Friendship fostered over ocean, 20 years

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

A chance meeting on a train between Brussels, Belgium, and Amsterdam, Holland, more than 20 years ago began a chain of events that brought a Belgian family to Hereford last week.

Jack and Irene McKinster of Hereford were hosts for a visit by Francois and May DeWinter and their children, 11-year-old Rietje, and Bertje, four.

The Belgian family came here with Peggy Jensen of El Reno, Okla. Mrs. Jensen and her late husband, Leonard Jensen, met Francois DeWinter and his father on the train on April 8, 1971.

Peggy Jensen is Jack McKinster's sister.

The friendship that began on the train in Europe has evolved into a "family relationship," said DeWinter.

Trips back and forth across the Atlantic Ocean cemented the relationship to the extent that Leonard Jensen was best man when Francois and May were married on Aug. 26, 1978.

And, the DeWinter children have American middle names, Rietje Peggy and Bertje Leonard.

The family lives in a town of about 8,000 population, Begijnendijk. The nearest city is Leuven, where DeWinter works as post office union representative for 157 offices.

A post office in Belgium is more than the name implies, DeWinter explained. Banking services, such as checking accounts and loans, are available in post offices, he said.

Postmen are more than letter carriers, too, he said. Persons who cannot do some things for themselves, such as going out to get medicine or other needed items, place a notice in their window and the postman helps out.

DeWinter, now 37, first came to the U.S., to visit the DeWinters, with his father. Then, he and his bride came in 1979 and his parents and brother were visitors to Oklahoma in 1980.

But, this latest trip is the first for Francois and May with their children.

"It was the children's first trip in an airplane," DeWinter said, adding that it was a "good flight."

Although DeWinter met the McKinsters on the 1975 trip, they went to Houston and Dallas.

The visit here last week was the first to Hereford and their time was spent looking at agricultural sights of Deaf Smith County, going to feedyards, cotton and sugar beet fields and touring Arrowhead Mills.

The DeWinters said there is nothing in their country to compare with a feedyard.

"A farmer may have 20 cows, but they are for milk," DeWinter said.

They were astonished at the size of the agricultural fields.

"Farmers grow mostly vegetables and some grain," he continued. And, yes, he confirmed that in Belgium, they grow Brussels sprouts.

"Of course they do -- that's where Brussels sprouts started," laughed DeWinter.

Agricultural producers do not have the land that American farmers have for growing crops, DeWinter said.

Homeland buys Furr's store here

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

The end of an era will soon be coming to Hereford.

There will no longer be a Furr's supermarket in the city by early September.

Furr's Inc. officials in Lubbock said Friday that Homeland Stores, Inc., of Oklahoma City has agreed to purchase the Furr's Supermarket in Hereford, along with Furr's in Canyon and three stores in Amarillo, including a conventional Furr's Supermarket and two Furr's Emporiums.

The stores have been part of a concentrated effort by Furr's officials to sell the stores. Homeland was courted along with other chains and other potential buyers in recent months.

The stores in Hereford, Canyon and Amarillo were part of a group of 35 stores that were spun off from the Supermarket Development Corporation earlier this year. A management-led group bought out about 70 stores located in other parts of Texas and New Mexico. The stores in Hereford and elsewhere in the Panhandle and other points remained part of the group headquartered in Lubbock.

Homeland was established several years ago, and many Homeland stores in Texas and Oklahoma were original part of the Safeway chain, which is now headquartered in Oakland, Calif.

With the sale, Furr's will end its presence of almost 70 years in the Hereford and Amarillo areas. The Furr Family sold the stores to SDC, a group of mostly German investors, several years ago.

Furr's officials were happy with the agreement, which should be consummated in the next 30 days.

"This sale will benefit both Furr's and Homeland," said Bill Lang, president and chief financial officer of Furr's Inc. "We are taking steps to assure a smooth transition with as much protection to the employees involved as is possible."

The Bicycle Patrol

Hereford police using unique bike patrol for better public contact

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

It was just after 1 a.m. on a recent Sunday. We had forgotten about a stereo unit we had left in the church parlor. Rather than risk something happening to it, we decided to go back and get it.

We were almost to the door with the stereo and speakers when we heard the Thump! Thump! Thump! on the door.

I cautiously opened it. There stood Hereford Police officers Tim Travis and Armando Alaniz.

I was taken by surprise because they were dressed in black t-shirts (plainly marked "POLICE") and shorts. They were each astride a bicycle.

"What are you guys up to?"

"We were going to ask you the same thing," Travis said.

I explained what I was doing, then asked them about the bicycles.

It's quite a story, and a new wrinkle in the Hereford Police Department's efforts to not just fight crime but make the officers more accessible to the public.

"It gets the officers down on the level of the public," said Capt. Pat Michael. "It's hard for the public to relate to officers riding by in a patrol car, but when they come riding up to you on a bicycle, you can visit with them and relate to them better than you could before."

Michael explained that the bicycle patrol began during the 1990 football season, when there was a rash of vandalism -- mostly tire slashing -- around Whiteface Stadium.

"It's amazing how much more you can see riding through there on a bicycle than in a patrol car," Travis, who, like Alaniz, volunteers for the patrol, said. "We came right up on a lot of people in the parking lot drinking and doing other things they shouldn't be doing out there."

"It's so congested you can't really see anything riding in a patrol car through there," Michael said. "They were highly mobile on the bicycles and the program was a huge success there. You can slip up on someone so quietly and easily on the bikes. It freaked out the kids and made for quite a deterrent."

The bikes were put away for the winter and spring until another rash of vandalism, where several tractor water sprinklers were stolen and mailboxes were destroyed.

"We called up the bicycle boys again to see if they could cut down on the amount of vandalism on weekends," Michael said.

The program has worked surprisingly well. Not only have Alaniz and Travis helped curb vandalism, they have stopped burglaries in progress, cut down on public drinking, and scored brownie points for the police department.

"When people first see us they are real defensive, but when we tell them what we are doing they are real positive," Travis said. "A lot of times we're not out there to make arrests; we're just out there to make sure everyone is okay."

On the bicycles, Travis and Alaniz can zip across town fairly quickly.

"We can be checking on something in the northeast part of town and be checking on the kids parked on West Park in 10 minutes," Travis said. "And it's amazing the stuff you can see while being parked out pretty much in the open. People will run and hide if they're doing something wrong and they see a patrol car. But what are those two guys on bikes?"

They see you but they don't recognize you for what you are, then we're right there and it's too late."

Sometimes, the officers are there just in time. They were tooling down Irving St. last weekend when they saw a family get out of a car. One of the women in the group was crying, sobbing loudly.

"We knew something had to be terribly wrong," Travis said. The officers rode up to the family, asked a few questions and found out the woman had been assaulted by her husband. They took a preliminary statement, called in a squad car (the officers have two-way radios and are armed at all times) and later arrested the woman's spouse for domestic violence assault.

"That's something else we never would have seen or heard from a patrol car," Travis said. "We would have just seen a family getting out of a car and going into a house."

Michael said the program is still being fine-tuned.

"We're just glad we have some officers who want to do this," the captain said. "If we didn't have volunteers, I don't think we would have the program. It's great for the department and for the public. It puts the officer on the same level with the offender, the person on the street, and that counts for a lot. We want to keep expanding the program and seeing how much more we can do with it."

City to appoint commissioner

A new commissioner for the at-large Place Five seat on the Hereford City Commission could be named Monday evening at the regular commission meeting.

An executive session to discuss a replacement for Terry Langehenig, who was named last week to serve as city attorney, is scheduled for the 7:30 p.m. meeting. The new commissioner must be named in open session.

A carryover from the last commission meeting will be discussion asked by two citizens about consumption of alcohol at the city-owned golf course.

The Rev. Ron Cook has requested a place on the agenda to talk about the matter. Another resident, Davis Ford, also asked to speak to the commission on the alcohol subject.

Among agenda items, also, are:

- Consideration of bids for concrete curbing at Dameron Park.
- Consideration of bids for paving on Kingwood Street.
- Public hearing on Texas Community Development Program grant submission.
- Adoption of third ordinance on improving portions of Kingwood.
- Consideration and adoption of rate schedules of Energas for City of Hereford.
- Adoption of agreement for city legal services with Langehenig.

New queen to be chosen

Two young Hereford ladies will compete for the title of Fiestas Patrias Queen in a special competition August 24 at 8 p.m. at San Jose Catholic Church in Hereford.

Teresa Castillo and Isabel Rodriguez will vie for the right to be the 38th Fiestas Patrias Queen.

Fiestas Patrias, on Sept. 16, marks the 181st anniversary of Mexico's cry for independence from Spain in 1810.

The queen will reign over special festivities planned for Sept. 14-15 in Hereford. Five out-of-town judges will hear the candidates' presentations on Mexican-American culture. Miss Castillo will deal with the past, present and future of Mexico's independence. Miss Rodriguez's presentation will be on the past, present and future of quinceaneras, a religious celebration commemorating one's 15th birthday.

Selection of the queen will be based on the young women's creativeness and skill in their multimedia presentations, knowledge of their culture and overall impression on the judges. The candidates were also required to raise funds which qualified them to compete. The money has been reserved in a scholarship account for Fiestas Patrias queens and other young women winning positions on the royal court. This year, $1,700 in scholarships will be awarded.

There is no charge for admission for the event, and the public is invited to attend.

Committee discusses Fiestas Patrias event

Virginia Artho, Teresa Munoz and Janie Alejandre discuss plans for the Fiestas Patrias Queen competition to be held August 24 at San Jose Catholic Church. Teresa Castillo and Isabel Rodriguez will compete for the title to succeed current Queen Rachel Alaniz.

DSGH board to meet Tuesday

The Deaf Smith County Hospital District board of directors will meet at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at Deaf Smith General Hospital.

The board will discuss the possibility of affiliating Deaf Smith General Hospital with either Lubbock Methodist Hospital or St. Mary's of the Plains hospital in Lubbock. The board's agenda also includes discussion of terms and employment of administrative staff.

The agenda calls for regular medical staff, operations and administrative reports, and an executive session.

PCS will hold distribution

Panhandle Community Services will hold a commodity distribution Thursday at 10:30 a.m. at the Deaf Smith County Bull Barn in Hereford.

Senior citizens may use the west door; all other persons should use the east door. The distribution will last until commodities are exhausted.

Police investigate mugging

A man was stabbed twice in a "mugging" which occurred at about midnight Friday near a convenience store at 15th and Ave. H in Hereford.

According to Hereford police, a black male approached Ronnie Soto, 22, of Hereford and asked him for a dollar. When Soto replied that he had no money, the suspect stabbed Soto twice, stole his wallet and fled the scene. Soto managed to walk to a friend's nearby house. The friend took him to Deaf Smith General Hospital where he was treated. He was then transferred to Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo, but was released later Saturday.

Police arrested a woman, 36, for theft of items from a store in the 100 block of Park and a woman, 17, for public intoxication.

Other reports on Friday included telephone harassment; family problems in the 400 block of Ave. B; six minor were cited for minor in possession of alcohol in the 600 block of Irving; theft of beer from a convenience store; assault in the 600 block of Grand; prowler in the 200 block of Ave. B; criminal mischief in the 100 block of Nueces, 500 block of 25 Mile Ave., 200 block of Ranger, 900 block of 13th and 300 block of Cherokee; burglary in the 600 block of Stanton, 400 block of Jowell and 900 block of Main; and burglary of a motor vehicle in the 900 block of Stanton.

Police are also investigating an assault on 13th St., where a person was assaulted by several persons. The man was struck in the head several times and was taken to Deaf Smith General Hospital, where he was treated and released.

Police issued 11 citations Friday and worked two minor accidents.

Crimestoppers offers reward

Deaf Smith County Crimestoppers is offering a reward of up to $300 for information leading to an arrest and indictment in the Crime of the Week.

Hereford police are investigating the felony criminal mischief which occurred sometime Tuesday night or Wednesday morning at Northwest Elementary School, at Moreman and Ranger, in Hereford. Over $6,100 worth of windows were shot out of the building.

If you have information on this or any other crime, call the Clue Line at 364-2583. If your information leads to an arrest and indictment, you will receive a reward of up to $300. You don't have to give your name; you may use a code name or number.

All final rewards are determined by the Crimestoppers board of directors.

Residents attend Camp Alphia

Nina and Lisa Reyna and Angie Pena pose with "Alphie," the camp mascot, at Camp Alphia this year. The daughters of Margie Pena of Hereford, they attended the special camp near Amarillo. Among other guests at the camp was Ruth Newsom of Hereford representing the Circle of Friends, a support group from the Don Harrington Cancer Center in Amarillo.

Docs with AIDS

Fears of infected doctors casts cloud over patients

MOUNT JOY, Pa. (AP) - That sunny Thursday in June had been one of those rare, perfect days for Kelly Wolgemuth. She had enjoyed the pool with her year-old son, and basked in the warmth of this "wonderful ball of joy" born through artificial insemination.

But the sunshine of the day quickly faded. Mrs. Wolgemuth recalled, not only for her, but also for more than 400 other women in central Pennsylvania.

Awaiting her when she returned home was a notice of a certified letter. She and her husband knew what it was even before he picked it up. They had heard the news on television. A resident who had cared for her at an infertility clinic was infected with the AIDS virus.

"There was just a terrible sinking feeling," she remembered. "I was scared."

More and more, patients are learning that in seeking treatment, they also were exposing themselves to health care workers infected with the AIDS virus. Sometimes, they learn only when the healer has died.

The revelations are widespread - in Harrisburg, Hershey and Pittsburgh, Pa.; from the Maryland Penitentiary to the college town of Morgantown, W.Va.; in California, Illinois, Michigan, Ohio, Wisconsin, New York, New Hampshire, Georgia, Florida and Texas.

The disclosures have spawned anger and anxiety and frustration and fear among patients, even though medical authorities assure them their chances of infection are very slim. Thousands of patients have dialed hospital hot lines and talked to counselors.

Is this an overreaction? The federal Centers for Disease Control says the only doctor-patient AIDS transmission cases it knows of are five infected patients of a Florida dentist.

But the revelations have shaken the sacred trust between patient and doctor, stirred debate over whether health care workers should be tested for AIDS, and nudged the government into proposed legislation and guidelines on such testing.

The U.S. Senate last month approved a measure that would jail AIDS-infected health care workers who perform risky treatments without telling patients they have the virus. The U.S. House hasn't taken up the measure.

At the same time, the CDC issued new guidelines recommending that doctors and dentists performing surgery or other invasive procedures voluntarily take AIDS tests and stop if they are infected.

An emergency room physician in New York state who practiced for six years after learning he had the AIDS virus was the first reported doctor to resign as a result of the new guidelines. Dr. Neal Rzepkowski of Dunkirk, N.Y., said none of the more than 4,000 patients he treated was infected.

The heated debate has raised even broader issues such as the right to privacy. Pennsylvania's AIDS confidentiality law, which prevents release of names of people infected with the AIDS virus, was tested last month for the first time since it was enacted last year. In what could be a precedent-setting decision, an appeals court ruled that "the scales tip in favor of the public health, regardless of the small potential for transmittal of the fatal virus" from doctor to patient.

The appeals court upheld release of the resident's AIDS information, and his name only on a limited basis to other physicians. His attorney, Bruce E. Cooper of Harrisburg,

Frederick the Great reburied on 205th anniversary of his death

POTSDAM, Germany (AP) - Ignoring protests over Frederick the Great's militarist legacy, German leaders and former royalty saluted the return of the Prussian king's remains for reburial Saturday at his summer palace.

The remains of the king and his father arrived in Potsdam by overnight train from southern Germany for ceremonies Saturday marking the 205th anniversary of Frederick's death.

About 50,000 people - some with signs saying "Bury militarism" and others carrying flags of old, imperialist Germany - lined the route as the coffins were taken by horse-drawn carriages from the rail station to Sanssouci Palace.

The remains of Frederick's father were reburied before politicians, Prussian monarchy descendants and other onlookers. Frederick was to be reburied at midnight (6 p.m. EDT), in accordance with the terms of his will.

The two monarchs were originally buried here in the 18th century. Moved for safety during World War II, their remains had ended up in a Hohenzollern castle in southern Germany.

Frederick died in 1786 and Prussian royalty has not had a throne since 1918. Prussia itself has not existed since the victorious World War II Allies, condemning its militarism, abolished it as a German state in 1947.

A national ceremony to re-inter Frederick and his father, Frederick Wilhelm I, has raised sharp debate. Critics used Chancellor Helmut Kohl's attendance at the reburial, as well as the presence of a military honor guard, to recall a solemn visit by Adolf Hitler to Potsdam in 1933.

The Nazi dictator had just taken power and paid his respects at the tomb of Frederick the Great.

Prior to German unification, Potsdam was in East Germany, whose toppled Communist rulers had long condemned Prussia for what it called its strident militarism.

In a recent interview, Kohl declared that German militarism will never rise again, and called the reburial a symbol of German unification.

"We are again a united people with a common responsibility for our history," Kohl said last week. "One way this can be symbolized is that the sarcophagus of Frederick the Great can be transported in state to the place laid down in his will."

Kohl was to attend both burials, but was not scheduled to speak.

Carriages drawn by four horses carried the coffins to the rococo palace that Frederick the Great built. Eight military officers stood as honor guard as the coffin was draped in the black-and-white Prussian flag under a black canopy.

"The opportunity will never come again to see the burial of a German king," said Kahlbohm Hauke, 23, who had come from Bremerhaven in northern Germany to see the spectacle.

But pacifist groups called for thousands of protesters to march to the palace.

Authorities said demonstrators could protest, but could not carry placards near where Frederick the Great's coffin was placed for viewing. About 1,500 police officers were mobilized.

Silent Star

PIQUA, Kan. (AP) - Buster Keaton, born here in 1896, became a leading screen comedian during the 1920s.

Starting in vaudeville with his parents' acrobatic act, Keaton became famous in Hollywood as a frozen-faced mime in such silent movies as "The Navigator" (1924) and "The General" (1927).

His sound film appearances included "Sunset Boulevard" and "Limelight," with Charlie Chaplin. Keaton died in 1966.

Beneath thick polar ice 500 miles north of the Arctic Circle, tropical gardens of coral, starfish and sea urchins thrive, says National Geographic.

About a dozen armed Hanafi Moslems invaded three buildings in Washington, D.C., in 1977, killing one person and taking more than 130 hostages. The siege ended two days later.

BR Rodeo set Sept. 1-2

The annual Cal Farley's Boys Ranch Rodeo is approaching at a gallop, with more than 200 young cowboys and cowgirls to compete over the Labor Day weekend.

The 47th annual event will be held Sept. 1-2 at the Ranch. In hopes of winning belt buckles or all-around honors, boys of all ages will be riding calves, bulls, broncs and steers.

Also competing for awards and recognition will be young cowgirls from the campuses of Gristown, USA at Whiteface and Borger. The girls will join the boys and area riding clubs in the grand entry each day. Gristown residents and Boys Ranch staff daughters will also participate in rodeo events.

Especially enjoyable will be this year's rodeo clowns, including eight boys who have worked hard to earn the position. A two-day seminar conducted by professional rodeo clown Dustin Brewer of Elk City, Okla., helped prepare the boys for the rigorous job of clowning. While gaining a knowledge of safety, the boys also acquired new antics to humor the rodeo fans.

Up to 10,000 people are expected to fill the rodeo grandstands, most of which are covered. Tickets for children (6-12) are $1; general admission is $2.50, and reserved bleacher seats are $3.50. Barbecue plates, prepared and served by the boys at noon each day, will be sold for $3.50. Rodeo action begins each day at 2:30 p.m.

The Boys Ranch Rodeo is the Panhandle's largest Labor Day weekend event and is the only rodeo of its kind in the nation. Reservations are available by calling 372-2341 or by writing PO Box 1890, Amarillo, 79174.

S.L. GARRISON

Garrison named to HSB board

Shirley L. Garrison, prominent Hereford agribusiness leader, was named a director of Hereford State Bank during a regular board meeting Thursday, it was announced Friday by Kenneth Murphy, chairman of the board of First Abilene Bankshares, and Craig Smith, president of HSB.

Garrison's diversified agribusiness operations include ownership and partnerships in Bar-G Feed Yard, grain elevators at Easter and Lazbuddie and First State Bank in Dimmitt. He formerly owned Garrison Seed and sold that company several years ago.

A graduate of Texas Tech University, Garrison served in the U.S. Army during World War II. He returned to the family cotton farm near Idalou in 1948, started farming in the Hart community in 1951, then bought land and moved his farming operations to Easter in 1954. He was a charter stockholder in Southwest Feedyard and was among the group helping to bring the sugar industry to Hereford.

Garrison is a former president of the Hereford Senior Citizens Association and led the group in a $500,000 expansion program at the Senior Citizen Center.

He and his wife, the former Mildred Welch, recently celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary. They have three children, five grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Although the land is flat, much like this area, there is one notable difference.

"We have lots of woods," he explained about the countryside.

DeWinter expects that his country will experience considerable economic growth in the very near future because Brussels will be the "capital" of the European Economic Community.

"They're preparing now for the staff of the European community," he said, building apartments and services that will be needed.

While in Hereford, the DeWinters enjoyed the mild temperatures brought along with rain by a cool front.

"The highest temperature we have in summer is 86 degrees," said May DeWinter.

Their American family in Oklahoma showed them how to celebrate a birthday in style.

May DeWinter's 37th birthday occurred on Aug. 8. The Jensen family entertained her with an American-style surprise party.

"They had this huge cake for her," DeWinter said, spreading his hands to indicate the size of the cake.

Asked if she blew out all the candles, Mrs. DeWinter said, "There was only one -- they didn't know how many there should be."

Rietje DeWinter will have a year's supply of items for the Belgian school equivalent of show and tell, her father said.

"We may have to buy another suitcase to take it all home," he said with a laugh. "But, she'll have lots of memories, too."

Neither of the DeWinter children speaks English although both parents are fluent in the language. Rietje soon will begin studying English in school.

But language was not barrier when they went to Palo Duro State Park for a performance of "Texas" while they visited here.

Both youngsters enjoyed the musical drama, especially the dancing, reported their parents.

They also were taken with American fast food restaurants, comparing them with the same "brand" at home.

"In one at home, it costs a dollar just to get mustard or mayonnaise for your hamburger," said Mrs. DeWinter.

While here, they were introduced to a Texas vegetable favorite that was a surprise.

"They said they never eat corn on the cob -- it's fed to animals," reported Mrs. McKinster. "But, they ate it and said they liked it."

The DeWinters' stop in Hereford afforded them the chance to see another state while in the U.S. this trip.

A drive to Clovis, N.M., one evening raised their tour to three states. DeWinter couldn't resist taking photographs and a video of the prime rib he ordered for dinner that evening.

"He said he'd never seen such a big piece of meat," Mrs. McKinster said.

But, the basic element of the Belgian family's trip to the U.S. was more important than all the sightseeing and traveling.

"We're seeing our family," said the DeWinters.

AIDS

characterized the disclosure as being made in a "climate of public hysteria which is totally unassociated with any medical or scientific facts."

Even as lawmakers debate the issue, what is believed to be an unprecedented class-action suit arising from the Pennsylvania case is taking a different tack: that of trying to force the hospitals to make testing mandatory as a requirement for practicing there.

Although Kelly Wolgemuth tested negative, she and her husband, Kirk, filed a class-action suit on behalf of the 400 patients and their families against the two hospitals where the resident worked - the Milton S. Hershey Medical Center and the Harrisburg Hospital. They seek more than $80,000 in damages from each hospital.

Deborah Saline, a spokeswoman for Hershey Medical Center, said, "We believe both hospitals acted in a responsible and appropriate manner."

Mrs. Wolgemuth, 28, said there have been "Kelly-bashing" letters to the editor in the local newspaper accusing her of filing the suit for the money because her husband is an attorney.

"I'm not in it for the money," she said. "It's the minimum you can put down to get a jury trial. I want people to realize that I could be anybody. I just don't want people to get those letters. My main thing is to wake up people, get them thinking. I didn't think much about it and I'm sure a lot of people don't either."

"If I could just say to them, 'Do you know if your doctor's OK?' Most people don't know and there's no way for them to find out because doctors do not have to tell you."

The Wolgemuths' attorney, William A. Atlee Jr., of nearby Lancaster, said he hopes the suit will force hospitals into mandatory testing for doctors instead of awaiting government action.

Atlee believes the suit is the first of its kind.

For some patients, the rhythm of their lives has changed. They and their children live in an uncertain time, hoping they are not that one person in 41,667 or one in 2.6 million, the range of odds of patient infection estimated by CDC statisticians.

Another patient, who asked that she not be identified, said such long odds and her initial negative test results do not ease all the concern. She will need three more tests in the next year. Her sex life has been disrupted. Her newborn baby, too small now for drawing blood, also will have to undergo a test when she is a year old.

"You can always be that one person, and until I know for sure, it's going to always be there," said the woman, who is in her 20s, has been married for almost seven years and has three children.

A counselor provided by Harrisburg Hospital wasn't much help because she took things too lightly, the woman said. And rather than use a condom for six months, as the hospital suggested, the woman and her husband decided to abstain from sex.

The woman, who has an attorney and is planning to file a lawsuit or join the Wolgemuth's class-action suit, said she cries a lot and has problems at her secretarial job.

"I'm a wreck," she said. "When I'm home, I can cry whenever I want. At work, I don't cry - but I shake. Unfortunately, I'm supposed to be able to enjoy this little bundle that I have. I do enjoy her, but it does take away some of the extra greatness."

The doctor has not been publicly identified because of Pennsylvania's confidentiality law, but a county court allowed Hershey Medical Center and Harrisburg Hospital to disclose his name to other doctors. Patients, however, were not given his name.

The physician, referred to in court papers as "Dr. Doe," took a voluntary leave of absence in May, and notifications were sent to patients June 19.

He testified at a closed hearing that he voluntarily was tested after an attending physician stuck him with a scalpel in his left ring finger while he was assisting in surgery. His attorney said there was no evidence that any patients had been exposed to infectious fluids.

Mrs. Wolgemuth said she tries not to think about the consequences.

"It's terrible," she repeats over and over, sobbing. "You trust your doctor. Some people, that's all they may have. It may be the one person they trust to inform them."

"There's going to be an awful lot of people out there who are not going to have nice lives," she added. "And they did nothing more than go to their doctor."

Crops tour is Thursday

Ten stops are scheduled Thursday on the annual Deaf Smith County Crops Tour, featuring food corn, irrigated and dryland sorghum, cotton and weed and insect control demonstrations.

Sponsored by the crops committee of the Deaf Smith County Extension Service and Texas Agricultural Extension Service, the tour begins with registration at 7:30 a.m. at the Hereford Community Center.

First stop on the tour will be at the Weldon Stephen farm, south of Hereford on FM 1055, for a look at an irrigated cotton demonstration. Another cotton variety demonstration will be seen at the Ronnie Andrews farm, also on FM 1055.

Next on the tour will be an irrigated cotton and preplant insecticide demonstration at the Miles Caudle farm, south of Hereford.

A corn herbicide demonstration will be the subject at the Joe Grotegut farm, northeast of Hereford, and in the same area, on the Chris Grotegut farm, irrigated grain sorghum demonstrations are on the schedule.

Next on the tour are white and yellow food corn demonstrations at the Roy Carlson farm, south of Milo Center. Then, a corn insect and weed control demonstration is scheduled at the Ronald Vasek farm, north of Hereford.

After lunch at the Jimmie and Kenneth Christie farm, north of Summerfield, the tour will look at Frito-Lay food corn variety trials at the Christie farm. Lunch will be served, courtesy of the Christies and Frito-Lay.

Dryland grain sorghum demonstrations at the Gerald Marnell and Mike Brumley farms, both west of Hereford, will conclude the day.

Tour participants who have private, commercial or non-commercial pesticide applicator certificates or license allowing them to apply restricted use pesticides may earn two continuing education units credit.

To qualify for the credits, participants must complete necessary forms at 7:30 a.m. and make required stops at the Caudle, Joe Grotegut, Vasek and Brumley farms. One-half unit will be given for each of the four stops.

Discussing the demonstrations during the tour will be Dr. Carl Patrick, Area Extension Entomologist, Dr. Brent Bean, Area Extension Agronomist, Dr. Clay Salisbury, assistant professor with TAES, and Dennis Newton, Deaf Smith County Agricultural Extension Agent.

A detailed schedule is available in the Deaf Smith County Extension Office, located in the county courthouse.

By Speedy Nieman

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says starting from scratch is easy but starting without scratch is tough.

Some people never hear opportunity knock because they're too busy knocking opportunity.--H. Chadwick

The Hereford City Commission does not have the golf-course alcohol consumption issue on its agenda Monday night, so no action will be taken on the matter. However, two citizens asked to be placed on the agenda to discuss the issue, so a few citizens still may decide to attend the session.

If you still don't understand the new school finance plan, don't feel lonely. There are bureaucrats down in Austin who are supposed to spell out the rules who still don't have a clue about some of the plan!

You may have seen the notices published in Friday's Brand which outlined the effective tax rates for Hereford and Walcott school districts. These notices included a new formula for local school districts to use in determining their part of the tax.

What it amounts to is that the newly-formed County Education District (CED) sets a tax rate to cover the "first tier" of education costs, and each local school district in the CED sets its rate. Hereford and Walcott were placed in one CED.

We're lucky in that regard. The CEDs were set up to equalize school spending, with the rich districts giving to the poor. HISD will wind up getting a few bucks from Walcott. How would you like to live in Seminole, where they have to send $14 million to Lubbock to be divided among a 7-county district?

The state has set the minimum rate of 72 cents per $100 valuation for the CEDs. HISD has an effective rate of 92.5 cents this year, which means that rate would bring in the same total taxes as last year if you compare the tax base for both years. Last year's rate was 91.43, but the property tax base decreased a little.

If no tax increase was needed, that would mean 72 cents for the CED and 20.5 cents for HISD, or a county school tax total of 92.5 cents. However, HISD will probably need an increase and that tax notice in the paper showed that the district can go to a maximum of 31.81 cents without a rollback election. That makes a maximum of $1.03.

Walcott has an effective tax rate of 78.45 cents, compared to last year's 78 cents. That leaves them just 6.45 cents if the CED takes 72. However, under the new formula, Walcott has a rollback rate of 17.45 cents.

The tax rates won't be determined until sometime next week or later in the month. The CED must learn exactly how much state funding will be provided, and determine its exemption policies. If the CED goes with more exemptions than presently given, the CED rate could rise by four cents or more over the 72-cent figure. That would then alter the rate available to the local district (HISD or Walcott).

The new plan, the way the 188 CEDs were put together, and the confusing elections were put together by a Legislature that seems to be dreaming up new ways of getting our tax dollars!

We liked the "Old Texas" plan put forth by State Rep. David Swinford of Dumas. He filed a bill to create a new state out of 26 counties in the Texas Panhandle. But, even if the bill got out of committee, it wouldn't work...well, not just with 26 counties.

Some of our friends down south are already wanting to expand the Old Texas at least on down through the South Plains and the oil-rich Permian Basin areas!

Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock may think the idea is an "embarrassment" to the state, but he needs to get out of Austin and listen to someone who works for a living. Bullock ran an efficient office as comptroller, but now he's joined his liberal Democrat buddies in thinking up all the good things they can do with our money--right after they have their salaries and pension plans in tip-top shape!

This is another good reason why voters should get together and force the issue of limited terms. We need our legislators to return home after two terms and face the reality of the laws they've passed. Bullock is already talking about the 27 percent increase in taxes and fees not being enough. The liberals are going to want more money to spend the next time around, and it may include a state income tax.

Swinford called his new state "Old Texas" because "we're not too proud of the taxes in the new Texas. The "New Texas" was a campaign theme used by Gov. Ann Richards.

We are finding out what the "new Texas" is--new ways of finding satisfying the needs and wants of various interest groups in state politics. The bureaucracy becomes more wealthy and the people of the state get poorer.

Personally, we like West Texas better as the name for a new state. Swinford may have filed the bill to make a point, but we think a lot of Texans could get serious about the idea. Texas still has the option of dividing into as many as five states. We probably couldn't get the votes for West Texas, but it might fly if we try for four states--North, East, South and West Texas.

Babbling Brooks

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

You read it here first! Devoted readers of "Babbling Brooks" knew, three months ago, not to be surprised if Amarillo were split into two Congressional districts, and sure enough, that is the plan that emerged from the Texas House.

Of course what did emerge is something of a mess. All of Potter County, including the part of Amarillo in Potter County, would remain in District 13 of Wild Bill Sarpalis. The part of Amarillo in Randall County would go to District 19 and Larry Combest, but the rest of Randall County would still be in Wild Bill's Bunch.

What the House passed is not final: there will likely be 31 plans submitted by state senators (one from each of them) over how to divvy up our congressmen.

If I were the people in the Randall County part of Amarillo, I would keep my mouth shut and silently jump up and down for joy.

I haven't always been one of Larry's biggest fans (and Larry knows that better than anyone), but, hey, Larry has handled himself, and his job, with aplomb for the past almost-seven years.

I'd betcha Larry probably doesn't even have a cellular phone, and if he does, he doesn't go around arranging dates on them.

And I would also bet Larry has never had a broken jaw.

One of the smartest ideas to come out of the mess in Austin in 1991 was Rep. David Swinford's (R-Dumas) idea to have the Panhandle separate from the rest of the state.

Swinford told a Tuesday news conference: For years the people of the Texas Panhandle have been sending their hard-earned tax dollars to Austin where big government has squandered every penny.

Like Swinford said, many residents of the Panhandle are tired of paying taxes for school finance reform, high premiums for workers' compensation insurance, and all of that other downstate rot.

How in Hades can we sit by while we are saddled with a $59.45 Billion state budget and a $2.2 Billion increase in taxes and fees. What are we running here, the federal government?

This is not the first time I have broached this idea in this space, but time has come to do something about it. Personally, I have nothing in common with the folks in Dallas or Diboll, Houston or Hempstead. We can forge a strong state, a strong alliance, with friends in Canyon and Canadian, Dimmitt and Darrouzett and Farwell and Follett.

Besides, we'd still be bigger than New Jersey.

after the election, with a new administration committed to arrange weapons shipments to Iran.

And, of course, there were weapons dealings, in what became the Iran-Contra scandal.

Sick, now an author and adjunct professor of Middle East politics at Columbia University, acknowledged he had no smoking gun to prove the case.

And any kind of firm, final conclusion will be elusive at best, and probably impossible. William J. Casey, the campaign manager, later CIA director, alleged to have been the go-between with Iran, died in 1987. The evidence of a deal is largely circumstantial; the credibility of people who claim to know pieces of the story is questionable.

Republicans have been pointing to that every since the renewed talk of an "October surprise" deal began. Rep. Robert H. Michel, the House Republican leader, says the investigation will waste money chasing 10-year-old rumors.

Michel also has said that he will insist investigators look into an arms for hostages deal that Carter tried to engineer himself, citing an account by Sick that the Democratic president had approved release of impounded military supplies in October 1980, to be delivered if the hostages were freed. Carter had used the hostage situation to political advantage earlier in the campaign, when he faced a challenge by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, reporting an apparent breakthrough just as the polls opened for two presidential primaries he won.

Reagan used the hostages as an issue, too, indirectly at first, overtly in the final weeks of the campaign, as his camp worried about an "October surprise" release that might turn things around for Carter. He said the long crisis was a humiliation and disgrace, and that Carter's foreign policy let it all happen.

A decade later, this October's surprise will come if Congress can investigate politics without debating politics.

An AP News Analysis

Hostage election issue

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) - While it carries political disclaimers, the congressional investigation of accusations that Ronald Reagan's 1980 campaign purposely prolonged the Iranian hostage crisis is bound to become a partisan battleground.

Presidential campaign politics is, after all, what the whole controversy is about. And while the campaign involved is old business, anything that raises doubt about Republican conduct that year is going to be an issue next year.

President Bush has said vehemently and repeatedly that he was neither involved in nor aware of any hostage dealings by the 1980 GOP campaign, and the Democratic leaders who commissioned the investigation have said they believe him.

Nevertheless, the charges involve the behavior of the campaign that made him vice president and put him on the path to the White House.

And it comes under formal investigation as both parties gear up for the campaign in which Bush will be seeking re-election.

It's not likely to remain a low-key inquiry, conducted offstage, even though Democratic leaders would prefer it that way, until and unless they come up with new, hard evidence of Republican campaign involvement.

An effort to manage the inquiry without public testimony, and possibly televised hearings, is going to risk cover-up complaints among liberals, rank-and-file House Democrats, and others, possibly including former hostages.

Pressure from those groups moved Speaker of the House Thomas S. Foley to order the investigation. Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., will head the special task force, which will be appointed next month. Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C., is to run the Senate inquiry as chairman of a foreign relations subcommittee on the Middle East.

Foley said he ordered the House inquiry with some reluctance; he'd delayed a formal investigation for three months, in favor of informal, preliminary checks. When he and Sen. George J. Mitchell, the majority leader, announced Monday that they were going ahead with the coordinated inquiries, the speaker insisted "it's not political in any way."

But the story of the "October surprise" that didn't happen is political in every way. It has been from the start, 11 years ago, when Reagan and his campaign lieutenants thought Jimmy Carter might still salvage his presidency by gaining the release of the 52 U.S. Embassy hostages in Iran just before the 1980 election.

The hostages weren't released until moments after the victorious Reagan had been inaugurated president in January, 1981. The sequence stirred suspicions that the Republican campaign had a hand in the timetable, and led to accusations that have been revived periodically ever since, neither substantiated nor disproved.

"We have no conclusive evidence of wrongdoing, but the seriousness of the allegations and the weight of circumstantial information compel an effort to establish the facts," Foley and Mitchell said.

This revival dates from an April 15 essay published by the New York Times in which Carter White House aide Gary Sick wrote that he now believes there was a secret hostage deal.

The alleged bargain involved delaying release of the hostages until

THE VOICE OF BUSINESS

PASSING THE BUCK TO BUSINESS

by Dr. Richard L. Lesher, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

WASHINGTON — Senate Democratic leaders have concocted a new national health care plan, and to absolutely no one's surprise it would pass the buck to business.

Without question, our nation faces a health care crisis of awesome proportions. Spending on health care rose to about $670 billion last year, or 12 percent of the gross national product. Our country spent more per capita than any other country on health care, yet the cost continues to rise much faster than the rate of inflation.

If all that weren't scary enough, more than 30 million Americans have no health insurance of any kind. Many of the uninsured are full-time employees of firms that simply cannot afford to provide them with health insurance.

Unfortunately, the plan offered by Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine, and Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., doesn't even address the root cause of this problem. Instead, it simply would require all businesses to either provide health insurance to employees, or pay a special tax that would probably amount to 7.5 to 8 percent of payroll. Revenues from that tax would be used to help fund a health insurance program for the uninsured.

Sometimes it seems as if our elected representatives are trapped in a time warp, unaware of the shifting economic pressures that have buffeted our nation for the past 20 years. They do not seem to realize that U.S. business is engaged in a desperate life and death struggle with foreign enterprises, many of which enjoy tremendous advantages in terms of size, financial resources and support of their governments.

There is a reason why many U.S. firms do not provide their employees with health insurance, or are slimming down their insurance plans. The reason is money. Businesses that are struggling to survive can scarcely afford extravagant health insurance premiums, especially in the depths of a recession.

Congress could just as well pass a law requiring business executives to jump over the moon. Many businesses simply cannot afford the cost of health insurance. If such a requirement is enacted, they will either shut their doors or lay off employees. Likewise, a surtax of 7.5 to 8 percent of payroll is sheer lunacy. Corporations already pay out 67 percent of revenues in employee compensation. For many, the surtax would be the straw that broke the camel's back.

What we really need is a serious legislative effort to deal with the root causes of our soaring medical costs — excess bureaucracy, redundant paperwork and excessive medical liability judgements that go mainly to enrich lawyers. To simply suggest a law requiring business to provide health insurance is a moral and intellectual cop-out.

Letter to the Editor

Dear editor,

I was really surprised when I read the Hereford Brand (August 6 issue) saying that our city commissioners were to vote on alcohol at the municipal golf course. I was also concerned about having a "beer garden" in the city park.

The city commissioners must be scraping the bottom of the barrel to come up with something like this. I would think that they could find a better place to consume alcohol than at the parks where we take our children, grandchildren and loved ones. There are plenty of hours in the day without having to take alcohol to these places.

If the commissioners approve this I think it should be open season on other places. Wouldn't it be something to have alcohol at football and basketball games, the Community Center, or city pool swimming parties?

We see the slogan, "If you drink, don't drive," on TV, radio and in newspapers. After playing golf or being in the park all day, drinking alcohol, should you drive home?

I see the yellow ribbons tied around the trees in our parks against drugs. Let's keep alcohol, which our children are taught is a drug, out of our city golf course and parks. I certainly agree with Davis Ford's comments. He stated that students use the golf course and that it would be a bad example. Also, you couldn't convince parents that it wouldn't be a bad example.

In closing I would like to thank Mayor Tom LeGate for the delay of amending Ordinance No. 785. Also I would like to thank Terry Langehennig for his opposition of amending this ordinance. I hope that Hereford residents will show an interest in their city and oppose amending this ordinance as well.

Sincerely and concerned,
Chester Harrison

Race redistricting

Nearly 30 years ago, the Federal Voting Rights Act was passed to insure that members of minorities were not excluded from the election process. That legislation, passed in 1965, insured that every person, no matter the color of their skin, would have a right to cast a ballot.

In the 1990 redistricting effort, that original purpose has been perverted to mean that minorities are guaranteed representation in Congress, the state legislature, city councils and other elected bodies. This racial gerrymandering has become an accepted practice as lawmakers and the courts redraw district lines.

Finally, some black leaders are becoming aware that such racial-gerrymandering is not in their best interests. By creating all minority districts, the redistricting plans concentrate all the minority votes in a handful of representatives. John Jacobs, president of the Urban League, says that by forcing blacks onto "a few electoral reservations," there "may be a hazard in not having any leverage outside the community that you control."

Limiting both the party and the race of candidates for office in selected districts also limits the amount of influence voters can have over their elected representatives. With very limited competition, party and minority organizations have the final say as to the selected nominee. The people have no choice in the matter.

Representative districts should be drawn to include shared geographic, economic and cultural interests—not to insure that a selected member of a minority organization or political party has a safe seat in each elected body.

Dalhart is a prohibition town, but notwithstanding that fact saloons, gambling houses and houses of ill fame have continued in operation. A wholesale raiding took place there last week and from the account of the affair in the Dalhart Sun, their different proprietors were given to understand in no certain terms that their presence in the town was not wanted and many of them have left. It is better to remain neutral than to try to block an enterprise, but it is far better to put your weight behind it and help push it to the front. Hereford has arrived at the point when a strong pull—together on the part of its citizens will push it to the front rank in point of size—it is already there in every other way.

22 play in YMCA tennis tourney

The Hereford and Vicinity YMCA held its Closed Tennis Tournament Thursday and Friday, and 22 players participated, YMCA director Weldon Knabe said.

"Closed" meant that only players from Hereford and its vicinity--including Dimmitt and Friona--could enter. None of the players who placed were from anywhere but Hereford, Knabe said.

Following are the results:

12-under girls singles Round robin play
1, Holly Weishaar, 4-0. 2, Amy Perrin, 3-1. 3, Jacque Bezner, 2-2.

Twins beat Eck, A's

By The Associated Press
The Twins and Athletics certainly will remember this one.

Oakland and Dennis Eckersley blew a 4-2 lead in the ninth inning Friday night and Minnesota came back for a 5-4 victory in the 12th inning when Chuck Knoblauch doubled, advanced on Kirby Puckett's infield hit and scored on Kent Hrbek's dribbler.

"This was a game we deserved to win," Oakland manager Tony La Russa said. "People must think we've won too much."

The Twins, who ended a three-game losing streak, extended their lead to 2 1/2 games over Chicago in the AL West and Oakland dropped five games back.

Oakland, which lost its fifth straight, fell five games back despite Jose Canseco's first multiple-homer game since Aug. 2, 1990.

Rick Aguilera (3-4) pitched a scoreless 12th for his first victory since June 16. Gene Nelson (1-4) was the loser.

the Blue Jays in the AL East as Tony Phillips homered and hit a go-ahead single in the eighth at Tiger Stadium.

John Cerutti (2-4) gave up six hits in eight-plus innings and Dan Gakeler got his first career save.

Travis Fryman hit a two-run single later in the eighth off Duane Ward. He relieved Jimmy Key (12-8), who gave up three runs and five hits in 7 1-3 innings.

Strawberry whips Astros

By The Associated Press

It was the show Hollywood had waited for all season.

And the frightening thing for the National League is that reruns could be coming soon to a ballpark near you.

Darryl Strawberry delivered a game-winning three-run homer in the 13th inning to beat the Astros 4-1 on Friday night after he tied it up five innings earlier.

It was Strawberry's 17th homer this year, and seventh against the Astros.

Since the All-Star break, Strawberry has stirred from an injury-induced slumber, hitting nine home runs and keeping the Dodgers, barely, in front.

This was the stuff Tinseltown dreamed of since Strawberry came over from the New York Mets last year.

"We've been waiting for him to get hot," manager Tom Lasorda said. "Hitters like him are hard to come by, but when they get hot, they're hot."

Strawberry's efforts boosted the team when the Dodgers' other leading man, Orel Hershiser, took himself out after one inning. Hershiser cited the effects of the flu and an inability to get his shoulder loose.

"He didn't feel good and he told me to get him out of there, so I did," Lasorda said. "There's no sense keeping him in there in these kind of conditions."

Kevin Gross (7-9), the Dodgers' sixth pitcher, finally got the victory with two scoreless innings.

Strawberry drove in the tying run with a bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the eighth off Al Osuna. Jim Corsi (0-5) gave up the homer.

"In that situation, I'm really not looking to hit a home run," Strawberry said. "I'm just looking for a pitch I can drive for a hit. The pitch happened to be up, and I just drove it pretty good."

In other games, it was Chicago 9, Philadelphia 1; Pittsburgh 8, New York 2; St. Louis 4, Montreal 2; Cincinnati 5, San Francisco 0; and Atlanta 3, San Diego 2.

In other games, Detroit beat Toronto 5-2, Seattle beat California 5-3, New York beat Chicago 6-5, Boston beat Kansas City 3-2, Milwaukee beat Baltimore 8-5 and Cleveland and Texas split a doubleheader with the Rangers winning 5-3 and losing 13-9.

Rangers 5, Indians 3
Indians 13, Rangers 9

Third baseman Dean Palmer committed a three-base error on Carlos Baerga's bases-loaded grounder in the seventh inning of the second game. Texas ended its five-game losing streak, winning the opener as Juan Gonzalez homered.

Jesse Orosco (2-0) got the victory in the second game and Mike Jeffcoat (5-3) was the loser. Albert Belle homered in each game, giving him 22.

In the opener at Cleveland, Kevin Brown (8-9) won for the first time since July 6, allowing three runs and seven hits in 7 1-3 innings. Jeff Russell got four outs for his 23rd save. Eric King (5-7) allowed 10 hits and four runs in 4 2-3 innings.

Cowboys meet Oilers to tune up for season

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer
HOUSTON (AP) - The Houston Oilers defense is limping toward the regular season to the sour tune of musical chairs.

The Dallas Cowboys are still trying to get their offense to hum.

The creaking counterparts will meet in an exhibition game Sunday night in the first of two appearances by Dallas in the Astrodome this season. The Cowboys pay a regular season visit Nov. 10. Oiler Coach Jack Pardee thought he'd solved his defensive line problems when he moved Pro-Bowl defensive tackle Ray Childress back to defensive end and put second year starlet Jeff Alm into Childress' tackle spot.

Two weeks before the regular season opener, the picture has changed. Alm is recovering from major knee surgery and Childress has a stress fracture in his right fibula, leaving the Oilers' rush toothless.

Big plays killed the Oilers and left them 0-2 in a 36-7 loss to Atlanta last week while the Cowboys' offense overheated in a 17-12 loss to the Los Angeles Raiders.

"We keep giving away easy bombs," Oilers defensive end William Fuller said. "I'm concerned. The coaches are concerned. Everyone is concerned. The salvaging thing is that there a lot of injuries and rookies. There's still optimism."

Houston's lack of rush allowed Atlanta's Chris Miller to throw four touchdown passes on the Oilers' secondary, which bent and then broke.

"A big play here or there might have been avoided if Ray had been in there," Fuller said. "But you have to let injured people recuperate and be ready for the season."

The Cowboys failed to score a touchdown against the Raiders, settling for four field goals from Ken Willis. They suffered from seven penalties.

Rookie mistakes will have to dwindle for the Cowboys to improve, Coach Jimmy Johnson said.

"We were playing so many young people that we're going to make mistakes," Johnson said. "We had a problem getting into the end zone. The errors we had are correctable."

Backup quarterbacks Cody Carlson of Houston and Cliff Stoudt of Dallas will be seeking redemption from poor performances.

Carlson, one week after showing mid-season polish in his first exhibition appearance, faltered against the Falcons.

Stoudt, who beat out popular Babe Laufenberg to back up Troy Aikman, got his chance to shine Monday night but couldn't get the Cowboy offense in the end zone against the Raiders.

"There are some of those passes I'd like to have back," Stoudt said. The Cowboys moved inside the Raiders' 20-yard line four times without getting a touchdown. "Cliff would look a lot better if he were working with the first unit," Johnson said.

Carlson knows the feeling. He completed 10 of 24 passes for 81 yards against Atlanta but had no consistency.

"I was there physically. It was more a mental and emotional problem," Carlson said.

Carlson worked out two days prior to the exhibition opener against San Diego and completed three touchdown passes, two to Tony Jones.

"Last week I came into the game after a holdout and all I had going was my concentration," Carlson said. "Last week as an offense we did well."

Atlanta out-passed the Oilers 333 to 164 yards.

Bills favored to win Super Bowl

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer
There's a tendency in Buffalo to think of the Bills as the 1990 NFL champions.

After all, goes the argument, the Bills were in position to beat the New York Giants in last year's title game. It's just the little matter of those six feet by which Scott Norwood's 47-yard field goal attempt sailed right.

Which creates a problem for this year's Bills. They could breeze into the Super Bowl 18-0, then lose the Super Bowl and the year would be ... One big bust.

Which, of course, is what Buffalo is trying to guard against.

"I've taken the position that we're not the favorites," says coach Marv Levy. "My position is simple. We're one of five or six teams in each conference that has the talent to win the Super Bowl this season."

That, of course, is a matter of CoachSpeak.

The Bills, 13-3 last year with two playoff wins before that 20-19 Super Bowl loss to the Giants, enter the season as THE heir apparent, the first AFC team in eight years to be a Super Bowl favorite.

Yes, Miami, 12-4 last year, will challenge in the division, starting with an opening day date at Rich Stadium. But Indianapolis and the New York Jets have outside shots at wild-cards at best and New England, 1-15 last year, can at best hope to have bottomed out.

So what must the Bills do?

One thing is to stop the running game. An inability to do that is the reason the explosive no-huddle offense held the ball for just 19 minutes in the Super Bowl last season. One possible solution is defensive end Reggie Rogers, the one-time No. 1 pick at Detroit who is back after two years out serving a prison term for negligent homicide and recovering from a broken neck sustained in the accident that killed three people.

The offense needs little help. It has one of the league's most experienced offensive lines, quarterback Jim Kelly and Thurman Thomas, the NFL's most elusive running back. Andre Reed and 35-year-old James Lofton are the wide receivers - Lofton as good last year as he was a decade ago.

The defense is built around Bruce Smith, the league's defensive MVP last year, and linebackers Shane Conlan, Cornelius Bennett and Darryl Talley.

The Dolphins remain explosive with Dan Marino, Mark Duper, Mark Clayton and now rookie Randal Hill at wide receiver. But more important, two outstanding rookies, Richmond Webb and Keith Sims, were added to the offensive line last year, helping protect Marino and produce a running game headed by Sammie Smith and Tony Paige.

Still, the Dolphins had trouble with physical teams - the Washington Redskins, the Los Angeles Raiders, the Giants - particularly on defense.

"For us to match up with Buffalo, we have to do a better job of rushing the passer and getting better play from the front of our defense," says coach Don Shula, who had the same problem the previous four years, his longest run ever out of the playoffs.

One reason was Jeff Cross, who opened the season with 10 sacks in 10 games, then got only 1 1/2 in the final six as teams double- and triple-teamed him. The Dolphins signed a group of Plan B linebackers, hoping to find one or two that could augment that.

The Indianapolis Colts found their quarterback last year in Jeff George, who even without much of a supporting cast looked like a rising star.

This year, they've got a cooperative and quiet Eric Dickerson, who held out last year, demanded to be traded and was finally suspended.

The New York Jets, who were 6-10 in Bruce Coslet's first year as coach, have problems similar to Indianapolis - good skill players, not enough bread and butter.

The quarterback will be Ken O'Brien with rookie Browning Nagle and second-year-man Troy Taylor in the wings; Freeman McNeil, Johnnie Hector and Blair Thomas are a good corps of running backs, and Al Toon and Rob Moore a dynamic receiving duo.

New England? The only way to go from 1-15 record and the off-the-field turmoil is up.

Sam Jankovich, the team's new president, and 61-year-old rookie coach Dick McPherson will provide stability. The last two drafts have been decent and more picks could come in if the Pats forsake the present and trade the likes of John Stephens and Andre Tippett.

Prediction: 1, Buffalo; 2, Miami; 3, Indianapolis; 4, New York Jets; 5, New England.

Oilers to edge Steelers in Central

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer
Is Bubby Brister a slow learner or Joe Walton a slow teacher?

In either case, it's taken until this season for Pittsburgh's quarterback and offensive coordinator to understand each other. Now the question is whether that harmony can pull the Steelers above the pack in the AFC Central.

"We know what we're doing now," says running back Merrill Hoge, one of many Pittsburgh offensive players thrown into a muddle last season when Walton installed his complicated new offense.

Last year, the Steelers were one of three 9-7 teams in the AFC Central - Cincinnati won the division and Houston earned a wild-card playoff berth, but the Steelers were left out of the playoffs in the tiebreakers.

The same three teams figure to battle it out again this season. Cleveland, which had been to three of the previous four AFC title games, fell to 3-13 last season and Bill Belichick, the defensive coordinator of the New York Giants' Super Bowl winners, has been brought in to resurrect the team.

In its second year under Jack Pardee, Houston's run-and-shoot may be more polished, not good news for secondaries around the league. Last season, Pardee's first, the Oilers led the league in yardage and scored 405 points, second only to Buffalo's 428, with Warren Moon throwing for a league-high 4,628 yards.

But the defense fell down.

"I'm proud of what our defense accomplished last year," says Jim Eddy, the defensive coordinator who put in the 4-3. "But we've got to get a lot better."

One change is moving Ray Childress, a two-time Pro Bowler, from tackle back to end, where he played in the 3-4. Another was a draft in which three of the first four picks were defensive backs, led by Indiana's Mike Dumas, taken with the first pick of the second round.

But the keys remain Moon and the offense for a team that's one of only two (San Francisco is the other) in the NFL to make the playoffs four years in a row.

If Houston is consistent - they never won or lost more than two in a row last season and have been either 10-6 or 9-7 the past four years - Cincinnati is schizophrenic, going from 4-11 in 1987 to 12-4 and the Super Bowl in 1988, then back to 8-8 in 1989.

Last year, its 9-7 and tiebreakers was good enough to win the division, but it was a streaky 9-7 - a 3-0 start and a 2-0 finish got the Bengals to the playoffs.

That may be a reflection of coach Sam Wyche, who can be distracted - as he was over the issue of women in his locker room last year. But it was also a reflection of injuries, particularly in the secondary, where cornerback Eric Thomas missed most of the year and strong safety David Fulcher missed three weeks and played hurt in the others.

The injury jinx has already struck - Ikey Woods reinjured his knee in training camp. But Boomer Esiason's sore shoulder seems better.

"You give him 30 throws, he'll make the big plays," says wide receiver Tim McGee, who with Eddie Brown, tight end Rodney Holman and running back James Brooks gives the Bengals a host of big play makers.

The defense? Linebacker Alfred Williams, the top draft choice, might have been a bookend with last year's No. 1, James Francis. But he was a holdout, retarding his development. If Thomas is fully recovered, the secondary is strong, but the line is just average.

Pittsburgh has few problems on defense - its secondary, headed by Rod Woodson, may be the best in the NFL. But despite their 9-7 record, the Steelers still had that problem scoring touchdowns.

One reason was the inconsistency of Brister.

But the Steelers came up with a future superstar in Eric Green, the 275-pound tight end who was an instant hit as a rookie after a long holdout. But the wide receivers are thin beyond Louis Lipps.

And then there's Cleveland, which collapsed under the weight of age and a succession of mediocre drafts last season. Enter the 38-year-old Belichick.

Belichick has no contender here.

There are a few good players, led by quarterback Bernie Kosar, defensive tackle Michael Dean Perry and wide receiver Webster Slaughter. But a leaky offensive line puts Kosar's health in jeopardy.

Prediction: 1, Oilers; 2, Steelers (wild-card) 3, Bengals; 4, Browns.

'Horns picked for return to Cotton Bowl

An AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
DALLAS (AP) - Picking the winner of the 1991 Southwest Conference football race might put a strain on the most sophisticated computer.
 Such a weighty problem might even blow out a fuse or cause a wire to smoke.
 Systems have gone down for hours over more mundane matters.
 The big problem is that most SWC teams have strengths that are offset by glaring weaknesses.
 There are six teams with legitimate chances to win the host berth in the Cotton Bowl and three - Arkansas, Texas Christian, and Southern Methodist - with enough talent to spring an upset on any given Saturday.

 Defending champion Texas is a good case in point for the good things-bad things theory.
 The Longhorns return a solid defense and a tremendous running back in Butch Hadnot.
 However, the Longhorns have a suspect offensive line, unproven wide receivers, and a questionable kicking game. There is also little depth at backup quarterback with the departure of Steve Clements.
 Houston, another big favorite, has record-smashing David Klingler but a young defense and could miss running back Chuck Weatherspoon, a 1,000-yard gainer.
 The Texas Aggies won't miss a beat at running back without

All-American Darren Lewis but the offensive line is unproven and if there're no blocks, there's no room to run.
 How about those Baylor Bears, who will have the toughest front seven in the SWC? The Bears have a green secondary and a questionable passing game.
 Rice, Texas Tech and Texas Christian have wide open, touchdown-producing offenses but their defenses are suspect.
 And so it goes.
 That gets us down to the best guess department and here we go.....
TEXAS - Despite all the Longhorns problems, they still have as much talent as any team in the league.

It's mandatory that senior quarterback Peter Gardere have a healthy season. If he goes down, you can turn out the lights in the Orange Tower.
HOUSTON - Klingler will likely be unstoppable but the question remains if the Cougars can stop anybody else. Houston has early road games with Illinois and Miami. Should the Cougars win those games, look out.
BAYLOR - Tough defense and a ball control offense. Grant Teaff is comfortable with that type of game and the Bears should be able to play it well.
TEXAS A&M - Watch out for A&M's newest running star, redshirt sophomore Greg Hill, an absolute speed burner who can break tackles. The Aggies have a highly questionable offensive line but their defense should be tough again.

TEXAS TECH - The Red Raiders will have a high octane offense but it's a new 3-4 defense that will have to keep coach Spike Dykes club from running on empty.
RICE - The Owls will be very dangerous behind classy running back Trevor Cobb and exciting wide receiver Eric Henley. But you win games on defense and Rice hasn't had a good one since the 1960s.
TEXAS CHRISTIAN - Leon Clay will give Horned Frog fans many magic moments with his passing but the real thrill will come if the defense can keep opponents from scoring three touchdowns a game.

SMU - Tom Rossley takes over from Forrest Gregg and the Mustangs will be exciting to watch. They might even win their first league game in three years. However, a less than big league defense will hurt them too many times.
ARKANSAS - The Razorbacks say goodbye to a league in which they were one of the charter members. They leave for the alleged greener pastures of the Southeastern Conference. After the beating they took last year, not much is expected to change in 1991. SWC teams will want to say goodbye in style to the piggies.

QB's Klingler, Detmer try for more records

By RICK WARNER
AP Football Writer
 One is tall and broad-shouldered, the other short and slender.
 One plays for a state school in a big city, the other for a Mormon university in a quiet community.
 One is a pocket passer, the other a shifty scrambler.
 But senior quarterbacks David Klingler of Houston and Ty Detmer of Brigham Young also have a lot in common.
 They're both soft-spoken Texans, preseason favorites for the Heisman Trophy and holders of dozens of NCAA records. In fact, by the end of the 1991 season, one or the other should hold virtually every major passing and total offense record in college football.
 "They're making my job a lot harder," said Jim Van Valkenburg, the NCAA's director of statistics. "We've got to create new categories just to keep up with them."
 Detmer broke 31 NCAA records last year, including most passing yards in a season (5,188), and became the first BYU player to win the Heisman Trophy. He needs only 426 more yards to become the NCAA's career passing leader, and has a chance to join Archie Griffin as the only two-time Heisman winner.
 "Winning two Heismans would be a great accomplishment, but I really haven't thought about it much," Detmer said. "This is a new year and a new team. A lot of things can happen."
 Klingler set or tied 33 NCAA marks in 1990, including single-season records for touchdown passes (54) and total offense (5,221). Picking up where Andre Ware left off, he led Houston to a 10-1 record and finished fifth in the Heisman balloting.
 Still, Klingler isn't satisfied. "I want to get better," he said. "I'd like to have a higher completion rate and fewer interceptions this season. This is only my second year as a starter, so there's plenty of room for improvement."
 Despite their amazing stats, or perhaps because of them, Klingler and Detmer have their skeptics.
 Detmer's detractors claim he has piled up huge numbers against inferior competition in the Western Athletic Conference, that he throws too many interceptions (28 last year) and that he can't throw the long ball.
 "When you're successful, people like to look for faults," Detmer said. "The criticism doesn't bother me. It just makes me work harder to prove they're wrong."

 Klingler's critics say Houston has run up the score against outmanned opposition and that any quarterback could shatter records in coach John Jenkins' futuristic run-and-shoot offense. As evidence, they point to Klingler's 11 TD passes last season against Eastern Washington, a Division I-AA school.
 Klingler thinks the Cougars are getting an unfair rap.
 "Our goal is to score every time we have the ball. I don't think we should have to apologize for that," he said. "The reason we keep passing the ball late in the game is because we're a passing team. You can't ask us to change our offense just because we've got a big lead."
 Although they were both high school stars in Texas, Klingler and Detmer have never met. But they've seen each other play on television and highlight films.
 "He's a great competitor," Klingler said of Detmer. "He always seems to come up with the big play when they need it."
 Detmer is reluctant to compare himself to the 6-foot-3, 210-pound Klingler, who is three inches taller and 25 pounds heavier than his BYU counterpart.
 "We've got different offenses and different teams, so it's not really fair to compare us," Detmer said. "But he sure does a great job with the run-and-shoot."
 Since winning the Heisman last December, Detmer's life has been as hectic as the run-and-shoot. He had shoulder surgery in January, converted to Mormonism in February, grieved over his grandfather's death in March and got married in July.
 "I've seen everything from the highs to the lows in the last year," he said. "I feel like I'm a stronger person mentally because of all the things that have happened to me."
 He's also physically stronger following an offseason weightlifting program that added 10 pounds of muscle to his slight frame.
 "I feel stronger," he said.

"Hopefully, it will help me when I get hit by all those big linemen."
 Detmer injured both shoulders in BYU's 65-14 loss to Texas A&M in the Holiday Bowl. The left shoulder healed on its own, but surgery was required on the throwing shoulder. A pin inserted into the right shoulder has now been removed, and Detmer says it feels as good as new.
 There aren't any questions about Klingler's health, especially after he passed for 1,900 yards and 13 touchdowns in a 3½-hour spring scrimmage. The only question is whether he can top last season's record-shattering season.
 "I think I can," he said. "Last year, I didn't feel comfortable early in the season. I'm used to the system now, so I should get off to a better start."
 Klingler is also hoping for a better finish. After being barred from postseason play for three years because of NCAA violations, the Cougars are once again eligible for a bowl bid.
 "I'd love to play in a bowl game, but it really doesn't affect the way we approach the season," Klingler said. "We still go out there and try to win every game. It doesn't matter if there's no TV cameras or nobody in the stands."

Youth leader staying for ever young

By DANEE' WILSON
Lifestyles Editor

Leaning on the solid rock and staying young forever are a couple of Tom Edwards' secrets of success that make his job the most rewarding career he has ever had.

Edwards, youth minister at Hereford Church of the Nazarene, has been helping teens and building a solid rock youth program at the church since his arrival in February.

"I love teens," said Edwards who came to Hereford from a city outside Los Angeles, Calif. "I want to get involved. I understand what these teens are going because I was a 'terrible teen' with the drugs and alcohol. I guess I still consider myself a teenager. I say I'm 33 going on 17."

The people of Hereford held a strong attraction for Edwards.

"The people in Hereford are some of the most loving, giving, caring people I have ever met.

"Moving here was quite an adjustment from California. There, the pace is much faster. Here, people like to stand around and talk. People wave and are interested enough to spend time with you."

Edwards was impressed with the pride the citizens of Hereford have in their community.

"I've never been anywhere where people are more proud in their state and town," he said. "In Colorado, Arizona and California (places Edwards has worked and lived) everyone is from somewhere else. Young people come back to Hereford."

Because Hereford is a small town, Edwards thinks the teens here are very creative.

"Teens here have very creative minds because there isn't a lot to do here. My house and car have seen proof of that. I think I have seen all the toilet paper, shoe polish and shaving cream I need for a while."

Edwards feels that today's teens are faced with drug and alcohol problems and are turning to the wrong places for answers to their problems.

"I want kids to know there is a place they can come to have fun," the concerned youth director said. "We always have a good time. I like to play games that involve dead fish," he joked.

Edwards keeps a busy schedule with trips, games, Bible studies and much more.

"On Tuesday, we all have lunch together. Wednesday night is games and on Thursday we meet for breakfast. We just got back from youth conference and we've been white water rafting and some other places.

The youth group has grown from around 30 to 70-85 regular members during Edwards tenure.

"I think the kids went through a rough time recently because of the frequent pastoral changes," he said. "We've recently bought a house and plan on staying for a while. I think that meant a lot to the kids."

One of Edwards greatest accomplishments since he took the position is the building of the Solid Rock Cafe, located at the upper floor in the gymnasium at the church.

The cafe, patterned after the famous Hard Rock Cafes, is a fully functioning cafe complete with t-shirts and caps. Members of the youth group keep the cafe, which is open to everyone, going strong. Although Edwards loves his work, it can be challenging, and rewarding. "I've been in a ministry were the kids were hurting," he said. "We had pregnant teens come in and be accepted by the group. We threw them showers and took care of their kids. We showed them that they weren't different. They were one of us. I want all kids to know that it doesn't matter who they look like or what they wear, they will always fit in here. Everyone who is searching for someone who cares and that can be found here.

"I'm very excited about the teens here and the commitments they've made. We had 67 teens make a commitment to stand up for Christ and what was right. I know I'll see great things out of the kids in this youth group."

During the fall, Edwards hopes to land a one hour Christian music program on KPAN.

"I've done a show on KPAN before and I hope we can do it again," said Edwards. "I have over 130 tapes and I hope to get the kids on the air with me to give them experience and something fun to do."

Edwards enjoys the challenge of his job and the latitude it gives him to be forever young.

"I can't imagine doing anything else. This is far and above the most rewarding thing I have ever done."

Coneway named page

CHAD CONEWAY

Chad Coneway, son of Capt. and Mrs. Clint Coneway and grandson of Mr. and Mrs. R. Paul Coneway, will be a U.S. Senate Page for the fall semester during the 1991-92 school year.

Coneway, who attends Coronado High School in Coronado, Calif., was selected by Senator George J. Mitchell of Maine.

A total of 4,500 high school students apply each semester for the 86 jobs available as Capitol pages, 66 on the House side and 20 on the Senate side.

Coneway will live in a dormitory on Capitol Hill and attend page school as a high school junior.

As a page, he will answer phone, deliver message, and take responsibility for documents during House and Senate debates.

The table fork was introduced into England in 1601.

Birdwell, Spell united Saturday

Leslie Ann Birdwell of Hereford and Michael Wayne Spell of Lubbock were married Saturday afternoon in First United Methodist Church of Hereford.

Pastor Joe Wood officiated the marriage.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Birdwell of Hereford and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Wayne Spell of Marietta, Ga.

The church altar was adorned with two fan candelabra containing ivy and white bows. The altar railing was decorated with ivy, votive candles and white bows. A large center floral arrangement was placed on the altar. Candles were placed in the stained glass windows and a white bow marked each pew.

Judy King of Norman, Okla. served her sister as matron of honor and Walter Surowiec of Fort Worth was best man.

Bridesmaids were the groom's sister, Patricia Russell of Lubbock, Allison Owen of Richardson, Leslie Albracht Scott of Lubbock and the bride's cousin, Teri Thompson of Amarillo.

Groomsmen were the groom's brother-in-law, Scott Russell of Lubbock, Adham Janbalot of Dallas, Rob Morris of Lubbock and John Luciew of Houston.

Guests were escorted by the bride's brother-in-law, Chris King of Norman, Okla. and Drue Gault of Lubbock.

Candle lighter was the bride's cousin, Kirk Thompson of Amarillo.

The bride's cousins, Peggy Bain, Jack Williams and Danny Williams were accompanied by Donna Bogan as they performed principal selections including "The Lords Prayer," "Wind Beneath My Wings," "Wedding Song," "Till," "Traditional Wedding March" and "Trumpets Voltaire."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a designer gown of white European taffeta fashioned with a sabrina neckline and eduridan sleeves. The princess style bodice was encrusted with pearls, jewels and crowned with clusters of jeweled flowers and molded medallions. The princess elongated waistline and full flowing satin skirt featured Venice lace medallions and crystallized hand beaded designs. The gown plunged to a low back centered with a designer bow and complemented with an all taffeta full length queens court cathedral train accented with European lace cutouts.

The finger tip illusion veil was attached to a headpiece of roses and pearl sprays with pearl sprays hanging on the sides.

She carried a silk arrangement of roses, stephanotis and ivy accented with lace and pearls.

The bride's jewelry consisted of pearl earrings.

Bridal attendants were attired in crimson red taffeta dresses featuring a portrait collar, pointed waist, and a bow in the back. The full flowing skirts were ballroom length. Each carried an arrangement of roses, ribbon and baby's breath.

Daphne Rosson invited guests to register at the reception held at fellowship hall in the church.

Cake, tea and coffee were served by the bride's aunt, Pam Thompson and Daphne Rosson. Others assisting were Helen Lee, Rose Mary Shook, Lois Lemons and Joanne Hairgrove.

The three-tiered white bride's cake, decorated with fresh flowers, was placed on a silver tray. A silver punch bowl, two silver candelabra, and fresh flowers accented the table.

The groom's German chocolate cake was centered on a table surrounded with finger sandwiches, fruit and nuts.

The couple left for a wedding trip touring the islands of Hawaii.

The bride is a 1986 graduate of Hereford High School. She is a graduate of Texas Tech University and a little sister of Sigma Nu Fraternity.

The groom is a 1985 graduate of Frankfurt American High School in Frankfurt, Germany. He is a member of Sigma Nu fraternity and manager of PMI Inc. He is a December candidate for graduation at Texas Tech University.

Rose Mary Shook, Helen Lee, Joanne Hairgrove and Lois Lemons hosted a bridesmaid luncheon Saturday morning.

Corn smut rapidly becomes delicacy

ALBANY, Ga. (AP) - It's repulsive-looking, and farmers call it corn smut. But when the fungus swells yellow corn kernels into a gray mass, Cristina Arnold sees a fortune in the rediscovery of an ancient delicacy.

Chefs and diners are taking a liking to corn smut, also known as "maize mushrooms" or "Mexican truffles." And interest is strong enough that agricultural scientists are seeking ways to cultivate it and a few farmers are adopting a new attitude toward something they once plowed under as nature's garbage.

"It is the ugly duckling of the mushroom kingdom," said Arnold, owner of El Aficionado in Arlington, Va., a food wholesaler specializing in Mexican fare. Her company annually supplies restaurants with 2,000 to 4,000 pounds of maize mushrooms.

"It has an element of texture, but it's a soft texture," Arnold said recently. "Like caviar or truffles, it is not particularly beautiful to look at. You don't consume it for its looks, you consume it for its taste. It has an earthy flavor, but it does taste somewhat like corn."

The Aztecs called it "cuitlacoche" (wee-LA-coo-chee). Wind-borne spores infect the corn and in about two weeks the kernels swell into a silvery-gray fungal mass.

Places serving maize mushrooms include the Plaza Hotel in New York, the New Heights restaurant in Washington, the Harbor Court Hotel in Baltimore and the Hyatt in San Antonio, Arnold said.

The fungus can be cooked up as the foundation for a dish or as a flavoring in food as diverse as meats, soups, sauces and even ice cream.

Rick Bayless, owner of the Frontera Grill in Chicago, uses cuitlacoche in a layered casserole with tortillas.

"A lot of the people who come here have great familiarity with Mexico. We don't serve it as something that's very exotic," he said.

Increasing interest in maize mushrooms prompted University of Georgia scientists to seek ways to promote growth of the fungus. They also want to find out whether corn smut is really pay dirt.

It seems to be. Farmers get mere pennies for a normal ear of corn, but $1 to $2 per pound for maize mushrooms - about two ears' worth, one researcher said.

Grady Thompson, who is raising 300 acres of corn this year on his Tift County farm, said corn smut is "a mess. It totally destroys the corn. I'd like to see it become an alternative crop that we could make money on."

Between the Covers

Our new books this week have some good reading for you to choose from! Our first title is Elmore Leonard's Maximum Bob. The novel is set in Palm Beach County, Florida. The novel opens with someone placing a live ten foot alligator in the backyard of a bigoted, redneck judge, Bob Gibs, who is known as "Maximum Bob." Not long after this episode shots are fired into the judge's house. It doesn't take much to figure out that someone is out to get the judge. The "suspect" list is long--there are many who want to see the end of "Maximum Bob." Could the "suspect" be: Dale Crowe, Junior who got an outrageous sentence for a minor crime; his uncle Elvin, a killer on parole, raring to go again; Dr. Timmy Vasco, a drugged-out former medical doctor; his equally bizarre friend Hector; and Dicky Campau, who makes a living poaching gator. Kathy Baker, a young probation officer, finds herself in the middle of all this. She has to avoid two seducers: the judge and a homicidal maniac and work with a young police officer who interests her for more than professional reasons. From an assortment of bad guys, sociopaths, and punks you must decide who's trying to kill the judge. Elmore Leonard's novel is pure entertainment. His writing portrays the lowlife that he hears and sees as only Leonard can write!

forward to being reacquainted after the war's long separation. Near their lodging is an ancient stone circle, similar to Stonehenge, that fascinates Claire. When Claire innocently touches a corner of one of the giant boulders, she is hurled backward in time more than two hundred years to 1743. The past is a very different country--a time beset with political unrest, ignorance and superstition, pestilence and disease abound. Claire is alone where no lady should be alone and the familiar comforts of her other life are far away and Claire's resourcefulness is tested to the limit. A merciless English garrison captain bears a striking resemblance to the husband she left behind. Her odd appearance and her even odder behavior expose her to accusations of witchcraft. Claire uses her training as a nurse to help heal the sick, her wit to foil those her brand her as a spy and her humor and courage to disarm any would-be captors. All of the perils of her new life are no comparison to her growing feelings for James Franser, a gallant young soldier she is forced to marry for her own protection. Jaime's wedding vow to keep Claire safe from harm goes beyond duty. Claire's emotions are far stronger and more real than anything she has ever experienced. She is forced to choose between the future she has left and the past she now inhabits.

This novel pits the might of the KGB against two dissent lovers and the treasure they guard against the backdrop of Stalin's Russia and today's London, Geneva and the rebellious Ukraine. The words from her dying Ukraine emigre father, leaves Lucy Warren with a relic and a mission. The relic is St. Vladimir's Cross, a jeweled artifact given to czar's at their coronation and hidden from the Bolsheviks because, whoever has the Cross has the right to rule Russia. Lucy's mission is to bring the Cross to a Ukrainian dissident leader in exile in Geneva and to convince him to return to Ukraine and use the relic as a catalyst for revolt against the Soviets. But Dimitri is not the dissident her father knew. He is an apathetic drunk made this way by the brainwashing of his wife, Irina, a psychiatrist and KGB agent. Lucy's intensity and beauty revives Dimitri's passionate spirit and their shared political fervor and they soon cannot ignore their mutual attraction to each other. Irina learns of Lucy's mission and budding romance with Dimitri and follows them to Lucy's home in the Channel Islands. Lucy and Dimitri prepare to sow the seeds of revolt in Russia as Irina closes in on them. Only the remarkable powers of the relic and save Lucy and Dimitri from death and the Soviet Union.

Sleeping with the Enemy is author-journalist, Suzanne Finstad's recreation of a bizarre tale of true love and true crime. Barbara Piotrowski is an all-American beauty queen and premed student. Richard Minns, a Texas millionaire and body-builder, is 14 years her senior. Their love seemed written in the stars. How could Richard Minns come to hire assassins to kill Barbara Piotrowski. Barbara was a straight-A high school whose goddess looks won her a string of beauty contests. A difficult period of rebellion followed a tragic brush with abduction and rape. Barbara began to experiment with drugs and almost died of an overdose. Sheer willpower lead her to get back on track and devote herself to her studies and athletics. Barbara met Richard Minns on a skiing vacation in Aspen and thus began her association with this self-made Texas tycoon and self-styled athletic superstar. In a whirlwind courtship, he made Barbara quit school and move to Texas with him. But what Richard forgot to tell Barbara was the fact he was already married to his college sweetheart--over 25 years of marriage. Dick's fantasy world came crashing down and he began lashing out like a caged animal. When Barbara tried to protect herself, Minns initiated a vicious plot to murder her. This is a tale of love, passion, obsession and murder.

2355 Days: a POW's Story is Spike Nasmyth's inspirational story of survival under the worst of conditions. The author spent 6 1/2 years as a POW in Hanoi. Over Hanoi a North Vietnamese missile shot down Nasmyth's Phantom out of the sky. Thus began a brutal imprisonment at the hands of his Communist captors. American pilots were considered war criminals rather than prisoners of war by their captors. As a POW you were routinely beaten, tortured, starved and kept alone in small, dark filthy cells. For those who needed medical treatment this third world nation had no doctors to spare for the hated Americans. The North Vietnamese guards demanded their prisoners "learn to think correctly" and confess their crimes. As a POW they lived with fear and uncertainty. How long would the war last? Could they survive that long? Would they ever make it home? Nasmyth tells his deeply personal story straight, without embellishments--a reminder of the high price that some citizens must pay to serve their country.

Diana Gabaldon's debut novel, Outlander, is a story that brings to life a heroine whose journey through time forces her to make an agonizing and fateful choice. In 1945 Claire Beauchamp Randall, a former British combat nurse, is on a holiday with her husband in Scotland. They are looking

YOUR EYES

STRABISMUS

Strabismus, or crossed eyes, is a disorder in which the eyes do not point in the same direction. The condition usually will not be outgrown, so if crossed eyes are suspected, the child should have an eye examination promptly and treatment should start as soon as possible. At best, the condition can be corrected before the youngster is six years old.

The problem is more than cosmetic. If crossed eyes are not corrected, the child -- in an attempt to avoid seeing a double image -- will suppress vision in the weaker eye; in time the eye is essentially unused.

If treatment starts early, the correction is usually permanent. One method of treatment is vision training, teaching the youngster to coordinate eye muscles. Glasses may be used to increase the chances of success. In most cases, all other methods will be attempted before surgery is suggested.

Wedding vows exchanged during outdoor ceremony

Wedding vows were spoken by Jan Leslie Carroll and Derrell Dewayne Page, both of Hereford, Saturday evening at the E.B. Black House.

Officiating at the ceremony was Dr. Ron Cook of First Baptist Church of Hereford.

The bride is the daughter of Buddy Pickens of Hereford and the late Betty Mannon. The bridegroom is the son of Mike Page of Hereford and Karen Page of Florida.

The outside gazebo was decorated with blue and mauve paper ribbon bows. Bows were placed on benches for family seating.

Wendy Schmucker of Canyon was matron of honor and Cody Page served his brother as best man.

Bridesmaid was Shelly McCracken of Hereford and groomsman was Pete Bowles of Canyon.

Flower girl was Paige Pickens, the bride's niece, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Pickens of Hereford and Geni Pickens of Oklahoma.

Natalie and Krystal Sims, both of Hereford, sang "Battle Hymn of Love." A tape of "The Very First Lasting Love" was also played.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a candlelight satin tea-length gown with lace overlay, puff lace sleeves, and featuring a deep V neck back and cummerbund effect midriff.

The bride's jewelry included pearl earrings and necklace.

Bridal attendants wore blue and mauve rose print tea-length dresses.

Each carried blue long stem roses with baby's breath and mauve ribbon.

The bride's cousin, Stana O'Neal of Guthrie, Okla. registered guests at the reception held at the E.B. Black House.

The bride's cake was served by Debra Rickman of Amarillo and Ann Marie Albracht of Chino Valley, Ariz. Coffee and punch were poured by Penny Renfro of Canyon.

The three-tiered bride's ivory cake was decorated with blue and mauve flowers and topped with a precious moments girl and boy standing under an archway. Adorning the table was a floral arrangement surrounded by five candle holders and a crystal punch bowl.

The groom's cake was a double chocolate cake in the shape of a horseshoe.

The couple will make their home in Hereford.

The bride is a 1986 graduate of Hereford High School. She is active in the Women's Division of the Chamber of Commerce and is employed by Deaf Smith General Hospital.

The groom is a 1988 graduate of Hereford High School. He attended Mesa State College for two years and is now attending West Texas State University. He is employed by Double Diamond Cattle Company.

Out of town guests represented Arizona, Oklahoma, Lubbock and Canyon.

Extension News

BY BEVERLY HARDER County Extension Agent

Most people are familiar with telephone numbers with an area code of 900. Unlike 800 numbers which are free of charge to the caller, the cost of a 900 number call is charged to the caller's telephone. Charges may range from two dollars to as much as $100. These 900 numbers are used for such things as obtaining sports scores, ordering merchandise, entering contests, employment assistance and obtaining credit cards.

Not all advertisements using 900 numbers are deceptive. But the number of complaints about 900 numbers has increased a great deal in the past year. Consumers are often told to call another 900 number, given useless information, put on hold for extended periods of time or disconnected. Many of these calls result in high phone charges to the consumer who has not received what was expected. Young children have also called 900 numbers not knowing their parents would be charged for the call.

Here are some things you can do to protect yourself from 900 number scams:

- * Deal only with reputable companies or organizations. They usually state the cost of the call--which is usually low--up front.

- * Know the total cost before you make the call. Many advertisements tell you the cost per minute but don't tell you how long the call will last.

- * If you are the victim of a 900-number scam, call your phone company. While not legally required to, they may delete the call from your account. The telephone company generally will not disconnect your telephone for not paying a disputed 900 charge. You are also covered under the Fair Debt Collections Practices Act if a 900-information provider tries to collect the charge from you.

Telephone customers in certain parts of Texas can have a "block" placed on their telephone to prevent anyone from making a 900-number call. Contact your local telephone company to see if this is available in your area.

Be cautious of 900-number advertisements which make promises to fix "bad" credit, get you a "gold" credit card, or find you a job. Remember, offers that sound too good to be true often are, and in these instances are likely to cost you a lot of money for useless information or information you could obtain free elsewhere.

The Federal Communications Commission (FCC) has proposed regulations for 900 numbers. These include requiring a message at the beginning of the call stating the total cost of the call, reminding children to get their parents' permission and a grace period at the beginning of the call to allow the caller to hang up without being charged.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, handicap or national origin.

Don't leave home without first making sure your mail is taken care of.

Ann Landers

DEAR READERS: I am on vacation, but I have left behind some of my favorite columns that you may have missed the first time around. I hope you enjoy them. — Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: From time to time you have expressed the personal opinion that it is impolite and inconsiderate for people to drop in uninvited.

Please let me take this opportunity to tell all my friends that they have a standing invitation to my home anytime—day or night. If it happens to be mealtime, I can always throw on another hamburger or two and add some water to the soup. I consider an unexpected visit a compliment. And believe it or not, I'm not a lonesome old lady. I'm a 23-year-old male.

My friends also know they can borrow anything I have. It's theirs for the asking. I have yet to run into anyone who took advantage of me. If a friend gets into a jam and needs money, he (or she) knows that I will be more than happy to help out. They can pay me back whenever it is convenient. Maybe it will take a year or more—small amounts at a time.

But I never turn down a friend and I've never been stuck.

What is life all about if a person can't extend a helping hand and keep his door and his heart open to those in need? — Walk On In And Sit Right Down

DEAR MR. GREAT HEART: That was some letter. How come you didn't sign your name? How will people know where to walk on in and sit right down? And at any hour of the day or night, yet.

You're a moneylender, too? And you've never been stuck? Well, may it be ever thus, pal. I am not criticizing your philosophy. It's beautiful. But I'm not even going to tell anyone what state you live in.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Why can't people keep their big mouths shut? Our adopted daughter (age 11) came home crying yesterday. It seems our next-door neighbor told our little girl that she was adopted. I had not planned on telling "Jill" for another four or five years.

Now the child won't eat. She is moody and says we lied to her and now she wants to find her "real" mommy and daddy. We are heartsick -- and all because this big-mouth neighbor opened her yap. Please print this letter for all who feel the need to involve themselves in other people's business. — S.L.P.

DEAR S.L.P.: Put the blame where it belongs -- on yourself and your husband. Adopted children should be told that they were "chosen" as soon as they are able to understand what the word means. Had you done so, no big-mouth neighbor could have created this mess.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I don't think I've ever read about my problem in your column. It's actually a confession, prompted by the letter from the child who felt "left out" because her parents favored her older sister. I am the guilty party -- and my mother's parents were the victims. I liked my other set of grandparents better and was very outspoken about my preference -- even through my teen years when I should have known better.

I can remember now how I went out of my way to show favoritism to my younger set of grandparents. I can still see the hurt look on the faces of the two I ignored. I'll regret it to my dying day. -- Regrets, regrets

DEAR R.R.: Here's your letter. Perhaps someone will learn from it.

MR. AND MRS. GERALD RICHARDS
 ...nee Johnene Wray

Wray, Richards voiced wedding vows Sunday

Wedding vows were exchanged by Patsy Johnene Wray and Gerald Anthony Richards, both of Hereford, Sunday evening in First Christian Church of Hereford.

The marriage ceremony was officiated by Alton Tomlin, pastor of the church.

The bride is the daughter of John and Ouida Mandaville of Burleson and the bridegroom is the son of Gerald Wayne Richards of Lewisville and Phyllis Elaine Weaver of Waco.

The church altar was adorned with a candelabrum decorated with a mauve and white bow. Each pew was decorated with mauve and white bows.

Kathy Payne of El Paso served as matron of honor and best man was Dale Nelson of Canyon.

The bride's daughter, Amie Wray, served as bridesmaid.

The groom's son, Ricky Richards, was groomsmen.

The bride's daughter, April Wray served as flower girl and the groom's son, J.J. Richards was ring bearer.

The bride's daughter, Kandy Wray, sang principal selections of "Lost In Your Eyes" and "Love Will Be Our Home."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a traditional white floor length gown featuring a lace ruffle neckline. The fitted bodice was adorned with pearls and lace. The long sleeves were accented with lace cuffs.

The bride carried a bouquet of mauve and white roses with baby's breath and matching ribbons.

The bride's jewelry included a 50 year-old pearl necklace owned by her aunt, Leona Stayton.

Matron of honor wore a floral print off-the-shoulder tea-length dress. Bridesmaid and flower girl wore matching pink satin dresses. Each carried a single rose accented with baby's breath.

Melissa Hubbard invited guest to register at the reception held at the church.

The bride's cousins, Goldie and Gonda Stayton served cake. Coffee and punch were poured by Linda Hubbard.

The bride was born in Hereford and is a graduate of Hereford High School. She is employed by the Hereford Independent School District.

The groom was born in Amarillo and is a 1974 graduate of Palo Duro High School. He is employed by Rainbow Bread Co.

Out of town wedding guests were Gerald and Sandy Sartain, Dana Sartain, Eddie King, Matt and Tina Dabbins, David Richards, Brad and Lynea Richards, and Ernie and Reba Russell.

Bippus homecoming held recently

Approximately 40 people attended the Bippus Homecoming held recently at the Bippus Community Church. Mrs. Charles Higgins was in charge of the reunion.

Registration began at 10:30 a.m., followed by gospel singing and worship service. Mrs. Ernest Baird was in charge of the program.

Mrs. Baird and Joe Weaver led the singing accompanied by Charlene Pietsch, pianist.

Brother Jim Bozeman delivered the message using Isaiah 49:8 as his text.

A memorial service honoring those deceased since Aug. 13 was given by Mrs. Charles Higgins. Those mentioned were Dorothy Weaver, Vivian Burk, S.N. Thweatt, Nannie Fortenberry, Emmett Johnson Dorris, John Paul Perrin and Cody Freeman. Mrs. Higgins read the 23 Psalm and Helen Steiner Rice read a poem "When I Must Leave You." Mary Davis voiced the memorial prayer.

Mr. and Mrs. Rusty Hewitt sang "The Great Mansion" and "Farther Along."

Mrs. Jimmie Bradley recognized the oldest female attending as Mary Davis; the oldest male, Inman Larson; youngest boy, Caleb Pietsch; and youngest girl, Courtney Hewitt. The family with the most present was the Jack Weaver family. Those traveling the longest distance was Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Higgins and Jessica of Fort Worth.

Mrs. Jerry Homfeld read the minutes and officers were elected. They included Mrs. Charles Higgins, president; Joe Weaver, vice president;

Mrs. Jimmie Bradley, assistant vice president; and Mrs. Ernest Baird, secretary.

Mrs. Higgins read letters from Mrs. Dodson and Mrs. Raymond Wells. Letters and calls were reported from Mrs. Neaves and Mr. and Mrs. Tom Draper. Reports of those on the sick list were also given.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Higgins and Jessica, Lucy Campbell of Arlington, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Bozeman, Mr. and Mrs. Inman

Larson, Mrs. Gene Koetting, Charlene Pietsch, Seth and Caleb, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Weaver, Betsy and Anne, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Hall, Dani and Michael, Mrs. Charles Higgins, all of Hereford, Stella Seives of El Paso, and Mary Davis of Clovis, N.M., Mr. and Mrs. Rusty Hewitt, Candi and Courtney, Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Homfeld, Roy and Kristy, Mrs. Jimmie Bradley and Kenneth Homfeld.

The only planets in our solar system without moons are Venus and Mercury. The planet with the most moons is Jupiter, with four major moons and 12 minor ones.

Red Cross Update

BY BETTY HENSON

Appreciation is extended to CPR Instructor Steve Cortez, Water Safety Instructors, Mike Manchec, Sarah Hightower, Jennifer Scott, and Water Safety Aides Cassandra McKibben, Nichole Chance, Rob Reinauer and Erin Auerman for their help with teaching classes.

The Board of Directors will meet Tuesday at 7:30 for the regular meeting. Items on the agenda are election of officers and budget matters.

The Deaf Smith County Chapter of the American Red Cross is a United Way Agency.

There were 26 grandchildren, 26 great-grandchildren and 2 great-great grandchildren of Frieda Bartels present.

Mrs. Bartels, 88, was the oldest attending and six-week-old Kacy Chandler, granddaughter of Leonard and Betty Bartels of Amarillo was the youngest.

Bartels enjoy reunion

The Bartels Family Reunion was held recently at Hereford Elks Lodge with 79 members attending.

Frieda Bartels of Hereford and her children and their spouses, Anita and Walter Schilling of Dimmitt, Hilda an Alfred Reissig of Houston, Erwin and Jerline Bartels, Bernice and Jim Layman of Hereford.

Ricketts hold reunion

Eighty-eight members of the family of the late Mr. and Mrs. Ira Ricketts, pioneer residents of the Hereford area, met recently for the 46th annual reunion of the family. There are 183 direct living descendants of the couple.

The family of the late Jim Ricketts, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ricketts, served as hosts for the day.

Surviving children attending were Margant Ricketts Dougherty of Clovis, N.M.; Catharine Ricketts Russell of Hereford; Ira Jeanne Ricketts Higgins of Kingsland and Glenn Ricketts of Albuquerque, N.M.

Other family members attended from Oklahoma, New Mexico and points of Texas.

A covered dish luncheon was served and visiting was enjoyed during the afternoon.

Other local family members are Betty Mercer, Jeff and Janet Mercer, Carolyn and Dewayne Fry, and Steve and Sharon Johnson and children.

The reunion is held each year in Hereford on the second Sunday in August.

Hints From Heloise

CLOGGED SHOWER HEAD

Dear Heloise: My shower head seems to be clogged with mineral deposits. Is there anything I can do to unclog it or do I need to buy a new one? — JoAnne Stack, El Paso, Texas

Vinegar to the rescue! If the shower head can be removed, take it off and submerge it in a bowl of vinegar for several hours.

If the head is not removable, pour some vinegar into a plastic sandwich bag and secure the bag up over the shower head with a twist tie or rubber band. The shower head should be submerged in the vinegar.

After several hours, remove the bag and the shower head should be mineral-deposit-free and free-flowing. For stubborn deposits, you may need to scrub with a toothbrush. To clear water holes, poke through them with a toothpick. Good luck. — Heloise

CLEANLINESS MEANS SOLD

It sounds so obvious you'd think everyone would know: a clean house sells faster than one that looks a little grimy and unkempt. But sometimes folks get used to their surroundings and don't really see the deterioration. When I handle a listing, I may suggest what needs doing to make the property more saleable. If the home-owners make the effort to keep a house looking spotless, a prospective buyer assumes the same care has gone into maintenance and that the house is in good shape structurally. Shining, clean windows are a must. They make the whole house look brighter. Drapes, rugs and carpets should be cleaned or removed. Bare floors look better than worn rugs. Freshly re-finished floors can be a strong selling point. Wash down walls, patch any holes and paint where necessary. Bathrooms and kitchens get the tightest inspection, so make sure they are clean. Clear, uncluttered counters indicate that there's plenty of storage space.

Co-existing With Wal-Mart

Last week, we painted a fairly bleak picture for retailers who are trying to hold market share with Wal-Mart. Wal-Mart is one tough competitor. Their present growth rate could make them the nation's largest company by the year 2000. They are already the No. 1 retailer in America.

However, there is good news. Some merchants prosper when Wal-Mart comes to town, and there are steps that smaller retailers can take to become more competitive. Let's start by learning a few lessons from Wal-Mart.

Dr. Kenneth Stone is a professor of economics at Iowa State University in Ames, Iowa. Stone was the first researcher to analyze the influence of Wal-Mart on small communities. He has conducted more than 700 retail studies in the last 14 years.

Stone's research indicates that, when Wal-Mart comes to town, the trade area expands. People travel farther to shop in Wal-Mart stores. Communities without Wal-Marts experience a more rapid rate of decline as their former customers travel to the nearest Wal-Mart town.

Stone has also studied communities and individual merchants who are successful in co-existing with Wal-Mart. During a recent retailing conference, he detailed a number of survival strategies.

How to Survive

"In general, it is best to take a positive attitude toward the opening of a new mass merchandise store in your area," Stone suggested. "Recognize that such a store will bring more customers to town."

Stone stressed that it is possible to co-exist and actually capitalize on the increased traffic. "You may need to change your methods of operation," he added.

Here are some merchandising tips from Stone.

- Don't carry the same merchandise. If Wal-Mart carries Brand X jeans, sell Brand Y. If there is a price differential, it won't be so easy to detect.

- Try to find complementary merchandise. Wal-Mart will carry only the fastest-moving items and that leaves many market niches. Specialize in carrying what the discounter will not.

- Target an upscale customer by carrying higher-quality goods. Middle-to upper-income customers want top quality products and services and will pay higher prices for them. However, the value must be evident.

Marketing Tips

"There is always room for improving marketing practice," Stone said. I'd recommend the following tips to merchants, regardless of their competition.

- Extended store hours are a necessity! Lifestyles have changed drastically in the last generation. Most two-parent families have multiple wage earners. Nearly all single parents work outside of the home. "Most of these people simply cannot get to local stores that stay open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Downtown merchants and other independent merchants cannot successfully compete in that environment unless they cooperate and offer similarly convenient opening hours," Stone explained.

- Sharpen your pricing skills. Stone recommended lowering prices on items that customers purchase frequently. "Customers do not know the 'going price' of much of what they buy," he observed. "They do tend to know the price of things they buy frequently." Stone suggested that, by lowering prices on commonly purchased items, an independent merchant can overcome a "high-priced" image. Consumers frequently check prices on toilet paper, deodorant, bath and laundry soap, facial tissue and paper towels.

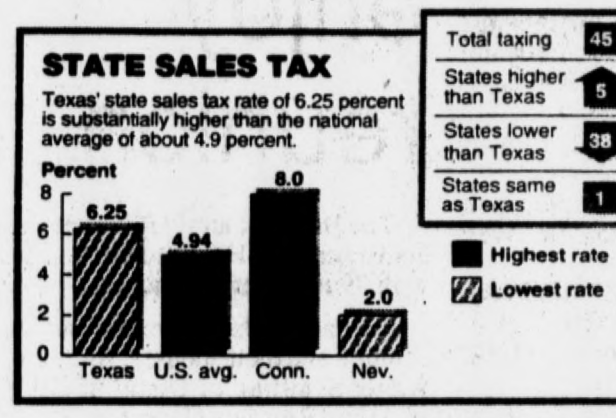

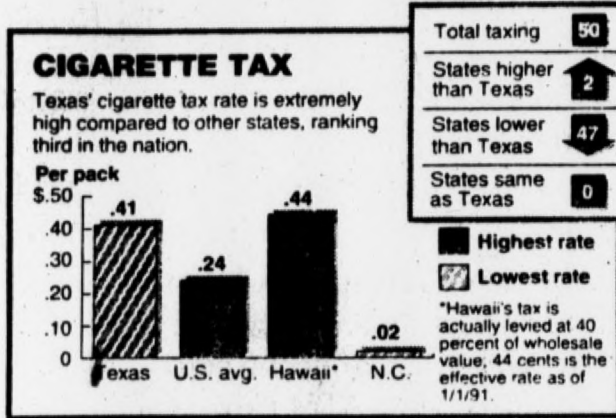

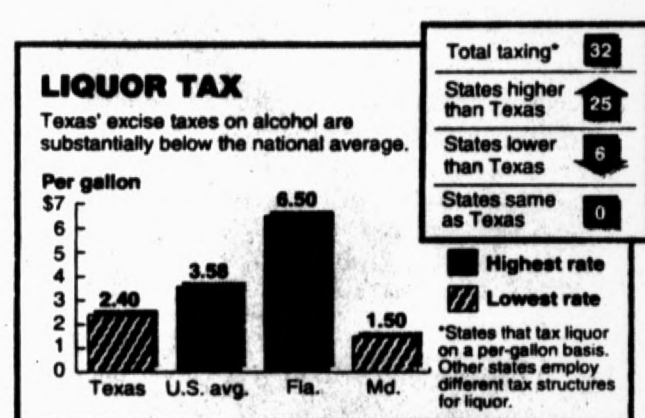

- Focus your advertising. "Most smaller merchants don't get their money's worth from their ads because they often fail to promote their competitive advantage," Stone pointed out. "If you offer free delivery, on-site repair service, special ordering or in-store credit, point it out in every ad. Focus on your customer and focus on your competitive advantage."

Next week, we'll provide more of Dr. Stone's tips for co-existing with Wal-Mart and some success stories from independent merchants. Learn how customer service and sales training can increase your revenues.

Two Story Foyer Includes Open Rail Stair

SUPERLATIVE MASTER BEDROOM SUITE AND OPEN STUDY HIGHLIGHT THIS PLAN

© BY W.D. FARMER, A.I.B.D.

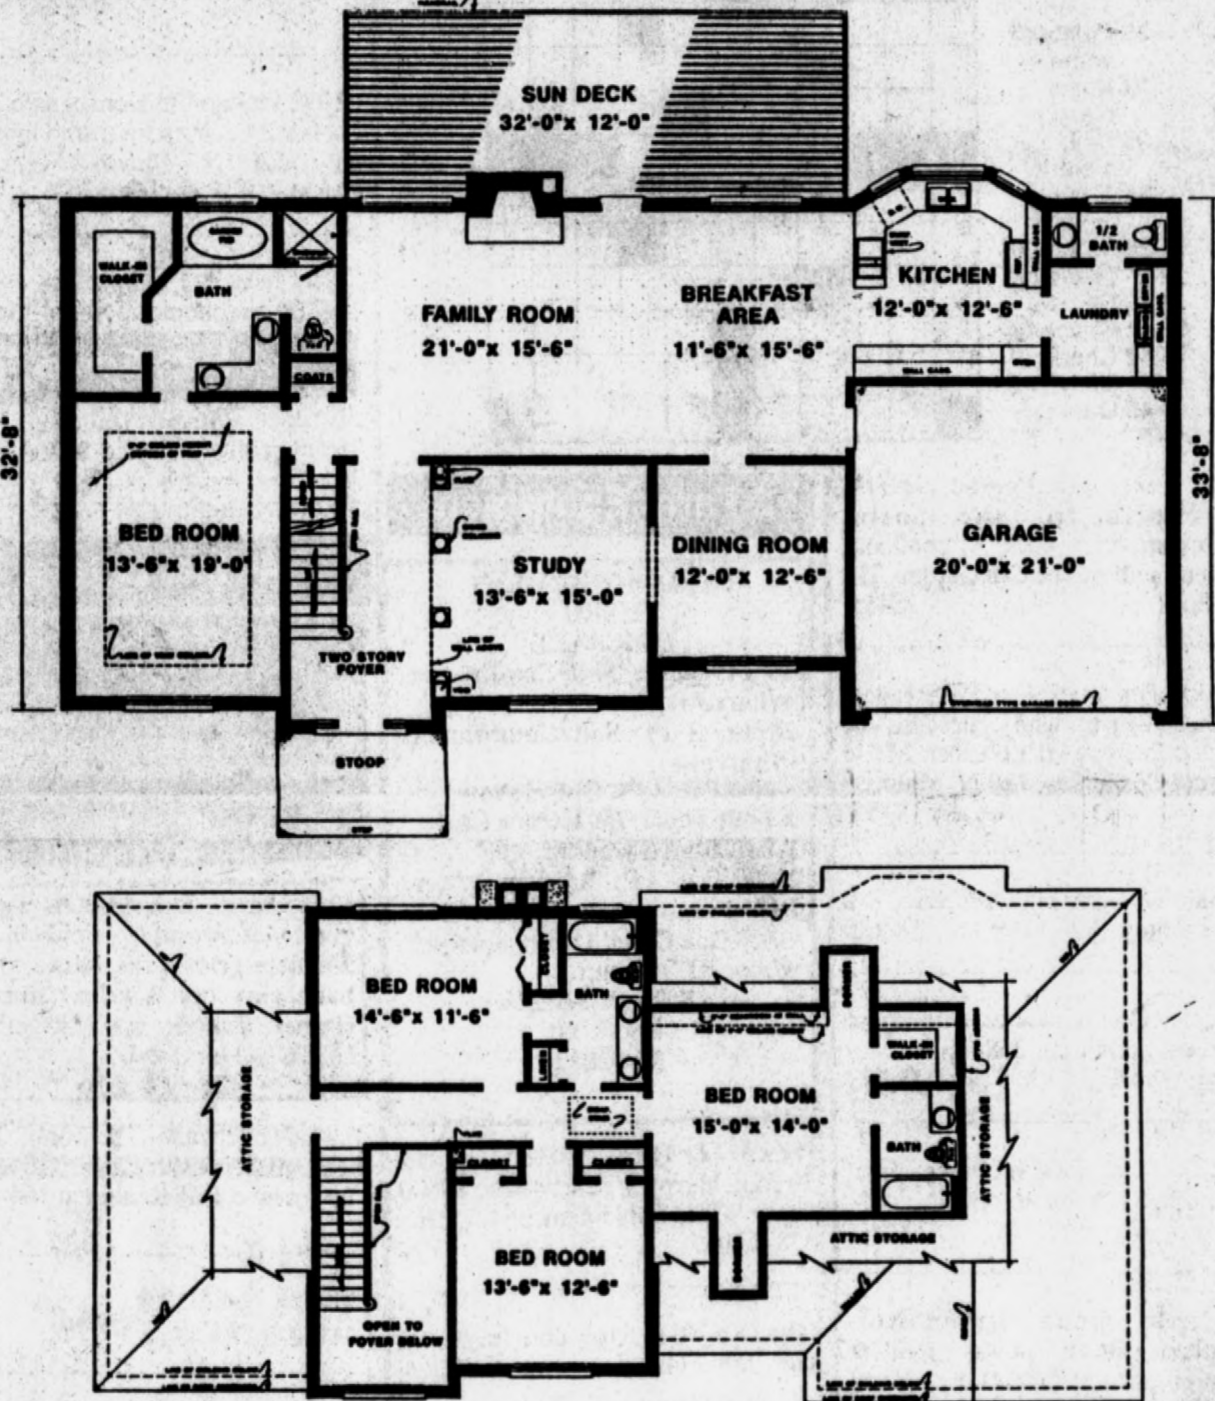

On entry into the two story foyer, your first perspective is of the open rail stair, study separated by four beautiful columns and direct approach to the enormous span of space incorporating the family room, breakfast room and kitchen. A wide sun deck is from this area and the kitchen cabinets are designed to follow the lines of a bay window. A half bath is provided in the laundry area. The master bedroom features a tray ceiling; luxury compartment bath and a large walk in closet. The basement stair is from this general vicinity, providing access from the foyer, master bed room and family room.

There are three large bedrooms on the second floor, and the baths are conveniently located to each bedroom. An attic stair is shown and an open rail in the upper hall allows a full view to the foyer. Closets are plentiful and dormer windows provide light to one of the three bedrooms.

The traditional exterior style is accented by multi-lite windows, gable roof design and brick construction.

The plan is Number 2935. It includes a total of 2,910 square feet of heated space and is a computer generated plan. All W. D. Farmer plans include special construction details for energy efficiency and are drawn to meet FHA and VA requirements.

For further information write W. D. Farmer, P.O. Box 450025, Atlanta, GA 30345.

Questions & answers

Q. - Can you tell me what kind of paint I can use to color Styrofoam without having the paint eat the material? I have several Styrofoam ice chests that we use when traveling. They're getting very soiled and grubby looking on the outside although they are still white and clean inside. I haven't been able to find new ones in these sizes which just fit the spaces in our car.

A. - You can paint Styrofoam (polystyrene) with any latex (water-soluble) paint. Solvents in oil-base paints might partially dissolve the foam and could form a sticky surface that would not dry.

Q. - I want to insulate the walls of my basement with polystyrene insulation boards. Can I make the job easier by applying paneling directly over the polystyrene?

A. Don't do it. First cover the polystyrene insulation board with drywall material at least 1/2-inch thick. Then glue the paneling to this. If there should be a fire, the polystyrene may give off toxic fumes and the drywall protects it for long enough to allow time to escape before the flames reach the polystyrene. Most such insulating boards come with instructions for covering them with gypsum board for this reason.
