Huge crowd in attendance

Mark White takes office as Texas governor

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Democrats' morning-to-midnight celebration of Mark White's inauguration began today with a breakfast that had to be moved to a coliseum because of the huge crowd. "We had the same problem Bill Clements had — too many damned Democrats," said Bob Slagle, state Democratic party chairman. A light but persistent rain sprinkled Austin early today and threatened to move the noon inaugural ceremony inside the Capitol. "That's not rain — those are Republican tears out there," White said at the breakfast to about 5,000 campaign volunteers who packed Austin's City Coliseum, an arena usually used for concerts and professional wrestling. In another reference to the rain, White turned to Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower and said "Look what we've already done for the farmers." White and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby made brief remarks to the crowd before heading on for a day of activities including a prayer meeting, the oath taking, an afternoon parade and evening balls. The festivities actually got under way Monday night when jubilant Texas Democrats dined and drank at a $50 per person cocktail party-buffet supper to celebrate White's victory. "How sweet it is," said Hobby. "This is just the first part of a 1-2 punch. The second part comes next year when we sent Ronnie (Reagan) back to Hollywood." White told the cheering party faithful that his inauguration was the beginning of "another 100 years of Democrat control in Texas." U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen said White's election was "one of the most exciting political victories in the history of the state." Today's noon ceremony, expected to draw up to 8,000 people, would be a "crisis situation" if the rains come, organizers said. "There won't be an easy flow if we have to go indoors," Spence said. Right after White is sworn in, he plans to lead a procession to the nearby Governor's Mansion to symbolically cut a lock off the gate. At 3 p.m., White will be on hand for a parade up Congress Avenue, the broad boulevard leading to the Capitol. Organizers of three evening inaugural balls braced for expected crowds of 5,000 at each. Among those not in town today for the festivities was Bill Clements, the Republican incumbent upset by White in November. Clements and wife Rita returned to their Dallas home Monday. The Clements' last day in power included two traditional duties — marking a Bible passage for the new governor and leaving a hot lunch for the new first family. The Bible passage marked by Clements for White said, "To every thing there is a season and a time to every purpose under heaven." The meal featured fried chicken and included a dessert of brownies.

Details of PIK program to be presented Friday

BY BOB NIGH
MANAGING EDITOR
John Ford, Deputy Assistant Secretary of Agriculture for Marketing & Transportation, will present details of the Ag Department's Payment-in-Kind (PIK) program at a meeting at 7 p.m. Friday at the Hereford Community Center. The PIK program was unveiled by President Reagan on Jan. 11. Charles Mayfield, State Executive Director of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) will also be present with additional information. The PIK program was announced by President Reagan at the American Farm Bureau Federation meeting, and includes 1983 crops of wheat, corn, grain sorghum, cotton, and rice. The program is "basically simple," according to Ag Secretary John Block. "Farmers who take out of production additional acres over what they agree to take out under the current program will receive as payment a certain amount of the commodity they would have grown on these acres. The commodity is theirs to do with as they wish. Commodities for the PIK program will come from farmer-owned reserve, regular loan or CCC-owned stocks."

The PIK program was designed to bring supplies more in line with demand, according to the government. Total harvested acreage for the five crops in the program is expected to be reduced by 23 million acres relative to previously announced programs. Total wheat, corn, and sorghum production is expected to be reduced by over one million bushels (10 percent), with cotton production reduced by 2.5 million bales (20 percent) and rice production by 21 million hundredweight (15 percent). Although production will be reduced, total supplies of grains and cotton is expected to be ample enough to meet both foreign and domestic needs. "Once stocks are reduced significantly through the PIK program, then substantial opportunities for price increases will exist," Block Victories in the history of this State," said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Austin. "This victory will keep Texas a Democratic state well into the 21st century." "We are setting out on another 100 years of Democratic control," said the governor-elect in a brief speech. "We will set out tomorrow to keep the promises we made in the campaign." After his brief speech, White was presented a hand-made rocking chair, with a Texas seal, by Reps. Gonzalo Barrientos of Austin, and Paul Ragsdale of Dallas. The lanky governor-elect sat down and tried the rocking action. His wife, Linda Gale, plopped into his lap for a free ride, waving gaily at the audience. Earlier, at an afternoon session of the State Democrat Executive Committee, U.S. Rep. Jim Wright, House majority leader, said "Nothing gave me greater pride and pleasure (on Nov. 2) than to hear that every single contested statewide race went to Democrats."

Electrical power to half of the city of Hereford and much of the county northeast of town to the Randall County line was interrupted for some 30 minutes Monday evening after a string of insulators on a Deaf Smith Electric Co-op line about 15 miles north of town were destroyed. According to REC Operations Manager Loran Nixon the problem was probably caused by persons shooting the insulators with shotguns. "We suspect that the insulators were shot off since we could see some evidence of lead on the lines," Nixon said. Power through the 69,000 volt line was lost beginning around 7:15 p.m. Monday with power resumed around 7:50 p.m. The 10-inch glass insulators were quickly replaced by REC personnel to get

U.S. says Soviets want arms buildup

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration says the Soviet Union is insisting on preserving its massive nuclear weapons advantage in Europe while ignoring American appeals for the elimination of such armaments. The White House and the State Department issued identical statements on the subject Monday in response to reports that U.S. and Soviet negotiators in Geneva had reached an informal arms agreement last summer that later was rejected by Washington and Moscow. According to the reports, Paul H. Nitze, the chief U.S. negotiator to the talks on limiting medium-range nuclear missiles, had worked out the tentative agreement in discussions with his Soviet counterpart, Yuli Kvitsinsky.

There were contradictory reports about the nature of the agreement, with some officials saying it would have preserved the Soviet advantage and others saying it would have ensured Soviet-American parity. In either case, the proposed accord negotiated by Nitze represented a departure from the administration's position that the Soviets dismantle all of their nuclear weapons targeted at Western Europe. In return, NATO countries would cancel their proposed plan to install 572 cruise and Pershing II missiles starting in December 1983. Nitze apparently conducted the discussions away from the negotiating site during informal exchanges with Kvitsinsky. The administration statements Monday suggested that tactic does not violate Nitze's instructions. And White House Deputy Press Secretary Larry Speakes said President Reagan does not feel Nitze "had done anything out of the ordinary." But supporters of Eugene V. Rostow, the ousted director of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, believe Rostow was fired because of his role in recommending the informal accord to the White House. One such aide was reported to be mystified as to why Nitze appears to have escaped from the episode without criticism while Rostow's role in it cost him his job. One possible explanation offered here is that both Rostow and Nitze are conservative Democrats and the dismissal of both could cost Reagan badly needed political support from that group. Whatever hopes Rostow and Nitze may have had for the tentative agreement were quickly dashed when Washington and Moscow disassociated themselves from it.

The administration refused comment on the nature of Nitze's informal discussions, beyond saying that the Soviets have proved unwilling "to accept any outcome other than one which would preserve its massive advantage and monopoly in intermediate nuclear force systems." The question remains whether the administration will bow to European pressure and abandon its 14-month old policy in support of the total elimination of all intermediate range nuclear forces from Europe. On Monday, the White House and the State Department insisted that this was the "best solution" without saying whether the administration would settle for less.

Dowell said after the city commission meeting that he had been a commissioner four years prior to becoming mayor and felt like it was time to move over. Positions 1 and 2 on the commission will also be open for the April 2 election. Commissioners also agreed to a five year contract to Caviness Packing Co. to match city water rates at $0.60 per thousand gallons.

Wheelchair winner has high goals

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston draftsman LaVerne Achenbach says the competitive urge that drove him and his wheelchair across the finish line of Sunday's Houston-Tenneco Marathon came to him only after his legs were partially paralyzed in an auto accident.

"I never really had any goals before the accident like I do now," said Achenbach, who finished the 26.2-mile course in 2 hours, 28 minutes.

"I had a job in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, where I am from," he said Monday. "I used to go to drag races and liked photography. But I was never motivated like I am now."

Achenbach was the only wheelchair marathoner in the field of 3,500.

He said he found sports helped lift the gloom that followed the accident.

"There was a time when I had quite a bit of depression before I got into athletics," said Achenbach, who had never competed in athletics before his accident. "I didn't know how life was going to affect me."

"It really struck me after the accident that I couldn't do things the way I had done them. I decided to do as much as I could with what I had left."

He started out with bowling, then progressed to wheelchair basketball, softball and finally racing.

Achenbach now has his sights set on the Orange Bowl marathon in Miami this weekend.

From there, his goals include competing in the national wheelchair games in Hawaii in June and in 1984 he would like to be a part of the United States team in the Wheelchair Olympics on the University of Illinois campus.

Report shows White spent $8.9 million

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A new campaign report shows Mark White spent $8.9 million to win the governor's race and has received 90 donations from contributors who previously supported Republican Bill Clements.

A report filed Monday with the secretary of state's office shows White, who took office today, received $10.9 million in contributions during 1982, enough to cover his estimated campaign debt of $2 million.

White spent $8.9 million in his race, the report said.

Previous reports filed by Clements show he raised and spent $13.3 million in his unsuccessful bid for re-election. That amount includes $3 million in loans that Clements plans to repay himself.

White's report included the names of 90 donors, some of whom previously had supported Clements, who gave White $10,000 or more in a two-week period immediately after Thanksgiving.

Among the Texans who previously supported Clements' campaign financially and later gave to White were Clements' close friend, Dallas oilman Edwin Cox Jr.; Houston construction magnate George Brown and Dallas businessman W.O. Bankston.

Cox gave $10,000; Brown, $20,000; and Bankston, $19,500; according to the reports.

Another former Clements supporter was Houston developer Bob Perry, whose political action committee contributed $50,000 to White's organization.

Mobile barrier guards highway crews

HOUSTON (AP) — A mobile crash barrier being used to protect Texas highway workers sounds like the answer to a riddle — it has 20 tires, one guardrail, seats 45 and weighs 14 tons.

The Big Armored Centipede, with five attached station wagons and a guardrail bolted to one side, acts as a fence between workers and moving traffic, said Hunter Garrison, district maintenance engineer for the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

But the barrier, acquired in January by the Houston office of the highway department, was sidelined almost before it could be used because of work cutbacks.

"We found it is applicable to Houston, but we reduced a lot of our highway work for a while and couldn't use it," Garrison said. "Now we are doing more and will certainly use it more."

The return of the Centipede is a welcome sight for highway department workmen, who must perform their duties in the midst of high-speed traffic.

"Our employees say they felt this is the safest thing we've ever used," Garrison said. "The peace of mind of the workers is just as important. I've had some say, 'It looks funny but I'm sure happy it's there.'"

The Centipede was developed by Don Ivey, Hayes Ross and Ted Hirsch, researchers at the Texas Transportation Institute at Texas A&M University.

The lead car in the brightly painted entourage can be driven comfortably at 45 to 50 miles per hour, and can give workmen a 28,000-pound barrier of protection.

Chicago fights voter fraud

Adlai Stevenson was incredibly naive.

Last November's election for governor of Illinois was very close, with 5,074 votes separating winner Thompson from loser Stevenson.

So Stevenson demanded a recount. That was a mistake. Politics goes back three generations in his family. He should have known that a Chicago recount would reveal imaginary people and unfindable people and dead people.

But Democrat Stevenson should have known that historically, Chicago's dead people vote Democrat!

Chicago is trying hard to live down its reputation.

Chicago's professional politicians both deny — and take a kind of pride in — allegations that John F. Kennedy was elected president by the uncounted votes in two ballot boxes "on the bottom of Lake Michigan."

Chicago's Board of Election Commissioners has sought to tidy up its tarnished image, but now a federal grand jury is seeking and finding evidence that:

—Voters listed as living in transient skid-row hotels are unknown at those addresses.

—In one of Chicago's notorious "river wards," the 27th, 13 examples of apparently fraudulent ballot application signatures.

—In Chicago, "where the dead vote," nursing home residents misspelled their own signatures -- or somebody did.

—Three names and addresses on ballot applications have been traced to a vacant lot.

—On at least 115 ballot applications there is no signature at all. Presumably "ghosts" voted.

There have been some citizen efforts to clean up Chicago's elections. An organization called LEAP, "Legal Elections in All Precincts," was created a decade ago to snoopervise the election process.

But it has suffered a loss of confidence, a loss of support, may fold.

Election Board spokesman Thomas Leach says, "All this is putting us back 30 years," though he figures "there won't be more than a handful of people indicated."

But that's the focus that promises raw meat for watchdogs.

Interesting: A Chicago newspaper published an article under the heading: "Clumsy forgeries reveal vote fraud."

The story listed 47 suspect signatures for voters listed as living in the Arcade Hotel, a skid-row flophouse on West Madison.

Mrs. Conrad Hopkink read the article, saw her long-missing husband's signature, and said, "So that's where he is!"

But he wasn't.

Detroit's Renaissance Center fallen on tough money times

DETROIT (AP) — It was compared to the Colossus of Rhodes and touted as a beacon of hope for one of America's struggling old northern cities.

Unlike the ancient Colossus, which fell victim to an Aegean earthquake in 224 B.C., Detroit's Renaissance Center is in no danger of toppling. But it has fallen on hard times.

The highly publicized complex wallows in at estimated $140 million of red ink. This month, its owners defaulted on a $200 million mortgage when the January payment was not made, even after a 10-day grace period.

The $357 million RenCen, as it is known to local residents, includes a cylindrical, glass-walled hotel surrounded by four matching 39-story office buildings. A multi-level shopping mall provides the base for the complex.

The financing was a unique partnership of 51 Detroit-area companies spearheaded by Henry Ford II, who since has retired as chairman of the auto company which bears his name.

It is uncertain just how much money was owed.

"We have always maintained some cloak of secrecy," says Richard Routh, a spokesman for Ford Motor Land Development Corp., a Ford Motor Co. subsidiary and owner of 65 percent of the property. "It is a private project."

Ford first proposed the center on Nov. 24, 1971. Eighteen months later ground was broken. The complex opened officially in April 1977, with Ford delivering the ribbon-cutting address.

Amid the optimism, he cautioned that the center itself would have to be a success in order to provide the impetus for a reborn downtown

Detroit.

Ford's caution was well-founded.

Although the center served as headquarters for the 1980 Republican National Convention as well as the 1982 National Football League Super Bowl game, the complex struggled to attract people.

"I think generally, Renaissance Center has had some positive effects on downtown, but not nearly enough to overcome the absolutely awful economy," says Gary Sands, associate professor of urban planning at Detroit's Wayne State University. "It brought a lot of people downtown to see it. But apparently not enough have come back."

Last April, nearly five years to the day of the formal dedication, Ford announced the planned sale of Renaissance Center to a group headed by Theodore Netzky, a Chicago attorney and accountant, for $505 million.

The sale has not been completed. Both Netzky and Wayne Doran, president of Ford Land Development, have declined to comment. Published reports persist that the Chicago group is having difficulty arranging financing.

Doran met last week with lenders in New York about restructuring or reducing the payments. Refusing to elaborate "because of the sensitivity of the thing," Doran said more discussions would be held soon. He gave no timetable.

The building's current financial problems are not its first. The mortgage was renegotiated in 1980, said Albert Abend, a spokesman for Aetna Life and Casualty Co. of Hartford, Conn., one of the lenders. "What we tried to do was give them breathing room," he said.

Aetna, John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Boston, and Equitable Life Assurance Society of New York hold about equal 50 million shares. Travelers Insurance Co. of Hartford holds a 30 million share, and Ford Motor Credit Co. holds a 20 million share.

Office space consistently has been the strongest part of the center, holding at about 96 percent occupancy, spokesman Routh says.

Hotel occupancy, according to a prospectus sent by the Netzestors, is about 60 percent. "That's not good enough," Sands says.

And the retail space, known as "The World of Shops," has failed to live up to expectations, fluctuating at only about 60 percent capacity. Although some 95 retailers remain.

Says Lubbock superintendent

School prayer scuttled anyway

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — The school superintendent here says the Supreme Court's refusal to reinstate a policy allowing students to pray on school grounds doesn't matter because the practice had been scuttled anyway.

The high court refused Monday to reinstate a policy whereby students were allowed to meet voluntarily — like any campus organization — before or after school for brief moments of prayer.

Two dozen senators had spoken out in support of school prayer, arguing that federal courts were making unwarranted stands against religion.

But the Supreme Court, without comment, upheld a March 1982 ruling by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans that called Lubbock's policy a violation of constitutional requirements of separation of church and state.

Under the Lubbock regulation, elementary and high school students desiring to pray were allowed to "gather at school with supervision either before or after regular school hours on the same basis as other groups, so long as attendance at such meetings is voluntary."

Monte Hasie, president of the Lubbock School Board, said Monday's decision is "bad for the country."

"That's really a shame," he said. "I feel the community will feel about like I do. I think they'll be real disappointed."

But Superintendent Ed Irons said the district practice already had been discontinued after the 5th Circuit's ruling.

After a celebrated suit led by atheist Madalyn Murray O'Hair, now living in Austin, the Supreme Court in 1962 outlawed school-sponsored prayer. In 1963, the court banned Bible-reading sessions conducted by teachers. Classroom religious instruction in public schools had been banned by the court in 1948.

When sued by the Lubbock Civil Liberties Union in 1979, Lubbock schools were continuing to sponsor morning Bible readings, classroom prayers led by teachers, and distribution of "Gideon" Bibles to elementary students.

It was then that Lubbock school officials ended those practices and adopted the "equal access" policy. U.S. District Judge Halbert Woodward approved the new policy, but the 5th Circuit court struck it down.

Tom Griffith of Lubbock, an attorney for the Civil Liberties Union, said he was not among those surprised at the Supreme Court's action.

"I never felt the Supreme Court would have any desire to go into this sort of question presented to them. There was no significant legal error" involved in the case, Griffith said.

The appeals court said the new policy violated that portion of the Constitution's First Amendment banning any "establishment of religion."

The school district's appeal argued that denying religious student groups the same treatment given to non-religious groups violates another portion of the First Amendment that bars any prohibition on the "free exercise" of religion.

Border apprehensions reported up drastically

WASHINGTON (AP) — Immigration officials say there has been a dramatic increase this year in apprehensions of illegal aliens trying to enter Texas across the Mexican border.

In the first 16 days of 1983, apprehensions of illegal aliens in the five border patrol sectors covering the Texas-Mexican border were up more than 43 percent compared with the same period a year ago, the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service said Monday.

In the McAllen sector, apprehensions were up 88.8 percent and in the Laredo sector they jumped 86.2 percent, the service said.

1040-EZ brief, simple

The Internal Revenue Service had developed a new simplified tax form for single taxpayers, called Form 1040EZ. The IRS says that, as the name implies the 1040EZ is a brief, simple-to-complete tax form.

The IRS estimates that over 20 million taxpayers will be eligible to use the new form. For example, most college students who file federal individual income tax returns will be eligible to use the 1040EZ even if they are claimed as dependents on another taxpayer's return.

To use the 1040EZ, a taxpayer must be single, claim only one personal exemption, and claim no exemptions for children or other dependents. All income must come from wages, salaries, tips, and no more than $400 in interest. Taxable income must be less than $5,000.

The form contains only 11 items, the IRS says, which is half the lines on the Form 1040A for 1982. The 1040EZ is divided into steps that guide the taxpayer through the form.

Most of the instructions needed to complete Form 1040EZ are on the back of the form. However, the IRS advises that this year's 1040EZ filers will need to use the 1040A instructions for the tax table and for the special worksheet used to figure the allowable deduction for the tax table and for the special worksheet used to figure the allowable deduction for charitable contributions on the new form.

The 1040EZ has been included in the 1982 Form 1040A tax package. It is also available separately at many local IRS offices and through form distribution centers in many banks and post offices.

Gaining patient's confidence is first step

BY SANDY PANKEY
Staff Writer

"Gaining the patient's confidence is the first step and treating that individual as I would want to be treated follows," explains Dr. Dan Desilets.

Beginning his dental practice with Dr. Bill McClarty last August, Dr. Desilets emphasizes the importance of making the patient feel at ease before starting any dental procedure.

"I believe in sitting down and visiting with the patient, spending quality time with them, and letting them know that they can trust me," says the amicable doctor. "If there is a particularly difficult problem present, I will refer them to a specialist."

"I feel that it is very important to begin dental care as soon as possible. When a child reaches three or four years of age, they should come in for a check-up. Usually there are no problems and this visit serves two purposes, to get the child acquainted with the doctor and to feel comfortable with the surroundings."

I want the first dental experience to be a pleasant one," states Dr. Desilets.

In selecting Hereford as his home, the doctor, who moved here from Amarillo, said there were a variety of advantages to living and practicing in a smaller community.

"I'm not after making mega bucks in this profession. If I had chosen a larger city to practice in, my work load would be increased but I wouldn't be able to spend as much time as I would like with each of my patients."

"Also, the pace of living is slower opposed to a large city. While I was living in Houston, I once spent over eight hours trying to play 10 holes of golf because the course was so crowded. Also, the pheasant hunting is excellent here."

Dr. Desilets' transition to Hereford was not difficult due to the fact that as a child he traveled a great deal with his parents.

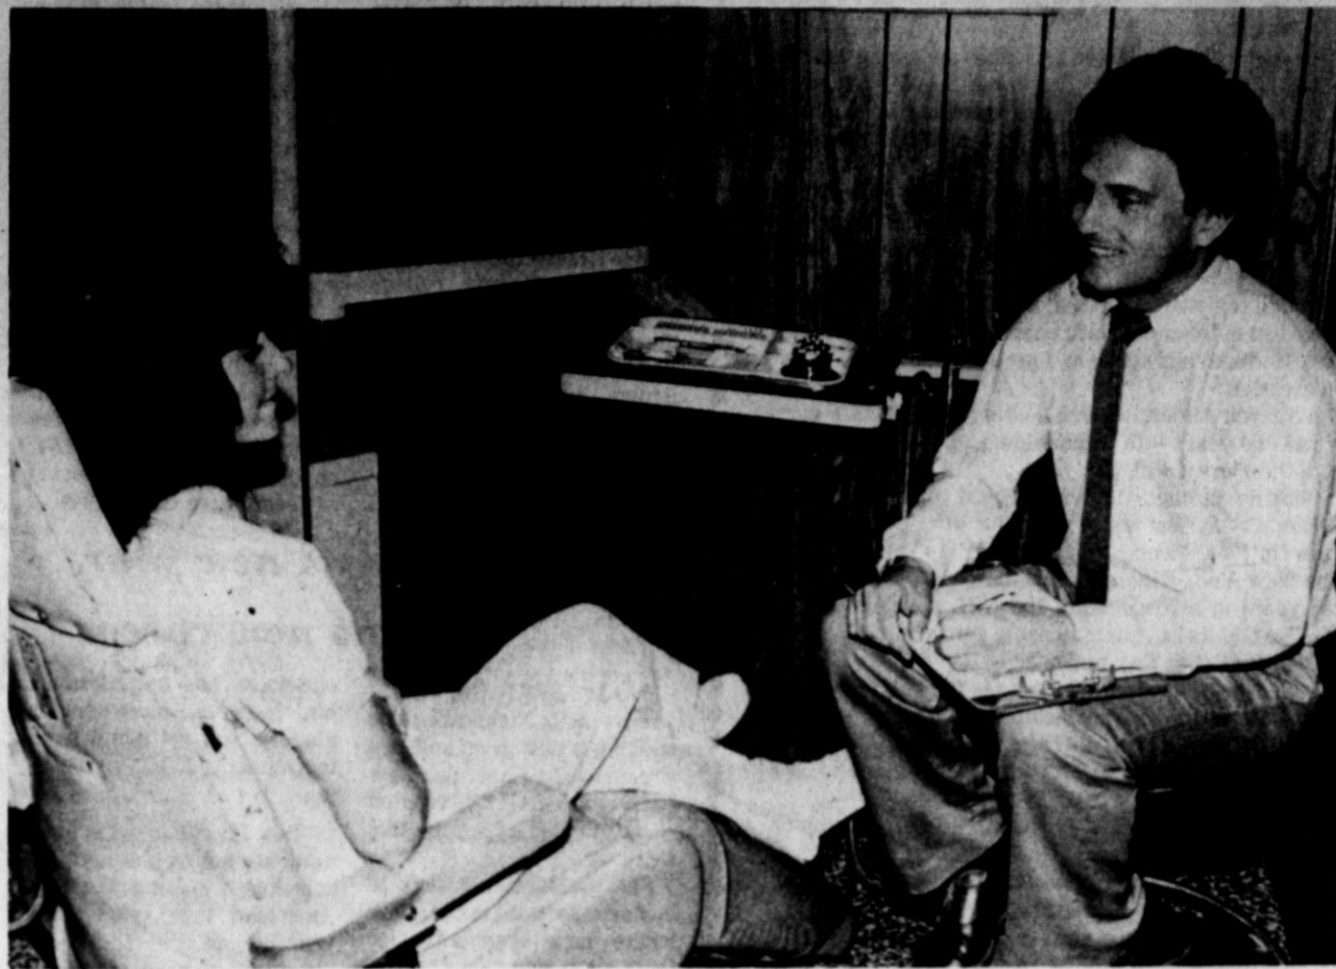

"My father worked for Gulf Oil Co., and we moved frequently. I have lived in Colorado, Wyoming, Oklahoma and Texas," explains Dr. Desilets.

"While I was a dental student, my parents lived for over two years in Kuwait, a small country situated between Iraq and Saudi Arabia on the Persian Gulf. I visited them several times. They now reside in Odessa."

Dr. Desilets graduated in 1973 from a Houston high school and from Stephen F. Austin State University in Nacogdoches in December of 1977.

He then attended dental school at the University of Texas at San Antonio where he received his degree. While a dental student he drove a route sales truck for Coca-Cola.

When asked why he chose the dental profession, Dr. Desilets responded, "I love working with my hands and being around people. The thought of working in an office where I would only be exposed to the same people day after day, was not very appealing. This way I can become acquainted with a variety of people from many different walks of life."

Concession stand time draws near

BY PENNY REINART
County Extension Agent

It's almost like tradition — January and the Hereford Young Farmer's Livestock Show! And along with the livestock show brings the 4-H concession stand, which the Young Farmers so graciously have allowed us to have each year. So we're gathering our electric skillets and large spoons in preparation for making our famous chili for Frito pies. We'll also have chili dogs, hot dogs, corn dogs, nachos and pie!

We're inviting everyone to come out and try some of our delicious food at low prices. While you're eating you can watch a group of young people who have worked very hard on some animal projects.

Remember — all of the proceeds made from the concession stand go to send the older

4-H'ers on educational and contest trips and to hold a county camp for the younger 4-H'ers. The kids have worked hard and they need your support!!

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socio-economic levels, race, color, sex, religion or national origin.

Thoughts of a mother who is driving home from a driver's test with a daughter who just got her license. I've had a good life. An education. Married a man I loved. Gave birth to children. Have an automatic washer. All my own teeth. Came within 1/4 inch of sideswiping a patrol car. What more could I ask?

If I keep the seat belt on, I won't go through the windshield. On the other hand, if I want to get out in a hurry, I'm trapped. How can she see that dog when the radio is on so loud?

It's going to be nice having a teenager who drives. Sending her to the store for me. Picking up the boys at baseball. Taking in the cleaning. I'll have time to loll around the phone talking to the police, checking the hospitals ... the tow trucks ... our insurance man.

If I were a well woman, it would be different. People think I am strong, but I have fluttery innards. If we meet another car on this road I am going to spit up.

Maybe if I hummed. My throat is dry. Maybe if I tapped my feet. My legs! I can't move my legs! It's just a muscle spasm. I've got to relax.

So where's big shot when his daughter is driving his car home? He's in an air-conditioned office. He doesn't care what happens to me. Land in a ditch. Just so there's a casserole in the oven.

She driving wide open! Or is that the gas gauge? Whatever, she's going too fast. It's all her father's faults. He's the one who gave her the confidence. I said wait till she's 35. Has some responsibility, something to live for, but no ...

Martin Academy nominee Herd cagers visit Lubbock

BY LES GILES
Sports Editor

Something's got to give tonight when Hereford travels to Lubbock for District 3-5A basketball action.

The Whiteface boys will be looking for their first win in league play (they're currently 0-7), and their first since the holidays (they've lost four in a row since the Borger tourney).

Lubbock, a surprise early this season, has lost its last five games, and is 0-3 since the holidays just in league play.

Hereford's girls will be out to snap a three-game losing streak. They have lost five of the last six, and are 3-6 in loop warfare.

Lubbock's gals haven't won in district play, losing all nine starts. They are 2-13 overall.

Elsewhere tonight, boys co-leaders Amarillo High and Plainview face stern tests. The Sandies are at Palo Duro (which is only a game back at 5-2), while the Bulldogs visit Caprock, a team capable of beating any club in the league on a given night.

If Palo Duro and Caprock win tonight there'll be a three-way tie for the lead. Tascosa could close within a game by beating Coronado.

In girls' action, Monterey starts tonight 9-0 and a game ahead of Plainview. AHS is two games off the pace at 7-2. All three should win tonight.

Tim Martin, an all-district performer the past two years in football and last season's offensive player of the year on the Amarillo Globe-News Super Team, is among the Texans who've been nominated to a service academy.

Martin has been nominated to the Air Force Academy at Colorado Springs by U.S. Senator John Tower.

According to Tim's dad Danny, "Tim wants to play college football somewhere, and has been talked to by people from the Air Force Academy.

"Right now, he's considering the options. He hasn't made a definite commitment to anyone yet."

Two former HHS football players attended the U.S. Military Academy at West Point—Dave Charest and Greg Brockman.

There will be an organizational meeting for Kids Inc. baseball, Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at Savage's Hickory Pit on Park Ave., according to David McDonald.

Officers will be elected for the upcoming season, McDonald noted.

"Anyone who is interested in coaching or umpiring boys' Kids Inc. games is urged to attend this meeting," McDonald added.

If Washington defeats the Cowboys Saturday in the NFC Championship game Dallas will tie a record it would rather not.

Through the years there have been a number of teams who've lost in the conference championship three times in a row. No team has ever lost four conference title games in succession.

Dallas, you remember, has lost in the NFC title game the last two years—to Philadelphia, 20-7, two years ago and to the 49ers, 28-27, last year.

In looking through the NFL record manual, it shows the L.A. Rams lost three straight NFC championship games (in 1974, '75 and '76).

The New York Giants lost in the championship game three years in a row, before the NFL merged with the AFL. The Giants lost championship games in 1961, '62 and '63 (twice to Green Bay and once to the Chicago Bears).

Oakland (now the L.A. Raiders) is the only AFC team ever to lose in the championship game three years in a row, and did that on two different occasions.

The Raiders lost the AFC championship game in 1968, '69 and '70 and again in 1973, '74 and '75.

Only two teams have ever won conference championships three years in a row.

Green Bay won in 1965, '66 and '67, while the Miami Dolphins won in 1971, '72 and '73.

Dallas and Washington have met once previously in the NFC championship game. The Redskins won, 26-3, in 1972, then lost to Miami in the Super Bowl.

The Jets and Dolphins never have met in an AFC title game. The Jets have played only once in the AFC title game and they won that one, beating Oakland, 27-23, in 1969 en route to the Super Bowl.

Should Dallas and Miami win this weekend, Super Bowl XVII would thus be a rematch of Super Bowl VI, won by the Cowboys, 24-3, although no active players are still around.

The Jets' only previous Super Bowl appearance was against the Baltimore Colts.

Thurman on hot seat lately

DALLAS (AP) — Dennis Thurman has been in a lot of game plans lately — the opponent's.

Teams keep attacking his right cornerback position and finding the results sweet and sour.

Thurman was burned twice by the Green Bay Packers in the Dallas Cowboys' 37-26 National Conference playoff victory Sunday on passes to James Lofton — but he returned the favor with three interceptions. He dashed 39 yards for a touchdown on one of them.

"In this league, you have a different challenge every week," said Thurman. "One week it's James Lofton. The next week it's somebody else. You can't let them psych you out, get you back on your heels.

"You just have to believe you are going to get as many as they do," he said.

Thurman said one reason he is such a popular bombing target is that teams are afraid to take on the left cornerback, Everson Walls, the

NEW YORK (AP) — Boston Bruins goaltender Pete Peeters and Edmonton's Wayne Gretzky were named the National Hockey League's co-players of the week.

National Football League's leading interceptor.

"I'd probably attack me, too," Thurman said. "I think I will be a part of the other team's attack the rest of this year."

Thurman's three interceptions tied a club record held by Charlie Waters.

"Any time you can tie Charlie Waters, you're in good company," Thurman said.

Thurman said he could sleep only a few hours before Sunday's game with the Packers. He kept seeing Lofton in his sleep.

"A defensive back can lose the game quicker than any other individual on the field other than the quarterback," Thurman said.

On his interception return for a touchdown, Thurman's experience paid off.

"I read his move because he pushed off a little," said Thurman. "He turned and I went inside. I was just in the right place at the right time. They had completed one like that earlier."

Dallas travels to Washington for Saturday's National Conference championship game and Thurman figures the Redskins will test him.

"I'm not worried," Thurman said. "The pressure is on Washington. The Redskins have to feel a lot of anxiety."

"They've played well this year, but they haven't beaten Dallas in awhile. Their fans were yelling for us, but the team has to have a little doubt."

Walls said he was disappointed Green Bay didn't throw more this way.

"If they want to go right just because I'm on the left, I think it hurts their offense," he said. "I think they ought to go to their strength and not let someone dictate what they will do."

LaPlata 9th grade girls run season mark to 12-2

Gloria Marquez tossed in 10 points, while Kim Williams and Shelly Edwards added seven apiece as LaPlata's 9th grade girls won their 12th game in 14 starts Monday, blasting Clovis Yucca, 51-17.

LaPlata also won the 8th grade game, 29-21, but lost the 7th grade contest, 29-23.

Lana Kosub led the 8th grade team, now 5-7 overall, with nine points and Amy Coneway added seven to lead the 7th graders, now 7-5 overall.

Stanton's girls won all three games Monday from Clovis Marshall. Carolyn Rieves scored 12 points to pace the 7th grade to a 23-22 win. It was their third win in 12 games this season.

Bernice Ross scored 10 points and Pansie Wilson nine as the 8th grade rolled to a 28-9 triumph. The 9th grade got 16 points from Donann Cummings in a 38-20 victory, which left them 7-6 on the season.

Stanton's boys won only one of three games. Kyle Streun scored 16 points to pace the 8th graders to a 48-24 win over Marshall. It raised their season record to 8-2.

Marshall took the 7th grade, 47-29, and the 9th grade tilt, 76-58. Ross Torres led Stanton's 7th grade team with 10 points, while Stephan Hacker had 22 in the 9th grade game.

Last weekend, Stanton's 8th grade boys won the Canyon Tournament, while the girls lost in the consolation finals of the same event.

This weekend, the 8th grade girls teams travel to Dumas for a tournament, while the 7th graders go to Littlefield. Next Monday, Stanton's teams play Clovis Yucca, while the LaPlata teams meet Gattis.

UCLA gains top spot

LOS ANGELES (AP) — UCLA basketball, the most successful program in college sports history, had been in a relative decline since Coach John Wooden retired in 1975.

But the Bruins are back.

With an 11-1 record under second-year coach Larry Farmer, UCLA jumped from fifth to first in The Associated Press Top Twenty college basketball poll this week. It marks the first time since February of 1979 that the Bruins, who won 10 NCAA championships in a 12-year span during the 1960s and '70s, have been ranked No. 1.

UCLA became the fourth team to hold the top spot this season and the rapid move up the rankings came on the heels of losses by last week's top three teams — Memphis State, Virginia and St. John's.

The Bruins received 22 first-place votes and a total of 1,099 points in the weekly balloting by a 57-member national panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

In the extremely close balloting, UCLA finished only eight points ahead of runner-up Indiana, fourth last week after being No. 1 earlier in the season. The Hoosiers, 12-1, collected 29 first-place votes — seven more than UCLA — but only 1,091 points.

UCLA replaced Memphis State as the No. 1 team after the Tigers were upended by Virginia Tech 69-56 last Monday night. Memphis State, 12-1, bounced back with an 80-63 victory over Cincinnati, but still slipped to sixth in this week's poll with 610 points, including one first-place vote.

Rounding out the top five this week are No. 3 North Carolina, which is 12-3 and was No. 11 last week; No. 4 Arkansas, 13-0; and No. 5 Nevada-Las Vegas, 13-0.

If the 1983 Bruins resemble the Wooden-guided teams who dominated college basketball for more than a decade, it's no mistake.

Farmer, 31, played under Wooden at UCLA during 1970-73, a period when the Bruins went 89-1. He still calls Wooden simply "Coach."

The school's fourth head basketball coach since Wooden retired, Farmer said his coaching philosophy is solidly grounded in on what he learned under his old coach.

"Our program now is pretty much the same as it was back then," Farmer said. "We do a lot of the same drills. Our basic philosophy is that, while we do try to prepare for each opponent, we believe it's most important that we do what we need to do. We spend a lot of time on what we want to do, not what we expect the other team to do."

Farmer laughed and added, "I would imagine if you went to a Louisville practice, or a BYU practice, they would look about the same as ours. After all, it worked pretty well for Coach."

Louisville is coached by Denny Crum and BYU by Frank Arnold, both of whom served under Wooden at UCLA.

Nicklaus starts new year, Trevino starts new career

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus will be starting a new year and Lee Trevino will be starting a new career at the $375,000 Bob Hope Desert Classic this week.

For Nicklaus, it's back to business as usual in the game where he's been a major force for 22 years.

For Trevino, it's a brand new, entirely different game. He will make his first appearance as a golf commentator for NBC-TV, which is scheduled to provide network coverage of the tournament on Saturday and Sunday.

"I'm excited about it, looking forward to it. It's something I've always wanted to do," said Trevino, who has signed a contract to handle commentary on about a dozen golf tournaments this season.

Trevino, whose fast-paced patter and endless string of one-liners has helped make him one of the most popular players, will not compete in tournaments NBC is televising.

"But I'll fill in with tournaments not on the network schedule," playing about 16 American tour events this year, he said.

Trevino, 43, suffered from back trouble most of last year. It was the first time he'd gone through an entire season without a victory since he won the U.S. Open in 1968.

Nicklaus, on the other hand, broke a two-year winless streak last season when he won the Colonial National Invitation. He lost another in a playoff and appeared to have a record fifth U.S. Open title 'til Tom Watson beat him with a dramatic chip-in on the 71st hole at Pebble Beach.

Alex English named NBA player of week

NEW YORK (AP) — Alex English, who averaged more than 34 points a game last week in leading the Denver Nuggets to three victories in four starts, was named the National Basketball Association's player of the week.
English, the second-leading scorer in the league with an average of 29.8 points a game, also averaged eight assists and eight rebounds a game during the week, and shot .573 from the field and .963 from the foul line.

Years ago, archeologists rummaging through the ruins of ancient Egypt uncovered a tomb dating back to 5,200 B.C. and found the remains of a child along with a rounded stone and a cone-shaped object similar to that of a bowling pin.
This discovery, plus others, led to the conclusion that this popular participant sport conceivably was at one time a diversion for the pharaohs.
Maybe so, maybe not.
Bruce Pluckhahn of Milwaukee, curator of the National Bowling Hall of Fame and Museum, is willing to accept this as more than wild speculation just as he is ready to let everybody know that Abraham Lincoln was the first American president to try to knock over the pins, that Ulysses S. Grant was an avid bowler and that Richard Nixon had an average in the 170s.
Pluckhahn is touring the country searching for artifacts and helping promote the sport's new $7.2 million shrine to be formally opened in St. Louis in the spring of 1984.
The pharaohs and the presidents are just a few of the legends of the sport to be preserved in tapestry, oils and statuary in the lavish, three-story museum which Pluckhahn promises will outshine every other sports Hall of Fame in existence.

The structure, which will follow bowling from its primitive beginning to its 20th Century electronics, will be located across the street from St. Louis' Busch Stadium.
Anheuser-Busch is helping underwrite the project.
"Ours is one of the oldest Halls of Fame, started in 1941 in Greendale, Wis.," said the curator, who happens to wear a second hat as secretary of the ASMHF (Association of Sports Museums and Halls of Fame). "Baseball started on by three years earlier, the USGA Golf Museum in 1940, football, basketball and tennis later.

"Cooperstown is a lovely little village in upstate New York, chosen under the false premise that Gen. Abner Doubleday invented baseball there in the Civil War era. Unfortunately, it is isolated and very hard to get to.
"Basketball's Hall of Fame, first located on the campus of Springfield (Mass.) College where Dr. James Naismith hung up his first peach baskets, also was so out of the way that its directors chose to move it to another spot in the city.

"Of all the Halls of Fame, the Pro Football Hall of Fame in Canton, Ohio, which is on a busy interstate highway, draws the most people — around 375,000 last year. Centrally located, in a sports-minded city, we expect to draw 250,000 annually."
Bowling is a unique sport. Ten million men, women and children compete regularly in sanctioned leagues and 40 million additionally, according to the Harris Poll, enjoy it on a periodic basis.
This far exceeds participants in tennis and golf.
The Pro Bowlers Tour (ABC-TV), a 1 1/2 hourly feature on Saturdays in season, has higher ratings than college basketball, baseball, boxing and golf shown in the same time frame on rival networks.
There are 8,000 bowling centers in the United States and Canada, some of them recreational palaces, valued at $6 billion.

Baseball fantasy set to begin drills in pitching, hitting, catching, fielding, base running, sliding and other basic fundamentals.

Among the amateurs is Dr. Harry Soloway, a 45-year-old psychiatrist from Chicago, who claims to be an ardent Cub fan for more than 30 years.
"I'm here because I want to demystify it," he said. "I spend so much time watching the Cubs that I'd like to feel what it's like to wear a uniform, to sit on the bench. I'd like to spit, maybe get a couple of hits. To me, it's just a glorious fantasy."

One of the first over-35 player to sign up was ex-Chicago Bears quarterback Bobby Douglass, who briefly played minor league baseball for the Chicago White Sox in 1979 after retirement from the National Football League.

A hard-throwing, left-handed pitcher, Douglass was let go by the White Sox organization after walking 13 batters in seven innings at the Class AAA level.
Hundley said he tried to schedule a second camp but later scrapped the idea because of problems booking a site.

Oiler coach list tall

HOUSTON (AP) — The list of Houston Oilers coaches might not be as impressive as the downtown skyline. But it's almost as tall.

The team, founded in 1960, has had 11 head coaches. There has been a head coaching change or strong rumor of change in 15 of the team's 23 years.

Lou Rymkus was the first coach, leading the Oilers to the first championship in the former American Football League.

Rymkus always liked to tell his players he was a hard-nosed son of a gun, and they believed him. He liked to regale them with stories about the knee that popped out during his playing career with the Cleveland Browns after World War II.

"The trainer showed me how to put the knee back in place," Rymkus said. "I learned to do it in the huddle. I never had to leave the field. I played offense, defense and special teams."

"After the season, I went to Paul Brown, our coach, and said, 'Paul, I need an operation.' He told me, 'An operation? I didn't know anything was wrong.'"

Now 63, Rymkus hasn't slacked off. He lives partly on Social Security. But if his car breaks down, he'd have no trouble picking up the check on foot. He slips out of his and his wife's apartment and jogs at least two miles each morning. He also walks at least two miles daily.

"Getting around is no problem," said Rymkus, who also helps sons Pat and Mike in their real estate businesses. "When I went to my first pro training camp with the Browns after the war, I had to hitch rides. I wasn't much different from anybody else there. Otto Graham was the only player who had a car."

"The money was different then. They paid me $2,000 for the year. There was no bonus. No extra money for exhibition games. No nothing. Today, a first-round draft choice is set for life as soon as he signs. The difference then was that we loved the game."

Rymkus still loves the game and looks sufficiently fit to play it. He blocked and tackled for Notre Dame at 225, puffed up to 240 for his pro career as an offensive and defensive tackle, then settled back to 225.

"That's where I am today," he said. "That's where I want to stay. I feel great. I like my Scotch. But I stay away from sweets. One thing I believed as a coach was: If you look fat, you'll think fat and play fat."

"When I played pro ball, I never let myself get out of shape after the season. My lunch break was a glass of milk and a handball game. I used to do a little boxing and wrestling, too."

His ring background might have intimidated the Oiler players, whom he coached in 1960 and 1961. Rymkus would run and exercise with them. He chewed on them, too. But there were no fights. Old-timers say any player who had a confrontation with the fire-breathing coach backed down.

"Hell, yes," Rymkus snapped. "I was only 40 then. I was in terrific shape."

There was little disharmony during that first season. The Oilers breezed to a 10-4 record, then defeated the Los Angeles Chargers at Jeppesen Stadium in the first AFL championship game. The stadium later changed its name to Robertson.

second season after a distraction-filled training camp in Hawaii.

"Training in Hawaii wasn't my idea," said Rymkus. "(Owner) Bud Adams wanted to go out there. We weren't ready to play when the season started."

The Hawaii trip created one of the early problems between Rymkus and Adams. The owner would phone Rymkus late each night when the season started, and Rymkus grew tired of it. "You ought to come to practice," Rymkus once told his boss.

The Oilers lost three of their first four games. When they tied the Patriots in the fifth game, Rymkus became the first Oiler head coach to be fired.

Wally Lemm took over, and the team won nine straight games, then whipped the Chargers in the second AFL championship game. But Lemm then quit to become head coach of the NFL St. Louis Cardinals, and the Oilers began a decline that saw them fail to cluster two straight winning seasons until 1977-78.

Asked when the Oilers will prosper again, Rymkus said, "I don't know if things will ever change. Bud is a typical rich kid who hasn't grown up. I hired all the assistant coaches for that first team. Bud jumped on me about getting the highest-paid staff in the league. I told him we also had the best staff in the league."

Rymkus isn't happy with what he sees in players, either.

"They're pampered in high school and pampered in college," he said. "I look at the Oilers, and they don't hustle off and on the field. They play well only in spurts. Even when Bum Phillips was here and the team won, they didn't hustle enough."

"I made our players hustle and care about their image. I wouldn't allow smoking in the dressing room. I told them, 'If you're a smoker and a kid asks for your autograph, be sure you're three blocks away from him before you light up.' Kids look up to players."

"I hope my players remember me as being fair and firm," Rymkus said. "I don't care if they liked me. I wasn't in a popularity contest. But I wanted them to respect me. I think they did. When I walked into a room with them, you could hear a pin drop."

"That's what you need. Respect. X's and O's don't win for you. The psychological side of coaching is what does it."

Texas cager quits squad

AUSTIN (AP) — Sophomore starting guard Jack Worthington has resigned from the University of Texas Longhorn basketball team because of the program's "pressure" and probably will leave the university, team officials say.

"Jack and I have discussed his situation as it pertains to our basketball program and the University of Texas," head coach Bob Weltlich said Monday.

"He feels that the pressure surrounding basketball at Texas is such that it is in his best interest to continue his education elsewhere," the coach said.

Worthington probably will transfer schools, said Lynne Niemiec, assistant sports information director. His teammates speculate Worthington will transfer to Southwest Texas State University in San Marcos, she said.

The Longhorns are 0-3 in Southwest Conference play and 5-9 on the season. They were drubbed 77-52 by the University of Houston Saturday.

Worthington has been the only starter for the Longhorns this year who also played on the 1981-82 squad. Junior forward Mike Wacker remains sidelined with a knee injury.

"Jack has been an integral part of our program and, although we hate to see him leave, we wish him and his wife well."

Through the Houston game, Worthington ranked fifth on the team in scoring with a 5.6 points-per-game average. He led the team in assists with 53, and ranked fifth in rebounding and steals.

Last year, Worthington won a starting job and finished the season with a 6.8 scoring average, leading the team in assists with 82 and steals with 28.

Two other Longhorns are out with injuries, Weltlich said.

HEALTH Exercise with lung disease

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My 67-year-old husband has been on 24-hour-a-day oxygen for emphysema for the last two and a half years under the care of a physician. He is 6 feet 2 and weighs 202 pounds. His physician tells him he is fully ambulatory, yet he simply tenses up and loses his breath when he attempts to do any exercises or even rises from a chair, rather quickly, to answer the phone located six feet away.

He takes Minipress, Dyrenium, Lasix and aminophylline. He also has inhalation therapy four times daily.
My husband wants to know if you have any advice as to what exercises he can use and how to go about starting them without fear of losing his breath.

DEAR READER — In
general, physical activity helps to maintain health and the normal range of body functions. There are medical conditions that limit or even make it impossible to exercise. If your husband can just maintain his equilibrium healthwise sitting still he certainly cannot do much that would increase his oxygen demands. The answer as to the type of exercise he can do depends greatly on how much he can increase his oxygen supply to his body.

I would suggest that you discuss his problem with his doctor and see if a physical therapist can help in designing a program that is appropriate for his state. He might be able to start doing some muscle contraction and relaxation exercises while sitting in a chair — voluntarily tensing and relaxing his leg muscles, then his abdominal muscles,
and then his arm muscles.
These might be all right if his physician OKs them. A good approach in patients with limited reserve is to exercise one part of the body at a time.

Your husband not only needs to know exactly what he can do but may need someone with him to help him start his activity program until it is established that it is not going to make him uncomfortable.
In general I favor patients with lung disease having a suitable exercise program if their condition permits it.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 45 years old and raised four children in Chicago. I had one doctor all my life. He brought my four children into this world, cured all illnesses, repaired broken bones, operated when necessary and was the doctor who came to see us in the hospital.

He retired and we moved to the suburbs. When we call on our new doctor he recommends a specialist. He has never done anything except recommend someone else.
My son had a throat infection and he recommended a specialist who referred him to still another specialist. I inquired and found out all the doctors here are the same. What happened to the family doctor? How can I find a real doctor and not a referral service?

DEAR READER — Many people feel frustrated as you do. Medicine has greatly expanded since your early years and offers many more complex, and life saving, services. But your best bet for what you are asking for is a specialist, in Family Practice. Get a board certified one and you will likely have one who has enough confidence in the broad field of medicine to handle your usual requirements. Ask your county medical society for names.

man convicted of murdering an 8-year-old girl and suspected in several West Texas murders entered a plea of innocent to a capital murder charge in the stabbing death of the child's ctions.

Ann Landers

Consider alternatives

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Why are there so many women in the world who regularly get their brains beat out by some S.O.B. who couldn't make the team, was overshadowed by his kid brother or never was elected to a class office?

A neighbor of ours had this problem and finally solved it with direct action. One night Mr. Nasty, who once knocked six of her teeth out because the soup was cold, yelled, "I'm in the tub, get in here and wash my back!" She went in, all right—with a length of rubber hose—and beat the daylight out of him. Every time he tried to get up she knocked him down. He ended up pleading for mercy. Never again did he lay a hand on her.

Another nice guy, who broke his wife's nose because she mismatched his socks, also had a habit of belittling her in front of friends. During a dinner party at their home one evening, he made an insulting remark to his wife as she was bringing in the rice pudding. She dumped the entire casserole over his head, put on her coat and left—for good.

Another case was the turkey who always departed from a gathering with the remark, "Come on, mother of three!" Finally she got fed up and replied, "OK, father of one."

This letter is to tell those dummies that they don't have to take it anymore. There are plenty of alternatives. — Big Bill In Boston

DEAR BILL: I agree, there are alternatives, but I don't recommend the rubber hose or rice pudding "solutions." The next letter suggests a more plausible (and infinitely safer) way to go.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am writing in the hope that I can help other abused and battered women who are afraid to seek help. I was one myself. Several months ago I decided to do something about it. I was scared to death to cross my old man, but I made up my mind I didn't deserve the treatment I was getting and I wasn't going to take it anymore.

A friend told me about Women's Strength in Peroia. It's a place where a battered woman can go to get protection, food, housing and counseling. If she has children, they will take them too. There is no pressure. No requirements. They are there to talk to the women who come in, but only if they want to talk. They help these women get state aid until they find jobs and a permanent place to live. The twice-a-week meetings for newcomers are wonderful. Once these women know they are no longer alone, their lives change.

I have returned to Galesburg and no longer live with my abuser. Please, Ann, tell those thousands (maybe millions) of women who stay in situations where they got knocked around that they don't have to take it. There IS help for them if they will just accept it. — Free At Last

DEAR FREE: Thanks for a very encouraging letter. I hope you have given strength and courage to those women who are where you were several months ago. At the risks of boring my readers, I will tell them once more where to go for help if there is no Women's Strength in their cities. Check your telephone directory under "Women's Services." Also the Salvation Army can usually put you up on an emergency basis or your local YWCA may be able to help.

College names honor students

Four students from Hereford have been named to the President's and Dean's Honor Lists at South Plains College, Levelland, for the 1982 fall semester.

Michael Fraser is included on the President's List, having maintained a 4.0 or straight "A" grade point average for the semester.

Greg Robinson, Tonya Savage and Deanna Stokesberry were named to the Dean's List for maintaining a minimum grade point average of 3.25.

All honor students must enroll for a minimum of 12 semester hours.

'Dealing With Feelings' is topic

"Dealing with Feelings" will be the topic of discussion at the second Alcohol - Use and Abuse session this evening. The free class will be held at the First United Methodist Church from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

Anyone interested in learning more about the use of beverage alcohol and how to make responsible decisions concerning alcohol is encouraged to attend. A film entitled "Feelings" will be shown with a time of questions afterwards.

Coordinators of the six-series program are the Hereford Family Services Center and the First United Methodist Church.

Balderaz receives Master Baker Award

Angie Balderaz, manager of the bakery department at Moore's Jack & Jill, was recently awarded the third quarter Master Baker Award and received a gold pendant for outstanding service.

Recognition as the top baker of all Jack & Jill bakeries in this region, which includes several states, makes Mrs. Balderaz eligible for the annual Master Baker Award, where she will compete against the other quarter winners, according to Bobby Moore, store manager.

Mrs. Balderaz has been employed by Moore's Jack & Jill for a little over a year. She had previously worked for Ideal in the same location for seven years. She and her husband, Danny, have six children.

Club joins Association

Members of the Hereford Garden Club voted to join the National Arbor Day Association, and plant three black walnut trees this spring, when they met in the home of Mrs. Clinton Jackson on Friday afternoon.

The club began planning the upcoming District Garden Club meeting to be held in the Community Center March 14-15. All committees for the convention will be appointed soon. Mrs. Jackson will be general chairman and Jane White will serve as co-chairman.

A western theme will welcome the approximately 100 women coming from over 50 countries.

The nominating committee reported on the slate of officers for the new year and they were voted in. They include Mrs. Jackson, president; Mrs. Ed Lemons, first vice-president; Mrs. Ray Johnson, second vice-president; Mrs. O.G. Hill Sr., third vice-president.

Also, Mrs. H.R. Cocanougher, recording secretary; Mrs. Art Stoy corresponding secretary; Mrs.

Alfred Smith, treasurer; and Mrs. John Jacobsen, parliamentarian.

Mrs. Hill spoke on "Let's do it Right," using Roberts' Rule of Order.

Mrs. Ben Childers gave a talk on "Weathered Wood" with quotes from Bob Thomas, expert arranger. Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Hill showed several flower arrangements.

Members attendings were Mmes. Childers, R.L. Ethridge, D.N. Garner, David Grounsnick, Hill, E.C. Hromas, Jackson, Jacobsen, Lemons, Smith, Stoy, Jack Wilcox, and Campbell.

Vision more important than sight

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — A new state senator, blind since his college days, admits his job will be a challenge but says the Legislature needs people "with ability to think more than people who can see."

Bob Ryan, who was sworn in Monday, is the state's first blind legislator and only the second Republican this century to be elected from heavily Democratic Las Vegas.

He was born in Brooklyn, N.Y., in 1947 with glaucoma that grew steadily worse until, in college, he was totally sightless. He conceded there are questions about whether he can handle his new job.

"There are going to be people looking over my shoulder, but I can do it," he said. "We need people with ability to think more than people who can see."

Ryan, 35, also said that during each step of his career in journalism, broadcasting and politics, "I was told I couldn't handle it. But I wanted the opportunity to fail."

He worked with ABC's outspoken sportscaster, Howard Cosell, which he said "prepared me for anything."

did you know?

Keeping the customer's fuel adjustment cost down is my primary responsibility. I, along with Karen Roberts, Grafton Clarke, Barry Smith, and others, purchase fuels—coal, natural gas, oil—at the lowest possible prices. We negotiate with fuels suppliers to modify on-going contracts so the total cost to SPS customers for fuel is again minimized. And we plan ways to shift the production load among Southwestern's 27 generating units so that the fuel cost to our customers is made as low as possible.

Morris Rantz, fuel administration manager, Amarillo.

Computerized equipment helps SPS battle the costs of fuel. Every 10 seconds, we run a computer scan of all of our power generating units. The scan checks each unit's efficiency of operation, and calculates each unit's per-kilowatt-hour cost at that given moment. Then—for the sake of economy—we may immediately increase the generation at one unit, and decrease generation at one or more of the others. Our objective: At any instant in time to be producing electricity at the lowest possible fuel cost.

John H. Evans, manager electrical operations, Amarillo.

A new SPS ally is helping you manage electricity costs. Coal-fired Tolk Station, an efficient 561,000-kilowatt power plant near Muleshoe, Texas, began commercial production in August. We predict that the fuel cost adjustment our customers pay will be significantly lower over the life of Tolk Station than it would be if Tolk had never been built. In fact, Tolk Station for the next 35 years should save SPS customers about $50 million per year.

Roy Thomas, vice-president operations, Amarillo.
