000 hard cover books and close to 15,000 paperbacks.

"I opened at the worst possible time, I guess," she said. "The meat packing plant had just closed down and there were about two homes on every block for sale. The economy was really down."

"But I guess I'm just the eternal optimist and I figured it would come back. Ghost towns just don't happen anymore with the population the way it is."

Ms. Diller said the hardest thing she had to overcome was the image of a used bookstore as a pornographic dealership.

"A friend told me about a week before I opened that since there aren't many used bookstores in this part of the country that people tend to think they sell X-rated material," she explained.

She said that she is not sure if she has gotten over that image yet because new people come in every day who are not sure just what she carries.

The opening of the bookstore was a family project.

"I moved back to Hereford because it was where I had grown up and where my family lived," she said. "And they were the ones who really helped me."

"Opening the store was a family project. Every member helped open it."

Ms. Diller decided the floor plan herself and decorated everything. She even built the wooden bookcases she was forced to add because the other shelves were too full.

Part of the reason for her success is her helpful nature. She will trace books for customers and try to remember who asks for what and get it to them when they ask.

"I don't trace many books because of the cost involved," she explained. "To trace one, you have to subscribe to and place an ad in a national publication which goes to other used bookstores. Then, if a store with the book sees your ad, they'll quote you a price, usually higher than normal."

A unique aspect of Ms. Diller's bookstore is the number of hardcover books that she carries. Most used bookstores simply carry paperback books, but she decided to sell hardback, too, because they are easier on the eyes.

"Books on just about every subject in the world pass through here," she said. "The only kind I have a hard time getting are science fiction. Science fiction readers rarely trade their books."

Ms. Diller has learned a lot about her customers since opening the store, but says that she's still surprised by them.

"My customers have really surprised me," she said. "The farmers read an awful lot all year long, not just in certain seasons. And, summer has turned out to be my busiest time."

"I enjoy the people, too. I love to visit with the customers because people are so relaxed when they come in. They don't get upset if something's not here because they know that they're taking a chance on finding it when they come in anyway."

Ms. Diller also sells items like jelly beans and cassette tapes.

"I opened with the jelly beans because I like them and thought they were different flavors," she said. "I just recently added the cassettes as I began to expand my merchandise."

Since opening the bookstore, Ms. Diller, an avid reader herself, has had little time to read.

"I just don't have time to read like I used to," she explained. "I have, though, become an expert at skimming through books so now I know a little about a lot of books, but I don't know any of them really in-depth."

In the little time she does have, Ms. Diller is interested in Indian art and books concerning the Southwest.

With its shelves bulging at the seams, Diller-a-Dollar Bookstop and its owner are one of a kind.

Party tips

DEAR READERS — Entertaining of one sort or another is the theme of our Pointer roundup today. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — Please remind parents of the courtesy of picking up children on time from parties and other events. Many times volunteers must stay much past closing time in order to supervise children. If a delay cannot be avoided, a call should be made to allow the hostess or volunteer to know when the child will be picked up. — E.B.

DEAR POLLY — When mothers bring punch to our parties at school or church, they are never sure how much to bring. Most kids can drink an eight-ounce glass of punch without much trouble. So use these guidelines. There are 16 cups in one gallon; there are 5 3/4 cups in one 45-ounce can. It takes about two gallons of punch to serve 25 kids and the teacher, plus a couple of helpers. Always allow a little extra in case of a spill. — AMY

DEAR POLLY — My favorite form of entertaining is the buffet dinner. To make it even more fun for my guests — and less work for me — I like to serve make-it-yourself types of meals. Favorites are tacos, elaborate hero sandwiches, a salad bar or a variety of fondues. Guests enjoy putting together their own meals from a lavish array of fresh ingredients. — T.F.

DEAR POLLY — With so many of my friends on diets, I've decided to eliminate rich desserts from my party menus. Instead, I've started following the continental custom of offering a couple of kinds of cheese and a bowl of fresh fruit. It's an elegant ending to any meal and guests appreciate your thoughtfulness. — MEGAN

DEAR POLLY — I had unexpected company and found I was without filters for my coffee maker. I decided to cut a double circle from a paper dinner napkin to use as a filter and discovered it worked fine. With a heavier napkin, one layer would probably suffice. — MRS.L.H.

Be sensible

DEAR DR. LAMB — Does shellfish such as shrimp, stone crabs or clams affect someone with high blood pressure? Some medics claim shellfish is high in sodium.

DEAR READER — While many people who have high blood pressure do better with sodium restriction, some authorities feel that, to do any good, the restriction in most cases has to be so severe that it is counterproductive. But a sensible limitation of sodium is probably wise.

Many shellfish do contain more sodium than beef, chicken or fish. That doesn't mean you can't use them. Just use them in moderation, and when you use shellfish, use foods with it that are relatively low in sodium.

To illustrate the relative values, shrimp contains about 140 mg. of sodium per 100 grams (3-and-a-half ounces), soft clams about 36 mg., hard clams 205 mg. Those are values for the meat only. But canned crab contains nearly 1,000 mg. Lobster contains about 200 mg. of sodium per 100 grams.

Soccer star survives lightning bolt

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Doctors here still marvel that an 11-year-old soccer player could have been struck by a lightning bolt and live to tell the tale.

Nicky Schneider was on the playing field April 7 when a witness said he "just exploded off the ground."

When he regained consciousness 12 days later, he was unable to stand or walk on his own, could not talk and had lost much of the hearing in both ears.

Doctors were hesitant to predict what lay ahead for the young athlete, but he fought back. Now he walks and talks, and doctors say he has beaten the odds.

"He passed our expectations when he left" June 7, said Dr. William Parker, medical director at Baylor Institute for Rehabilitation, where the youth spent five weeks undergoing therapy four hours per day.

"He's certainly passed them now," Parker said.

Dr. Avril Rush, 36, a resident at John Peter Smith Hospital in Fort Worth, witnessed the lightning strike.

She said she was running off the soccer field with her daughter to escape a heavy storm when the bolt struck.

"Nick just exploded off the ground," said Ms. Rush. "He was silhouetted in this brilliant flash of light about 12 feet off the ground. I remember looking down at his sneakers. The uppers were blown apart."

The woman, who was thrown back by the force of the bolt, said the boy's tattered clothing barely clung to his body afterward.

The boy regained consciousness 12 days later in Parkland Memorial Hospital in Dallas. He had suffered burns over 12 percent of his body.

"It hurt whenever I did anything," Nicky said.

He said he often hid his shoes to delay practicing walking because it hurt so much.

When Schneider finally walked on his own again May 27, he, and his mother broke down and cried.

"It takes time," he said. "If I didn't want to get up and do it myself, it would have taken longer."

Friends have raised about $12,000 for the youth. The money was placed in a special fund for medical expenses.

Meanwhile, Ms. Rush believes his survival is nothing short of a miracle.

"He's a snowflake," said the physician. "There will never be another one like him. Statistically, people don't survive direct lightning blows to the head."

In shipbuilding probes

Senate panel subpoenas records

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two congressional subcommittees have scheduled a hearing to look into whether the Justice Department bungled an investigation of false shipbuilding claims against the Navy.

In preparation for the hearing, a Senate Judiciary Committee subcommittee voted Wednesday to give its chairman power to subpoena Justice Department records about the investigations.

The hearing, set for Monday, will be conducted by the Judiciary Committee's administrative practices subcommittee and by a Joint Economic Committee subcommittee chaired by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis.

Both subcommittees have been investigating the handling of cost overruns in shipbuilding, especially those involving attack submarines built by General Dynamics Corp.'s Electric Boat Division in Groton, Conn.

The subpoenas also involved claims filed by Lockheed and the Newport News Drydock and Shipbuilding Co., a division of Tenneco.

The vote to issue subpoenas came the same day The Washington Post reported that General Dynamics Chairman David S. Lewis tried to conceal a later $100 million cost overrun from the Navy and the public.

Sen. Charles E. Grassley, R-Iowa, chairman of the Judiciary subcommittee, said the hearing would look into why the Justice Department overruled the recommendations of several prosecutors to proceed with criminal charges in some cases, and whether any laws need to be changed to prevent future overcharges.

The Justice Department declined to furnish the documents requested by Grassley and Proxmire, Assistant Attorney General Stephen S. Trott said much of the material involved grand jury testimony, which is secret under law, and internal documents he felt should remain confidential.

Most of the congressional attention has focused on General Dynamics Corp.

P. Takis Veliotis, a former general manager the Electric Boat Division, has alleged that General Dynamics deliberately underbid to get contracts to build 688-class attack submarines and then filed false claims with the Navy to recover their costs.

Veliotis, indicted on federal charges of taking kickbacks from subcontractors, now is living in his native Greece and is considered a fugitive.

General Dynamics has repeatedly denied inflating its claims and has blamed the added costs on changes ordered by the Navy in the submarine's design.

House panel votes to guarantee SS hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House committee has approved President Reagan's election year request to guarantee Social Security recipients a cost-of-living increase Jan. 1 even if 1984 inflation doesn't exceed 3 percent.

On a voice vote, the House Ways and Means Committee voted Wednesday to waive the requirement that the Consumer Price Index go up 3 percent to trigger a cost-of-living increase.

The action was taken despite predictions that inflation would exceed the 3 percent figure by year's end.

"Right now it looks like the trigger will be reached," Rep. J.J. Pickle, D-Texas, told fellow committee members before the vote. He said the latest Consumer Price Index figures indicate the cost-of-living increase will be around 3.6 percent. A committee estimate ranged from 3.3 percent to 3.6 percent.

But not enacting the Senate-passed bill would entail a risk, Pickle said. Congress will be in recess when figures for the third quarter of 1984 are released late next month and the numbers could show a sharp decline in inflation, he explained.

"This is the best course for us to take," Pickle said.

For Friday's game

Herd finally healthy

By DENNIS BALL
Sports Editor

Amarillo High School comes to town Friday for a 7:30 p.m. District 3-5A football game, and perhaps for the first time this season, Hereford High School enters a Friday night contest healthy.

And that has Amarillo coach Larry Dipple worried.

"I was afraid they'd be pretty healthy," he said Wednesday. "I think what we're going to have to do is run a ball-control offense and keep the ball away from Hereford and (Mike) Scott."

According to Hereford coach Jerry Taylor, however, Whiteface fans shouldn't feel too sorry for Dipple. Running a ball-control offense suits Dipple and the Sandies just fine, he said.

"Amarillo is very much a ball-control team," he said, "very consistent, very methodical. They will throw the ball, but that's not their steady diet."

Amarillo's quarterback, Donny Riggan, has averaged only a little more than 10 passes per game, so the Sandies' steady diet does seem to be running the ball. But it's no wonder.

Amarillo fullback Thomas Huyck is doing a fine job of just that. The 5-8, 182-pounder already has rushed for 248 yards on 41 carries (a 6-yard average) in three games.

Huyck, a three-year starter for the Sandies, is the workhorse in Amarillo's attack, Taylor said. However, he pointed out the play of Amarillo tailback Timmy Smith as another threat.

Smith has run for 211 yards on 33 carries for a 6.4-yard average. He returned a kickoff 93 yards against Coronado last week in a losing effort, 25-14. Amarillo now is 0-1 in district play and Hereford is 1-1.

"We felt like we would beat Coronado," Dipple said. "Coronado, though, just came out and did what they had to do and beat us. I hope our guys are hungry for a win."

He saw some opposition to that desire, though.

"They (the Whitefaces) are going to be at full-strength for the first time. And Hereford will play well."

Taylor said the key for the Whitefaces Friday night would be playing with a team effort.

"We (the players) have got to stay at home," he said. "Everybody needs to do his one-eleventh. I am convinced Amarillo is well-drilled and well-coached, and we're going to have to each do our jobs."

Taylor said he plans to insert nose-guard David Parsons back into the lineup. He added he expected Scott to be at about 95 percent full speed.

"When you play Hereford, you've got to control Scott and the throwing game," Dipple said. "They're very dangerous."

Amarillo primarily runs from the wing-T offensive formation and lines-up in a 5-2 setup on defense.

As a team, Amarillo leads the league in total offense, while Hereford is eighth. Defensively, the Herd has the better stats, ranking fourth while Amarillo is sixth.

Huddle

Where was the football huddle invented? In the 1890s at Galludet College in Washington, D.C., a school for the deaf. Players found that the hand signals they used would be no good when playing other deaf teams, but the signals went undetected when they formed a huddle. The huddle was soon adopted by other schools.

The Harris Rating System has picked Amarillo as a six-point favorite to win Friday.

"I know they'll just try to keep the ball away from us," Taylor added. "They're probably ready to chew nails into (after losing last week)."

Friday's meeting is a reunion, of sorts, for Dipple in two ways. Dipple coached the Whitefaces from 1971 until 1974 when he left for Amarillo. Since that time, Dipples' Sandies have beaten Hereford six of nine times, including last year's 17-7 win.

In fact, it was the Amarillo defeat in 1983, the last game of the regular season, that kept Hereford from reigning as the district champ.

Amarillo received a post-season playoff berth last year as a co-champion of District 3-5A, along with Hereford. However, the Sandies had the number-one seed by virtue of beating three league teams that lost two games.

Dipple also will be coaching Friday against a former teammate at Stamford High School in Taylor. The two helped guide their high school to a state football championship in 1959.

Friday's game, however, will not be the only circumstance under which Dipple and Taylor have faced each other. In college, Dipple played for Hardin-Simmons against Taylor, who was playing for Texas Western at El Paso.

In another key District 3-5A matchup Friday pits Palo Duro against Plainview in Bulldog Stadium in Plainview. Palo Duro was picked by many to win the league crown in 1984, while Plainview was picked as high as third.

Both teams are undefeated, with Palo Duro having a tie on their record, a 0-0 affair with Clovis the first game of the season. Neither Plainview nor Palo Duro has allowed a point this season.

Phillips concerned with his Saints only

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Former Houston Oiler Coach Bum Phillips says he has enough trouble making decisions about his New Orleans Saints team and doesn't need to worry about the Houston Oiler's problems.

Phillips was asked during a telephone conference call Wednesday if Oiler running back Earl Campbell was being used properly in the Oiler backfield.

"Now what kind of a question is that?" Phillips exploded. "I don't coach their football team and I don't know what they've got. It's hard enough for a guy that's coaching a football team to answer that question, much less a guy that only looks at them two times."

Outgoing commissioner

Baseball's Bowie Kuhn gets farewell party

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

They threw a swell farewell party for Bowie Kuhn the other night.

The affair filled the ballroom at a midtown Manhattan hotel and attracted a glittering guest list of some 800, jammed with celebrities. It was a night of stars with the heavy hitters of sports and industry gathered to salute the outgoing commissioner of baseball.

There were two tipoffs that this was going to be a biggie. Howard Cosell was master of ceremonies and the affair required 87 vice chairmen. The dress code was black tie and the dinner carried a $250-a-plate fee with the proceeds — some $210,000 — benefitting the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation.

Former President Ford attended, as did Pete Rozelle of the National Football League and David Stern of the National Basketball Association, a pair of commissioners who, unlike Kuhn, still are gainfully employed by their sports. Willie Mays showed up and exchanged a warm embrace with Kuhn, the man who barred him from baseball because of his employment by a gambling casino.

The commissioner seemed genuinely touched at the outpouring of affection from the assembly, which included baseball bosses such as Roy Eisenhardt of the Oakland A's, Eddie Einhorn and Jerry Reinsdorf of the Chicago White Sox, Paul Beeston of the Toronto Blue Jays, Bob Howsam of the Cincinnati Reds and Bill Giles of the Philadelphia Phillies.

Of that group, only the Reds were members of the "Get Bowie" club, a minority group of five who blocked the rest from re-electing him, and within the franchise Howsam was a supporter of the commissioner.

When the dinner was over, baseball handed Kuhn an airplane ticket, patted him on the back for almost 16 years of service to the game and sent him on his way. He leaves today for Korea, where he will represent the major leagues at that country's championship series. This country's championship series will be left in the hands of Peter Ueberroth, who officially takes office Monday.

That was the way Kuhn wanted it. He did not wish to be a fifth wheel, crowding the World Series scenery as Ueberroth took over. "This is Peter's show now," he said.

So, the commish, as he liked to call himself, went out the same way he occupied his office: with grace. To his credit, he resisted the temptation to use Yogi Berra's old line to the baseball folks assembled at the farewell. You know the one, "Thank you for making this night necessary."

The seating list included tables reserved for guests of Anheuser-Busch and Turner Broadcasting Co. Gussie Busch and Ted Turner were charter members of the fraternity that brought Bowie down. No wonder they felt obliged to invite a tableful of guests for his last hurrah.

For his part, Kuhn remained in control, although his dry sense of humor occasionally surfaced. He talked about what he might have done differently during his administration, saying if he had a chance to change anything he might "adjust a few nuts and bolts." Never did he suggest that he was referring to anything other than tools.

"These are all lovely people I've always liked," he said, surveying the guests. Then, in a stage whisper, he added, "Charley Finley didn't make it, did he?"

Would he some day consider a return to baseball, perhaps with a franchise?

"At this point," he said, "I want to step back and view the game from a distance. I seem to have been afforded that opportunity."

Outside the hotel, scores of New York City policemen formed up in skirmish lines. Were they here for the Bowie Kuhn dinner, one of them was asked. "Nah," he said. "There's a Diana Ross concert across the street."

Swale, the winner of the 1984 Florida Derby and also the Kentucky Derby, was the 14th horse to win both of those races.

NFL 'voice' dies Wednesday at 72

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Funeral services have been set for Friday for John Facenda, the dramatic voice of National Football League highlight films and a pioneer broadcaster who died at the age of 72.

"There will never be another voice like his," said Steve Sabol, executive vice president of NFL Films Inc., of Mt. Laurel, N.J., which hired Facenda to narrate its weekly highlights show in 1962. His last work for the company involved highlights of this year's Super Bowl.

Facenda's rich baritone was recognized by millions and his smooth, evenly paced style earned praise from broadcasters throughout his 51-year career in radio and television.

Facenda, honored for lifetime achievement at local Emmy Award ceremonies less than two weeks ago but unable to attend, died Wednesday at Fitzgerald Mercy Hospital in nearby Darby, a spokesman said. His colleagues said he had been suffering from cancer.

"He had a voice that once you heard it you never forgot it," said network sportscaster Tom Brookshier. "We always said it was a voice from the other side of the great beyond."

Facenda was best known in the Philadelphia area as anchorman for 25 years at WCAU-TV where, in 1948, he convinced management to broadcast an 11 p.m. news show.

Sabol said Facenda received 10 to 20 letters a month from fans, many of whom were unsure of his name, addressing the envelope with "Voice of God" or "Voice of Doom."

YOU AUTO KNOW

Don Henslee

Q. I was told that replacing a mechanical fuel pump is rather risky because of the danger of ruining the fuel line fittings. Is this the case, and how can it be avoided?

A. A simple way to avoid problems: Always use two wrenches, one to hold the inner fitting while you turn the outer fitting with the other. Generally, if you use one wrench, the entire fitting will turn, and something will be ruined. Ideally, the best tools to use are tubing wrenches. The fuel line fittings are brass, and the tube wrenches will keep you from rounding off those brass edges. One other hint: Before installing the new pump, compare it with the old pump from every angle. Arm, flange — everything should be exactly the same on the new as on the old. That will avoid the sickening sound of your car shaft breaking the moment you turn your engine over because the pump arm jammed.

Bean favorite at Abilene golf event

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Despite the presence of Tom Watson, a last-minute entry, and PGA champion Lee Trevino, Andy Bean could be the man to beat in the LaJet Golf Classic.

"I'm playing about as good as I can play," Bean said Wednesday as he prepared for today's first round of the $350,000 event at the Fairway Oaks Golf Club.

"If I'd putted just a little bit last week (in the tour's richest event, the $1,122,500 Panasonic Las Vegas Invitational), it wouldn't have even been close," Bean said. "For the week, for 90 holes, the longest putt I made was eight feet.

"There's nothing you can do about it. It comes and goes. All you can do is keep trying. But it does get pretty frustrating."

Even with his problems on the greens, Bean was tied for the lead through 89 holes of the five-day, four-course tournament but could not match Denis Watson's winning birdie on the 90th hole and had to settle for his third runner-up finish of the season.

Bean, a winner at Greensboro in the spring, took some consolation in the $97,200 check for second place and boosted his earnings for the season to a career-high $404,760, third behind the Watsons — Tom Watson, who leads the money standings with $471,185, and Denis Watson.

Tom Watson, a three-time winner this season, made a last-minute decision to enter this tournament when Denis Watson's victory last week thrust him into a challenging position for Player of the Year honors.

Tom Watson, seeking a record sixth Player of the Year honor, leads the complicated point standings with 60. Denis Watson, who is skipping this tournament due to a history of allergy problems in Texas, is second with 58 with the season winding down to a close. Only five more official events remain on the schedule.

"I really want to win it (Player of the Year) again," Tom Watson said. "If I can win one more tournament this year, that just about ought to do it."

The other major contenders in the 153-man field chasing a $63,000 first prize include defending title-holder Rex Caldwell, Hale Irwin, Lanny Wadkins, Fred Couples and Mark O'Meara.

Holmes champion of new federation

By BERT ROSENTHAL AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Larry Holmes stood on a chair and proclaimed, "I am the king of the hill."

A short time later, he struck a fighting pose, and said to James "Bonecrusher" Smith, "I can do this (as he bobbed and weaved) and make you miss every punch."

Holmes, who will be 35 on Nov. 3, officially never has been complete king of the heavyweight division, although he has been a champion since June 9, 1978, when he out-pointed Ken Norton in 15 rounds at Las Vegas, Nev.

That fight made Holmes only the World Boxing Council titleholder in the fractured heavyweight class.

Now, having given up the WBC crown after stopping Scott Frank in five rounds at Atlantic City, N.J. Sept. 10, 1983, following "a misunderstanding" with promoter Don King, the unbeaten Holmes has become the heavyweight champion of the fledgling International Boxing Federation.

Having cleared up his differences with King, Holmes will make the first defense of his IBF title Nov. 9 at the Riviera Hotel and Casino in Las Vegas against the unheralded Smith, a 29-year-old Army veteran who has won 14 fights since losing his professional debut, a fourth-round knockout against James Broad Nov. 4, 1981 at Atlantic City.

Unifying the heavyweight division, which now has Gerrie Coetzee of South Africa as the WBC champion and Pinklon Thomas as the World Boxing Association titleholder, is one of Holmes' major aspirations.

"I don't want any more initial (i.e., IBF, WBA, WBC) champions," he said. "I want one champion."

Another goal is surpassing the undefeated record of the late heavyweight champion, Rocky Marciano, who was 49-0. Holmes has a 45-0 record, so five more victories would enable him to become the all-time unbeaten heavyweight champion.

"That's a goal," Holmes said Wednesday at a news conference announcing the date and the site of the scheduled 15-round bout against Smith. "You have to have goals if you're going to stay in the game."

Smith earned the title shot by rallying to stop Frank Bruno of Britain in the final round of a 10-rounder at London May 13.

Running In The Open Field

Practice for the Hereford Whitefaces sometimes gets pretty physical, as is evident in this picture taken Wednesday. The herd practices game situations, including playing in the open field.

Another school gets probation

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — The University of Akron has been placed on probation for a two-year period as a result of violations in its men's basketball program, the NCAA announced today.

The violations cited by the NCAA included academic irregularities, ethical conduct, out-of-season practices and tryouts, extra benefits and improper inducements from 1980 to 1983.

The team will be prohibited from any post-season play during the 1984-85 season, according to the National Collegiate Athletic Association's Committee on Infractions. The university remains eligible for television appearances.

The university also will not be allowed to award athletically related financial aid to more than three new basketball players during the 1985-86 academic year, the NCAA said.

Texas faces tough test in New Jersey

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON AP Sports Writer

Texas will be wearing its burnt orange uniforms when it meets Penn State on Saturday, but Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J., will be anything but home sweet home for the Longhorns.

Yes, Texas will be the "home" team for this second meeting between two of college football's traditional powers, even though the Longhorns have sold 9,500 tickets to Penn State's 28,000.

"As I recall," says Penn State Coach Joe Paterno, "Texas was talking to (former athletic director) Ed Czekaj about a home-and-home series. We didn't have anything available until the late 1980s and they didn't, either. But they had an open date and so did we, so we got the Meadowlands into the act."

Penn State will visit Texas in 1989 and the Longhorns return the favor in 1990. This contest was tacked onto the series as a "neutral site" showcase game. And even though Texas won a coin flip to be the "home" team, Coach Fred Akers says he's "not sure how neutral it is considering its location. 'I would have preferred Amarillo.'"

The second-ranked Longhorns are a 2½-point favorite over the fourth-rated Nittany Lions, who are 3-0 and have improved each week. Texas has played only once, beating Auburn 35-27, and, says Akers, "I wonder where we are." The pick is... Penn State 20-17.

Last week's record was 45 right, nine wrong and one tie for a percentage of .833; for the season, it's 136-41-3—.768. Against the spread, last week was only 14-15-1—.483; on the year, 42-43-1—.494.

OILERS

ing his tenure as head coach with the Oilers, and was often criticized when he was head coach of the Oilers for using Campbell too much.

Phillips' Oiler offenses were often called boring and one-dimensional as Campbell ran to three National Football League rushing titles and the Oilers reached the National Football League playoffs three straight years.

New Oiler Coach Hugh Campbell has installed a one-back offense that features the passing of quarterback Warren Moon.

"I'm not capable of judging what the Houston Oilers should do," Phillips said. "I've got a helluva time trying to decide what we are going to do here, and I'm here every day."

Phillips said Campbell is running as hard as ever.

"You've got to have a spot to run in," Phillips said. "He didn't always gain yards when we had him either. He made 16 yards on 14 carries in a game against Miami. But I think he's running as hard as he ever did."

The Saints will go into Sunday's game with a 2-2 record, needing a victory to tighten the National Football Conference Western Division race with San Francisco, 4-0.

But Phillips said he felt no pressure from the fans to win.

"I put more pressure on myself than they do," Phillips said. "I'm the one who said we were going to win. The fans always think you are going to win. I said it in Houston, too, and we did win — we just didn't get to the Super Bowl."

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The government is putting final touches on a plan to combat "brain drain" by guaranteeing higher salaries to scientists, the head of the National Council of Science and Technology said.

The newspaper El Universal reported Wednesday that agency director Hector Mayagoitia told reporters plans were under way to guarantee salaries of up to five times the minimum wage for scientists with master's and doctoral degrees.

The minimum wage here is the equivalent of just over $4 a day.

Mayagoitia, who was attending a meeting of the Mexican Academy of Engineers, also promised incentives for young researchers to stay in the country, El Universal reported.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Hotel rates will go up 34 percent across the country as of Dec. 16, the president of the Mexican Association of Hotels and Motels announced.

Rafael Suarez Vazquez said the rate increase was set below the inflation rate, estimated at over 50 percent, to maintain competitiveness with other tourist spots such as Hawaii, Puerto Rico and the Caribbean islands.

"In these times we do not aim for great earnings, but trying to come out ahead and maintain employment," Suarez Vazquez said.

GUADALAJARA, Mexico (AP) — Exports of shoes to the United States will double in 1984, thanks to new markets in the American states of the Southwest, the president of the Jalisco Chamber of Footwear said recently.

David Preciado said this year the state of Jalisco will export 6 million pairs of shoes to the United States, at a value of $220 million, compared to 3 million last year.

Preciado said U.S. investors were discussing with business leaders in Jalisco the possibility of joint investments in the local shoe industry.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The construction industry is undergoing one of the worst slumps in its history, with 1.5 million workers unemployed and a foreign debt of more than $1 billion, the weekly magazine Acierto reported.

Quoting various union and industry sources, the magazine catalogued the industry's current ills, which are blamed on both the public and private sectors and on the poor economy in general.

Vicente Bortoni, president of the National Chamber of the Construction Industry, was quoted as saying the government owes construction companies billions of pesos in back payments for work on various public projects.

Private companies have also hurt the industry by creating "dummy" unions to avoid paying their workers Social Security and other benefits, said an adviser to a construction workers' union, Juan Alonso Bernal.

Acierto said the government was exporting construction materials, including two million tons of cement, to inject much-needed revenues into the industry.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Irish flutist James Galway, in Mexico for two performances, says he likes to reach the largest public possible.

"It's because of that I interpret commercial themes," he told local reporters, referring to such performances as those of "Moon River" or "The Pink Panther."

"I don't need a conductor for the music I do. It's not complicated and the musicians know it very well," Galway said after his arrival. He is scheduled to perform with the National Symphony on Thursday with works by Mozart and Vivaldi and on Sunday with works by Bizet and Mahler.

People scramble for safety as wind flips cruise ship

BROOKSVILLE, Maine (AP) — A pleasure cruise off the Maine coast became a journey into the "Twilight Zone" when a gust flipped a wind-jammer a mile from shore, sending 23 people scrambling for anything that would float in chilly seas.

Helicopters and a flotilla of government and private boats, alerted by witnesses on shore, rushed to the rescue Wednesday, and all 19 passengers and four crew members were saved.

Five people were hospitalized for exposure and two were held overnight, authorities said.

"They're lucky, lucky people," said one of the rescue workers who helped pluck the shipgoers from the waters of Eggemoggin Reach.

"I'm just glad to be here," said passenger Becky Burkey of Texas.

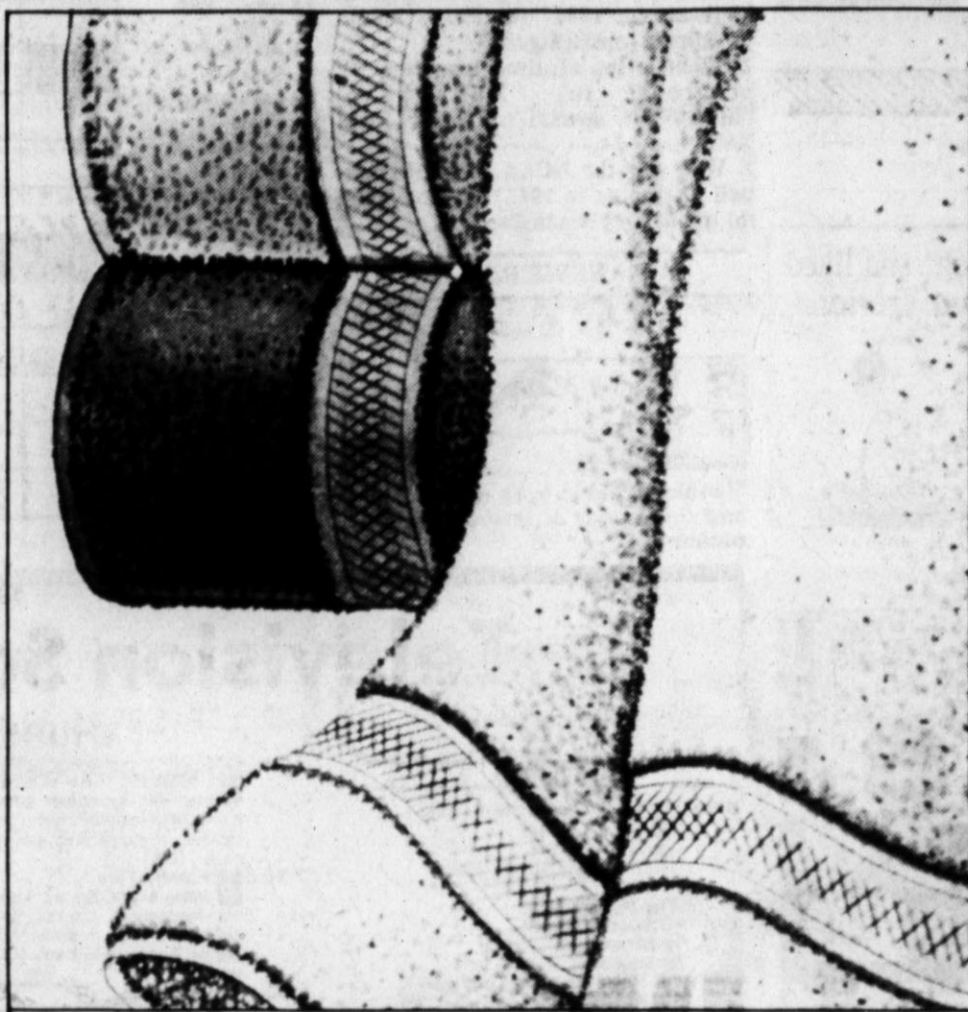

"Glad that everybody got back."

Burkey said that she was on deck when the 64-foot Isaac H. Evans, a 98-year-old schooner, turned over at about 11:30 a.m.

"It seemed like the wind and the water had died down," she said. "They (the crew) were changing the canvas. The schooner began tilting and then, all of a sudden we were in the water."

Economists hope for modest gain

NEW YORK (AP) — Economy-watchers both cheerful and fearful are looking for some reassurance Friday when government statisticians take their monthly pulse reading of business activity.

They expect the Commerce Department's index of leading indicators for August to provide evidence that the economy is settling down to a sedate, but sustainable, rate of growth.

The index, a composite of 12 indicators ranging from building permits to stock prices, has fallen for two consecutive months. As those declines were reported, they didn't cause any great alarm.

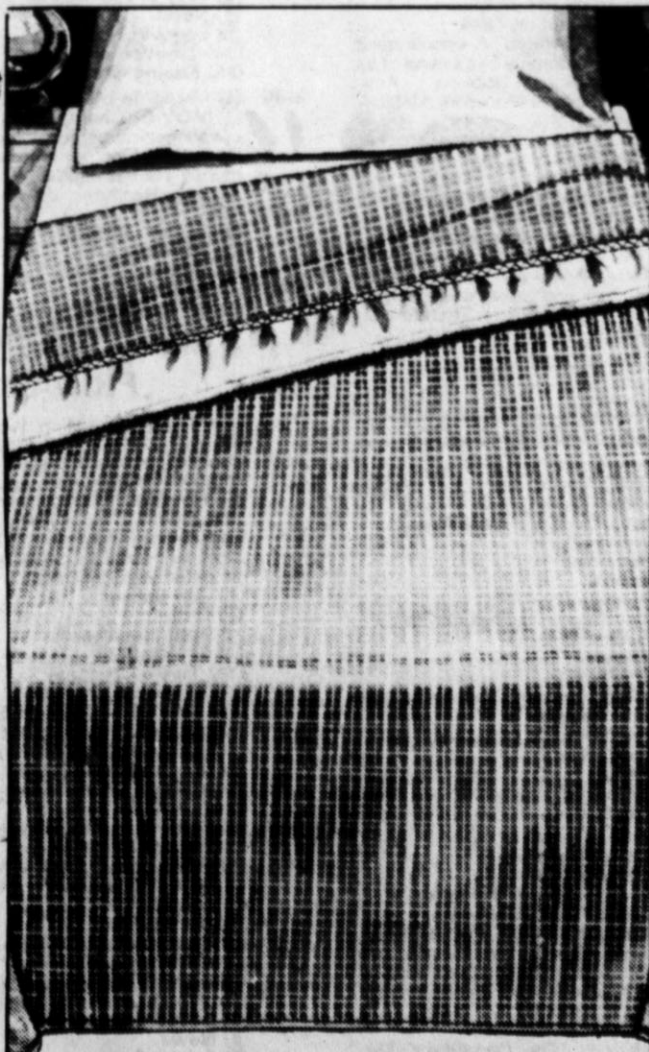

To the contrary, many observers described them as positive news, signaling that the dangers of too much expansion at too fast a clip were receding.

But now, well, the nasty word "recession" has started to creep into conversations in financial circles as business and investment managers try to assess the outlook for year-end 1984 and the first half of 1985.

A big rise in the leading indicators isn't expected, and wouldn't be widely welcomed. On the other hand, many people seem to think, it would be nice if the index held steady or moved up just a bit, to keep the specter of a serious slowdown at a respectable distance.

As a gauge of the economy's future behavior, the index has its detractors as well as its adherents. Almost everyone agrees it is something less than perfectly precise.

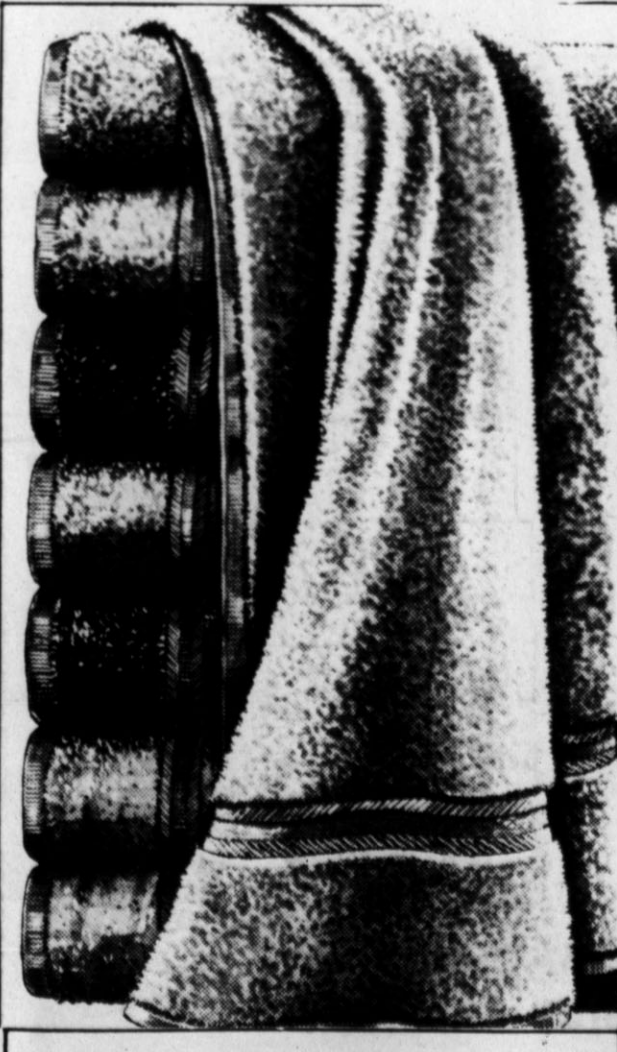

The initial figure for any given month is, like a lot of other economic data, subject to substantial revision later on. The drop in June, for instance, was originally put at 0.9 percent, and subsequently adjusted to 1.3 percent.

DA accused of forcing aide to quit

AUSTIN (AP) — Joe Dale Morris, a former investigator for the Travis County district attorney, has accused District Attorney Ronnie Earle of violating the state whistle blower statute by forcing him to quit.

Morris, who resigned Tuesday, prompted a federal investigation in August into accusations that members of Earle's staff conducted illegal surveillance of his conversations, the Austin American-Statesman said Thursday.

No evidence of a crime was found, and the investigation has been closed by federal authorities, the American-Statesman said.

Steve McCleery, executive assistant district attorney, said Morris' problems with the office began before the federal investigation. McCleery said Morris' conduct led to problems that culminated in his resignation.

Morris, who in his resignation letter said only that he "became involved as a witness" in the investigation, could not be reached for comment on whether he intends to file suit.

The whistle blower law prohibits state or local government agencies from terminating or discriminating against an employee "who reports a violation of the law... if the employee report is made in good faith."

The law allows the employee to sue for damages, re-instatement to his job, and back pay. It also allows the Texas attorney general to sue for up to $1,000 in civil damages.

A copy of Morris' four-page resignation letter was sent to Attorney General Jim Mattox.

Dave Richards, executive assistant attorney general for Mattox, said Wednesday, "We haven't resolved what action, if any, we would take."

He said state attorneys have not yet talked to Morris.

Mattox was indicted last year on a commercial bribery charge by a Travis County grand jury. He has criticized Earle for the indictment, and plans to fight the charge in a trial early next year.

Morris was having problems with his supervisors for almost three months before he was ordered in September to submit to a psychological evaluation. He responded that he would arrange for an evaluation by a doctor of his, rather than Earle's, choosing.

Earle suspended Morris' commission as a certified peace officer Sept. 17.

McCleery said the suspension of Morris' commission kept him from carrying a gun on duty, but would not have prevented him from being an investigator.

Morris said in his letter that the lifting of the certification "directly resulted from my cooperation with the federal and state authorities in the investigation of your office."

Peaceful atmosphere disturbed

Iran tribunal resort to fists

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — An unprecedented physical attack on a Swedish judge by two Iranian judges has disturbed the peaceful atmosphere at the U.S.-Iran Claims Tribunal.

The tribunal, where international jurists weigh American financial claims arising from the 1979 Iranian revolution, is the only place in the world where the two nations have regular diplomatic dealings.

The attack against Nils Mangard, a 69-year-old Swedish judge, has forced the suspension of all arbitration proceedings at the tribunal, spawned a U.S. move to fire the Iranians and put the tribunal's future in jeopardy.

The Iranians, both in their 40s, apparently decided Mangard wasn't neutral enough.

As tribunal President, Gunnar Lagergren put it in his suspension order, "A situation exists in which the conduct of arbitration in an appropriate manner is for the time being not feasible."

The setting for the melee was the usually tranquil tribunal headquarters, where jurists of international repute painstakingly arbitrate billions of dollars of American financial claims against the Tehran government.

Security at the three-year-old tribunal is heavy, with surveillance cameras, metal detectors, electric doors and guard posts — most of it demanded by the Iranian delegation, which reportedly fears terrorist attacks.

However, no one expected an attack from the judges themselves.

Relations have generally been cordial between the Iranians and Americans at the tribunal. The two nations broke off formal diplomatic relations after the 1979 hostage seizure at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran. The tribunal was set up as a result of the Algiers Accords of 1981, under which the hostages were released.

But on the morning of Sept. 3, as the nine tribunal judges — three Americans, three Iranians and three neutral judges — were entering a plenary session, the assault took place.

Iranian Judges Mahmoud Kashani and Shafei Shafeiei, who claim Mangard favors the American cause and have unsuccessfully sought his dismissal, pounced on the courtly and bespectacled Mangard.

Kashani grabbed Mangard's necktie and dragged him toward the building entrance, while Shafeiei punched him in the back, according to an official U.S. government account obtained by The Associated Press.

The U.S. government representative at the tribunal, John Crook, joined several Iranian attorneys and staff members in pushing the assailants away from Mangard, who was hustled into the tribunal switchboard room. Other diplomats, including Deputy U.S. Representative Dan Price, stood guard.

Hague police, who are not permitted to enter the diplomatic property uninvited, were called and Mangard left his refuge, only to be punched again by Shafeiei, according to the U.S. memorandum. Price intercepted some of the punches meant for Mangard, who finally left the building.

Details of the incident were independently corroborated by other court sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified.

Kashani and Shafeiei shouted they would repeat their attack if Mangard ever entered the building again, according to the U.S. memorandum, filed with Christian Moons, chief justice of the Dutch Supreme Court.

Moons has the power of judicial appointment and dismissal at the tribunal, but said he would ask to be withdrawn from the case.

He has had run-ins with Kashani in the past over his judicial appointments, "so I think it would be better if someone else handled this challenge," Moons said.

Mangard, who said he was "lucky" not to be injured in the attack, has stayed away from the tribunal on Lagergren's orders.

Meanwhile, his attackers are at the tribunal daily, a development Mangard said he found "a bit ironical."

"I have been willing to return to work as soon as my Iranian colleagues have made their apologies and given assurances that this is not repeated," he said.

Kashani, reportedly the instigator of the assault, and Shafeiei have refused to apologize. Kashani has said Mangard would be able to return only under American protection.

The Iranian government's representative at the tribunal, Mahmoud Eshragh, considered a moderate at the tribunal, has said the Iranian judges are independent. "We don't interfere in tribunal affairs," he said.

But, in a recent letter to Crook, he claimed that the United States bears responsibility for the attack, because it ignored previous Iranian complaints of Mangard's partiality.

Student orchestras a favorite of conductor

DENTON, Texas (AP) — What worries does a French conductor have about moving to Texas to take over a student orchestra program?

Serge Zehnacker, new symphony orchestra conductor at North Texas State University, who has just moved to Denton from France, asks, "Do you eventually get used to this heat?"

Zehnacker's home is Mulhouse, France, on a plain about 20 miles from mountains. But he has handled the late-summer Texas heat and a new position with characteristic aplomb.

"I am a very practical man," he said, "I have conducted for years and each conductor does the same job — to correct what we think should be improved and to make music. You don't have anything in mind when you start. You have to deal with the group. I am a practical person."

Zehnacker, who has worked both with professional and student orchestras, says he is looking forward to working with the NTSU Symphony Orchestra.

"Music is more than a job," he said. "Working as a conductor with young people is, in some ways, easier than working with professionals, because students are enthusiastic people, but also very demanding — often more than professional musicians."

"This is a difference between conducting professional orchestras and student orchestras. I have conducted mainly professional orchestras, but student orchestras, too. There is a different approach to music. Students are willing to improve and to learn," he said.

Zehnacker's first public performance with the NTSU Symphony Orchestra will be the annual Pops Concert, which traditionally begins the symphony season in Denton. It is set this year for Oct. 4.

The program includes Offenbach's "Orpheus and the Underworld," Bizet's "Carmen Suite No.1," Rossini's "The Thieving Magpie (Gazza ladra)," J. Strauss's "Perpetuum Mobile," and "Der Flidermoss."

"I hope the program will be good, easy to listen to. As often is the case in classical music, what is easy to listen to is very difficult to play. One purpose (in choosing difficult pieces) is that it puts everybody in good shape with technically difficult pieces," he said.

Among Zehnacker's professional experience is a directorial stint, from 1968 to 1975, with the Mulhouse regional orchestra, one of several state supported orchestras created by the French Ministry of Culture.

"Regional orchestras are recent in France," he said. "They started about 15 years ago under Minister Andre Malraux, who was appointed to try to develop musical life in France. So he created what is called The Plan for symphonies, for opera, for ballet. In the framework of this plan, he created around 15 symphonies and 15 chamber orchestras. This was the start. Most (orchestras) couldn't live without state or community help. I have experience now with both systems (state-supported and privately supported) and my feeling is there are bad things in both systems."

Zehnacker is particularly impressed with the extent and amount of promotion American orchestras receive, a light concern in France where orchestras are not dependent on ticket sales for survival.

Zehnacker said he plans to continue all the established programs in the NTSU symphony program, including the Pops Concert, the Monday matinee performances prior to the formal concerts and the Grand Viennese ball. He also plans to make music.

"I like to perform. Music is difficult and (doing) what is difficult is the best way for improvement. What interests me is not (necessarily) to teach — simply to make music. The act of teaching itself doesn't bring any satisfaction, although you learn every day. I want to make a good performance, to try to get the musical level as high as possible. Then," he said, "I am satisfied."

Department store ad draws foe's objection

AUSTIN (AP) — State Sen. Bob Vale says he saw "blatant" politics when he came across a newspaper advertisement featuring his opponent modeling a skirt and blouse for a San Antonio department store.

But candidate Cyndi Taylor Krier's campaign manager says Vale is "uninformed" and that Ms. Krier wouldn't object to Vale doing department-store modeling.

"It was not a political ad," June Deason said. "Joske's chose five women they considered to be outstanding women achievers. Ms. Krier was one of them. It had nothing to do with politics on our part or on Joske's part."

She added with a laugh that "if (Vale) wishes to model a pair of slacks, or a dress for that matter, we have no problems with that."

Vale, D-San Antonio, is not laughing. He said Wednesday he will show the Tuesday newspaper advertisement to state election officials.

"I was very surprised to see it," he said of the almost full-page ad. "It looks like nothing else but a blatant violation of election campaign laws."

The ad was part of Joske's "Achievers" series, a collection of ads honoring San Antonio women. Robert Mettler, store president, says no politics was intended.

The copy next to the large picture of Ms. Krier said, "We commend Cyndi Taylor Krier, attorney at law. Excellence is Cyndi Krier's trademark."

That is followed by about 30 lines recounting Ms. Krier's career. There is no mention of her candidacy for the state Senate. Nevertheless, Vale contends it's a political ad that should have been labeled as such.

The last lines about Ms. Krier said, "Because looking

In Wednesday's San Antonio Light, a similar Joske's ad featured Amy Freeman Lee, president and chairman of the board of trustees of Incarnate Word College in San Antonio.

An attorney in the elections division of the Secretary of State's Office said the Krier ad probably does not violate any state law.

"Unless there's something in that ad showing the store is in favor of or opposed to that person, it might be hard to call it a political ad," said Martha Martinez. "Especially if there is no indication she is running for office or that Joske's is supporting her."

"It sounds more like a modeling ad," she said.

Texas attorney general pushes child support

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — It's time to stop making heroes out of absent parents who fail to make child support payments, Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox says.

"For far too long, the figure of the father behind on his support payments has been a comical, sometimes even heroic character in American popular culture," Mattox said in a speech Wednesday.

He spoke at a conference for child support enforcement workers from Louisiana, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Texas.

"Country and western songs like Jerry Reed's 'She Got the Goldmine; I Got the Shaft' and Roger Miller's 'Dang Me (They Ought to Take a Rope and Hang Me)' have glorified irresponsible fathers and contributed greatly to the present problematic public attitude," Mattox said.

"We have got to make it socially unacceptable for absent parents to abandon their children," he said.

Mattox, himself the product of a "broken home," called the failure of parents to pay child support a "national disgrace." He predicted that in the next 10 years, at least one-third of the children in America will be on welfare before they are 18 if present child-support payment trends continue.

"That's 21 million children," Mattox said. "It is immoral for American fathers to shirk their duty and leave 21 million children to be supported by American taxpayers."

The attorney general said he grew up "in what used to be called a broken home," but he added, "I was one of the lucky ones. My father always paid his child support."

"Depriving children of nourishment, of clothing, of medical attention and of educational opportunities is just as abusive as physical abuse and just as much a crime," Mattox said.

He noted that 53 percent of all children owed court-ordered child support do not receive the full amount and more than half of those receive nothing.

"American parents, mostly fathers, are cheating their children out of $4 billion each and every year," he said.

Mattox said since his office took over child support enforcement in Texas in September 1983, collections have increased by 40.59 percent, up from $18 million to $25.3 million.

"If we don't at the very least provide for our children, we will lose their souls and the soul of the nation," he said.
