

House Democrats test Reaganomics today

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic leaders are aiming a double-barreled blast at President Reagan's economic program with the House voting on a budget plan that reverses Reagan's spending priorities and a separate measure limiting next month's personal income tax cut. "We have the votes for both bills," House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said of the action scheduled today on the House floor. The Democrats' 99-seat majority in the House was expected to assure passage of both measures.

First, the House was voting on the compromise $859 billion 1984 budget that congressional negotiators approved earlier this week. That plan includes $73 billion in tax increases over the next three years, at least $15 billion more for domestic spending than Reagan has recommended and half the military spending boost the president asked for. The budget plan is a guide for Congress as it drafts spending and tax bills and does not go to the president for his signature. Next up today was the Democratic plan to limit the

July 1, 10 percent personal income tax rate cut to about $720 per couple and a little less than $700 for single people. House Republicans have indicated they would be virtually unanimous in their opposition to both measures. Democrats have portrayed the so-called tax cap measure as a move to restore fairness to Reagan's tax policies, which Democrats argue favor the rich. On Wednesday, Reagan said, "Capping the the third year of the tax cut won't soak the rich, but it will drown millions of taxpayers in the middle class." O'Neill and Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, have been pressured by nearly 60 first-term Democrats who say they were elected last year on a pledge to reverse Reagan's economic policies. Passage of both measures would be a high-water mark in Democratic efforts to undo the program Reagan was able to muscle through the House in the first two years of his presidency. But the significance of bills may be largely symbolic. Both bills face an uncertain future in the Republican-controlled Senate and Republicans already are dismissing the importance of the tax cap vote. "It doesn't make any difference anyway," even if the tax cap passes the Senate, said Senate GOP Whip Ted Stevens of Alaska. Eight people showed up at an organizational meeting Tuesday called by Mrs. Langtimm. "I never thought we'd have that many," she said the next day. The neighbors watched a movie about crime fighting and discussed what they could do. Mrs. Langtimm was elected chairman of the group, which next month meets to select street captains.

Departing Hereford High School athletic trainer Larry "Doc" Walls was presented with the Hereford Bull Chip Award, and Hap and Gladys Cavness proved to be the "craziest" at the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce's Crazy Days Fun Breakfast this morning at the community center.

Walls, who is joining former HHS coach Don Cumpton at Abilene High School, was recognized for his 10 years of service to both the athletes at the high school and individuals in the community. He was presented with the award by "Fidel Castro," alias Tom Simons.

The Cavnesses were the hit of the party, with Cavness, a local dentist, dressed up like a baby, complete with diaper and bonnet. His wife was, naturally, garbed as the infant's mother, complete with stroller.

The pair won their choice of $200 in Deaf Smith County Bucks or a weekend for two in Dallas for their efforts. They were selected by applause from the crowd out of a field of five finalists in the costume contest.

Other finalists included a less-than-beautiful lady, Castro, a chicken and bunny duo, and a pair of bank robbers who shared a pair of panty hose, each one using one leg of the garment to "disguise" himself despite the hose still being connected at the middle.

This morning's bi-monthly edition of the Fun Breakfast was sponsored by W.T. Services, Inc., a division of West Texas Rural Telephone Co. The sponsor gave away eight telephones during the breakfast, with two couples claiming half of the prizes. Fred and Peggy Fox won two of the phones as did Father Charles Threewit and wife Vera, while Mary Thomas, Teresa Sweeney, and Susan Barrett also won one. Della Stagner topped the phone winners, claiming a "Pink Panther" model.

In addition to the sponsor drawings, several other prizes were awarded, and announcements of upcoming community events were made.

Janie Maldonado won $25 in Deaf Smith County Bucks, while Fay Dirks walked away with a $75 prize. Lloyd Ames also won a set of glasses emblazoned with a Hereford Bull, a new promotional item available through the chamber office.

C of C exec Mike Carr also presented SIPCO plant manager Harold Ecton with a tie and a Hereford Bull tie tack.

Danny Boyer and John Stagner presented a short takeoff of a Johnny Carson skit to the delight of the crowd, with Boyer playing "Cow Neck The Magnificent," using his amazing powers to provide answers to questions securely sealed inside envelopes.

Among announcements made at the breakfast were:

TEC budget clear for debate

AUSTIN (AP) — House members were ready today for their first floor debate of the special session, a measure to continue operations of the Texas Employment Commission.

Meanwhile, senators had ready for debate a bill to provide up to $15 million for a new gymnasium and library at Texas Southern University.

A House committee Wednesday quickly approved the TEC continuation, after brushing off efforts to add a human rights division to the state agency that gets much of its financing from federal money.

The vote of approval by the House Labor and Employment Relations Committee was 8-1.

Two similar bills were heard by a Senate committee Wednesday but were left pending until the House acts on the issue.

An effort to amend the measure in House committee to create in the TEC a new division to investigate employment discrimination complaints, presented by Rep. Senfronia Thompson, D-Houston, was defeated 7-1.

It was the addition of an amendment by Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, for a new "human rights" division that defeated a House-approved bill during the regular session, which ended May 30.

After the Wednesday committee session, Rep. Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin, said he and others were negotiating with Gov. Mark White for a separate bill on a state human relations agency.

"He seems very positive on the subject," Barrientos told

Thieves get pump, motor

A tailwater pump and motor worth an estimated $1,500 were stolen from an area residence sometime between June 15 and 20, the Deaf Smith County Sheriff's Office reported.

Victim of the theft is Carl Kleuskins, who lives northeast of Hereford on Rt. 1. The matter is still under investigation, the sheriff's office said.

In other county crime news, Irma Lopez had her 216 Ave. I residence burglarized between 10:30 a.m. and 3 p.m. Tuesday. Taken were a stereo and speakers with a combined estimated value of $100, the sheriff's office reported.

case in closed session, unanimously accepted the request. They then moved Earnest Langley of Witherspoon, Aikin and Langley to serve the county as attorney in the pending litigation.

According to Saul, the case is actually a consolidation of two suits. It alleges discrimination by the county in its employment practices on behalf of all past, present and future Hispanic applicants or employees of Deaf Smith County.

Saul said both plaintiffs seek damages and injunctive relief and are attempting to have the joint case certified as a class action. Villarreal, who Saul said "claimed to be" a county employee, filed his case in March of 1981. Garcia, an applicant for county work, did so last December.

The cases were merged on Jan. 5, 1983. The plaintiffs are being represented by Texas Rural Legal Aid.

A hearing to certify the case as a class action was recently postponed and no new replacement date has been set, Saul said.

$80 tire reported stolen

A tire, worth an estimated $80, was stolen recently from Lila Liscano of 615 Grand, the Hereford Police Department reported this morning.

According to police, the theft occurred sometime between 10 a.m. Saturday and 11 a.m. Wednesday. The tire was mounted on a 1979 Chevrolet.

Police also reported another tire incident...this one with a different twist. Carlos Vaughn, 303 Ave. H, awoke this morning and found two used tires had been deposited on his front lawn sometime during the night.

Four door-to-door salesmen were asked to leave town Wednesday after Hereford City Manager Dudley Bayne reported they had not obtained the required selling permits. Police said the men left without incident.

An assault, DWI and minor accident happened early this morning in Hereford. The Deaf Smith County Sheriff's Office assisted in the DWI, which reportedly involved resistance.

There was also one case of public intoxication which occurred Wednesday.

Pope meets Jaruzelski before seeing Walesa

KRAKOW, Poland (AP) — Lech Walesa slipped secretly into Krakow and waited today for his private meeting with Pope John Paul II, just hours after the pope held unscheduled talks with the military leader who banned Walesa's Solidarity trade union.

The pope, who ends his eight-day pilgrimage today, met privately Wednesday night with Communist Party chief Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, who outlawed the independent union last year. It was the second meeting between the two leaders since the pope's visit to his homeland began.

Polish church officials on Wednesday refused to say where the pope would receive Walesa, who last met him during a Vatican audience in January 1981 during Solidari-ty's heyday. Walesa, after flying from his home in the Baltic seaport of Gdansk, spent the night at a church mission in the city center, waiting for word on when he would meet with the pope, his parish priest, the Rev. Henryk Jankowski, said.

Jaruzelski flew unannounced to this ancient city of kings in southern Poland to meet John Paul, who has sharply criticized Poland's Communist leaders and their imposition of martial law in a bid to crush Solidarity.

Police dispersed thousands of Solidarity supporters who marched through the streets of Krakow and its suburb of Nowa Huta, designed by the Communists to be a model, churchless community.

Before the marches, the largest crowd during his visit — more than 2 million people — attended Mass by the pope at Krakow's Blonie parade grounds.

When Mass ended, nearly 50,000 protesters waved Solidarity banners and other signs saying "Your Words Are Our Hope" and chanted "Lech Walesa" as they marched towards Nowa Huta for the second papal appearance of the day.

Police trucks drove into the crowd, breaking it up. As they dispersed another march, of 7,000 Solidarity backers in Nowa Huta, police took away two demonstrators in handcuffs.

Walesa, 39, who helped form the first independent labor union in the Soviet bloc, was the talk of the town Wednesday.

Preacher acquitted in street marriages

HOUSTON (AP) — A preacher found innocent of breaking a city ordinance with his curbside wedding services says he'll be back at work soon in front of Harris County's civil courthouse.

"How can they stop me from worshipping God in my car — especially when that car is legally parked?" the Rev. Charlie Neal asked after his acquittal Wednesday.

Neal was charged with violating a city ordinance against using structures on public streets for private enterprise.

For several months, he has parked his wedding chapel — a van topped with a steeple and equipped with a stereo blaring gospel music — at a meter in front of the public building and, sought out couples about to be married in civil wedding ceremonies.

"The ordinance was not intended to cover a vehicle," said Neal, clad as usual in a black suit, string tie, boots and cowboy hat.

Defense attorney Walter Boyd said Neal did not violate the ordinance because the weddings are free and because "a vehicle is not a structure."

Neal originally charged $19.95 for his standard ceremony and $24.95 for the deluxe version, which includes a cassette tape recording of the service and a color photograph. He switched to a system of donations after being warned about the ordinance.

"I'm just giving people who haven't had the time to get a preacher, or don't know one, the opportunity to have a Christian wedding," he said.

Assistant City Attorney Ed Cazaras said Neal may be arrested again.

"Just because someone is found not guilty for speeding does not mean it is legal to speed," Cazaras said.

Methane gas may have caused mine explosion

McCLURE, Va. (AP) — An explosion that killed seven miners and injured three others at an Appalachian mine shaft probably was caused by methane gas, said United Mine Workers President Rich Trumka.

The bodies of the seven miners, including a woman and a foreman three days from retirement, were removed from Clinchfield Coal Co.'s McClure No. 1 mine Wednesday after the Tuesday night blast.

Three other miners injured in the blast remained hospitalized, one in serious condition. Another 74 miners escaped injury, said Clinchfield spokeswoman Susan Copeland.

"All we know right now is that seven people were killed in a methane explosion," said Trumka, who arrived at the site late Wednesday. Five of the victims were UMW members.

Ms. Copeland also speculated that the disaster was caused by methane gas, but said, "We don't know why it exploded."

"It was a gassy mine. It let out a lot of methane, but they kept a good check on it," said miner Jerry Jenkins, who was working in another section of the shaft during the explosion.

"We didn't hear no boom or anything like that," said Jenkins, a miner for 11 years. "It was a change in air pressure. Our ears popped and hurt and we felt a big rush of air. It was like a big wind, and then there was a lot of dust."

The 4-year-old mine consists of a 460-foot-deep vertical shaft and six horizontal tunnels branching off at different depths. The shaft holds the elevator used by the 300 miners working the coal seams.

Ms. Copeland identified the dead as F.C. Riner, 58, a section foreman, of Dante; Ernest A. Hall, 30, a foreman, from Castlewood; J. Covey French, 45, of Clintwood; Luther McCoy, 37, of Nora; Dale Stamper Jr., 56, of Lebanon; Eugene W. Meade, 26, of Coeburn, and Mary K. Counts, 51, of Nora.

Two hijackers surrender after 21-hour ordeal

LARNACA, Cyprus (AP) — Two young Lebanese hijackers surrendered today and released 32 hostages held for 21 hours aboard a Libyan-chartered airliner that was seized over Greece and taken on a zig-zag flight over the Mediterranean.

The surrender came after three hours of negotiations between the hijackers and the Cypriot minister of communications, Christos Mavrellis, who persuaded the two men to give themselves up while talking to them through an Arab interpreter from the airport control tower.

"We guaranteed their safety but did not give them safe conduct," Mavrellis told newsmen shortly after the hijack ended.

Mavrellis said the passports carried by the hijackers identified them both as Lebanese citizens: Raja Aref Ahmed, 19, and Hassan Mehdi Saadun Haj, 17.

"They only had one gun between them and the suitcase that one of them claimed was filled with explosives was harmless," Mavrellis said.

The hijackers, who at one point identified themselves as Shiite Moslems, had forced the jet to land in Cyprus early Thursday after a 14-hour odyssey that included a stop in Rome and an aborted flight to Lebanon.

Shotgun wedding

It was a shotgun wedding — between medical science and nutrition.

Just a decade ago, nutrition was considered quackery, was never taught in medical school. It is now. The science of medicine and the now accepted science of nutrition have stopped mean-mouthing one another in favor of mutual respect.

The American Cancer Society last month held a national conference on breast cancer; heard further evidence that diet may contribute to — or protect against — breast cancer.

Heredity remains the most significant factor, but what you eat is next.

The conference heard warnings against unsaturated fats.

Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston, of all places, reports in Science

News that "40 percent of hip-fracture patients were vitamin D deficient. Seventy-five percent of osteomalacia (softening of the bone) patients lacked vitamin D."

These findings have since been confirmed by Vrije University, Amsterdam.

Research funded by the Saturday Evening Post Society revealed that people who take lysine have less cancer.

Lysine, taken one, two or three days, 500 milligrams per day or more, appears to effect a reduced incidence of cancer.

The Society's research director, Dr. Cory SerVaas, says it is too early to claim a certain cause-effect relationship, though this clinical report tends to confirm laboratory findings that "high lysine and low arginine retard growth of a number of viruses."

Now hear this: Dr. Bruce Ames of the University of California, biochemist, is recipient of this year's Charles Mott prize for cancer research.

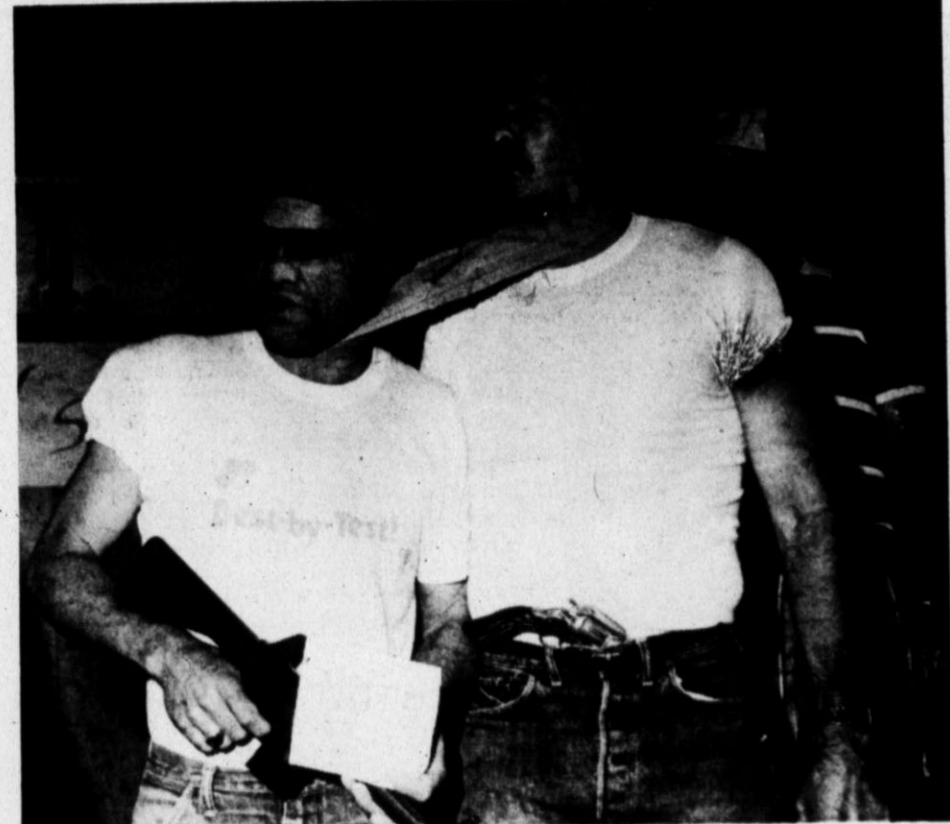

He says that future cancer studies will focus, not on manmade carcinogens which might cause cancer, but will focus instead on "diet which does cause aging and disease."

He says researchers have overburdened themselves with concerns about man-made substances. Now they will concentrate on cancer-diet research, after which he believes "the answers will come rather quickly."

This, remember, is a scientist whose whole professional experience and reputation are built on knowledge of carcinogens causing cancer and who is now focusing on diet to prevent it.

The New England Journal of Medicine and the Journal of the American Medical Association, traditionally derisive of "the vitamin peddlers" are now selectively endorsing them.

As I say, it was a shotgun wedding but at long last it appears to be a compatible one.

Cuba appears more settled after 25 years of communism

HAVANA, Cuba (AP) — Yanara Gutierrez, 13, a bandana wrapped around her head, splashed water on her sweaty face and answered with a quick "no" when asked if she ever ate some of the strawberries she and her schoolmates had been cultivating.

"They represent foreign currency for our country," she said.

In the classroom, Joaquin Martinez, 13, had said earlier the greatest achievement of his country was "the revolution we have undertaken."

At the construction site of a new thermoelectric plant, Juan Burgos, a young civil engineer, works closely with Soviet technicians and talks about the cost of equipment in terms of rubles, a Soviet currency. The students and the engineer are the offspring of a new Cuba, a closed society immersed in Marxist ideology that, in the words of Havana Province Governor Oscar Fernandez Mel, "is here to stay."

Almost 25 years after the triumph of Fidel Castro's revolution, Cuba appears to have gone beyond the earlier revolutionary fervor and become a more settled society. It has made noticeable advances in education that the government proudly shows to visitors, rationing of nearly all basic products continues but is not as strict as it used to be, and the country's industrial base is broadening.

Strident anti-United States campaigns are no longer drummed constantly into Cubans, although there are still attacks on "imperialism," a substitute for direct references to the United States.

"We have great respect for the people of the United States," said Vice President Carlos Rafael Rodriguez, Cuban Communist Party leader. "Nothing obliges us (Cuba and the United States) to maintain the antagonism that has been forced upon us for more than 20 years."

His statement echoed the theme of Cuban officials who in meetings with a group of visiting American journalists stressed that Cuba and the United States can live in harmony despite political differences.

Ideology plays a big role in the development of the new society. The Communist Party guides the lives of the population of nearly 10 million from school age to adulthood.

"The party is the guide and watchdog of the government," said Enrique Mendoza, director of the newspaper Granma, the largest daily publication in Cuba and the government-controlled organ of the Communist Party.

"To do is the best way to speak," chanted Yanara's blue-uniformed schoolmates at the battle of Higueros Middle School in San Antonio in Havana province. The phrase is a quotation from Cuba's national hero Jose Marti.

More than 600 boys and girls live at the school six days a week and work in the fields 15 hours a week.

"I can help the revolution. I can combine work and study every day and that is one of the ideas of Jose Marti," said Victoria Gomez, a student from Havana.

Minister of Education Jose R. Fernandez, 59, a tall, gray-haired son of Spanish-immigrants, explained: "Education must reflect society."

Many of the Cuban teachers who graduate every year are sent to other Third World countries as part of Cuba's commitment to "internationalism," its desire to spread the ideas of socialism.

More products are available than a few years ago and consumers can get additional rationed goods at so-called free markets for higher than official prices. Smokers may buy four packs of cigarettes every two weeks at 22 U.S. cents a pack, but they may buy more in the free market at $1.88 per pack.

The same applies to textiles, shoes, and other products.

Salaries, like prices, have remained stable although there were some increases last year, Balari said. A doctor makes $340 a month, a clerical worker around $250.

Construction workers and sugar cane cutters can earn more through the system of incentives for increased productivity.

"When is the 'baby' arriving from Gdansk?" a worker from Szczecin asked a Western reporter at a cafe.

The government outlawed Solidarity last October and, after Jaruzelski declared martial law on Dec. 13, 1981, kept Walesa in internment for 11 months.

Before the pope's visit began, authorities at the Lenin shipyards where Walesa works as an electrician refused to give him time off to meet the pope.

Walesa vowed to meet him somehow, and after the pope arrived, he was suddenly given permission to have a "private" meeting with him.

The government insists that, since Solidarity is banned, Walesa is a "private" person of no official importance.

Joe Gunn, vice chairman of the United Texas Labor Committee, said Texas labor supported the bill in its present form.

Ernie Tullis, TEC administrator, testified that under present state-federal regulations the funds collected for job placement and for unemployment compensation could not be used for a human rights department.

Tullis said there already is a procedure for job discrimination complaints to be handled by the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

The bill adds new grounds for impeachment of a commissioner — absence from commission meetings for 60 days because of illness or other disability.

Harry Rothell, representing the Texas Association of Business, said the association supported the bill as introduced, but not with a human rights division in the TEC.

Violence and death await on border

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — The twisting, unpaved mountain roads paralleling both sides of the tense Nicaragua-Honduras border can be calm one minute and battlefields the next.

Despite their surface tranquility, violence and death often wait around the next curve or over the next hill on either side of the frontier.

American journalists Dial Torgerson of the Los Angeles Times and Richard Cross, a free-lance photographer, were killed on such a road on the Honduran side Tuesday when their white Toyota was split in half by shell fire.

Honduras accused Sandinista troops of firing on the journalists' car, but Nicaragua's leftist government denied the charge.

The attack came on an isolated stretch of dirt road between villages of Cifuentes and Las Trojas, about 75 miles east of Tegucigalpa but 215 miles by car because the route snakes around and over mountains.

The Honduran government said the car was only 15 feet from the border when it was hit by gunfire. A government spokesman said it had just passed a lumber truck and was climbing a hill when it was struck by a projectile and hurled into the air.

"The automobile was then hit by a high-powered grenade and was also machine-gunned. All the shooting was done from Nicaraguan territory by Sandinista troops," it said.

The other side of the border can be equally dangerous.

In May, a dozen foreign journalists traveling in a military convoy survived a rebel ambush in northern Nicaragua that left 11 guerrillas and two government soldiers dead. The ambush was north of Jalapa — 15 miles across the border from where Torgerson and Cross died.

That part of the border, 180 miles north of Managua, has been the scene of some of the fiercest fighting since rebels launched a major offensive in March to topple the Sandinistas, who led a revolution ousting rightist President Anastasio Somoza in July 1979.

Rebel troops flow regularly from Honduras into Nicaragua, peasants on the Honduran side say. On the Nicaraguan side pitched battles are frequent as Nicaraguan troops try to cut them off.

"We don't sleep much at night living so close. It's quiet here now but we are still afraid. We are afraid for ourselves and we are afraid of losing what little we have," a store clerk in Cifuentes said recently.

In El Salvador today, and four years ago during the Nicaraguan civil war, journalists traveled with white flags on their cars and international press signs on the windshields.

Such precautions are not common in Honduras, but the Honduran government said the car rented by Torgerson and Cross carried a sign on the back identifying it as international press and also a small white banner.

The roads zig-zag up steep hillsides, pass along ridgetops and drop through gullies, often requiring vehicles to ford streams and shallow rivers.

They are a bushwacker's dream.

Many drivers honk their car horns at each curve to avoid surprising nervous soldiers on either side.

A recent two-day trip along the border found it calm, although peasants said they often heard gunfire from the Nicaraguan side.

"We consider that to be Nicaragua's problem. It is calm over here," said a Honduran army major leading a patrol along the border.

The Honduran military presence is much smaller than the Nicaraguan presence on its side.

Nicaragua has assigned some of its best troops to the area to stem what it claims is an invasion sponsored by the United States and Honduras.

Honduras says it keeps only a minimum of troops on the border because it does not want to spark clashes with the Sandinista forces.

Nicaragua contends the Honduran troop presence is small so the insurgents can cross freely and has threatened war if Honduras does not halt the crossings.

Even farmers who have spent their lives in the area disagree on where the border runs in some areas. They argue over whether the border is this streambed or that treeline or hilltop.

A teenager in Cifuentes said, "We have seen some Sandinista forces on this side, but it looked like an accident. They looked lost."

Hondurans in the villages near the border also say rebel bands move freely, sometimes by truckload, along the roads on the Honduran side.

"The Battle Hymn of the Republic" was written by Julia Ward Howe. It was published in Atlantic Monthly in 1862.

Mildred, who grew up in Levelland, has kept busy as a homemaker over the years. "When we lived on the farm, I spent my summers in the garden, growing things and canning food for the family," she remembers. She still grows tomatoes in her yard in town and both she and her husband enjoy growing flowers.

Mildred and S.L. are the parents of three children and five grandchildren. Their son, Harvey, went to Texas Tech University, which is where S.L. earned his degree in agriculture, and he currently resides in Dumas with his family.

The Garrisons' two daughters, Sharon Walker and Pam Carrothers, live in Austin and Hereford, respectively, with their families. Sharon went to McMurry College and Pam went to the University of Texas at Austin.

Each year the Garrisons go to a convention with the seed company. The annual conventions have been held in such cities as New Orleans, Atlanta, Miami, Houston, and Dallas.

The couple went to Europe in 1972 with the Sugar Beet Directors when S.L. was president of that organization. Thirty-eight people from all over the United States were a part of the group. They attended the World Sugar Beet Conference in Switzerland and then visited Italy, Germany, Holland, and other European countries, touring farms and scenic areas.

Mildred remembers the tulip gardens and flower farms in Holland, where acres and acres of flowers are grown and then auctioned off by the truckload.

They also attended the Passion Play in Germany which is held once every 10 years. They visited behind the Iron Curtain in Yugoslavia and Hungary, which she says was quite an experience.

The couple lived in Germany for a year just after the war was over. They have been back to visit Germany and Austria several times.

Last year the Garrisons went to Panama and then on a cruise. "It was very different than most of the other places we had been," she comments, "and we found it quite interesting."

"While we were staying in Panama, the Pope visited about a block away from where we were staying and people from everywhere came to see him. Also, on the plane going over there, my husband just happened to sit next to the ambassador to Panama and he invited us to a reception and to their home for a brunch. We got to meet some very interesting people."

The Garrisons are active in the First United Methodist Church. She has served as president of the United Methodist Women and taught a fourth grade Sunday school class for about 10 years. He has been involved in lay ministries and has been president of the official board.

Mildred has been a member of the Hereford Study Club for about 20 years and has held the office of president as well as nearly every other office. She is currently the historian for Hereford CowBelles, a position she has occupied for the past two years.

She enjoys toile painting and has a collection of bells, something which she has added to when visiting foreign countries.

Mildred enjoys cooking and helping with teas, brunches, and other gatherings. The cucumber sandwiches are ideal for such events, she says. The Sicilian meat roll is a fancy main dish which is nice for company and the chewy chocolate cake is a favorite for family meals and church suppers.

SICILIAN MEAT ROLL
2 eggs, beaten

Two-thirds c. soft bread crumbs (1 slice)
1/2 c. tomato juice
2 Tbsp. chopped parsley
1/2 tsp. dried oregano, crushed salt to taste
1/2 tsp. pepper
1 clove garlic, minced
2 lbs. lean ground beef
8 thin slices boiled ham
6 oz. (1 1/2 c.) shredded mozzarella cheese
3 slices mozzarella cheese, each slice halved diagonally tomato wedges (optional)
Combine eggs, bread crumbs, tomato juice, parsley, oregano, salt, pepper, and garlic. Mix in ground beef.

On foil or waxed paper, pat meat into 10x12 inch rectangle. Arrange ham slices on top, leaving small margin around edges. Sprinkle shredded cheese over ham. Starting from one short end, carefully roll up meat using foil or waxed paper to lift. Seal edges and ends.

Place roll seam side down in 9x13 inch pan. Bake 1 hour, 15 minutes at 350 degrees until done (center of meat will be pink because of ham). Place cheese wedges on top of roll. Return to oven for 5 minutes. Garnish with tomato wedges. Serves eight.

CUCUMBER SANDWICHES
1 c. chopped and drained cucumbers
8 slices white or wheat bread (remove crust)
1/2 c. flaked coconut
1/4 c. mayonnaise or cream cheese

In small bowl combine cucumber, coconut and mayonnaise. Spread bread with butter, then cucumber filling. Cut diagonally in quarters and keep in refrigerator until served. (Will freeze).

CHEWY CHOCOLATE CAKE
Combine (do not use mixer):

2 sticks oleo
4 Tbsp. cocoa
1 c. water
Bring to a boil. Sift in a bowl:
2 c. flour
2 c. sugar
Pour in hot liquid and stir; then add:
1/2 c. buttermilk
1 tsp. soda
2 slightly beaten eggs
1 tsp. vanilla
Grease and flour loaf cake pan and bake 25 minutes at 400 degrees. About 5 minutes before cake is done, mix icing. Pour over cake while hot.

ICING
1 stick oleo or margarine
6 Tbsp. milk
4 Tbsp. cocoa
Bring to a boil; then add:
1 box powdered sugar
1 tsp. vanilla
1 c. pecans or other nuts
Mix well; pour over cake and serve.

Business fights cancer

SOUTHPORT, Conn. (AP)—The American Business Cancer Research Foundation here is taking a novel approach to raising money for the fight against cancer: it is appealing to industry's self-interest.

"American business has a profit motive in contributing to cancer research," says Harry D. Williams II, a retired businessman who established the foundation in 1978. "Until the mystery of how a normal cell changes into a malignant one is solved, industry will continue to be over-regulated, based on fears that some of their products could cause cancer."

Williams believes. "Instead, we need scientific answers from good basic research."

The foundation is guided by an advisory panel of six scientists, including three Nobel laureates, who select research grant recipients.

Carlton falls three behind

Ryan fans seven, reassumes record

By JOHN NELSON AP Sports Writer
Carlton who?

Nolan Ryan, the Houston Astros big right-hander, says he could care less. He's the all-time strikeout king again. It's OK. But it doesn't really matter. "I don't pay any attention at all about what happens to him," Ryan said of Philadelphia's Steve Carlton, whom he passed for the record Wednesday night. "I'm more concerned about getting myself back in shape."

Ryan struck out seven batters in eight innings as Houston defeated Atlanta 4-3. That gave him 3,548 in his career, three more than Carlton. Ryan and Carlton have been engaged in a season-long game of leapfrog for a record that belonged to Walter Johnson only three months ago.

But Ryan, twice on the disabled list this year, still is trying come back from a hamstring pull that has him off schedule.

"Everything's falling into place," Ryan said. "My velocity's good. My breaking ball is pretty consistent. It's just a matter of getting enough innings behind me so I can start completing some games."

Wednesday night, Ryan had to leave before the fireworks really started. Trailing 2-1 going into the ninth, the Braves scored twice on Bob Watson's RBI single off reliever Bill Dawley.

In the bottom half of the inning, however, the Astros scored two of their own on RBI singles by Terry Puhl and Phil Garner to win their second game in a row. The loss, meanwhile, was the seventh in eight games for the Braves.

Expos 4, Phillies 0
Tim Raines belted the first grand slam homer of his career, with two out in the ninth inning, to break up a scoreless duel between the Expos' Charlie Lea and Philadelphia's Marty Bystrom.

Lea pitched a five-hitter, walking two and striking out five.

Mets 6-2, Cardinals 4-1
Tom Seaver and Mike Torrez, a pair of 17-year veterans, pitched the Mets to their second doubleheader sweep of the season and only fourth since 1978. Seaver scattered seven hits in the opener, and Torrez pitched seven innings in the nightcap, combining with Jesse Orosco on a six-hitter.

Pirates 5, Cubs 2
Pittsburgh beat the Cubs for the fourth time in three days, getting two RBI from Bill Madlock and a 3-for-4 performance from newly acquired rookie Marvell

Wynne. Madlock hit a solo homer and a run-scoring single to help back left-hander John Candelaria, who worked five innings.

Reds 4, Giants 2
Mario Soto pitched a six-hitter, striking out 11, and aided his own cause with an RBI double as Cincinnati defeated San Francisco. It was the fourth time this year

Soto has fanned 10 or more batters in a game. Soto walked four.

Padres 5, Dodgers 2

San Diego won its fifth straight behind the combined four-hit pitching of Eric Show and Gary Lucas. Tony Gwynn returned from a broken wrist to play in only his second game of the season for the Padres, doubling and singling twice.

The loss was the third straight for the Dodgers. The Padres scored three runs in the sixth, two unearned, with the help of Gwynn's RBI double, and his single drove in an eighth-inning run off Dave Stewart, who had come on in relief of Bob Welch.

The Hereford Brand SPORTS

Brewers slow to jell in '83

By HERSHEL NISSENSON AP Sports Writer

How the mighty have fallen. That thud you may have heard Wednesday night was the Milwaukee Brewers, American League champions just one year ago, plummeting into last place in the AL East.

The fence-busting crew popularly known last year as Harvey's Wallbangers lately have looked more like Harvey the invisible rabbit of stage and screen fame. The Brewers got a first-inning home run from Robin Yount but didn't manage another hit until they put together three meaningless singles in the ninth and dropped a 6-2 decision to the Tigers in Detroit, their 11th setback in the last 15 games.

That pushed them once percentage point behind the Cleveland Indians, who whipped the Boston Red Sox 9-4. Detroit's Jack Morris fired a four-hitter at the Brewers and Glenn Wilson and Larry Herndon slammed two-run homers off loser Mike Caldwell. Lance Parrish, who slammed an RBI double in the first inning, doubled ahead of Cabell's homer in the fourth, one inning after Wilson's tie-breaking two-run shot.

Indians 9, Red Sox 4
At Boston, Pat Tabler, Julio Franco and Alan Bannister each drove in two runs for the Indians, who grabbed a 5-0 lead before the Red Sox came to back, chasing Bobby Ojeda after one-third of an inning. Boston cut the lead to 5-3 on run-scoring singles by Tony Armas and Carl Yastrzemski in the first and Armas' 14th homer of the season in the third, but the Red Sox went scoreless after that until Armas homered again in the ninth.

Yankees 5, Orioles 2
Jerry Mumphrey and Roy Smalley hit home runs on consecutive pitches off Scott McGregor to produce three runs in the third inning and Ron Guidry scattered eight hits.

Twins 4, Blue Jays 3
At Toronto, John Castino singled home two runs in a three-run seventh inning and Tom Brunansky hit a solo home run as Minnesota prevented Toronto's Dave Stieb from notching his 11th victory. Stieb carried a 2-1 lead into the seventh when Gary Gaetti doubled and scored on a single by Ron Washington.

Twins for Lopez?
ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Nancy Lopez might be playing for three when she tees off today for the start of the Rochester International golf tournament at Locust Hills Country Club.
More than four months into pregnancy, Lopez said earlier this week her doctor told her she had gained more weight than is normal and might be carrying twins.
She said Wednesday she would still like to keep playing through late July, but, "If I grow any quicker than I have been I might not."

Defending Wimbledon champ

Connors tired of politics in tennis world

By WILL GRIMSLEY AP
Special Correspondent

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Jimmy Connors, reformed stormy petrel of tennis, contends politics and regulations are draining excitement from the game.

"I feel like somebody is sitting on top of me — I can't breathe," said the 30-year-old defending men's champion at Wimbledon. "I am tired of all the fines and petitions and stuff."

"Every time you do something, somebody gets after you. You can't play exhibitions. You can't do this. You can't do that. There's no individuality left."

"I'd like to get involved more — especially in Wimbledon and the U. S. Open. But it's no use. So I have adopted a tunnel vision. The only fun I get out of the game is playing tennis. I put everything I have into competition."

Connors spoke openly of his concerns about the game that is his life after dispatching Wally Masur of Australia to the sidelines in straight sets Wednesday in a second-round match.

His remarks came while the Men's International Professional Tennis Council (MIPTC) was considering an appeal by 20 top players, including John McEnroe, to rescind a $20,000 fine and year's suspension meted out to Argentina's Guillermo Vilas for accepting appearance money.

It is a common practice among name players — and has been for years — in the face of a rule impossible to enforce.

"I didn't sign the petition," Connors admitted. "I didn't even see it. I've been too busy concentrating on my game."

Connors indicated that he thought such rules were ridiculous because they were so easy to circumvent and were contrary to the best interests of the sport.

"Rules should be around," he said. "But they should be reasonable. The trouble is, the same men who give the penalties are also the ones that you appeal to."

"So you're damned if you do and damned if you don't."

This year's Wimbledon hadn't even started when the authorities started issuing pronouncements aimed at McEnroe, dubbed "Superbrat" in the British press, threatening possible ejection from the tournament if he created the slightest furor.

Before John had a chance to strike a ball, the tabloids were screaming, "Boot Out McEnroe!" "Clean Up the Game!"

Wimbledon even took out $2.5 million insurance policy with Lloyds of London to protect against any legal action by a player who might charge, if ejected, that he was being deprived of a livelihood.

McEnroe's name wasn't mentioned, but there was no doubt at whom it was aimed.

"I sympathize with McEnroe," Connors said. "Right or wrong, he adds a lot of excitement to the game. It's wrong to corral him."

Somebody asked Jimmy if he thought the establishment was attempting to turn players into Little Lord Fauntleroy.

"That's the way it was when I started playing in East St. Louis," he said. "It was spic and span, a gentleman's game. They cut down on styles. You couldn't be an individual."

"But, when the game went pro, that began to change. People like personalities who are different. They identify with emotion."

"That's what made the game more popular."

Jimmy was one of the most notorious of the firebrands, a maverick who feuded with fans, officials and the press. He frequently made obscene gestures to the crowd and spurned press interviews. He refused to play Davis Cup.

He has been the epitome of decorum the last few years, following his marriage to a beauty queen, Patti McGuire, and the birth of a son, Brett, in 1979 — a marriage that recently broke up.

Someone reminded Jimmy that in the recent past he had attributed his mellowing and attendant success to his family attachments.

"Yes, my son," Connors replied.

"Does that mean you are entrenching yourself now deeper into tennis?" a reporter asked.

"I've always been deep in tennis," he replied.

YMCA offers soccer, tennis

First and second graders interested in playing soccer through the YMCA Summer Youth Program now have until Saturday to register.

Open to first and second grade boys and girls, the soccer program requires a $9 entry fee from YMCA members and $15 from non-members.

Meanwhile, it is still possible to join the YMCA's Women's Tennis League, for which play began last Monday.

Each participant, who must be out of high school, plays a pair of 10-game matches every week. Competition is always held Monday, beginning at 8:30 a.m., at the Hereford High School courts.

Players are given one point for every game they win, thereby creating league standings.

In order to obtain further information about either tennis or soccer, call 364-6990 or visit the YMCA office in the Sugarland Mall.

All-Star voting

Gantner now first

NEW YORK (AP) — Second baseman Jim Gantner of the Milwaukee Brewers has advanced from fourth place to first with just four days remaining in balloting for the American League All-Star team, Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's office announced today.

Gantner has 462,166 votes in the latest accounting of the balloting sponsored by Gillette for the 50th anniversary All-Star game to be played in Chicago's Comiskey Park July 6.

Gantner has a lead of 50,086 over Manny Trillo of Cleveland, who is second with 412,080. California's Bobby Grich (377,849) is third while Frank White of Kansas City (335,372), last week's leader, has slipped to fourth.

In the outfield, California teammates Fred Lynn (614,327) and Reggie Jackson (605,977) are running 1-2 with Dave Winfield of the New York Yankees (604,764) in third place, 37,142 ahead of fourth place Ben Oglivie of Milwaukee, who has 567,622 votes. Oglivie was more than 90,000 votes behind last week.

Milwaukee's Robin Yount has received the most votes and holds the largest lead in the election. The Brewer shortstop's total soared to 1,181,174 with Kansas City's U.L. Washington a distant second at 264,871.

Hitting stars Rod Carew of California at first base and George Brett of Kansas City at third also continue to hold substantial leads. Carew has 1,051,117 to 472,002 for Cecil Cooper of Milwaukee at first base, while Brett's 999,427 places him well ahead of Milwaukee's Paul Molitor (410,185).

Catcher Ted Simmons (613,217) of Milwaukee continues to lead at that position over Lance Parrish of Detroit (415,327).

The latest leaders in the NL vote were San Diego's Steve Garvey at first base, Steve Sax of Los Angeles at second, Ozzie Smith of St. Louis at shortstop, Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt at third, Dale Murphy of Atlanta, Montreal's Andre Dawson and Willie McGee of St. Louis in the outfield and catcher Gary Carter of Montreal.

The balloting ends Sunday with the eight starters for each team to be announced next Wednesday.

Food-borne disease common cause of short term illness

What do restaurant meals, church picnic suppers, and home-canned food all have in common? According to Mary K. Sweeten, a foods and nutrition specialist, they each hold the potential for spreading food-borne illness.

"Every year, we are particularly concerned that people who do home canning become aware of the dangers associated with poor food handling procedures," says Sweeten, who works for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

"But the problem goes far beyond home-canners since medical authorities claim that food-borne disease is the second most common cause of short-term illness in the country," she adds.

Food-borne illnesses also have severe economic consequences. According to the "Journal of American Medical Association," March, 1983, the total cost of a 1978 outbreak of botulism among 34 New Mexico restaurant patrons is now estimated at 5.8 million dollars, reports Sweeten. Most of that money went for legal settlements and attorney's fees, she adds.

Stuttering neuromuscular, not psychological problem

HOUSTON - Though it doesn't kill or physically cripple, stuttering often causes embarrassment and social ostracism for the five million Americans afflicted.

A few, such as country singer Mel Tillis, turn the speech problem into an asset. Most don't. They cope as best they can and seek help when they can afford it. Diagnosis and treatment is often difficult because so little is known about the causes of stuttering.

However, help may not be too far in the future as financial support and attention from medical researchers increases.

"I think that within the next 15 years we will have the answers to the major questions about stuttering," said David Rosenfield, M.D., a neurologist and director of the Stuttering Center at Baylor College of Medicine.

Increased interest in stuttering led to the creation of Baylor's Stuttering Center in 1978—the only one in the United States that treats patients, as well as conducting research around the country.

The center has distributed $30,000 to finance studies at several U.S. universities. It is also cooperating with Harvard University School of Medicine in a study on whether more left-handed people stutter than those who are right-handed.

In 1982, the center received contributions of approximately $50,000 over 1981.

One of the things known about stuttering is that it is a neuromuscular problem, not a psychological one.

The source of stuttering is in the part of the brain that controls speech, and in the tongue, mouth, lips, vocal cords and voice box (larynx), which are muscles, Rosenfield said. A problem in one of borne illness linked to restaurants are more likely to lead to legal action than mild outbreaks, or those resulting from social group epidemics, concedes Sweeten.

But she notes that food-borne illness from all sources is estimated to cost Americans millions each year in medical costs and lost work time.

The culprits in most food-borne illnesses of known cause are bacteria:

-Salmonellae bacteria can be found in red meats, eggs, dried foods and dairy products. Salmonellosis is transmitted by eating contaminated food or by contact with infected persons, insects, rodents, or pets.

-Clostridium perfringens are somewhat heat resistant and may be found in stews, soups or gravies. The illness is transmitted by eating food in which unusually large numbers of the bacteria have multiplied because of inadequate cooking and/or cooling.

-Staphylococcus (or staph) bacteria are transmitted by food handlers who carry the bacteria, and by eating food containing a heat stable toxin from the bacteria. The toxin can be formed in hams, these parts or in their coordination causes the stutter.

The faulty coordination is often a result of some problem the stutterer had in developing speech as a child, which is why stuttering often begins in childhood. But Rosenfield said stuttering can also develop in a previously fluent person after a brain injury.

Stuttering was once thought to be an emotional problem. "But psychiatric treatment has never cured a stutterer," Rosenfield said. "There are too many characteristics of stuttering that can't be explained by psychiatry."

One of these characteristics is that most stutterers are fluent when they sing or when they can't hear themselves speak. In fact, one device, the Edinburgh Masker, keeps the stutterer from hearing himself speak. Rosenfield said it has helped many severe stutterers become totally fluent.

Another characteristic is that some stutterers who have had their larynx removed stop stuttering.

Although the disease is not well understood, most stutterers can be helped if they have adequate therapy.

"It's important that the stutterer seek out a certified speech-language pathologist who uses a variety of techniques, because not all stutterers are the same," Rosenfield said.

The patient should also see a neurologist in case the stutter could be related to nerve or brain damage.

Psychiatric or psychological counseling may also help patients cope with their inability to communicate well, but it should not be the only treatment method used.

custard-filled foods, cream pies, unrefrigerated cooked meat and dairy products.

-Clostridium botulinum bacteria are normally associated with inadequate heat treatment in home canned foods.

According to Dr. Ranzell Nickelson, Extension Seafood Technology Specialist and Marine Project Supervisor, common factors contributing to food-borne disease are contaminated raw food; inadequate thermal processing, canning or cooking; an infected person touching cooked food; improper cooling or hot storage; and the lapse of day or more between preparing and serving food.

To prevent food-borne disease from home cooking, Sweeten recommends that you begin by examining all food cans and jars. Never buy food in leaking, bulging, or severely dented cans, cracked jars, or jars with loose or bulging lids, due to the risk of botulism.

Careful attention to food temperature, especially in warm weather, will also reduce the possibility of food-borne illness, says Sweeten.

When shopping for food, she suggests picking up meat, poultry and dairy products last and then getting them home and into the refrigerator or freezer promptly.

Set the refrigerator temperature at 35 to 40 degrees Fahrenheit and freezer temperature at zero degrees or lower. Also check frequently to make sure the temperatures are being maintained.

Sweeten recommends that meat and poultry be thawed in the refrigerator, or for faster results, in a watertight package under cold water.

When it comes to serving food, she suggests that hot foods be kept hot, and cold food cold until eaten, and that leftovers be refrigerated promptly to maintain safe temperatures.

"Cleanliness is also extremely important in preventing food-borne illness," notes Sweeten.

"Most people know to wash their hands before preparing food. But some people neglect to wash after handling raw meat or poultry and then go on to touch other foods," she says.

Washing utensils, containers and work surfaces both before and after they come into contact with raw meat or poultry is also recommended, adds Sweeten.

"The same principles apply to food eaten away from home," says Sweeten. She suggests selecting restaurants that have high standards of cleanliness.

Also, make sure that hot and cold foods are kept at proper temperatures, especially at picnics, socials and other outdoor warm-weather gatherings, adds Sweeten.

Ann Landers May have to use tough love

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was greatly upset by your response to the woman whose mother telephoned all over town looking for her and then raised the roof because she hadn't told mama where she was going. That daughter was a grown woman with children.

I, too, had a controlling mother - so controlling that she made suicide attempts when I couldn't visit her because of my own family's needs. After several years of therapy I realized that my mother's pathology was not my problem, and I did not have to be a part of her sick game-playing.

An adult woman is under no obligation to tell her mother where she is going whenever she leaves the house. When her mother calls to scold her for being inconsiderate and thoughtless, she should say, "I refuse to allow you to treat me like a child," and hang up on her. That woman was not responsible for her mother's sickness and you should not have advised her to play along so Mom could have

"peace of mind." Sometimes grown children have to use "tough love" on their parents.--Been There In Denver

DEAR DENVER: Your approach to the problem was better than mine. Sick people should not be allowed to manipulate others just because they are unwell. Thanks for saying it so well.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: In August I will be a bride. It should be the happiest day of my life, but I am dreading one part of it and desperately looking for a way out.

My husband and I will stand on the steps of the church and more than 100 relatives and friends will plant kisses of congratulations on our faces. The thought of all those mouths slobbering makes me sick.

Must I paste a smile on my face and go through with it? Is there a tactful way to keep well-wishers from kissing me? Please be sensitive to my anxiety. It's real.--Terror Under The Veil

DEAR TERROR: I know of no gracious way for a bride to avoid being kissed by well-wishers on her wedding day. Keep a pretty lace handkerchief in readiness to wipe up the sloppy ones, although I doubt that there will be many. If you become increasingly anxious, see a counselor. It might be a phobia that could be explored and gotten rid of by August. Good Luck.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My wife and I argue continually about three children from my former marriage. She attempts to hide their existence whenever possible.

For example, when someone asks, "Do you and John have children?" she replies, "No, we don't." I believe she should say, "We don't, but John has three children from a prior marriage."

I could write a book about the custody fights and the problems I've had with these kids, but I'll skip the details and ask you to please settle this dispute.--Mr. X In Salt Lake City

DEAR SALT LAKE: If your wife values your feelings (and her marriage) she should respond to the question in the way that pleases you. It would cost her nothing and make you happy. The Bible calls it "casting your bread upon the waters."

Home remodelers looking for space

COLLEGE STATION -- "Older homes often come closer to being in line with what people prefer," says Dr. Jane Berry, a housing specialist.

"That is one reason why Americans spent over $46 billion on home remodeling and home improvement last year," she adds.

In spite of smaller families and higher housing costs, people still prefer single family homes, says Berry, who is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

According to Berry, recent studies by the National Association of Home Builders and Remodelers show that people want plenty of space, three or four bedrooms, two or two and one-half bathrooms, and open-space planning in their homes.

Many people now remodel larger, older homes to achieve these features rather than purchase smaller and more expensive housing, says the specialist.

The least costly means of adding space to a home is to finish off unused space such as a basement or attic. Adding extra space outside the existing roof or foundation is more expensive, she notes.

Simply updating the kitchen or bathroom tends to be the most common remodeling project, says Berry.

BUT more remodelers are removing walls to add the open-space look to living and dining areas.

Remodelers also tend to borrow ideas for luxury items from new homes and add them to existing homes.

"Probably the most desired luxury addition is a fireplace, which people want for esthetics rather than energy savings," notes Berry.

Other luxury additions such as saunas, decks, skylights, bump out windows and stained or custom designed glass for doors, windows and cabinetry are also popular, reports Berry.

COGNAC, France (AP) - The French are exporting more cognac than ever before, but apparently drinking less of it themselves, according to the Bureau National du Cognac.

The United States retained its position as the world's top consumer of cognac, importing 25,017,000 bottles for the period Sept. 1, 1982 through Aug. 31, 1982, as compared with 23,520,000 bottles the previous year. In second place, the British imported 15,031,000 bottles during the same period against the 14,660,000 purchased the year before.

Meanwhile, French consumption slipped to 14,195,000 bottles from the 16,267,000 of the previous year.

Ornamental, Garden Clinic scheduled

This year's Ornamental and Garden Clinic will be held at the Hereford Community Center beginning at 9:30 a.m., Tuesday, June 28.

A tour will be conducted from 10 a.m. - noon and a formal program utilizing five extension service specialists will be held from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. and a diagnostic clinic will be conducted from 3-4 p.m.

STABLE SCOTS GLASGOW, Scotland (AP) - United States' electronics companies with operations in Scotland are reaping the benefits of a highly stable workforce, according to a recent labor study.

The study by the Scottish Development Agency found that the labor turnover rate in Scotland's Silicon Glen is 7.8 percent, compared with 24 percent in California's Silicon Valley. Eleven U.S. electronics companies have operations in Scotland.

About 75 percent of all U.S. companies there report the productivity in their Scottish plants is as good as, if not better, than their American counterparts, the study adds.

The tour conducted that morning will consist of seven different homes each having its own particular problem.

The places to be toured will be the residence of Mike Lyons, Deaf Smith County Courthouse grounds, Museum Adjunct Black House, and homes of Mrs. Ken Jeter, James Hull, Mrs. Bill Reinauer and Mrs. Jane White.

The specialists will go on the tour and will diagnose and discuss problems concerning insects, disease, fertility, vegetable production tips, lawn and ornamental care. The Extension Service encourages residents to take advantage of this opportunity to get the answers to your lawn, garden, and ornamental problems.

Authorities begin probe into mass slaying claim

MONTAGUE, Texas (AP) — A former mental patient's jail cell sketches and "bits and pieces" he has volunteered have triggered a serious investigation into his claim of killing 100 women in at least 16 states over the past eight years, authorities said.

Henry Lee Lucas, 46, convicted of stabbing his mother to death 23 years ago in Michigan, is a "prime suspect" in unsolved murders of women in Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, California, Oregon, South Dakota, Minnesota, Illinois, Michigan, New Jersey, West Virginia, Florida, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Missouri, Texas Ranger Phil Ryan said Wednesday.

Lucas "has been all over the country, in and out of Texas" several times since 1975, Ryan said.

He is being held without bond in Montague, 50 miles southeast of Wichita Falls, on a murder charge and on $25,000 bond on a weapons charge.

Lucas was arrested June 11 on the weapons charge at the rooms he rented in a church campground at Stoneburg, 10 miles west of Montague. When officers arrived, he had a suitcase packed with clothes, other items, and a 2-foot-long dagger, authorities said.

Five days later, Lucas took officers back to his residence and directed them to a wood-burning stove, where they found the bones of Kate Rich, an 80-year-old woman from nearby Ringgold, investigators said.

Mrs. Rich had been missing for more than nine months.

The same day, Lucas led investigators to a ditch alongside Interstate 35 at Denton, 35 miles northwest of Dallas, where officers unearthed the body of a teen-age girl, who disappeared last summer, according to authorities.

Officials said the girl was believed to be a runaway from Jacksonville, Fla., who had been traveling with Lucas for several years.

Lucas also is under investigation in connection with five other Texas killings, including the slaying of hitchhikers near Plainview and Georgetown and the death of a woman in Austin who had car trouble on her way from St. Louis to her first job in Texas, Ryan said.

Authorities also are checking for links between Lucas and the killing of a woman in Wise County and the slaying of a 12-year-old Denton girl whose body was found in a Dallas gravel pit, said Ryan.

Lucas has talked about 60 different killings, Ryan said. "He has given bits and pieces of information on different killings, but we've got to understand he's confused," Ryan said.

Lucas has spent part of his time in jail drawing pictures of his alleged victims, Ryan said. Officials said one drawing bears an uncanny resemblance to a reconstructed skull that was found in March 1982 near Scottsdale, Ariz.

"He has given sufficient detail that we should be able to corroborate them or not," said Montague County District Attorney Jack McGaughey.

During his arraignment on the murder charge Tuesday, State District Judge Frank Douthitt cautioned Lucas that murder is a serious crime and Lucas replied, "I had about 100 of them."

Lucas then asked, "Will I still be able to go on helping finding bodies?"

When the judge asked if Lucas was mentally competent to stand trial, Lucas answered, "There are about 100 women out there that says different. I would say yes, I think so. I am guilty of it."

Lucas, who has a fifth-grade education, was convicted in 1960 of murdering his mother, 74-year-old Viola Lucas. He spent six years in a state hospital for the criminally insane at Ionia, Mich., was returned to prison, and was released on parole in 1970, authorities said.

He was convicted again in 1971 on an attempted kidnapping charge involving a young girl, served his sentence and was released in 1975, according to investigators.

Prior to the Michigan conviction, he served time in Virginia, his home state, on burglary charges, and afterward was convicted in Maryland for auto theft, officials said.

"I keep asking for help... I know it ain't normal for a person just to go out and kill a girl that won't have sex with them," Lucas told Douthitt. "They turned me loose and told me to go back home. They said 'you are all right.'"

Hale County Sheriff Charles Tue said Wednesday that Lucas told him of killing a young woman hitchhiker he picked up near Abilene in December 1981.

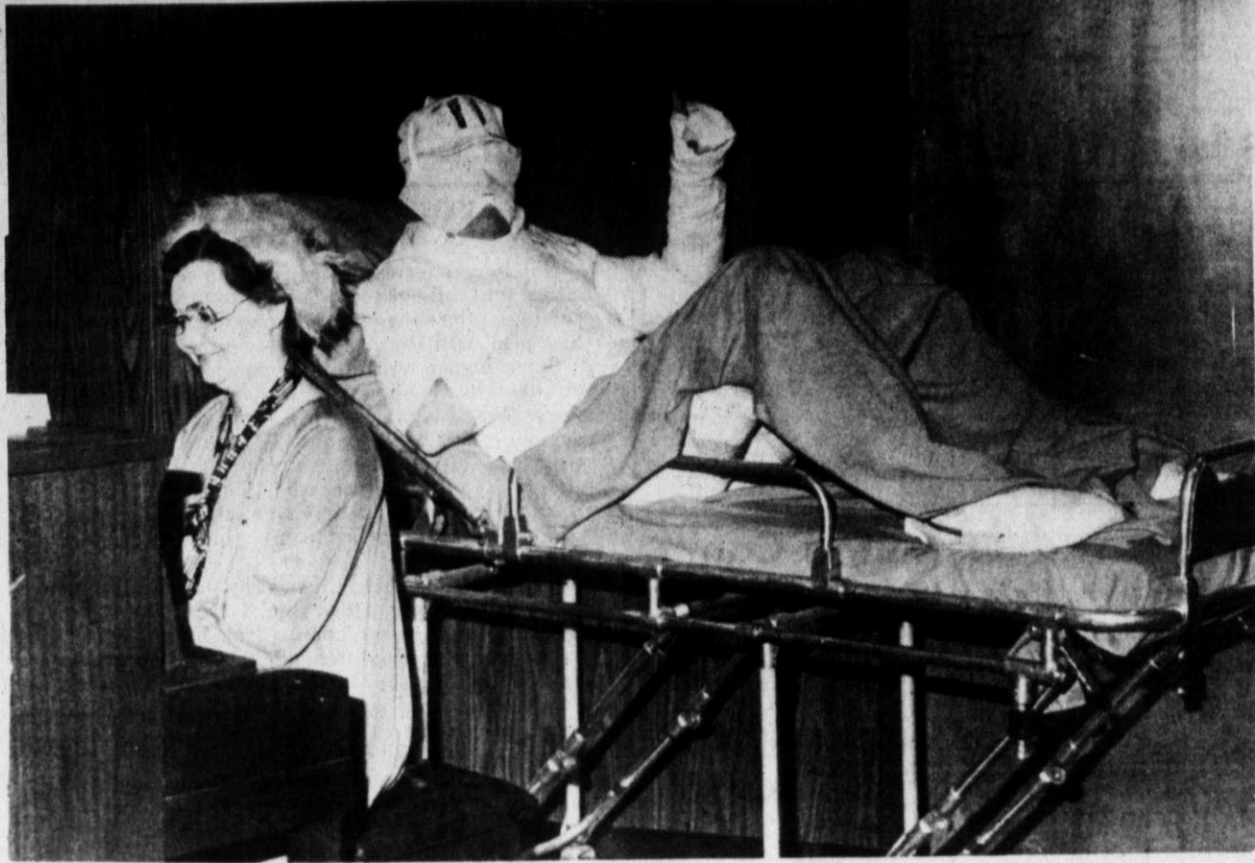

Lucas said he raped the woman both before and after her death and decapitated her with a knife before dumping her body in Hale County and her head near Scottsdale, according to Tue.

The body was found near Plainview on Feb. 16, 1982, and the head was found about six weeks later.

Williamson County Sheriff Jim Boutwell interviewed Lucas about the death of a young woman, believed to be in her early 20s, who was found dumped alongside Interstate 35 northeast of Austin on Oct. 31, 1980. The victim was nude except for socks and a ring on one finger.

Lucas, who claimed to have picked up the woman near Oklahoma City, knew things about the murder that "only the sheriff, myself and the medical examiner and the killer would have known," said Williamson County chief criminal investigator Ray Hardison.

In another case, Sandra Dubs was killed in Austin on her way from St. Louis to San Antonio to take a new job.

Donation pays for restructuring of boy's face

DALLAS (AP) — Surgeons who will rebuild the face of a 6-year-old boy whose head is deformed because of a congenital bone defect will perform the operation in return for a donation to the U.S. Olympic team.

Kevin Leyva of Pecos suffers from Crouzon's disease, a congenital defect that caused the bones in his skull to fuse too early, and already has had several operations to allow his brain to grow.

On July 5, Dr. Kenneth Salyer, a Dallas plastic surgeon, and a team of doctors will restructure the boy's face in a six-hour operation.

"The surgery changes the whole face, his whole personality," Salyer told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "We are literally rebuilding his entire face. We are changing him physically, but more importantly, we are changing his outlook."

The disease causes the eyes to bulge, increases the distance between the eyes, and results in underdeveloped noses and improper relationships between the upper and lower jaw, said a spokeswoman in Salyer's office.

Salyer said Tuesday that an operation last summer restructured the inside of Kevin's skull, and the second phase of the surgery will change his outward appearance, using bone grafts from his ribs.

The operation is possible because of a $22,500 donation by Fort Worth-based Tarrant County Coors beer distributors.

The family's health insurance will not cover all the costs of the surgery, Salyer said.

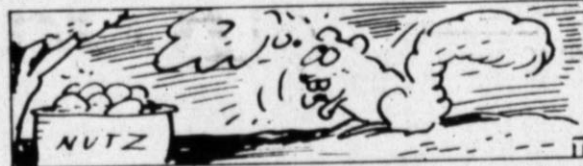

John McMillan, head of the distributors group, said Salyer and the other surgeons will donate the money to the U.S. Olympic team.

"Dr. Salyer and his group of physicians said they would do the work if someone would contribute," McMillan said. "They donated their services and gave the money to the Olympics. It was a double shot as far as I was concerned — helping this little boy and helping the Olympics."

Sue Leyva, Kevin's mother, said her son's first operation was performed when he was three weeks old. She said Kevin has had so many operations since then that she has lost count.

"At school, the nurses and the teachers, they noticed the difference," she said. "He's a lot taller — he's grown. He's a lot more outgoing. He loves school. He's a happy little boy."

Auto telephones useful

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — The days of helplessness because of a car breakdown on a deserted street with no public telephones may soon be over if a new product receives approval from the Federal Communications Commission.

The product is General Electric's Personal Radio Communications Service (PRCS), a short-range mobile telephone that interconnects with the public telephone network. It consists of a base station that connects to a home or office telephone, and a mobile unit that is installed in the motor vehicle. The system will cost about $400.

The anticipated range of the system is five miles — however, it can be extended to a 15-mile radius with the use of a repeater station.

The Newspaper BIBLE

"IF YOU HAVE EARS, USE THEM NOW!"

Not long afterwards Jesus began a tour of the cities and villages of Galilee to announce the coming of the Kingdom of God, and took His twelve disciples with Him.

Some women went along, from whom He had cast out demons or whom He had healed; among them were Mary Magdalene (Jesus had cast out seven demons from her), Joanna, Chuza's wife (Chuza was King Herod's business manager and was in charge of his palace and domestic affairs), Susanna, and many others who were contributing from their private means to the support of Jesus and His disciples.

One day He gave this illustration to a large crowd that was gathering to hear Him...while many others were still on the way, coming from other towns. "A farmer went out to his field to sow grain. As he scattered the seed on the ground, some of it fell on a footpath and was trampled on; and the birds came and ate it as it lay exposed.

"Other seed fell on shallow soil with rock beneath. This seed began to grow, but soon withered and died for lack of moisture.

"Other seed landed in thistle patches, and the young grain stalks were soon choked out.

"Still other fell on fertile soil; this seed grew and produced a crop 100 times as large as he had planted." (As He was giving this illustration He said, "If anyone has listening ears, use them now!") Luke 8:1-8

Fresh ice tea the best

DEAR POLLY — How long can sugared iced tea be kept in the refrigerator? Can non-sugared be kept any longer? — DEBBIE

DEAR DEBBIE — Is this tea prepared in its liquid form, or are you referring to powdered iced tea mix? Jars of the tea mix can certainly be stored, tightly covered of course, for many months. Prepared tea will not spoil, but its flavor deteriorates after a short time. I'd keep it no longer than two to three days for maximum fresh taste. Whether the tea has been sugared or not should make no difference. Best advice is to make it in quantities that can be consumed in a day or two. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — When I order a pattern out of a newspaper or magazine, I paste the picture and number of it on an index card along with one of my return address stickers and my request. This way, there's less chance of the company sending me the wrong pattern or losing my address.

Instead of frying strips of bacon, then crumbling them for recipes calling for crumbled bacon, I dice the bacon in one-half to three-quarter inch pieces, then fry and drain. It's perfect without having the mess (and possibly burned fingers) of crumbling the bacon after cooking. — LINDA

DEAR POLLY — For perfectly broiled steaks in an electric oven, be sure to leave the door open slightly while grilling. The steaks will brown nicely outside without getting overdone inside. — MRS. C.L.

DEAR POLLY — A few drops of vegetable oil in a small dish of water will untangle jewelry chains. Wash them in soapy water after untangling.

Rubbing oil of cloves on chair legs will keep pets from chewing on them.

'Blue Lagoon' star joins 'Dallas' cast next fall

DALLAS (AP) — The Ewing family is not known for sweetness and hospitality, but that's what Christopher Atkins said he found when he joined the cast of "Dallas" at the beginning of shooting here for the show's sixth full season.

Atkins, 22, was catapulted into stardom three years ago when he was plucked from thousands of applicants and cast opposite Brooke Shields in the teen paradise flick "Blue Lagoon."

Then he starred opposite Kristy McNichol in "The Pirate Movie."

Atkins, realistic about his

Plot secrecy precludes further description of the character, according to Atkins and "Dallas" executive producer Phil Caprice. The role was created, Caprice said, "as we do every season, we introduce certain new characters as part of new storylines."

"As soon as he came in, the personality convinced us that he was just right," Caprice said of Atkins. Atkins arrived in Dallas (the city) last week and arrived on the set of "Dallas" (the show) bright and early Monday morning for the first day of shooting.

"I was a little nervous and all, because it's the first TV show I ever shot," Atkins said after his first day of work with the "Dallas" crew.

"Once I was there and everything started, it was really neat. It's kind of scary to come in and work with people who have been on a show so long. To be the newcomer tends to be a little nerve-wracking."

"But Linda (Gray) called me up later and said congratulations and how glad she was I was here. That made my whole evening!" Atkins, who grew up in Rye, N.Y., said he has watched the show "in between chasing Brooke Shields on an island or Kristy McNichol with a sword" and was impressed with the city for which it was named.

"I think it's the glistening city," he said. "I've never seen so much pretty architecture and so much crystal glass and everything. To me, it's like the Emerald City in 'The Wizard of Oz.'"

"Dallas" producers bring cast and crew to the city every year for extensive location shooting. This year, "Dallas" will spend seven weeks in Dallas. Caprice said it is the only series besides another Lorimar production, "Falcon Crest," to spend any degree of time outside Los Angeles.

The crew spent Monday at the Willow Bend Polo Grounds in far north Dallas for the setting of a summer camp. Atkins' role as a camp counselor called for him to bounce on a trampoline outdoors. The temperature was in the 90s and the humidity nearly as high.

Despite the heat, Caprice said, Atkins did "just wonderfully."

Atkins worked on Monday with Miss Gray and Larry Hagman, who portray Sue Ellen and J.R. Ewing.

Hagman, Atkins said, was "extremely funny." "He's so excited about this show," Caprice said of Atkins. "He was really thrown into the business, when out of 4,000 applicants, he got the role in 'Blue Lagoon.' Since then, he has been doing a few movies, but never had opportunity to do his version of summer stock, working with a 'rep' company where he got a chance to do it every day. I think that's the thing that excites him."

"It's all just a learning process, because I came in on a whirlwind when this whole thing started back on 'Blue Lagoon,'" Atkins said. "For a long time I was real serious about becoming a doctor. I still would like to study it, you know, something to fall back on. But I want to be able to open my eyes and know why this is going on."

"Obviously, somebody wants me to be in the movie business right now."

Senator wants new amendments

AUSTIN (AP) — A senator opposed to a brucellosis control bill says he blocked a hearing on the measure so cattlemen could prepare proper amendments and get rid of some "ridiculous" proposed changes.

Sen. John Traeger, D-Seguin, acknowledged that a few amendments suggested by the Independent Cattlemen's Association would kill the brucellosis bill.

"I wanted to give them time to come up with amendments that would comply with federal requirements and still be palatable to our people," Traeger said Wednesday.

He delayed a committee hearing on the bill Wednesday by "tagging" the measure which, in effect, postponed it for 48 hours.

Traeger said, however, he would lift the tag Thursday, 24 hours early. Committee chairman Tati Santiesteban immediately scheduled a hearing on the bill today before his Natural Resources Committee.

"Some of the (cattlemen's) witnesses were not here, and I just wanted to give them a fair shot at it," Traeger said.

"We're running a little behind on our timetable, but I hope that the threat of a quarantine will be lifted from the cattlemen of Texas by next week," said Santiesteban, D-El Paso.

Senate bill sponsor Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, said he had seen a list of proposed cattlemen amendments, including some which "are totally unacceptable to me," and "will totally kill the bill."

He said the U.S. Department of Agriculture would not lift a pending quarantine of Texas cattle if the amendments are approved.

Prior to Traeger's action, Gov. Mark White told a news conference, "There is a broader consensus and acknowledgement of the need to pass a bill. They're not as adamant as they once were, and there's been some moving toward the middle on the part of both sides of this disagreement."

White said, however, "I don't think we've seen a complete agreement on the brucellosis matter."

Brucellosis is a highly contagious disease that affects mainly cattle in the United States, and to some extent swine and sheep.

The regular session, which ended May 30, failed to enact a brucellosis bill, and the USDA set a June 1 quarantine. It was blocked temporarily in court, and the USDA decided about a week ago to give Texas 30 or more days to settle differences between state and federal regulations.

At a May 31 federal court hearing, USDA attorneys said the quarantine was needed because Texas rancher R.J. Nunley of Sabin, a business partner of former Texas Gov. Dolph Briscoe, had obtained a permanent injunction that keeps federal inspectors from checking his cattle for brucellosis.

Brucellosis causes weight loss and miscarriages in cattle, and also results in weakened calves, lower milk production and, in some instances, sterility in bulls.

The Texas Animal Health Commission says, however, 98 percent of all cattle herds in Texas are free of the disease.

Human brucellosis is called undulant fever. Symptoms include chills, sweating, weakness, aches and pains. Humans get it, the commission says, by handling infected material, such as aborted calves, or by drinking raw milk from infected cows.

City organizes police department

ELKHART, Texas (AP) — After suffering his third break-in during an eight-month period in 1982, Elkhart pharmacy owner Dwain Easley was ready to lock the doors and leave his hometown and the business he had started seven years ago.

Knowing other merchants in town also had been robbed, and that criminal activity in south Anderson County was on the rise, Easley "would have quit right then and there" if two things hadn't happened, and quickly.

"Getting law enforcement here was a necessity for the merchants ... that was the main thing," Easley said. "But that took several months. In the meantime, we had to build a steel cage around the drug counter."

"It isn't pretty and it was something we hated to do. But to stay open I had to do something. That's why we are so encouraged about starting a police department here."

During the past three months, the Elkhart City Council has been taking care of the final legal requirements necessary for David Hortman, the city's new police chief, to begin patrolling the city.

Although no statistics are available, merchants and residents agree that criminal activity has decreased in the city. Before Hortman's hiring, break-ins also had been reported at the Elkhart Hardware Store, the Elkhart Food Center and the Elkhart Co-op. Several residents also had been plagued with vandalistic threats, including one elderly woman who awoke to find someone attempting to knock out her windows and enter the home.

Easley knows the value of having a police officer within the city who can respond to calls in a matter of minutes. During his third break-in of 1982, the pharmacy owner had to sneak through the darkened building after hearing the burglar alarm sound at his home.

"There was no doubt in my mind he was still in the store when I went down there," Easley recalled. "I figured he was in the back of the store and I was just hoping I could scare him out of there when I reached the lights."

"Luckily for me he had left when I turned the lights on. But it was a terrifying experience."

Easley and city merchants started meeting with the Elkhart council in late 1982 to discuss the feasibility of establishing a city police department.

"Everyone pretty much agreed that we needed one but we weren't sure if it would prove possible," Easley recalled. "But we looked at cities like Mart, Groesbeck and Teague and learned how they operated their departments. We found that it was possible to have a police officer, if everything fell into place."

"Plus, we were lucky to be able to attract someone as qualified as David to be the first officer."

Like many Elkhart residents, both Easley and Hortman have moved home after establishing careers in other places. Easley was an engineer with General Dynamics when he got the urge to come home and start his own business.

"It had been a very enjoyable six years," he said, referring to a relatively problem-free era that started in 1976 when he opened the downtown pharmacy. "But for some reason we started having a lot of crime here in Elkhart."

"It's probably impossible to say why, except to say that times and conditions change. Whatever the reason, it was becoming very difficult to stay open."

A friend suggested surrounding the pharmacy with steel bars, located the material and helped build the structure that makes the pharmacy resemble an old-time sheriff's office with a jail in the back.

It took the two men almost a year to finish the welding and construction. Easley said he would gladly take it down if he knew criminal activity in the city was a thing of the past.

"Getting the police department proved to be more difficult than getting the medical center," Easley said, referring to the South Anderson County Medical Center, a civic effort that brought medical services to the area.

"That same kind of involvement was necessary for us to get the police department started."

"We're very lucky to have one."

HEALTH Running a risk

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Some time ago on the "Today Show" they interviewed some doctors who said that runners who ran a lot were similar to girls who had anorexia nervosa. I understand that this problem in girls is associated with not eating and gradually starving to death.

I am a runner and I do watch my weight so that I can run better, but I think of myself as being very healthy. I can't see any reason to think my regular running is anything at all like a girl starving herself to death.

But the TV program has started me worrying and I would like to know if runners ever die in the same way that girls with anorexia nervosa do from starvation.

DEAR READER — I know the work you are referring to. It was published in the New England Journal of Medicine and compared the compulsion to run with the compulsion to stay thin. From reading the article, I think the authors were struck with the way running seemed to take over some people's lives just as dieting can in any person who becomes obsessed with being excessively thin.

The report did not mention it but there have indeed been some unexplained deaths in "elite runners" who were quite thin. These were reported in a letter to the Journal of the American Medical Association. The report emphasized that dieting and running were a poor combination if the dieting were followed to the extreme.

I think the real answer rests in not whether you run or starve yourself but in the point made from the study of the IRA prisoners who starved to death. If you have greatly decreased your body fat stores, you may die. The IRA hunger strikers had depleted over 70 to 94 percent of their body fat stores.

So enjoy your running but try not to be excessively thin. Avoiding obesity and losing weight to correct medical problems such as high blood pressure is important but excessive thinness can also be a problem.

I am sending you The Health Letter 13-4. A Perspective On Jogging Deaths, which reviews the dangers of heart attacks and sudden death in runners. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I need some advice. I'm a man in my 20s and really value my health. I know how important a yearly physical examination is. I've only had one physical before, about a year ago by a male physician. While he was examining me I became sexually aroused. This was really humiliating to say the least.

Now I feel trapped because I need the examination but I'm so worried if I have one this will happen again and I couldn't handle the humiliation.

DEAR READER — Most doctors have seen almost everything there is to see. Your biggest problem is your reaction to your response. It probably doesn't have the same meaning you worry about.

The fact that a man cannot always control his responses is well known. As one writer states, the male organ seems to have a mind of its own.

For a person who is not used to being nude and having another person touch him, it can induce some reactions. So can your thoughts. As you are older and more experienced, it is less likely to happen.

There are 100 billion stars in our galaxy, but from the earth only about 6,000 can be seen by the naked eye.

Cow Neck The Magnificent

Senator Bill Sarpalius Reports

AUSTIN — The Governor has signed into law a bill which all Texans can be proud of. The signing of Senate Bill One, a bill we authored and sponsored, represents a significant step toward increasing the safety of motorists who travel the roads and highways of Texas.

The new DWI law will go into effect January 1, 1983. The new measure calls for tougher penalties for repeat DWI offenders and it encourages alcohol rehabilitation. The new law also eliminates deferred adjudication, which in the past, allowed offenders to keep their record clean by serving probation without committing another offense.

We believe the tougher penalties, which will be assessed against DWI offenders beginning next year, will discourage intoxicated persons from getting behind the wheel of an automobile.

Under the new law, the courts will be allowed to suspend a motorist's license for up to one year on the first DWI conviction if the offender refuses to participate in a DWI education course. A second offense can result in a suspension of six months to two years.

A first time DWI offender will face a possible maximum fine of $2000 and a jail term up to two years. A first time offender can receive probation without going to jail by participating in an alcohol or drug dependency evaluation and by completing other necessary conditions of probation.

Jail time will be mandatory for repeat offenders. Second time offenders will face jail time of from fifteen days to two years and a fine of from $300 - $2000. On a second DWI conviction, a person will have to serve at least three days in jail as a condition of probation.

A third time offender will face from thirty days to two years in the county jail or from sixty days to five years in the Texas Department of Corrections and a fine of from $500 - $2000. On a third conviction, a person will have to serve at least ten days in jail as one condition of probation.

Penalties will be further enhanced in DWI cases involving death or serious injury.

Juveniles who are arrested for drunken driving will lose their license after their offense unless they take a DWI education course. After a second DWI conviction, a juvenile will lose his or her license for a year or until he or she reaches the legal drinking age, whichever is longer.

The new law also includes a new definition of intoxication. A person will be considered legally drunk if a test for alcohol in the blood shows a concentration of 0.10 percent or more. Studies indicate that anyone with a 0.10 percent blood alcohol level is too drunk to be driving.

The new law makes refusal to be tested for alcohol in the blood admissible as evidence in court.

The new measures are designed to keep drunken drivers off our streets and highways and encourage them to seek help in alcohol treatment programs.

We believe the new law will help save the lives of innocent victims across the state. Statistics show that from 1976 to 1981, fatal accidents in Texas increased by 48%, and 79% of the fatalities were caused by drunken drivers.

EPA may use superfund to clean up Dallas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, William Ruckelshaus, is considering the possibility of using the federal Superfund to clean up lead contamination near two Dallas smelters, officials said.

Dallas Mayor Starke Taylor said that Ruckelshaus pledged Wednesday to begin enforcement action to clean up the contamination if a suit filed by the state doesn't bring a cleanup.

Ruckelshaus "has committed to immediate enforcement action" if the suit filed by the state doesn't produce results "in a reasonable length of time," Taylor said.

Taylor's comments came after a meeting with Ruckelshaus and other EPA officials. Also attending the meeting were Jack Miller, chairman of the Dallas Alliance, and Texas Reps. Martin Frost, John Bryant and Steve Bartlett.

Taylor said the EPA officials did not specify what action they would take, but Frost said one option under consideration was use of the federal Superfund, a $1.6 billion fund established to clean up the country's worst hazardous waste problems.

Frost said that Ruckelshaus "has now taken a personal and direct interest in the Dallas problem." Miller said it was clear that the new EPA director "intends to take action, if necessary, to begin a proper cleanup."

Regional EPA officials have said the health of children may be threatened by lead contamination of soil near the two smelters, operated by RSR Corp. and Dixie Metals.

But at a House subcommittee hearing in April, the officials said their recommendation for an immediate cleanup was rejected in May, 1981 by John Hernandez, then deputy EPA administrator.

The state and city filed suit earlier this year against RSR Corp. seeking to force a cleanup of the area.

Frost said that he hoped the company "may see the wisdom" of settling the issue with the state before the EPA gets involved.

They "really don't have anything to gain by sitting back and waiting for the EPA to act," Frost said.

He said if the suit did not result in cleanup action by RSR Corp., the EPA would proceed against both firms.

U.S. automotive exports totaled $18.1 billion in 1981, while automotive imports came to $30.5 billion.

Office recommends paying fraction of claims

HOUSTON (AP) — A state office has determined only 9.4 percent of the $22 million which Southeast Texas counties sought to recover for May storm damage to public property meets guidelines for federal relief.

That would mean the U.S. government would approve only $2,092,000 of the damage claimed in nine counties from tornadoes, high winds and floods May 20-22.

Ten people were killed when tornadoes swept the area.

President Reagan has yet to approve payment of federal disaster relief funds for the area. Because the government covers only 75 percent of such claims, the Federal Emergency Management Agency would pay only $1.5 million, federal officials said.

Laureen Chernow, a spokeswoman for the center, said federal guidelines for disaster aid are strict and do not cover many types of damage.

"The local figures and our figures are apples and oranges," Ms. Chernow said.

Harris County recorded a total of $14,475,000 in damages to roads, airports and bulkheads following the storms. Montgomery County had $3,222,200 in total damages to municipal property, according to state reports.

But the state Emergency Management Center determined that only a $536,000 in Harris County damage and $698,000 in Montgomery County would be eligible for federal assistance.

Gov. Mark White announced Tuesday he will seek a presidential disaster declaration for Harris County and eight other counties that suffered storm damage.

Ms. Chernow said that some of the damages listed by individual counties were insured and would not require heavy public funding for repair. These structures, she said, could not be included in the state's report to the federal government because they were ineligible.

Regrading of dirt roads and the complete rebuilding of structures that can be repaired also is not covered by the federal government, she said.

An example is the Jefferson County Airport, which was wrecked by powerful winds during the storms, causing approximately $2.5 million damage.

Jefferson County Civil Defense Director Dick Nugent said the airport was fully insured, hence it is not included in the state's estimate of storm damage eligible for federal assistance.

State figures indicate that total damage to public property in Jefferson County was about $1,341,800. Only $357,500 is considered eligible for federal disaster aid coverage, said Ms. Chernow.

Stock hard to eliminate

NEW YORK (AP) — Small shareholders of a company's stock often find it difficult to sell the stock through a brokerage firm because the commission charged by the firm is more than the value of the stock.

The result is that millions of shareholders keep small amounts of stock. This costs companies millions of dollars in printing and mailing charges for annual reports and other information.

Because of this, smallshareholder buyback has become a new activity on Wall Street, reports Alexander B. Miller, president of Shareholder Communications, which conducts the buybacks.

Small shareholders (with 25 or fewer shares of a company's stock) receive full value for their shares sold to the brokerage firm, which is then paid by the corporation getting its shares back.
