Smith County with its water is making progress towards a similar if somewhat smaller status. Latest indication of this is shown in THE NEW YORK. TIMES magazine, December 4 issue. Working for Super Men

The creation of a super-race of men has always fascinated scientists and artists as well as the imagination of men and women of average walks in life.

Dr. Alexis Carrel, himself a noted scientist, has given some thought to the remodeling of man, with special emphasis placed upon his treatment as a whole, instead of a divided personage, and would increase the mental stature without giving overdue emphasis to any particular part of man'e nature.

This is along what we think must be the true line of human progress. Man is a peculiar. if wonderful combination of mental, physical and what we may call spiritual powers. He is not either part more than the other and culminate:, into perfection only when there is complete balance in his development and growth.

There was a time, not yet entirely gone, when the religious leaders of the race insisted that mind and body should be subordinate to spiritual perfection and there are today those who believe that this can be accomplished by the disregard of the other elements that make up man. The schools of the world, even today. with rare exceptions, stress mental development, leaving almost untouched the physical nature the of the pupils entrusted to their teaching. There are, too, individuals who go crazy over the body in one form or another and forget that there exists mind or soul.

How little man knows of his own body is painfully evident as the world treats disease and physical deformities and what we really know about the human mind is almost nothing. As to the soul, there is much argument as to its existence, much less any understanding of its nature and power. No wonder, we have not, today, produced the sought-after super-man!

No Miracle Worker

Advertising is a sales promoter. It does not affect merchandise except to speed-up its transfer from merchants to eustomer. If there are enough "speed-ups", the merchant gets a faster turnover, reduces numerous carrying expenses and is able to operate on smaller profits per item because he sells more items.

Advertising is not a miraculous system to enable a merchant to sell shopworn, out-of-date merchandise for the same profit that he expected to receive when the goods were newly ar-rived in his place of business.

In fact, advertising is not a device to sell anything that is not the most up-to-date that the customer can secure for his money. The merchant who sells goods knows that his merchandiee must meet competition, which means that it must be as good as anything offered to con-sumers whether the offering is through personal conversation in his store or in the columns of a newspaper through advertising.

Advertising doesn't increase the utility of the articles advertised to any prospective buy-er. This is the basis of many attacks upon advertising by those who do not realize that advertising is modern salesmanship. Business men employ individuals to sell goods. They do not expect salesmen to improve the goods sold in order to justify their salaries. Salesmen are only expected to sell.

SUNDAY'S CURRENT QUESTION

General Opinion Favors Children Believing In Santa At Christmas QUESTION OF THE WEEK: Do you think children should be taught to believe in Santa Claus? Mrs. Roy Euler, Summerfield: Tes but they should believe in Santa Claus as a spirit and not as a person. If a child is taught to believe the complete story of Santa Claus he has a great emotional let down when he discovers it is only an American tradition

Mrs. J. N. Messenger, Friona : I would say it is alright to let children believe in Santa Claus if they are taught first that Christmas is a day to celebrate birth of Christ and to honor Him above all else. If not, it will take all the spirituality from the meaning of Christmas. Mrs. Walk Boston, Summerfield: I believe if I had my sonback at the age when children are suppose to believe in Santa Claus, I would try and give him a different conception of what Christmas is and not dwell on the numerous things Santa would bring him if he were a good boy. I wonder now what must go through a child's mind when he has had such a "build-up" about Santa and then to find out it is all a myth. Is it not possible he may wonder if many of the other things we have taught him and led him to believe is true is not also a mytht The old adage that when a child stops believing in Santa, something goes out of Christmas. For whom - the child or the parent? George J. Larson, Vega: Yes. I think it is alright to teach the children 'o believe in Santa Claus. It teaches goodness in the world and I believe they all grow up to be better citizens because of the Christmas spirit of love and giving, and there seems to be a feeling of more friendship and god will among the people along about this time. Mrs. Willis Edelmon, Friona : I think the Christmas coming up will be our most enjoyable one. It takes a child to make it fun and our little son gets so excited he nearly pops. He has chosen gifts for everyone-a tractor for grandpa and a water dog for his aunt, at least, he is learning to give. It is definitley Joe Don's Christmas.

The Case of Ezra Pound

Three years ago, Ezra Pound, Idaho-born poet, who lived for many years in Europe, escap-ed trial for treason in connection with his ac-tivities during the war by the decision that he was unfit to stand trial.

The poet has since been confined to a mental hospital in Washington. Nevertheless, early this year, the Library of Congress awarded him a $1,000 prize for the outstanding book of poetry published in 1948. It was written while he was in prison and published while he was in the hospital.

As a result, Congress directed the Library of Congress to discontinue the practice of sponsoring of prizes for artists. At the same time, some Americans suggest that a man who could write a prize-winning book of poems in prison must be same enough to stand trial for his broadcasting activity during the war in Italy.

GUEST EDITORIAL War Includes Everyone

Once beyond the stage of tribal raids, war never can have been the occupation of only the fighting forces. Not even victory can be attributed really to armies. Always in defeat the risks have been shared by whole peoples. With the advent of air power, the eivilian population is as much in dange ras the soldier.

Tomorrow's war can in small sense be a military war. It will be fought by the whole people. It will have to be stoked by the whole people. When, and if war comes again to the United States, we will all be in it.

Thic is the probable basis for the recom-mendation in the new report by the Committee for Economic Development. The striking fea-ture is an urgent insistence on widening civilian representation in our peacetime setup to pre-pare for war. (A few weeks ago in Dallas Eric Johnston hazarded the guess that the odds are 5 to 2 on war within the next fifteen years.)

At the top of our defence planning are two interrelated groups. The National Security Council has no member outside of the Presi-dent's immediate Cabinet and military group ercept the crairman of the National Security Resources Board. At the monent the acting chairman of NSRB is a presidential aide. CED chairman of NSNB is a presidential and. Inside, doctors and assistants are exploring with microscopes and test tubes, seeking cures for everything—from polic to the common cold. At one time or other, nearly everyone on the staff has been bedridden with some disease; at least three have died during the past decade-victims of their own research.

For such risks, these doctors are paid a modest government salary, ranging from $4,500 to $10,000, though they could earn far more in private practice. They don't work for the glory either, since their discoveries are kept anony-mous by the public health service. Yet their selfless research goes on. The doctor in charge of polio research, for example, is Dr. Charles Armstrong who spent eight months in bed and nearly died from tular-emia, or rabbit fever, and also down with dengue fever, parrot fever, "Q" fever and encepha-litis on other assignments. He is now searching desperately for a serum that will prevent polio.

No Cure for Colds

Another important research task proce, under Dr. Leon Atlas, is exploring the common cold. He has bready isolated the elusive virus already isolated the clusive virus which causes colds, has proven this by dropping the virus into the nostrils of volunteers from the dis-triet of Columbia jall. However, Dr. Atlas has also discovered there are many types of colds-caused by other viruses, allergies and mild diseases that do not go past the preliminary stage.

OR many years it has been our privilege to extend Season's Greetings to the multitude of friends and customers who have favored us with their patronage in the past.

We welcome this traditional custom — it gives us an opportunity to express our sentiments — to renew our pledge made years ago that our standard of service would be maintained on the highest level possible.

Thank you for everything and —

A Jolly Good Christmas

IT'S TIME once more to tell those swell

folks, our customers, how much their patronage

has meant to us in the past, how their friendliness to us has made serving them worthwhile, and how we wish them the Biggest, Happiest, and Merriest CHRISTMAS ever.
