Auto insurance standard stays

AUSTIN (AP) - State insurance regulators have decided to keep the benchmark rate for personal auto insurance at the current level, but advise drivers to shop around for the best deal.

"Shop, shop, shop," said Insurance Board Chairwoman Claire Koriath after Tuesday's unanimous vote of the three-member panel.

"We've had actual experience of consumers who have saved as much as several hundred dollars on their automobile insurance rates by shopping."

The benchmark rate is a reference point used by insurance companies to charge rates within a range established by the board.

The Insurance Board set that range of 30 percent below to 30 percent above the benchmark. That maximum rate is 5 percent more than the current maximum. All the changes approved by the board take effect June 1.

Maintaining the current benchmark rate for another year was a blow to insurance companies, which had sought increases from 11.7 percent to 14.6 percent.

"These new rates will not be sufficient for us to break even on this business," said Clint Gardner, president of Texas Farmers Insurance Co.

But the state's insurance consumer representative praised the board's decision.

"When the industry asks for double-digit rate increases and you get zero, I think that is pretty good," said Amy Johnson, chief of the Office of Public Insurance Counsel. Her office had recommended a 4.9 percent decrease in the benchmark rate.

Despite keeping the benchmark unchanged, the board voted to juggle costs within premiums by increasing liability insurance by about 13 percent, while decreasing collision coverage approximately 22 percent. Liability coverage is required by state law.

The board also increased rates charged by the state-run insurer, called the Texas Automobile Insurance Plan. The plan provides auto insurance to Texans who cannot get coverage in the private market. It currently has more than 850,000 policyholders.

The plan currently charges 27 percent more than the benchmark rate. Board members upped that to 28 percent, and said liability rates may jump from 10 percent to 12 percent.

Despite the increase, Ed Held, chairman of the plan, said the rate hikes were too small and that losses in the plan would have to be paid for by policyholders who buy insurance in the private market.

Plan managers had requested a 52 percent increase in private passenger rates.

Board members expressed concern that too many people, including good drivers, were being forced to buy coverage from the plan, especially minorities and rural residents.

"If the marketplace doesn't step in at some time, then the Legislature will have to," said board member Allene Evans.

On the commercial side of auto insurance, the board increased the benchmark rate by 8.5 percent.

Audit shows DSGH operating loss

Deaf Smith County Hospital District directors, in a regular monthly meeting Tuesday night, approved an audit and cost report for 1991-92, discussed several projects and heard routine reports.

The audit report showed an operating loss of $216,066 for the past year. Adding tax and interest revenues of approximately $1.1 million, the hospital district's net income was $894,818.

The district had a net loss of about $575,000 the previous year. Boosting the revenue picture this past year were increases of about $400,000 in tax revenues--up to $1,037,381--and an increase in state disproportionate share funds for Medicaid of about $740,000.

While the report did not include comparisons with the previous year, the figures reflect that, even with those revenue enhancements, a "bottom line" comparison would show an increase of about $329,818.

The audit report, prepared by Brown, Graham & Company and presented by Donna West, included several recommendations for strengthening internal controls and operating efficiency.

Ron Rives, chief executive officer of Deaf Smith General Hospital, reported on the progress of studies being made for hospital renovations, and on a grant proposal for a Rural Health Clinic.

Henry Reid, HCR Real Estate, appeared at the board meeting and offered an alternative to building a new doctor's clinic east of the hospital. Reid offered to sell his building at 110 N. 25 Mile Ave. for use as a doctor's clinic. With the figures he had heard, said Reid, he thought the district could save taxpayers about $1 million, even with remodeling costs added. Board chairman John Perrin thanked Reid for his presentation and said the board would consider the matter.

Rives reported that one physician now in residency training had been interviewed about coming to Hereford, but she postponed a decision. An orthopedic surgeon who was scheduled for an interview, Rives reported, had canceled and taken an offer in Arizona.

The administrator also reported that the Deaf Smith Health Care

Foundation had its organizational meeting and approved articles of incorporation and bylaws. The foundation, initiated by the work of Dr. Nadir Khuri, is a non-profit corporation formed exclusively for charitable and educational purposes. It will establish and maintain an endowment fund to benefit and support the hospital.

Directors present for the meeting were Perrin, Merle Clark, Paul Abalos, Boyd Foster, Dr. Robert Bidwell and Dr. Stan Fry Jr. Absent was Mal Manchec.

Energy tax would hit Texas harder than rest of nation

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Clinton administration's proposed energy tax would harm Texas more than any other state, Texas Railroad Commissioner Barry Williamson says.

As the nation's largest consumer of energy and a leading producer, Texas would take a double hit from the broad-based energy tax package floated by the White House, Williamson told the House Ways and Means Committee Tuesday.

"Texas would bear 12.5 percent of the energy tax burden while having only 6.8 percent of the nation's population," said Williamson, a Republican elected last November to the agency that regulates Texas oil and gas production.

The tax also would discriminate against energy-intensive industries that thrive in Texas, such as the petrochemical, mining, construction and agricultural sectors, Williamson argued.

"By taxing the one chief feature that makes American, and specifically Texas, products competitive, you would be tying the hands behind our manufacturers' backs as they fight for competitive advantage in a global economy," he said.

Williamson was just one of many energy industry officials at the hearing who attacked the tax plan.

They testified that the energy tax would harm domestic production, hurt U.S. competitiveness, hit some regions harder than others and disrupt an already shaky oil industry.

The levy also would hit the poor and middle class harder than the well-to-do, because lower income families spend a greater proportion of their income on utilities. Gasoline prices would rise an estimated 7.5 cents a gallon and an average home electric bill by $2.25 a month.

The energy tax proposal found little favor with Rep. Bill Archer of Houston, the ranking Republican on Ways and Means.

"When I first saw the Btu tax, I thought it was a proposal whose time should never come," Archer said. "It is going to drive our jobs overseas."

The administration last month proposed a broad-based energy tax that would be based on a fuel's British thermal units, or Btus. One Btu is the amount of energy required to raise the temperature of one pound of water one degree Fahrenheit. Administration officials say the tax could raise some $22 billion in revenue annually.

Oil producers contend the tax strikes a blow at their industry, since the tax on oil would be more than twice as high as that on other fuels.

"The Btu tax, as proposed, will subsidize foreign oil imports and will reduce domestic oil production further," said Eugene L. Ames Jr., president of Venus Oil Co. in San Antonio and chairman of the Independent Petroleum Association of America.

The concerns of the IPAA, which represents mostly small producers, was voiced by the American Petroleum Institute, which represents the major producers.

"The tax will create highly inequitable results across income groups and across regions of this country," said API board member Victor G. Beghini, who is president of Marathon Oil Co. in Houston.

When pressed by committee members, some of the industry officials said they would prefer a broad-based consumption tax, an oil import fee or a gasoline tax levied at the pump.

Senate Demos try to win approval for Clinton's plan

WASHINGTON (AP) - Senate Democrats are negotiating a mine field of Republican amendments on taxes, Social Security and defense as they try to win passage of President Clinton's deficit-reduction plan.

The president's hotly debated defense spending cuts and energy taxes have survived in the floor action that began last week. Perhaps the toughest choice was scheduled today, with a vote on killing Clinton's proposal to raise taxes on better-off Social Security recipients.

"This is clearly just not fair," said Sen. Trent Lott, R-Miss., author of the amendment. "This is a raid, taking taxes, taking money from Social Security retirees."

Clinton's plan would raise $32 billion from the elderly by increasing the amount of Social Security benefits that are subject to income tax.

Now, individual Social Security recipients pay taxes on up to half of their Social Security benefits once their income exceeds $25,000 for an individual or $32,000 for a couple. The president would raise to 85 percent the portion of benefits subject to the income tax, the same as for private pensions.

The tax is part of Clinton's $1.5 trillion fiscal 1994 budget, which envisions in its Senate form about $502 billion in deficit reduction over the next five years. The Senate plans to end debate and vote on the budget by noon Thursday.

Democrats on Tuesday defended the Social Security tax as a necessary part of the "shared sacrifice" Clinton has proposed to reduce the federal deficit and bolster the economy.

"This is a part of what we're going to have to do," said Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., perhaps the Senate's leading advocate of the Social Security program. "Its time has come."

"This is an amendment aimed at weakening our resolve, at convincing one part of the population that they are being unfairly asked to do their share," said Sen. Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va.

Bullock vows to fight loss of phone control

AUSTIN (AP) - Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock says he will do everything in his power to kill a proposal to loosen state control over telephone companies.

Media and consumer groups are among those blasting the plan by the Texas Telephone Association, which wants less stringent regulation over local telephone companies such as Southwestern Bell and GTE Corp.

"I am with the publishers of Texas on this issue," Bullock, the presiding officer of the Senate, said Tuesday. "I'm going to do everything in my power to see that that bill does not come out of the Texas Senate until such time as the publishers and others who are interested in this issue either agree on it, and if they can't agree ... then the bill won't come out."

Bullock discussed the proposal at an annual convention of the Texas Daily Newspaper Association, a group of executives from 97 daily newspapers in Texas. The association is among those against the plan.

Under the Texas Telephone Association proposal, companies would have the option of "alternative" regulation, which would regulate the price the public pays for phone service, but not the profits the companies could make.

The group's proposals are included in an amendment to a broader measure on the Public Utility Commission. The bill is pending in a House State Affairs subcommittee.

Tim Raven, president of the Texas Telephone Association, said Bullock's opposition means the group will have to work harder to get the proposal passed.

Bullock said the proposal needed further study and that any action taken this session could "be detrimental to the future" of the newspaper industry.

Local Roundup

Citizens group to meet

Concerned Citizens for a Safer Hereford will meet at 7 p.m. Thursday in the Hereford Junior High School auditorium. The meeting is a follow-up to a community session held last month where steps were outlined to improve the community and reduce the gang influence in town. At the meeting, the winner of the Logo and Name contest will be announced, which will become the official name and logo of the organization. In addition, a hotline number will be announced that parents and students can use to report any concerns affecting student and community safety, and organizers will plan future activities. It is open to the public.

Weather forecast

Hereford had a high of 76 Tuesday and a low of 36 this morning, according to KPAN. A high of 78 was forecast today. Tonight, clear, low near 40. East to southeast wind 5-15 mph. Thursday, mostly sunny with high in mid 70s. Southeast wind 10-20 mph.

Police Beat

The following reports are included in today's Hereford Police Department daily activity summary:

Robbery was reported at Allsup's No. 305 on East Park. The clerk reported a black male subject entered the store, picked up a bag of chips and placed them on the counter to pay for them. When the clerk rang up the price, the suspect pushed the clerk away and grabbed the money tray from the register. He fled on foot with about $200 in cash.

Criminal mischief was reported in the 200 block of Juniper, where a window was broken on a vehicle, causing about $100 damage.

Two separate cases of assault were reported, in the 600 block of Irving and the 200 block of North Street.

Domestic disturbance was reported in the 200 block of North Lee.

A 23-year-old black male was arrested on a warrant for parole violation.

A 17-year-old Hispanic male was arrested for assault.

Ten citations were issued and there were two minor accidents. There were no fire calls.

A 51-year-old Hereford man remains in Deaf Smith County Jail today after his arrest last week on drug charges.

According to sheriff's department reports, deputies received a tip on Friday that Anselmo Martinez was in town and in possession of a controlled substance.

Deputies spotted the suspect later in the evening and stopped him in the 300 block of Avenue I, where he was arrested.

A search of the vehicle uncovered a handgun, as well as two plastic bags containing an undisclosed amount of suspected heroin.

Martinez was charged with felon in possession of a firearm, possession of a controlled substance and failure to appear on an Arizona warrant.

Defense cuts unaffected by events

WASHINGTON (AP) - Boris Yeltsin's power struggle with the Russian parliament is giving Congress pause about U.S. military spending cuts, but lawmakers say a reversal of the defense reductions is improbable.

The Russian president's government could be replaced by a hard-line regime opposed to reforms. Congressional Republicans and Democrats do not envision Russia returning to its Cold War superpower status.

The Warsaw Pact alliance has dissolved. Germany has reunified. The former Soviet Army, which once numbered 4 million, has shrunk to about 2.5 million and is spread out among the republics.

"I think there's reason to worry, but it doesn't mean we're going back to where we were," Sen. Ted Stevens of Alaska, the ranking Republican on the Senate Appropriations defense subcommittee, said Tuesday.

A member of the House Armed Services Committee, Democratic Rep. Thomas Andrews of Maine, said the threat from "a Russian hardliner at the helm is different from the threat we faced from the Soviet Union, the Warsaw Pact and the Cold War."

"We cannot go back. Period," Andrews said.

President Clinton has proposed spending $277 billion on defense in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, a post-Cold War budget that continues spending on the Strategic Defense Initiative at last year's level of $4 billion.

Questioned about altering the budget in light of the turmoil in Russia, Clinton rejected the idea Tuesday but indicated future revisions are possible.

"I'm not taking another look at the cuts at this time," the president said during his news conference.

He added, "Obviously these budgets are passed every year for five years in the future, and I expect to whatever extent the world is uncertain, we'll have to be more vigilant in reviewing what our commitments are."

Defense Secretary Les Aspin said recently that if tensions between Russia and the United States re-emerge, the administration would slow the pace of defense cuts.

Aspin, during his tenure as chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, said it would be difficult for Russia to reconstitute its military.

In addition, a capability to mobilize forces for external aggression ... certainly couldn't develop without years of warning time for the United States and our European allies," Aspin said on Jan. 24, 1992.

The chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., declined to raise the specter of the Russian crisis while arguing against deep defense cuts.

Nunn spoke for about an hour Monday on two amendments, one dealing with the impact of a military pay freeze on the defense budget; the other on inflation and military spending.

The senator said Clinton's proposed cuts of more than $100 billion over five years are "deep enough. In fact, they may be too deep."

"I haven't used the events in the Soviet Union as any argument on defense at this stage," Nunn said Tuesday. "I think defense cuts ought to be prudent, they ought to be commensurate with the reduced threat and they ought to be reversible if the world situation changes."

Three Senate Republicans - Pete Domenici of New Mexico, John Warner of Virginia and William Cohen of Maine - cited the situation in Russia as an argument against Clinton's defense cuts.

"If, for example, the nuclear-armed Russian republic were to return to the control of an authoritarian regime hostile to the United States, or North Korea's saber-rattling actually turned into an attack on our South Korea ally, Congress should reconsider the deep defense cuts contemplated," Warner said Monday.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The seven congressional districts in Texas that were drawn to have majority-Hispanic populations are among the poorest in the state.

An Associated Press analysis of 1990 Census Bureau figures shows that one-quarter or more of those living in the seven majority-Hispanic districts in Texas live below the poverty line. Poverty is defined by the government as $13,359 in income or less for a family of four.

Nationwide, the five poorest congressional districts all have black or Hispanic majorities. There are 32 congressional districts with black majorities and 20 with Hispanic majorities.

Recording the highest poverty rate, with 37.5 percent of its households below the poverty level, was the 15th Congressional District, which stretches from Hidalgo County along the Rio Grande all the way up to Karnes County, southeast of San Antonio.

Thirty percent of residents lived below federal poverty rates in the 27th District, which runs from Cameron County along the Rio Grande north to Corpus Christi.

The 23rd District, which covers a huge expanse of West Texas from south of San Antonio practically all the way to El Paso, also reported 30 percent of its households living in poverty.

Twenty-eight percent of the households lived in poverty in the 28th District, which runs from San Antonio south to Starr County, on the U.S.-Mexican border.

Recording the fifth-highest poverty rate was the 29th District in the Houston area, with just under 28 percent of its households living below poverty lines.

Congressional districts in the Houston area, along with districts near Dallas, reported the fewest number of households living below the federal poverty line.

The 3rd District, which comprises a wealthy enclave of Dallas, had the lowest household poverty rate, with 4 percent of its households living in poverty.

That was followed by two other Dallas-area districts, the 6th and the 26th, which reported household poverty rates of 4.5 and 6 percent respectively.

Two Houston area districts, the 7th and the 22nd, had the fourth- and fifth-lowest poverty rates, with 6 and 8 percent respectively.

The average household income in Texas' congressional districts ranged from a high of $59,033 in the Dallas-area 3rd District to a low of $25,100 in the 28th District in South Texas.

Districts in the Dallas and Houston areas reported the state's highest household earnings. In addition to the 3rd District, the other districts reporting the highest household earnings was the 7th District, north of Houston, with $58,822; the 26th, near Dallas, with $51,959; the 6th, also near Dallas, with $49,555; and the 22nd, near Houston, with $49,006.

The districts reporting the lowest household incomes were scattered in South Texas, Houston and the Panhandle.

The lowest figure, $25,100, was in the 28th District in South Texas. The 15th District, also in South Texas, reported $25,110 in household income; followed by the 29th District in Houston, with $25,161. The 13th District, in the Panhandle, reported an average $27,316 household income; while the 20th District in San Antonio, had an estimated $27,517 household income.

WTRT sending checks; annual meeting slated

West Texas Rural Telephone Cooperative is distributing $96,000 in capital credits to members who obtained service in 1970. Checks are being mailed this month.

The annual membership meeting of the cooperative will be held Thursday, beginning with a catered dinner at 6 p.m. at the Bull Barn.

Business during the meeting includes election of directors for three exchanges. Nominees are J.B. Noland, incumbent, and Dick Hill, Summerfield; Pat Robbins, incumbent, and Tommy Sparkman, Frio, and Billy Mayfield, incumbent, and Preston Martin, Oklahoma Lane.

During the meeting, entertainment will be provided by The Texas Country, a country, bluegrass and gospel music group.

Members attending the dinner meeting will be eligible for door prizes to be given away during the evening.

The telephone cooperative this spring also is sending members a statement of patronage capital for 1992. Returned profits are patronage capital credits and represent the member's share of the annual margin achieved by WTRT during the year.

Music teacher gives study club program

Margaret Williams, a music teacher at Bluebonnet Intermediate School, presented an evening of entertainment for members of the Hereford Study Club at their recent meeting held in the home of Elizabeth Cesar with Betty Gilbert serving as co-hostess.

Williams reviewed two books, Girl of the Limberlost, written by Gene Stratton Porter, and From the Father's Hand, written by Charles Slagle. Porter's book had been a childhood favorite of Williams. It is the story of a young girl's struggle while growing up in the swamps of Indiana collecting butterflies and moths to provide herself an education. The second book, beautifully illustrated, presents a look at God's nature and ways.

The speaker continued the program playing the autoharp and singing a variety of songs which included "Let the Lower Lights Be Burning," "Was It A Morning Like This?", "He Keeps Me Singing" and "The Old Rugged Cross."

During the business meeting with President Gladys Setliff presiding, plans were finalized for the April meeting which will include a luncheon at the E.B. Black House.

Doris Bryant, chairman of the nominating committee, presented the following slate of officers for the 1993-94 club year: President, Hazel Ford; vice president, Addie Cunningham; secretary-reporter, Barbara Allen; corresponding secretary, Morgan Cain; treasurer, Bessie Story; historian, Gladys Setliff; and parliamentarian, Nedra Robinson.

Refreshments were served by Cesar and Gilbert to a special guest, Leona Scheihagen, and members: Jean Ballard, Willie Braddy, Doris Bryant, Morgan Cain, Addie Cunningham, Hazel Ford, Elizabeth Hellman, Leta Kaul, Carol McGilvary, Gladys Setliff, Helen Spinks, Mary Stoy, Virginia Winget and Joan Yarbro.

NEW YORK (AP) - Designer Nicole Miller, playwright Wendy Wasserstein and restaurateur Sylvia Woods got to judge the battle of the yeastie boys at a benefit bake off.

"We chose the cutest guys," Alexandra Penney, editor in chief of Self magazine, said Thursday as she introduced six of the country's top male bakers: George Burnett, of Bozeman, Mont.; Noel Comess of Tom Cat Bakery in New York; Scott Gilbert of Atlanta's Buckhead Bread Co.; Daniel Leader of Bread Alone in Boiceville, N.Y.; Hans Rockenwagner of Rockenwagner in Santa Monica, Calif., and Steve Sullivan of Acme Bread Co. in Berkeley, Calif.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) - Elizabeth Taylor said it took winning a lifetime achievement award to remind her she was a movie star.

"When I first heard about the award, I went into a state of shock," she told the star-filled audience Thursday at the American Film Institute. "It's been so long since I thought about myself as an actress."

Miss Taylor, who has appeared in 54 movies, hasn't been in a feature film for 13 years.

The ceremony was taped for broadcast on ABC-TV later this spring.

Shyla Gerck honored with bridal shower

Shyla Gerck was honored with a bridal shower Sunday, March 21, in the home of Betty Martin. The honoree and Steve Buckner plan to exchange wedding vows April 17.

Welcoming guests with the honoree were her mother, Carol Gerck; her sister, Shelley Heinrich; and her nephew, Heath Heinrich.

Shelley Heinrich served refreshments of chicken filled cream puffs, thumb print cookies, finger sandwiches, fresh fruits with caramel and strawberry dip, coffee and punch.

The refreshment table was covered with a white crochet cloth over a forest green underlay. It was centered with a large green plant placed in a basket and accented with long white beaded stems and deep teal dried flowers. The basket was covered with white Battenburg lace. Further enhancing the table setting were brass and crystal appointments.

A side burner barbecue grill was presented to Miss Gerck by the hostesses: Barbara Kerr, Marilyn Kahlich, Sheri Kerr, Roberta Last, Betty Martin, Martha Lytal, Lajean Henry, Jeanette Ramey, Tina Langehennig, Judy Detten, Kee Ruland, Nancy Last, Carmen Flood, Manda Gowdy and Judy Williams.

Tribe mourns death of two pitchers

Investigation continues in fatal boating accident

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (AP) - United in grief, the Cleveland Indians mourned the loss of two teammates, while authorities tried to determine if drinking contributed to the fatal boating crash on a darkened lake.

Investigators say it will be several days before they can rule what role alcohol may have played in the Monday night accident that left pitchers Steve Olin and Tim Crews dead and pitcher Bob Ojeda seriously injured.

However, several Florida television stations reported Tuesday night that one unidentified player had a blood-alcohol level of .17, above the .10 considered legally drunk in Florida for motorists and boaters.

The Associated Press could not independently confirm the reports.

"We haven't released any of that information at this time," Cheryl Strouse, duty officer for the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission, said Tuesday night. "If it did get out, it was premature."

Strouse said Olin's autopsy was performed Tuesday, with Crews' scheduled for today. She did not know when blood-alcohol levels for both players or Ojeda would be released.

Lt. Bruce Cooper of the commission said investigators "found full beer cans in an ice chest and a liter of vodka almost full" aboard the power boat that crashed into a lake pier. One empty beer can also was found on the 18-foot fiberglass craft.

Indians general manager John Hart said he had "absolutely no idea" whether the players were drunk. But he said he was assured they weren't by Fernando Montes, the team's strength and conditioning coach.

Fontes was with the players and families before the boat ride.

A memorial service for players and families was scheduled for tonight.

Olin, 27, the Indians' top reliever, was killed instantly. He struck the pier when the boat, near full throttle, raced under the dock before hitting a post.

Crews, 31, the boat driver, died a few hours later after being hospitalized with head and lung injuries.

It was the first time two major league baseball players were killed in the same accident.

Ojeda, 35, suffered cuts on his head and was in serious condition after surgery. He is expected to make a full recovery.

The Skeeter bass boat had a 150-horsepower motor and a top speed of 60 mph. Viewed by an AP reporter at the Lake County sheriff's garage in Eustis, the gray and silver boat appeared to have sustained just scrapes and scratches.

But there was a significant amount of blood on the carpeting and seats, especially on the passenger side. Blood was splattered over the left side of the boat, covering part of the gas. The speedometer had stopped at 39 mph.

The accident happened on Little Lake Nellie, 27 miles north of Winter Haven, at the end of a day the players spent picnicking with their families on the team's only break during spring training.

"Whatever happens, God has a purpose," said Carlos Baerga, the only player willing to talk to reporters. "We just have to believe that."

The Indians called off exhibition games scheduled for Tuesday and today, but they will practice today at Chain O'Lakes Park.

Hart and Indians manager Mike Hargrove met with the grieving players in the clubhouse early Tuesday. The players talked of dedicating the season to Olin and Crews, of black armbands, of plaques in the bullpen.

"We have to be strong for each other," Baerga said.

Hargrove said practice will ease the players' grief.

"There are going to be enough reminders that Steve and Tim are no longer with us," he said. "We don't need to be reminded of that. So, with that in mind, we are going to start to work out."

Mistakes cost Herd in Canyon

The Canyon Eagles made the most of Hereford mistakes and took a 7-1 win in a baseball game Tuesday in Canyon.

"We didn't make that many mistakes, but we got punished for every one of them," coach T.R. Sartor said. "Canyon's got a good team, and a good team's going to punish you when you make mistakes."

Take for example the third inning, when Canyon scored three runs to take the lead for good. They started with a single, then the next batter laid down a bunt, trying for a sacrifice, but Hereford failed to field it. After two outs, Canyon got a single and a double to bring home the three gift runs.

Hereford errors contributed to single runs in the fourth and sixth and two runs in the fifth.

Hereford's only run came in the third. Ralph Holguin singled and stole second, then Rene Cano beat out an infield single. The Canyon shortstop overthrew first on Richard Sanderson's grounder, allowing Holguin to score, but Cano was thrown out trying to score on the play.

Sartor pointed out that Canyon got eight hits off pitcher Ray Hastings, and Hereford got one less—seven—but scored six less runs. Cano went 3-for-3 at the plate but didn't score once.

Hereford, now 4-9, goes to Levelland Friday for a 4:30 game, then hosts Palo Duro at 1 at Whiteface Field. District 1-4A play starts with Dumas visiting Hereford at 4 Tuesday.

Baseball's flags fly at half-staff

By The Associated Press

A moment of silence was held and the flags flew at half-staff.

Tuesday was a time for baseball people to reflect on the boating accident that killed Cleveland pitchers Steve Olin and Tim Crews. Indians starter Bob Ojeda was injured in the crash on a lake near Winter Haven, Fla.

Tuesday's scheduled exhibition game between Cleveland and Baltimore was called off to allow the Indians to collect their thoughts.

"I would hope the players' families, and the Cleveland Indians, would know that we're sorry and our sympathy goes out to them," Orioles manager Johnny Oates said.

Milwaukee reliever Jesse Orosco pitched with Crews while he was with the Los Angeles Dodgers, played with Olin while with Cleveland and also was a teammate of Ojeda on the New York Mets.

"It stunned me," Orosco said. "The hardest thing is that Olin left behind a wife and three kids and Crews had kids. That's the toughest part right now."

"We have a good life and everything. We're fortunate to be in a sport like this. Something like this happens and (it makes you realize) how quickly you can lose everything."

The talk on Tuesday around the camps was not about rookies, veterans and opening day.

Dodgers right-hander Kevin Gross found it difficult to concentrate on his work. Last season, Crews and Ojeda were teammates in Los Angeles.

The excellent control the right-hander had displayed throughout the spring deserted him Tuesday, particularly in the early innings.

Gross, who had given up three earned runs in 17 innings going into the start, gave up two first-inning runs to Kansas City before he was able to settle down.

"It was a bad day, not a good day for baseball," said Gross, who gave up three runs in six innings. "It took a few beatings from the Royals before I said, 'I'm out here. I have to pitch.'"

"I didn't hear about it until this morning. I got a phone call and I kept saying, 'No way, no way.' To come right out of the chute and try to pitch was a very difficult task."

Before spring-training games on Tuesday, a moment of silence was held in a memory of Olin and Crews.

Bud Selig, chairman of baseball's executive council, asked all clubs to fly the flag at half-staff.

Mets catcher Charlie O'Brien was scheduled to start Tuesday's exhibition game against the Houston Astros at Port St. Lucie, Fla. By the time he arrived, it hardly mattered.

O'Brien and Crews were teammates in 1986 when the two played for the Milwaukee Brewers Class AA team in El Paso, Texas.

"It's kind of hard to believe," O'Brien said. "This is a guy you spent some time with and he is no longer there. The sad thing is people worry about making the team; they put more emphasis on sports itself instead of putting emphasis on their family and friends, and sharing time with them. It's also a good reminder that people should spend time they have with people they enjoy and love. It's real disappointing for me. It's real sad."

Pittsburgh left-hander Dave Otto walked into the clubhouse Tuesday morning, picked up a newspaper and learned the stunning news.

Otto, a close friend of Olin last season in Cleveland, took the news hard, briefly leaving the clubhouse to get a grip on his emotions.

"This was a very tough day for me," Otto said. "The fact that he's gone really hasn't sunk in yet. He was a great guy, very happy-go-lucky, a guy who loved to hunt and fish."

"It's a tragic loss that you just can't put into words," he said. "I feel so bad for his wife and his three kids. At least I'll always have the memories of him. He'll always be in my thoughts."

9th, 10th grade golfers compete

Teams of freshman and sophomore boys and girls from Hereford competed Monday in a tournament in Dalhart. The girls finished second and the boys finished sixth in fields made up of Class 3A and Class 2A varsity squads.

Four boys and four girls from Hereford competed. Jami Bell led Hereford's girls by shooting 107, good for sixth individually. She was joined by Jennifer Rampley, 112; Candi Pankey, 113; and Jana Baird, 118.

Hereford's boys were Nathan Diller, 106; Sabin Bradley, 108; Tom Munoz, 110; and Dominique Dominguez, 111.

The girls' score of 450 trailed only Perryton's 392. Trailing Hereford were Gruver, 458; Dalhart A, 486; Sanford-Fritch, 487; and Dalhart B, 544.

The boys standings: Dalhart A, 333; Perryton, 343; River Road, 350; Sanford-Fritch, 359; Gruver, 374; Hereford, 435; and Dalhart, 439.

Times have changed for Lady Raiders' program

By DON WILLIAMS
Lubbock Avalanche-Journal
LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - Fifteen years ago, forerunners of the revered Texas Tech Lady Raiders won three times as often as they lost, even in their infancy, even as they were trying to grasp a new type of basketball.

Their goals were pointed neither toward a Southwest Conference championship nor, in the postseason, an NCAA Tournament berth.

Nevertheless, Tech pushed four games deep into the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women's Southwest regional tournament during the 1977-78 season.

They won 34 games that year and lost 11.

If anyone noticed it was their mommies and daddies.

"There was a lot of echoing," said Gay Benson, the Tech women's head coach for three seasons beginning in 1977.

The reverberations referred to here emanated not from the Municipal Coliseum. In those days, women who played basketball and wore Tech jerseys usually did so only in the on-campus women's gym, which has more in common with a recreation facility than what could appropriately be called an arena.

At times, a question would be raised: If a female athlete dribbled downcourt for a layup, and no one sat in the stands to hear the dribble, did it really happen?

OK, an exaggeration maybe. But not by much.

"Oh, I don't know. Probably two or three people's parents," said Benson, asked to recall the really small audiences. "I imagine 25 or 50 (spectators) some games might have done it. Between 50 and 100 was a usual attendance."

Last season, of course, the Lady Raiders gained their first Southwest Conference championship. They clinched the title in the Municipal Coliseum, in front of a capacity crowd of 8,174. They hosted an NCAA Tournament game, playing to an overflow audience of 8,323.

Gay Benson wouldn't know anything about those crowds except what she's heard in public, seen on television, read in the newspaper. Benson has distanced herself from the program in the years that have passed since her tenure.

In three years, Benson had put up a record of 66-47, although that was tainted by Tech's having to forfeit five games in 1978-79 for using an ineligible player. To void the forfeitures would make Benson 71-42 (a .637 winning percentage) in her Tech career.

The former Tech coach still voices support for individual players in the program. She was a coaching adversary of Jim Kirkland, father of Lady Raiders guard Krista Kirkland, when Krista was just a toddler. Benson also coached Monterey products Janice Farris and Diana Kersey and Kim Pruitt of Idalou during their prep careers in Basketball Congress International competition.

"I'm interested in them," Benson said. "And I'm interested in Tech and them doing well. I just don't ever go (to games). I'm one of those silent ones."

Benson, informed in December 1979 that her contract would not be renewed, won reinstatement in February 1980 and then resigned four months later. Her beseeching players, she said, persuaded her to see the way through a tense season, which ended with Tech at 24-11.

After that, Benson spent one year as an assistant at Monterey, followed by two years as head coach at Dunbar. For the past 10 years, she has coordinated the health and physical education curriculum for Lubbock public schools.

Benson, who took over the Tech program after 15 years as head coach and one state championship at Slaton, said she was never furnished a reason why her contract would not be renewed by associate athletic director Jeannine McHaney, the chief administrator for the Raiders' women's programs.

McHaney declined to comment for this story.

"I asked her, what was the reason?" Benson said. "She couldn't give me a reason. ... I still don't know what the reason is. But I don't worry about what the reason is. But I don't worry about what the reason is. I'm not bitter about it anymore. Time has a way of healing everything."

The fact that the 1977-78 Red Raiders posted the most victories in one season by a Tech women's basketball team was not altogether unexpected in a way and shocking in others. Granted, they had enough chances. They played 45 games.

"It seemed like we were playing every other day, and we never got a workout," Benson said. "We had all those kids. There were some walk-ons. We had some junior college players. And whatever we could find on campus that wanted to try out. But it seemed like we were playing every other day."

And against all manner of competition. The Raiders, beginning their third season of women's intercollegiate basketball competition, won 19 of their first 22 games. They began with a six-game winning streak, beating Angelo State, Western Texas College, Texas-El Paso, Hardin-Simmons, West Texas State and Abilene Christian.

"I didn't think we could do that well that first year," Benson said. "I know it was beyond my expectations. I wasn't sure of the level of competition we were playing against. I kept thinking we were not playing anybody."

Which wasn't altogether true. The schedule also featured perennial powers such as Stephen F. Austin, coached by Sue Gunter, and Wayland Baptist, led by Dean Weese, dominant programs in Texas women's college basketball at the time. Tech could stay with Stephen F. Austin; against Wayland, the Lady Raiders usually were squashed.

It was a renaissance period for the women, who were making the transition to a transition game. The Tech women - female players throughout Texas, actually - had grown up playing with six on the court at a time. Three per team played defense, three played offense, and you rested when the ball wasn't in your court.

All that changed with the switch to five-player, full-court - the men's game.

"All of them came to us having played the three-on-three, half-court game," Benson said. "We had to teach them (the full-court game) and then had to play to that level when we would play out-of-state teams."

"There were players who had been defensive specialists and rebounding specialists who had never, ever shot. We had to work them in and get their confidence built up. ... It was pretty overwhelming for everybody. I think it was a learning experience for me, just like it was for them."

Benson said she compensated by studying the men's programs. She visited clinics, where the speakers might include the likes of Bob Knight and Digger Phelps. Without an assistant of her own for the first two years, she listened to ideas from Tech men's coaches Gerald Myers and Rob Evans and observed their practices.

Either Benson soaked up and dispensed the knowledge efficiently or the Raider women possessed more skills than they realized. Perhaps it was some of both.

"I just remember Marilyn Payton (a 5-foot-10 wing) could do anything," Benson said. "She was a clutch performer. We were as good as Marilyn Payton was that night in a clutch situation."

In much the same way, the Lady Raiders are as good today as Sheryl Swoopes in a clutch situation. Even separated by only 15 years, however, the differences between the two eras of Tech women's basketball stand in stark contrast.

Benson says she is unsurprised by the meteoric rise in popularity for the Lady Raiders, who averaged 4,201 fans per home game last season, making them the sixth-hottest ticket in the national rankings. The Lady Raiders are averaging 3,835 fans per home game this season with six crowds of more than 4,300.

"This community's going to support winners," she said. "Swoopes fills it - her and Kirkland. Everybody wants to see them."

"It's nice and the girls deserve it. Girls have been fighting so long for recognition. They work just as hard as the boys, if not harder. It's just time they were given the recognition they deserve."

Benson doesn't mind her legacy of having been a part of an altogether different time, when she says her recruiting budget ranged from $500 to $1,000 annually. She could offer only four partial scholarships at a time.

Many players curbed their expenses with grants and scholarship help from the academic side.

At the start of her tenure, Benson remembers, the Raiders had no warmups, one red jersey, one white jersey, one set of shorts. The players did their own laundry.

They practiced where they could find a gym - be it at the women's gym, at Cooper High School, at Matthews Junior High or at Hutchinson Junior High. They borrowed the basketballs upon arrival.

And they expected no more.

"It was an inconvenience because we just didn't have a set place to work out," Benson said. "And they (the players) thought they were real cool if they got to go to the Coliseum to play a game - or to work out."

Those players experienced their scintillating moments, too, even if the crowds, Benson described as "awesome" numbered somewhere between 1,000 and 1,500.

"I don't think I would have gotten any better highs, so to speak, with the Coliseum full that I did when we played Stephen F. Austin and Texas down there and Wayland home and home," Benson said. "That was all we knew then."

Georgetown whips UTEP

WASHINGTON (AP) - Don Haskins was right.

The Texas-El Paso coach didn't want to travel to the nation's capital and play the Georgetown Hoyas in their bandbox of an arena, and his worst fears were realized Tuesday when his Miners managed just 10 first-half points on their way to a 71-44 shellacking in a second-round NIT contest.

"It was an all-around ugly game on our part," Haskins admitted. "It was a very rough game compared to what we're used to."

In picking the most valuable player in this laughter, it may well be a tossup between the traveling secretary who put the Miners (21-13) up in Tyson's Corner, Va., and the team's bus driver.

Whoever made hotel arrangements didn't realize that Texas El-Paso would wind up in the middle of a shopping-mall, motel-dominated commuter corridor no-man's-land 15 miles from downtown Washington, and the bus driver clearly didn't know any back roads to avoid the rush-hour traffic.

The Miners arrived 20 minutes late, so the game was delayed in order to allow the team to warm up properly. Clearly, the mind-numbing crawl into the city left Texas El-Paso looking like it had inhaled way too many exhaust fumes.

Georgetown (18-12) led 13-2 nine minutes into the game, and after guard Joey Brown hit a 3-pointer, the Hoyas were ahead 23-4 with seven minutes left in the half. A trio of 3-pointers - two by Brown, one by John Jacques - gave Georgetown a 38-10 halftime lead.

Numbers almost aren't enough to describe Texas-El Paso's ineptitude, but here they are: no starter scored in the first half; Ralph Davis scored the first six, guard Antoine Gillespie added a basket and Davis' two free throws with 40 seconds left gave Texas-El Paso (21-13) its ninth and 10th points of the first 20 minutes.

Except for the fact the game was played in tiny McDonough Gymnasium (capacity, 2,249) instead of the Capital Centre - where the NHL's Washington Capitals were playing - the game could have been a highlight reel from Georgetown's dominant teams of the 1980's. The Hoyas showed tenacious defense, solid inside play, and enough outside shooting to get by.

"Georgetown is known for its defense, and we were trying to bring that back alive," said sophomore guard Jacques. "We just tried to limit their shooting."

WHEN YOU HAVE SOMETHING TO SELL, NEWSPAPER SELLS IT BEST.

No matter what it is you're selling, newspaper can sell it best. You can show it. Describe it. Explain it. Compare it. Offer a coupon for it. And cover your entire marketplace with it. All in one day. And for a lot less than radio and TV.

And the unique thing about newspaper is that it adds credibility to your message. People believe it when they read it in the paper. Maybe that's why retailers use newspaper more than any other medium?

Newspaper. It delivers.

For your eyes only

This spring, mix and match the newest shades of eye colors to create your own unique look. Remember, however, that whatever shade palette you choose, proper application and blending is the key.

New York makeup artist Bobbi Brown finds natural earth tones of beige and brown flattering to most women. "But even with neutral shades, blending is essential for a truly soft, natural look," she explains. There are sponges, brushes and applicators in all shapes and sizes, but there's one essential beauty tool that can be found right in the medicine chest: baby's nursery - cotton swabs!

Cotton swabs are the perfect size and shape for makeup application and correction. Brown offers some expert tips for flawless makeup:

-Apply a deeper shade of eyeshadow in the crease of the eye and highlighter in a lighter shade on the browbone, and blend with a clean cotton swab.

-With an eye pencil, draw a line from the middle of the eye to the outer corner, staying close to lashes. For a more natural look, use a swab to gently smudge and soften the line.

Mascara smudges? Just dip the Q-Tip in a non-oily remover to wipe the smudges away. A non-oily remover will prevent additional smudging.

-If any powder should fall on the face where it doesn't belong, use a swab to quickly clean up mistakes;

-If you're ever stuck without your makeup brushes, cotton swabs are great for eyeshadow application.

When using any object near the eye, it's important to keep a steady hand and use only the highest quality products. "There's always the risk of poking the eye and scratching the cornea," explains Dr. Michael A. Boxer, M.D., a New York ophthalmologist. "Extra cushioning at the tip helps reduce the chances of scratching the eye, and is less irritating," he says.

Select a high quality cotton swab like Q-Tips, which has 50 percent more cotton at the tip than any other swab, and are made with only 100 percent pure, tightly woven cotton. "I recommend swabs with a tight weave to prevent loose fibers from entering the eyes," explains Dr. Boxer. "Also avoid synthetic materials and look for pure cotton."

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I must take issue with your response to "Miserable in Maine," whose husband "Walter" sounds like he's having an affair with his "fabulous" assistant.

You told "Miserable" to hang in there, keep quiet and make home a nice place to be for the sake of their children. Meanwhile, Walter diddles around 13 hours a day with his co-worker/mistress.

According to you, even in the '90s women must swallow their pride and keep those home fires burning for the sake of the kids. Don't you think the kids eventually catch on to the fact that Mom is bitter and Daddy's heart (as well as other parts of his anatomy) is somewhere else?

My ex-husband, "Bob," was the quiet, stable type. Unlike Walter, he didn't mention any fabulous assistant or talk much about his work. One day I dropped by his office, and it was only then that I discovered Bob worked with "Sandy," an attractive, single woman.

I said nothing, but a week later, when Sandy's name came up, Bob turned red and his hands started to shake. He knew I was onto something. I went to see a marriage counselor who told me these might be symptoms of a mid-life "crush," and I should keep quiet (like you told "Miserable") and let it pass.

I was frightened and angry and knew that whatever was happening would not fade away like an adolescent infatuation. Since Bob always worked longer hours, it wasn't easy to determine whether he was attending legitimate meetings or having a rendezvous. It didn't take much investigation to find out.

To make a long story short, I divorced Bob and got on with my life. To Bob's credit, he cares deeply about the children and shares equal care with me, so I am able to focus on my career again. The kids know the truth. Their lives are healthier without all the pretense and tension that would have been present had we played make-believe while I agonized and Bob sneaked around.

Staying together for the kids isn't always the best solution. Kids know when there's trouble in a marriage. When Mom cries while she cooks and cleans, they can see that it isn't a happy place to be, even if both parents live there.--Stronger in Michigan

DEAR MICHIGAN: Thanks for a good letter. As a matter of fact, your letter was a lot better than my advice. I had a ton of complaints on that one. Here's another one:

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am writing to complain about your response to "Miserable in Maine," who suspected her husband was having an affair with a co-worker.

What kind of advice do you call that -- telling a woman to stay with her cheating husband so the children can have a father at home? I'd hate to be those kids and have a daddy who cheats on my mother.

I read your column every day and agree with your advice more times than not, but I cannot believe that you think it would be better for that woman to stay with this jerk. Kids know when there is tension in the family. Pretending everything is lovely will not fool them.

I hope "Miserable" finds the answer that is right for her. Meanwhile, your advice was a bummer. I think you ought to eat your words.--Tim in Dallas

DEAR TIM: You and several thousand other readers. Gulp gulp.

What can you give the person who has everything? Ann Landers' booklet, "Gems," is ideal for a nightstand or coffee table. "Gems" is a collection of Ann Landers' most requested poems and essays. Rick Jackson selected as best topic speaker, evaluator

Rick Jackson was recognized as best topic speaker and best evaluator when the Hereford Toastmasters Club met recently at the Ranch House.

The business meeting was called to order by Vice President Jackson. Dave Kimmel gave the invocation and Pat Varner led the pledge to the flag.

Joe Weaver served as Toastmaster; Joe Don Cummings, wordmaster; Kimmel, timer; Wayne Winget, grammarian; Adolfo Del Toro, "ah" counter, and laconic, the chosen word for the meeting.

Topic master was Varner and topic speakers included Weaver, Margaret Del Toro, Winget, Jackson and Dr. Milton Adams, who also served as general evaluator.

Jigger Rowland, evaluated by Chris Leonard, spoke on "Is Jigger Your Real Name?" and Margaret Del Toro, evaluated by Jackson, spoke on "Do You Know They Are There?"

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am facing surgery for vaginal hernias. I'm 50 years old, 5 feet 6 inches and weigh 165 pounds, and I had a total abdominal hysterectomy eight years ago. Recently, a gynecologist and urologist told me surgery was my only option. The problem has been with me for about five years and is usually better while I am taking Premarin and worse during the five days off. My bladder, rectum and intestines are all ruptured. I'm not sure which, but something is visible all the time, more especially when I am on my feet. I have trouble emptying my bladder, and my rectum feels full most of the time.

Is there anything I could do to make this surgery less difficult, like exercise, diet?

DEAR READER: Your bladder can rupture through the vaginal wall into the vaginal vault. The vagina is a muscular tube, and when the wall thins and loses its strength, the bladder may rupture through it and even be seen in the opening of the vagina in advanced cases. This is called a cystocele.

The back wall of the vagina may also become thin and weaken, allowing the rectum to rupture into the vaginal vault. If you had a uterus, it could prolapse, meaning drop into the vagina. It can protrude as well. Less commonly, the omentum, the membrane over the intestines, may also rupture into the vagina.

All of these are mechanical problems, usually caused by stretching and damage to the vagina during vaginal deliveries. They can be ignored to a point, but when they cause too much trouble, or protrude, the only real solution is surgical repair, analogous to surgical repair of other hernias.

Although such hernias cause urinary and bowel symptoms, they are really a gynecological problem and a thorough knowledge of the pelvic anatomy is a must for a successful surgical repair. I have discussed these hernias in Special Report 106, Fibroids, Vaginal Hernias and Hysterectomies, which I am sending you. Others who want this report can send $3 with a long, stamped (52 cents), self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/106, P.O. Box 5537, Riverton, NJ 08077.

I don't think you are exceptionally overweight for your height, but thin people — who are not malnourished — usually do better during surgery. A high level of physical fitness also helps speed recovery. Be sure you have had enough vitamin C in your diet before surgery. A good level of vitamin C helps improve wound healing.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I have been trying to get my husband to quit smoking. He won't. I have told him one reason he has so much trouble with his teeth is because he smokes. I have heard that smokers need more vitamin C, because it is important for his teeth. He does not like fruit or fruit juice and doesn't take pills. How much vitamin C does he need a day?

DEAR READER: Normal healthy non-smokers are said to need no more than 60 mg of vitamin C a day. However, recent studies have suggested those who consume larger amounts, for example 500 mg a day, may live longer. I see no need for healthy individuals to consume larger amounts on a regular basis.

Cigarette smoking does destroy vitamin C. In 1989, the new recommended daily allowance (RDA) of vitamin C for smokers was raised to 100 mg a day. But studies of smokers and non-smokers by the Medical College of Wisconsin in Milwaukee found that only smokers who consumed 200 mg of vitamin C a day had vitamin C levels comparable to non-smokers. Vitamin C is important to dental health. Of course, your husband should quit smoking for his health.

DEAR DR. LAMB: The doctor diagnosed my son as having hepatitis. Will you please tell me what hepatitis is, what causes it, and what can be done for it? He is a healthy 55-year-old.

DEAR READER: Hepatitis means "inflammation of the liver." The most common form is viral hepatitis A, B or C. Hepatitis A is the most common, and is caused by a virus in food or water that causes inflammation of the liver. Although a person may be very sick with this, it usually is of limited duration and may not cause any later complications. It can also be so mild that it may not be noticed. Viral hepatitis B is transmitted by transfusions, contaminated needles, intimate contact such as sexual activity. Viral hepatitis C is similarly transmitted but is the most common cause of hepatitis after transfusions.

Toxins, alcohol and drugs (including some medicines) can cause hepatitis. Even an autoimmune hepatitis occurs. A person forms antibodies that attacks his own liver. Treatment depends on the cause. Usually very little need be done for viral hepatitis A. In general, supportive measures are used until the illness passes, but these measures may be more complicated if the liver is severely damaged during the acute illness — which is more likely with viral hepatitis B or C.

DEAR DR. LAMB: In your column about ulcers, you made reference to a bacteria that causes ulcers. I am very interested because my grandson has bleeding ulcers. He is taking Tagamet, and the doctor has told him he would have to take Tagamet the rest of his life.

He quit for a few months, started bleeding again and had to go back on Tagamet. I would like to know if there are any side effects caused by Tagamet. So far he has not had any problems that we know of. Also, if he has the bacteria you mentioned, could that be treated and cure his ulcers?

DEAR READER: While still controversial, the evidence has mounted overwhelmingly that a bacteria is at least part of the problem in causing a significant number of peptic ulcers. It is called Helicobacter pylori (H pylori) and is found in about 50 to 60 percent of the population. Recent studies show there are several strains of H pylori, and not all of them have been related to ulcers.

H pylori bacteria colonize the stomach lining and, evidently, islands of stomach-lining tissue in the duodenum. Their local effect permits the acid contents of the stomach to cause an ulcer. That is not to say that all peptic ulcers are caused by H pylori.

One of the leading proponents of the concept that H pylori is a common factor in peptic ulcer disease is Dr. David Graham at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston. He reports the best success with "triple therapy." This is an antibiotic such as tetracycline, metronidazole (Flagyl) and a bismuth compound. The results are far better than conventional previous ulcer therapy.

I have discussed this new development in my new Special Report 139, Update on Ulcers and Acid Indigestion, which I am sending you. Others who want this report can send $3 with a long, stamped (52 cents), self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/139, P.O. Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077. This form of treatment appears to be especially important in ulcer patients who tend to have recurrences. Tagamet and similar medicines may induce a temporary cure and relieve symptoms, but they do not eliminate the bacteria that may be the cause. It is specifically used in patients with recurrent bleeding.

Tagamet is not a dangerous drug. Only a few individuals have any significant side effects from its long-term use.

DEAR DR. LAMB: My 24-year-old son loves to ski. Last December, he got frostbite of the tip of his nose, which turned red and later was swollen. Will he always have trouble with his nose after this? He is not going to give up skiing, and I am concerned that it will happen again. What can he do to prevent frostbite other than stay out of the cold, which he will not do?

DEAR READER: Your son was lucky to have a mild case. More severe frostbite can even be bad enough to cause gangrene with loss of tissue. People exposed to cold weather should be more aware of it. You won't get frostbite as long as the outdoor temperature is above 28.4 F (-2C) even if the windchill factor is lower. At lower temperatures, the wind will increase your risk of frostbite.

You can help prevent it by dressing warm. If your body gets cold, there is less blood to the skin and more risk of frostbite. Keeping the ears, nose and hands covered is important. Avoid wet clothing — wet gloves and socks. Avoid alcohol. A third of frostbite victims are intoxicated when frostbitten. Individuals who have previously had frostbite are at greater risk.

Council meets for luncheon Monday at DSC library

Members of the Deaf Smith County Extension Homemakers Council met Monday in the Deaf Smith County Library Heritage Room. Seven clubs were represented with five having 100 percent attendance.

Helen Brown and Bonnie Duke were welcomed as guests.

It was announced that Connie Moyer will give a program on eating light and healthy at 2 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. April 22 in the Reddy Room of Southwestern Public Service. Those planning to attend are asked to contact the extension office to make reservations.

A report was given concerning a refrigerator for the Hereford Community Center.

The district meeting is planned on the West Texas State University campus April 6. Registration is planned from 9-10 a.m. that day. Cost is $10 per person.

Farmers & Ranchers LET'S DO LUNCH

Hereford State Bank, in conjunction with Hereford's New Car and Implement Dealers, will honor all area farmers and ranchers with an Agriculture Day Celebration for Hereford, Saturday April 3, 11:00 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Hereford State Bank.

Join us for a delicious hamburger cookout.

In addition to the participating merchants listed below, K-Bob's Steakhouse, C. Ramirez & Sons and R&R Refrigeration have generously contributed hamburger patties, corn chips and ice for the festive occasion. If you're planning to attend, you must pick up your tickets at Hereford State Bank or at any of these participating merchants: Hereford Auto Center, Stevens Chevrolet-Oldsmobile, Oglesby Equipment Co., Inc., Ford-New Holland, Arrow Sales, White Implement, BJM Sales & Service, Inc., Easley Trailer Service and Oswalt Livestock Products.

American Agriculture is Growing Better Everyday.
