District needs roof repair; principal, directors hired

By JERI CURTIS
Managing Editor

School board preparations for next year included voting to take bids on approximately $593,000 in priority roof repairs and hiring of teachers and administrators.

In an hour-long special meeting, prior to the regular meeting, the board reviewed a roof survey conducted by Shiver-Megert which had a breakdown immediate repair needed and of secondary work which could be postponed.

Shiver-Megert recommended that Tierra Blanca and West Central Schools be completely re-roofed. An estimate set the job at $152,250.

The other elementary schools, the high school, both junior highs and the administration building all also need priority repair done which would cost approximately $441,950.

The board voted to allow Shiver-Megert to return with specifications on each job in order to advertise for bids.

Another $355,900 in secondary repairs was not voted upon Tuesday. Construction problems with White-Frutzman, contractor for the media center projects, also was settled at the regular board meeting. The company will be paid $26,000 on its contract with $3,000 withheld until the architect approves the roof repair.

Richard Rendon was hired on a two year contract as principal of Stanton Junior High, filling the vacancy of Bobbie Decker who is moving to Weatherford to coach. Rendon has been assistant principal at Brownfield High School since August of 1983. Prior to that he taught history and was assistant varsity football and track coach at BHS. Rendon received his bachelor's degree from West Texas State University and his master's from Sul Ross.

His wife Virginia will join the district as an elementary teacher.

Corky Lockmiller, director of special education at Dimmitt Schools, will take the post for Hereford for the retiring Marjorie Laister. Lockmiller has been the Dimmitt director since July of 1981 after working with the Hereford district as an educational diagnostician.

James McClaskey moves from within the Hereford district to become the high school band director. He has been director at La Plata Junior High since 1983. He earned his bachelor's degree from Abilene Christian College and his master's from WTSU. He assumes the duties of Johnny Martinez who resigned last month.

The board also granted Sara Cook a leave of absence and accepted resignations from Celeste Hagaman, Ann Kelley, Helen Skypala, Bobby Decker, Margaret Valdez, Ruth Taylor, Paula Martinez, Phyllis Gerdson and Bonnie Decker.

Hired as teachers were Joanne Bone, Sharon Brorman, Margo Sims, Paul Abundez, Kevin Kelley, Nadine Rice, Pamela Burroughs, Toni McElroy, Patricia Ann Brown, Virginia Rendon, Lori Erdman, Susan Denise Cardinal, and Camille Beville.

Mal Manchee, assistant superintendent, reported on exit level testing re-takes for juniors who did not master the Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills (TEAMS). Of 41 students taking the mathematics segment again, 25 mastered the skills. On the language arts re-take, 14 of 34 mastered the skills.

Manchee presented a review of the test in grades 3, 5, 7, 9, and 11.

On the California Achievement Test (CAT), assistant superintendent for curriculum Marc Williamson reported that percentile scores were lower this year, but said it was

Strikes state regulations

Court upholds abortion

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The Supreme Court, issuing another ringing reaffirmation of its 1973 decision legalizing abortion, today struck down Pennsylvania regulations that would make abortions more difficult to obtain.

By a 5-4 vote, the court said the Pennsylvania regulations impermissibly interfere with women's constitutional right to end their pregnancies.

The Reagan administration had urged the justices to use the case to overturn their landmark decision legalizing abortion, a bold move even pro-life forces believed had little chance of succeeding.

The 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in 1984 struck down various provisions of Pennsylvania's 1982 abortion control law.

Those provisions would have required:

- That doctors obtain the "informed consent" of women seeking abortions after telling them about "detrimental physical and psychological effects which are not accurately foreseeable" and about medical assistance benefits available for prenatal care and childbirth. The consent could be given only after a 24-hour waiting period.

- That doctors file various reports for the public record about each abortion they perform.

- That doctors performing third-trimester abortions, which are rare, use procedures least risky to a fetus capable of surviving outside the womb.

- That two doctors be present to perform third-trimester abortions. The law did not specifically provide an exception for emergencies.

Today, the Supreme Court agreed with the 3rd Circuit court that the provisions cannot pass constitutional muster.

"States are not free, under the guise of protecting maternal health or potential life, to intimidate women into continuing pregnancies," Justice Harry A. Blackmun wrote for the court.

Blackmun, author of the 1973 decision legalizing abortion, added that the Pennsylvania regulations "wholly subordinate constitutional privacy interests and concerns with maternal health in an effort to deter a woman from making a decision that, with her physician, is hers to make."

Blackmun noted that the national debate over abortion has been bitter, and that the abortion issue "raises moral and spiritual questions over which honorable persons can disagree sincerely and profoundly."

"But those disagreements did not then and do not now relieve us of our duty to apply the Constitution faithfully," Blackmun said. "Few decisions are more personal and intimate, more properly private or more basic to individual dignity and autonomy than a woman's decision - with the guidance of her physician and within the limits specified in (the court's 1973 ruling) - whether to end her pregnancy."

"A woman's right to make that choice freely is fundamental," Blackmun said.

Joining Blackmun were Justices William J. Brennan, Thurgood Marshall, Lewis F. Powell and John Paul Stevens.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices Byron R. White, William H. Rehnquist and Sandra Day O'Connor dissented.

Congress launches shuttle probe

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Members of Congress, pledging to be tougher on the nation's space agency in the wake of the Challenger accident, asked top NASA officials to testify today and show a 20-minute film of the shuttle explosion.

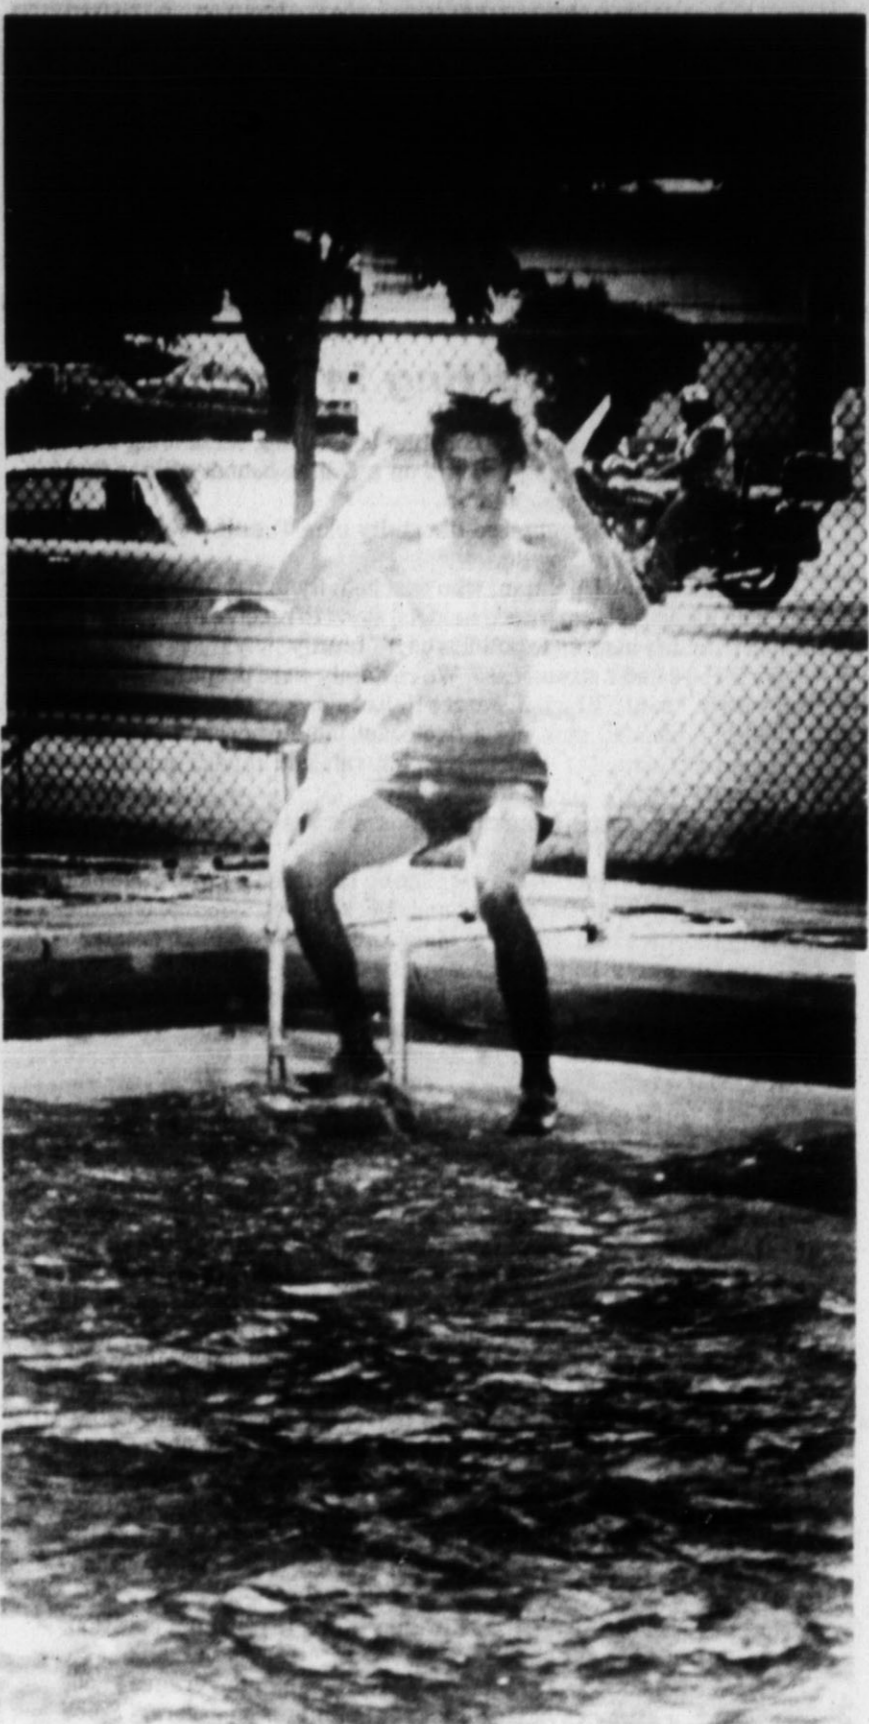

James C. Fletcher, the new administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, along with William R. Graham, who was acting administrator at the time of the Jan. 28 disaster, and Adm. Richard Truly, director of the shuttle program, were scheduled to testify before the House Science and Technology Committee.

They were to show the panel a film containing computer-enhanced 70 mm footage of the breakup of the shuttle 73 seconds after it was launched.

Lawmakers said they wanted to ask the NASA officials about the accident and how the space agency plans to respond to the recommendations made Monday by the Rogers commission investigating the accident.

Among the commission's recommendations were that NASA redesign the shuttle's solid booster rockets and other shuttle systems and improve agency management and safety.

Commission Chairman William P. Rogers and Vice Chairman Neil Armstrong appeared Tuesday before both the House committee and the Senate Commerce Committee as Congress launched a lengthy series of hearings into the tragedy that killed seven astronauts.

What's cooking for Father's Day? Why, beef, of course. The Texas CowBelles and the Texas Beef Industry Council have joined with Gov. Mark White to promote Beef for Father's Day. The governor signed a proclamation stating that beef is a nutritious food which fits well into today's lifestyles.

"We want to tie beef to Father's Day like turkey has been tied to Thanksgiving," said Lucille Sterling, Texas CowBelles president. CowBelles in Hereford are getting in to the spirit by cooperating with Jack & Jill to conduct in-store demonstrations on June 14. The CowBelles will prepare kabobs featuring all-beef sausage.

You should have done some of these things for Mother's Day, but if it slipped your mind try the following gifts for Dad on his special day coming up soon:

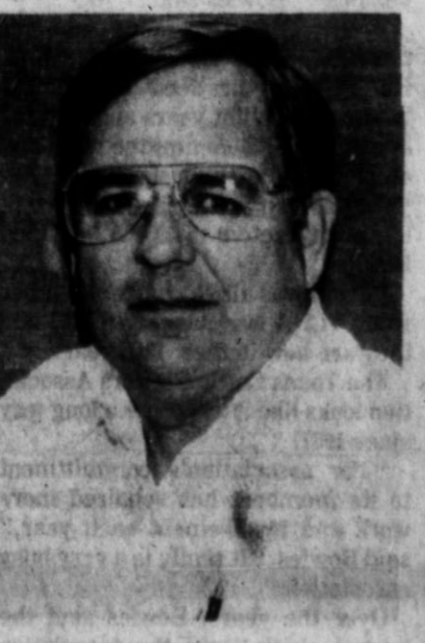

1. The gift of a compliment.
2. The gift of thanks.
3. A gift of affection.
4. A gift of listening.
5. The gift of a note.
6. A gift of forgiveness.
7. A gift of laughter.

Just stop and think about these gifts. They cost nothing, yet they are perfect and everlasting. They are one of a kind and bound to please because they are gifts of oneself.

Remember them at every opportunity. They mean so much and last so long, it's a shame we don't use them every day of our lives to give to someone close, someone dear, someone we love and respect.

stood up to the Dairy Termination Program.

"We are not satisfied with the government subsidizing the dairy industry through herd liquidation programs," said Bowles.

"But the result of that lawsuit we filed is that we think we can monitor and lessen the impact of the beef supply brought on by the Dairy Termination Program.

"What we're doing now, is we're monitoring the government beef purchase versus the dairy cow slaughter.

"The purchase of beef is supposed to be equivalent to the excess beef put on the market," explained Bowles.

He said the cattle feeders are as happy as they can be under the circumstances, but seemed to want to keep a close eye on the government.

"The government allowed certain dairymen to sell their whole dairy outfits and they payed them for their dairy production and the farmers still had their cows to sell after them," said Bowles.

According to Bowles, the net effect of the Dairy Termination Program caused total disruption of the beef markets.

"The psychological affect and all the beef coming into market just demolished the beef markets," he said.

As an example, Bowles explained that the program made cow beef drop $20 per hundred weight of beef.

"There's not any producer that can manage his business with that kind of disruption," stressed Bowles.

"All we can do from here is to continue to see that the USDA complies with the terms of our settlement (the matching of purchases)," he said hopefully.

"In addition, we need to give our markets time to recover," Bowles added. Bowles speculated that it would be the end of summer in September before favorable beef prices are seen.

"The dairy termination program has cost the feedlot industry over a billion dollars," said Bowles. "An individual producer would probably realize a decrease of a $100 less per head income from the sale of his cattle."

Looking on the other side of the fence, Bowles was very enthusiastic about shipping beef to Brazil because it is new business to the industry.

"And it represents the single largest export purchase the beef industry has ever seen," he smiled.

"The exporting of our product is an area that the industry has tried to expand in for a number of years," said Bowles of TCFA. "And hopefully, the sale to Brazil will help us expand."

Bowles commented that the cattle feeders were surprised by the Brazil sale, but also very thankful. He also mentioned that a large part of the Brazilian sale will be represent choice beef, not just dairy beef.

Encountering different governmental issues that affected the beef producers, the Texas Cattle Feeders have had to join together and get recognition as a group before being heard in Congress.

Sentencing awaiting in bombing

AUSTIN (AP) — A San Marcos man is awaiting sentencing after pleading guilty to stashing a bomb on a Dallas-bound jetliner that carried his wife and three children.

Albert Lee Thielman entered the guilty plea Tuesday before U.S. District Judge James Nowlin.

Prosecutors said Thielman, who was heavily in debt from gambling, drug use and visits to nude models, stood to receive more than $2 million from life insurance policies on his family.

"We feel we had a strong case. We certainly were prepared to go to trial with it," said FBI agent James R. Echols.

Thielman pleaded guilty to a two-count indictment alleging that he placed a destructive device on an aircraft and caused damage to an aircraft.

Each charge carries a maximum possible sentence of 20 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

The bomb was hidden in the luggage of Thielman's family. He had accompanied them to the airport and checked their luggage onto the plane, authorities said. His wife, Mary, and children were en route to their grandparents' home in Iowa.

The bomb exploded in the luggage compartment when the plane landed at Dallas, causing minor damage but no injuries to the 154 people aboard.

Illegal aliens smuggled in trucks

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Illegal aliens were transported in trucks that carried U.S. mail to Texas and Arizona, according to federal officials who claim they have broken up a 12-year-old smuggling ring.

Ten people were arrested in a week-long sweep by agents of the U.S. Border Patrol here and in Fort Worth, said Jim Selbe, agent in charge of the Border Patrol's anti-smuggling unit in El Paso.

Three others were still at large Tuesday night, officials said.

All 13 were indicted by a federal grand jury in Fort Worth on May 27 on "multiple felony violations of federal statutes relating to the transportation and conspiracy to transport aliens illegally into the United States," said a news release Tuesday from the Border Patrol.

The ring started operating in 1974 and has smuggled more than 10,000 illegal aliens from the Caribbean and Central America into the United States, using "safe houses" in Mexico, Texas and Arizona, said Selbe.

The ring has reaped at least $15 million in its 12 years of operation, Selbe said.

"They're not required to keep a set of books, but it averages $1,500 (per alien), a little heavy on some, a little lighter on others," Selbe said. "They've got a good 12 years of good business. They're doing pretty good."

Two bodies found in train wreckage

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Investigators are hopeful that autopsies on two burned bodies found in the wreckage of a derailed freight train will provide the identities of the victims.

A Union Pacific Railroad spokesman said all crew members have been accounted for. Neither has anyone in the area of the accident, which occurred about 12:50 p.m. Sunday, been reported missing, said spokesman John Bromley.

Bromley speculated that the victims may be hobos who were hitching a ride on the ill-fated train.

The bodies were discovered about 3 p.m. Tuesday as crews worked to douse the still-burning wreckage.

About 700 area residents remained barred from returning to their homes Tuesday night because officials feared further explosions.

Seven tank cars filled with hazardous chemicals were among the 32 railroad cars derailed from the 80-car Union Pacific Railroad train as it crossed a trestle over Salado Creek in San Antonio.

As many as 2,000 people had been evacuated during the ongoing cleanup.

Pilots start 'Flags of Freedom' flight

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Eight pilots planned to take off Wednesday on a round-the-world "Flags of Freedom" flight to celebrate the 150th birthdays this year of Texas and South Australia.

Mineola pilot Wayne Collins, one of the organizers, said he believes the two states have a lot more in common than their 150th anniversaries — "a similar pioneer spirit ... a let's go out and get 'em" attitude."

The insignia for the flight is a "Kangahorn," an Australian kangaroo sporting the long horns of Texas' famous cattle breed.

Collins said the pilots — which include two "honorary Texans" from Wisconsin and a third from West Germany — also hope the flight will highlight general aviation and show on their 18 international stops how it can be a vehicle for communication among nations.

The pilots plan leave from Texas Air Expo '86 in Waco Wednesday morning, and fly their single-engine aircrafts in formation to Australia and then on around the world in 24 days.

FHA shutdown could hurt sales

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Housing Administration's sixth shutdown in nine months is having little immediate impact on home sales, but industry experts warn it could be troublesome unless Congress acts quickly to put FHA back in business.

"We've been out of business for a month" since last October 1, Silvio DeBartolomeis, FHA's acting administrator, said Tuesday.

"Congress has given us a vacation and they didn't even know it."

Since last fall, Congress has granted FHA a series of short extensions of its statutory authority, at times using the legislation as a vehicle to which other bills are attached.

FHA's authority was suspended for 11 days last December and 10 days in March before Congress enacted extender bills.

Opposition to weapons grows

WASHINGTON (AP) — Opponents of chemical weapons say a report critical of the Pentagon's Bigeye bomb will provide them with ammunition to oppose the Pentagon's chief nerve gas weapon when Congress considers the defense budget.

"This bomb is a turkey to end all turkeys," Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., said Tuesday as he released a General Accounting Office report. "I'm willing to dig my heels in and fight this."

Pryor and two other opponents of chemical weapons, Reps. Dante Fascell, D-Fla., and John Edward Porter, R-Ill., made the report public at a news conference and pledged to oppose President Reagan's request for $56.9 million next year to build Bigeyes.

The trio were the main Capitol Hill opponents last year when Congress finally reversed itself and approved production of new U.S. chemical weapons for the first time since 1969.

Reagan says chemical weapons are needed to offset a growing Soviet arsenal, but opponents contend the current U.S. stockpile is enough to deter the Soviets. The size of the two arsenals is classified, but most accounts put the U.S. stockpile at 35,000 tons to 40,000 tons while the Soviets arsenal is estimated at 400,000 tons.

due to a change in the test. For example, on one graph he showed it indicated that a first grade percentile score of 22 on this year's test would be equivalent to a 50 percentile score on the 1977 test. He noted that the differential decreased the higher the grade level.

Williamson also presented the board an update on the dyslexia program which is mandated by the state. Hereford is on schedule with its first stage of data gathering. Advance placement exams also are state mandated and must be implemented by next May. Williamson said a strict eligibility outline is given by the state for elementary levels to prevent students from simply taking "shortcuts." The district will be developing grade level tests for each subject. The Curriculum Committee will be studying the matter also.

Another state matter was noted by Manchec, who said alterations by the state in the discipline management plan submitted by the district were "just housekeeping changes" such as typographical errors.

In committee and administrative reports:

- Assistant superintendent Larry Wartes said junking five busses the district has for sale may net more money than in the required state bidding system.
- Wartes said the cafeteria made a little money this year, but that revenue would be needed for capital improvements. Lunch prices should remain stable.
- Tax collections are at about 91 percent, down slightly from this time last year.
- Hereford Educators Association president Mary Hendrickson said the national association is setting up grants to study the dropout problem. In Texas, Hendrickson said, one of three students quit school.
- The Classroom Teachers Association reorted that new officers were attending leadership conferences.
- Llano Estacado Boy Scouts offered the district $3,900 career awareness program. The Pupil Services Committee will consider it.

Some band uniforms older than musicians

It's not that hand-me-downs aren't good enough for the Hereford High band, but some of the uniforms are older than who's in them. Some kids are wearing the marching clothes their parents wore.

Carol Gerk of the HHS Band Boosters brought a show-and-tell appeal to the Hereford Schools board of trustees Tuesday night to encourage them to consider a new wardrobe for the musicians, who she said want to wear the same color as the rest of the school groups. Players want to be the Mighty Maroon, instead of Big Red, so they can match the cheerleaders and athletes.

Gerk brought a few of the current uniforms — which were purchased in the 1960s — to show that some were in good shape, some were fair and some were poor. The "worse than poor" uniforms were used to repair the others. "The Pride of Hereford is in patches," she told the board.

Whipping out her posters of a cost breakdown, Gerk showed that replacement uniforms in 1985 had cost $312, but that the same manufacturer in Wichita, Kan., could produce a new design for approximately $307.

Mark Bullard, a student, modeled the prototype obtained by the boosters.

It came with maroon and white pants. It had a removable white breastplate vest which showed a tuxedo style jacket in maroon. The maroon pants with a black side stripe could be worn in formal concerts by adding a bow tie and black shoes to the outfit.

Gerk said the band wanted unity and with a new football coach, a new band director and the school entering a new 4-A district, it would be an appropriate time to make the purchase.

Need and versatility of the uniforms weren't hard to sell. But next year's tight budget has to be considered, the board noted. The item was turned over to the Pupil Services Committee until the next meeting.

TCFA

started about three years ago stepping up the TCFA's budget and it's efforts in the area of legislative affairs," Bowles said.

Bowles said there had been too many situations, like the Dairy Termination Bill, that brought this legislative action about.

"We needed to establish clout in Washington to protect our interests," he said. "In that period of time, we have made our presence known in the halls of Congress with the senators and congressmen and their staffs."

"The effect of that is that they know we are group to be reckoned with and we will hold them accountable for their farm programs," said Bowles sternly.

"They've heard us and they know we're out here to look out for the interest of the cattle industry and the United States taxpayer," he added.

According to Bowles, approximately $1 billion is taken from the taxpayer's money by the government to develop subsidy programs that pay dairy producers to go out of business.

"And approximately 14,000 dairies have sold out already entering this program and will go out of business during the next 18 months," he noted.

"We think efforts on behalf of the Association in Washington will have some kind of effect on these programs in the future," Bowles said.

"Hopefully this will be the last dairy program that the taxpayer and the beef industry will have to put up with."

Over-production of dairy products because of the dairy price supports since the late 1940's led up to the recent termination issue. Bowles commented by saying that this had been happening over the years and that now it has affected everyone.

"Our government program of price supports has encouraged the production of milk and dairy products with the government being the only customer there is to buy it," Bowles said. "So then they come up with what they call a 'Dairy Termination Program' to reduce production."

Bowles said "one government program requires the development of another government program with the taxpayers to support it all."

He believes the healthiest thing for any business enterprise is free market prices. "If you have a free market, the market will tell the producer how much to bring to market," he explained.

"It doesn't matter if it's a grain farmer, a corn farmer, or someone who produces automobiles, the free market is still the best thing for a business," Bowles added.

"If you're going to produce something, (whether it's machinery or commodities), if the government is your only buyer, you cannot build a business," Bowles said.

Bowles is a cattle feeder who has been managing feedlots since 1972. He was in the feed supplement business for eight years and became active in TCFA committee work and other association business in 1978.

"That's when I really started becoming pretty active in TCFA," smiled Bowles.

Bowles was also a charter member when TCFA was formed in 1967 and they are now in their 19th year.

The Texas Cattle Feeders Association looks like it has come a long way since 1967.

"The association's commitment to its members has required more work and involvement each year," said Bowles. "It really is a very busy association."

Over the years, Bowles said the largest single issue the association has encountered has been the Dairy Termination Program. But other issues they have had to face include the prompt payment from packers for live cattle issue and the issue of clear title for livestock buyers.

"The 1985 farm program had an amendment for clear title that our association worked hard on," Bowles said.

Tax reform also was handled by the association. "We have been very active in Washington on tax reform and our goal was to ensure that Congress treated the cattle industry equally as it wrote this tax reform bill," said Bowles.

"We didn't want agriculture to be treated unfairly in comparison to other industries," he said. Members of the association are also members of Texas Corn Growers, Texas Wheat Growers, etc.

"And we think that the tax legislation as it is now pending, it pretty well gives us fair treatment," concluded Bowles.

The TCFA has grown considerably in the last couple of years. The TCFA now represents over 75 percent of fed cattle in the three-state area, Texas, New Mexico, and Oklahoma.

"I think this growth will enable us to provide even better services to the membership in the future," said Bowles. Today's membership stands at approximately 6,700. Bowles took the president's post of TCFA in November of 1985.

"The reason it has grown is because we have become more effective at legislative affairs and the federal cattle industry is undergoing some radical changes with consolidation of feedlots," Bowles explained.

"And as this occurs, I think a strong association becomes more important to the feedlot operators," he stressed.

Heavy rains force evacuation

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — As many as 5,000 businesses and homes were without electricity and about 50 residents forced from their homes as heavy rains flooded streets and creeks and high winds toppled utility poles in Wichita Falls.

More than a week of heavy rains across Texas abated in most areas, but North Central and Southeast Texas continued Tuesday night to battle downpours and accompanying flood and tornado warnings.

Near Angleton, civil defense workers were carefully monitoring the Brazos River, which was expected to reach the 22-foot level today. Flooding can be expected at the 30-foot level, and Civil Defense Coordinator Jack McCann said minor flooding in rural southwestern Brazoria County is likely.

As many as 2,000 Wichita Falls residents were expected to remain without power much of today after wind gusts of up to 60 mph knocked down trees and power lines, said Helen Burt, a Texas Electric Service Co. spokeswoman.

Spikes 5 inches of rain pounded the city between 4:15 p.m. and 9 p.m. Tuesday.

ANN LANDERS

Go to get-togethers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband and brother-in-law had a huge fight, and now they refuse to be in the same room together.

My family has always gathered for all major occasions and we have one coming up soon. I feel that my parents should not be hurt because of this falling out and the two battling boys ought to be civil to one another when they are thrown together. Unfortunately, my husband refuses to go anywhere "Bud" might turn up.

Should I stay home with my husband or attend the family gatherings alone? Either way it will be obvious to my parents that there is a problem. My husband reads you every day and maybe if you put this in your column you could save us from more pain and further arguments.—NAME WITHHELD ON REQUEST

DEAR N.W.: Go to the family get-togethers. Why stay home and miss the fun because your husband is a sorehead?

If anyone asks, "Where's the weirdo?" say, "He didn't feel like coming." No details need be given. In time he may grow up and decide to rejoin the human race.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have been wanting to write to you about this problem for several weeks because it is apparent to me that I cannot help myself.

About three months ago this very good-looking guy (I guess he is about 25) moved in next door to us. The problem began a month ago.

My husband works the second shift six days a week and I am at home alone. I watch a lot of TV to kill time. The houses are close together and if someone has their shades up, you can see everything that goes on.

At about the same time every night, this hunk starts to undress in front of the window. What scars me is that I look forward to watching him parade around in his tiny bikini briefs.

Lately I have been fantasizing about this guy a lot. I can't stop thinking about this body. Our marriage has been terrific and I have no complaints about our sex life. If my husband should find out that I am lusting after the guy next door, it could mean trouble. What do you suggest?—THE WINDOW WATCHER

DEAR W.W.: Somehow you must break this cycle of voyeurism before it gets you into serious trouble.

Invite family or friends over—or make plans to go out. Have you considered tacking or taping your window shade so you won't be tempted? My suggestions are going to require a lot of willpower, but unless you get control of the situation, you stand to lose a great deal.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I disagree with your suggestion that we have laws against college hazing in every state instead of only 26.

Do we need laws for EVERYTHING? A young man who is smart enough to get into college should be smart enough to know better than to jump from a second-story window into a haystack or take part in the crazy stunts you described.

Please, Ann, no more laws! Let's teach our children to use the brains God gave them.—SOUTHERN CAL.

DEAR S. CAL: Do you have any idea how many God-given brains cease to function when peer pressure takes over—or when kids get drunk?

I believe hazing should be illegal in every state and stiff penalties imposed on anyone caught breaking this law. Death is too dear a price to pay for the impetuosity of youth.

Ann Landers' booklet, "Sex and the Teenager," explains every aspect of sexual behavior—where to draw the line, how to say no, the various methods of contraception, the dangers of VD, the symptoms and where to get help. ## POLLY'S POINTERS

Measuring laces the easy way

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — To know the length of laces a shoe needs, count the number of holes on one side of the shoe tongue and multiply the holes by eight inches. For example, a three-hole shoe: three times eight equals twenty-four inches. One never needs to pull the frayed lace to measure.

Wish I had known this trick when my children were young. — MRS. D.M.
DEAR MRS. D.M. — This is a handy and easy-to-remember Pointer. Not all shoelace packages are marked with the number of eyelets the lace will fit. Your helpful Pointer earns you the Pointer of the Week award, a copy of my book 'Polly's Pointers: 1081 Helpful Hints for Making Everything Last Longer.' Others who would like this book can order it for $6.50. Make check payable to POLLY'S POINTERS, Box 1216, Dept. 55, Cincinnati, OH 45201. — POLLY

FAT INTO PROTEIN

AYR, Scotland (AP) — Scientists at the Hannah Research Institute here have developed a drug which turns fat into protein, a process which may well do away with some weight-loss activities by the end of the century, says the Scottish Development Agency.

Development of the genetically engineered protein was discovered by researchers studying why animals fatten when pregnant and lose fat when producing milk. They found a natural antibody which attacks fat and turns it into protein.

"After one injection of the new drug in a young animal, the fat simply breaks down and growing animals develop more protein than they do normally," says Dr. David Flint, head of the research team. "Over indulgent humans are a low priority for us. Nevertheless, this breakthrough is significant."

Basket weaver carries on family traditions

By CHARLOTTE HELDENBRAND
 Longview Morning Journal
 LONGVIEW, Texas (AP) — Grady Rhodes' hobby sounds like a children's song — A tisket, a tasket, a white oak bow basket — and Rhodes is the man who makes the bow baskets.

"It takes patience and time, but I got both of that," said Rhodes, who started weaving baskets from white oak timber when he was about 17 years old. "I grew up with it. My daddy was a basket weaver before me," he said.

The family raised corn and peas on their farm in Timpson and during the winter months, Rhodes' father would weave baskets to pass the time. The elder Rhodes did nothing to discourage his son if he wanted to try something new.

"He wouldn't show you much either. You had to get in there and learn," Rhodes said.

"I helped my Dad make baskets, and I got off to one side to make one for myself," he said. "He gave me the roughest stuff he had. Then I went out and worked on it. He came out to look at it and said 'Looks like you'd have made a pretty good basket if you'd have had some good wood. Now take this and go make another one.'"

Weaving was just a hobby and after the Depression, he set it aside to go to work bricklaying and later selling crossties to the railroad.

About 40 years passed between his weaving as a younger man until he started again in 1977, Rhodes said. After he had surgery in 1960 for a cyst in his spinal region, he was partially paralyzed.

Cowbelles launch "Beef for Father's Day"

As part of a nutritional awareness program for beef, Hereford Cowbelles have joined the Texas Beef Council Industry to promote "Beef for Father's Day."

Beef is a basic American food that is rich in protein, iron, B-vitamins and other essential nutrients making it a food that fits well in today's active lifestyle. The beef industry is a vital part of the state's food chain and contributes millions of dollars to the state economy annually. Texas Cattle Feeders Association represents 75 percent of fed cattle in Texas, New Mexico, and Oklahoma alone. According to Texas Cattle Feeders Association's President, Mike Bowles, Deaf Smith County is an important center point to the beef industry. Following are a few "Beef for Father's Day" recipes provided by Darlene Fields, Hereford Cowbelle chairman of "Beef for Father's Day" program.

Alternate the layers of sliced mushrooms and sour cream sauce in a buttered 2 1/2 qt. casserole. Bake uncovered in a 325 oven for 1 hr, stirring once or twice. (If you wish stir over some of the meat juices into the sauce.)

hr. In another pan, combine all sauce ingred. Cook for 1 hr. Let ribs cool long enough to draw off fat. Place ribs and cooked sauce in baking pan bake 1 hr in 300 degree oven. Makes 6 servings.

Tennessee preacher says fewer liberals needed

ATLANTA (AP) — The Southern Baptist Convention needs more love and fewer liberals, a Tennessee preacher suggested after being swept by fundamentalists to the presidency of the nation's largest Protestant denomination. The Rev. Adrian Rogers, of Memphis, said Tuesday night he hopes his term as president, marking the eighth straight year fundamentalists have held the post, will bring a lessening of feuding among the 14.5 million Southern Baptists.

salaries paid by us ought to reflect what the great majority of us say we want taught" as spelled out in a Baptist statement of faith, he said. Rogers, 54, who was also president in 1979, won this year by 54 percent to 46 percent over the Rev. W. Winfred Moore of Amarillo, Texas, in voting by about 40,000 church messengers crammed into the Georgia World Congress Center. Moderates supporting Moore say Rogers and recent predecessors have won because of superior political organizing that gives them convention influence far beyond their support in the denomination's more than 30,000 churches.

However, Rogers showed no sign of softening efforts of the denomination's most conservative wing to cleanse Baptist seminaries and agencies of teachers or other employees who don't share their view that every word in the Bible is historically and scientifically true. "We're not trying to tell any professor what he must believe or any denominational employee what he must believe — that is between him and God," Rogers said at a news conference. "But we are saying that those who work for us and those who have their

However, Rogers said he felt Baptists holding his literalist view are not a minority or even a mere 54-46 percent majority, but actually make up 90 percent of the denomination. Asked how that reading of support would affect his appointments to groups that control seminaries and multimillion-dollar mission agencies, he said, "I don't think that we need to say that liberalism, classic liberalism or Southern Baptist liberalism needs to be reflected."

Investors have long-term gains

NEW YORK (AP) — Because the stock market has risen for almost four years, many investors have large, unrealized long-term capital gains.

Under current law, those gains would be taxed at a maximum of 20 percent. But under the Senate committee proposals for tax reform, capital gains would lose their preferential treatment and would be taxed at ordinary income rates. As a result, this proposal, if passed, would raise the tax bite on capital gains to 27 percent from 20 percent, or by $700 on a capital gain of $10,000. Question: If the Senate committee proposals become law, will investors with big capital gains seek to preserve them by selling this year? And if they sell, will the volume be sufficient to seriously depress the stock market? These are but two tax-proposal questions that nobody seems able to answer. The America's Cup When the Australian yacht Australia II defeated the U.S. yacht Liberty in the best-four-out-of-seven series to win the America's cup on Sept. 26, 1983, it was the first defeat for the United States in 24 cup defenses, dating all the way back to 1851.

Sour Cream-Mushroom Sauce
Wash and slice 2 lbs. fresh mushrooms. Cream together 6 tablespoons butter or margarine, 3 tablespoons flour, 1 teasp salt, 2 teasp prepared mustard. 1/4 teasp each nutmeg & pepper. 2 cups (1 pint) sour cream, 1/4 cup each minced parsley and instant minced onions.

Teams combine for 37 hits

Rangers outslug Twins 14-10

By MIKE NADEL
AP Sports Writer

Ten pitchers took 3 hours, 48 minutes to give up 37 hits and 24 runs.

So Minnesota Twins Manager Ray Miller can be forgiven for what might be the understatement of the year.

"Tonight, our pitching wasn't very good," he said after Texas' 14-10 victory Tuesday. "Hell, theirs wasn't any thrill, either."

The thrills in this game came from the Twins' defense and both teams' offenses — Minnesota pounded out 20 hits, Texas 17.

Pete O'Brien was thrilled because he snapped an 0-for-16 slump with a 3-for-5 outing that included three RBIs and a home run that pulled the Rangers into a 9-9 seventh-inning tie.

Toby Harrah was thrilled because he added three hits and two RBIs after season-long struggles.

Geno Petralli was thrilled because he entered the game with no RBIs and finished it with five. He'd never driven in more than two runs in any previous major league game.

And Rangers Manager Bobby Valentine was thrilled, even though the game was the longest in team history, because Texas demonstrated again it could battle back.

"Was it a long game? Feels like it just started," Valentine joked. "When you win, they don't seem as long."

The game probably seemed like an eternity to Twins shortstop Greg Gagne, who went 0-for-4 with two rally-killing strikeouts and also made two of the three outs in Minnesota's four-run third inning. Worse yet, Gagne booted what appeared to be a sure double-play grounder, allowing Ruben Sierra to score the go-ahead run in the seventh shortly after O'Brien's game-tying homer.

The Twins were bound to make three, with second baseman Steve Lombardozzi's second-inning miscue paving the way for four unearned runs.

And the Twins have, which is one of the big reasons why Texas leads the American League West by three games while the Twins are in sixth place, 9½ games behind the Rangers.

Jeff Russell, 1-0, got the victory in his first major-league appearance of the season while Greg Harris, the fifth Texas hurler, got the save. Less than halfway into the 1986 season, Harris already has matched the 11 saves with which he led the Rangers last year. Ron Davis, 1-5, the third of five Minnesota pitchers, took the loss.

Minnesota's attack included four Kent Hrbek singles and three Gary Gaetti doubles but the Twins' pitching left Miller shaking his head.

"Twenty hits and 10 runs should be enough to win," Miller said. "The only logical thing you can do is throw this game out of your mind."

Hereford High School, was valedictorian of his graduating class and quarterbacked the Hereford Whitefaces his senior season.

Hacker is one of 11 players that were selected for the team, which was announced earlier this year. He was the leading passer in District 3-5A last season.

Texas Governor Mark White and Paul D. Meek, chairman, president and chief executive officer of Final Oil and Chemical Company, will introduce the 11 members of the all-state academic team at a news conference.

One of the 11 players will be named as the team captain at the news conference and will receive the Govern-nor's Award of Academic Excellence, a large silver cup mounted on a double pedestal.

The academic all-state team was selected according to academic performance, participation in school and community activities, and leadership qualities.

Jim Tunney, a National Football League referee, will be the banquet speaker. Tunney participated in high school and college athletics.

The news conference is scheduled for 7 p.m. Saturday, and the banquet will be held at the Dallas Hyatt Regency.

The academic all-state football team was selected from 60 finalists, who earlier were selected from about 1,000 candidates.

Astros' Knepper wins 10th game

By The Associated Press

Houston left-hander Bob Knepper can't remember the last time he's pitched so well, and the San Diego Padres probably won't forget.

The Padres fell victim to Knepper in a 12-1 attack Tuesday that made the Houston pitcher the National League's first 10-game winner — a distinction he took in stride.

"Ten wins doesn't mean that much. ... It just means you've had a good first couple of months," said Knepper, 10-3, who pitched a four-hitter and was backed by a 15-hit Astro attack.

"This is the best groove I've been in since high school or Little League. I can't remember pitching this many starts in a row where I felt this good. ... Because my mental attitude is better, I'm more relaxed and it probably means I'm more aggressive. I'm going after the hitters more. When I'm able to relax, I have consistently good stuff."

Astros Manager Hal Lanier, who joined the Astros this year, said that based upon his observations of Knepper over the years, he believes the pitcher is capable of winning 20 games.

Openings left for YMCA trip to Wonderland Park

Youth interested in going to Wonderland Park in Amarillo on Thursday as part of the YMCA "Summer Adventures" program will not be required to sign up 24 hours in advance.

They may sign up for the activity Thursday morning, said Jerry Brock, YMCA program director. He adds that the youth must be at the YMCA at 8 a.m. Thursday.

Cost for the trip to Wonderland Park is $10 for YMCA members and $15 for non-members of the YMCA. For more information, call the YMCA at 364-6990.

"After talking to him for just a few minutes in spring training, I was impressed with his attitude. He wanted to work hard and produce," Lanier said.

The Padres suffered their ninth loss in the last 12 games, while the first-place Astros recorded their fourth straight victory.

Knepper did not walk a batter and struck out five in recording his sixth complete game of the season.

His shutout bid was dashed in the eighth inning when Terry Kennedy led off with his fourth homer.

The Astros jumped on starter Dave Dravecky, 5-6, for three runs in the first inning, capped by Kevin Bass' two-run homer, his seventh of the year and second in two games.

Houston added four runs in the fifth on Bill Doran's lead off homer — his fourth — Glenn Davis' two-out double, an intentional walk to Bass and a two-run triple by Phil Garner with Garner scoring on Garry Templeton's fielding error.

Houston sent 10 men to the plate during a five-run eighth inning, highlighted by Billy Hatcher's two-run triple, a run-scoring double by Tony Walker, Mark Bailey's RBI single and three Padre errors.

U.S. Open digs back to its seaside roots

By Murray Olderman

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y. (NEA) — Playing the 86th U.S. Open at the Shinnecock Hills Golf Course on Long Island takes us back to the roots of golf in America.

For it was back in 1896 — only eight years after golf had been introduced in America by an iron foundry executive named John G. Reid, who laid out three holes in a Yonkers, N.Y., cow pasture — that the second U.S. Open was played at this same Shinnecock Hills Club on the eastern end of Long Island.

And that course, built by the labor of Indians from the nearby Shinnecock reservation, became the first duly incorporated golf club in the nation. Now, 90 years later, golf on this seaside course still resembles the game originated on the sandy, rolling coastal dunes of Scotland, where the scape was sparse, broken only by patches of golden whins and purple heather.

This is an undulating course and it differs dramatically from the lush green that surrounded most American courses as the game spread inland. Shinnecock Hills has trees now — Yankee ingenuity conquers nature — but they seldom come into play, and what the world's greatest golfers will see as they congregate here for the opening round of the '86 Open is a bit of auld Scotland, right down to the tricky winds blowing off Great Peconic Bay.

Tradition reeks from the oldest clubhouse in the country designed specifically for golf, a sprawling wooden structure with gleaming white gables and white columns, perched on the highest piece of ground around. Its famed architect was Stanford White, who was later slain in 1906 by Harry K. Thaw on the roof of the original Madison Square Garden (which White also designed) for dallying with his wife, entertainer Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, the fabled "Girl on the Swing."

But tradition aside, Shinnecock Hills won't be anything like it was in 1896, when a Scottish pro named Jim Foulis outlasted a field of 35 golfers on a course that measured only 4,423 yards. He shot 78-74 for 152 in a 36-hole tournament.

The present-day layout — designed by Bill Flynn in 1931 — is infinitely more challenging. Even so, with the advance of sophisticated equipment (they didn't even use rubber-core balls then), honed skills and the proliferation of competition, the round-by-round scores should be considerably lower.

The prize money, however, will certainly be higher. When Horace Rawlins, a 19-year-old Englishman, won the first Open played, in 1895 in Newport, R.I., he collected $150.

Today, the total U.S. Open purse is approaching three-quarters of a million dollars. Andy North walked away with $103,000 for winning at Oakland Hills in Birmingham, Mich., last year.

The focus this year has to be on that already legendary golfer, Jack Nicklaus, trying for his second Grand Slam title of the year after his dramatic victory at the Masters. At 46, he was the oldest ever to win that event and he would be the oldest ever to win an Open. An Englishman, Ted Ray, holds that honor, capturing the 1920 Open when he was 43 years old.

Nicklaus already is in hallowed company for number of Open triumphs. He has won four, spread out from 1962 to 1980. The other four-time winners were Willie Anderson, a small, dour Scot who dominated the game at the start of the century; the venerable Bobby Jones of the Golden '20s; and the great Ben Hogan in the '50s.

When Anderson won his first Open in 1901, he shot a 331, using the old gutta percha ball and still had to win a playoff with a round of 85. When Nicklaus won his last Open, in '80 at Baltusrol, N.J., he set the all-time scoring record of 272.

If the fates of weather conspire, and the Atlantic gales are kept at bay in mid-June, that mark could be threatened because the Shinnecock Hills course plays to a par 70 at a length of 6,912 yards. It has only two par-5 holes. But almost half the course plays directly into sea winds that can sometimes blow a golfer out of his stance. (Conversely, on the downwind holes, the ball can carry long distances.)

It is a course that should benefit an accurate shotmaker like Calvin Peete, who has never won an Open, or Andy Bean, the hottest man now on the Tour, who has earned over $2 million without a major title to his credit.

Victory in the U.S. Open used to ensure an immediate niche in the annals of the game. Names like Ed Furgol (1954), Jack Fleck (1955), Dick Mayer (1957) and Orville Moody (1969) would scarcely be recognized if their bearers hadn't picked a mid-June week to put together the best rounds of their lives.

With only one exception, virtually every great player of the modern era has won the Open. That exception was Sam Snead, who blew his best opportunity in 1939 when, needing only a par 5 on the last hole to win, he ballooned to an 8. Snead finished second in the Open four times, as did Bobby Jones and Nicklaus.

With the proliferation of tournaments and big prize money, the impact of the United States Open has diminished. But it still remains the showcase of American gold as it fittingly goes back to the cradle of Shinnecock Hills.

How will Verplank do in U.S. Open?

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y. (AP) — Storyed Shinnecock Hills Golf Club, site of this week's U.S. Open Championship, is on the south fork of Long Island, close by the majestic waters of Great Peconic Bay.

"Oh, good," Scott Verplank said. "I'll bring my fishing pole."

Uhh, Scott, this is the U.S. Open, American golf's national championship, a rather serious event that requires total concentration with little time for other recreation.

"I fish all the time," Verplank said. "It's good for you to go out by yourself. The only thing about it is, if you go fishing for three hours, that's three hours you can't play golf."

If it seems that Verplank, launching one of golf's most anticipated professional careers in this most prestigious tournament, is going about it rather casually, you're absolutely correct.

"It's no big deal," he said. "I'm not easily impressed." A year ago, Verplank won the Western Open, becoming the first amateur to capture a PGA Tour event in 31 years when he beat Jim Thorpe in a playoff.

Verplank, perhaps victimized by all the attention, did not win a single college event this spring. Then, he finished a brilliant career at Oklahoma State by winning the NCAA championship last month, and was named to the All American team by the Collegiate Golf Foundation.

He often is compared with Jack Nicklaus, who came roaring out of Ohio State a quarter century ago and won his first tournament as a pro — the 1962 U.S. Open. The similarities are obvious and there is speculation that Verplank has the ability to replace Nicklaus in the golfing public's consciousness, much the way Nicklaus replaced Arnold Palmer.

That is a heavy burden to carry, but the 21-year-old Texan is not the least bit nervous about hooking up with the tour's big boys. He had a little taste of it in April, when he was paired with Nicklaus in the first round of the Masters. Was he impressed then?

"Standing on the same tee, yeah, that was nice," he said. "But if I think about that, I'm not going to be playing too good. I might not be able to hit the ball if I'm thinking about playing with the greatest of all time."

He shot a first-round 77 to Nicklaus' 74 and then they parted company. A second-round 77 took Verplank out of the tournament and sent him home to watch the master win the Masters two days later.

"I was in my apartment, this far from my TV," he said, holding his fingers a couple of inches apart. "I had the volume up and I was yelling, 'C'mon, Jack!' I was more excited about that than a lot of things that have happened. It was exciting to see him play well and do good."

Nicklaus is the game's barometer, a textbook to be studied. Verplank, however, chooses not to follow the master's every move. His flat-footed swing, for example, is strictly his own. "Everybody tells me, 'That's wrong, that's not how Nicklaus does it.' Well, it's not wrong for me."

How biased is Verplank? Well he skipped graduation last month because he had a previous engagement — the Byron Nelson Classic.

"I wasn't going to go anyway," he said. "I started college four years ago and I finished it. I don't like to leave things undone, unfinished. But all that Hollywood stuff that goes with it, standing there in that little cap, that stuff doesn't appeal to me."

"I thought it was a waste of time. I'd rather play golf."

Or go fishing.

'Golden Bear' ready for 1986 U.S. Open

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y. (AP) — Masters champion Jack Nicklaus is getting to know the Shinnecock Hills Golf Course very well. And it's no accident.

Nicklaus has played the course where the U.S. Open Golf Championship begins Thursday six times this year, testing the precocious winds, the stifling rough, the changing conditions that can affect a player's game.

"I haven't prepared for an Open for a long time with the enthusiasm I have prepared for this one," Nicklaus said.

And why is that? "I don't know how to answer that," Nicklaus said coyly. "Let's just say the way I was playing before the Open was not foremost among my priorities until I won the Masters."

The Grand Slam — one of the few things Nicklaus has not accomplished in this sport — starts with the Masters and requires victories in the U.S. Open, British Open and PGA. A triumph here, in a tournament he has won a record-tying four times, would put him halfway home.

Shinnecock's links layout and seaside location give the place the look of a British Open course, a tournament at which Nicklaus has prospered. He has won three British Opens in his brilliant career and he knows that could help him here this week.

The message seems to be: look out for the Golden Bear. He's hunting.

Senator Bill Sarpalius Reports

DOE may ignore Texas law, begin drilling through Ogallala

AUSTIN — To absolutely no one's surprise, the Department of Energy last week named sites in Deaf Smith County, Washington and Nevada as finalists in DOE's search for a home for the nation's first high-level nuclear waste repository.

If Deaf Smith County ultimately is chosen to house the repository, the implications for the Panhandle and South Plains would be enormous. Consider what will happen if the repository is placed between Hereford and Vega.

Thousands of barrels of extremely radioactive waste will be shipped into the Panhandle from nuclear reactors across the country. That waste, which will remain radioactive for another 10,000 years or so, then will be buried deep in the salt formations below the fertile Deaf Smith County soil.

To reach the salt, DOE will drill shafts through the precious Ogallala aquifer, our primary source of drinking water. It is below the Ogallala that the waste is to rest (peacefully, we hope) for the next 10 milleniums.

But, what if something went wrong? What if a couple of barrels of waste leaked into the Ogallala? The aquifer likely would be ruined, unable to support farming, energy exploration or cities of any size. The High Plains would be reduced to a wasteland capable of sustaining only a handful of people.

A horrible scenario, indeed, but one that is not out of the question. That possibility, in a nutshell, is why so many West Texans are opposed to the whole repository concept.

The dangers of DOE's actions extend beyond the Panhandle and South Plains, though. If the problems are immediate and personal to those living near the proposed repository site, they are no less compelling, albeit in a different way, to Texas as a whole.

For one thing, some of Texas' basic rights are being challenged. There is a good chance DOE will ignore a Texas law designed to protect underground aquifers and begin drilling through the Ogallala without permission from the state. The law, contained in a bill we passed in 1983, requires anyone drilling through an aquifer to obtain permission from the Texas Water Commission first. Whoever requests the drilling permit must prove to the commission's satisfaction that the aquifer in question will not be harmed by the drilling activities.

DOE probably will run headlong into this law before the year is out. To conduct the additional site characterization tests necessary to determine the repository's ultimate home, DOE workers must drill a shaft in Deaf Smith County. Drilling is expected to begin later this year.

Energy Secretary John Herrington has not said yet whether DOE will honor Texas' permitting process. We would estimate the chances are no better than one in four that DOE will.

If DOE ignores the process, Texas' attorney general would have excel-

District Award

Carl Kleuskens, standing at left, accepted the Outstanding Conservation District runner-up award for the Tierra Blanca Soil and Water Conservation District, of which he is chairman. The honor was granted at the recent Region I banquet held in Canyon. The award is granted on a point system which, in using five categories, determines how active the district is as a whole.

lent grounds for a lawsuit. DOE would argue the site characterization is a reservation program, and thus exempt from state natural resources laws. That would be true if the Ogallala were exclusive to the proposed repository site. It's not; the Ogallala covers portions of seven states and therefore can't be considered part of the "reservation."

This controversy, should it find its way into the courts, will prove to be a classic states' rights battle. The challenge to our natural resources laws would be enough by themselves, but DOE indirectly is challenging our entire legislative process, too.

A repository potentially could contaminate an area that produces one-third of all the state's food and fiber and an enormous portion of its natural gas. Yet, our elected officials have responded slowly, timidly to the threat. To date, our 1983 law is the only major piece of legislation passed in response to DOE's activities. So much more could be done.

Last year, we proposed creating a joint legislative committee that by 1987 would write a comprehensive series of state laws dealing with the repository. The committee would be charged with finding the limit of Texas' authority in this matter, then exercising the authority to that limit.

Our efforts to create such a committee were thwarted, largely because the DOE threat still seemed remote to some. Surely everyone realizes now that DOE is serious. We'll reintroduce our plan in January when the Legislature reconvenes, but we don't necessarily have to wait that long. The governor has the authority to appoint such a committee today, if he wants.

It's easy to see the battle over the waste repository has begun in earnest. How we as Texans handle this battle will say a lot about our celebrated sense of independence and ability to fight for what is ours.

If you have any additional questions about the nuclear waste repository or other issues, please write us at P.O. Box 12068, Austin, Texas, 78711.

TSTI will offer feedmill classes

AMARILLO -- Texas State Technical Institute will begin classes in feedmill and elevator technology (FET) in the fall quarter.

The new program received approval by the Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System, last winter and work on the program began immediately, said Jim Lutes, FET program chairman.

According to the FET Advisory Committee members, who hosted their first official meeting in May, job opportunities for FET graduates are excellent and salaries should start at $6 to $6.50 per hour.

A feedmill and elevator maintenance technician operates, troubleshoots and repairs industrial equipment found in feedmills, feedlots and grain elevators.

The training program was developed by TSTI in response to the industry's difficulty in finding trained individuals to fill feedmill and elevator maintenance technician jobs, Lutes said.

The Texas Cattle Feeder's Association requested that TSTI offer FGET and both TCFA and the Texas Grain and Feed Association were consulted in the preparation of the curriculum for the course.

FET offers two training options including a certificate program (four quarters, 12 months) and an Associate of Applied Science degree program (six quarters, 18 months). The fifth quarter of the Associate degree program allows the student to receive practical on-the-job work experience by participating in an industrial cooperative training program.

Support course will also be offered through mechanical electrical technology, welding and fabrication and computer science technology.

For registration and other information, call Lutes or the TSTI Admissions Office at 355-2316.

Scientists, citing pollution, say climate already getting warmer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists are warning Congress that the long-theorized, life-threatening overheating of the Earth from man-made air pollution is now a frightening reality.

"The fact that the greenhouse effect is real is proven," said James Hansen, director of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Goddard Institute for Space Studies.

"Global warming is inevitable — it's only a question of magnitude and time," said Robert Watson, director of NASA's upper atmospheric program. "We can expect significant changes in climate in the next few decades."

Hansen, Watson and other scientists delivered their somber assessments Tuesday as the Senate Environment subcommittee on environmental pollution opened two days of hearings on the greenhouse effect.

Backed by recent findings of severe ozone layer depletion in the atmosphere over Antarctica, they reiterated scientific predictions that the warming threatens the globe with floods, drought and more skin cancer by the middle of the 21st century.

And for Sherwood Rowland, a chemistry professor at the University of California, the picture further down the road is even bleaker. "If you have the greenhouse effect going on indefinitely, then you have a temperature rise that will extinct human life" in 500 to 1,000 years.

The greenhouse effect is a shorthand term for global warming caused by chemicals such as chlorofluorocarbons, carbon dioxide, methane and nitrous oxide accumulating in the atmosphere and trapping heat. The pollutants also destroy the ozone layer, which helps protect humans from the cancer-causing ultraviolet rays of the sun.

Under the greenhouse scenario, the Earth gets baked. Rich farmlands turn into deserts. Forests wilt and die. Coastal areas are inundated by oceans swollen by melted polar and glacial ice.

Hansen predicted that global temperatures should be nearly 2 degrees higher in 20 years, "which is about the warmest the earth has been in the last 100,000 years."

The pace of atmospheric destruction is increasing steadily and rapidly, said Rowland, who in 1974 published pioneering research on chlorofluorocarbons — gases used as refrigerants and aerosol-can propellants. This led the United States to ban their use in spray cans, but it continues elsewhere.

"There is now compelling observational evidence that the chemical composition of the atmosphere is changing at a rapid rate on a global scale," Watson said.

The scientists, calling for curbs on air pollution, said a recently completed five-year study in Antarctica provides an ominous signal to the world. During the period, there was an ozone loss over the South Pole of from 30 percent to 50 percent, they said.

Watson said scientists have calculated that if no action is taken to curb chemical emissions, "the greenhouse warming predicted to occur during the next 50 years should be about twice that which has occurred during the previous 130 years."

Stephen Leatherman of the University of Maryland said that in the last 100 years the sea level has risen about one foot.

Pavorotti concert is on PBS tonight

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Italian tenor Luciano Pavarotti says seeing himself on television with younger singers is a stark reminder that his own career in opera and in concert began a quarter century ago.

"I am older," he said as he began to discuss the young graduates of The Opera Company of Philadelphia-Luciano Pavarotti International Voice Competition who appear with him in a series of taped television specials. The first is "A Pavarotti Salute to Youth" concert performance of the Verdi Requiem tonight on public television.

"I am also bigger," he said with a laugh as he spread his arms in front of a girl surpassed only by a voice and the charisma powerful enough to produce an audience response dubbed "Pavarotti pandemonium" by critics.

Giuseppe Verdi wrote the requiem, his only masterwork not intended for the stage, to honor the memory of his friend, the Italian poet, patriot and author Alessandro Manzoni. The work premiered May 22, 1874, at the Church of San Marco in Milan.

For the performance, Philadelphia's 17,000-seat Spectrum, home to the Philadelphia Flyers hockey team and the 76ers basketball team, was transformed into a cathedral-like concert hall.

The soloists included Pavarotti at tenor, American soprano Susan Dunn, Hungarian mezzo-soprano Ildiko Komlosi and bass Paata Burchuladze, a member of the Georgian Opera in Tbilisi, U.S.S.R. A 350-voice chorus, an orchestra and conductor Lorin Maazel completed the production.

"I can tell you I was very scared of this performance until maestro Maazel agreed to do it," Pavarotti said.

It wasn't just a matter of making the sports arena sound like a concert hall or church, it was also important to achieve a blend that would withstand television's demanding eyes and ears.

"We knew we had the electronics for the audience there and we had shown we could do a one-person concert," Pavarotti said, noting that last year he became the first classical singer ever to appear at the Spectrum. "But we had to have someone like maestro Maazel to do the Verdi Requiem."

Maazel, former music director of the Cleveland Orchestra and a veteran of 6,000 concerts and 500 opera performances, was in top form as he guided the company through chorus and solo parts. He even added some special touches, such as a trumpet trio high up in a balcony as effective on television as it was for the audience.

The tenor part was hardly a starring one. But Pavarotti said that's why the Verdi Requiem was selected.

"I wanted people to hear these young singers as they performed what is absolutely the most difficult music to do," he said.

The competition winners selected for the three other solo parts had to have the potential to handle the demanding music without the benefit of scenery or cast to gloss over mistakes, Pavarotti said.

Especially impressive was the closing, which featured the chorus and Miss Dunn, whose finish reverberated throughout the arena and brought the audience thundering to its feet.

Other productions taped this spring featuring Pavarotti and his winners included "La Boheme," and "Un Ballo in Maschera."

Victims fighting back violently

DALLAS (AP) — Police may not recommend it, but they concede that more crime victims are meeting violence with violence.

"It made me mad," Jim Beam says of the Feb. 1 robbery attempt at his store. "If I get a chance, I'll fight back."

So he did — he shot and killed the would-be robber, and police say he is one of a growing number of local crime victims who are fighting back, partly because criminals themselves have become more violent.

"There is more violence even in purse snatching," said Dallas police Sgt. Mia Sullivan. "It is uncalled for, unprovoked violence, when the victim complies and it seems to not matter."

"The best thing for a victim is to be highly observant and remember as much of the description as possible," Ms. Sullivan said.

IRAs in middle of tax overhaul debate

WASHINGTON (AP) - Faced with intensifying calls for action, supporters of a sweeping tax-overhaul bill pending in the Senate have agreed they may have to go along with restoring tax-deductible Individual Retirement Accounts.

"There is the strong feeling that there should be some changes as far as IRAs are concerned," said Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan.

However, Dole and Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., the Senate Finance Committee chairman, are resisting making the change while the full Senate considers the bill.

Instead, Dole and Packwood are supporting a non-binding resolution that calls for giving the "highest priority to retaining maximum possible tax benefits for Individual Retirement Accounts" when congressional negotiators meet later to work out the differences between the pending Senate package and a tax bill passed late last year by the House.

The non-binding resolution was offered late Tuesday by Sen. William V. Roth, R-Del.

But some senators said the resolution was meaningless, and they vowed their IRA amendments would not be sidetracked.

"We're being confronted by a ploy... It's a tactical ploy to convince the American public that we're taking care of an issue which they are deeply concerned about," said Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn. "I don't really want to be a participant in this charade."

The action on the IRA amendments was the first sign of life in an otherwise slow-motion proceeding on the landmark tax legislation.

During the first three days of debate on the measure no one would offer amendments.

At one point Tuesday, Sen. Robert Stafford, R-Vt., offered to break the ice with a tongue-in-cheek amendment that "no person over 75 years of age with net income less than $40,000 shall pay any income tax so long as such person's hair does not turn white."

Packwood, who has pursued a no-amendment strategy in an effort to keep the delicate package intact, has talked confidently of having enough votes to defeat any moves to make major changes in the bill.

But there has been growing support for restoring the deduction for IRA contributions.

"If any amendment can win, that amendment is the most likely to succeed," said Sen. Alan Cranston of California, the assistant Democratic leader.

Earlier Tuesday, during a White House meeting, President Reagan urged Republican leaders to keep the bill free of all amendments, including one by Sen. Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., that would take away the tax exemption of any institution that finances, performs or provides facilities for abortions.

Nonetheless, many senators are concerned about the IRA issue because the deduction is so popular with middle-income Americans.

More than 77 percent of IRA deductions are claimed by taxpayers with incomes under $50,000.

Baptists skip breaks to keep seats at meeting

By GEORGE W. CORNELL AP Religion Writer

ATLANTA (AP) - The 40,000-plus Southern Baptists at this year's meeting may be concerned about ethereal debates such as how to interpret the Bible, they are also being advised about more down-to-earth matters.

Some advice to delegates for this year's convention, which begins today: Leave your motel at 6 a.m. if driving, to beat the traffic. Skip coffee since restrooms are limited. Get a seat early. Bring a sack lunch so as to hold on to those premium seats.

Such admonitions came in fundamentalist circulars and in advice of officials of the 14.5 million-member Southern Baptist Convention as the nation's largest Protestant denomination readied for its big day of contentious issues, chiefly election of a president.

A $30,000 high-tech sound system has been installed to handle the crossfire between fundamentalists demanding literalistic views of the Bible, and moderates open to differing approaches.

Each of the 13 microphones scattered through the Georgia World Congress Center is equipped with four switches for signaling the intent of the speaker in line.

A microphone ordering box on the president's main-hall podium has lights to indicate whether the prospective speaker is for or against, or is raising a point of order or personal privilege.

The box also has a digital indicator to show which mike is next in turn to hear from, based on the sequence in which it was activated.

The presiding officer then pushes a button recognizing one of the mikes, either heeding the sequence or ignoring it. The speaker then appears on large TV screens in all four halls.

"We wanted to do everything we could to give the people an opportunity to participate in the convention process," said the Rev. Fred Wolfe, head of a business committee. "Previously persons in overflow halls were second-class citizens."

Also, "in times past we've heard that people have ganged up and monopolized mikes. With our monitors, we will eliminate anybody with one point of view from monopolizing a mike."

As a result of public officials recognizing the value of wearing safety belts and mandating their use, the Texas Board of Insurance reduced insurance rates by about 5 percent. This decision issues a clear challenge to everyone. To maintain that reduction in insurance rates and lifesaving benefits, Texans will have to buckle up and continue to show a reduction in fatalities and the severity of injuries.
